It was Christ's melting Expostulation with the Disciples, Joh. 6. 67, 68. when some had forsaken him, will ye also go? And it was a very suitable return they made, Lord, whither away from thee should we go! q. d. from thee, Lord, no, no, where can we mend our selves? Be sure of it, when ever you go from Christ, ye go from rest to trouble. Had Judas rest? Had Spira rest? And do you think you shall have rest? No, no, The backslider in Heart shall be filled with his own ways, Prov. 14. 14. you shall have your Bellies full of it: Cursed be the Man that departeth from him, he shall be as the Heath in the Desart, that seeth not when good cometh, and shall inhabit the parched Places of the Wilderness, Jer. 17. 5. If fear of sufferings and worldly Temptations ever draw you off from Christ, you may come to those straights and terrors of Conscience, that will make you wish your selves back again with Christ in a Prison, with Christ at a Stake.

Infer. 5. Let all that come to Christ, learn to improve him to the rest and peace of their own Souls, in the midst of all the troubles and outward distresses they meet with in the World.

Surely rest may be found in Christ in any Condition: He is able to give you Peace in the midst of all your Troubles here. So he tells you in, Joh. 16. ult. These things have I spoken to you, that in me you might have peace; in the World ye shall have tribulation: By peace he means not a deliverance from troubles, by taking of Affliction from them, or taking them away by death from all Afflictions; but it is something they enjoy from Christ in the very thick of troubles, and amidst all their Afflictions, that quiets and gives them rest, so that troubles cannot hurt them: certainly Believers, you have peace in Christ, when there is little in your own Hearts: And your Hearts might be filled with peace too, if you would exercise Faith upon Christ for that end: 'Tis your own Fault, if you be without rest in any condition in this World. Set your selves to study the fulness of Christ, and to clear your Interest in him, believe what the Scriptures reveal of him, and live as you believe, and you will quickly find the peace of God filling your Hearts and Minds.

Blessed be God for Jesus Christ.

SERMON X.

MATTH. IX. xii.

But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a Physician, but they that be Sick.

Serm. 10. Text, Wherein the general Exhortation is enforced, by one Motive drawn from the first Title of Christ.

HAving opened in the former Discourses the Nature and Method of the Application of Christ to Sinners, it remains now that I press it upon every Soul, as ever it expects Peace and Pardon from God, to apply, and put on Jesus Christ, (i. e.) to get Union with him by Faith whilst he is yet held forth in the free and gracious tenders of the Gospel; to which purpose I shall now labour in this general Use of Exhortation, in which my last Subject engaged me; wherein divers Arguments will be further urged, both from

The { 1. Titles, and 2. Privileges } of Jesus Christ.

The Titles of Christ are so many Motives or Arguments fitted to perswade Men to come unto him. Amongst which, Christ as the Physician of Souls comes under our first Consideration in the Text before us.

The occasion of these Words of Christ, was the call of Matthew the Publican: Who having first opened his Heart, next opened his House to Christ, and entertains him there: This strange and unexpected change wrought upon Matthew, quickly brings in all the Neighbourhood, and many Publicans and Sinners resorted thither; at which the Stomachs of the proud Pharisees began to swell: From this occasion they took Offence at Christ, and in this Verse Christ takes off the Offence by such an Answer as was fitted both for their Conviction and his own Vindication. But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them; The whole have no need of a Physician, but they that be sick.

He gives it (saith one) as a Reason why he conversed so much with Publicans and Sinners, and so little among the Pharisees, because there was more Work for him: Men set up where they think Trade will be quickest: Christ came to be a Physician to sick Souls. Pharisees were so well in their own Conceit, that Christ saw he should have little to do among them; and so he applied himself to those who are more sensible of their Sickness.

In the Words we have an account of the Temper and State both of,

1. The secure and unconvinced Sinner.
2. The humbled and convinced Sinner.

And 3. Of the Carriage of Christ, and his different respect to either.

First, The secure Sinner is here described, both with respect to his own Apprehensions of himself, as one that is whole, and also by his low Value and Esteem for Christ, he sees no need of him; the whole have no need of the Physician.

Secondly, The convinced and humbled Sinner is here also described, and that both by his State and Condition, he is sick; and by his Valuation of Jesus Christ, he greatly needs him: They that be sick need the Physician.

Thirdly, We have here Christ's carriage and different respect to both: The former he rejects, and passeth by, as those with whom he hath no Concernment: The latter he converses with in order to their Cure.

The Words thus opened are fruitful in Observations. I shall neither note nor insist upon any beside this one, which suits the Scope of my Discourse, viz.

Doct. That the Lord Jesus Christ is the only Physician for sick Souls.

The World is a great Hospital full of sick and dying Souls, all wounded by one and the same mortal Weapon, Sin. Some are senseless of their Misery, feel not their Pains, value not a Physician: Others are full of Sense, as well as danger; mourn under the Apprehension of their Condition, and sadly bewail it. The merciful God hath, in his abundant Compassion to the perishing World, sent a Physician from Heaven, and given him his Orders under the great Seal of Heaven for his Office, Isa. 61. 1, 2. which he opened and read in the Audience of the People, Luke 4. 18. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to Preach good Tydings unto the meek, he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, &c. He is the Tree of Life, whose Leaves are for the healing of the Nations: He is Jehova Rophe, the Lord that healeth us; and that as he is Jehovah Tzidkenu, the Lord our Righteousness. The Brazen Serpent that healed the Israelites in the Wilderness, was an excellent Type of our great Physician Christ, and is expressly applied to him, John 3. 14. He rejects none that come, and heals all whom he undertakes: But more particularly I will,

First, Point at those Diseases which Christ heals in sick Souls, and by what means he heals them.

Secondly, The Excellency of this Physician above all others: There is none like Christ, he is the only Physician for wounded Souls.

First, We will enquire into the Diseases which Christ the Physician cures; and they are reducible to two Heads, viz.

1. Sin, and
2. Sorrow.

First, The Disease of Sin, in which three things are found exceeding burthensome to sick Souls.

1. The Guilt
2. The Dominion } of Sin; all cured by this Physician, and how.
3. The Inherence

First, The Guilt of Sin, this is a mortal Wound, a stab in the very Heart of a poor Sinner. 'Tis a fond and groundless Distinction that Papists make of Sins Mortal and Venial: All Sin in its own Nature is Mortal, Rom. 6. 23. The Wages of Sin is Death: Yet though it be so in its own Nature, Christ can, and doth cure it by the Soveraign Balsom of his own precious Blood, Eph. 1. 7. In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, the forgiveness of Sins, according to the Riches of his Grace. This is the deepest and deadliest wound the Soul of Man feels in this World: What is Guilt, but the Obligation of the Soul to everlasting Punishment and Misery? It puts the Soul under the Sentence of God to eternal Wrath; the condemning Sentence of the great and terrible God; than which, nothing is found more dreadful and insupportable; Put all Pains, all Poverty, all Afflictions, all Miseries in one Scale, and God's Condemnation in the other, and you weigh but so many Feathers against a Talent of Lead.

This Disease our great Physician Christ cures by Remission; which is the dissolving of the Obligation to Punishment; the loosing of the Soul that was bound over to the Wrath and Condemnation of God, Col. 1. 13, 14. Heb. 6. 12. Micah. 7. 17, 18, 19. This Remission being made, the Soul is immediately cleared from all its Obligations to Punishment, Rom. 8. 1. There is no Condemnation: All Bonds are cancelled; the Guilt of all sins is healed or removed; original, and actual; great and small. This cure is performed upon Souls by the Blood of Christ: Nothing is found in Heaven or Earth besides his Blood, that is able to heal this Disease; Heb. 9. 22. Without shedding of Blood there is no Remission; nor is it any Blood that will do it, but that only which dropt from the wounds of Christ, Isa. 54. 5. By his stripes we are healed: His Blood only is innocent and precious Blood, 1 Pet. 1. 19. Blood of infinite Worth and Value; Blood of God, Acts 20. 18. Blood prepared for this very purpose, Heb. 10. 5. This is the Blood that performs the cure; and how great a cure is it! For this cure the Souls of Believers shall be praising and magnifying their great Physician in Heaven to all Eternity, Rev. 1. 5, 6. To him that loved us, and washed us from our Sins in his own Blood, &c. to him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever.

Secondly, The next evil in Sin, cured by Christ, is the Dominion of it over the Souls of poor Sinners. Where sin is in Dominion, the Soul is in a very sad Condition; for it darkens the Understanding, depraves the Conscience, stiffens the Will, hardens the Heart, misplaces and disorders all the Affections: And thus every Faculty is wounded by the Power and Dominion of Sin over the Soul. How difficult is the cure of this Disease! it passes the skill of Angels or Men to heal it: But Christ undertakes it, and makes a perfect cure of it at last; and this he doth by his Spirit. As he cures the guilt of sin by pouring out his Blood for us, so he cures the Dominion of sin, by pouring out his Spirit upon us. Justification is the cure of Guilt, Sanctification the cure of the Dominion of Sin. For,

First, As the Dominion of sin darkens the Understanding, 1 Cor. 2. 14. So the Spirit of Holiness which Christ sheds upon his People, cures the Darkness and Blindness of that noble Faculty, and restores it again, Eph. 5. 8. They that were Darkness are hereby Light in the Lord: The anointing of this Spirit teacheth them all things, 1 John 2. 27.

Secondly, As the Dominion of sin depraved and defiled the Conscience, Tit. 1. 15. wounded it to that degree, as to disable it to the performances of all its Offices and Functions; so that it was neither able to apply, convince, or tremble at the Word: So when the Spirit of Holiness is shed forth, O what a tender Sense fills the renewed Conscience! For what small things will it check, smite and rebuke! How strongly will it bind to Duty, and bar against sin!

Thirdly, As the Dominion of sin stiffned the Will, and made it stubborn and rebellious; so Christ by sanctifying it, brings it to be pliant and obedient to the Will of God. Lord, saith the Sinner, what wilt thou have me to do! Acts 9. 6.

Fourthly, As the Power of sin hardneth the Heart, so that nothing could affect it, or make any Impression upon it; when Sanctification comes upon the Soul, it thaws and breaks it, as hard as it was, and makes it dissolve in the Breast of a Sinner in godly Sorrow, Ezek. 36. 26. I will take away the Heart of Stone out of your Flesh, and I will give you an Heart of Flesh. It will now melt ingenuously under the Threatnings of the Word, 2 Kings 22. 19. or the strokes of the Rod, Jer. 31. 18. Or the Manifestations of Grace and Mercy, Luke 7. 38.

Fifthly, As the Power of sin misplaced and disordered all the Affections, so Sanctification reduces them again, and sets them right, Psalm 4. 6, 7. And thus you see how Sanctification becomes the rectitude, health and due temper of the Soul, so far as it prevails, curing the Diseases that sin in its Dominion filled the Soul with. True it is, this cure is not perfected in this Life: There are still some grudgings of the old Diseases in the holiest Souls, Souls; notwithstanding sin be dethroned from its Dominion over them: But the cure is begun, and daily advances towards Perfection, and at last will be compleat, as will appear in the cure of the next evil of sin; namely,

Thirdly, The Inherence of sin in the Soul; this is a sore Disease, the very core and root of all our other Complaints and Ailes. This made the Holy Apostle bemoan himself, and wail so bitterly, Rom. 7. 17. Because of Sin that dwelt in him: And the same Misery is bewailed by all sanctified Persons all the World over.

'Tis a wonderful Mercy to have the guilt and dominion of sin cured; but we shall never be perfectly sound and well till the Existence, or indwelling of sin in our Natures be cured too. When once that is done, then we shall feel no more Pain, nor Sorrows for sin: And this our great Physician will at last perform for us, and upon us: But as the cure of guilt was by our Justification, the cure of the Dominion of sin by our Sanctification; so the third and last which perfects the whole cure, will be by our Glorification; and till then it is not to be expected. For its a clear Case, that sin like Ivy in the old Walls, will never be gotten out, till the Wall be pulled down, and then its pulled up by the Roots. This cure Christ will perform in a Moment upon our Dissolution. For 'tis plain,

First, That none but perfected Souls, freed from all sin, are admitted into Heaven, Eph. 5. 27. Heb. 12. 13. Rev 21. 27.

Secondly, 'Tis as plain, that no such personal Perfection and Freedom is found in any Man on this side Death, and the Grave, 1 John 1. 8. 1 Kings 8. 46. Phil. 3. 12. A Truth sealed by the sad Experience of all the Saints on Earth.

Thirdly, If such Freedom and Perfection must be before we can be perfectly happy, and no such thing be done in this Life; it remains that it must be done immediately upon their Dissolution, and at the very time of their Glorification: As sin came in at the time of the Union of their Souls and Bodies in the Womb, so it will go out at the time of their Separation by Death: Then will Christ put the last Hand to this glorious Work, and perfect that Cure which hath been so long under his Hand in this World: And thenceforth sin shall have no Power upon them; it shall never tempt them more, it shall never defile them more; it shall never grieve and sadden their Hearts any more: Henceforth it shall never cloud their Evidences, darken their Understandings, or give the least Interruption of their Communion with God. When sin is gone, all these mischievous Effects are gone with it. So that I may speak it to the Comfort of all gracious Hearts, according to what the Lord told the Israelites in, Deut. 12. 8, 9. (to which I allude for Illustration of the most comfortable Truth) Ye shall not do after all the things that ye do here this Day, every Man whatsoever is right in his own Eyes, for ye are not as yet come to the Rest, and to the Inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you. Whilst you are under Christ's cure upon Earth, but not perfectly healed; your Understandings mistake, your Thoughts wander, your Affections are dead, your communion with God is very interrupted: But it shall not be so in Heaven, there the cure is perfect: You shall not know, love, or delight in God as you do this Day; for you are not as yet come to the Rest, and to the Inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you: So much as to the Diseases of sin, and Christ's Method of curing them.

Secondly, As sin is the Disease of the Saints, so also is Sorrow. The best of Saints must pass through the Valley of Bacha to Heaven. How many Tears fall from the Eyes of the Saints upon the account of outward, as well as inward troubles; even after their Reconciliation with God? Through much Tribulation we must enter into the Kingdom of God, Acts 14. 22. It would be too great a Digression in this Place, to note but the more general Heads, under which almost infinite particulars of Troubles and Afflictions are found. It shall suffice only to shew, that whatever distress or trouble any poor Soul is in upon any account whatsoever; if that Soul belongs to Jesus Christ, he will take care of it for the present, and deliver it at last by a compleat cure.

First, Christ cures troubles by sanctifying them to the Souls of his that are under Affliction, and makes their very troubles Medicinal and healing to them. Trouble is a Scorpion, and hath a deadly sting; but Christ is a wise Physician, and extracts a soveraign Oyl out of this Scorpion, that heals the wound it makes. By Afflictions our wise Physician purges our Corruptions, and so prevents or cures greater troubles by lesser; inward sorrows, by outward ones, Isa. 27. 9. By this therefore shall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the Fruit, to take away his sin.

Secondly, Christ cures outward Troubles by inward Consolations, which are made to rise in the inner Man as high as the Waters of Affliction do upon the outward Man, 2 Cor. 1. 5. One drop of spiritual Comfort is sufficient to sweeten a whole Ocean of outward Trouble. It was an high Expression of an afflicted Father, whom God comforted just upon the Death of his dear and only Son, with some clearer Manifestations of his Love than was usual. O, said he, might I but have such Consolations as these, I could be willing (were it possible) to lay an only Son into the Grave every Day I have to live in this World. Thus all the troubles of the World are cured by Christ, John 16. 33. In the World ye shall have trouble, but in me ye shall have Peace.

Nihil Corpus sentit in nervo, cum Anima sit in Cœlo.

Thirdly, Christ cures all outward sorrows and troubles in his People by Death, which is their removal from the Place of Sorrows to Peace and rest for evermore. Now God wipes all Tears from their Eyes, and the Days of their Mourning are at an end: They then put off the Garments and Spirit of Mourning, and enter into Peace, Isa. 57. 2. They come to that place and state, where Tears and Sighs are things unknown to the Inhabitants: One step beyond the state of this Mortality, brings us quite out of the sight and hearing of all Troubles and Lamentations. These are the Diseases of Souls, Sin and Sorrow; and thus they are cured by Christ the Physician.

Secondly, Next, I shall shew you that Jesus Christ is the only Physician of Souls: None like him for a sick Sinner: And this will be evident in divers Respects.

First, None so wise and judicious as Jesus Christ to understand, and comprehend the nature, depth, and danger of Soul Diseases. O how ignorant and unacquainted are Men with the State and Case of afflicted Souls! But Christ hath the Tongue of the learned, that he should know how to speak a Word in season to him that is weary, Isa. 50. 4. He only understands the weight of Sin, and depth of inward troubles of Sin.

Secondly, None so able to cure and heal the wounds of afflicted Souls as Christ is: He only hath those Medicines that can cure a sick Soul. The Blood of Christ, and nothing else in Heaven or Earth, is able to cure the Mortal wounds which guilt inflicts upon a trembling Conscience: Let Men try all other Receipts, and costly experience shall convince them of their insufficiency. Conscience may be benummed by stupefactive Medicines, prepared by the Devil for that end, but pacified it can never be, but by the Blood of Christ, Heb. 10. 22.

Thirdly, None so tender hearted, and sympathizing with sick Souls, as Jesus Christ: He is full of Bowels and tender Compassions to afflicted Souls: He is one that can have Compassion, because he hath had Experience, Heb. 5. 2. If I must come into the Chirurgeons Hands with broken Bones, give me such a one to choose, whose own Bones have been broken, who hath felt the anguish in himself. Christ knows what it is by Experience, having felt the anguish of inward troubles, the weight of God's Wrath, and the terrors of a forsaking God, more than any, or all the Sons of Men: This makes him tender over distressed Souls, Isa. 42. 3. A bruised Reed he will not break, and smoaking Flax he will not quench.

Fourthly, None cures in so wonderful a method as Christ doth: He heals us by his stripes, Isa. 53. 5. The Physician dies that the Patient may live: His Wounds must bleed, that ours may be cured: He feels the smart and pain, that we might have ease and comfort. No Physician but Christ will cure others at this rate.

Fifthly, None so ready to relieve a sick Soul as Christ: He is within the call of a distressed Soul at all times. Art thou sick for Sin, weary of Sin, and made truly willing to part with Sin? Lift up but thy sincere cry to the Lord Jesus for help, and he will quickly be with thee: When the Prodigal, the Embleme of a convinced humbled Sinner, said in himself, I will return to my Father, the Father ran to meet him, Luke 15. 20. He can be with thee in a Moment.

Sixthly, None so willing to receive and undertake all distressed and afflicted Souls as Jesus Christ is: He refuses none that come to him, John 6. 37. He that cometh unto me, I will in no ways cast out: Whatever their Sins have been, or their Sorrows are; however they have wounded their own Souls with the deepest gashes of Guilt; how desperate and helpless soever their Case appears in their own or others Eyes: He never puts them off, or discourages them, if they be but willing to come, Isa. 1. 18, 19.

Seventhly, None so happy and successful as Christ: He never fails of performing a perfect cure upon those he undertakes: Never was it known that any Soul miscarried in his Hands, John 3. 15, 16. Other Physicians by mistakes, by ignorance, or carelessness, fill Church-Yards, and cast away the Lives of Men: But Christ suffers none to perish that commit themselves to him.

Eighthly, None so free and generous as Christ, he doth all gratis: He sells not his Medicines, though they be of infinite value, but freely gives them, Isa. 55. 1. He that hath no Money let him come: if any be sent away, 'tis the rich, Luke 1. 53. not the Poor and Needy: Those that will not accept their remedy as a free Gift, but will needs purchase it at a Price.

Ninthly and Lastly, None rejoyces in the recovery of Souls more than Christ doth. O it is unspeakably delightful to him to see the Efficacy of his Blood upon our Souls, Isa. 53. 11. He shall see the travel of his Soul (i. e. the success of his Death and Sufferings) and shall be satisfied; When he foresaw the success of the Gospel upon the World, it's said Luke 10. 21. In that Hour Jesus rejoyced in Spirit: And thus you see, there is no Physician like Christ for sick souls.

The Uses of this Point are,
For Information and Direction.

First, From thence we are informed of many great and necessary Truths deducible from this: As, Infer. 1. How inexpressible is the Grace of God, in providing such a Physician as Christ, for the sick and dying Souls of Sinners! O blessed be God, that there is Balm in Gilead, and a Physician there: That their case is not desperate, forlorn and remediless as that of the Devils and Damned is. There is but one case excepted from cure, and that such as is not incident to any sensible afflicted Soul, Mat. 12. 31. and this only excepted, all manner of Sins and Diseases are capable of a cure. Though there be such a Disease as is incurable, yet take this for thy comfort, never any Soul was sick (i. e.) sensibly burthened with it, and willing to come to Jesus Christ for healing: For under that Sin, the Will is so wounded that they have no desire to Christ. O inestimable Mercy, that the sickest Sinner is capable of a perfect Cure! There be thousands, and ten thousands now in Heaven and Earth, who said once, never was any Case like theirs; so dangerous, so hopeless. The greatest of Sinners have been perfectly recovered by Christ, 1 Tim. 1. 15. 1 Cor. 6. 11. O Mercy never to be duly estimated!

Infer. 2. What a powerful restraint from Sin, is the very Method ordained by God for the cure of it! Isa. 53. 5. By his stripes we are healed. The Physician must dye, that the Patient might live: No other thing but the Blood, the precious Blood of Christ is found in Heaven or Earth able to heal us, Heb. 9. 22, 26. This Blood of Christ must be freshly applied to every new Wound sin makes upon our Souls, John 2. 1, 2. every new sin wounds him afresh, opens the Wounds of Christ anew. O think of this again and again, you that so easily yield to the solicitations of Satan: Is it so easie and so cheap to Sin as you seem to make it? Doth the cure of Souls cost nothing? True, it is free to us, but was it so to Christ? No, no, it was not; he knows the Price of it, though you do not: Hath Christ healed you by his stripes, and can you put him under fresh Sufferings for you so easily? Have you forgot also your own sick Days and Nights for sin, that you are careless in resisting, and preventing it? Sure 'tis not easie for Saints to wound Christ and their own Souls, at one stroke: If you renew your Sins, you must also renew your Sorrows and Repentance, Psalm 51. Title. 2 Sam. 12. 13. you must feel the Throes and Pains of a troubled Spirit again, things with which the Saints are not unacquainted. Of which they may say as the Church, Remember my Affliction, the Worm-wood and the Gall, my Soul hath them still in remembrance, Lam. 3. 19. Yea, and if you will yet be remiss in your watch, and so easily incur new Guilt; though a Pardon in the Blood of Christ may heal your Souls, yet the Rod or other in the Hand of a displeased Father shall afflict your Bodies, or smite you in your outward Comforts, Psalm. 89. 32.

Infer. 3. If Christ be the only Physician of sick Souls, what Sin and Folly is it for Men to take Christs work out of his Hands, and attempt to be their own Physicians!

Thus do those that superstitiously endeavour to heal their Souls by afflicting their Bodies: Not Christs Blood, but their own must be the Plaister: And as blind Papists, so many carnal and ignorant Protestants strive by Confession, Restitution, Reformation, and a stricter course of Life to heal those Wounds that Sin hath made upon their Souls, without any respect to the Blood of Christ: But this course shall not profit them at all. It may for a time divert, but can never heal them: The Wounds so skinned over, will open and bleed again; God grant be not when our Souls shall be out of the reach of the true and only Remedy:

Infer. 4. How sad is the Case of those Souls, to whom Christ hath not yet been a Physician? They are mortally wounded by Sin, and are like to die of their sickness; no saving healing Applications have hitherto been made unto their Souls: And this is the case of the greatest part of Mankind; yea, of them that live under the Discoveries of Christ in the Gospel: Which appears by these sad symptoms,

First, In that their Eyes have not yet been opened to see their Sin and Misery, in which Illumination the cure of Souls begins, Acts 26. 18. To this Day he hath not given them Eyes to see, Deut. 29. 4. But that terrible stroke of God, which blinds and hardens them, is too visibly upon them, mentioned in Isa. 6. 9, 10. No hope of healing till the Sinners Eyes be opened to see his Sin and Misery.

Secondly, In that nothing will divorce and separate them from their Lusts: A sure sign they are not under Christs cure, nor were ever made sick of Sin. O if ever Christ be a Physician to thy Soul, he will make thee loath what now thou lovest, and say to thy most pleasant and most profitable Lusts, get ye hence, Isa. 30. 22. Till then there is no Ground to think that Christ is a Physician to you.

Thirdly, In that they have no sensible and pressing need of Christ, nor make any earnest Enquiry after him, as most certainly you would do, if you were in the way of healing and recovery. These and many other sad symptoms do too plainly discover the Disease of Sin to be in its full Strength upon your Souls; and if it so continue, how dreadful will the Issue be? See Isa. 6. 9. 10.

Infer. 5. What cause have they to be glad, that are under the hand and care of Christ in order to a cure; and who do find, or may upon due Examination find, their Souls are in a very hopeful way of recovery! Can we rejoyce when the Strength of a natural Disease is broken, and Nature begins to recover ease, and vigour again, and shall we not much more rejoyce when our Souls begin to mend, and recover sensibly, and all comfortable signs of Life and Health appear upon them? Particularly when the understanding which was ignorant and dark, hath the Light of Life beginning to dawn into it, such is that in 1 Joh. 2. 27. when the Will which was rebellious and inflexible to the Will of God, is brought to comply with that Holy Will, saying, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. When the Heart which was harder than an Adamant, is now brought to contrition for Sin, and can mourn as heartily over it, as ever a tender Father did for a dead Son, a beloved and only Son. When its Aversations from God are gone, at least have no such Power as once they had: But the Thoughts are now fixed much upon God, and spiritual Things begin to grow pleasant to the Soul: When times of Duty come to be longed for, and the Soul never better pleased than in such Seasons. When the Hypocrisie of the Heart is purged out, so that we begin to do all that we do heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto Men, Col. 3. 23. 1. Thes. 2. 4. When we begin to make Conscience of secret Sins, Psalm 119. 113. And of secret Duties, Mat. 6. 5, 6. When we have equal respect to all God's Commandments, Psalm 119. 6. And our Hearts are under the holy and awful Eye of God, which doth indeed over-awe our Souls, Gen. 17. 1. O what sweet Signs of a recovering Soul are these! Surely such are in the skilful Hand of the great Physician, who will perfect what yet remains to be done.

Second Use for Direction.

In the last place, this Point yields us Matter of Advice and Direction to poor Souls that are under the Disease of Sin, and they are of two sorts, which I will distinctly speak to, viz. First, Such as are under their first Sickness or spiritual sorrow for sin, and know not what Course to take: Or, Secondly, such as have been longer in the Hands of Christ the Physician, but are troubled to see the Cure advance so slowly upon them, and fear the Issue.

First, As to those that are in their first Troubles for Sin, and know not what Course to take for Ease and Safety: I would address to them these following Counsels.

First, Shut your Ears against the dangerous Counsels of carnal Persons or Relations; for as they themselves are unacquainted with these Troubles: So also are they with all proper Remedies; and it is very usual with the Devil to convey his Temptations to distressed Souls by such Hands; because by them he can do it with least Suspicion. It was Augustine's Complaint, that his own Father took little care for his Soul; and many Parents act in this case, as if they were employed by Satan.

Secondly, Be not too eager to get out of Trouble, but be content to take God's way, and wait his Time: No Woman that is wise, would desire to have her Travel hastned one Day before the due Time: Nor will it be your Interest to hasten too soon out of Trouble. 'Tis true, Times of Trouble are apt to seem tedious; but a false Peace will endanger you more than a long Trouble: A Man may lengthen his own Troubles to the Loss of his own Peace, and may shorten them to the Hazard of his own Soul.

Thirdly, Open your Case to wise, judicious and experienced Christians, and especially the Ministers of Christ, whose Office it is to counsel and direct you in these Difficulties; and let not your Troubles lie like a secret smothering Fire, always in your own Breasts. I know Men are more ashamed to open their Sins under Convictions, than they were to commit them before Conviction: But this is your Interest, and the true way to your Rest and Peace. If there be with, or near you an Interpreter, one of a thousand, to shew you your Righteousness and Remedy, as it lies in Christ; neglect not your own Souls in a sinful Concealment of your Case, It will be the Joy of their Heart to be employed in such Work as this is.

Fourthly, Be much with God in secret: Open your Hearts to him, and pour out your Complaints into his Bosom. The 102*d Psalm* bears a Title very suitable to your Case and Duty: Yea, you will find your Troubles work kindly, and God intend a cure upon your Souls, that nothing will be able to keep God and your Souls asunder: Whatever your Incumbrances in the World be, some time will be daily redeemed to be so spent betwixt you and God.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, Plead hard with God in Prayer for Help and Healing: Heal my Soul (saith David) for I have sinned against thee, Psalm 41. 4. tell him, Christ hath his Commission sealed for such as you are: He was sent to Bind up the broken Hearted, Isa. 61. 1. tell him he came into the World to seek and save that which was lost, and so are you now in your own Account and Apprehensions. Lord, what Profit is there in my Blood? Wilt thou pursue a dried Leaf? And why is my Heart wounded with the sense of Sin, and mine Eyes open to see my Danger and Misery, are not these the first Dawnings of Mercy upon sinners? O let it appear, that the time of Mercy, even the set Time is now come.

Sixthly, Understand your Peace to be in Christ only, and Faith to be the only way to Christ and Rest: Let the great Enquiry of your Souls be after Christ and Faith, study the Nature and Necessity of these, and cry to God Day and Night for strength to carry you to Christ in the way of Faith.

Secondly, As to those that have been longer under the Hands of Christ, and yet are in Troubles still, and cannot attain Peace, but their Wounds bleed still, and all they hear in Sermons, or do in the way of Duty, will not bring them to Rest: To such I only add two or three Words for a close.

First, Consider whether you ever rightly closed with Christ since your first awakening, and whether there be not some way of Sin in which you still live: If so, no wonder your Wounds are kept open, and your Souls are Strangers to Peace.

Secondly, If you be conscious of no such flaw in the Foundation, consider how much of this Trouble may arise from your Constitution and natural Temper, which being Melancholy, will be doubtful and suspicious: You may find it so in other Cases of less Moment, and be sure Satan will not be wanting to improve it.

Thirdly, Acquaint your selves more with the Nature of true justifying Faith; a Mistake in that hath prolonged the Troubles of many: If you look for it in no other Act but Assurance, you may easily overlook it, as it lies in the mean time in your Affiance or Acceptance. A true and proper Conception of saving Faith would go far in the cure of many troubled Souls.

Fourthly, Be more careful to shun Sin, than to get your selves clear of Trouble. 'Tis sad to walk in Darkness, but worse to lie under Guilt. Say, Lord, I would rather be grieved my self, than be a Grief to thy Spirit. O keep me from sin, how long soever thou keep me under Sorrow. Wait on God in the way of Faith, and in a tender spirit towards sin, and thy Wounds shall be healed at last by thy great Physician.

Thanks be to God for Jesus Christ.

SERMON XI.

LUKE I. lxxii.

To perform the Mercies promised to our Fathers, and to remember his holy Covenant.

Ser. 11. Text. Containing the second Motive to enforce the general Exhortation from a second Title of Christ.

THis Scripture is part of Zecha-riah's Prophecy at the rising of that bright Star, the Harbinger and Forerunner of Christ: They are some of the first Words he spake after God had loosed his Tongue, which, for a time, was struck dumb for his Unbelief. His Tongue is now unbound, and at Liberty to proclaim to all the World the Riches of Mercy through Jesus Christ, in a Song of Praise. Wherein Note,

The Mercy celebrated, viz. Redemption by Christ, ver. 68.

The Description of Christ by Place and Property, ver. 69.

The Faithfulness of God in our Redemption this Way, ver. 70.

The Benefit of being so Redeemed by Christ, ver. 17.

The exact Accomplishment of all the Promises made to the Fathers, in sending Christ, the Mercy promised, into the World, ver. 72. To perform the Mercy promised to our Fathers, &c. In these Words we find two Parts, viz.

1. A Mercy freely promised.
2. The promised Mercy faithfully performed.

First, You have a Mercy freely promised, viz. by God the Father from the Beginning of the World, and often repeated and confirmed in several succeeding Ages to the Fathers, in his Covenant Transactions.

This Mercy is Jesus Christ, of whom he speaks in this Prophecy; the same which he stiles An Horn of Salvation in the House of David, ver. 69.

The Mercy of God in Scripture is put either for,

1. His free Favour to the Creature. Or,
2. The Effects and Fruits of that Favour.

'Tis put for the free and undeserved Favour of God to the Creature, and this Favour of God may respect the Creature two Ways, either as Undeserving, or as Ill deserving.

It respected Innocent Man as undeserving, for Adam could put no Obligation upon his Benefactor: It respecteth fallen Man as Ill deserving. Innocent Man could not merit Favour, and fallen Man did merit Wrath: The Favour or Mercy of God to both is every way free, and that is the first Acceptation of the Word Mercy: But then it is also taken for the Effects and Fruits of God's Favour, and they are, Either,

1. Principal and primary. Or,
2. Subordinate and secondary.

Of secondary and subordinate Mercies, there are multitudes, both temporal, respecting the Body, and spiritual, respecting the Soul; but the principal and primary Mercy is but one, and that is Christ, the first-born of Mercy; the capital Mercy, the comprehensive-Root-Mercy, from whom are all other Mercies; and therefore called by a singular Emphasis in my Text The Mercy, (i. e.) the Mercy of Mercies; without whom no Drop of saving Mercy can flow to any of the Sons of Men; and in whom are all the tender Bowels of Divine Mercy yearning upon poor sinners. The Mercy, and the Mercy promised. The first Promise of Christ was made to Adam, Gen. 3. 15. and was frequently renewed afterwards to Abraham, to David; and as the Text speaks, unto the Fathers, in their respective Generations.

Secondly, We find here also, The promised Mercy faithfully performed. To perform the Mercy promised. What

What Mercy ſoever the Love of God engaged him to promiſe, the Faithfulneſs of God ſtands engaged for the Performance thereof. Chriſt the promiſed Mercy, is not only performed truly, but he is alſo performed according to the Promiſe in all the Circumſtances thereof exactly. So he was promiſed to the Fathers, and juſt ſo performed to us their Children: Hence the Note is,

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt the Mercy of Mercies was graciouſly promiſed, and faithfully performed by God to his People.

Three Things are here to be opened.

Firſt, Why Chriſt is ſtiled the Mercy.

Secondly, What kind of Mercy Chriſt is to his People.

Thirdly, How this promiſed Mercy was performed.

Firſt, Chriſt is the Mercy, Emphatically ſo called, the peerleſs, invaluable, and matchleſs Mercy; becauſe he is the prime Fruit of the Mercy of God to Sinners. The Mercies of God are infinite: Mercy gave the World and us our Being; all our Protections, Proviſions and Comforts in this World are the Fruits of Mercy; the After-births of divine Favour: But Chriſt is the Firſt-born from the Womb of Mercy, all other Mercies compared with him, are but Fruits from that Root, and Streams from that Fountain of Mercy; the very Bowels of divine Mercy are in Chriſt, as in Verſe 78. according to the tender Mercies, or as the Greek, the yearning Bowels of the Mercy of God.

Secondly, Chriſt is the Mercy, becauſe all the Mercy of God to Sinners is diſpenſed and conveyed through Chriſt to them, John 1. 16. Eph. 4. 7. Chriſt is the Medium of all divine Communications: The Channel of Grace; through him is both the decurſus & recurſus gratiarum; the flows of Mercy from God to us, and the returns of Praiſe from us to God; fond and vain therefore are all the Expectations of Mercy out of Chriſt: No drop of ſaving Mercy runs beſide this Channel.

Thirdly, Chriſt is the Mercy, becauſe all inferiour Mercies derive both their Nature, Value, Sweetneſs and Duration from Chriſt, the Fountain Mercy of all other Mercies.

Firſt, They derive their Nature from Chriſt, for out of him thoſe things which Men call Mercies, are rather Traps and Snares, than Mercies to them, Prov. 1. 32. The time will come when the rich that are Chriſtleſs will wiſh, O that we had been poor! And Nobles that are not ennobled by the new Birth, O that we had been among the lower Rank of Men! All theſe things that paſs for valuable Mercies, like Ciphers ſignifie much when ſuch a ſpeaking Figure as Chriſt ſtands before them, elſe they ſignifie nothing to any Mans Comfort or Benefit.

Secondly, They derive their Value as well as Nature from Chriſt: For how little, I pray you, doth it ſignifie to any Man to be rich, honourable, politick, and ſucceſsful in all his Deſigns in the World; if after all he muſt lie down in Hell?

Thirdly, All other Mercies derive their Sweetneſs from Chriſt, and are but inſipid things without him. There is a twofold Sweetneſs in things; one Natural, another Spiritual; thoſe that are out of Chriſt can reliſh the firſt, Believers only reliſh both: They have the natural Sweetneſs that is in Mercy it ſelf, and a Sweetneſs ſupernatural from Chriſt and the Covenant, the way in which they receive them. Hence it is that ſome Men taſte more ſpiritual Sweetneſs in their daily Bread, than others do in the Lord's-Supper; one and the ſame Mercy by this means becomes a Feaſt to Soul and Body at once.

Fourthly, All Mercies have their Duration and Perpetuity from Chriſt; all Chriſtleſs Perſons hold their Mercies upon the greateſt Contingencies and Terms of Uncertainty; if they be continued during this Life, that's all: There is not a drop of Mercy after Death; but the Mercies of the Saints are continued to Eternity; the end of their Mercies on Earth, is the beginning of their Mercies in Heaven. There is a twofold end of Mercies, one Perfective, another Deſtructive; the Death of the Saints perfects and compleats their Mercies; the Death of of the wicked deſtroys and cuts off their Mercies: For theſe Reaſons Chriſt is called the Mercy.

Secondly, In the next Place, let us enquire what manner of Mercy Chriſt is; and we ſhall find many lovely, and tranſcendent Properties to commend him to our Souls.

Firſt, He is a free and undeſerved Mercy, called upon that Account, The gift of God, John 4. 10. And to ſhew how free this gift was, God gave him to us when we were Enemies, Rom. 5. 8. Needs muſt that Mercy be free, which is given not only to the undeſerving, but to the ill deſerving; the Benevolence of God was the ſole impulſive cauſe of this Gift, John 3. 16.

Secondly, Chriſt is a full Mercy repleniſhed with all that anſwers to the Wiſhes or Wants of Sinners; in him alone is found whatever the Juſtice of an angry God requires for Satisfaction, or the Neceſſities of Souls require for their Supply. Chriſt is full of Mercy, both extenſively and intenſively; in him are all kinds and ſorts of Mercies, and in him are the higheſt and moſt perfect Degrees of Mercy; For it pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all Fulneſs dwell, Col. 1. 19.

Thirdly, Chriſt is the ſeaſonable Mercy, given by the Father to us in due time, Rom. 5. 6. in the fulneſs of time, Gal. 4. 4. a ſeaſonable Mercy in his Exhibition to the World in General, and a ſeaſonable Mercy in his Application to the Soul in particular; the Wiſdom of God pitched upon the beſt time for his Incarnation, and it hits the very nick of time, for his Application. When a poor Soul is diſtreſſed, loſt, at its Wits end, ready to periſh; then comes Chriſt: All God's Works are done in Season, but none more ſeaſonable than this great Work of Salvation by Chriſt.

Fourthly, Chriſt is the neceſſary Mercy, there is an abſolute Neceſſity of Jeſus Chriſt; hence in Scripture he is called the Bread of Life, John 6. 48. he is Bread to the hungry; he is the Water of Life, John 7. 37. As cold Water to the thirſty Soul; he is a Ranſom for Captives, Mat. 20. 28. a Garment to the naked; Rom. 13. ult. only Bread is not ſo neceſſary to the hungry, nor Water to the thirſty, nor a Ranſom to the Captive, nor a Garment to the naked; as Chriſt is to the Soul of a Sinner, the breath of our Noſtrils, the Life of our Souls is in Jeſus Chriſt.

Fifthly, Chriſt is a Fountain Mercy, and all other Mercies flow from him; a Believer may ſay of Chriſt, All my freſh Springs are in thee; from his Merit, and from his Spirit flow our Redemption, Juſtification, Sanctification, Peace, Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, and Bleſſedneſs in the World to come: In that day ſhall there be a Fountain opened, Zech. 13. 1.

Sixthly, Chriſt is a ſatisfying Mercy, he that is full of Chriſt can feel the want of nothing. I deſire to know nothing, but Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 2. Chriſt bounds and terminates the vaſt Deſires sires of the Soul: he is the very Sabbath of the Soul: How hungry, empty, straitned, and pinched in upon every side, is the Soul of Man in the abundance and fulness of all out-ward things, till it come to Christ? The weary Motions of a restless Soul, like those of a River, cannot be at Rest till they pour themselves into Christ the Ocean of Blessedness.

Seventhly, Christ is a peculiar Mercy intended for, and applied to a Remnant among Men; some would extend Redemption as large as the World, but the Gospel limits it to those only that believe; and those Believers are upon that Account called a peculiar People, 1 Pet. 2. 9. The Offers of Christ indeed are large, and general; but the Application of Christ is but to few, Isa. 53. 1. The greater Cause have they to whom Christ comes, to lie with their Mouths in the Dust, astonished and overwhelmed with the Sense of so peculiar and distinguishing Mercy.

Eighthly, Jesus Christ is a suitable Mercy, fitted in all respects to our Needs and Wants, 1 Cor. 1. 10. wherein the admirable Wisdom of God is illustriously displayed; Ye are compleat in him (saith the Apostle) Col. 2. 20. Are we Enemies? He is Reconciliation: Are we sold to Sin and Satan? He is Redemption: Are we condemned by Law? He is the Lord our Righteousness. Hath sin polluted us? He is a Fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness: Are we lost by departing from God? He is the Way to the Father. Rest is not so suitable to the weary, nor Bread to the hungry, as Christ is to the sensible Sinner.

Ninthly, Christ is an astonishing and wonderful Mercy: His Name is called Wonderful, Isa. 9. 6. And as his Name is, so is he; a wonderful Christ: His Person is a Wonder, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifested in the Flesh: His Abasement wonderful, Phil. 2. 6. His Love is a wonderful Love: His Redemption full of wonders; Angels desire to look into it; he is and will be admired by Angels and Saints to all Eternity.

Tenthly, Jesus Christ is an incomparable and matchless Mercy; as the Apple-tree among the Trees of the Wood, so is my Beloved among the Sons (saith the enamoured Spouse) Cant. 2. 3. Draw the Comparison how you will betwixt Christ and all other Enjoyments, you will find none in Heaven or Earth to match him; he is more than all externals, as the Light of the Sun is more than that of a Candle: Nay the worst of Christ is better than the best of the World; his reproaches are better than the Worlds Pleasures, Heb. 11. 25. He is more than all Spirituals, as the Fountain is more than the Stream: He is more than Justification, as the Cause is more than the Effect; more than Sanctification, as the Person himself is more than his Image or Picture: He is more than all Peace, all Comfort, all Joys, as the Tree is more than the Fruit. Nay, draw the Comparison betwixt Christ and things Eternal, and you will find him better than they; for what is Heaven without Christ? Psalm 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? If Christ should say to the Saints, take Heaven among you, but as for me, I will draw my self from you; the Saints would fall a weeping, even in Heaven it self, and say, Lord, Heaven will be no more Heaven to us, except thou be there; thou art the better half of Heaven.

Eleventhly, Christ is an unsearchable Mercy: who can spell his wonderful Name, Prov. 30. 4. Who can tell over his unsearchable Riches, Eph. 3. 8. Hence it is that Souls never tire in the Study or Love of Christ, because new Wonders are Eternally rising out of him; He is a Deep which no Line of any created Understanding, angelical or humane can fathom.

Twelfthly, and Lastly, Christ is an everlasting Mercy; the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. All other Enjoyments are perishable, time-eaten things; Time like a Moth will fret them out: But the Riches of Christ are durable Riches, Prov. 18. 8. The Graces of Christ are durable Graces, John 4. 14. All the Creatures are Flowers that appear and fade in their Month; but this Rose of Sharon, this Lilly of the Valley, never withers. Thus you see the Mercy performed, with his desirable Properties.

Thirdly, The last thing to be opened in the manner of Gods performing his Mercy to his People: Which the Lord did,

1. Really and truly, as he hath promised him.
2. Exactly agreeable to the Promises and Predictions of him.

First, Really and truly; as he hath promised, so he made good the Promise, Acts 2, 36. Let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made the same Jesus, whom ye crucified, both Lord and Christ. The Manifestation of Christ in the Flesh was no Phantasm or Delusion, but a most evident and palpable Truth, 1 John 1. 1. That which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled. A Truth so certain, that the Assertors of it appealed to the very Enemies of Christ for the certainty thereof, Acts 2. 22. Yea, not only the sacred but prophane Writers witness to it; not only the Evangelists and Apostles, but even the Heathen Writers of those times, both Roman and Jewish, as Suetonius, Tacitus, Plinius the younger, and Josephus the Jewish Antiquary do all acknowledge it.

Secondly, As God did really and truly perform Christ the promised Mercy so he performed this promised Mercy exactly agreeable to the Promises, Types, and Predictions made of him to the Fathers, even to the most minute Circumstances thereof. This is a great Truth for our Faith to be established in: Let us therefore cast our Eyes both upon the Promises and Performances of God, with respect to Christ the Mercy of Mercies. See how he was represented to the Fathers long before his Manifestation in the Flesh; and what an one he appeared to be when he was really exhibited in the Flesh.

First, As to his Person and Qualifications, as it was foretold, so it was fulfilled. His Original was said to be unsearchable and Eternal, Micah 5. 2. and so he affirmed himself to be, Rev. 1. 11. I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last; John 6. 31, 32. Before Abraham was, I am; his two Natures united into one Person was plainly foretold, Zech. 13. 7. The Man my Fellow; and such a one God performed, Rom. 9. 5. His immaculate Purity and Holiness was foretold, Dan. 9. 24. To anoint the most Holy; some render it the great Saint: The Prince of Saints, and such one he was indeed, when he lived in this World; John 8. 24. Which of you convinceth me of Sin? His Offices were foretold, the prophetical Office predicted, Deut. 18. 15. and fulfilled in him, John 1. 18. His Priestly Office foretold, Psalm. 110. 4. fulfilled, Heb. 9. 14. His Kingly Office foretold, Micah, 5. 2. And in him fulfilled, his very Enemies being Judges, Mat. 27. 37.

Secondly, As to his Birth, the Time, Place, and Manner thereof was foretold to the Fathers, and exactly performed to a Tittle.

First, The time prefixed more generally in Jacobs Prophecy, Gen. 44. 10. When the Scepter should depart from Judah, as indeed it did in Herod the Idumean:

Idumean: More particularly in Daniel Seventy Weeks from the Decree of Darius, Dan. 9. 24. anſwering exactly to the time of his Birth; ſo cogent and full of Proof, that Porphyry, the great Enemy of Chriſtians had no other Evaſion, but that this Prophecy was deviſed after the Event; which yet the Jews (as bitter Enemies to Chriſt as himſelf) will by no means allow to be true; and Laſtly, The Time of his Birth was exactly pointed at in Haggai's Prophecy, Hag. 2. 7, 9. compared with Mal. 3. 1. He muſt come whilſt the ſecond Temple ſtood; at that time was a general Expectation of him, John 1. 19. and at that very time he came, Luke 2. 38.

Secondly, The Place of his Birth was foretold to be Bethlehem Ephrata, Micah 5. 2. And ſo it was Mat. 2. 5, 6. to be brought up in Nazareth, Zech. 6. 12. Behold the Man whoſe Name is the Branch, the Word is Netzer, whence is the Word Nazarite: And there indeed was our Lord brought up, Mat. 2. 23.

Thirdly, His Parent was to be a Virgin, Iſa. 7. 14. punctually fulfilled, Mat. 1. 20, 21, 22, 23.

Fourthly, His Stock or Tribe was foretold to be Judah, Gen. 49. 10. And it is evident (ſaith the Apoſtle) that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, Heb. 7. 14.

Fifthly, His Harbinger or Forerunner was foretold, Mal. 4, 5. 6. fulfilled in John the Baptiſt, Luke 1. 16, 17.

Sixthly, The obſcurity and meanneſs of his Birth was predicted, Iſa. 53. 2. Zech. 9. 9. to which the Event anſwered, Luke 2. 12.

Thirdly, His Doctrine and Miracles were foretold, Iſa. 16. 1, 2. Iſa. 35. 4, 5. the accompliſhment whereof in Chriſt is evident in the Hiſtory of all the Evangeliſts.

Fourthly, His Death for us was foretold by the Prophets, Dan. 9. 26. The Meſſiah ſhall be cut off, but not for himſelf: Iſa. 53. 5. He was wounded for our Tranſgreſſions. And ſo he was, John 11. 51. The very kind and manner of his Death was prefigured by the brazen Serpent, his Type; and anſwered in his Death upon the Croſs, John 3. 14.

Fifthly, His Burial in the Tomb of a rich Man was foretold, Iſa. 53. 9. and accompliſhed moſt exactly, Mat. 17. 59. 60.

Sixthly, His Reſurrection from the Dead was typed out in Jonah, and fulfilled in Chriſts abode three Days and Nights in the Grave, Mat. 12. 39.

Seventhly, The wonderful ſpreading of the Goſpel in the World, even to the Iſles of the Gentiles, was fore-propheſied, Iſa. 49. 6. To the Truth whereof we are not only the Witneſſes, but the happy Inſtances and Examples of it. Thus the promiſed Mercy was performed.

Infer. 1. If Chriſt be the Mercy of Mercies; the means of conveying all other Mercies from God to Men: then in vain do Men expect and hope for the Mercy of God out of Jeſus Chriſt.

I know many poor Sinners comfort themſelves with this, when they come upon a Bed of ſickneſs, I am ſinful, but God is merciful: And it is very true, God is merciful; plenteous in Mercy; his Mercy is great above the Heavens; Mercy pleaſeth him: And all this they that are in Chriſt ſhall find experimentally to their Comfort and Salvation: But what is all this to thee, if thou beeſt Chriſtleſs? There is not one drop of ſaving Mercy that comes by any other Chanel than Chriſt to the Soul of any Man.

But muſt I then expect no Mercy out of Chriſt? This is a hard Caſe, very uncomfortable Doctrine. Yes, thou maiſt be a chriſtleſs and covenantleſs Soul, and yet have variety of temporal Mercies as Iſhmael had, Gen. 17. 20. 21. God may give thee the Fatneſs of the Earth, Riches, Honours, Pleaſures, a numerous and proſperous Poſterity; will that content thee? Yes, yes if I may have Heaven too: No, no, neither Heaven nor Pardon, nor any other ſpiritual or eternal Mercy may be expected out of Chriſt, Jude verſe 21. O deceive not your ſelves in this Point. There are two Bars betwixt you and all ſpiritual Mercies, viz. The Guilt of Sin, and the Filth of Sin: And nothing but your own Union with Chriſt can remove theſe, and ſo open the paſſage for ſpiritual Mercies to your Souls.

Why, but I will repent of Sin, ſtrive to obey the Commands of God, make Reſtitution for the Wrongs I have done, cry to God for mercy, bind my Soul with Vows and ſtrong Reſolutions againſt Sin for time to come: Will not all this lay a ground work for Hope of mercy to my Soul? No, no, this will not, this cannot do it.

Firſt, All your ſorrows, tears and mournings for Sin cannot obtain mercy: could you ſhed as many Tears for any one ſin that ever you committed, as all the children of Adam have ſhed upon any account whatſoever ſince the creation of the World; they will not purchaſe the Pardon of that one ſin: for the Law accepts no ſhort Payment, it requires plenary ſatisfaction, and will not diſcharge any Soul without it: nor can it acknowledge or own your ſorrows to be ſuch: the Repentance of a ſoul in Chriſt finds through him acceptance with God, but out of him its nothing.

Secondly, All your ſtrivings to obey the Commands of God, and live more ſtrictly for time to come, will not obtain mercy, Matthew 5. 20. Except your righteouſneſs ſhall exceed the righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, ye ſhall in no caſe into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Thirdly, Your Reſtitution and Reparation of wrongs you have done cannot obtain mercy: Judas reſtored, and yet was damned; man is repaired, but God is not: Remiſſion is the Act of God, 'tis he muſt looſe your Conſciences from the Bond of Guilt, or they can never be looſed.

Fourthly, All your cries to God for mercy will not prevail for mercy, if you be out of Chriſt, Mat. 7. 22. Job 27. 29. A Righteous Judge will not reverſe the juſt Sentence of the Law, though the Priſoner at the Bar fall upon his Knees, and cry, Mercy, Mercy.

Fifthly, Your Vows and Engagements to God for time to come cannot obtain mercy: For they being made in your own ſtrength, 'tis impoſſible you ſhould keep them; and if you could, yet it is impoſſible they ſhould obtain remiſſion and mercy: ſhould you never ſin more for time to come, yet how ſhall God be ſatisfied for ſins paſt? Juſtice muſt have ſatisfaction, or you can never have remiſſion, Rom. 3. 25. 26. and no work wrought by man can ſatisfie Divine Juſtice, nor is the ſatisfaction of Chriſt made over to any for their diſcharge, but to ſuch only as are in him: therefore never expect mercy out of Chriſt.

Infer. 2. Is Chriſt the mercy of mercies, better and more neceſſary than all other mercies, then let no inferiour mercy ſatisfie you for your portion.

God hath mercies of all ſorts to give; but Chriſt is the chief, the prime mercy of all mercies: O be not ſatisfied without that mercy.

When Luther had a rich Preſent ſent him, he proteſted God ſhould not put Valde proteſtatus ſum, me nolle sic ab eo satiari, Luth.

him off so: And David was of the same mind, Psalm. 17. 14. If the Lord should give any of you the desires of your Hearts in the good things of this Life, let not that satisfie you whilst you are Christless. For,

First, What is there in these earthly Enjoyments, whereof the vilest of them have not a greater fulness than you? Job. 21. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Psal. 17. 10. & 73. 3. 12.

Secondly, What comfort can all these things give to a soul already condemned as thou art? John 3 18.

Thirdly, What sweetness can be in them, whilst they are all unsanctified things to you? Enjoyments and their Sanctification are two distinct things; Psal. 37. 16. Prov. 10. 22. Thousands of unsanctified Enjoyments will not yield your Souls one drop of solid spiritual Comfort.

Fourthly, What pleasure can you take in these things out of which Death must shortly strip you naked? You must die, you must die; and whose then shall all those things be for which you have laboured? Be not so fond to think of leaving a great Name behind you: 'tis but a poor Felicity (as Chrysostom well observes) to be tormented where thou art, and praised where thou art not: The sweeter your Portion hath been on Earth, the more intolerable will your Condition be in Hell: Yea, these earthly Delights do not only encrease the Torments of the damned, but also prepare (as they are Instruments of Sin) the Souls of Men for Damnation, Prov. 1. 32. Surely the Prosperity of Fools shall destroy them: Be restless therefore, 'till Christ the Mercy of Mercies be the Root and Fountain, yielding and sanctifying all other Mercies to you.

Tunc edax flamma comburet, quos nunc carnalis delectatio polluit.

Infer. 3. Is Christ the Mercy of Mercies, infinitely better than all other Mercies; then let all that be in Christ be content and well satisfied; whatever other inferiour Mercies the Wisdom of God sees fit to deny them: You have a Benjamin's Portion, a plentiful Inheritance in Christ, will you yet grumble? Others have Houses splendid and magnificent upon Earth, but you have an House made without Hands, eternal in the Heavens, 2 Cor. 5. 1. Others are cloathed with rich and costly Apparel, your Souls are cloathed with the white pure Robes of Christ's Righteousness, Isa. 61. 10. I will greatly rejoyce in the Lord, my Soul shall be joyful in my God: for he hath cloathed me with the Garment of Salvation, he hath covered me with the Robe of Righteousness, as a Bridegroom decketh himself with Ornaments, and as a Bride adorneth her self with Jewels. Let those that have full Tables, heavy Purses, rich Lands, but no Christ; be rather Objects of your Pity than Envy: 'Tis better like Store-cattel to be kept lean and hungry, than with the fatted Ox to tumble in flowry Meadows, thence to be led away to the Shambles. God hath not a better Mercy to give than Christ thy Portion, in him all necessary Mercies are secured to thee, and thy Wants and Straits sanctified to thy good. O therefore never open thy Mouth to complain against thy bountiful God.

Inference 4. Is Christ the Mercy (i. e.) he in whom all the tender Mercies of God towards poor Sinners are, Then let none be discouraged in going to Christ, by Reason of the Sin and Unworthiness that is in them: His very Name is Mercy, and as his Name is so is he. Poor drooping Sinner, encourage thy self in the way of Faith, the Christ to whom thou art going is Mercy it self to broken-hearted Sinners moving towards him in the way of Faith: Doubt not that Mercy will repulse thee, 'tis against both its Name and Nature so to do. Jesus Christ is so merciful to poor Souls that come to him, that he hath received and pardoned the chiefest of Sinners; Men that stood as remote from Mercy as any in the World, 1 Tim. 1. 15. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Those that shed the Blood of Christ, have yet been washed in that Blood from their Sin, Acts 2. 36, 37. Mercy receives Sinners without Exception of great and heinous ones, John 7. 37. If any Man thirst, let him come to me and drink. Gospel Invitations run in general terms to all Sinners that are heavy laden, Mat. 11. 28. When Mr. Billney the Martyr heard a Minister preaching at this rate, O thou old Sinner, who hast been serving the Devil these fifty or sixty Years; dost thou think that Christ will receive thee now? O said he, what a Preaching of Christ is here? Had Christ been thus preached to me in the Day of my trouble for sin, what had become of me! But blessed be God, there is a sufficiency both of Merit and Mercy in Jesus Christ for all Sinners, for the vilest among Sinners, whose Hearts shall be made willing to come unto him. So merciful is the Lord Jesus Christ that he moves first, Isa. 62. 1, 2. So merciful that he upbraids none, Ezek. 18. 22. So merciful that he will not despise the weakest, if sincere, desires of Souls, Isa. 42. 3. So merciful, that nothing more grieves him, than our Unwillingness to come unto him for Mercy, John 5. 40. So merciful that he waiteth to the last upon Sinners to shew them Mercy, Rom. 10. Mat. 23. 37. in a Word, so merciful, that it is his greatest Joy when Sinners come unto him that he may shew them Mercy, Luke 15. 5, 22.

Object. But yet it cannot enter into my Thoughts that I should obtain Mercy.

Sol. First, You measure God by your selves; 1 Sam. 24. 19. If a Man find his Enemy, will he let him go well away? Man will not, but the merciful God will upon the Submission of the Enemies to him.

Secondly, You are discouraged because you have not tryed. Go to Jesus Christ, poor distressed Sinner, try him; and then report what a Christ thou findest him to be.

Object. But I have neglected the time of Mercy and now it is too late.

Sol. How know you that? Have you seen the Book of Life, or turned over the Records of Eternity? Or do you not unwarrantably intrude into the Secrets of God which belong not to you? Besides, if the Treaty were at an end, how is it that thy Heart is distressed for Sin, and solicitous after Deliverance from it?

Object. But I have waited long, and yet see no Mercy for me.

Sol. May not Mercy be coming, and you not see it? Or have you not waited at the wrong Door? If you wait for the Mercy of God, through Christ, in the way of Humiliation and Faith, you continue waiting; assuredly Mercy shall come at last.

Inference 5. Hath God performed the Mercy promised to the Fathers, the great Mercy, the Capital Mercy of Christ, then let no Man distrust God for the performance of lesser Mercies, contained in any Promises of the Scripture: The Performance of this Mercy secures the Performance of all other Mercies to us. For,

First, Christ is a greater Mercy than any other which yet remains to be performed, Rom. 8. 32.

Secondly, This Mercy virtually comprehends all other Mercies, 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22, 23.

Thirdly, The Promiſes that contain all other Mercies, are ratified and confirmed to Believers in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 1. 20.

Fourthly, It was much more improbable that God would beſtow his own Son upon the World, than that he ſhould beſtow any other Mercy upon it. Wait therefore in a comfortable Expectation of the fulfilling of all the reſt of the Promiſes in their Seaſons; hath he given thee Chriſt, he will give thee Bread to eat, Raiment to put on, ſupport in Troubles, and whatſoever elſe thy Soul or Body ſtands in need of: The Bleſſings contained in all other Promiſes are fully ſecured by the Performance of this great Promiſe; thy Pardon, Peace, Acceptance with God now, and Enjoyment of him for ever, ſhall be fulfilled: The great Mercy Chriſt, makes way for all other Mercies to the Souls of Believers.

Inference 6. Laſtly, How mad are they that part with Chriſt, the beſt of Mercies, to ſecure and preſerve any temporal, leſſer Mercies to themſelves! Thus Demas and Judas gave up Chriſt to gain a little of the World: O Soul-undoing Bargain! How dear do they pay for the World, that purchaſe it with the Loſs of Chriſt, and their own Peace for ever!

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt the Mercy of Mercies.

SERMON XII.

CANT. V. part of Verſe 16.

——Yea, He is altogether Lovely.

Sermon 12. Text. Containing a third Motive to enliven the general Exhortation from a third Title of Chriſt.

AT the ninth Verſe of this Chapter you have a Query propounded to the Spouſe, by the Daughters of Jeruſalem, What is thy Beloved more than another Beloved? To this Queſtion the Spouſe returns her Anſwer in the following Verſes, wherein ſhe aſſerts his Excellency in general, Ver. 10. He is the chiefeſt among ten Thouſands: Confirms that general Aſſertion by an Enumeration of his particular Excellencies to Verſe 16. where ſhe cloſes up her Character and Encomium of her beloved, with an elegant Epiphonema, in the Words that I have read, Yea, He is altogether Lovely.

The Words, you ſee, are an Affirmative Propoſition, ſetting forth the Tranſcendent Lovelineſs of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and naturally reſolve themſelves into three Parts, viz.

1. The Subject.
2. The Predicate.
3. The Manner of Predication.

Firſt, The Subject, He, viz. the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, after whom ſhe had been ſeeking; for whom ſhe was ſick of Love: Concerning whom theſe Daughters of Jeruſalem had enquired: Whom ſhe had endeavoured ſo Graphically to deſcribe in his particular Excellencies. This is the great and excellent Subject of whom ſhe here ſpeaks.

Secondly, The Predicate, or what ſhe affirmeth or ſaith of him, viz. That he is a Lovely one, Machamaddim, deſires according to the Import of the Original which ſignifies earneſtly to deſire, covet or long for that which is moſt pleaſant, grateful, delectable and admirable; the original Word is both in the Abſtract, and of the Plural Number, which ſpeaks Chriſt to be the very Eſſence of all Delights and Pleaſures, the very Soul and Subſtance of them. As all the Rivers be gathered into the Ocean, which is the Congregation or Meeting-place of all the Waters in the World: So Chriſt is that Ocean in which all true Delights and Pleaſures meet.

Significat appetere, experere quod jucundum, gratum, voluptuoſum, utile & amabile eſt. Pag.

Thirdly, The Manner of Predication: He is [altogether] Lovely, Totus, totus deſiderabilis, lovely in all and in every part, as if ſhe had ſaid, look on him in what reſpect or particular you will, caſt your Eye upon this lovely Object and view him any way, turn him in your ſerious Thoughts which way you will; conſider his Perſon, his Offices, his Works, or any thing belonging to him, you ſhall find him altogether Lovely: There is nothing ungrateful in him, there is nothing lovely without him. Hence Note,

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt is the loveliеſt Perſon Souls can ſet their Eyes upon: Pſalm 45. 2. Thou art fairer than the Children of Men. That is ſaid of Jeſus Chriſt, which cannot be ſaid of any Creature, that he is altogether lovely. In opening this lovely Point, I ſhall,

1. Weigh the Importance of this Phraſe, altogether lovely.

2. Shew you in what reſpects Chriſt is ſo.

Firſt, Let us weigh this excellent Expreſſion, and particularly conſider, what is involved in it, and you ſhall find this Expreſſion, altogether lovely:

Firſt, That it excludes all Unlovelineſs, and Diſtaſtefulneſs from Jeſus Chriſt. So Vatablus, there is nothing in him which is not amiable: The Excellencies of Jeſus Chriſt are perfectly excluſive of all their Oppoſites; there is nothing of a contrary Nature or Quality found in him to allay or debaſe his Excellency: And in this reſpect Chriſt infinitely tranſcends the moſt excellent and loveliеſt Creatures: For whatſoever Lovelineſs is found in them, it is not without a diſtaſteful Tang; the faireſt Pictures muſt have their Shadows: The moſt Orient and Tranſplendent Stones muſt have their Foiles to ſet off their Beauty; the beſt Creature is but a bitter-ſweet at beſt: If there be ſomewhat pleaſing, there is alſo ſomewhat diſtating; if there be gracious and natural Excellencies in the ſame Perſon to delight us, yet there is alſo ſome natural Corruption intermixed with it to diſtaſte us. But it is not ſo in our altogether lovely Chriſt: His Excellencies are pure and unmixed, he is a Sea of Sweetneſs, without one drop of Gall.

Nihil in eo quod non eſt amabile.

Secondly, Altogether lovely (i. e.) as there is nothing unlovely found in him, ſo all that is in him is wholly lovely; as every Ray of God is precious, ſo every thing that is in Chriſt is precious; who can weigh Chriſt in a pair of Ballances, and tell you what his worth is? His Price is above Rubies, and all that thou canſt deſire is not to be compared with him, Prov. 8. 11.

Thirdly, Altogether lovely, (i. e.) He is comprehenſive of all things that are lovely; he ſeals up the Sum of all Lovelineſs: Quæ faciunt diviſa beatum, in hoc mixta fluunt; things that ſhine as ſingle Stars with particular Glory, all meet in Chriſt, as a glorious Conſtellation, Col. 1. 19. It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all Fulneſs dwell. Caſt your Eyes among all created Beings, ſurvey the Univerſe, obſerve ſtrength in one, Beauty in a ſecond, Faithfulneſs in a third, Wiſdom in a fourth; but you ſhall find none excelling in them all as Chriſt doth. Bread hath one Quality, Water another, Raiment another, Phyſick another, but none hath all in it ſelf as Chriſt hath; he is Bread to the hungry, Water to the thirſty, a Garment to the naked, healing to the wounded, and whatever a Soul can deſire is found in him. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Fourthly, Altogether lovely, (i. e.) nothing is lovely in Oppoſition to him, or in Separation from him; if he be altogether lovely, then whatſoever is oppoſite to, or ſeparate from him, can have no Lovelineſs in it, take away Chriſt, and where is the Lovelineſs of any Enjoyment? The beſt creature comfort out of Chriſt is but a broken ciſtern, or a Veſſel whoſe bottom is fallen out, it cannot hold one drop of true comfort, Pſalm 73. 25. It is with the Creature, the ſweeteſt and lovelieſt Creature, as with a beautiful Image in the Glaſs; turn away the Face, and where is the Image? Riches, Honours, and comfortable Relations are ſweet when the Face of Chriſt ſmiles upon us through them, but without him what empty trifles are they all?

Fifthly, Altogether lovely, (i. e.) tranſcending all created Excellencies in Beauty and Lovelineſs, ſo much it ſpeaks: If you compare Chriſt and other things, be they never ſo lovely, never ſo excellent and deſireable; Chriſt carries away all Lovelineſs from them, he is (ſaith the Apoſtle) before all things, Col. 1. 17. Not only before all things in Time. Nature, and Order; but before all things in Dignity, Glory and true Excellency: In all things he muſt have the Preheminence; for let us but compare Chriſt's Excellency with the Creatures, in a few particulars, and how evidently will the tranſcendent Lovelineſs of Jeſus Chriſt appear! For,

Firſt, All other Lovelineſs is derivative and ſecondary, but the Lovelineſs of Chriſt is originary and primary. Angels and Men, the World and all the deſirables in it, receive what Excellency they have from him, they are Streams from the Fountain: But as the Waters in the Fountain it ſelf are more abundant, ſo more pure and pleaſant than in the Streams: And the farther any thing departs and is removed from its Fountain and Original, the leſs Excellency there is in it.

Dulcius ex ipſo fonte bibuntur aquæ.

Secondly, The Lovelineſs and excellency of all other things is but Relative and Reſpective, conſiſting in its reference to Chriſt, and ſubſerviency to his Glory; but Chriſt is lovely conſidered abſolutely in himſelf; he is deſirable for himſelf, other things are ſo for him.

Thirdly, The Beauty and Lovelineſs of all other things is fading and periſhing, but the Lovelineſs of Chriſt is freſh to all Eternity: The Sweetneſs of the beſt of Creatures is a fading Flower, if not before, yet certainly at Death it muſt fade away, Job 4. 21. Doth not their excellency which is in them go away? Yes, yes, whether natural Excellencies of the Body, or acquired Endowments of the Mind, lovely Features, amiable Qualities, attracting Excellencies: All theſe like pleaſant Flowers are withered, faded, and deſtroyed by Death: But Chriſt is ſtill the ſame, Yeſterday, to Day and for ever, Heb. 13. 8.

Fourthly, The Beauty and Lovelineſs of Creatures is enſnaring and dangerous: a Man may make an Idol of it, and dote beyond the Bounds of Moderation upon it: But there is no danger of exceſs in the Love of Chriſt; the Soul is then in the healthieſt Frame and Temper, when it is moſt ſick of Love to Chriſt, Cant. 5. 8.

Fifthly, The Lovelineſs of every Creature is of a cloying and glutting Nature: Our Eſtimation of it abates, and ſinks by our nearer approach to it, or longer Enjoyment of it: Creatures like Pictures are faireſt at a due diſtance; but it is not ſo with Chriſt, the nearer the Soul approacheth him, and the longer it lives in the Enjoyment of him, ſtill the more ſweet and deſirable he is.

Sixthly, Laſtly, All other Lovelineſs is unſatisfying, and ſtraitning to the Soul of Man: There is not room enough in any one, or in all the Creatures for the Soul of Man to dilate and expatiate it ſelf; but it ſtill feels it ſelf pinch't in, and narrowed within thoſe ſtrait Limits: And this comes to paſs from the inadequateneſs and unſuitableneſs of the Creature to the nobler and more excellent Soul of Man: Which like a Ship in a narrow River hath not room to turn, and beſides is ever and anon ſtriking Ground, and foundering in thoſe Shallows: But Jeſus Chriſt is every way adequate to the vaſt deſires of the Soul: In him it hath Sea-room enough; there it may ſpread all its Sails, no fear of touching the Bottom. And thus you ſee what is the Importance of this Phraſe, altogether lovely.

Æſtuat infelix angusto limite mundi.

Secondly Next I promiſed to ſhew you in what reſpects Jeſus Chriſt is altogether lovely. And, Firſt, He is altogether lovely in his Perſon; a Deity dwelling in Fleſh, John 1. 14. The wonderful Union and Perfection of the divine and human nature in Chriſt renders him an Object of Admiration and Adoration to Angels and Men, 1 Tim. 3. 16. God never preſented to the World ſuch a Viſion of Glory before: And then conſidering how the human Nature of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is repleniſhed with all the Graces of the Spirit, ſo as never any of all the Saints was filled: O how lovely doth this render him! John 3. 34. God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him: This makes him fairer than the Children of Men, Grace being poured into his Lips, Pſal. 45. 2. If a ſmall meaſure of Grace in the Saints makes them ſuch ſweet and deſirable Companions, what muſt the Riches and Fulneſs of the Spirit of Grace, filling Jeſus Chriſt without meaſure, make him in the Eyes of Believers? O what a Glory and a Luſtre muſt it ſtamp upon him!

Secondly, He is altogether lovely in his Offices: For let us but conſider the ſuitableneſs, fulneſs, and comfortableneſs of them.

Firſt, The ſuitableneſs of the Offices of Chriſt to the miſeries and wants of Men, and we cannot but adore the infinite Wiſdom of God in his inveſtiture with them; we are by nature blind and ignorant, at beſt but groping in the dim Light of Nature after God: Acts 17. 27. Jeſus Chriſt is a light to lighten the Gentiles, Iſa. 49. 6. When this great Prophet came into the World, then did the Day-ſpring from on high viſit us, Luke 1. 78. The State of Nature is a ſtate of Alienation and Enmity to God; Christ comes into the World an attoning Sacrifice, making Peace by the Blood of his Cross, Col. 1. 20. All the World, by Nature, are in bondage and captivity to Satan, a lamentable Thraldom: Christ comes with a Kingly Power to rescue Sinners, as a prey, from the Mouth of the terrible one.

Secondly, Let the Fulness of his Offices be also considered, by reason whereof he is able to save to the uttermost, all that come to God by him, Heb. 7. 25. The three Offices comprizing in them all that our Souls do need become an universal Relief to all our Wants; and therefore,

Thirdly, Unspeakably comfortable must the Offices of Christ be to the Souls of Sinners; if Light be pleasant to our Eyes, how pleasant is that Light of Life springing from the Sun of Righteousness! Mal. 4. 2. If a Pardon be sweet to a condemned Malefactor, how sweet must the sprinkling the Blood of Jesus be to the trembling Conscience of a Law-condemned Sinner? If a rescue from a cruel Tyrant be sweet to a poor Captive; how sweet must it be to the Ears of enslaved Sinners to hear the Voice of Liberty and Deliverance proclaimed by Jesus Christ? Out of the several Offices of Christ, as out of so many Fountains, all the Promises of the New Covenant flow; as so many Soul refreshing Streams of Peace and Joy: All the Promises of Illumination, Counsel and Direction flow out of the Prophetical Office: All the Promises of Reconciliation, Peace, Pardon, and Acceptation flow out of the Priestly Office, with the sweet Streams of Joy and Spiritual Comfort depending thereupon; all the Promises of converting, increasing, defending, directing, and supplying Grace, flow out of the Kingly Office of Christ; indeed all Promises may be reduced to the three Offices: So that Jesus Christ must needs be altogether lovely in his Offices.

Thirdly, Jesus Christ is altogether lovely in his Relations.

First, He is a lovely Redeemer, Isa. 61. 1, He came to open the Prison-doors to them that are bound. Needs must this Redeemer be a lovely one, if we consider the Depth of Misery from which he redeemed us, even from the Wrath to come, 1 Thes. 1. 10. How lovely was Titus in the Eyes of the poor enthralled Greeks, whom he delivered from their Bondage! This endeared him to them unto that Degree, that when their Liberty was proclaimed, they even trode one another to Death to see the Herauld that proclaimed it; and all the Night following with Instruments of Musick danced about his Tent, crying with united Voices, a Saviour, a Saviour. Or, whether we consider the Numbers redeemed, and the Means of their Redemption, Rev. 4. 9. And they sang a new Song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof: For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation. He redeemed us not with Silver and Gold, but with his own precious Blood by way of Price, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. with his out stretched and glorious Arm, by way of Power, Col. 1. 13. He redeemed us freely, Eph. 1. 7. fully, Rom. 8. 1, seasonably, Gal. 4. 4. and out of special and peculiar Love, Joh. 17. 9. In a Word, he hath redeemed us for ever, never more for us to come into Bondage, 1 Pet. 1. 5. John 10. 28. O how lovely is Jesus Christ in the Relation of a Redeemer to God's Elect!

Secondly, He is a lovely Bridegroom to all that he espouses to himself; how doth the Church glory in him, in the Words following my Text, This is my Beloved, and this is my Friend, O ye Daughters of Jerusalem; (q. d.) Heaven and Earth cannot show such another; which needs no fuller Proof than the following Particulars.

First, That he espouseth to himself in Mercy, and in loving Kindness, such deformed, defiled, and altogether unworthy Souls as we are; who have no Beauty, no Excellency to make us desireable in his Eyes: All the Springs of his Love to us are in his own Breast, Deut. 7. 7. He chooseth us not because we were, but that he might make us lovely, Eph. 5. 27. He passed by us when we lay in our Blood, and said unto us live, and that was the time of Love, Ezek. 16. 5.

Secondly, He expects nothing with us, and yet bestows himself, and all that he hath upon us: Our Poverty cannot enrich him, but he made himself Poor to enrich us, 2 Cor. 8. 9. 1 Cor. 3. 22.

Thirdly, No Husband loves the Wife of his Bosom at the rate Christ loved his People, Eph 5. 25. He loved the Church, and gave himself for it.

Fourthly, None bears with Weaknesses and Provocations as Christ doth, the Church is stiled the Lambs Wife, Rev. 21. 9.

Fifthly, No Husband is so Immortal and Everlasting a Husband as Christ is. Death separates all other Relations, but the Soul's Union with Christ is not dissolved in the Grave: Yea, the Day of a Believers Death is his Marriage-day, the Day of his fullest Enjoyment of Christ: No Husband can say to his Wife what Christ saith to the Believer, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee, Heb. 13. 5.

Sixthly, No Bridegroom advanceth his Bride to such Honours by Marriage as Christ doth: He relates them to God as their Father; and from that Day the mighty and glorious Angels think it no Dishonour to be their Servants, Heb. 1. 14. They are brought in admiring the Beauty and Glory of the Spouse of Christ, Rev. 21. 9.

Seventhly, and Lastly, No marriage was ever consummated with that triumphal Solemnity, as the marriage of Christ and Believers shall be in Heaven, Psalm 45. 14, 15. She shall be brought to the King in Raiment of Needle work, the Virgins, her Companions, that follow her, shall be brought unto thee, with Gladness and Rejoycing shall they be brought, they shall enter into the Kings Palace. Among the Jews the Marriage-House was called Bethillula, the House of Praise: There was Joy upon all Hands; but not like the Joy that will be in Heaven, when Believers, the Spouse of Christ, shall be brought thither; God the Father will rejoyce to behold the blessed Accomplishment and Consummation of that glorious Design and Project of his Love. Jesus Christ the Bridegroom will rejoyce to see the Travel of his Soul, the blessed Birth and Issue of all his bitter Pangs and Agonies, Isa. 53. 11. The holy Spirit will rejoyce to see the Complement and Perfection of that sanctifying Design which was committed to his Hand, 2 Cor. 5. 5. To see those Souls whom he once found as rough Stones, now to shine as the bright polished Stones of the spiritual Temple. Angels will rejoyce; great was the Joy when the Foundation of this Design was laid in the Incarnation of Christ: Luke 2. 14. Great therefore must their Joy be when the Top-stone is set up with shouting, crying, Grace, Grace. The Saints themselves shall rejoyce unspeakably when they shall enter into the Kings Palace, and be for ever with the Lord, 1 Thes. 4. 17. Indeed there will be Joy on all Hands, except among the Devils, and damned; who shall gnash their Teeth with Envy at the everlasting Advancement and Glory of Believers.

Thus Christ is altogether lovely, in the Relation of a Bridegroom.

Thirdly, Christ is altogether lovely in the Relation of an Advocate, 1 John 2. 1. If any Man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, and he is the Propitiation; 'tis He that pleads the Cause of Believers in Heaven: Appears for them in the Presence of God, to prevent all new Breaches, and continue the State of Friendship and Peace betwixt God and us. For in this Relation Christ is altogether lovely. For,

First, He makes our Cause his own, and acts for us in Heaven as for himself, Heb. 4. 15. He is touched with the tender Sense of our Troubles and Dangers, and is not only one with us by way of Representation, but also one with us in respect of Sympathy and Affection.

Secondly, Christ our Advocate follows our suit and Business in Heaven, as his great and main Design and Business, therefore in Heb. 7. 25. He is said to Live for ever to make Intercession for us: As if our Concernments were so minded by him there, as to give up himself wholly to that Work; as if all the Glory and Honour which is paid him in Heaven, would not satisfie him, or divert him one Moment from our Business.

Thirdly, He pleads the cause of Believers by his Blood; It satisfies him not as other Advocates, to be at the Expence of Words and Oratory, which is a cheaper way of Pleading; but he pleads for us by the Voice of his own Blood, Heb. 12. 24, where we are said to be come To the Blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better than that of Abel: Every Wound he received for us on Earth, is a Mouth opened to plead with God on our Behalf in Heaven, Quot Vulnera, tot Ora: And hence it is that in Rev. 5. 6. He is represented standing before God, As a Lamb that had been slain: As it were exhibiting and opening in Heaven those deadly Wounds received on Earth, from the Justice of God upon our Account: Other Advocates spend their Breath, Christ his Blood.

Fourthly, He pleads the cause of Believers freely: Other Advocates plead for Reward, and exhaust the Purses while they plead the Causes of their Clients.

Fifthly, In a Word, he obtaineth for us all the mercies for which he pleads; no cause miscarries in his Hand which he undertakes, Rom. 8. 33, 34. O what a lovely Advocate is Christ for Believers!

Fourthly, Christ is altogether lovely in the Relation of a Friend, for in this Relation he is pleased to own his People, Luke 12. 4, 5. There are certain things in which one Friend manifests his Affection and Friendship to another, but none like Christ, For,

First, No Friend is so open-hearted to his Friend as Christ is to his People: He reveals the very Counsels and Secrets of his Heart to them, John 15. 15. Henceforth I call you not Servants, for the Servant knoweth not what his Lord doth; but I have called you Friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.

Secondly, No Friend in the World is so expensive and bountiful to his Friend, as Jesus Christ is to Believers, John 15. 13. He parts with his very Blood for them; Greater Love (saith he) hath no Man than this, that a Man lay down his Life for his Friends: He hath exhausted the precious Treasure of his invaluable Blood to pay our Debts. O what a lovely Friend is Jesus Christ to Believers.

Thirdly, No Friend sympathizes so tenderly with his Friend in Affliction, as Jesus Christ doth with his Friends: In all our Afflictions he is afflicted, Heb. 4. 15. He feels all our Sorrows, Wants and Burthens as his own. Whence it is that the Sufferings of Believers are called the Sufferings of Christ, Col. 1. 24.

Fourthly, No Friend in the World takes that Complacency in his Friend as Jesus Christ doth in Believers, Cant. 4. 9. Thou hast ravished my Heart (saith he to the Spouse) thou hast ravished my Heart with one of thine Eyes, with one Chain of thy Neck: The Hebrew here rendred ravished, signifies to puff up, or to make one proud; how is the Lord Jesus pleased to glory in his People! How is he taken and delighted with those gracious Ornaments which himself bestows upon them! No Friend so lovely as Christ.

Fifthly, No Friend in the World loves his Friend with so ferverous, and strong Affection, as Jesus Christ loves Believers. Jacob loved Rachel, and endured for her sake the parching Heat of Summer, and Cold of Winter: But Christ endured the Storms of the Wrath of God, the Heat of his Indignation for our sakes. David manifested his Love to Absolom, in wishing, O that I had died for thee! Christ manifested his Love to us, not in Wishes that he had died, but in Death it self, in our stead, and for our sakes.

Sixthly, No Friend in the World is so constant and unchangeable in Friendship, as Christ is, John 13. 1. Having loved his own which were in the World, he loved them unto the end. He bears with Millions of Provocations and Injuries, and yet will not break Friendship with his People. Peter denied him, yet he will not disown him; but after his Resurrection he saith, Go, tell the Disciples, and tell Peter; (q. d.) Let him not think he hath forfeited by that Sin of his, his Interest in me; tho' he have denied me, I will not disown him, Mark 16. 7. Oh how lovely is Christ in the Relation of a Friend! I might farther shew you the Loveliness of Christ in his Ordinances, and in his Providences, in his Communion with us, and Communications to us: But there is no End of the Account of Christ's Loveliness. I will rather choose to press Believers to their Duties towards this altogether lovely Christ, which I shall briefly dispatch in a few Words.

Use First, Is Jesus Christ altogether lovely, then I beseech you set your Souls upon this Lovely Jesus: Methinks such an Object as hath been here represented should compel Love from the coldest Breast, and hardest Heart. Away with those empty nothings, away with this vain Deceitful World, which deserves not the thousandth part of the Love you give it: Let all stand aside, and give way to Christ. O did you but know his Worth and Excellency, what he is in himself, what he hath done for, and deserved from you; you would need no Arguments of mine to perswade you to love him.

Secondly, Esteem nothing Lovely, but as it is enjoyed in Christ, or improved for Christ: Affect nothing for it self, love nothing separate from Jesus Christ. In two things we all sin in the Love of Creatures, viz. In the Excess of our Affections, loving them above the Rate and Value of creatures, and in the Inordinancy of our Affections, (i. e.) in loving them out of their proper Places.

Thirdly, Let us all be humbled for the baseness of our Hearts, that are so free of their Affections to Vanities, and Trifles; and so hard to be perswaded to the Love of Christ, who is altogether lovely. Oh how many pour out Streams of Love and Delight upon the vain and empty empty Creature, whilſt no Arguments can ſqueeze out one Drop of Love from their obdurate and unbelieving Hearts to Jeſus Chriſt! I have read of one Johannes Mollius, who was obſerved to go often alone, and weep bitterly; and being preſt by a Friend to know the Cauſe of his Troubles; Oh, ſaid he, it grieves me that I cannot bring this Heart of mine to Love Jeſus Chriſt more fervently.

Fourthly, Repreſent Chriſt as he is to the World, by your Carriage, towards him: Is he altogether lovely? Let all the World ſee and know that he is ſo, by your delights in him, and Communion with him, Zeal for him, and readineſs to part with any other lovely Thing upon his Account; proclaim his Excellencies to the World, as the Spouſe here did: convince them how much your Beloved is better than any other Beloved. Diſplay his glorious Excellencies in your heavenly converſations: Hold him forth to others, as he is in himſelf, altogether lovely. See that you Walk worthy of him unto all well-pleaſing, Col. 1. 10. Shew forth the Praiſes of Chriſt, 1 Pet. 2. 19. Let not that worthy Name be blaſphemed through you, James 2. 7. He is glorious in himſelf, and will put Glory upon you; take heed ye put not ſhame and diſhonour upon him: He hath committed his Honout to you, do not betray that Truſt.

Fifthly, Never be aſhamed to own Chriſt: He is altogether lovely; he can never be a ſhame to you; 'twill be your great ſin, to be aſhamed of him. Some Men glory in their Shame, be not you aſhamed of your Glory; if you be aſhamed of Chriſt now, he will be aſhamed of you, when he ſhall appear in his own Glory, and the Glory of all his Holy Angels. Be aſhamed of nothing but Sin, and among other Sins, be aſhamed eſpecially for this Sin, that you have no more Love for him who is altogether Lovely.

Sixthly, Be willing to leave every thing that is lovely upon Earth, that you may be with the altogether lovely Lord Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven. Lift up your Voices with the Spouſe, Rev. 20. 20. Come Lord Jeſus, come quickly. 'Tis true, you muſt paſs through the Pangs of Death into his Boſom and Enjoyment; but ſure 'tis worth ſuffering much more than that, to be with this lovely Jeſus. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God, and the patient waiting for of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Theſ. 3. 4.

Seventhly, Strive to be Chriſt-like, as ever you would be lovely in the Eyes of God and Man. Certainly my Brethren, 'tis the Spirit of Chriſt within you, and the Beauty of Chriſt upon you, which only can make you lovely Perſons; the more you reſemble him in Holineſs, the more will you diſcover of true Excellency and Lovelineſs: And the more frequent and ſpiritual your converſe and communion with Chriſt is, the more of the Beauty and Lovelineſs of Chriſt will ſtill be ſtamped upon your Spirits, changing you into the ſame Image from Glory to Glory.

Eighthly, Let the Lovelineſs of Chriſt draw all Men to him. Is Lovelineſs in the Creature, embodied Beauty, ſo attractive? And can the tranſcendent Lovelineſs of Chriſt draw none? Oh the Blindneſs of Man! If you ſee no Beauty in Chriſt, why you ſhould deſire him, 'tis becauſe the God of this World hath blinded your Minds.

SERMON XIII.

HAGGAI II. vii.

——And the Deſire of all Nations, ſhall come.

Ser. 13. Text Alluring the Hearts of Men to come to Chriſt by a fourth Motive contained in another Title of Chriſt.

THE former Chapter is mainly ſpent in reproving the Negligence of the Jews, who being diſcouraged from time to time, had delayed the Rebuilding the Temple: And in the mean time employed their care, and coſt in building and adorning their own Houſes: but at laſt being perſwaded to ſet about the Work, they meet with this Diſcouragement, that ſuch was the Poverty of the preſent Time, that the ſecond Structure would no way anſwer the Magnificence and Splendor of the firſt. In Solomon's Days the Nation was wealthy, now drained, ſo that there would be no Proportion betwixt the ſecond and the firſt. To this grand Diſcouragement, the Prophet applies this Relief, that whatſoever ſhould be wanting in external Pomp and Glory, ſhould be more than recompenſed by the Preſence of Jeſus Chriſt in this ſecond Temple. For Chriſt the Deſire of all Nations (ſaith he) ſhall come into it. Which by the way may give us this uſeful Note, That the preſence of Jeſus Chriſt gives a more real and excellent Glory to the Places of his Worſhip, than any external Beauty, or outward Ornaments whatſoever can beſtow upon them. Our Eyes like the Diſciples are apt to be dazled with the goodly Stones of the Temple, and in the mean time to neglect, and overlook that which gives it its greateſt Honour and Beauty.

But to return, in theſe Words we have both the Deſcription of Chriſt, and an Index pointing at the time of his Incarnation; he is called The deſire of all Nations: And the time of his coming in the Fleſh, 'tis plainly intimated to be while the ſecond Temple ſhould be ſtanding: Where by the way, we find juſt cauſe to admire and bemoan the Blindneſs that is hapned to the Jews; who owning the truth of this Prophecy, and not able to deny the Deſtruction of the ſecond Temple, many hundred Years paſt, will not yet be brought to acknowledge the Incarnation of the true Meſſiah, notwithſtanding.

But to the Point, the Character of Chriſt, ſtiled the deſire of all Nations, who was to come into the World in the time of the ſecond Temple, Mal. 3. 12. And that after grievous concuſſions and ſhakings of the World, which were to make way for his coming, for ſo our Prophet here ſpeaks, I will ſhake all Nations, and the deſire of all Nations ſhall come, to which the Apoſtle alludes in, Heb. 12. 26. applying this Prophecy to Jeſus Chriſt, here called the deſire of all Nations: Putting the Act for the Object, deſire for the thing deſired; as in, Ezek. 24. 16. The deſire of thine Eyes, that is the deſirable Wife of thy Boſom. So here the deſire of all Nations, that is Chriſt the Object of the deſires of God's Elect in all Nations of the World. A Saviour infinitely deſirable in himſelf, and actually deſired by all the People of God, diſperſed among Kindreds, Tongues and Nations Nations in the World. From whence this Note is.

Doct. That the desires of God's Elect in all Kingdoms, and among all People of the Earth, are and shall be drawn out after, and fixed upon the Lord Jesus Christ.

The merciful God beholding the universal Ruines of the World by Sin, hath provided an universal Remedy for his own Elect, in every part of the Earth. Christ is not impropriated to any one Kingdom or Nation in the World; but intended to be God's Salvation to the ends of the Earth, and accordingly speaks the Apostle, Col. 2. 11. There is neither Greek nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, Bond nor Free; but Christ is all, and in all. In the Explication of this Point, two things must be enquired into.

1. Why Christ is called the desire of all Nations.

2. Upon what Account the People of God in all Nations desire him.

First, Why he is called the desire of all Nations: And what that may import: And there are divers things that are supposed or included in it.

First, That God the Father hath appointed him as a common Remedy, for the Sins and Miseries of his People in all Parts and Quarters of the World. So in the Covenant of Redemption betwixt the Father and the Son, the Lord expresseth himself, Isa. 49. 6. and he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my Servant, to raise up the Tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou maist be my Salvation to the end of the Earth. Suitable whereunto is that Prophecy, Isa. 52. 15. He shall sprinkle many Nations. If God had not appointed him for, he could not be desired by all Nations.

And indeed herein the Grace of God doth admirably shine forth in the freeness of it, that even the most barbarous Nations are not excluded from the Benefit of Redemption by Christ. This is that the Apostle admires, that Christ should be Preached to the Gentiles, 1 Tim. 3. 16. A People that seemed to be lost in the Darkness of Idolatry; yet even for them Christ was given by the Father. Ask of me (saith he) and I will give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the Earth for thy Possession.

Secondly, Christ the desire of all Nations, plainly notes the sufficiency that is in him to supply the wants of the whole World: As the Sun in the Heavens suffices all Nations for Light and Influence, so doth the Son of Righteousness suffice for the Redemption, Justification, Sanctification and Salvation of the People of God, all the World over, Isa. 45. 22. Look unto me, and be ye saved all ye ends of the Earth.

Thirdly, It implies the Reality that is in Godliness. It shews you that Religion is no fancy, as the atheistical World would perswade us; and this evidently appears in the uniform Effects of it upon the Hearts of all Men in all Nations of the World, that are truly Religious; all their Desires, like so many Needles touched by one and the same Load-stone, move towards Jesus Christ, and all meet together in one and the same blessed Object, Christ. Were it possible for the People of God to come out of all Nations, Kindreds and Languages in the World, into one Place, and there confer, and compare the desires and workings of their Hearts; though they never saw each others Face, nor heard of each others Name; yet as Face answers to Face in a Glass, so would their desires after Christ answer to each other: All Hearts work after him in the same Manner, what one saith, all say; these are my Troubles and Burthens, these my Wants and Miseries; the same things my Desires and Fears: One and the same Spirit harmonically Works in all Believers through the World, which could never be, if Religion were but a Fancy as some call it, or a Combination or Confederacy, as others call it: Fancies are as various as Faces; and Confederacies presuppose mutual Acquaintance and Conference.

Fourthly, Christ the desire of all Nations implies the vast extent his Kingdom hath and shall have in the World: Out of every Nation under Heaven some shall be brought to Christ, and to Heaven by him. And though the number of God's Elect, compared with the Multitudes of the Ungodly in all Nations, is but a Remnant, a little Flock, and in that comparative Sense there are few that shall be saved; yet considered absolute, and in themselves, they are a vast number, which no Man can number, Mat. 8. 11. Many shall come from the East, and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven. In order whereunto the Gospel, like the Sun in the Heavens, circuits the World: It arose in the East, and takes its course towards the Western World; rising by Degrees upon the remote Idolatrous Nations of the Earth; out of all which a number is to be saved, even Ethiopia shall stretch out her Hands to God, Psalm 68. 31. And this Consideration should move us to pray earnestly for the poor Heathens, who yet sit in Darkness, and the shadow of Death; there is yet Hope for them.

Fifthly, It holds forth this, that when God opens the Eyes of Men to see their Sin, and danger by it; nothing but Christ can give them Satisfaction: 'Tis not the amenity, fertility, Riches and Pleasures the Inhabitants of any Kingdom of the World do enjoy, that can quench and satisfie the desires of their Souls: When once God touches their Hearts with the Sense of Sin and Misery: Christ and none but Christ is desirable and necessary in the Eyes of such Persons. Many Kingdoms of the World abound with Riches and Pleasures, the Providence of God hath carved liberal Portions of the good things of this Life to many of them, and scarce left any thing to their desires that the World can afford. Yet all this can give no Satisfaction without Jesus Christ, the desire of Nations, the one thing necessary, when once they come to see the Necessity and Excellency of him: Then take the World who will, so they may have Christ the desire of their Souls. Thus we see upon what Grounds and Reasons Christ is stiled the desire of all Nations.

Object. But there lies one great Objection against this truth, which must be satisfied, viz. If Christ be the desire of all Nations, how comes it to pass, that Jesus Christ finds no Entertainment in so many Nations of the World, among whom Christianity is hissed at, and Christians not tolerated to live among them? Who see no Beauty in him that they should desire him.

Sol. First, We must remember the Nations of the World have their times and seasons of Conversion. Those that once embraced Christ, have now lost him, and Idols are now set up in the Places where he once was sweetly Worshipped. The Sun of the Gospel is gone down upon them, and now shines in another Hemisphere: And so the Nations of the World are to have their distinct Days, and seasons of Illumination. The Gospel, like the Sea, gaineth in one place what it loseth in another: And in the times and seasons appointed by the Father they come successively to be enlightened in the Knowledge ledge of Christ; and then shall that Promise be fulfilled, Isa. 49. 7. Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, to whom him the Nation abhorreth, to a Servant of Rulers; Kings shall see and arise, Princes also shall Worship, because of the Lord that is faithful.

Secondly, Let it also be remembred, that although Christ be rejected by the Rulers and Body of many Nations; yet he is the desire of all the Elect of God, dispersed and scattered among those Nations.

Secondly, In the next Place we are to enquire, upon what Account Christ becomes the desire of all Nations, (i. e.) of all those in all the Nations of the World that belong to the Election of Grace. And the true Ground and Reason thereof is, because Christ only hath that in himself which relieves their Wants and answers to all their Needs. As,

First, They are all by Nature under Condemnation, Rom. 5. 16, 18. under the curse of the Law; against which nothing is found in Heaven or Earth able to relieve their Consciences but the Blood of sprinkling, the pure and perfect Righteousness of the Lord Jesus: and hence it is that Christ becomes so desirable in the Eyes of poor Sinners all the World over. If any thing in Nature could be found to pacifie and purge the Consciences of Men from guilt and fear; Christ would never be desirable in their Eyes; but finding no other Remedy but the Blood of Jesus, to him therefore shall all the ends of the Earth look for Righteousness and for Peace.

Secondly, All Nations of the World are polluted with the filth of Sin, both in Nature and Practice, which they shall see, and bitterly bewail when the Light of the Gospel shall shine amongst them; and the same Light by which this shall be discovered, will also discover the only Remedy of this evil to be in the Spirit of Christ, the only Fountain opened to all Nations for Sanctification and Cleansing: and this will make the Lord Jesus incomparably desirous in their Eyes. Oh how welcome will he be that cometh unto them, not by Blood only, but by Water also! John 1. 5, 6.

Thirdly, When the Light of the Gospel shall shine upon the Nations, they shall then see, that by Reason of the guilt and filth of Sin, they are all barr'd out of Heaven. Those doors are chained to against them, and that none but Christ can open an entrance for them into that Kingdom of God: That no Man cometh to the Father but by him, John 14. 6. Neither is there any Name under Heaven given among Men, whereby they must be saved, but the Name of Christ, Acts 4. 12. hence the Hearts of Sinners shall pant after him, as the Hart panteth after the Water-brooks. And thus we see upon what grounds Christ becomes the desire of all Nations. The Improvement of all followeth in several Uses of the Point, viz.

1. For Information.
2. For Examination.
3. For Consolation.
4. For Exhortation.
5. For Direction.

First Use for Information.

First, Is Christ the desire of all Nations, How great a sin is it then in any Nation, upon whom the Light hath shined, to reject Jesus Christ, and say as those in Luke 19. 14. Depart from us, we desire not the Knowledge of thy Ways. To thrust away his Worship, Government, and Servants from amongst them, and in effect to say as it is, Luke 19. 14. We will not have this Man to Reign over us: Thus did the Jews, Acts 3. 46. They put away Christ from among them, and thereby judged themselves unworthy of eternal Life. This is at once a fearful Sin, and a dreadful Sign: How soon did Vengeance overtake them, like the overthrow of Sodom! O let it be for a warning unto all Nations to the end of the World. He would have gathered the Children of Israel under his Wings, as a Hen doth her brood, even when the Roman Eagle was hovering over them, but they would not; therefore their Houses were left unto them desolate, their City and Temple made an heap.

Secondly, If Jesus Christ be the desire of all Nations, how incomparably Happy then must that Nation be, that enjoys Christ in the Power and Purity of his Gospel-Ordinances! If Christ under a Vail made Canaan a glorious Land (as it's called) Dan. 11. 41. What a glorious Place must that Nation be that beholds him with open Face in the bright Sunshine of the Gospel! O England, know thy Happiness, and the Day of thy Visitation: What others desire thou enjoyest: Provoke not the Lord Jesus to depart from thee, by corrupting his Worship, hankering after Idolatry, abusing his Messengers, oppressing his People, lest his Soul depart from thee.

Second Use for Examination. If Christ be the desire of all Nations, examine whether he be the desire of your Souls in particular, else you shall have no Benefit by him. Are your desires after Christ true spiritual desires? Reflect, I beseech you, upon the frames and tempers of your Hearts. Can you say of your desires after Christ, as Peter did of his Love to Christ, Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I desire thee: Try your desires as to their Sincerity, by the following Characters.

First, Are they vehement and ardent? Hath Christ the supream Place in your Desires? Do you esteem all things to be but Dross and Dung in comparison of the Excellencies of Jesus Christ your Lord? Phil. 3. 8. Is he to you as the refuge city to the Manslayer, Heb. 6. 18, 19. As a spring of Water in a dry Place, as the shadow of a great Rock in a weary Land, Isa. 32. 2. Such vehement Desires are true Desires.

Secondly, Are your Desires after Christ universal? (i. e.) Is every Thing in Christ desireable in your Eyes? The Hypocrite like the Harlot is for a divided Christ: They would be called by his Name, but live upon their own Stock, Isa. 4. 1. If his Holiness, and Government, his Cross, and Sufferings be desirable for his Sake, such universal Desires are right Desires.

Thirdly, Are your Desires after Christ industrious Desires, using all the means of accomplishing what you desire? You say you desire Christ, but what will you do to obtain your desires? If you seek him carefully and incessantly in all the ways of duty, if you will strive in Prayer, labour to believe, cut off right Hands, and pluck out right Eyes, (i. e.) be content to part with the most profitable and pleasant Ways of Sin, that you may enjoy Christ the desire of your Souls, then are your desires right desires.

Fourthly, Are your desires after Christ permanent Desires, or only a sudden Mood and Fit, which goes off again without Effect? If your desires after Christ abide upon your Hearts, if your longings be after him at all Times, though not in the same height and degree, then are your desires right desires? Christ always dwells in the desires of his People, they can feel him in their desires, when they cannot discern him in their loves or delights.

Fifthly, Will your desires after Christ admit no satisfaction, nor find rest any where but in the injoyment of Christ, then are your desires right desires: The Soul that desires Christ can never be at rest till it come home to Christ, 2 Cor. 5. 2, 6. Phil. 1. 23. The Devil can satisfie others with Riches and Pleasures of this World, as children are quieted with Rattles. If nothing but Christ can rest and terminate your desires, surely such restless desires are right desires.

Sixthly, Do your desires after Christ spring from a deep sense of your need and want of Christ: Hath conviction opened your Eyes to see your Misery, to feel your Burthens, and to make you sensible that your Remedy lies only in the Lord Jesus, then are your desires right desires: Bread and Water are made necessary and desirable by hunger and thirst. By these Things try the Truth of your desires after Christ.

3d. Use for Consolation. Do you indeed upon serious Trial find such desires after Christ, as were described above; Oh bless the Lord for that day wherein Christ the desire of Nations became the desire of your Souls, and for your comfort know that you are happy and blessed Souls at present.

First, Blessed in this, that your Eyes have been opened to see both the want and worth of Christ. Had not Christ applied his precious Eye-salve to the Eyes of your Mind, you could never have desired him, you would have said with them in Isa. 53. 2. He hath no Form nor Comeliness, and when we shall see him, there is no Beauty that we should desire him: Or as they to the Spouse Cant. 5. 9. What is thy Beloved more than another Beloved? O blessed Souls inlightned of the Lord; to see those things that are hid from them that perish!

Secondly, You are blessed in this, that your desires after Christ are a sure Evidence that the desire of Christ is towards you: Had he not first desired you, you could never have desired him. We may say of Desires as it is said of Love; we desire him because he first desired us: Your desires after Christ are inflamed from the desires of Christ after you.

Thirdly, Blessed in this, that your desires shall surely be satisfied. Mat. 5. 6. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after Righteousness, for they shall be filled: Prov. 10. 24. The desires of the Righteous shall be granted. God never raised such desires as these in the Souls of his People to be a torment to them for ever.

Fourthly, Blessed in this, that God hath guided your desires to make the best choice that ever was made in the World: Whilst the desires of others are hunting after Riches, Pleasure and Honours in the World, toiling themselves like children in pursuit of a painted Butterfly, which when they have caught, doth but daub their Fingers; God mean while hath directed your desires to Christ, the most excellent Object in Heaven or Earth. Any good will satisfie some Men, O happy Soul if none but Christ can satisfie thee, Psalm 4. 6.

Fifthly, Blessed in this, that there is a Work of Grace certainly wrought upon thy Soul, and these very desires after Christ are a part thereof.

Sixthly, Blessed in this, that these desires after Christ keep thy Soul active and working after him continually in the ways of Duty, Psalm 27. 4. One thing have I desired, that will I seek after. Desire will be a continual Spring to diligence and industry in the ways of Duty: The desire of the end quickens to the use of Means, Prov. 18. 1. Others may fall asleep and cast off Duty, but it will be hard for you to do so, whose Souls burn with desire after Christ.

Seventhly, Blessed in this, that your desires after Christ will make Death much the sweeter and easier to you, Phil. 1. 23. I desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, which is far better. When a Christian was once asked, whether he were willing to die? He returned this Answer, let him be unwilling to die, who is unwilling to go to Christ: And much like it was that of another, vivere renuo, ut Christo vivam, I refuse this Life, to live with Christ.

Illius est nolle mori, qui nolit ire ad Christum.

4th Use for Exhortation. In the fourth Place, let me exhort and perswade all to make Jesus Christ the desire and choice of their Souls. And here I fall in with the main Scope and Design of the Gospel: And oh that I could effectually press home this Exhortation upon your Hearts. Let me offer some moving considerations to you, and the Lord accompany them to your Hearts.

First, Every creature naturally desires its own Preservation, do not you desire the Preservation of your precious and immortal Souls? If you do, then make Christ your desire and choice, without whom they can never be preserd, Jude ver. 1.

Secondly, Don't your Souls earnestly desire the Bodies they live in? How tender are they over them, how careful to provide for them? Though they pay a dear Rent for those Tenements they live in: And is not Union with Christ infinitely more desirable than the Union of Soul and Body? Oh covet Union with him, then shall your Souls be happy, when your Bodies drop off from them at Death, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 3. Yea, Soul and Body shall be happy in him, and with him for evermore.

Thirdly, How do the Men of this World desire the Enjoyments of it? They pant after the Dust of the Earth: They rise early, sit up late, eat the Bread of carefulness; and all this for very Vanity. Shall a worldling do more for Earth than you for Heaven? Shall the creature be so earnestly desired, and Christ neglected?

Fourthly, What do all your desires in this World benefit you, if you go christless? Suppose you had the desire of your Hearts in these Things, how long shall you have comfort in them if you miss Christ?

Fifthly, Doth Christ desire you, who have nothing lovely or desirable in you? And have you no desires after Christ, the most lovely, and desirable one in both Worlds? His desires are towards you, Prov. 8. 31. O make him the desire and choice of your Souls.

Sixthly, How absolutely necessary is Jesus Christ to your Souls? Bread and Water, Breath and Life is not so necessary as Christ is, One thing is necessary, Luke 10. 42. And that one thing is Christ: If you miss your desires in other things, you may yet be happy; but if you miss Christ, you are undone for ever.

Seventhly, How suitable a good is Christ to your Souls? comprizing whatsoever they want, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Set your Hearts where you will, none will be found to match and suit them as Christ doth.

Eighthly, How great is the Benefit that will redound to you by Jesus Christ? In him you shall have a rich Inheritance setled upon you: All things shall be yours when you are Christs, 1 Cor. 3. 22. And is not such a Christ worth desiring?

Ninthly, All your well-grounded hopes of Glory are built upon your Union with Christ, 1 Cor. 1. 21. If you miss Christ, you must die without hope: will not this draw your Desires to him?

Tenthly

Tenthly, Suppoſe you were at the Judgment Seat of God, where you muſt ſhortly ſtand; and ſaw the Terrors of the Lord in that day; the Sheep divided from the Goats, the Sentences of abſolution and condemnation paſt by the great and awful Judge, upon the Righteous and Wicked; would not Chriſt be then deſirable in your Eyes? As ever you expect to ſtand with comfort at that Bar, let Chriſt be the deſire and choice of your Souls now.

5th Uſe for Direction. Do theſe, or any other Conſiderations put thee upon this enquiry, how ſhall I get my deſires kindled and inflamed towards Chriſt? Alas, my Heart is cold and dead, not a ſerious deſire ſtirring in it after Chriſt: To ſuch I ſhall offer the following Directions.

Direction 1. Redeem ſome time every Day for Meditation: Get out of the noiſe and clamour of the World, Pſalm. 4. 4. And ſeriouſly bethink your ſelves how the preſent State of your Soul ſtands, and how it is like to go with you for ever: Here all ſound converſion begins, Pſalm. 119. 19.

Direction 2. Conſider ſeriouſly of that lamentable State in which you came into the World: children of Wrath by Nature, under the curſe and condemnation of the Law. So that either your State muſt be changed, or you inevitably damned, John 3. 3.

Direction 3. Conſider the way and courſe you have taken, ſince you came into the World; proceeding from Iniquity to Iniquity. What command of God have you not violated a thouſand Times over? What Sin is committed in the World, that you are not one way or other guilty of before God? How many ſecret Sins upon your Score, unknown to the moſt intimate Friend you have in the World? Either this Guilt muſt be ſeparated from your Souls, or your Souls from God to all Eternity.

Direction 4. Think upon the ſevere Wrath of God due to every Sin, The Wages of Sin is Death, Rom. 6. ult. And how intolerable the fulneſs of that Wrath muſt be when a few drops ſprinkled upon the Conſcience in the World is ſo inſupportable, that it hath made ſome to chooſe ſtrangling rather than Life: And yet this Wrath muſt abide for ever upon you, if you get not Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt, John 3. 63.

Direction 5. Ponder well the happy ſtate and condition they are in, who have obtained Pardon and Peace by Jeſus Chriſt, Pſalm 31. 12. And ſeeing the Grace of God is free, and you are yet under the means thereof, why may not you be as capable thereof as others?

Direction 6. Seriouſly conſider the great uncertainty of your time, and precioufneſs of the Opportunities of Salvation, never to be recovered when they are once paſt, John 9. 4. Let this provoke you to lay hold upon thoſe golden Seaſons, whilſt they are yet with you; that you may not bewail your Folly and Madneſs when they are out of your reach.

Direction 7. Aſſociate your ſelves with ſerious Chriſtians, get into their Acquaintance, and beg their Aſſiſtance; beſeech them to pray for you: And ſee that you reſt not here, but be frequently upon your Knees begging of the Lord a new Heart, and a new State.

In concluſion of the whole, let me beſeech and beg all the People of God, as upon my Knees, to take heed and beware leſt by the careleſneſs, and ſcandals of their Lives, they quench the weak deſires beginning to kindle in the Hearts of others. You know what the Law of God awards for ſtriking a Woman with child, ſo that her fruit go from her. Exod. 21, 22, 23. Oh ſhed not Soul-blood by ſtifling the hopeful deſires of any after Chriſt.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt the deſire of all Nations.

SERMON XIV.

I. COR. II. viii.

Which none of the Princes of this World have known, for had they known him, they would not have Crucified the Lord of Glory.

ver. 14. Text. containing the fifth More to apply Chriſt, drawn from another excellent Title of Chriſt.

IN this Chapter the Apoſtle diſcourſes to the Corinthians the Excellency of his Miniſtry, both to obviate the contempt which ſome caſt upon it for want of human Ornaments; and to give the greater Authority unto it among all: And whereas the ſpiritual Simplicity of his Miniſtry did it under the contempt of ſome, he removes that ſeveral Ways, by ſhowing them

Firſt, That it was not ſuitable to the deſign, and end of his Miniſtry, his aim being to know nothing among them, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified, verſe 1, 2.

Secondly, Neither was it for the Advantage of their Souls: It might indeed tickle their Fancies, but could be no ſolid Foundation to their faith and comfort, verſe 4, 5.

Thirdly, Though his Diſcourſes ſeemed jejune, and dull to carnal hearers, yet it had a depth, and an excellency in it, which ſpiritual and judicious Chriſtians ſaw and acknowledged, verſe 6, 7.

Fourthly, Therefore this excellent Wiſdom which he preached, far tranſcended all the natural Wiſdom of this World: Yea, the moſt raiſed and improved Underſtandings of thoſe that were moſt renowned, and admired in that Age for Wiſdom, ver. 8. Which none of the Princes of this World knew.

In which Words we have,

1. A Negative Propoſition.
2. The Proof of the Propoſition.

Firſt, A Negative Propoſition, none of the Princes of this World knew that ſpiritual Wiſdom which he taught. By Princes of this World, or rather Principes ſeculi, the Princes of that Age, he means, as Camero well notes, the learned Rabbies, Scribes and Phariſees, renowned for Wiſdom and Learning among them, and honoured upon that account, as ſo many Princes: But he adds a diminutive Term, which darkens all their Glory. They are but the Princes of this World, utterly unacquainted with the Wiſdom of the other World. To which he adds,

Secondly, A clear and full Proof, for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory. In which Words we find one of Chriſt's glorious and royal Titles, the Lord of Glory: Upon which Title my preſent Diſcourſe muſt fall. The Words being fitly rendred and nothing of ambiguity in them, they give us this Obſervation.

Doct. That Chriſt crucified is the Lord of Glory.

Great and excellent is the Glory of Jeſus Chriſt; the Scriptures every where proclaim his Glory. Yea, we may obſerve a notable Climax, or gradation in thoſe Scriptures that ſpeak of his Glory. The Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaking of him calls him Glorious, Iſa. 4. 2. In that Day ſhall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious. John ſpeaking of his Glory riſes a ſtep higher, and aſcribeth to him a Glory as of the only begotten Son of the Father, John 1. 14. (i. e.) a Glory meet for, and becoming the Son of God: Proper to him, and incommunicable to any other. The Apoſtle James riſes yet higher, and doth not only call him Glorious, or Glorious as the only begotten of the Father: But the Glory, Jam. 2. 1. Glory in the abſtract; my Brethren (ſaith he) have not the Faith of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Glory, with reſpect of Perſons: For the Word, Lord, which is in our Tranſlation, is a ſupplement: Chriſt is Glory it ſelf; yea, the Glory emphatically ſo ſtiled; the Glory of Heaven, the Glory of Sion; the Glory of our Souls for ever. The Author to the Hebrews goes yet higher, and calls not him ſimply the Glory, but the brightneſs of his Fathers Glory, Heb. 1. 3. as who ſhould ſay, the radiancy, ſparkling, or beaming forth of his Father's Glory, the very ſplendour or refulgency of Divine Glory. Oh what a glorious Lord is our Lord Jeſus Chriſt! the bright ſparkling Diamond of Heaven; who ſhines in Glory there, above the Glory of Angels and Saints, as the Glory of the Sun excels the leſſer twinkling Stars. When he appeared to Paul, Acts 26. 13. I ſaw, ſaid he, a light from Heaven, above the brightneſs of the Sun, ſhining round about me: Needs muſt the Glory of Chriſt be unſpeakable, who reflects Glory upon all that be with him, John 17. 24. and ſtamps Glory upon all that belongs to him. His works on Earth were glorious works, Luke 13. 17. The purchaſed liberty of his People, a glorious liberty, Rom. 8. 21. The Church his myſtical Body, a glorious Church, Eph. 5. 27. The Goſpel which reveals him, is a glorious Goſpel, 1 Tim. 1. 11.

'Απαύγασμα τῆς δόξης.

But more particularly, let us conſider the Glory of Chriſt, as it is diſtinguiſhed into his, either,

1. Eſſential, or
2. Mediatorial Glory.

Firſt, The Eſſential Glory of Chriſt, which he hath as God from everlaſting; which is unſpeakable and unconceivable Glory: For (ſaith the Apoſtle) Phil. 2. 6. He being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God, (i. e.) he had a Peerage, or equality with his Father in Glory, John. 10. 30. I and my Father are one: And again, Joh. 16. 15. All things that the Father hath are mine: The ſame Name, the ſame Nature, the ſame eſſential Properties, the ſame Will, and the ſame Glory.

Secondly, The Mediatorial Glory of Chriſt is exceeding great: This is proper to him, as Head of the Church, which he hath purchaſed with his own Blood. Of this Glory the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Phil. 2, 9, 10. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name, which is above every Name, &c. ὑπερύψωσε exalted above all Exaltation. Now the mediatorial Glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt conſiſteth either,

1. In the fulneſs of Grace inherent in him.
2. Or in the Dignity and Authority put upon him.

Firſt, In the fulneſs of Grace inherent in him: The humanity of Chriſt is filled with Grace, as the Sun with Light, Joh. 1. 14. Full of Grace and Truth: Never any creature was ſo fill'd by the Spirit of Grace, as the Man Chriſt Jeſus is filled, for God gives not the Spirit to him by meaſure, John 3. 34. By reaſon of this fulneſs of Grace inherent in him, he is fairer than the Children of Men, Pſal. 45. 2. Excelling all the Saints in ſpiritual Luſtre, and gracious Excellencies.

Secondly, In the Dignity and Authority put upon him: He is crowned King in Sion: All Power in Heaven and Earth is given unto him, Mat. 28. 18. He is Lawgiver to the Church, Jam. 4. 12. All acts of Worſhip are to be performed in his Name; Prayer, Preaching, Cenſures, Sacraments, all to be adminiſtred in his Name. Church Officers are commiſſioned by him, Eph. 4. 11. The Judgment of the World in the great Day will be adminiſtred by him, Matth. 25. 31. Then ſhall he ſit upon the Throne of his Glory.

To conclude, Jeſus Chriſt ſhall have Glory and Honour aſcribed to him for evermore by Angels and Saints, upon the account of his mediatorial work. This ſome Divines call his Paſſive Glory; the Glory which he is to receive from his redeemed ones, Rev. 5. 8, 9, 10. And when he had taken the book, the four Beaſts, and the four and twenty Elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them Harps, and golden Vials full of Odours, which are the Prayers of the Saints; and they ſung a new Song, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof: For thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation, &c. And thus you ſee, that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is upon all accounts the Lord of Glory. The Uſes follow.

How wonderful was the Love of Chriſt the Lord of Glory, to be ſo abaſed and humbled as he was for us vile and ſinful Duſt? 'Tis aſtoniſhing to conceive that ever Jeſus Chriſt ſhould ſtrip himſelf out of his Robes of Glory, to cloath himſelf with the Threadbare Tatters of our Fleſh. Oh what a ſtoop did he make in his Incarnation for us! If the moſt magnificent Monarch upon Earth, had been degraded into a Toad: If the Sun in the Heavens had been turned into a wandring Atom: If the moſt glorious Angel in Heaven, had been transformed into a ſilly Fly; it had been nothing to the abaſement of the Lord of Glory. This Act is every where celebrated in Scripture, as the great Myſtery, the aſtoniſhing Wonder of the whole World, 2 Tim. 3. 16. Phil. 2. 8. Rom. 8. 3. The Lord of Glory looked not like himſelf, when he came in the Habit of a Man, Iſa. 53. 3. We hid as it were our Faces from him: He rather like a Worm, than a Man, Pſal. 22. 6. reproach of Men, and deſpiſed of the People. The Birds of the Air, and Beaſts of the Earth were here provided of better Accommodations than the Lord of Glory, Matth. 8. 20. Oh ſtupendious Abaſement! O Love unſpeakable! Though he was Rich, yet for our ſakes he became Poor, that we through his Poverty might be Rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9. He put off the Crown of Glory, to put on the Crown of Thorns: Quanto pro me vilior, tanto mihi charior, ſaid Bernard, the lower he tumbled himſelf for me, the dearer he ſhall be to me.

Inference 2.

How tranſcendently glorious is the Advancement of Believers by their Union with the Lord of Glory! This alſo is an admirable and aſtoniſhing Myſtery.

the higheſt Dignity of which our Nature is capable, to be Hypoſtatically united, and the greateſt Glory of which our Perſons are capable to be Myſtically united to this Lord of Glory; to be Bone of his Bone, and Fleſh of his Fleſh. O what is this! Chriſtian doſt thou know and believe all this, and thy Heart not burn within thee in Love to Chriſt? O then what a Heart haſt thou? What art thou by Nature, but ſinful duſt, a loathſome Sinner, viler than the vileſt Toad, caſt out to the loathing of thy Perſon in the Day of thy Nativity! O that ever the Lord of Glory ſhould unite himſelf to ſuch a Lump of Vileneſs! Take ſuch a Wretch into his very Boſom! Be aſtoniſhed O Heavens and Earth at this; this is the great Myſtery which the Angels ſtoopt down to look into. Such an Honour as this could never enter into the Heart of Man: It would have ſeemed a rude Blaſphemy in us once to have thought, or ſpoken of ſuch a thing, had not Chriſt made the firſt Motion thereof. Yet how long didſt thou make this Lord of Glory wait upon thy undetermined will, before he gained thy conſent? Might he not juſtly have ſpurned thee into Hell upon thy firſt refuſal, and never have made thee ſuch another offer? Wilt thou not ſay, Lord, what am I, and what is my Father's Houſe, that ſo great a King ſhould ſtoop ſo far beneath himſelf to ſuch a Worm as I am! That Strength ſhould unite it ſelf to Weakneſs, infinite Glory, to ſuch Baſeneſs! O Grace, Grace, for ever to be admired!

Is Jeſus Chriſt the Lord of Glory? Then let no Man count himſelf diſhonoured by ſuffering the vileſt Indignities for his Sake: The Lord of Glory puts Glory upon the very Sufferings you undergo in this World for him. Moſes eſteemed the Reproaches of Chriſt greater Riches than the Treaſures of Egypt, Heb. 1. 26. He caſt a Kingdom at his Heels, to be crowned with Reproaches for the Name of Chriſt. The Diadem of Egypt was not half ſo glorious, as ſelf-denial for Chriſt. This Lord of Glory freely degraded himſelf for thee, wilt thou ſtand huckling with him upon Terms? 'Tis certainly your Honour to be diſhonoured for Chriſt, Acts 5. 41. To you it is given in behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake, Phil. 1. 29. The Gift of ſuffering is there matched with the Gift of Faith: 'Tis given as an honorarium, a badge of Honour to ſuffer for the Lord of Glory: As all have not the Honour to wear the crown of Glory in Heaven; ſo few have the Honour to wear the chain of Chriſt upon Earth. Thuanus report of Lodovicus Marſacus, a Knight of France, that being led to ſuffer with other Martyrs who were bound, and he unbound, becauſe a Perſon of Honour; he cryed out, Why don't you honour me with a Chain too, and create me a Knight of that Noble Order? My Brethren, count it all Joy when ye fall into divers Temptations, Jam. 1. 2. (i. e.) Tryals by ſufferings. David thought it an Honour to be vile for God, and that's a true Obſervation, that Diſgrace it ſelf is glorious, when endured for the Lord of Glory.

Cur me non quoque torque donas, & inſignis hujus ordinis militem creas? Thuanus.

Inference 4.

Is Chriſt the Lord of Glory? How glorious then ſhall the Saints one Day be, when they ſhall be made like this glorious Lord, and partake of his Glory in Heaven, John 17. 22. the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: Yea, the vile Bodies of Believers, ſhall be made like to the glorious Body of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 21. What Glory then will be communicated to their Souls? True, his eſſential Glory is incommunicable; but there is a Glory, which Chriſt will communicate to his People, When he comes to judge the World, he will come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, 2 Theſ. 1. 10. When he ſeemeth to account his ſocial Glory, which ſhall reſult from his Saints, a great part of his own Glory: As we have now Fellowſhip with him in his Sufferings, ſo we ſhall have a Fellowſhip or Communion with him in his Glory: When he ſhall appear, then ſhall we alſo appear with him in Glory: Then the pooreſt Believer ſhall be more glorious than Solomon in all his Royalty. It was a pious ſaying of Luther, that he had rather be Chriſtianus Ruſticus, quam Ethnicus Alexander, a Chriſtian Clown, than a Pagan Emperour; the Righteous is more excellent than his Neighbour, though he live next door to a graceleſs Nobleman: But it doth not yet appear what they ſhall be. The Day will come, it will certainly come, for the Lord hath ſpoken it, when they ſhall ſhine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father.

How hath the Devil blindfolded, and deluded them, that are ſcared off from Chriſt by the fears of being diſhonoured by him? Many Perſons have half a mind to Religion, but when they conſider the generality of its Profeſſors to be Perſons of the loweſt and meaneſt rank in the World, and that Reproaches and Sufferings attend that way, they ſhrink back as Men aſhamed, and as Salvian ſaith, Mali eſſe coguntur, ne viles habeantur, they chuſe rather to remain Wicked, than to become Vile; But to them that believe, Chriſt is an Honour; As the Word which we tranſlate precious might be rendred, 1 Pet. 2. 7. till God opens Mens Eyes thus, they will put evil for good, and good for evil. But O dear bought Honours, for which Men ſtake their Souls, and everlaſting Happineſs! Paul was not of your Mind, yet for Birth he was an Hebrew of the Hebrews; for Dignity and Eſteem, a Phariſee; for Moral Accompliſhments, touching the Law blameleſs: Yet all this he trampled under his Feet, counting it all but droſs and dung in Compariſon of Jeſus Chriſt. Moſes had more Honour to lay down for Chriſt than you, yet it was no Temptation to him to conceal or deny the Faith of Chriſt. Noble Galeacius would not be with-held from Chriſt by the Splendour and Glory of Italy. But Oh how doth the Glory of this World dazle and blind the Eyes of many! How can ye believe (ſaith Chriſt) who receive Honour one of another, John 5. 44. Saints and Sinners upon this account are wonders one to the other. 'Tis the wonder of the World to ſee Chriſtians glorying in Reproaches, they wonder that the Saints run not with them into the ſame exceſs of Riot. And it is a wonder to Believers how ſuch poor Toys and empty Titles (rather than Titles of Honour) ſhould keep the World as it doth from Jeſus Chriſt, and their everlaſting Happineſs in him.

Inference 6.

If Chriſt be the Lord of Glory, how careful ſhould all be who profeſs him, that they do not diſhonour Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe Name is called upon by them? Chriſt is a Glory to you, be not you a ſhame and diſhonour to him. How careful had Chriſtians need be to draw every Line and Action of their Lives exactly. The more glorious Chriſt is, the more circumſpect and watchful ye had need to be. How lovely would Jeſus Chriſt appear to the World, if the Lives of Chriſtians did adorn the Doctrine of God their Saviour in all things! Remember you repreſent the the Lord of Glory to the World: 'Tis not your honour only, but the Honour of Christ which is engaged and concerned in your Actions. O let not the careleſneſs or ſcandals of your Life make Jeſus Chriſt aſhamed to be called your LORD. When Iſrael had grievouſly revolted from GOD, he bids Moſes riſe, and get him down from thence, for (ſaith he) thy People, which thou haſt brought forth out of Egypt, have corrupted themſelves, Deut. 9. 12. as if the Lord were aſhamed to own them for his People any longer. It was a cutting Queſtion, James 2. 7. apt to ſtartle the Conſciences of thoſe looſe Profeſſors; Do they not blaſpheme that worthy Name by which ye are called? Your Duty is to adorn the Goſpel by your Converſations, Titus 2. 10. The words ſignifie to deck, trim, or adorn the Goſpel, to make it trim, neat and lovely to the Eyes of Beholders. When there is ſuch a beautiful harmony, and lovely proportion betwixt Chriſt's Doctrine and your Practices, as there is in the Works of Creation; wherein the comelineſs and elegancy of the World much conſiſts, (for to this the Apoſtles Word here alludes) then do we walk ſuitably to the Lord of Glory.

Inference 7.

What delight ſhould Chriſtians take in their daily Converſe with Jeſus Chriſt in the way of Duty? Your converſes in Prayer, hearing, and Meditation are with the Lord of Glory: The greateſt Peers in a Kingdom, account it more Honour to be in the preſence of a King bare-headed, or upon the Knee at Court, than to have thouſands ſtanding bare to them in the Country. When you are called to the Duties of Communion with Chriſt, you are call'd to the greateſt Honour, dignified with the nobleſt Privilege Creatures are capable of in this World: Had you but a ſenſe of that Honour God puts upon you by this means, you would not need ſo much tugging and ſtriving to bring a dead and backward Heart into the ſpecial preſence of Jeſus Chriſt. When he ſaith, ſeek ye my Face, your Hearts would echo to his Calls, thy Face, Lord, will we ſeek: But, alas, the Glory of Chriſt is much hid and veiled by ignorance and unbelief from the Eyes of his own People; 'tis but ſeldom the beſt of Saints, by the Eye of Faith, do ſee the King in his Glory.

Suppoſe (ſaith Mr. Rutherford) there were no Letter of a Command, yet there is a ſuitableneſs betwixt the Law engraven on the Heart, and the ſpiritual Matter commanded. There is an Heaven in the Boſom of Prayer, though there were not a granting of the ſuit. Rutherford's Treatiſe of the Covenant, p. 71.

Inference 8.

If Chriſt be ſo glorious, how ſhould Believers long to be with him, and behold him in his Glory above? Moſt Men need Patience to Die, a Believer ſhould need Patience to Live. Paul thought it well worth enduring the Pangs of Death, to get a ſight of Jeſus Chriſt in his Glory, Phil. 1. 23. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God, and patient waiting for of Chriſt, (ſaith the Apoſtle) 2 Theſ. 3. 5. intimating that the Saints have great need of Patience to enable them to endure the ſtate of Diſtance and Separation from Chriſt, ſo long as they muſt endure it in this World. The Spirit and the Bride ſay come, and let him that heareth ſay come, and let him that is athirſt come, even ſo come Lord Jeſus, and be thou as a ſwift Roe upon the Mountains of Separation.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt the Lord of Glory.

SERMON XV.

LUKE II. 25.

—Waiting for the [Conſolation] of Iſrael.

Serm. 15 Text. Opening the ſixth Motive to come to Chriſt, contained in the ſixth and laſt Title of Chriſt.

SEveral glorious Titles of Chriſt have been already ſpoken to, out of each of which, much Comfort flows to Believers; 'Tis comfortable to a wounded Soul to eye him as a Phyſician: Comfortable to a condemned and unworthy Soul, to look upon him under the Notion of the Mercy. The Lovelineſs, the Deſirableneſs, and the Glory of Chriſt are all ſo many Springs of Conſolation. But now I am to ſhew you from this Scripture, that the Saints have not only much Conſolation from Chriſt, but that Chriſt himſelf is the very Conſolation of Believers: He is pure Comfort wrapped up in Fleſh and Blood.

In this Context you have an account of Simeon's Prophecy concerning Chriſt, and in this Text, a Deſcription of the Perſon, and quality of Simeon himſelf, who is deſcribed two Ways.

1. By his Practice.
2. By his Principle.

His Practice was Heavenly and Holy, he was a juſt and devout Man: The Principle from which his Righteouſneſs and Holineſs did flow, was his Faith in Chriſt; he waited for the Conſolation of Iſrael. In which Words by way of Periphraſis we have,

1. A Deſcription of Chriſt, the Conſolation of Iſrael.
2. The Deſcription of a Believer, one that waiteth for Chriſt.

Firſt, That the Conſolation of Iſrael is a Phraſe deſcriptive of Jeſus Chriſt is beyond all doubt, if you conſult, ver. 26. where he, (i. e.) Simeon is ſatisfied by receiving Chriſt into his Arms, the Conſolation for which he had ſo long waited.

Secondly, And that waiting for Chriſt is a Phraſe deſcribing the Believers of thoſe times, that preceded the Incarnation of Chriſt, is paſt doubt; they all waited for that Bleſſed Day: But it was Simeon's Lot to fall juſt upon that happy nick of time, wherein the Prophecies and Promiſes of his Incarnation were fulfilled. Simeon and others that waited with him, were ſenſible that the time of the Promiſe was come, which could not but raiſe (as indeed it did) a general Expectation of him, John 9. 19. But Simeon's Faith was confirmed by a particular Revelation, lation, ver. 26. That he ſhould ſee Chriſt before he ſaw Death, which could not but greatly encourage and raiſe his Expectation to look out for him, whoſe coming would be the greateſt conſolation to the whole Iſrael of God. The Conſolation, παράκλησις. The Spirit is frequently called in Scripture, παράκλητος, the Comforter : But Chriſt in this Place is called παράκλησις, Comfort, or Conſolation it ſelf; the Reaſon of both is given in, John 16. 14. He ſhall take of mine and ſhew it unto you: Where Chriſt is ſaid to be the matter, and the Spirit, the applier of true Comfort to the People of God. Now this Conſolation is here expreſſed both with a ſingular Emphaſis [the Conſolation] intimating that there is nothing of conſolation in any thing beſide him: All other comforts compared with this, are not worth a naming. And as it is emphatically expreſſed, ſo it is alſo limited and bounded within the compaſs of God's Iſrael (i. e.) true Believers ſtiled the Iſrael of God, whether Jews or Gentiles, Gal. 6. 16. From whence the Point of Doctrine is,

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt is the only Conſolation of Believers, and of none beſides them.

So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, Phil. 3. 3. For we are the Circumciſion, which Worſhip God in the Spirit, and rejoyce in Chriſt Jeſus, and have no Confidence in the Fleſh. Thoſe that Worſhip God in the Spirit are ſincere Believers; to ſuch ſincere Believers Chriſt is Conſolation, our Rejoycing is in Chriſt Jeſus : And they have no Conſolation in any thing beſide him, nothing in the World can give them comfort without Chriſt, We have no Confidence in the Fleſh. The Goſpel is glad Tydings of great Joy, but that which makes it to be ſo, is Jeſus Chriſt, whom it imparts and reveals to us, Luke 2. 10, 11. In the opening of this comfortable Point, four things muſt be ſpoken to, for the right ſtating the Method of our Diſcourſe, viz.

1. What is meant by Conſolation.
2. That Chriſt, and he only is Conſolation to Believers.
3. That Believers only have Conſolation in Chriſt.
4. How it comes to paſs, that any Believer ſhould be dejected; ſince Chriſt is Conſolation to all Believers.

The firſt thing to be opened, is the Nature of Conſolation, which is nothing elſe but the chearineſs of a Man's Spirit, whereby he is upheld, and fortified againſt all Evils felt, or feared. Conſolation is to the Soul, what Health is to the Body after waſting Sickneſs, or the reviving Spring to the Earth after a long and hard Winter. And there are three ſorts of Conſolation, or Comfort, ſuitable to the Diſpoſition and Temper of the Mind, viz.

Natural,
Sinful, and Spiritual.

Natural Comfort is the Refreſhment of our Natural Spirits by the good creatures of God, Acts 14. 17. Filling their Hearts with Food and Gladneſs. Sinful Comfort is the Satisfaction and Pleaſure Men take in the fulfilling of their Luſts, by the abuſe of the creatures of God, James 5. 5. Ye have lived in Pleaſure upon Earth, (i. e.) your Life hath been a Life of Senſuality and Sin.

Spiritual Comfort is the Refreſhment, Peace, and Joy, gracious Souls have in Chriſt, by the Exerciſe of Faith, Hope, and other Graces, Rom. 5. 2. And this only deſerves the Name of true ſolid Conſolation: To which four things are required.

Firſt, That the Matter thereof be ſome Spiritual, eminent, and durable Good: Elſe our Conſolation in it, will be but as the crackling of Thorns under a Pot; a ſudden blaze, quickly extinct with the failing Matter: Chriſt only gives the Matter of ſolid durable Conſolation: The Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, the Pardon of Sin, the Favour of God, the Hopes of Glory, are the ſubſtantial Materials of a Believers Conſolation, Rom. 5. 2. Matt. 9. 2. Pſal. 4. 6, 7. Pet. 1. 8. Things are as their Foundations be.

Secondly, Intereſt and Propriety in theſe comfortable things, is requiſite to our Conſolation by them, Luke 1. 47. My Spirit rejoyceth in God my Saviour. 'Tis no Conſolation to him that is hungry, to ſee a Feaſt; to him that is Poor, to ſee a Treaſure; if the one may not taſte, or the other partake thereof.

Thirdly, Knowledge, and Evidence of Intereſt in ſome degree is requiſite to actual Conſolation, though without it a Man may be in the ſtate of Conſolation: For that which appears not, is (in point of actual Comfort) as if it were not.

Fourthly, In order hereunto the Work of the Spirit upon our Hearts is requiſite, both to give, and clear our Intereſt in Chriſt, and the Promiſes; And both theſe ways he is the Comforter, The Fruit of the Spirit is Joy, Gal. 5. 22. And thus briefly of the Nature of Conſolation.

Secondly, Next I will ſhew you that Chriſt, and he only is Matter of Conſolation to Believers: Which will demonſtratively appear by this Argument.

Arg. He that brings to their Souls all that is comfortable, and removes from their Souls all that is uncomfortable, muſt needs be the only Conſolation of Believers.

But Jeſus Chriſt brings to their Souls all that is comfortable, and removes from their Souls all that is uncomfortable.

Therefore Chriſt only is the Conſolation of Believers.

Firſt, Jeſus Chriſt brings whatſoever is comfortable to the Souls of Believers. Is Pardon comfortable to a Perſon condemned? Nothing can be Matter of greater Comfort in this World. Why, this Chriſt brings to all Believers, Jer. 23. 6. And this is the Name whereby he ſhall be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſs. This cannot but give ſtrong Conſolation; Righteouſneſs is the Foundation of Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. The Work of Righteouſneſs ſhall be Peace, and the effect of Righteouſneſs, Quietneſs, and Aſſurance for ever. Iſa. 32. 17. Come to a dejected Soul, labouring under the burden of guilt, and ſay, cheer up, I bring you good Tidings; there is ſuch an Eſtate befallen you, or ſuch a troubleſome Buſineſs comfortably ended for you; alas! this will not reach the Heart. If you can bring me (ſaith he) good News from Heaven, that my Sins are forgiven, and God reconciled; how ſoon ſhould I be comforted! And therefore (as one well obſerves) this was the uſual Receipt with which Chriſt cured the Souls of Men and Women, when he was here on Earth; Son or Daughter, be of good cheer, thy Sins be forgiven thee: And indeed it is as eaſie to ſeparate Light and Warmth from the Beams of the Sun, as Cheerineſs and Comfort from the Voice of Pardon.

Are the Hopes and Expectation of Heaven and Glory comfortable? Yes ſure, nothing is comfortable if this be not, Rom. 5. 2. We rejoyce in hope of the Glory of God. Now, Chriſt brings to the Souls of Men all the ſolid Grounds and Foundations upon which they build their Expectations of Glory, Col. 1. 27. Which is Chriſt, in you, the Hope of Glory.

Name

Name any thing elſe that is ſolid Matter of Comfort to the Souls of Men, and the grounds thereof will be found in Chriſt, and in none but Chriſt; as might eaſily be demonſtrated by the Enumeration of Multitudes of particular Inſtances, which I cannot inſiſt upon.

Secondly, Jeſus Chriſt removes from Believers whatever is uncomfortable; therein relieving them againſt all the Matters of their Affliction and Sorrow. As namely, Firſt, Is Sin a burden, and matter of trouble to Believers? Chriſt, and none but Chriſt, removes that burden, Rom. 7. 24, 25, O wretched Man that I am (ſaith Sin-burdened Paul) who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death? I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. The Satisfaction of his Blood, Eph. 5. 2. The Sanctification of his Spirit, John 1. 5, 6. His perfect deliverance of his People from the very being of Sin at laſt, Eph. 5. 26, 27. This relieves at preſent, and removes at laſt the matter and ground of all their Troubles and Sorrows for Sin.

Secondly, Do the Temptations of Satan burden Believers? O yes, by Reaſon of Temptations, they go in trouble and heavineſs of Spirit. Temptation is an Enemy under the Walls, Temptation greatly endangers, and therefore cannot but greatly afflict the Souls of Believers; but Chriſt brings the only matter of relief againſt Temptations. The Interceſſion of Chriſt is a ſingular relief at preſent, Luke 22. 32. But I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not. And the Promiſes of Chriſt are a full relief for the future: The God of Peace ſhall ſhortly tread Satan under your Feet, Rom. 16. 20.

Thirdly, Is ſpiritual Deſertion, and the hiding of God's Face, matter of Affliction and caſting down to Believers? Yes, yes, it quails their Hearts, nothing can comfort them: Thou hideſt thy Face, and I was troubled, Pſal. 30. 7. Outward Afflictions do but break the Skin, this touches the quick; they like Rain fall only upon the Tiles, this ſoaks into the Houſe; but Chriſt brings to Believers ſubſtantial Matter of Conſolation againſt the troubles of Deſertion: He himſelf was deſerted of God for a time, that they might not be deſerted for ever: In him alſo the relieving Promiſes are made to Believers, that notwithſtanding God may deſert them for a time, yet the Union betwixt him and them ſhall never be diſſolved, Heb. 13. 5. Jer. 22. 40. Though he forſake them for a Moment, in reſpect of evidenced Favour, yet he will return again and comfort them, Iſa. 54. 7. Though Satan tug hard, yet he ſhall never be able to pluck them out of his Fathers Hand, John 10. 20. Oh what relief is this! What Conſolation is Chriſt to a deſerted Believer!

Fourthly, Are outward Afflictions Matter of Dejection and Trouble? Alas, who finds them not to be ſo? How do our Hearts fail, and our Spirits ſink under the many ſmarting Rods of God upon us! But our Relief and Conſolation under them all, is in Chriſt Jeſus: For the Rod that afflicts us is in the Hand of Chriſt that loveth us, Rev. 3. 19. Whom I Love I Rebuke and Chaſten: His Deſign in Affliction is our Profit, Heb. 12. 10. That Deſign of his for our Good ſhall certainly be accompliſhed, Rom. 8. 24. And after that no more Afflictions for ever, Rev. 21. 3, 4. God ſhall wipe away all Tears from their Eyes. So that upon the whole, two things are moſt evident.

Firſt, Nothing can comfort the Soul without Chriſt: He is the Soul that animates all Comforts, they would be dead things without him. Temporal Enjoyments, Riches, Honours, Health, Relations, yield not a drop of true comfort without Chriſt. Spiritual Enjoyments, Miniſter, Ordinances, Promiſes, are Fountains ſealed, and Springs ſhut up till Chriſt open upon them, a Man may go comfortleſs in the midſt of them all.

Secondly, No Troubles, Sorrows, or Afflictions can deject or ſink the Soul that Chriſt comforteth, 2 Cor. 6. 12. As ſorrowful, yet always rejoycing. A Believer may walk with a Heart brim full of comfort, amidſt all the troubles of this World. Chriſt makes the Darkneſs of trouble, to be Light round about his People. So that the concluſion ſtands firm, and never to be ſhaken; that Chriſt, and Chriſt only is the Conſolation of Believers: Which was the thing to be proved.

In the third place, I am to ſhew you, that Believers, and none but Believers can have Conſolation in Chriſt: Which will convincingly appear from the conſideration of thoſe things which we laid down before, as the requiſites to all true ſpiritual Conſolation. For, Firſt, No Unbeliever hath the materials out of which ſpiritual comfort is made; which (as I there told you) muſt be ſome ſolid, ſpiritual and eternal Good, as Chriſt and the Covenant are. What do unregenerate Men rejoyce in, but trifles and meer Vanities, in a thing of nought? Amos 6. 13. See how their Mirth is deſcribed in, Job 21. 12. They take their Timbrel and Harp, and rejoyce at the ſound of the Organ. He doth not ſay, they take the Bible, turn to the Promiſes, and rejoyce in Chriſt and the Covenant; 'tis not the Melody of a good Conſcience, the Joy of the Holy Ghoſt: No, no, they have no acquaintance with ſuch Muſick as that: But the rejoicing of Believers is in thoſe things, 2 Cor. 1. 12. and this is well-built Conſolation which reaches the Heart.

Secondly, I told you, that Propriety and Intereſt in Chriſt, and the Promiſes is required to all ſpiritual Conſolation: But no Unbeliever hath any Title or Intereſt in Chriſt, and the Promiſes, and ſo they can ſignifie nothing to him in Point of Comfort. 'Tis not another Man's Money, but my own, that muſt feed, cloath and comfort me; nor is it another Man's Chriſt, but my own Chriſt, that muſt juſtifie, ſave and comfort my Soul.

Thirdly, You were told that Evidence of a Man's Peace, and Reconciliation with God, is neceſſary to his actual Conſolation, which no Unbeliever can poſſibly have; he hath neither Grace within him, to make him a qualified Subject of any ſpecial Promiſe; nor any Witneſs, or Seal of the Spirit to confirm and clear his Propriety in Chriſt: For he never Seals, but where he firſt Sanctifies. So that it is beyond all Contradiction, that Believers, and none but Believers, are Partakers of the Conſolations that are in Chriſt Jeſus.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, There is one Inquiry remains to be ſatisfied, namely, ſeeing Jeſus Chriſt is Conſolation to Believers, how it comes to paſs that ſo many Believers in the World ſhould walk ſo dejectedly as they do without any ſpiritual Conſolation.

Firſt, This may not be wondred at, if we conſider that the Conſolations of Chriſt are of two ſorts. Seminal and in Preparation, or actual in preſent Poſſeſſion. Every Believer in the World hath the root and ſeed of Comfort, planted and ſown for him, Pſal. 97. 11. Light is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for the upright in heart. They have Chriſt and the Promiſes, which are the ſeeds of Conſolation, and will bring forth Joy at laſt, though though at preſent they have no actual conſolation; the ſeed of all joy is ſown, and in due time they ſhall reap the full ripe fruit thereof.

Secondly, It muſt be remembred that intereſt and evidence are diſtinct Bleſſings, every Believer hath intereſt in Chriſt, but every Believer hath not the evidence thereof, Iſai 50. 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his Servant, that walketh in darkneſs and hath no Light. Every Child of God is not of ſufficient age to know his Father, or take comfort in that bleſſed inheritance whereunto he is begotten again, 1 Pet. 1. 3,4.

Thirdly, Every Believer doth not walk with like ſtrictneſs, and exact Holineſs, all do not exerciſe Faith in a like degree: among Chriſtians ſome are ſtrong in Grace, rich in Faith, ſtrict in Obedience, tender of Sin to an eminent degree, theſe uſually are owners of much conſolation: But others are weak in Grace, poor in Faith, comparatively careleſs of their Hearts and Ways; frequently grieving the good Spirit of God, and wounding their own conſciences (the Veſſel into which ſpiritual conſolation is poured) and theſe are uſually denied the joy and comfort which others abound withal.

Fourthly, The Conſolations of Chriſt are arbitrarily diſpenſed by the Spirit who is the Comforter, and giveth to every Man in ſuch proportions and ſeaſons as pleaſeth him; whence it comes to paſs, that he that is rich in comfort to day, may be poor to morrow, and contrarily the Heart that is brimful of ſorrow one Hour, is filled with Peace and Joy in believing the next. Things that are neceſſary to the Being of a Chriſtian are fixed and ſtable, but things belonging only to the Well-being of a Chriſtian come and go according to the good Pleaſure and Appointment of the Spirit. The uſe of all follows.

Infer. 1. Hence it follows, that the ſtate of Unbelievers is the moſt ſad and uncomfortable ſtate in the World: Having no intereſt in Chriſt the Conſolation of Iſrael. 'Tis true, they abound in creature-comforts, they live in Pleaſure upon Earth. Joy diſplays its colours in their Faces: But for all this, there is not the leaſt drop of true conſolation in any of their Hearts: They have ſome comfort in the creature, but none in Chriſt: That little they gather from the creature now, is all their Portion of Joy, Luke 6. 24. Ye have received your Conſolation: As this is all they have, ſo they ſhall enjoy it but a little while, Job 21. 13. 17. And while they do enjoy it, it's mix'd with many gripes of conſcience, Job 14. 13. Even in Laughter the Heart is ſorrowful, and the end of that mirth is heavineſs: Whatever conſolation any Unbeliever ſpeaks of beſides this, is but by rote; for when the Day of his Diſtreſs cometh, and the terrors of conſcience ſhall awake him out of his pleaſant Dreams, all his ſenſual Joys will vaniſh from him, and the doors of true conſolation will be ſhut againſt him. Let him go to Jeſus Chriſt, knock at that door, and ſay, Lord Jeſus, thy Name is Conſolation, my Heart is ready to burſt within me, haſt thou no Conſolation for me?, O Lord, for one drop of ſpiritual Comfort now, but alas there is none, no not in Chriſt himſelf for any Unbeliever. 'Tis Children's Bread; the Saints Privilege; comfort and grace are undivided: Let him return into himſelf, ſearch his own Conſcience for Comfort, and ſay, O Conſcience, thou art more than a thouſand Witneſſes, and thouſands have been comforted by thee: Where thou ſpeakeſt Comfort none can ſpeak Trouble: haſt thou no Conſolation for me in my deepeſt Diſtreſs? Alas, no, if God condemn thee, wherewithal ſhall I comfort thee? I can ſpeak neither more nor leſs than the Scriptures put into my Mouth, and I find not one Word in all the Book of God, warranting me to be thy Comforter: Believe it as an undoubted Truth (though the Senſe of the bewitched World over-rules it) that the ſtate of Unbelievers, even at the beſt, is a ſad and diſmal ſtate.

Infer. 2. Let all Believers fetch all their comfort out of Chriſt, who is the Conſolation of his People: We rejoyce (ſaith the Apoſtle) in Chriſt Jeſus, and have no confidence in the Fleſh. That's the true temper of a believing Soul: Take heed you live not partly upon Chriſt, and partly upon the creature for your comfort; much rather beware that you forſake not Chriſt, the Fountain of living Waters, and hew out Ciſterns for your ſelves which can hold no Water, Jer. 2, 13. If you make any creature the ſpring and fountain of your comfort, aſſuredly God will dry up that Spring: If your ſouls draw their comfort from any creature, you know they muſt outlive that creature, and what then will you do for comfort? Beſides, as your comforts are, ſo are you. The Food of every creature is ſuitable to its Nature. You ſee divers creatures feeding upon ſeveral parts of the ſame Herb; the Bee upon the Flower, the Bird upon the Seeds, the Sheep upon the Stalk, and the Swine upon the Root; according to their Nature, ſo is their Food: ſenſual Men feed upon ſenſual things; ſpiritual Men upon ſpiritual things; as your Food is, ſo are you. If carnal Comforts can content thy Heart, ſure thy Heart muſt then be a very carnal Heart: Yea, and let Chriſtians themſelves take heed, that they fetch not their Conſolations out of themſelves inſtead of Chriſt. Your Graces and Duties are excellent Means and Inſtruments, but not the Ground-work and Foundation of your comfort: They are uſeful Buckets to draw, but not the Well it ſelf in which the Springs of Conſolation riſe. If you put your Duties in the room of Chriſt, Chriſt will put your Comforts out of the reach of your Duties.

Infer. 3. If Chriſt be the Conſolation of Believers, what a comfortable Life ſhould all Believers live in the World? Certainly, if the fault be not your own, you might live the happieſt and comfortableſt Lives of all Men in the World. If you would not be a diſcomfort to Chriſt, he would be a comfort to you every Day, and in every condition, to the end of your Lives: Your Condition abounds with all the Helps and Advantages of Conſolation: You have the command of Chriſt to warrant your comforts, Phil. 4.4. You have the Spirit of Chriſt for a Spring of comfort, you have the Scriptures of Chriſt for the Rules of comfort; you have the Duties of Religion for the means of comfort: Why is it then that you go comfortleſs? If your Afflictions be many in the World, yet your Encouragements be more in Chriſt: Your Troubles in the World may be turned into Joy, but your Comforts in Chriſt can never be turned into Trouble. Why ſhould Troubles obſtruct your comfort, when the bleſſing of Chriſt upon your Troubles makes them ſubſervient to promote your Happineſs? Rom. 8. 28. Shake off deſpondency then, and live up to the Principles of Religion: Your dejected Life is uncomfortable to your ſelves, and of very ill uſe to others.

Infer. 4. If Chriſt be the Conſolation of Believers, then let all that deſire Comfort in this World, or in that to come, embrace Jeſus Chriſt, and get real Union with him. The ſame Hour you ſhall be in Chriſt, you ſhall alſo be at the Fountain-head of all Conſolations. Thy Soul ſhall be then a pardoned Soul, and a pardoned Soul hath all Reaſon in the World to be a joyful Soul: In that Day thy Conſcience ſhall be ſprinkled with the Blood of Chriſt, and a ſprinkled Conſcience hath all the Reaſon in the World to be a Comforting Conſcience: In that Day you become the children of your Father in Heaven; and he that hath a Father in Heaven, hath all Reaſon to be the joyfulleſt Man upon Earth: In that Day you are delivered from the ſting and hurt of Death; and he that is delivered from the ſting of Death, hath the beſt reaſon to take in the comfort of Life. O come to Chriſt, come to Chriſt; till you come to Chriſt, no true Comfort can come to you.

SERMON XVI.

EPHES. I. 7.

In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, the Remiſſion of Sins, according to the Riches of his Grace.

Serm. 16. Text Enforcing the general Exhortation by a ſeventh Motive drawn from the firſt Benefit purchaſed by Chriſt.

SIX great Motives have been preſented already from the Titles of Chriſt, to draw the Hearts of Sinners to him: More are now to be offered from the Benefits redounding to Believers by Chriſt. Eſſaying by all means to win the Hearts of Men to Chriſt. To this end I ſhall in the firſt place open that glorious Privilege of Goſpel Remiſſion; freely and fully conferred upon all that come to Chriſt by Faith, in whom we have Redemption by Faith, &c.

In which Words we have, Firſt, a ſingular Benefit, or choice Mercy beſtowed, viz. Redemption; interpreted by way of Appoſition, the Remiſſion of Sins: This is a Privilege of the firſt rank, a Mercy by it ſelf: None ſweeter, none more deſirable among all the Benefits that come by Chriſt. And therefore,

Secondly, You have the Price of this Mercy, an account what it coſt, even the Blood of Chriſt; in whom we have Redemption [through his Blood] precious things are of great Price, the Blood of Chriſt is the meritorious Cauſe of Remiſſion.

Thirdly, You have here alſo the impulſive Cauſe, moving God to grant Pardons at this rate to Sinners, and that is ſaid to be the Riches of his Grace. Where by the way you ſee, that the freeneſs of the Grace of God, and the fulneſs of the ſatisfaction of Chriſt meet together without the leaſt Jar in the Remiſſion of Sin; contrary to the vain cavil of the Socinian Adverſaries, In whom we have Redemption, even the Remiſſion of Sins, according to the Riches of his Grace.

Fourthly, You have the qualified Subjects of this bleſſed Privilege, viz. Believers, in whoſe Name he here ſpeaks [we] have Remiſſion, (i. e.) we the Saints, and faithful in Chriſt Jeſus, ver. 1. We whom he hath choſen in Chriſt before the Foundation of the World, and predeſtinated unto the Adoption of Children, ver. 4. 5. We that are made accepted in the Beloved, ver. 6. 'Tis we, and we only who have Redemption through his Blood. Hence obſerve, Doct. That all Believers, and none but Believers, receive the Remiſſion of their Sins through the Riches of Grace, by the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the Explication of this Point, three things muſt be ſpoken to,

1. That all that are in Chriſt are in a pardoned State.
2. That their Pardon is the Purchaſe of the Blood of Chriſt.
3. That the Riches of Grace are manifeſted in Remiſſion.

Firſt, That all that are in Chriſt are in a pardoned State: Where I will firſt ſhew you what Pardon or the Remiſſion of Sin is.

Secondly, That this is the Privilege of none but Believers.

Firſt, Now Remiſſion of Sin is the gracious Act of God, in and through Chriſt, diſcharging a believing Sinner from all the Guilt and Puniſhment of his Sin, both temporal and eternal.

'Tis the Act of God, he is the Author of Remiſſion, none can forgive Sins but God only, Mark 2.7. againſt him only (i.e.) principally and eſpecially the Offence is committed, Pſal. 51. 4. To his Judgment Guilt binds over the Soul, and who can remit the Debt, but the Creditor, Matth. 6. 12.

'Tis an Act of God diſcharging the Sinner: It is Gods looſing of one that ſtood bound, the canceling of his Bond or Obligation; called therefore Remiſſion, or Releaſing in the Text; the blotting out of our Iniquities, or the removing our Sins from us, as it's called in other Scriptures. See Pſalm 103. 11. Micah 7. 18, 19.

It is a gracious Act of God, the effect of pure Grace, done for his own Names ſake, Iſa. 43. 25. diſcharging us without any ſatisfaction at all by us; there is much Grace in that: And providing a ſurety for us every way able to pay our Debt, there is much Grace in that.

'Tis the gracious Act of God in and through Chriſt: The ſatisfaction of Chriſt is the procuring cauſe of our Remiſſion, and ſo God declares himſelf juſt in the Remiſſion of our Sin, Rom. 3. 25. Gracious is the Lord and Righteous, Pſal. 116. 5. Juſtice and Mercy meet here, and embrace each other: In whom (ſaith the Text) we have Remiſſion: No other price could purchaſe this Privilege, Micah 6. 6. 7. Not Rivers of Oyl, or humane Blood.

And this gracious Act of God diſcharges the pardoned Soul both from Guilt and Puniſhment: Guilt is nothing elſe but the Force and Power that is in Sin, to oblige the Sinner to undergo the Penalty due to Sin. Therefore Sinners are ſaid to be Guilty of Hell-fire, Matth. 5. 22. Guilty of Eternal Judgment, Mark 3. 29. To be under the Judgment of God, Rom. 3. 19. Remiſſion takes away both Guilt and Puniſhment together, it takes away all Guilt, Acts 13. 38, 39. And all Puniſhment. And ſo much of the firſt thing to be opened, namely what the Remiſſion of Sin is.

Secondly, Now that this Remiſſion of Sin is the Privilege of Believers is moſt apparent, for all the cauſes of Remiſſion are in conjunction to procure it for them. The Love of God which is the impulſive cauſe of Pardon; the Blood of Chriſt which is the meritorious cauſe of Pardon; and ſaving Faith which is the inſtrumental cauſe of Pardon, do all cooperate for their Remiſſion, as is plain in the Text.

Beſides, all the Promiſes of Pardon are made to them, Jer. 31. 34. Micah 7. 18. And, laſtly, all the figns ſigns of Pardon are found in them, and in them only, that love God, Luke 747. mercifulneſs to others, Matth. 6. 14. A bleſſed calmneſs and Peace in the Conſcience, Rom. 5. 1. So that it is a truth beyond controverſie, that all that are in Chriſt are in a pardoned ſtate.

Secondly, Next I will ſhew you, that the Pardon of Believers is the purchaſe of the Blood of Chriſt:
Nothing but the Blood of Chriſt is a price equivalent to the Remiſſion of Sin, for this Blood was innocent and untainted Blood, 1 Pet. 1. 19. The Blood of a Lamb without ſpot. This Blood was precious Blood, Blood of infinite worth and value, the Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. It was prepared Blood for this very purpoſe, Heb. 10. 5. Prepared by God's eternal Appointment: Prepared by Chriſt's miraculous and extraordinary Production, by the Operation of the Spirit: Prepared by his voluntary Sequeſtration, or Sanctification of himſelf to this very uſe and purpoſe.

The Blood of Jeſus is not only innocent, precious, and prepared Blood, but it is alſo Blood actually ſhed and ſacrificed to the Juſtice of God, for the Expiation of guilt, and procurement of our diſcharge, Iſa. 53. 5. To conclude, the ſevere Juſtice of God could put in no Exception againſt the Blood of Chriſt, 'tis unexceptionable Blood, being (as before was noted) untainted by Sin, and dignified above all Eſtimation by the Perſon whoſe Blood it was. Juſtice required no leſs, and could demand no more: And this is the price at which our Pardons are purchaſed: And without which no Sin could be pardoned, for without ſhedding of Blood
(ſuch Blood as this) there is no Remiſſion, Heb. 9. 22.

Thirdly, The laſt thing to be opened is, That God hath manifeſted the Riches of his Grace in the Remiſſion of our Sins: So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, Rom. 5. 20.
Where Sin abounded, Grace did much more abound: And,
1 Tim. 1. 14. The Grace of our Lord (viz. in the Pardon of Sin) was exceeding abundant. Which will appear (if we bring our Thoughts cloſe to the Matter) in ſeveral particulars:

Firſt, From the Nature of the Mercy, which is the richeſt of all Mercies, except Chriſt, the Pur-chaſer of it; No Mercy ſweeter than a Pardon to a condemned Sinner. No Pardon like God's Pardon, to a Man condemned at his Bar: All the Goodneſs of God is made to paſs before our Eyes in his pardoning Acts of Grace, Exod. 33. 19.

Secondly, The very riches of Grace muſt needs be in the Pardon of Sin, if we conſider the Method in which Pardons are diſpenſed, which is (as the Text ſpeaks) through his Blood. Herein God commends his Love to us, Rom. 5. 8. He commends it more, than if he had pardoned Sin without ſuch a Sacrifice, for then he had only diſplayed his Mercy; but not cauſed Mercy and Juſtice to meet and triumph together.

Thirdly, The riches of his Grace ſhines forth in the Peculiarity of the Mercy. Remiſſion is no common Favour, it was never extended to the fallen Angels, nor to the far greater part of the Children of Men, but only to a little Flock, a ſmall Remnant of Mankind, Luke 12. 32. John 17. 9.

Fourthly, The riches of Grace are manifeſted in Remiſſion, if we conſider the Subjects of this Privilege, who are not only equally plunged into Sin and Miſery with others by Nature, Eph. 2. 3. But many of the Lord's pardoned ones are actually guilty of deeper-dyed Abomination, than many unpardoned ones in the civilized World are defiled with. To me (ſaith Paul) the greateſt of Sinners, one that was before a Blaſphemer, a Perſecutor, &c.
yet to me is this Grace given, I obtained Mercy, 1 Tim.
1. 15. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are juſtified,
1 Cor. 6. 11. Yea, God ſingles out the moſt baſe, deſpiſed, poor, and contemptible ones among Men, to be the Subjects of this glorious Privilege, 1 Cor.
1. 26. You ſee your calling, Brethren, &c.

Fifthly, More of the riches of Grace ſtill appears if we view the Latitude and extent of this Act of Grace. Oh how innumerable are our Tranſgreſſions! Who can underſtand his Errors? Pſalm 19. 12.
Yet the Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin, 1 John
1. 7. ſmall and great Sins, open and ſecret Sins, old and new Sins; all pardoned without Exception.
Oh the riches of Grace! Oh the unſearchable Goodneſs of God! With the Lord there is Mercy, and with him is plenteous Redemption; and he ſhall redeem Iſrael from all his Iniquities. Pſalm 130. 7, 8.

Sixthly, and Laſtly, The riches of Grace ſhine forth in the irrevocableneſs and perpetuity of Remiſſion: As Grace pardons all Sins without Exception, ſo the Pardons it beſtows are without Revocation.
The pardoned Soul ſhall never come into Condemnation, John 5. 24. As far as the Eaſt is from the Weſt, ſo far hath he removed our Tranſgreſſions from us, Pſal. 103.
10. The Eaſt and Weſt are the two oppoſite Points of Heaven, which can never come together; neither ſhall the pardoned Soul and its Sins ever meet any more. Thou haſt caſt (ſaith Hezekiah) all my Sins behind thy back. The penitent Believer ſets his Sins before his Face, but the merciful God caſts them all behind his Back, never to behold them more, ſo as to charge them upon his pardoned People. And thus you ſee, what the pardon of Sin is, what the price that purchaſeth Pardon is; and what riches of Grace God manifeſteth in the Re-miſſion of Believer's Sins: Which were the things to be explained and opened in the doctrinal Part.
The Improvement of the whole you will have in the following Uſes.

Inference 7.

If this be ſo, that all Believers, and none but Believers receive the Remiſſion of their Sins through the riches of Grace, by the Blood of Chriſt;
What a happy Condition then are Believers in! Thoſe that never felt the load of Sin, may make light of a Pardon, but ſo cannot you that have been in the deeps of Trouble and Fear about it: Thoſe that have been upon the rack of an accuſing and condemning Conſcience, as David, Heman, and many of the Saints have been, can never ſufficiently value a Pardon. Bleſſed is the Man whoſe Tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe Sin is covered; bleſſed is the Man unto whom the Lord imputeth not Iniquity, Pſal. 32. 1, 2. or, O the Bleſſedneſſes and Felicities of the pardoned Man! As the Hebrew ſounds.
אשרי נשוי פשע
Remiſſion cannot but appear the wonder of Mercies, if we conſider through what Difficulties the Grace of God makes way for it to our Souls; what ſtrong Bars the Love of God breaks aſunder, to open our way to this Privilege:
For there can be no Pardon without a Mediator:
No other Mediator but the Son of God: The Son of God cannot diſcharge our Debts, but by taking them upon himſelf as our Surety, and making full Payment, by bearing the Wrath of God for us; and when all this is done, there can be no actual Pardon, except the Spirit of Grace open our blind Eyes, break our hard Hearts, and draw them to Chriſt in the way of believing. And as the Mercy of Remiſſion comes to us through wonderful Difficulties, ſo it is in it ſelf a compleat and perfect

Mercy. God would not be at such vast expence of the riches of his Grace, Christ would not lay out the invaluable Treasures of his precious Blood to procure a cheap and common Blessing for us. Rejoyce then ye pardoned Souls, God hath done great things for you, for which you have cause to be glad.

Inference 2.

Hence it follows, That Interest in Christ by Faith brings the Conscience of a Believer into a state of Rest and Peace, Rom. 5. 1. being justified by Faith we have Peace with God. I say not, that every Believer is presently brought into actual Peace and Tranquillity of Conscience, there may be many Fears, and much trouble even in a pardoned Soul: But this is an undoubted Truth, that Faith brings the pardoned Soul into that Condition and State where he may find perfect rest in his Conscience, with respect to the guilt and danger of Sin. The Blood of Christ sprinkles us from an evil (that is an accusing, condemning) Conscience. We are apt to fear, that this or that special Sin, which hath most terrified and affrighted our Consciences, is not forgiven: But if there be riches enough in the Grace of God, and Efficacy enough in the Blood of Christ; then the Sins of Believers, all their Sins, great as well as small, one as well as another, without Limitation or Exception, are pardoned.

For let us but consider, if God remits no Sin to any Man, but with respect to the Blood of Christ, then all Sins are pardoned as well as any one Sin; because the dignity and desert of that Blood is infinite, and as much deserves an universal pardon for all Sins, as the particular pardon of any, even the least Sin. Moreover, Remission is an Act of God's Fatherly Love in Christ, and if it be so, then certainly no Sin of any Believer can be retained or excluded from Pardon: For then the same Soul should be in the Favour of God, so far as it is pardoned, and out of the Favour of God, so far as it is unpardoned; and all this at one and the instant of Time, which is a thing both repugnant to it self, and to the whole stream of the Gospel.

To conclude, what is the design and end of Remission, but the saving of the pardoned Soul? But if any Sin be retained or excluded from Pardon, the retaining of that Sin must needs irritate and void the Pardon of all other Sins; and so the Acts of God must cross and contradict each other, and the design and end of God miscarry and be lost, which can never be. So then we conclude, Faith brings the believing Soul into a state of Rest and Peace.

Inference 3.

Hence it also follows, That no Remission is to be expected by any Soul without Interest by Faith in Jesus Christ: No Christ no Pardon, no Faith no Christ. Yet how apt are many poor deluded Souls to expect Pardon in that way where never any Soul yet did, or ever can meet it? Some look for Pardon from the absolute Mercy of God, without any regard to the Blood of Christ, or their Interest therein: We have sinned, but God is merciful. Some expect Remission of Sin by virtue of their own Duties, not Christ's Merits. I have sinned, but I will repent, restore, reform, and God will pardon: But little do such Men know how they therein diminish the evil of Sin, undervalue the Justice of God, slight the Blood of Christ, and put an undoing cheat upon their own Souls for ever: To expect Pardon from absolute Mercy, or our own Duties, is to knock at the wrong Door, which God hath shut up to all the World, Rom. 3. 20. whilst these two Principles abide firm, that the Price of Pardon is only in the Blood of Christ, and the Benefit of Pardon only by the Application of his Blood to us; this must remain a sure conclusion, that no Remission is to be expected by any Soul without Interest by Faith in Jesus Christ. Repentance, Restitution, and Reformation are excellent Duties in their kind, and in their proper Places; but they were never meant for Saviours or Satisfactions to God for Sin.

Inference 4.

If the riches of Grace be thus manifested in the Pardon of Sin, how vile an abuse is it of the Grace of God to take the more Liberty to Sin, because Grace abounds in the Pardon of it!

Shall we continue in Sin, that Grace may abound? God forbid, Rom. 6. 1, 2. Will no cheaper stuff than the Grace of God serve to make a Cloak for Sin? O vile abuse of the most excellent thing in the whole World! Did Christ shed his Blood to expiate our guilt, and dare we make that a Plea to extenuate our guilt? God forbid.

If it be intolerable ingratitude among Men to requite good with evil, sure that Sin must want a Name bad enough to express it, which puts the greatest dishonour upon God for the greatest Mercy that ever was given by God to the World: There is Mercy with thee (saith the Psalmist) that thou mayst be feared, not that thou may'st be the more abused, Psal. 130. 4. Nay, let me say the Devils never sinned at this rate: They cannot abuse the pardoning Grace of God, because such Grace was never offered unto them. And certainly if the abuse of the common Mercies of God, as Meat and Drink, by Gluttony and Drunkenness, be an hainous Sin, and highly provoking to God: Then the abuse of the riches of his Grace, and the precious Blood of his Son must be out of measure sinful; and the greatest affront we can put upon the God of Mercy.

To conclude, If this be so, as ever you expect Pardon and Mercy from God, come to Christ in the way of Faith; receive and embrace him now in the tenders of the Gospel.

To drive home this great Exhortation, I beseech you, as in the Bowels of Christ Jesus, and by all the regard and value you have for your own Souls, let these following considerations sink down into your Hearts.

First, That all Christless Persons are actually under the condemnation of God, Joh. 3. 18. He that believeth not is condemned already: And it must needs be so, for every Soul is concluded under the curse of the Law, till Christ make him free, Ga. 3. 22. Till we are in Christ, we are dead by Law, Rom. 8. 36. and when we believe unto Justification, then we pass from Death to Life. A blind mistaken Conscience may possibly acquit you, but assure your self God condemns you.

Secondly, Consider what a terrible thing it is to lie under the Condemnation of God, the most terrible things in Nature cannot shadow forth the Misery of such a state. Put all Sicknesses, all Poverty, all Reproaches, the torments invented by all Tyrants into one Scale, and the Condemnation of God into the other; and they will be all found lighter than a Feather. Condemnation is the Sentence of God, the great and terrible God: 'Tis a Sentence never to be reversed, but by the Application of Christ in the season thereof. O Souls, you do not understand ſtand it if you think it tolerable: One drop of it upon your Conſciences now, is enough to diſtract you in the midſt of all the Pleaſures and Comforts of this World: Yet all that are out of Chriſt are ſentenc'd to the fulneſs of God's Wrath for ever.

Thirdly, There is yet a poſſibility of eſcaping the Wrath to come; a Door of hope opened to the worſt of Sinners: A Day of Grace is afforded to the Children of Men, Heb. 3. 15. God declares himſelf unwilling that any ſhould periſh, 2 Pet. 3. 9. O what a Mercy is this! Who that is on this ſide Heaven or Hell fully underſtands the worth of it?

Fourthly, This door of Mercy will be ſhortly ſhut, Luke 12. 25. God hath many ways to ſhut it: He ſometimes ſhuts it by withdrawing the means of Grace, and removing the Candleſticks, a Judgment at this time to be greatly feared. Sometimes he ſhuts it by withdrawing his Spirit and Bleſſing from the means, whereby all Ordinances loſe their Efficacy, 1 Cor. 3. 7. But if he ſhut it not by removing the means of Grace from you, certain it is, it will be ſhortly ſhut by your removal from all the Means and Opportunities of Salvation by Death.

Fifthly, When once the door of Mercy is ſhut, you are gone beyond all the Poſſibilities of Pardon and Salvation for evermore: The Night is then come, in which no Man can work, John 9. 4. All the golden Seaſons you now enjoy will be irrecoverably gone out of your reach.

Sixthly, Pardons are now daily granted to others: Some (and they once as far from Mercy as you now are) are at this Day reading their Pardons with Tears of Joy dropping upon them. The World is full of Examples and Inſtances of the riches of pardoning Grace. And whatever is needful for you to do in the way of Repentance and Faith to obtain your Pardon; how eaſily ſhall it be done, if once the Day of God's Power come upon you? Pſal. 110. 3. Oh therefore lift up your Cries to Heaven, give the Lord no reſt, take no denial till he open the blind Eye, break the ſtony Heart, open and bow the ſtubborn Will, effectually draw thy Soul to Chriſt; and deliver thy Pardon ſigned in his Blood.

SERMON XVII.

EPHES. I. vi.

To the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved.

Serm. 17. Text Opening the eighth Motive to come to Chriſt, drawn from the ſecond Benefit purchaſed by Chriſt for Believers.

IN our laſt Diſcourſe we opened to you the bleſſed Privilege of Remiſſion of Sin from the following Verſe; in this Verſe lies another glorious Privilege, viz. the Acceptation that Believers have with God through Jeſus Chriſt: Both which compriſe (as the two main Branches) our Juſtification before God. In the Words read (to omit many things that might be profitably obſerved from the Method and Dependance of the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe) three Particulars are obſervable, viz.

1. The Privilege it ſelf.
2. The meritorious Cauſe.
3. The ultimate end thereof.

Firſt, The Privilege it ſelf, which is exceeding rich and ſweet in its own Nature; he hath made us accepted; the word is ἐχαρίτωσεν ἡμᾶς, he hath ingratiated us, or brought us into the Grace, Favour, and Acceptance of God the Father; endeared us to him, ſo that we find Grace in his ſight.

Secondly, The meritorious Cauſe purchaſing and procuring this Benefit for us, noted in theſe Words, ἐν τῷ ἠγαπημένῳ, in the beloved; which Words are a Periphraſis of Chriſt, who is here emphatically called the Beloved, the great Favourite of Heaven, the delight of God's Soul, the prime Object of his Love: 'Tis he that obtaineth this Benefit for Believers: He is accepted for his own ſake, and we for his.

Thirdly, The ultimate end and aim of conferring this Benefit upon Believers: To the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace: Or, to the end that his Grace might be made glorious in Praiſes: There are riches of Grace in this Act of God, and the work and buſineſs of Believers, both in this World and in that to come, is to ſearch and admire, acknowledge, and magnifie God for his abundant Grace herein. Hence the Note is, Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt hath purchaſed and procured ſpecial Favour and Acceptation with God for all that are in him.

This Point lies plain in Scripture, Epheſ. 2. 13. But now in Jeſus Chriſt, ye who ſometimes were afar off, are made nigh by the Blood of Chriſt, ἐγγὺς ἐγενήθητε, made nigh, a term of endearedneſs: Nothing is taken into the very Boſom and Embraces, but what is very dear, precious and acceptable: And in, Rev. 1. 5. 6. Believers are ſaid to be made by Jeſus Chriſt, Kings and Prieſts unto God, and his Father, (i. e.) dignified Favourites, upon whom the ſpecial Marks of Honour are ſet by God.

In the opening of this Point, three things muſt be doctrinally diſcuſſed and opened, viz.

1. What the Acceptation of our Perſons with God is.
2. How it appears that Believers are ſo accepted with God.
3. How Chriſt the beloved procures this Benefit for Believers.

Firſt, What the Acceptation of our Perſons with God is? To open which, we muſt remember, that there is a twofold Acceptance of Perſons noted in Scripture.

1. One is the ſinful Act of a corrupt Man.
2. The other the gracious Act of a merciful God.

Firſt, Accepting of Perſons is noted in Scripture as the ſinful Act of a corrupt Man: A thing which God abhors: Being the Corruption and Abuſe of that Power and Authority which Men have in Judgment: Overlooking the Merit of the Cauſe through ſinful reſpect to the Quality of the Perſon, whoſe Cauſe it is. So that the Cauſe doth not commend the Perſon, but the Perſon the Cauſe: This God every where brands in Men, as a vile perverting of Judgment, and utterly diſclaims it himſelf, Gal. 2. 6. God accepted no Mans

Perſon, Rom. 2. 11. There is no reſpect of Perſons with God.

Secondly, There is alſo an accepting of Perſons, which is the gracious Act of a merciful God; whereby he receives both the Perſons and Duties of Believers into ſpecial Grace and Favour for Chriſt's ſake: And of this my Text ſpeaks. In which Act of Favour three things are ſuppoſed or included.

Firſt, It ſuppoſes an Eſtate of Alienation and Enmity: Thoſe only are accepted into Favour that were out of Favour; and indeed ſo ſtood the Caſe with us, Epheſ. 2, 12, 13. Ye were Aliens and Strangers, but now in Chriſt Jeſus, ye who ſometimes were afar off, are made nigh by the Blood of Chriſt. So the Apoſtle Peter, in 1 Pet. 2. 10. Which in time paſt were not a People, but now are the People of God; which had not obtained Mercy, but now have obtained Mercy. The Fall made a fearful breach betwixt God and Man. Sin like a thick Cloud intercepted all the Beams of divine Favour from us: The Satisfaction of Chriſt diſſolves that Cloud, Iſa. 44. 22. I have blotted out as a thick Cloud thy Tranſgreſſions, and as a Cloud thy Sins: This dark Cloud thus diſſolved, the Face of God ſhines forth again with chearful Beams of Favour and Love upon all, who by Faith are intereſted in Jeſus Chriſt.

Secondly, It includes the removing of guilt from the Perſons of Believers, by the Imputation of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to them, Rom. 5. 1, 2. Being juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: By whom alſo we have acceſs by Faith into this Grace wherein we ſtand: For the Face of God cannot ſhine upon the Wicked: The Perſon muſt be firſt made Righteous before it can be made accepted.

Thirdly, It includes the offering up, or tendring of our Perſons and Duties to God by Jeſus Chriſt. Accepting implies preſenting or tendring: Believers indeed do preſent themſelves to God, Rom. 12. 1. But Chriſt's preſenting them makes their tender of themſelves acceptable to the Lord, Col. 1. 22. In the Body of his Fleſh through Death to preſent you holy, and unblameable, and unreproveable in his ſight. Chriſt leads every Believer as it were by the Hand, into the gracious preſence of God; after this manner beſpeaking acceptance for him. "Father, here is a poor Soul that was born in Sin, "hath lived in Rebellion againſt thee all his Days; "he hath broken all thy Laws, and deſerved all "thy Wrath; yet he is one of that Number which "thou gaveſt me before the World was. I have "made full Payment of my Blood for all his Sins. "I have opened his Eyes to ſee the Sinfulneſs, "and Miſery of his Condition: Broken his Heart "for his Rebellions againſt thee: Bowed his Will "in Obedience unto thy Will, united him to my "ſelf by Faith, as a living Member of my Body. "And now, Lord, ſince he is become mine by "Regeneration, let him be thine alſo by ſpecial "Acceptation: Let the ſame Love with which "thou loveſt me, embrace him alſo who is now "become mine." And ſo much for the firſt Particular, viz. What Acceptation with God is.

Secondly, In the next Place, I muſt ſhew you how it appears that Believers are thus ingratiated or brought into the ſpecial Favour of God by Jeſus Chriſt. And this will be evidenced divers Ways.

Firſt, By the Titles of Love and Endearedneſs, with which the Lord graceth and honoureth Believers, who are ſometimes called the Houſhold of God, Epheſ. 2. 19. the Friends of God, James 2. 23. the dear Children of God, Epheſ. 5. 1. the peculiar People of God, 1 Pet. 2. 9. A Crown of Glory, and a Royal Diadem in the Hand of their God, Iſa. 62. 3. The Object of his Delight and Pleaſure, Pſal. 147. 10, 11. Oh what terms of endearedneſs doth God uſe towards his People! Doth not all this ſpeak them to be in ſpecial Favour with him? Which of all theſe alone doth not ſignifie a Perſon highly in Favour with God?

Secondly, The gracious Manner in which he treats them upon the Throne of Grace, to which he allows them to come with Boldneſs, Heb. 4. 16. This alſo ſpeaks them in the ſpecial Favour of God: He allows them to come to him in Prayer, with the Liberty, Confidence and filial Boldneſs of Children to a Father, Gal. 4. 6. Becauſe ye are Sons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father: The familiar Voice of a dear Child: Yea, which is a wonderful Dignation and Condeſcenſion of the great God to poor Worms of the Earth, he ſaith, Iſa. 45. 11. Thus ſaith the Lord, the Holy One of Iſrael, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my Sons, and concerning the work of my Hands command ye me: An Expreſſion ſo full of Grace and ſpecial Favour to Believers, that it needs great Caution in reading and underſtanding ſuch an high and aſtoniſhing Expreſſion: The meaning is, that God hath as it were ſubjected the Works of his Hands to the Prayers of his Saints: And it is as if he had ſaid, If my Glory, and your Neceſſity ſhall require it, do but ask me in Prayer, and whatever my Almighty Power can do, I will do it for you: However, let no Favourite of Heaven forget the infinite diſtance betwixt himſelf and God. Abraham was a great Favourite of Heaven, and was called the Friend of God, yet ſee with what Humility of Spirit, and reverential awe he addreſſeth to God, Gen. 18. 27. Behold now I have taken upon me to ſpeak unto the Lord, which am but Duſt and Aſhes. So that you ſee the Titles of Favour above-mentioned are no empty Titles.

Thirdly, God's readineſs to grant, as well as their Liberty to ask, ſpeaks them the ſpecial Favourites of God. The Heart of God is ſo propenſe, and ready to grant the deſires of Believers, that it is but ask and have, Matth. 7. 7. The Door of Grace is opened at the knock of Prayer: That is a Favourite indeed, to whom the King gives a blank to inſert what requeſt he will: If ye abide in me, and my Words abide in you; ye ſhall ask what ye will, and it ſhall be done unto you. John 15. 7. Oh bleſſed Liberty of the Sons of God! David did but ſay, Lord turn the Counſel of Ahitophel into fooliſhneſs, and it was done as ſoon as asked, 2 Sam. 15. 31. Joſhua did but ſay, Thou Sun ſtand ſtill in Gibeon: and a miraculous ſtop was preſently put to its ſwift Motion in the Heavens: Nay, which is wonderful to conſider, a Prayer in the Womb, yet unborn, I mean conceived in the Heart and not yet uttered by the Lips of Believers, is often anticipated by the Propenſiveneſs of free Grace, Iſa. 65. 24. And it ſhall come to paſs that before they call I will anſwer, and whilſt they are yet ſpeaking I will hear. The Prayers of others are rejected as an Abomination, Prov. 15. 8. God caſts them back into their Faces, Mal. 2. 3. But free Grace ſigns the Petitions of the Saints more readily, than they are preſented: We have not that freedom to ask, that God hath to give: 'Tis true, the anſwer of a Believers Prayers may be a long time ſuſpended from his Senſe and Knowledge; but every Prayer according to the Will of God is preſently granted in Heaven, though though for wiſe and holy ends they may be held in a doubtful ſuſpenſe about them upon Earth.

Fourthly, The free Diſcoveries of the Secrets of God's Heart to Believers ſpeaks them to be his ſpecial Favourites: Men open not the Counſels and Secrets of their own Hearts to Enemies or Strangers, but to their moſt inward and intimate Friends: The Secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant, Pſal. 25. 14. When God was about to deſtroy Sodom, he will do nothing in that Work of Judgment till he had acquainted Abraham, his Friend, with his Purpoſe therein, Gen. 18. 17. And the Lord ſaid, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do? For I know him, &c. So when a King was to be elected for Iſrael, and the Perſon whom God had choſen, was yet unknown to the People, God as it were whiſpered that Secret unto Samuel the Day before, 1 Sam. 9. 15. Now the Lord had told Samuel in his Ear a Day before Saul came: According to the manner of Princes with ſome ſpecial Favourite.

Fifthly, The Lord's receiving every ſmall thing that comes from them with Grace and Favour, when (mean while) he rejects the greateſt things offered by others, doth certainly beſpeak Believers the ſpecial Favourites of God. There was but one good Word in a whole Sentence from Sarah, and that very Word is noted and commended by God, 1 Pet. 3. 6. She called him Lord. There were but ſome ſmall beginnings or buddings of Grace in young Abijah, and the Lord took ſpecial notice of it, 1 Kings 14. 12. Becauſe in him there is found ſome good thing toward the Lord God of Iſrael in the Houſe of Jeroboam. Let this be an Encouragement to young ones, in whom there are found any breathing deſires after Chriſt: God will not reject them if any Sincerity be found in them; a ſecret Groan uttered to God in Sincerity ſhall not be deſpiſed, Rom. 8. 26. The very bent of a Believer's Will, when he hath no more to offer unto God, is an acceptable Preſent, 2 Cor. 8. 11. The very Intent and Purpoſe that lies ſecretly in the Heart of a Believer, not yet executed, is accepted with him, 1 Kings 8. 18. Whereas it was in thine Heart to build an Houſe to my Name, thou didſt well that it was in thine Heart. Thus ſmall things offered to God by Believers find acceptance with him, whilſt the greateſt Preſents, even ſolemn Aſſemblies, Sabbaths and Prayers from others are rejected: They are a trouble unto me, (ſaith God) I am weary to bear them, Iſa. 1. 14, 15. Incenſe from Sheba, the ſweet Cane from a far Country are not acceptable, nor Sacrifices ſweet unto God from other Hands, Jer. 6. 20. From all which it appears beyond Doubt, that the Perſons and Duties of Believers are accepted into the ſpecial Favour of God by Jeſus Chriſt: Which was the ſecond thing to be ſpoken to, and brings us to the third General, viz.

Thirdly, How Chriſt the Beloved procures this Benefit for Believers? And this he doth four Ways.

Firſt, By the Satisfaction of his Blood, Rom. 5. 10. When we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son. No Friendſhip without Reconciliation, no Reconciliation but by the Blood of Chriſt: Therefore the new and living way, by which Believers come unto God with Acceptance, is ſaid to be Conſecrated for us through the Veil of Chriſt's Fleſh; and hence Believers have Boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the Blood of Jeſus, Heb. 10. 19, 20.

Secondly, The Favour of God is procured for Believers, by their myſtical Union with Chriſt, whereby they are made Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones, Eph. 5. 30. So that look as Adam's Poſterity ſtood upon the ſame Terms that he their natural Head did; ſo Believers Chriſt's myſtical Members ſtand in the Favour of God, by the Favour which Chriſt their ſpiritual Head hath, John 17. 23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me.

Thirdly, Believers are brought into Favour with God by Chriſt's becoming their Altar, upon which their Perſons and Duties are all offered up to God: The Altar ſanctifies the Gift, Heb. 13. 10. And this was typified by that legal Rite mentioned, Luke 1. 9, 10. Chriſt is that golden Altar from whence all the Prayers of the Saints aſcend to the Throne of God, perfumed with the Odours and Incenſe of his Merits, Rev. 8. 34. And another Angel came and ſtood at the Altar, having a golden Cenſer, and there was given unto him much Incenſe that he ſhould offer it, with the Prayers of all Saints upon the golden Altar which was before the Throne; and the Smoke of the Incenſe which came with the Prayers of the Saints aſcended up before God, out of the Angels Hand. And thus you ſee how the Perſons and Duties of Believers are brought into Favour and Acceptance with God by Jeſus Chriſt. The Uſes follow.

Infer. 1. If all Believers be in Favour with God, how great a Mercy is it to have the Prayers of ſuch ingaged on our behalf? Would we have our Buſineſs ſpeed in Heaven, let us get into Favour with God our ſelves, and engage the Prayers of his People, the Favourites of Heaven, for us: Vis unita fortior, one Believer can do much, many can do more: When Daniel deſigned to get the Knowledge of that Secret hinted in the obſcure Dream of the King, which none but the God of Heaven could make known, it's ſaid, Dan. 2. 17. Then Daniel went to his Houſe, and made the thing known to Hanania, Miſhael, and Azaria, his Companions; that they would deſire Mercies of the God of Heaven concerning this Secret. The Benefits of ſuch Aſſiſtance in Prayer by the help of other Favourites with God, is plainly intimated by Jeſus Chriſt to us, Matth. 18, 19. If two of you ſhall agree on Earth as touching any thing that they ſhall ask, it ſhall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven. God ſometimes ſtands upon a number of Voices, for the carrying of ſome publick Mercy, becauſe he delighteth in the harmony of many praying Souls; and alſo loves to oblige and gratifie many in the anſwer and return of the ſame Prayer. I know this uſage is grown too formal and complemental among Profeſſors: But certainly it is a great Advantage to be inward with them, who are ſo with God. St. Bernard preſcribing Rules for effectual Prayer, cloſes them up with this wiſh, & cum talis fueris, memento mei, when thy Heart is in this Frame, then remember me.

Infer. 2. If Believers be ſuch Favourites in Heaven, in what a deſperate Condition is that Cauſe, and thoſe Perſons, againſt whom the generality of Believers are daily engaged in Prayers and Cries to Heaven?

Certainly Rome ſhall feel the dint and force of the many Millions of Prayers that are gone up to Heaven from the Saints for many Generations: The Cries of the Blood of the Martyrs of Jeſus, joyned with the Cries of thouſands of Believers, will bring down Vengeance at laſt upon the Man of

of Sin. 'Tis ſaid, Rev. 8. 4, 5, 6. That the Smoak of the Incenſe, which came with the Prayers of the Saints, aſcended up before God out of the Angels Hand: And immediately it is added, ver. 5. And the Angel took the Cenſer, and filled it with Fire of the Altar, and caſt it into the Earth, and there were Voices, and Thunderings, and Lightnings, and Earthquakes, and the ſeven Angels, who had the ſeven Trumpets, prepared themſelves to ſound. The Prayer of a ſingle Saint is ſometimes followed with wonderful Effects, Pſal. 18. 6, 7. In my diſtreſs I called upon the Lord, and cried unto my God: He heard my Voice out of his Temple, and my cry came before him, even into his Ears: Then the Earth ſhook and trembled; the Foundations alſo of the Hills moved, and were ſhaken becauſe he was wroth: What then can a thundring Legion of ſuch praying Souls do! It was ſaid of Luther, iſte vir potuit cum Deo quicquid voluit, that Man could have of God what he would; his Enemies felt the weight of his Prayers, and the Church of God reaped the Benefits thereof. The Queen of Scots profeſſed ſhe was more afraid of the Prayers of Mr. Knox, than of an Army of ten thouſand Men: Theſe were mighty Wreſtlers with God, howſoever contemned and vilified among their Enemies. There will a time come, when God will hear the Prayers of his People, who are continually crying in his Ears, How long, Lord, how long.

Jacobus Langius, the Sorbone Doctor, who wrote the Lives of Luther, Knox, and Calvin, ſpeaks as if the Devil had hired his Pen to abuſe thoſe precious Servants of Chriſt.

Infer. 3. Let no Believer be dejected at the Contempts and Slightings of Men, ſo long as they ſtand in the Grace and Favour of God: It is the Lot of the beſt of Men to have the worſt uſage in this World: Thoſe of whom the World was not worthy, are not thought worthy to live in the World, Heb. 11. 38. Paul and his Companions were Men of choice and excellent Spirits, yet ſaith he, 1 Cor. 4. 13. Being defamed we intreat, we are made as the filth of the World, and are the off-ſcouring of all things unto this Day: They are Words ſignifying the baſeſt, contemptibleſt and moſt abhorred things among Men. How is Heaven and Earth divided in their Judgments and Eſtimations of the Saints! Thoſe whom Men call filth and dirt, God calls a peculiar Treaſure, a Crown of Glory, a Royal Diadem. But trouble not thy ſelf Believer for the unjuſt Cenſures of the blind World, they ſpeak evil of the things they know not: He that is ſpiritual judgeth all things, yet he himſelf is judged of no Man, 1 Cor. 2. 14. You can diſcern the earthlineſs and baſeneſs of their Spirits, they want a faculty to diſcern the excellency and choiceneſs of your Spirits. He that carries a dark Lanthorn in the Night, can diſcern him that comes againſt him, and yet is not diſcerned by him: A Courtier regards not a ſlight in the Country, ſo long as he hath the Ear and Favour of his Prince.

Περίψημα πάντων (i. e.) the ſweepings of the Houſe: the filth wiped off any thing: Eraſmus, the dirt that ſticks to the Shoes: Valla, the dung of the Belly, as the Syriack tranſlates. The condemned Man that was tumbled from a ſteep Rock into the Sea, as a Sacrifice to Neptune, was called περίψημα, ſaith Budeus, Sit pro nobis peripſema.

Inference 4. Never let Believers fear the want of any good thing neceſſary for them in this World: The Favour of God is the Fountain of all Bleſſings, Proviſions, Protections, even of all that you need. He hath promiſed that he will withold no good thing from them that walk uprightly, Pſal. 84. 11. He that is bountiful to his Enemies will not withhold what is good from his Friends. The Favour of God will not only ſupply your needs, but protect your Perſons, Pſal. 5, 12. Thou wilt bleſs the Righteous, with Favour wilt thou compaſs him as with a ſhield.

Inference 5. Hence alſo it follows, That the Sins of Believers are very piercing things to the Heart of God. The unkindneſs of thoſe whom he hath received into his very Boſom, upon whom he hath ſet his ſpecial Favour and Delight, who are more obliged to him than all the People of the Earth beſide, O this wounds the very Heart of God. What a melting Expoſtulation was that which the Lord uſed with David, 2 Sam. 12, 7, 8. I anointed thee King over all Iſrael, and I delivered thee out of the Hand of Saul, and I gave thee thy Maſters Houſe, and thy Maſters Wives into thy Boſom, and gave thee the Houſe of Iſrael and Juda, and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee ſuch and ſuch Things: Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord? But Reader, if thou be a reconciled Perſon, a Favourite with God, and haſt grieved him by any eminent Tranſgreſſion, how ſhould it melt thy Heart to hear the Lord thus expoſtulating with thee: I delivered thee out of the Hand of Satan: I gave thee into the Boſom of Chriſt: I have pardoned unto thee Millions of Sins: I have beſtowed upon thee the riches of Mercy; my Favour hath made thee great; and as if all this were too little, I have prepared Heaven for thee: For which of all theſe Favours doſt thou thus requite me?

Inference 6. How precious ſhould Jeſus Chriſt be to Believers, by whoſe Blood they are ingratiated with God, and by whoſe Interceſſion they are and ſhall for ever be continued in his Favour? When the Apoſtle mentions the Believers Tranſlation, from the ſad ſtate of Nature to the bleſſed privileged ſtate of Grace, ſee what Title he beſtows upon Jeſus Chriſt, the Purchaſer of that Privilege, calling him the dear Son, Col. 1. 13. Not only dear to God, but exceeding dear to Believers alſo. Chriſt is the Favourite in Heaven to him you owe your Preferment there: Take away Chriſt, and you have no ground to ſtand on a Minute in the Favour of God. O then let Jeſus Chriſt the Fountain of your Honour, be alſo the Object of your Love and Praiſe.

Inference 7. Eſtimate by this the State and Condition of a deſerted Saint, upon whom the Favour of God is eclipſed. If the Favour of God be better than Life, then hiding of it from a Gracious Soul muſt be more bitter than Death: Deſerted Saints have Reaſon to take the firſt Place among all the Mourners in the World: The Darkneſs before Converſion had indeed more of danger, but this hath more of trouble: Darkneſs after Light is diſmal Darkneſs. Since therefore the Caſe is ſo ſad, let your prevention Care be the more: Grieve not the Good Spirit of God, you prepare but for your own Grief in doing.

Inference 8. Laſtly, Let this perſwade all Men to accept Jeſus Chriſt, as ever they expect to be accepted with the Lord themſelves. It is a fearful Caſe, for a Man's Perſons and Duties to be rejected of God: To call and not be heard: And much more terrible to be denied Audience in the great and terrible Day. Yet as ſure as the Scriptures are the ſealed and faithful Sayings of God, this is no more than what every Chriſtleſs Perſon muſt expect in that Day, Matth. 7. 22. Luke 13. 26. trace the Hiſtory of all Times, even as high as Abel, and you ſhall find that none but Believers did ever find Acceptance with God: All Experience confirms this great Truth, that they that are in the Flesh cannot please God. Reader, if this be thy condition, let me beg thee to ponder the Misery of it in a few sad Thoughts.

Consider how sad it is to be rejected of God, and forsaken by all Creatures at once: What a Day of Streights thy dying Day is like to be, when Heaven and Earth shall cast thee out together. Be assured whatever thy vain Hopes for the present quiet thee withal, this must be thy Case, the door of Mercy will be shut against thee, no Man cometh to the Father but by Christ. Sad was the Case of Saul, when he told Samuel, the Philistines War against me, and God is departed from me, 1 Sa. 28. 15. The Saints will have Boldness in the Day of Judgment, 1 John 4. 17. But thou wilt be a confounded Man; there is yet, blessed be the God of Mercy, a Capacity and Opportunity of Reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Isa. 27. 5. But this can be of no long Continuance. O therefore, by all the Regard and Love you have for the everlasting Welfare of your own Souls, come to Christ, embrace Christ in the offers of the Gospel, that you may be made accepted in the Beloved.

SERMON XVIII.

JOHN VIII. xxxvi.

If the Son therefore make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

Serm. 18 Text. The Liberty of Believers opened, and stated.

FRom the 30*th Verse* of this Chapter unto my Text, you have an account of the different Effects which the Words of Christ had upon the Hearts of his Hearers: Some believed, verse 30. these he encourageth to continue in his Word, verse 31. giving them this Encouragement, verse 32. Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free. Hereat the unbelieving Jews take Offence, and commence a Quarrel with him, verse 33. We be Abraham's seed, and were never in Bondage to any Man. We are of no slavish Extraction, the Blood of Abraham runs in our Veins: This scornful boast of the proud Jews, Christ confutes, verse 34. where he distinguisheth of a twofold Bondage; one to Men, another to Sin; one civil, another spiritual: Whosoever committeth Sin is the Servant of Sin, then tells them, verse 36. The Servant abideth not in the House for ever, but the Son abideth for ever. Wherein he intimateth two great Truths, viz. That the Servants and Slaves of Sin may for a time enjoy external Privileges of the House or Church of God; but it would not be long before the Master of the House will turn them out of Door: But if they were once the adopted Children of God, then they should abide in the House for ever. And this Privilege is only to be had by their believing in, and Union with the natural Son of God, Jesus Christ: Which brings us fairly to the Text; If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. In which Words we have two Parts.

viz. { 1. A Supposition. 2. A Concession.

First, A Supposition, If the Son therefore shall make you free, q. d. The Womb of Nature cast you forth into the World in a state of Bondage, in that state you have lived all your Days, Servants to Sin, Slaves to your Lusts, yet Freedom is to be obtained: And this Freedom is the Prerogative belonging to the Son of God to bestow: if the Son shall make you free.

Secondly, Christ's Concession upon this Supposition, Then shall ye be free indeed, (i. e.) you shall have real Freedom, an excellent and everlasting Freedom: No Conceit only, as that which you now taste of is: If ever therefore you will be Free Men indeed, believe in me. Hence note, Doct. That Interest in Christ sets the Soul at Liberty from all that Bondage whereunto it was subjected in its natural state.

Believers are the Children of the New Covenant, the Denizons of Jerusalem which are above, which is Free and the Mother of them all, Gal. 4. 26. The glorious Liberty, viz. that which is Spiritual and Eternal, is the Liberty of the Children of God, Rom. 8. 21. Christ, and none but Christ delivers his People out of the Hands of their Enemies, Luke 1. 74.

In the doctrinal part of this Point, I must shew you,

First, What Believers are not freed from by Jesus Christ in this World.

Secondly, What that Bondage is from which every Believer is freed by Christ.

Thirdly, What kind of Freedom that is which comes in upon believing.

Fourthly, Open the excellency of this state of spiritual Freedom.

First, What those things are from which Believers are not made free in this World: We must not think that our spiritual Liberty by Christ presently brings us into an absolute Liberty in all respects. For,

First, Christ doth not free Believers from Obedience to the Moral Law: 'Tis true we are no more under it as a Covenant for our Justification; but we are, and must still be under it is a Rule for our Direction. The Matter of the Moral Law is unchangeable as the Nature of Good and Evil is, and cannot be abolished except that Distinction could be destroyed, Mat. 5, 17, 18. The Precepts of the Law are still urged under the Gospel to enforce Duties upon us, Eph. 6. 12. 'Tis therefore a vain Distinction invented by Libertines to say it binds us as Creatures not as Christians: Or that it binds the unregenerate part, but not the regenerate: But this is a sure Truth, that they who are freed from its Penalties, are still under its Precepts. Though Believers are no more under its Curse, yet they are still under its Conduct: The Law sends us Christ to be justified, and Christ sends us to the Law to be regulated. Let the Heart of every Christian joyn therefore with David's in that holy Wish, Psalm. 119. 4, 5. Thou hast commanded us to keep thy Precepts diligently, O that my Heart were directed to keep thy Statutes. 'Tis excellent when Christians begin to obey the Law from Life, which others obey for Life: Because they are justified, not that they may be justified. When Duties are done in the strength and for the honour of Christ, which is Evangelical; not in our own strength, and for our own ends, which is of Sin. 'Tis ſaid, Rev. 8. 4, 5, 6. That the Smoak of the Incenſe, which came with the Prayers of the Saints, aſcended up before God out of the Angels Hand: And immediately it is added, ver. 5. And the Angel took the Cenſer, and filled it with Fire of the Altar, and caſt it into the Earth, and there were Voices, and Thunderings, and Lightnings, and Earthquakes, and the ſeven Angels, who had the ſeven Trumpets, prepared themſelves to ſound. The Prayer of a ſingle Saint is ſometimes followed with wonderful Effects. Pſal. 18. 6, 7. In my diſtreſs I called upon the Lord, and cried unto my God: He heard my Voice out of his Temple, and my cry came before him, even into his Ears: Then the Earth ſhook and trembled; the Foundations alſo of the Hills moved, and were ſhaken becauſe he was wroth: What then can a thundring Legion of ſuch praying Souls do! It was ſaid of Luther, iſte vir potuit cum Deo quicquid voluit, that Man could have of God what he would; his Enemies felt the weight of his Prayers, and the Church of God reaped the Benefits thereof. The Queen of Scots profeſſed ſhe was more afraid of the Prayers of Mr. Knox, than of an Army of ten thouſand Men: Theſe were mighty Wreſtlers with God, howſoever contemned and vilified among their Enemies. There will a time come, when God will hear the Prayers of his People, who are continually crying in his Ears, How long, Lord, how long.

Jacobus Langius, the Sorbone Doctor, who wrote the Lives of Luther, Knox, and Calvin, ſpeaks as if the Devil had hired his Pen to abuſe thoſe precious Servants of Chriſt.

Infer. 3. Let no Believer be dejected at the Contempts and Slightings of Men, ſo long as they ſtand in the Grace and Favour of God: It is the Lot of the beſt of Men to have the worſt uſage in this World: Thoſe of whom the World was not worthy, are not thought worthy to live in the World, Heb. 11. 38. Paul and his Companions were Men of choice and excellent Spirits, yet ſaith he, 1 Cor. 4. 13. Being defamed we intreat, we are made as the filth of the World, and are the off-ſcouring of all things unto this Day: They are Words ſignifying the baſeſt, contemptibleſt and moſt abhorred things among Men. How is Heaven and Earth divided in their Judgments and Eſtimations of the Saints! Thoſe whom Men call filth and dirt, God calls a peculiar Treaſure, a Crown of Glory, a Royal Diadem. But trouble not thy ſelf Believer for the unjuſt Cenſures of the blind World, they ſpeak evil of the things they know not: He that is ſpiritual judgeth all things, yet he himſelf is judged of no Man, 1 Cor. 2. 14. You can diſcern the earthlineſs and baſeneſs of their Spirits, they want a faculty to diſcern the excellency and choiceneſs of your Spirits. He that carries a dark Lanthorn in the Night, can diſcern him that comes againſt him, and yet is not diſcerned by him: A Courtier regards not a ſlight in the Country, ſo long as he hath the Ear and Favour of his Prince.

Περίψημα πάντων (i. e.) the ſweepings of the Houſe: the filth wiped off any thing: Eraſmus, the dirt that ſticks to the Shoes: Valla, the dung of the Belly, as the Syriack tranſlates. The condemned Man that was tumbled from a ſteep Rock into the Sea, as a Sacrifice to Neptune, was called περίψημα, ſaith Budæus, Sit pro nobis peripſema.

Inference 4. Never let Believers fear the want of any good thing neceſſary for them in this World: The Favour of God is the Fountain of all Bleſſings, Proviſions, Protections, even of all that you need. He hath promiſed that he will withold no good thing from them that walk uprightly, Pſal. 84. 11. He that is bountiful to his Enemies will not withhold what is good from his Friends. The Favour of God will not only ſupply your needs, but protect your Perſons, Pſal. 5, 12. Thou wilt bleſs the Righteous, with Favour wilt thou compaſs him as with a ſhield.

Inference 5. Hence alſo it follows, That the Sins of Believers are very piercing things to the Heart of God. The unkindneſs of thoſe whom he hath received into his very Boſom, upon whom he hath ſet his ſpecial Favour and Delight, who are more obliged to him than all the People of the Earth beſide, O this wounds the very Heart of God. What a melting Expoſtulation was that which the Lord uſed with David, 2 Sam. 12, 7, 8. I anointed thee King over all Iſrael, and I delivered thee out of the Hand of Saul, and I gave thee thy Maſters Houſe, and thy Maſters Wives into thy Boſom, and gave thee the Houſe of Iſrael and Juda, and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee ſuch and ſuch Things: Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord? But Reader, if thou be a reconciled Perſon, a Favourite with God, and haſt grieved him by any eminent Tranſgreſſion, how ſhould it melt thy Heart to hear the Lord thus expoſtulating with thee: I delivered thee out of the Hand of Satan: I gave thee into the Boſom of Chriſt: I have pardoned unto thee Millions of Sins: I have beſtowed upon thee the riches of Mercy; my Favour hath made thee great; and as if all this were too little, I have prepared Heaven for thee: For which of all theſe Favours doſt thou thus requite me?

Inference 6. How precious ſhould Jeſus Chriſt be to Believers, by whoſe Blood they are ingratiated with God, and by whoſe Interceſſion they are and ſhall for ever be continued in his Favour? When the Apoſtle mentions the Believers Tranſlation, from the ſad ſtate of Nature to the bleſſed privileged ſtate of Grace, ſee what a Title he beſtows upon Jeſus Chriſt, the Purchaſer of that Privilege, calling him the dear Son, Col. 1. 13. Not only dear to God, but exceeding dear to Believers alſo. Chriſt is the Favourite in Heaven, to him you owe your Preferment there: Take away Chriſt, and you have no ground to ſtand one Minute in the Favour of God. O then let Jeſus Chriſt the Fountain of your Honour, be alſo the Object of your Love and Praiſe.

Inference 7. Eſtimate by this the State and Condition of a deſerted Saint, upon whom the Favour of God is eclipſed. If the Favour of God be better than Life, the hiding of it from a Gracious Soul muſt be more bitter than Death: Deſerted Saints have Reaſon to take the firſt Place among all the Mourners in the World: The Darkneſs before Converſion had indeed more of danger, but this hath more of trouble. Darkneſs after Light is diſmal Darkneſs. Since therefore the Caſe is ſo ſad, let your preventing Care be the more: Grieve not the Good Spirit of God, you prepare but for your own Grief in ſo doing.

Inference 8. Laſtly, Let this perſwade all Men to accept Jeſus Chriſt, as ever they expect to be accepted with the Lord themſelves. It is a fearful Caſe, for a Man's Perſons and Duties to be rejected of God: To cry and not be heard: And much more terrible to be denied Audience in the great and terrible Day! Yet as ſure as the Scriptures are the ſealed and faithful Sayings of God, this is no more than what every Chriſtleſs Perſon muſt expect in that Day, Matth. 7. 22. Luke 13. 26. trace the Hiſtory of all Times, even as high as Abel, and you ſhall find that none but Believers did ever find Acceptance with God: All Experience confirms this great Truth, that they that are in the Flesh cannot please God. Reader, if this be thy condition, let me beg thee to ponder the Misery of it in a few sad Thoughts.

Consider how sad it is to be rejected of God, and forsaken by all Creatures at once: What a Day of Streights thy dying Day is like to be, when Heaven and Earth shall cast thee out together. Be assured whatever thy vain Hopes for the present quiet thee withal, this must be thy Case, the door of Mercy will be shut against thee, no Man cometh to the Father but by Christ. Sad was the Case of Saul, when he told Samuel, the Philistines make War against me, and God is departed from me, 1 Sam. 28. 15. The Saints will have Boldness in the Day of Judgment, 1 John 4. 17. But thou wilt be a confounded Man; there is yet, blessed be the God of Mercy, a Capacity and Opportunity of Reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Isa. 27. 5. But this can be of no long Continuance. O therefore, by all the Regard and Love you have for the everlasting Welfare of your own Souls, come to Christ, embrace Christ in the offers of the Gospel, that you may be made accepted in the Beloved.

SERMON XVIII.

JOHN VIII. xxxvi.

If the Son therefore make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

Serm. 18 Text. The Liberty of Believers opened, and stated.

FRom the 30*th Verse* of this Chapter unto my Text, you have an account of the different Effects which the Words of Christ had upon the Hearts of his Hearers: Some believed, verse 30. these he encourageth to continue in his Word, verse 31. giving them this Encouragement, verse 32. Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free. Hereat the unbelieving Jews take Offence, and commence a Quarrel with him, verse 33. We be Abraham's seed, and were never in Bondage to any Man. We are of no slavish Extraction, the Blood of Abraham runs in our Veins: This scornful boast of the proud Jews, Christ confutes, verse 34. where he distinguisheth of a twofold Bondage; one to Men, another to Sin; one civil, another spiritual: Whosoever committeth Sin is the Servant of Sin, then tells them, verse 36. The Servant abideth not in the House for ever, but the Son abideth for ever. Wherein he intimateth two great Truths, viz. That the Servants and Slaves of Sin may for a time enjoy external Privileges of the House or Church of God; but it would not be long before the Master of the House will turn them out of Door: But if they were once the adopted Children of God, then they should abide in the House for ever. And this Privilege is only to be had by their believing in, and Union with the natural Son of God, Jesus Christ: Which brings us fairly to the Text; If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. In which Words we have two Parts.

viz. { 1. A Supposition. 2. A Concession.

First, A Supposition, If the Son therefore shall make you free, q. d. The Womb of Nature cast you forth into the World in a state of Bondage, in that state you have lived all your Days, Servants to Sin, Slaves to your Lusts, yet Freedom is to be obtained: And this Freedom is the Prerogative belonging to the Son of God to bestow: If the Son shall make you free.

Secondly, Christ's Concession upon this Supposition, Then shall ye be free indeed, (i. e.) you shall have a real Freedom, an excellent and everlasting Freedom: No Conceit only, as that which you now boast of is: If ever therefore you will be Free Men indeed, believe in me. Hence note, Doct. That Interest in Christ sets the Soul at Liberty from all that Bondage whereunto it was subjected in its natural state.

Believers are the Children of the New Covenant, the Denizons of Jerusalem which are above, which is Free and the Mother of them all, Gal. 4. 26. The glorious Liberty, viz. that which is Spiritual and Eternal, is the Liberty of the Children of God, Rom. 8. 21. Christ, and none but Christ delivers his People out of the Hands of their Enemies, Luke 1. 74.

In the doctrinal part of this Point, I must shew you,

First, What Believers are not freed from by Jesus Christ in this World.

Secondly, What that Bondage is from which every Believer is freed by Christ.

Thirdly, What kind of Freedom that is which comes in upon believing.

Fourthly, Open the excellency of this state of spiritual Freedom.

First, What those things are from which Believers are not made free in this World: We must not think that our spiritual Liberty by Christ presently brings us into an absolute Liberty in all respects. For,

First, Christ doth not free Believers from Obedience to the Moral Law: 'Tis true we are no more under it as a Covenant for our Justification; but we are, and must still be under it is a Rule for our Direction. The Matter of the Moral Law is unchangeable as the Nature of Good and Evil is, and cannot be abolished except that Distinction could be destroyed, Mat. 5, 17, 18. The Precepts of the Law are still urged under the Gospel to enforce Duties upon us, Eph. 6. 12. 'Tis therefore a vain Distinction invented by Libertines to say it binds us as Creatures not as Christians: Or that it binds the unregenerate part, but not the regenerate: But this is a sure Truth, that they who are freed from its Penalties, are still under its Precepts. Though Believers are no more under its Curse, yet they are still under its Conduct: The Law sends us Christ to be justified, and Christ sends us to the Law to be regulated. Let the Heart of every Christian joyn therefore with David's in that holy Wish, Psalm. 119. 4, 5. Thou hast commanded us to keep thy Precepts diligently, O that my Heart were directed to keep thy Statutes. 'Tis excellent when Christians begin to obey the Law from Life, which others obey for Life: Because they are justified, not that they may be justified. When Duties are done in the strength and for the honour of Christ, which is Evangelical; not in our own strength, and for our own ends, which is servile ſervile and legal Obedience: Had Chriſt freed us from Obedience, ſuch a Liberty had been to our Loſs.

Secondly, Chriſt hath not freed Believers in this World from the Temptations and Aſſaults of Satan: Even thoſe that are freed from his Dominion, are not free from his Moleſtation. 'Tis ſaid indeed, Rom. 16. 20. God ſhall ſhortly bruiſe Satan under your Feet: But mean time he hath Power to bruiſe and buffet us by his Injections, 2 Cor. 12. 7. He now bruiſeth Chriſt's Heel, Gen. 3. 15. (i. e.) bruiſeth him in his tempted and afflicted Members: Tho' he cannot kill them, yet he can and doth afflict and fright them, by ſhooting his fiery Darts of Temptation among them, Eph. 6. 16. 'Tis true, when the Saints are got ſafe into Heaven, they are out of Gunſhot; there is perfect Freedom from all Temptation. A Believer may then ſay, O thou Enemy, Temptations are come to a perpetual End. I am now arrived there, where none of thy fiery Darts can reach me: But this Freedom is not yet.

Thirdly, Chriſt hath not yet freed Believers in this World from the Motions of indwelling Sin: Theſe are continually acting and infeſting the holieſt of Men, Rom. 7. 21, 23, 24. Corruptions like Canaanites are ſtill left in the Land to be Thorns in our Eyes, and Goads in our Sides. Thoſe that boaſt moſt of Freedom from the Motions of Sin, have moſt cauſe to ſuſpect themſelves ſtill under the Dominion of Sin. All Chriſt's Freemen are troubled with the ſame complaint: Who among them complains not as the Apoſtle did, Rom. 7. 24. Oh wretched Man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death?

Fourthly, Jeſus Chriſt doth not free Believers in this World from inward Troubles and Exerciſes of Soul upon the Account of Sin. God may let looſe Satan and Conſcience too, in the way of terrible Accuſations, which may greatly diſtreſs the Soul of a Believer, and wofully eclipſe the Light of God's Countenance, and break the Peace of their Souls. Job, Heman and David were all made free by Chriſt, yet each of them hath left upon Record his bitter complaint upon this account, Job 7. 19, 20. Pſal. 88. 14, 15, 16. Pſal. 38. unto verſe 11.

Fifthly, Chriſt hath not freed Believers in this World from the Rods of Affliction. God in giving us our Liberty, doth not abridge his own Liberty, Pſal. 89. 32. All the Children of God are made free, yet what Son is there whom the Father chaſtneth not? Heb. 12. 8. Exemption from Affliction is ſo far from being the Mark of a Freeman, that the Apoſtle there makes it the Mark of a Slave. Baſtards, not Sons want the Diſcipline and Bleſſing of the Rod: To be free from Affliction would be no Benefit to Believers, who receive ſo many Benefits by Affliction.

Sixthly, No Believer is freed by Chriſt from the ſtroak of Death, though they are all freed from the ſting of Death, Rom. 8. 10. The Bodies of Believers are under the ſame Law of Mortality with other Men, Heb. 9. 27. We muſt come to the Grave as well as others: Yea, we muſt come to it through the ſame Agonies, Pangs and Dolours that other Men do: The Foot of Death treads as heavy upon the Bodies of the redeemed as of other Men. Believers indeed are diſtinguiſhed by Mercy from others, but the diſtinguiſhing Mercy lies not here. Thus you ſee what Believers are not freed from in this World: If you ſhall now ſay, what Advantage then hath a Believer, or what Profit is there in Regeneration? I Anſwer.

Secondly, That Believers are freed from many great and ſad Miſeries and Evils by Jeſus Chriſt, notwithſtanding all that hath been ſaid. For, Firſt, All Believers are freed from the Rigour and Curſe of the Law: The rigorous Yoak of the Law is broken off from their Necks, and the ſweet and eaſie Yoak of Jeſus Chriſt put on, Mat. 11. 28. The Law required perfect working under the pain of a Curſe, Gal. 3. 10. accepted of no ſhort Endeavours; admitted no Repentance; gave no ſtrength: It is not ſo now, proportionable ſtrength is given, Phil. 4. 13. Sincerity is reckoned Perfection, Joh. 1. 1. Tranſgreſſion brings not under Condemnation, Rom. 8. 1. O bleſſed Freedom! When Duty becomes delight, and failings hinder not Acceptance: This is one part of the bleſſed Freedom of Believers.

Secondly, All Believers are freed from the guilt of Sin, it may trouble, but it cannot condemn them, Rom. 8. 33. The Hand-writing which was againſt us is cancelled by Chriſt, nailed to his Croſs, Coloſ. 2. 14. When the Seal and Hand-writing is torn off from the Bond, the Debtor is made free thereby: Believers are totally freed, Acts 13. 39. Juſtified from all things: And finally freed, John 5. 24. They ſhall never come into Condemnation. O bleſſed Freedom! How ſweet is it to lie down in our Beds, yea in our Graves; when Guilt ſhall neither be our Bed-fellow, nor Grave-fellow!

Thirdly, Jeſus Chriſt frees all Believers from the Dominion as well as the guilt of Sin. Sin ſhall not have Dominion over you, for ye are not under the Law but under Grace, Rom. 6. 14. The Law of the Spirit of Life which is in Chriſt Jeſus hath made me free from the Law of Sin and Death, Rom. 8. 2. Now who can eſtimate ſuch a Liberty as this? What ſlavery, what an intolerable Drudgery is the ſervice of divers Luſts, from all which Believers are freed by Chriſt! Not from the Reſidence but from the Reign of Sin. 'Tis with Sin in Believers as it was with thoſe Beaſts mentioned, Dan. 7. 12. They had their Dominion taken away, yet their Lives were prolonged for a Seaſon and Time.

Fourthly, Jeſus Chriſt ſets all Believers free from the Power of Satan; in whoſe right they were by Nature, Col. 1. 13. they are tranſlated from the Power of Darkneſs into the Kingdom of Chriſt. Satan had the Poſſeſſion of them, as a Man of his own Goods; but Chriſt diſpoſſeſſeth that ſtrong Man armed, alters the Property, and recovers them out of his Hand, Luke 11. 21, 22. There are two ways by which Chriſt frees Believers out of Satan's Power and Poſſeſſion, namely,

2. By Power.

Firſt, By Price, the Blood of Chriſt purchaſed Believers out of the hand of Juſtice by ſatisfying the Law for them, which being done, Satan's Authority over them falls of courſe, as the Power of a Goaler over the Priſoner doth, when he hath a legal Diſcharge, Heb. 2. 14. For as much then as the Children are partakers of Fleſh and Blood: He alſo himſelf took part of the ſame, that through Death he might deſtroy him that had the power of Death, that is, the Devil. The cruel Tyrant beats and burthens the poor Captive no more after the Ranſom is once paid, and he actually freed, and therefore Chriſt delivers his,

Secondly, By Power. Satan is exceeding unwilling to let go his prey: He is a ſtrong and a malicious Enemy: Every reſcue and deliverance out of his hand, is a glorious Effect of the Almighty Pow power of Christ, Act. 26. 18. 2 Cor. 10. 5. How did our Lord Jesus Christ grapple with Satan at his Death, and triumphed over him, Col. 2. 15. O glorious Salvation, blessed Liberty of the Children of God.

Fifthly, Christ frees Believers from the poisonous sting and hurt of Dearh: Kill us it can, but hurt us it cannot, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. O Death where is thy Sting? O Grave where is thy Victory? The Sting of Death is Sin, and the strength of Sin is the Law: But thanks be to God which giveth us the Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. If there be not hurt, there should be no horror in Death: 'Tis Guilt that arms Death both with its hurting and terrifying Power. To die in our Sins, John 8. 24. To have our Bones full of the Sins of our Youth, which shall lie down with us in the Dust, Job 20. 11. To have Death, like a Dragon, pulling a poor guilty Creature as a prey into its dreadful Den. Psalm 49. 14. In this lies the danger and horror of Death: But from Death as a Curse, and from the Grave as a Prison, Christ hath set Believers at Liberty, by submitting to Death in their room, by his victorious Resurrection from the Grave, as the first-born of the dead: Death is disarmed of its hurting Power: The death of Believers is but a sleep in Jesus.

Thirdly, The next thing to be briefly spoken to, is the kind and nature of that Freedom and Liberty purchased and procured by Christ for Believers. Now Liberty may be considered two ways; viz.

1. As Civil.
2. As Sacred.

As to civil Freedom or Liberty, it belongs not to our present Business: Believers as to their civil Capacity are not freed from the Duties they owe to their Superiors. Servants, though Believers, are still to be subject to their Masters according to the flesh with fear and trembling, Ephes. 6. 5. nor from Obedience to lawful Magistrates whom we are to obey in the Lord, Rom. 13. 1, 4. Religion dissolves not the Bonds of civil Relations: Nor is to be used as an occasion to the flesh, 1 Pet. 2. 16. 'Tis not a carnal but a spiritual Freedom Christ hath purchased for us: And this spiritual Freedom is again to be considered, either as,

1. Inchoate.
2. Consummate.

The Liberty Believers have at present is but a beginning Liberty, they are freed but in part from their spiritual Enemies: But it is a growing Liberty every day, and will be consummate, and compleat at last.

To conclude, Christian Liberty is either,

1. Privative, or,
2. Positive.

The Liberty Believers are invested with, is of both kinds: They are not only freed from many Miseries, Burdens and Dangers; but also invested by Jesus Christ with many royal Privileges and invaluable Immunities.

Fourthly, And this brings us to the fourth and last thing; namely the Properties of this blessed Freedom which the Saints enjoy by Jesus Christ: and if we consider it duly it will be found to be,

First, A wonderful Liberty, never enough to be admired: How could it be imagined that ever those who owed unto God more than ever they could pay by their own eternal Sufferings, those that were under that dreadful Curse and Condemnation of the Law, in the Power and Possession of Satan the strong Man armed; those that were bound with so many Chains in their spiritual Prison; their understanding bound with Ignorance, their Wills with Obstinacy, their Hearts with impenetrable Hardness, their Affections with a thousand bewitching Vanities; that slight their state of slavery so much as industriously to oppose all Instruments and Means of Deliverance: For such Persons to be set at Liberty, notwithstanding all this, is the Wonder of Wonders, and is deservedly marvellous in the Eyes of Believers for ever.

Secondly, The Freedom of Believers is a peculiar Freedom: a Liberty which few obtain, the generality abiding still in bondage to Satan, who from the Multitude of his Subjects is stiled the God of this World, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Believers in Scripture are often called a Remnant, which is but a small part of the whole piece: The more cause have the People of God to admire distinguishing Mercy: How many Nobles and great ones of the World are but royal Slaves to Satan and their own Lusts!

Thirdly, The Liberty of Believers is a Liberty dearly purchased by the Blood of Christ: What that Captain said, Acts 22. 28. With a great sum obtained I this Freedom, may be much more said of the Believers Freedom: 'Twas not Silver or Gold but the precious Blood of Christ that purchased it, 1 Pet. 1. 18.

Fourthly, The Freedom and Liberty of Believers is a growing and encreasing Liberty, they get more and more out of the Power of Sin, and nearer still to their compleat Salvation every day, Rom. 13. 11. the Body of Sin dieth daily in them: They are said to be crucified with Christ: The strength of Sin abates continually in them after the manner of crucified Persons, who die a slow but sure Death: And look in what Degree the Power of Sin abates, proportionably their spiritual Liberty encreases upon them.

Fifthly, The Freedom of Believers is a comfortable Freedom: The Apostle comforts Christians of the lowest Rank, poor Servants, with this Consideration, 1 Cor. 7. 22. He that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's Freeman, q. d. Let not the Meanness of your outward Condition, which is a state of Subjection and Dependance, a state of Poverty and Contempt, at all trouble you: You are the Lord's Freemen, of precious Account in his Eyes. O 'tis a comfortable Liberty!

Sixthly, and Lastly, 'Tis a perpetual and final Freedom, they that are once freed by Christ have their Manumissions and final Discharge from that state of Bondage they were in before. Sin shall never have Dominion over them any more: It may tempt them and trouble them, but shall never more rule and govern them, Acts 26. 18. And thus you see what a glorious Liberty the Liberty of Believers is.

The Improvement whereof will be in the following Inferences.

Inference 1. How rational is the Joy of Christians, above the Joy of all others in the World? Shall not the Captive rejoice in his recovered Liberty? The very Birds of the Air (as one observes) had rather be at Liberty in the Woods, though lean and hungry, than in a golden Cage with the richest Fare: Every Creature naturally prizes it, none more than Believers, who have felt the Burthen and Bondage of Corruption: Who in the days of their first Illumination and Conviction have poured out many Groans and Tears for this Mercy. What was said of the Captive People of God in Babylon, excellently shadows forth the state of God's People under ſpiritual Bondage, with the way and manner of their Deliverance from it, Zech. 9. 11. By the Blood of thy Covenant I have ſent forth thy Priſoners out of the Pit, wherein is no Water. Believers are delivered by the Blood of Chriſt out of a worſe Pit than that of Babylon: And look as the Tribes in their return from thence were overwhelmed with Joy and Aſtoniſhment, Pſalm 126. 1, 2. When the Lord turned again the Captivity of Sion; we were like them that dream; then was our Mouth filled with laughter, and our Tongue with ſinging: They were overwhelmed with the ſenſe of the Mercy: So ſhould it be with the People of God. 'Tis ſaid, Luke 15. 24. when the Prodigal Son (there made the Emblem of a returning converting Sinner) was returned again to his Father's Houſe; that there was heard Muſick and Dancing, Mirth and Feaſting in that Houſe. The Angels in Heaven rejoice when a Soul is recovered out of the Power of Satan; and ſhall not the recovered Soul, immediately concerned in the Mercy, greatly rejoice? Yea, let them rejoice in the Lord, and let no earthly Trouble or Affliction ever have Power to interrupt their Joy for a Moment after ſuch a Deliverance as this.

Inference 2. How unreaſonable, and wholly inexcuſable is the Sin of Apoſtaſie from Jeſus Chriſt? What is it but for a delivered Captive to put his Feet again into the Shackles, his Hands into the Manacles, his Neck into the Iron Yoke, from which he hath been delivered? 'Tis ſaid, Mat. 12. 44, 45. When the unclean Spirit is gone out of a Man, he walketh through dry Places, ſeeking Reſt and findeth none: Then he ſaith, I will return into mine Houſe from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, ſwept and garniſhed; then goeth he, and taketh with him ſeven other Spirits more wicked than himſelf, and they enter in and dwell there, and the laſt ſtate of that Man is worſe than the firſt. Even as a Priſoner that hath eſcaped, and is again recovered, is loaded with double Irons. Let the People of God be content to run any Hazard, endure any Difficulties in the way of Religion, rather than return again into their former Bondage, to Sin and Satan. O Chriſtian, if ever God gave thee a ſight, and a ſenſe of the Miſery and Danger of thy natural State, if ever thou haſt felt the Pangs and Throes of a labouring and diſtreſſed Conſcience, and after all this taſted the unſpeakable ſweetneſs of the Peace and Reſt that is in Chriſt, thou wilt rather chooſe to die ten thouſand Deaths than to forſake Chriſt, and go back again into that ſad Condition.

Inference 3. How ſuitable and well becoming is a free Spirit in Believers to their State of Liberty and Freedom? Chriſt hath made your Condition free, O let the temper and frame of your Hearts be free alſo, do all that you do for God with a Spirit of Freedom: Not by conſtraint but willingly. Methinks, Chriſtians, the new Nature that is in you ſhould ſtand for a Command, and be inſtead of all Arguments that uſe to work upon the Hopes and Fears of other Men: See how all Creatures work according to the Principle of their Natures: You need not command a Mother to draw forth her Breaſts to a ſucking Child: Nature it ſelf teaches and prompts to that: You need not bid the Sea ebb and flow at the ſtated Hours. O Chriſtian, why ſhould thy Heart need any other Argument than its own ſpiritual Inclination to keep its ſtated Times and Seaſons of Communion with God? Let none of God's Commandments be grievous to you: Let not thine Heart need dragging and forcing to its own Benefit and Advantage. Whatever you do for God, do it chearfully, and whatever you ſuffer for God, ſuffer it chearfully: It was a brave Spirit which acted Holy Paul, I am ready, ſaith he, not only to be bound, but alſo to die at Jeruſalem for the Name of the Lord Jeſus, Acts 21. 13.

Inference 4. Let no Man wonder at the Enmity and Oppoſition of Satan to the preaching of the Goſpel: For by the Goſpel it is that Souls are recovered out of his Power, Acts 26. 18. 'Tis the expreſs Work of Miniſters to turn Men from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God. Satan (as one ſaith) is a great and jealous Prince: He will never endure to have Liberty proclaimed by the Miniſters of Chriſt within his Dominions: And indeed what is it leſs when the Goſpel is preached in Power, but as it were by beat of Drum and ſound of Trumpet to proclaim Liberty, ſpiritual, ſweet and everlaſting Liberty, to every Soul that is made ſenſible of the Bondage of Corruption and cruel ſervitude of Satan, and will now come over to Jeſus Chriſt? And oh what numbers and multitudes of Priſoners have broken looſe from Satan at one Proclamation of Chriſt, Acts 2. 41. But Satan owes the Servants of Chriſt a ſpite for this, and will be ſure to pay them if ever they come within his reach: Perſecution is the Genius of the Goſpel, and follows it as the Shadow doth the Body.

Inference 5. How careful ſhould Chriſtians be to maintain their ſpiritual Liberty in all, and every Point thereof? Stand faſt (ſaith Paul) in the Liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made us free; and be not again entangled in the Yoke of Bondage, Gal. 5. 1. And again, Ye are bought with a Price, be not ye the Servants of Men. It's Chriſt's Prerogative to preſcribe the Rules of his own Houſe; he hath given no Man Dominion over your Faith, 2 Cor. 1. 24. One Man is no Rule to another, but the Word of Chriſt a Rule to all. Follow not the holieſt of Men one ſtep farther than they follow Chriſt, 1 Cor. 11. 4. Man is an ambitious Creature, naturally affecting Dominion: And Dominion over the Mind rather than over the Body: To give Law to others feeds pride in himſelf: So far as any Man brings the Word of Chriſt to warrant his Injunctions, ſo far we are to obey, and no farther: Chriſt is your Lord and Lawgiver.

Inference 6. Laſtly, Let this encourage and perſwade Sinners to come to Chriſt, for with him is ſweet Liberty for poor Captives. Oh that you did but know what a bleſſed ſtate Jeſus Chriſt would bring you into: Come unto me (ſaith he) ye that labour, and are heavy laden; and what Encouragement doth he give to Comers but this, my Yoke is eaſie, and my Burden is light? The Devil perſwades you that the ways of Obedience and ſtrict Godlineſs are a perfect Bondage; but if ever God regenerate you you will find his ways, ways of Pleaſantneſs, and all his paths Peace: You will rejoice in the way of his Commandments as much as in all riches: You will find the worſt Work Chriſt puts you about even ſuffering Work, ſweeter than all the Pleaſure that ever you found in Sin. O therefore open your Hearts at the Call of the Goſpel: Come unto Chriſt, then ſhall you be free indeed.

SER-

SERMON XIX.

I. PET. III. xviii.

For Christ hath once suffered for Sins, the just for the unjust; that he might bring us to God.

Serm 19 Text. The Saints coming home to God by Reconciliation and Glorification, opened and applied.

THE scope of the Apostle in this Place is to prepare and fortifie Christians for a Day of Suffering. In order to their chearful sustaining whereof he prescribeth two excellent Rules of mighty use for all suffering Christians.

First, To get a good Conscience within them, verse 16, 17. hic murus aheneus esto.

Secondly, To set the Example of Christ's suffering before them, vers. 18. For Christ hath once suffered for Sinners: The Sufferings of Christ for us, is the great Motive engaging Christians to suffer chearfully for him.

In the Words before us we have,

First, The Sufficience and Fulness of Christ's Sufferings intimated in that Particle [once] Christ needs to suffer no more, having finished and compleated that whole Work at once.

Secondly, The meritorious Cause of the Sufferings of Christ, and that is Sin, Christ once suffered for Sins: Not his own Sins, but ours: As it follows in the next Clause, which is the third thing here observable, viz.

Thirdly, The admirable Grace and unexampled Love of Christ to us Sinners, the Just for the Unjust, in which Words the Substitution of Christ in the room and place of Sinners, the Vice-gerence of his Death is plainly expressed. Christ died not only nostro bono, for our good, but also nostro loco in our stead.

Fourthly, Here is also the final Cause or Design and Scope of the Sufferings of Christ, which was to bring us to God.

Fifthly, Here is also the Issue of the Sufferings of Christ, which was the Death of Christ in the Flesh, and the quickning of Christ after Death by the Spirit: Many excellent Observations are lodged in the Bosom of this Scripture: All which I must pass in Silence at this Time, and confine my Discourse to the final Cause of the Sufferings of Christ, namely that he might bring us to God: Where the Observation will be plainly and briefly this.

Doct. That the end of Christ's cursed Death and bitter Sufferings was to bring all those for whom he died unto God.

In the Explication and Preparation of this Point for Use, two Things must be spoken unto, viz.

1. What Christ's bringing us to God imports.
2. What Influence the Death of Christ hath upon this Design of bringing us to God.

First, What Christ's bringing us to God imports: And certainly there be many great and excellent Things carried in this Expression: More generally it notes our state of Reconciliation, and our state of Glorification: By Reconciliation we are brought nigh to God, Ephes. 2. 13. Ye are made nigh, (i. e.) reconciled, by the Blood of Christ, Heb. 12. 22, 23. we are said to come to God the Judge of all. By Reconciliation we are brought nigh unto God now; by Glorification we shall be brought home to God hereafter, 1 Thes. 4. 17. We shall be ever with the Lord: But more particularly this Phrase, that he might bring us to God, imports,

First, That the chief Happiness of Man consisteth in the Enjoyment of God: That the Creature hath as necessary dependance upon God for Happiness, as the Stream hath upon the Fountain, or the Image in the Glass upon the Face of him that looks into it. Look as the sum of the Creatures Misery lies in this, depart from me; Separation from God is the principal part of Damnation: So on the contrary, the chief Happiness of the Creature consisteth in the Enjoyment and blessed Vision of God, 1 John 3. 2. Psalm 17. 15. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness.

Secondly, It implies Man's Revolt and Apostasie from God. Ephes. 2. 12. But now in Christ Jesus, ye who were sometime afar off, are made nigh by the Blood of Christ. Those whom Christ bringeth unto God were before afar off from him, both in State and Condition; and in Temper and Disposition: We were lost Creatures, and had no desire to return to God: The Prodigal was said to go into a far Country, Luke 15. 30.

Thirdly, Christ's bringing us to God implies our Inability to return to God of our selves: We must be brought back by Christ, or perish for ever in a state of Separation from God: The lost Sheep is made the Emblem of the lost Sinner, Luke 15. 5. The Sheep returns not to the Fold of it self, but the Shepherd seeks it, finds it, and carries it back upon his Shoulders: And the Apostle plainly tells us, Rom. 5. 6. That when we were without Strength (i. e.) any Ability to recover, help or save our selves; in due time Christ died for the ungodly.

Fourthly, Christ's bringing us to God evidently implies this, that God's unsatisfied Justice was once the great Bar betwixt him and Man: Man can have no access to God but by Christ: Christ brings us to God by no other way but the way of Satisfaction by his Blood: He hath suffered for Sins, the Just for the Unjust, that he might bring us to God. Better ten thousand Worlds should perish for ever, than God should lose the Honour of his Justice. This great Obex, or Bar to our Enjoyment of God is effectually removed by the Death of Christ: Whereby it is not only fully satisfied, but highly honoured and glorified, Rom. 3. 24. And so the way by which we are brought to God is again opened (to the Wonder and Joy of all Believers) by the Blood and Sufferings of Christ.

Fifthly, and Lastly, It shews us the peculiar Happiness and Privilege of Believers above all People in the World. These only are they which shall be brought to God by Jesus Christ in a reconciled state: Others indeed shall be brought to God as a Judge, to be condemned by him: Believers only are brought to God in the Mediators Hand, as a reconciled Father to be made blessed for ever in the Enjoyment of him: Every Believer is brought singly to God at his Death, Luke 16. 22. And all Be-

Believers shall be jointly and solemnly presented to God in the great Day, Col. 1. 22. Jude v. 24. They shall be all presented Faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding Joy. Now the Privilege of Believers in that Day will lie in divers things.

First, That they shall be all brought to God together: This will be the general Assembly mentioned, Heb. 12. 22. There shall be a Collection of all Believers in all Ages of the World into one blessed Assembly: They shall come from the East and West, and North and South, and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God, Luke 13. 29. O what a glorious train will be seen following the Redeemer in that Day!

Secondly, As all the Saints shall be collected into one Body: So they shall be all brought or presented unto God, Faultless and without Blemish, Jude v. 24. A glorious Church without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, Eph. 5. 27. For this is the general Assembly of the Spirits of just Men that are made perfect, Heb. 12. 23. All Sin was perfectly separated from them, when Death had separated their Souls and Bodies.

Thirdly, In this lies the Privilege of Believers, that as they shall be all brought together, and that in a state of absolute Purity and Perfection, so they shall be all brought to God: They shall see his Face, in the Vision whereof is fulness of Joy, and at whose Right-hand are Pleasures for evermore, Psalm 16. 11. The objective Blessedness of the Saints consisteth in their Fruition of God, Psalm 73. 25. To see God in his Word and Works, is the Happiness of the Saints on Earth, but to see him Face to Face will be the fulness of their Blessedness in Heaven, 1 John 3. 2. This is that intuitive, transforming and satisfying Vision of which the Scripture frequently speaks, Psalm 17. 15. 2 Cor. 15. 28. Rev. 7. 17.

Fourthly, To be brought unto God, must needs imply a state of perfect Joy and highest Delight: So speaks the Apostle, Jude v. 14. Christ shall present or bring them to God with exceeding Joy: And more fully the Joy of this Day is expressed, Psal. 45. 15. With Joy and rejoicing shall they be brought, they shall enter into the King's Palace: It will be a day of universal Joy, when all the Saints are brought home to God in a perfected state. For,

1. God the Father will rejoice when Christ brings home that precious number of his Elect, whom he redeemed by his Blood: He rejoiceth in them now though imperfect, and under many distastful Corruptions and Weaknesses, Zeph. 3. 17. How much more will he rejoice in them when Christ presents them without Spot or Wrinkle to him, Ephes. 5. 27.

2. Jesus Christ will exceedingly rejoice, 'twill be the Day of Gladness and Satisfaction of his Heart: For now, and not till now he receives his mystical Fulness, Col. 1. 24. beholds all the blessed Issues of his Death, which cannot but give him unspeakable Contentment, Isa. 53. 11. He shall see of the travail of his Soul, and shall be satisfied.

3. The Day in which Believers are brought home to God, will be a Day of unspeakable Joy to the holy Spirit of God himself. For unto this all his sanctifying Designs in this World had respect: To this Day he sealed them: After this he stirred up Desires and Groanings that cannot be uttered in their Hearts, Ephes. 4. 30. Rom. 8. 26. Thus all the great and blessed Persons, Father, Son and Spirit, will rejoice in the bringing home of the Elect to God. For as it is the greatest Joy to a Man to see the Designs which his Heart hath been long projecting and intently set upon, by an orderly Conduct, at last brought to the happy Issue he first aimed at; much more will it be so here: The Counsel and Hand of each Person being deeply concerned in this blessed Design.

4. The Angels of God will rejoice at the bringing home of Believers to him: The Spirits of just Men made perfect will be united in one general Assembly with an innumerable Company of Angels, Heb. 2. 22. Great is the Affection and Love of Angels to redeemed ones: They greatly rejoiced at the Incarnation of Christ for them, Luke 2. 13. They greatly delighted to pry into the Mystery of their Redemption, 1 Pet. 1. 12. They were marvellously delighted at their Conversion, which was the Day of their Espousals to Christ, Luke 15. 10. They have been tender and careful over them, and very serviceable to them in this World, Heb. 1. 14. and therefore cannot but rejoice exceedingly to see them all brought home in safety to their Father's House.

5. To conclude Christ's bringing home of all Believers unto God, will be matter of unspeakable Joy to themselves. For whatever Knowledge and Acquaintance they had with God here, whatever Sights of Faith they had of Heaven and the Glory to come in this World; yet the sight of God and Christ the Redeemer will be an unspeakable surprise to them in that Day. This will be the Day of relieving all their Wants; the Day of Satisfaction to all their Desires: For now they are come where they would be; arrived at the very Desires of their Souls.

Secondly, In the last place, let it be considered what influence the Death of Christ hath upon this Design, and you will find it much every way. In two things especially the Death of Christ hath a blessed Causality and Influence in this matter, viz.

1. It effectually removes all Obstacles to it.
2. It purchaseth (as a price) their Title to it.

First, The Death of Christ removes all Obstacles out of the way of this Mercy: Such were the Bars hindring our access to God, as nothing but the Death of Christ could remove and open a way for Believers to come to God. The Guilt of Sin barred us from his gracious Presence, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. Hosea 14. 2. The filth of Sin excludes us from God, Hab. 1. 13. Heb. 12. 14. The Enmity of our Nature perfectly stopped up our way to God, Col. 1. 21. Rom. 8. 7. by reason hereof fallen Man hath no Desire to come unto God, Job 21. 14. The Justice of God like a flaming Sword turning every way; kept all Men from access to God: And lastly, Satan that malicious and armed Adversary lay as a Lyon in the way to God, 2 Pet. 5. 8. Oh with what strong Bars were the Gates of Heaven shut against our Souls! The way to God was chained up with such Difficulties as none but Christ was able to remove; and he by Death hath effectually removed them all: The way is now open, even the new and the living way, consecrated for us by his Blood. The Death of Christ effectually removes the guilt of Sin, 1 Pet. 2. 24. washes off the filth of Sin, 1 John 5. 6. takes away the Enmity of Sin, Col. 1. 20, 21. satisfies all the demands of Nature, Rom. 3. 25, 26. hath broken all the Power of Satan, Col. 2. 15. Heb. 2. 14. and consequently the way to God is effectually and fully opened to Believers by the Blood of Jesus, Heb. 10. 20.

Gal. 4. 4, 5. But when the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law: To redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons, (i. e.) both the Relation and Inheritance of Sons. There was value and worth enough in the precious Blood of Chriſt, not only to pay all our Debts to Juſtice, but over and above the Payment of our Debts, to purchaſe for us this invaluable Privilege. We muſt put this unſpeakable Mercy of being brought to God, as my Text puts it, upon the account and ſcore of the Death of Chriſt. No Believer had ever taſted the Sweetneſs of ſuch a Mercy, if Chriſt had not taſted the Bitterneſs of Death for him. The uſe of all you will have in the following Deductions of Truth.

Deduction 1. Great is the preciouſneſs and worth of Souls that the life of Chriſt ſhould be given to redeem and recover them to God: As God laid out his Thoughts and Counſel from Eternity upon them to project the Way and Method of their Salvation: So the Lord Jeſus in purſuance of that bleſſed Deſign, came from the Boſom of the Father, and ſpilt his invaluable Blood to bring them to God. No wiſe Man expends vaſt Sums to bring home trifling Commodities. How cheap ſoever our Souls are in our Eſtimation, 'tis evident by this they are of precious eſteem in the Eyes of Chriſt.

Deduction 2. Redeemed Souls muſt expect no reſt or ſatisfaction on this ſide Heaven, and the full Enjoyment of God: The Life of a Believer in this World, is a Life of Motion and Expectation: They are now coming to God, 1 Pet. 2. 4. God, you ſee, is the centre and reſt of their Souls, Heb. 4. 9. As the Rivers cannot reſt till they pour themſelves into the Boſom of the Sea, ſo neither can renewed Souls find reſt till they come into the Boſom of God. There be four things which do and will break the reſt and diſturb the Souls of Believers in this World; Afflictions, Temptations, Corruptions, and abſence from God: if the three former Cauſes of Diſquietneſs were totally removed, ſo that a Believer were placed in ſuch a Condition upon Earth where no Affliction ſhould diſturb him, no Temptation trouble him, no Corruption defile or grieve him: Yet his very Abſence from God muſt ſtill keep him reſtleſs and unſatisfied, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Whilſt we are at home in the Body, we are abſent from the Lord.

Feciſti nos ad te, & inquietum eſt cor noſtrum donec requieſcat in te. Aug. confeſſ. lib. 1. Cap. 1.

Deduction 3. What ſweet and pleaſant Thoughts ſhould all Believers have of Death! When they die, and never till they die ſhall they be fully brought home to God. Death to the Saints is the Door by which they enter into the Enjoyment of God: The dying Chriſtian is almoſt at home, yet a few Pangs and Agonies more, and then he is come to God in whoſe Preſence is the fulneſs of Joy. I deſire, ſaith Paul to depart and to be with Chriſt, which is far better, Phil. 1. 23. It ſhould not ſcare us to be brought to Death, the King of Terrors, ſo long as it is the Office of Death to bring us to God. That dreaming Opinion of the Soul ſleeping after Death is ungrounded as it is uncomfortable: The ſame Day we looſe from this Shore, we ſhall be landed upon the bleſſed Shore, where we ſhall ſee and enjoy God for ever. O! if the Friends of dead Believers did but underſtand where, and with whom their Souls are, whilſt they are Mourning over their Bodies: Certainly a few believing Thoughts of this would quickly dry up their Tears, and fill the Houſe of Mourning with Voices of Praiſe and Thankſgiving.

Deduction 4. How comfortable and ſweet ſhould the Converſes and Communication of Chriſtians be with one another in this World! Chriſt is bringing them all to God through this Vale of Tears, they are now in the way to him, all bound for Heaven, going home to God to their everlaſting reſt in Glory: Every Day, every Hour, every Duty brings them nearer and nearer to their Journeys end, Rom. 13. 11. Now, ſaith the Apoſtle, is our Salvation nearer than when we believed. O what manner of heavenly Communications and raviſhing Diſcourſes ſhould Believers have with each other as they walk by the way! O what pleaſant and delightful Stories ſhould they tell one another about the Place and State whither Chriſt is bringing them, and where they ſhall ſhortly be! What raviſhing, tranſporting, transforming Viſions they ſhall have that Day they are brought home to God: How ſurprizingly glorious the ſight of Jeſus Chriſt will be to them, who died for them to bring them unto God. How ſhould ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe ſhorten and ſweeten their Paſſage through this World; ſtrengthen and encourage the dejected and feeble minded, and exceedingly honour and adorn their Profeſſion! Thus lived the Believers of old, Heb. 11. 9, 10. By Faith he ſojourned in the Land of Promiſe, as in a ſtrange Country, dwelling in Tabernacles with Iſaac and Jacob, the Heirs with him of the ſame Promiſe, for he looked for a City which hath Foundations, whoſe Builder and Maker is God. But alas! moſt Chriſtians are either entangled in the Cares and Troubles, or ſo enſnared by the Delights and Pleaſures, which almoſt continually divert and take up their Thoughts by the way, that there is but little room for any Diſcourſes of Chriſt and Heaven among many of them: But certainly this would be as much your Intereſt as your Duty. When the Apoſtle had entertained the Theſſalonians with a lovely Diſcourſe of their meeting the Lord in the Air, and being ever with the Lord, he charges it upon them as their great Duty to comfort one another with thoſe Words, 1 Theſ. 4. 17, 18.

Deduction 5. How unreaſonable are the Dejections of Believers upon the account of thoſe Troubles which they meet with in this World! 'Tis true, Afflictions of all kinds do attend Believers in their way to God; through many Tribulations we muſt enter into that Kingdom: But what then? Muſt we deſpond and droop under them as other Men? Surely no, if Afflictions be the way through which you muſt come to God, then never be diſcouraged at Affliction. Troubles and Afflictions are of excellent uſe under the Bleſſing of the Spirit to further Chriſt's great Deſign of bringing you to God. How often would you turn out of that way which leads to God, if God did not hedge up your way with Thorns, Hoſea 2. 6. Doubtleſs when you come home to God, you ſhall find you have been as much beholding (it may be a great deal more) to your Troubles than to your Comforts, for bringing you thither: However, the ſweetneſs of the end will infinitely more than recompence the Sorrows and Troubles of the Way: nor are they worthy to be compared with the Glory that ſhall be revealed in you, Rom. 8. 18.

Deduction 6. How much are all Believers obliged in Point of Intereſt to follow Jeſus Chriſt whitherſoever he goes! Thus are the Saints deſcribed, Rev. 14. 4. Theſe are they which follow the Lamb whitherſoever he goeth: Theſe were redeemed from among Men, being the first-fruits unto God, and to the Lamb. If it be the design of Christ to bring us to God, then certainly it is our Duty to follow Christ in all the Paths of Active and Passive Obedience through which he now leads us, as ever we expect to be brought home to God at last: We are made Partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our Confidence stedfast unto the end, Heb. 3. 14. If we have followed him through many Sufferings and Troubles, and shall turn away from him at last, we lose all that we have wrought and suffered in Religion, and shall never reach home to God at last: The Crown of Life belongs only to them who are faithful to the Death.

Deduction 7. Let all that desire or expect to come unto God hereafter, come to Christ by Faith now. There is no other way to the Father but by Christ: No other way to Christ but Faith: How vain therefore are the Hopes and Expectations of all Unbelievers? Be assured of this great Truth, Death shall bring you to God as an avenging Judge, if Christ do not bring you now to God as a reconciled Father: Without Holiness no Man shall see God: The door of Hope is shut against all Christless Persons, John 14. 6. No Man cometh unto the Father but by me. Oh what a sweet Voice cometh down from Heaven to your Souls this day, saying, As ever you expect or hope to come to God and enjoy the Blessedness that is here, come unto Christ, obey his Calls, give up your selves to his Conduct and Government, and you must certainly be brought to God: As sure as you shall now be brought to Jesus Christ by spiritual Union, so sure shall you be brought to God in full Fruition.

Blessed be God for Jesus Christ, the new and living way to the Father.

And thus I have finished the Motives drawn from the Titles and Benefits of Christ, serving to enforce and quicken the great Gospel-Exhortation of coming to, and effectually applying the Lord Jesus Christ in the way of Faith. O that the Blessings of the Spirit might follow these Calls, and fix these Considerations as Nails in sure Places. But seeing the great Hindrance and Obstruction of Faith is the false Opinion and Perswasion of most unregenerate Men, that they are already in Christ; my next Work therefore shall be in a second Use of Conviction to undeceive Men in that Matter; and that by shewing them the undoubted certainty of these two things:

First, That there is no coming ordinarily to Christ without the Applications of the Law to our Consciences in a way of effectual Conviction.

Secondly, Nor by that neither without the Teachings of God, in the way of spiritual Illumination. The first of these will be fully confirmed and opened in SERMON XX.

ROM. VII. ix.

For I was alive without the Law once, but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died.

Serm. 20. Text. The great usefulness of the Law or Word of God, in order to the Application of Christ.

THE Scope of the Apostle in this Epistle, and more particularly in this Chapter, is to state the due Use and Excellency of the Law, which he doth accordingly,

First, By denying to it, Power to justifie us, which is the peculiar Honour of Christ.

Secondly, By ascribing to it a Power to convince us, and so prepare us for Christ.

Neither attributing to it more Honour than belongeth to it, nor yet detracting from it that Honour and Usefulness which God hath given it. It cannot make us righteous; but it can convince us that we are unrighteous; it cannot heal, but it can open and discover the Wounds that Sin hath given us; which he proves in this Place by an Argument drawn from his own Experience, confirmed also by the general Experience of Believers, in whose Persons and Names we must here understand him to speak; For I was alive without the Law once, but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died: Wherein three Particulars are very observable.

First, The Opinion Paul had, and all unregenerate Men have of themselves before Conversion: I was alive once: By Life understand here liveliness, chearfulness, and confidence of his good Estate and Condition: He was full of vain Hope, false Joy, and presumptuous Confidence, a very brisk and jovial Man.

Secondly, The Sense and Opinion he had, and all others will have of themselves, if ever they come under the regenerating Work of the Spirit in his ordinary Method of working: I died. The Death here speaks of, stands opposed to that Life before mentioned; and signifies the Sorrows, Fears and Tremblings that seized upon his Soul, when his State and Temper were upon the Change: The Apprehensions he then had of his Condition struck him home to the Heart, and damped all his carnal Mirth: I died.

Thirdly, The Ground and Reason of this wonderful Alteration and Change of his Judgment, and Apprehension of his own Condition; the Commandment came, and Sin revived; the Commandment came, (i. e.) it came home to my Conscience, it was set on with a divine and mighty Efficacy upon my Heart: The Commandment was come before by way of Promulgation and the litteral Knowledge of it: But it never came till now in the spiritual Sense and convincing Power to his Soul: Though he had often read and heard the Law before, yet he never clearly understood the meaning and extent, he never felt the mighty Efficacy thereof upon his Heart before; it so came at this time, as it never came before. From hence the Observations are,

Doct. 1. That unregenerate Persons are generally full of groundless Confidence and Chearfulness, though their Condition be sad and miserable.

Doct. 2. That there is a mighty Efficacy in the Word or Law of God to kill vain Confidence, and queneh carnal Mirth

Mirth in the Hearts of Men, when God ſets it home upon their Conſciences.

We ſhall take both theſe Points under Conſideration, and improve them to the Deſign in Hand.

Doct. 1. That unregenerate Perſons are generally full of groundleſs Confidence and Chearfulneſs, though their Condition be ſad and miſerable, Rev. 3. 17. Becauſe thou ſayſt I am rich and increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing; and knoweſt not that thou art wretched, and miſerable, and poor, and blind, and naked: This is the very Life that unregenerate Men do live. In the opening whereof I will ſhew you,

1. What is the Life of the unregenerate.
2. What maintains that Life.
3. How it appears that this is the Life the generality of the World do live.
4. The danger of living ſuch a Life as this: And then apply it.

Firſt, What is the Life of the unregenerate, and wherein it conſiſts? Now there being among others three things in which the Life of the unregenerate doth principally conſiſt, viz.

Carnal Security,
Preſumptuous Hope, and Falſe Joy:
Of theſe briefly in their Order.

Firſt, There is in unregenerate Men a great deal of carnal Security, they dread no danger, Luke 11. 21. When a ſtrong Man armed keepeth his Palace, his goods are in Peace: There is generally a great ſtillneſs and ſilence in the Conſciences of ſuch Men: When others (in a better Condition) are watching and trembling, they ſleep ſecurely, ſo they live, and ſo oft-times they die, Pſalm 73. 4. They have no Bonds in their Death; Hebrew, no Knot, no Difficulties that puzzle them: 'Tis true, the Conſciences of few Men are ſo perfectly ſtupified, but that ſometime or other they twinge and gird them, but it ſeldom works at that height, or continues with them ſo long as to give any conſiderable interruption to their carnal Peace and Quietneſs.

Secondly, The Life of the unregenerate conſiſteth in preſumptuous Hope: This is the very Foundation of their carnal Security. So Chriſt tells the Jews, John 8. 54, 55. Of whom ye ſay that he is your God, and yet ye have not known him. The World is full of Hope without a Promiſe, which is but as a Spiders-web when a ſtreſs comes to be laid upon it, Job 27. 8. Unregenerate Men are ſaid indeed to be without Hope, Epheſ. 2. 12. But the meaning is, they are without any ſolid well-grounded Hope: For in Scripture account, vain Hope is no Hope, except it be a lively Hope, 1 Pet. 1. 3. A Hope growing from Union with Chriſt, Col. 1. 27. A Hope nouriſhed by Experience, Rom. 5. 4. A Hope for which a Man can give a Reaſon, 1 Pet. 3. 15. An Hope that puts Men upon Heart purifying Endeavours, 1 John 3. 3. It is in the account of God a Cypher, a Vanity, not deſerving the Name of Hope: And yet ſuch a groundleſs, dead, Chriſtleſs, irrational, idle Hope is that which the unregenerate lives upon.

Thirdly, The Life of the unregenerate conſiſteth in falſe Joy, the immediate Off-ſpring of unfounded Hope, Mat. 13. 20. The ſtony ground received the Word with Joy.

There are two ſorts of Joy upon which the unregenerate live, viz.

1. A ſenſitive Joy in things Carnal.
2. A deluſive Joy in things Spiritual.

They rejoice in Corn, Wine and Oyl, in their Eſtates and Children, in the pleaſant Fruitions of the Creature: Yea, and they rejoice alſo in Chriſt and the Promiſes, in Heaven and in Glory: With all which they have juſt ſuch a kind of Communion as a Man hath in a Dream with a full Feaſt and curious Muſick, and juſt ſo their Joy will vaniſh when they awake. Now theſe three, Security, Hope and Joy, make up the Livelihood of the carnal World.

Secondly, Next it concerns us to enquire what are the things that maintain and ſupport this Security, Hope and Joy in the Hearts of unregenerate Men; and if we conſider duly, we ſhall find Church Privileges, natural Ignorance, falſe Evidences of the Love of God, ſlight Workings of the Goſpel, Self-love, comparing themſelves with the more prophane; and Satan's Policy managing all theſe in order to their eternal Ruin; are ſo many Springs to feed and maintain this Life of Deluſion in the unregenerate.

1. Firſt, Church Privileges lay the Foundation to this ſtrong Deluſion: Thus the Jews deceived themſelves, ſaying in their Hearts, we have Abraham for our Father, Mat. 3. 9. This propt up their vain Hopes that Abraham's Blood ran in their Veins, though Abraham's Faith and Obedience never wrought in their Hearts.

2. Secondly, Natural Ignorance, this keeps all in Peace; they that ſee not, fear not. There are but two ways to quiet the Hearts of Men about their ſpiritual and eternal Concernments, viz. the way of Aſſurance and Faith, or the way of Ignorance and Self-deceit: By the one we are put beyond danger, by the other beyond fear, though the danger be greater. Satan could never quiet Men if he did not firſt blind them.

3. Thirdly, Falſe evidence of the Love of God is another Spring feeding this Security, vain Hope, and falſe Joy in the Hearts of Men: See the Power of it to huſh and ſtill the Conſcience, Mat. 7. 22: Many will ſay to me in that day; Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy Name, &c. The things upon which they built their Evidence and Confidence were external things in Religion, yet they had a quieting Power upon them as if they had been the beſt Evidences in the World.

4. Fourthly, Slight workings of the Goſpel, ſuch are tranſient Motions of the Affections under the Word, Heb. 6. 8. the working of their deſires about ſpiritual Objects, John 6. 34. Mat. 15. 8. the eternal Change and Reformation of their Ways, Mat. 12. 43. all which ſerve to nouriſh the vain Hopes of the unregenerate.

5. Fifthly, Self-love is an apparent Reaſon and ground of Security and falſe Hope, Mat. 7. 3. It makes a Man to overlook great Evils in himſelf, whilſt he is ſharp ſighted to diſcover and cenſure leſſer Evils in others: Self-love takes away the ſight of Sin, by bringing it too near the Eye.

6. Sixthly, Mens comparing themſelves with thoſe that are more prophane and groſly wicked than themſelves, ſerves notably to quiet and huſh the Conſcience aſleep; God, I thank thee, ſaid the Phariſee, I am not as other Men, or as this Publican. O what a Saint did he ſeem to himſelf, when he ſtood by thoſe that were more externally wicked!

7. Seventhly and Laſtly, The Policy of Satan to manage all theſe things to the blinding and ruining of the Souls of Men, is another great Reaſon they live ſo ſecurely and pleaſantly as they do, in a ſtate of ſo much Danger and Miſery, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

The God of this World blinds the Eyes of them that believe not.

Thirdly, You have ſeen what the Life of the unregenerate is, and what maintains that Life: In the next Place I ſhall give you Evidence that this is the Life the generality of the World do live: A Life of carnal Security, vain Hope and falſe Joy: This will evidently appear, if we conſider, Firſt, The activity and livelineſs of Mens Spirits in purſuit of the World. O how lively and vigorous are their Hearts in the Management of earthly Deſigns, Pſal. 6. 4. Who will ſhew us any good? The World eats up their Hearts, time and ſtrength. Now this could never be if their Eyes were but opened to ſee the Danger and Miſery their Souls be in: How few Deſigns for the World run in the Thoughts of a condemned Man? O if God had ever made the Light of Conviction to ſhine into their Conſciences, certainly the Temptations would lie the quite contrary Way; even in too great a neglect of things of this Life: But this Briskneſs and Livelineſs plainly ſhews the great Security which is upon moſt Men.

Secondly, The marvellous Quietneſs and Stillneſs that is in the Thoughts and Conſciences of Men, about their everlaſting Concernments plainly ſhews this to be the Life of the unregenerate: How few Scruples, Doubts or Fears ſhall you hear from them? How many Years may a Man live in carnal Families before he ſhall hear ſuch a Queſtion as this ſeriouſly propounded, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? There are no Queſtions in their Lips, becauſe no Fear or Senſe of Danger in their Hearts.

Thirdly, The general Contentedneſs and profeſt Willingneſs of carnal Men to die, gives clear Evidence that ſuch a Life of Security and vain Hope is the Life they live; Like Sheep they are laid in the Grave, Pſal. 49. 14. O how quiet and ſtill are their Conſciences, when there are but a few Breaths more between them and everlaſting Burnings! Had God opened their Eyes to apprehend the Conſequences of Death, and what follows the pale Horſe, Rev. 6. 8. It were impoſſible but that every unregenerate Man ſhould make that Bed on which he dies ſhake and tremble under him.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, The low Eſteem Men have for Chriſt, and the total Neglect of, at leaſt the meer trifling with, thoſe Duties in which he is to be found, plainly diſcovers this ſtupid ſecured Life to be the Life that the generality of the World do live: For were Men ſenſible of the Diſeaſe of Sin, there could be no quieting them without Chriſt the Phyſician, Phil. 3. 8. All the Buſineſs they have to do in this World could never keep them from their Knees, or make them Strangers to their Cloſets: All which, and much more that might be ſaid of like nature, gives too full and clear Proof to this ſad Aſſertion, that this is the Life the unregenerate World generally lives.

Fourthly, In the laſt Place I would ſpeak a few Words to diſcover the Danger of ſuch a Life as hath been deſcribed, to which purpoſe let the following brief Hints be minded ſeriouſly.

Firſt, By theſe things Souls are inevitably betrayed into Hell and eternal Ruin, this blinding is in order to damning, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. If our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt; whoſe Eyes the God of this World hath blinded: Thoſe that are turned over into eternal Death are thus generally mop'd and hoodwinkt in order thereunto, Iſa. 6. 9, 10. And he ſaid go and tell this People, hear ye indeed but underſtand not, and ſee ye indeed but perceive not: Make the Heart of this People fat, and make their Ears heavy, and ſhut their Eyes; leſt they ſee with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears and underſtand with their Hearts, and convert, and be healed.

Secondly, As damning is the Event of blinding, ſo nothing makes Hell a more terrible ſurpriſe to the Soul than this doth: By this Means the Wrath of God is felt before its Danger be apprehended, a Man is paſt all Hope before he begins to have any Fear: His eternal Ruin like a Breach ready to fall, ſwelling out in a high Wall cometh ſuddenly at an Inſtant, Iſa. 30. 13. and as it damns ſurely and ſurprizingly, ſo, Thirdly, Nothing more aggravates a Man's Damnation than to ſink ſuddenly into it, from amidſt ſo many Hopes and high Confidence of Safety: For a Man to find himſelf in Hell when he thought and concluded himſelf within a ſtep of Heaven, O what a Hell will it be to ſuch Men! The higher vain Hopes lifted them up, the more dreadful muſt their Fall be, Mat. 7. 22. And as it damns ſurely, ſurprizingly, and with higheſt Aggravations, So, Fourthly, This Life of Security and vain Hope fruſtrates all the Means of Recovery and Salvation in the only Seaſon, wherein they can be uſeful and beneficial to us: By reaſon of theſe things the Word hath no Power to convince Mens Conſciences, nothing can bring them to a Sight and Senſe of their Condition: Therefore Chriſt told the Self-confident and blind Jews, Mat. 21. 21. That the Publicans and Harlots go into the Kingdom of God before them: And the reaſon is, becauſe their Hearts lie more open and fair to the ſtrokes of Conviction and Compunction for Sin than thoſe do, who are blinded by vain Hopes and Confidences.

Infer. 1. Is this the Life that the unregenerate World lives? Then it is not to be wondered at, that the Preaching of the Goſpel hath ſo little Succeſs: Who hath believed our Report (ſaith the Prophet) and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? Iſa. 53. 1. Miniſters ſtudy for Truths apt to awaken and convince the Conſciences of them that hear them, but their Words return again to them: They turn to God and mourn over the Matter, we have laboured in vain, and ſpent our ſtrength for nought; and this is the cauſe of all Security, and vain Hopes bar faſt the Doors of Mens Hearts againſt all the Convictions and Perſwaſions of the Word: The greater cauſe have they to admire the grace of God, who have or ſhall find the Convictions of the Word ſharper than any twoedged Sword piercing to the dividing aſunder of the Soul and Spirit: To whoſe Hearts God brings home the Commandment by an effectual Application.

Infer. 2. If this be the Life of the unregenerate World what deadly Enemies are they that nouriſh and ſtrengthen the groundleſs Confidences and vain Hopes of Salvation in Men! This the Scripture calls the healing of the hurt of Souls ſlightly, by crying Peace, Peace when there is no Peace, Jer. 6. 14, The ſowing of Pillows under their Arm-holes, Ezek. 13. 18. That they may lie ſoft and eaſie under the Miniſtery: And this is the Doctrine which the People love, but O what will the end of theſe things be! And what an account have thoſe Men to give to God for the Blood of thoſe Souls by them betrayed to the everlaſting Burnings! Such Flattery is the greateſt Cruelty: Thoſe whom you bleſs upon Earth will curſe you in Hell, and the Day in which they truſted their Souls to your Conduct.

Infer.

Infer. 3. How great a Mercy is it to be awakened out of that general Sleep and Security which is fallen upon the World? You cannot eſtimate the value of that Mercy, for it is a peculiar Mercy. O that ever the Spirit of the Lord ſhould give thy Soul a jog under the Miniſtry of the Word, ſtartle, and rouſe thy Conſcience, whilſt others are left ſnoring in the dead Sleep of Security round about thee: When the Lord ſhall deal with thy Soul much after that rate he did with Paul in the way to Damaſcus, who not only ſaw a Light ſhining from Heaven, which thoſe that travelled with him ſaw as well as he, but heard that Voice from Heaven which did the Work upon his Heart, though his Companions heard it not. Beſides, it is not only a peculiar Mercy, but it is a leading introductive Mercy to all other ſpiritual Mercies that follow it to all Eternity: If God had not done this for thee, thou hadſt never been brought to Faith, to Chriſt or Heaven: From this Act of the Spirit all other ſaving Acts take their Riſe: So that you have Cauſe for ever to admire the Goodneſs of God in ſuch a Favour as this is.

Infer. 4. Laſtly, Hence it follows, that the generality of the World are in the direct Way to eternal Ruin, and whatever their vain Confidences are, they cannot be ſaved: Narrow is the way, and ſtrait is the Gate that leadeth unto Life, and few there be that find it. Hear me all you that live this dangerous Life of carnal Security and vain Hope, whatever your Perſwaſions and Confidences are; except you give them up and get better grounds for your Hope, you cannot be ſaved. For, Firſt, Such Hopes and Confidences as yours are directly contradictory to the eſtabliſhed Order of the Goſpel, which requires Repentance, Acts 5. 31. Faith, Acts 13. 39. And Regeneration, Joh. 3. 3. In all that ſhall be ſaved: And this Order ſhall never be altered for any Man's ſake.

Secondly, If ſuch as you be ſaved, all the Threatnings in Scripture muſt be reverſed, which lie in full Oppoſition to your vain Hopes, Mark 16. 16. John 3. 16. Rom. 3. 8, 9. either the Truth of God in theſe Threatnings muſt fail, or your vain Hopes muſt fail.

Thirdly, If ever ſuch as you be ſaved, new Conditions muſt be ſet to all the Promiſes: For there is no Condition of any ſpecial Promiſe found in any unregenerate Perſon. Compare your Hearts with theſe Scriptures, Mat. 5. 3, 4, 5, 6. Pſalm 24. 4. Pſalm 84. 11. Gen. 17. 1, 2.

Fourthly, If ever ſuch a Hope as yours bring you to Heaven, then the ſaving Hope of God's Elect is not rightly deſcribed to us in the Scriptures. Scripture Hope is the effect of Regeneration, 1 Pet. 1. 3. And Purity of Heart is the Effect of that Hope, 1 John 3. 3. Nay, Fifthly, The very Nature of Heaven is miſtaken in Scripture, if ſuch as you be Subjects qualified for its Enjoyment: For Aſſimilation, or the Conformity of the Soul to God in Holineſs, is in the Scripture account a principal ingredient of that Bleſſedneſs: By all which it manifeſtly appears that the Hopes of moſt Men are vain, and will never bring them to Heaven.

SERMON XXI.

DOCT. II.

That there is mighty Efficacy in the Word or Law of God, to kill vain Confidence, and quench carnal Mirth in the Hearts of Men, when God ſets it home upon their Conſciences.

rm. 21. Cor. 10. 4, 5. THE Weapons of the Word are not carnal, but mighty through God; to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, caſting down Imaginations nd every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowdge of God, and bringing into Captivity every thought the Obedience of Chriſt.

In the opening of this Point I ſhall,

1. Demonſtrate the Efficacy of the Word or Law of God.
2. Shew wherein the Efficacy thereof lies.
3. From whence it hath all this mighty Power and Efficacy.

Firſt, I ſhall give you ſome Demonſtrations of e mighty Power and Efficacy that there is in the ord or Law of God: Which will appear with ful- t Evidence.

Firſt, From the various Subjects upon whom it orks: The Hearts and Conſciences of Men of Orders and Qualities, have been reached and ounded to the quick by the two-edged Sword of od's Law. Some among the great and honourable the Earth, (though indeed the feweſt of that nk) have been made to ſtoop and tremble under e Word, Acts 24. 16. Mark 6. 20. 1 Sam. 15. 24. he wiſe and learned of the World have felt its wer, and been brought over to embrace the mbling and ſelf-denying Ways of Chriſt, Acts 17. 34. Thus Origen, Hierom, Tertullian, Bradwardine, and many more, came into Canaan laden with Ægyptian Gold, as one ſpeaks, (i. e.) they came into the Church of God abundantly enriched and furniſhed with the Learned Arts and Sciences; devoting them all to the Service of Chriſt: Yea, and which is as ſtrange, the moſt ſimple, weak and illiterate have been wonderfully changed and wrought upon by the Power of the Word: The Teſtimonies of the Lord make wiſe the ſimple. Men of weak Underſtandings in all other Matters have been made wiſe to Salvation by the Power of the Word, Matth. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 1. 27. Nay, the moſt malicious and obſtinate Enemies of Chriſt have been wounded and converted by the Word, 1 Tim. 1. 13. Acts 16. 24. Thoſe that have been under the Prejudice of the worſt, and moſt idolatrous Education, have been the Subjects of its mighty Power, Acts 19. 26. To conclude, Men of the moſt profligate and debauched Lives have been wonderfully changed, and altered by the Power of the Word, 1. Cor. 6. 10, 11.

Secondly, The mighty Efficacy of the Law of God appears in the manner of its Operation which Works ſuddenly, ſtrikes like a Dart through the Hearts and Conſciences of Men, Acts 2. 37. A wonderful change is made in a ſhort time: And as it works quickly and ſuddenly, ſo it works irreſiſtibly, with an uncontrouled Power, upon the Spirits of Men, 1 Thes. 1. 5. Rom. 1. 16. Let the Soul be armed againſt Conviction with the thickeſt Ignorance, ſtrongeſt Prejudice, or moſt obſtinate Reſolution, the Word of God will wound the Breaſt even of ſuch a Man; when God ſends it forth in his Authority and Power.

Thirdly, The wonderful Power of the Law or Word of God is evidently ſeen in the ſtrange Effects which are produced by it in the Hearts and Lives of Men. For,

Firſt, It changes and alters the Frame and Temper of the Mind: It moulds a Man into a quite contrary Temper, Gal. 1. 23. He which perſecuted us in times paſt, now preacheth the Faith, which once he deſtroyed: Thus a Tyger is transformed into a Lamb, by the Power of the Word of God.

Secondly, It makes the Soul, upon which it works to forgo and quit the deareſt Intereſt it hath in this World for Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 3. 7, 8, 9. Riches, Honours, Self-righteouſneſs, deareſt Relations are denied and forſaken: Reproach, Poverty and Death it ſelf are willingly embraced for Chriſt's ſake; when once the Efficacy of the Word hath been upon the Hearts of Men, 1 Theſ. 1. 6. Thoſe that were their Companions in Sin are declined, renounced and caſt off with abhorrence, 1 Pet. 4. 3, 4. In ſuch things as theſe the mighty Power of the Word diſcovers it ſelf.

Secondly, Next let us ſee wherein the Efficacy of the Word upon the Souls of Men principally conſiſteth: And we find in Scripture it exerteth its Power in five diſtinct Acts upon the Soul; by all which it ſtrikes at the Life and kills the very Heart of vain Hopes. For, Firſt, It hath an awakening Efficacy upon ſecure and ſleepy Sinners: It rouzes the Conſcience, and brings a Man to a ſenſe and feeling Apprehenſion, Eph. 5. 13, 14. The firſt effectual jog or touch of the Word ſtartles the drouſie Conſcience. A poor Sinner lies in his Sins, as Peter did in his Chains, faſt aſleep, though a Warrant were ſigned for his Execution the next Day: But the Spirit in the Word awakens him, as the Angel did Peter: And this awakening Power of the Word is in order both of Time and Nature antecedent to all its other Operations and Effects.

Secondly, The Law of God hath an enlightning Efficacy upon the Minds of Men: 'Tis Eye-ſalve to the blinded Eye, Rev. 3. 18. A light ſhining in a dark Place, 2 Pet. 1. 19. A Light ſhining into the very Heart of Man, 2 Cor. 4. 6. When the Word comes in Power, all things appear with another Face: The Sins that were hid from our Eyes, and the danger which was concealed by the Policy of Satan from our Souls, now lie clear and open before us, Eph. 5. 8.

Thirdly, The Word of God hath a convincing Efficacy: It ſets Sin in order before the Soul, Pſal 50. 21. As an Army is drawn up in exact order, ſo are the ſins of Nature and Practice, the ſins of Youth and Age, even a great and terrible Army is drawn up before the Eye of the Conſcience; the Convictions of the Word are clear and full, 1 Cor. 14, 24, 25. The very ſecrets of a Sinner's Heart are made manifeſt; his Mouth is ſtopt; his Pleas are ſilenced; his Conſcience yields to the Charge of Guilt, and Equity of the Sentence of the Law. So that the Soul ſtands mute, and ſelf-condemned at the Bar of Conſcience: It hath got nothing to ſay why the Wrath of God ſhould not come upon it to the uttermoſt, Rom. 3. 19.

Fourthly, The Law of God hath a Soul-wounding, an Heart-cutting Efficacy: It pierces into the very Soul and Spirit of Man, Acts 2. 37. When they heard this, they were pricked at their Hearts, and ſaid unto Peter, and to the reſt of the Apoſtles; Men and Brethren what ſhall we do? A dreadful ſound is in the Sinner's Ears, his Soul is in deep Diſtreſs, he knows not which way to turn for eaſe; no Plaiſter but the Blood of Chriſt can heal theſe wounds which the Word makes: No outward Trouble, Affliction, diſgrace or loſs ever touched the quick as the Word of God doth.

Fifthly, The Word hath a Heart-turning, a Soul-converting Efficacy in it: 'Tis a regenerating as well as a convincing Word, 1 Pet. 1. 23. 1 Theſ. 1. 9. The Law wounds, the Goſpel cures, the Law diſcovers the evil that is in Sin, and the Miſery that follows Sin: And the Spirit of God working in fellowſhip with the Word effectually turns the Heart from Sin. And thus we ſee in what glorious Acts, the Efficacy of the Word diſcovers it ſelf upon the Hearts of Men, and all theſe Acts lie in order to each other: For until the Soul be awakened it cannot be enlightned, Eph. 5. 14. Till it be enlightned it cannot be convinced, Eph. 5. 13. Conviction being nothing elſe, but the Application of the Light that ſhines in the Mind to the Conſcience of a Sinner; till it be convinced, it cannot be wounded for ſin, Acts 2. 37. And until it be wounded for Sin, it will never be converted from ſin, and brought effectually to Jeſus Chriſt: And thus you ſee what the Power of the Word is.

Thirdly, In the laſt Place, it will concern us to enquire whence the Word of God hath all this Power; and it is moſt certain that it is not a Power inherent in it ſelf, nor derived from the Inſtrument by which it is managed; but from the Spirit of the Lord who communicates to it all that Power and Efficacy which it hath upon our Souls.

Firſt, Its Power is not in or from it ſelf: It Works not in a Phyſical Way as Natural Agents do; for then the effect would always follow, except it were miraculouſly hindred. But this ſpiritual Efficacy is in the Word, as the healing Vertue was in the Waters of Bethesda, Joh. 5. 4. An Angel went down at a certain ſeaſon into the Pool, and troubled the Water: Whoſoever then firſt after the troubling of the Water ſtepped in, was made whole of whatſoever diſeaſe he had. It is not a Power naturally inherent in it at all Times, but communicated to it at ſome ſpecial Seaſons: How often is the Word Preached, and no Man awaked or convinced by it!

Secondly, The Power of the Word is not communicated to it by the Inſtrument that manageth it, 1 Cor. 3. 7. Neither is he that planteth any thing; neither he that watereth. Miniſters are nothing to ſuch an Effect and Purpoſe as this is: He doth not mean that they are uſeleſs and altogether unneceſſary, but inſufficient of themſelves to produce ſuch mighty Effects: It Works not as it is the Word of Man, 1 Theſ. 2. 13. Miniſters may ſay of the ordinary, as Peter ſaid of the extraordinary Effects of the Spirit, Acts 3. 12. Ye Men of Iſrael why marvel ye at this, or why look ye ſo earneſtly on us, as though by our own Power or Holineſs we had made this Man to walk? If the Effects of the Word were in the Power, and at the Command of him that Preacheth it, then the Blood of all the Souls that periſh under our Miniſtry muſt lie at our door, as was formerly noted.

Thirdly, If you ſay, whence then hath the Word all this Power? Our Anſwer is, it derives it all from the Spirit of God, 1 Theſ. 2. 13. For this cauſe cause thank we God without ceasing, because when ye received the Word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the Word of Men, but (as it is in Truth) the Word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe. 'Tis a successful Instrument only when it is in the Hand of the Spirit, without whose influence it never did, nor can convince, convert, or save any Soul. Now, the Spirit of God hath a Sovereignty over three Things in order to the Conversion of the Sinner, viz.

1. Over the Word which Works.
2. Over the Soul wrought upon.
3. Over the Time and Season of working.

First, The Spirit has a glorious sovereignty over the Word itself, whose Instrument it is, to make it successful or not; as it pleaseth him, Isa. 55. 10, 11. For as the Rain cometh down, and the Snow from Heaven, &c. So shall my Word be that goeth out of my Mouth: As the Clouds, so the Word is carried and directed by Divine Pleasure? 'Tis the Lord that makes them both give down their Blessings, or to pass away Fruitless and Empty: Yea, 'tis from the Spirit that this Part of the Word works and not another: Those things upon which Ministers bestow greatest labour in their Preparation, and from which accordingly they have the greatest Expectation; these do nothing, when mean time something that dropt occasionally from them, like a chosen Shaft, strikes the Mark and doth the Work.

Secondly, The Spirit of the Lord hath a glorious sovereignty over the Souls wrought upon; 'tis his peculiar Work to take away the stony Heart out of our Flesh, and to give us an Heart of Flesh, Ezek. 36. 26. We may Reason, Exhort and Reprove, but nothing will stick till the Lord set it on. The Lord opened the Heart of Lydia under Paul's Ministry: He opens every Heart that is effectually opened to receive Christ in the Word: If the Word can get no entrance, if your Hearts remain dead under it still, we may say concerning such Souls, as Martha did concerning her Brother Lazarus; Lord if thou hadst been here, my Brother had not died. So, Lord, if thou hadst been in this Sermon; in this Prayer, or in that Counsel, these Souls had not remained dead under them.

Thirdly, The Spirit hath Dominion over the Times and Seasons of Conviction and Conversion: Therefore the Day in which Souls are wrought upon is called the Day of his Power, Psal. 110. 3. That shall work at one Time, which had no Efficacy at all at another Time: Because this, and not that was the Time appointed: And thus you see whence the Word derives that mighty Power it hath.

Now this Word of God when it is set home by the Spirit is mighty to convince, humble, and break the Hearts of Sinners, John 16. 9. The Spirit when it cometh shall convince the World of Sin: The Word signifies Conviction by such clear Demonstration as compelleth Assent: It not only convinces Men in general that they are Sinners, but it convinceth Men particularly of their own Sins, and the Aggravations of them. So in the Text, Sin revived, that is, the Lord revived his Sins, the very Circumstances and Aggravations with which they were committed: And so it will be with us when the Commandment comes: Sins that we had forgotten, committed so far back as our Youth or Childhood: Sins that lay slighted in our Consciences, shall now be rowz'd up as so many sleepy Lyons to affright and terrifie us: For now the Soul hears the Voice of God in the Word, as Adam heard it in the cool of the Day and was afraid, and hides it self; but all will not do: For the Lord is come in the Word: Sin is held up before the Eyes of the Conscience in its dreadful Aggravations and fearful Consequences as committed against the Holy Law, clear Light, warnings of Conscience, manifold Mercies, God's long-suffering, Christ's precious Blood, many warnings of Judgments, the Wages and Demerit whereof by the Verdict of a Man's own Conscience, is Death, Eternal Death, Rom. 6. 23. Rom. 1. 32. Rom. 2. 9. Thus the Commandment comes, Sin revives, and vain Hopes give up the Ghost.

Infer. 1. Is there such a mighty Power in the Word, then certainly the Word is of Divine Authority: There cannot be a more clear, and satisfying Proof that it is no human Invention, than the common sense that all Believers have of the Almighty Power in which it works upon their Hearts: So speaks the Apostle, 1 Thes. 2. 13. When ye received the Word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the Word of Man, but (as it is in Truth) the Word of God; which effectually worketh also in you that believe. Can the Power of any Creature, the Word of a meer Man, so convince the Conscience, so terrifie the Heart, so discover the very secret Thoughts of the Soul, put a Man into such Tremblings? No, no, a greater than Man must needs be here: None but a God can so open the Eyes of the Blind, so open the Graves of the Dead, so quicken and enliven the Conscience that was seared, so bind over the Soul of a Sinner to the Judgment to come, so change and alter the frame and temper of a Man's Spirit, so powerfully raise, refresh and comfort a drooping dying Soul. Certainly the Power of God is in all this; and, if there were no more, yet this alone were sufficient to make full Proof of the Divine Authority of the Scriptures.

Infer. 2. Judge from hence what an invaluable Mercy the Preaching of the Word is to the World: 'Tis a Blessing far above our Estimation of it; little do we know what a Treasure God committeth to us in the Ordinances, Acts 13. 25. To you is the Word of this Salvation sent: 'Tis the very Power of God to Salvation, Rom. 1. 16. And Salvation is ordinarily denied to whom the Preaching of the Word is denied, Rom. 10. 14. It's called the Word of Life, Phil. 2. 16. And deserves to be valued by every one of us as our Life: The Eternal Decree of God's Election is executed by it upon our Souls: As many as be ordained to Eternal Life shall believe by the Preaching of it. Great is the ingratitude of this Generation which so slights and undervalues this invaluable Treasure: Which is a sad Presage of the most terrible Judgment, even in the removing our Candlestick out of its Place, except we Repent.

Infer. 3. How sore and terrible a Judgment lies upon the Souls of those Men to whom no Word of God is made powerful enough to convince and awaken them! Yet so stands the Case with Thousands who constantly sit under the Preaching of the Word: Many Arrows are shot at their Consciences, but none goes home to the mark, all fall short of the end: The Commandment hath come unto them many thousand times, by way of Promulgation and ministerial Inculcation, but yet never came home to their Souls by the Spirits effectual Application. O Friends, you have often heard the Voice of Man, but you never yet heard the Voice of God: Your understandings have been instructed, but your Consciences to this Day were never throughly convinced: We have mourned unto you, but ye have not lamented, Matth. 11. 17. Who hath believed our Report, and unto whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Alas, we have laboured in Vain, we have ſpent our ſtrength for Nought, our Word returns unto us empty; but O what a ſtupendious Judgment is here! Heb. 6. 7, 8. The Earth which drinketh in the Rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth Herbs meet for them by whom it is dreſſed, receiveth Bleſſing from God; but that which beareth Thorns and Briars is rejected, and is nigh unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burned. What a ſore Judgment and Sign of God's diſpleaſure would you account it, if your Fields were curſed; if you ſhould Manure, Dreſs, Plough and Sow them; but never reap the Fruit of your Labour, the Increaſe being ſtill blaſted? And yet this were nothing compared with the Blaſting of the Word to your Souls: That which is a ſavour of Life unto Life unto ſome, becomes the ſavour of Death unto Death, to others, 2 Cor. 2. 16. The Lord affect our Hearts with the terrible ſtroaks of God upon the Souls of Men.

2. Uſe of Exhortation. I ſhall conclude this Point with a few Words of Exhortation to three ſorts of Men, viz.

1. To thoſe that never felt the Power of the Word.
2. To thoſe that have only felt ſome ſlight and common Effects thereof.
3. To thoſe unto whoſe very Hearts the Commandment is come in its effectual and ſaving Power.

Firſt, You that never felt any Power in the Word at all, I beg you in the Name of him that made you, and by all the regard and value you have for thoſe precious Souls within you; that now at laſt ſuch Conſiderations as theſe may find place in your Souls; and that you will bethink yourſelves, Conſideration 1. Whoſe Word that is that cannot gain entrance into your Hearts, is it not the Word of God which you deſpiſe and ſlight? Thou caſteſt my Word behind thy back, Pſal. 50. 17. O what an Affront and Provocation to God is this! You deſpiſe not Man but God; the great and terrible God, in whoſe Hand your Breath and Soul is: This Contempt runs higher than you imagine.

Conſid. 2. Conſider that however the Word hath no Power upon you, the Commandment cannot come home to your Hearts; yet it doth work, and comes home with Power to the Hearts of others: Whileſt you are hardned, others are melted under it: Whileſt you ſleep, others tremble; whilſt your Hearts are faſt locked up, others are opened: How can you chooſe but reflect with Fear and Trembling upon theſe contrary Effects of the Word? Eſpecially when you conſider that the Eternal Decrees both of Election and Reprobation are now executed upon the Souls of Men by the preaching of the Word. Some believe, and others are hardned.

Conſid. 3. That no Judgment of God on this ſide Hell is greater than a Hard Heart, and ſtupid Conſcience under the Word: It were much better that the Providence of God ſhould blaſt thy Eſtate, take away thy Children, or deſtroy thy Health, than harden thy Heart, and ſcare thy Conſcience under the Word: So much as thy Soul is better than thy Body, ſo much as Eternity is more valuable than Time, ſo much is this ſpiritual Judgment more dreadful than all temporal Ones: God doth not inflict a more terrible ſtroke than this upon any Man in this World.

O therefore as you love your own Souls, and are loth to Ruin them to all Eternity, attend upon every opportunity that God affords you, for you know not in which of them the Lord may work upon your Hearts: Lay aſide your prejudices againſt the Word, or the Weakneſſes and Infirmities of them that Preach it: For the Word works not as it is the Word of Man, as it is thus Neat, and Elegant, but as it is the Word of God: pray for the Bleſſing of God upon the Word, for except his word of Bleſſing go forth with it, it can never come home to thy Soul: Meditate upon what you hear; for without Meditation it is not like to have any effectual operation upon you. Search your Souls by it, and conſider whether that be not your very Caſe and State which it deſcribes, your very danger whereof it gives warning; take heed leſt after you have heard it, the cares of the World choke not what you have heard, and cauſe thoſe budding Convictions which begin to put forth, to blaſt and wither: Carefully attend to all thoſe Items and Memorandums your Conſciences give you under the Word, and conclude that the Lord is then come nigh unto you.

Secondly, Let this be matter of ſerious Conſideration and Caution to all ſuch as have only felt ſome ſlight, tranſient, and ineffectual Operations of the Goſpel upon their Souls: the Lord hath come nigh ſome of our Souls, we have felt a ſtrange Power in the Ordinances, ſometimes terrifying, and ſometimes tranſporting our Hearts; but alas, it proves but a Morning Dew, or an early Cloud, Hoſ. 6. 4. We rejoyce in the Word, but it is for a ſeaſon, John 3. 25. Gal. 4. 14, 15. They are vaniſhing Motions, and come to nothing. Look as in Nature there are many Abortives as well as perfect Children, ſo it is in Religion: Yea, where the new Creature is perfectly formed in one ſoul, there be many Abortives and Miſcarriages: And there may be three Reaſons aſſigned for it, viz.

Firſt, The Subtilty and deep Policy of Satan, who never more effectually deceives and deſtroys the Souls of Men, than in ſuch a Method, and by ſuch an Artifice as this: For when Men have once felt their Conſciences terrified under the Word, and their Hearts at other times raviſhed with the Joys and Comforts of it, they now ſeem to have attained all that is neceſſary to Converſion and conſtitutive of the new Creature: theſe things look ſo well like the regenerating Effects of the Spirit, that many are eaſily deceived by them. The Devil beguiles the Hearts of the unwary by ſuch falſe Appearances: for it is not every Man that can diſtinguiſh betwixt the natural and ſpiritual Motions of the Affections under the Word: It is very frequently ſeen that even carnal and unrenewed Hearts have their meltings and tranſports as well as ſpiritual Hearts. The ſubject matter upon which the Word treats are the weighty things of the World to come: Heaven and Hell are very awful and affecting things, and an unrenewed Heart is apt to thaw and melt at them; now here is the cheat of Satan, to perſwade a Man that theſe muſt needs be ſpiritual affections, becauſe the Objects about which they are converſant are ſpiritual. Whereas it is certain, the Object of the Affections may be very ſpiritual and heavenly, and yet the workings of a Man's Affections about them, may be in a meer natural way.

Secondly, The dampening Efficacy of the World is a true and proper cauſe of theſe Abortions and Miſcarriages under the Word, Luke 8. 12, 13, 14. There are hopeful and promiſing beginnings and buds buddings of Affections in ſome Perſons, eſpecially in their Youth; but when once they come to be engaged in the World, how ſoon are they damp'd and quenched! as the Cares of a Family grow on, ſo does the Care of Salvation wear off: 'Tis not as it was wont to be, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? How ſhall I get intereſt in Chriſt? But what ſhall I eat and drink, and wherewithal ſhall I and mine be maintained? Thus Earth juſtles out Heaven and the preſent World drowns all thoughts of that to come. Good had it been for many Men, they had never been engaged ſo deep in the World as they are; their Life is but a conſtant hurry of buſineſs, and a perpetual diverſion from Chriſt, and things that are Eternal.

Thirdly, Laſtly, The deceitfulneſs and treachery of the Heart, which too eaſily gives way to the deſigns of Satan, and ſuffers it ſelf to be impoſed upon by him, is not the leaſt cauſe why ſo many hopeful beginnings come to nothing, and the effects of the Word vaniſh. Pride and Self-love are very apt to over-value every little good, and ſlight or undervalue every evil that is in us: And ſo quickly choaks thoſe convictions that begin to work in our Souls.

But oh that ſuch Men would conſider that the dying away of their convictions, is that which threatens the Life of their Souls for ever: Now is the Bud withered, the Bloſſom blaſted: And what expectation is there of Fruit after this, except the Lord revive them again? The Lord open Men's Eyes, to diſcern the danger of ſuch things as theſe are, Jude ver. 11. Heb. 10. 38. Yet I deny not, but there are many Stands and Pauſes in the work of Converſion; it ſeems to die away, and then revives again; and revive it muſt, or we are loſt: But how many are there who never recover it more! This is a ſore Judgment of a moſt terrible conſequence to the Souls of Men.

3. Thirdly, In the laſt place, Let it be a word of Counſel and Advice to them upon whom the Word works effectually and powerfully; to whoſe Hearts the Commandment is come home, to revive ſin, and kill their vain hopes; and theſe are of two ſorts.

1. Embryos, under the firſt Workings of the Spirit.
2. Compleat Births of the Spirit, Regenerated Souls.

Firſt, Embryos, that are under the firſt Workings of the Spirit in the Word. O let it not ſeem a misery or unhappineſs to you that the Commandment is come, and ſin revived, and your former hopes overthrown. It muſt be thus if ever God intend Mercy for you. Had you gone on in that dangerous ſecurity you were in before, you had certainly been loſt for ever: God hath ſtopt you in that path that leads down to Hell, and none that go in there do ever return again, or take hold of the paths of Life. O 'tis better to weep, tremble, and be diſtreſſed now, than to mourn without hope for ever: Let it not trouble you that Sin hath found you out; you could never have found out the Remedy in Chriſt, if you had not found out the Diſeaſe and Danger, by the coming of the Commandment. And I beſeech you carefully to obſerve whether the effects and operations of the Word upon your Hearts be deeper and more powerful than they are found to be in ſuch Souls as miſcarry under it: The Commandment comes to them, and ſhews them this or that more groſs and ſtartling Sin: doth it come to you, and ſhew you not only this or that particular Sin, but all the Evils of your Heart and Life? The corruption of your Natures, as well as the tranſgreſſions of your Lives? If ſo, it promiſes well, and looks hopefully and comfortably to you. The Commandment comes to others, and ſtartles them with the fears of Damnation for their ſin: It puts them into a grievous fright at Hell, and the Everlaſting Burnings; but doth it come to thee and diſcover the infinite evil that is in thy ſin, as it is committed againſt the great, holy, righteous, and good God; and ſo melts thy Heart into tears for the wrong that thou haſt done him, as well as the danger into which thou haſt brought thy ſelf? This is a hopeful work, and may encourage thee. It comes to others, and greatly ſhakes, but never deſtroys and razes the foundation of their vain hopes; if it ſo revive ſin, as to kill all vain hopes in thee, and ſhut thee up to Chriſt, as thy only door of hope, fear not; theſe Troubles will prove the greateſt Mercies that ever befell thee in this World, if thus they work, and continue to work upon thy Soul.

Secondly, Others there are upon whom the Word hath had its full effect as to Converſion. O bleſs God for ever for this Mercy; you cannot ſufficiently value it. God hath not only made it a convincing and wounding, but a converting and healing word to your Souls; he hath not only revived your ſins, and killed your vain hopes, but begotten you again to a lively hope; ſee that you be thankful for this Mercy. How many have ſate under the ſame Word, but never felt ſuch effects of it? As Chriſt ſaid in another caſe, There were many Widows in Iſrael in the time of Elijah, but unto none of them was the Prophet ſent ſave unto Sarepta, a City of Sidon, to a certain Widow there, Luke 4. 46. So I may ſay in this caſe, there were many Souls in the ſame Congregation, at the ſame time; but unto none of them was the Word ſent with a Commiſſion to convince and ſave; but ſuch a one as thy ſelf; one as improbable to be wrought upon as any Soul there. O let this beget thankfulneſs in your Souls: and let it make you love the Word as long as you live. I will never forget thy Precepts, for by them thou haſt quickened me, Pſal. 119. 93.

But above all, I beſeech you make it appear that the Commandment hath come home to your Hearts with power to convince you of the evil of Sin, by your tenderneſs and care to ſhun it as long as you live. If ever you have ſeen the Face of Sin in the Glaſs of the Law of God, if your Hearts have been humbled and broken for it in the days of your trouble and diſtreſs; certainly you will chooſe the worſt affliction rather than ſin; it would be the greateſt folly in the World to return again to iniquity, Pſal. 85. 8. You that have ſeen ſo much of the evil that is in it, and the danger that follows it; you that have had ſuch inward terrours and fears of Spirit about it, when that terrible repreſentation was made you; will be loth to feel thoſe gripes and diſtreſſes of Conſcience again, for the beſt enjoyment in this World.

Bleſſed be God if any word have been brought home to our Hearts, which hath been inſtrumental to bring us to Chriſt.

SER-

SERMON XXII.

JOHN VI. 45.

It is written in the Prophets, And they shall be all taught of God, every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me.

Serm. 22. Text. The teachings of God opened, in their Nature and Necessity.

HOW necessary to our Union with Jesus Christ the application of the Law, or coming home of the Commandment to the Heart of a Sinner is, we have heard in the last Discourse; and how impossible it is, either for the Commandment to come to us, or for us to come to Christ, without illumination and instruction from above, you shall hear in this.

This Scripture hath much of the mind of God in it, and he that is to open it had need himself to be taught of God: In the foregoing verses, Christ offers himself as the Bread of Life unto the Souls of Men; against this Doctrine they oppose their carnal Reason, ver. 41, 42. Christ strikes at the root of all their Cavils and Objections in his reply, ver. 43, 44. Murmur not among your selves, no Man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him, q. d. you slight me because you do not know me, you do not know me, because you are not taught of God; of these divine Teachings, the Prophets of old have spoken, and what they foretold is at this day fulfilled in our sight: So many as are taught of God, and no more, come unto me in the way of Faith: 'Tis impossible to come without the Teachings of God, ver. 44. 'Tis as impossible not to come, or to miscarry in their coming unto me, under the influence of these divine Teachings, ver. 45.

The Words read consist of two parts, viz.

1. An Allegation out of the Prophets.
2. The application thereof made by Christ.

First, An allegation out of the Prophets: it is written in the Prophets, And they shall be all taught of God: The places in the Prophets to which Christ seems here to refer, are, Isa. 54. 13. and all thy Children shall be taught of the Lord, and Jer. 31. 34. and they shall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, saying, know the Lord, for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: The Promises contain the great Blessings of the New Covenant, viz. Divine Instruction, and Heavenly Illumination, without which no Man can be brought up to the Terms of the New Covenant.

Secondly, We have here the application of these Testimonies, out of the Prophets, made by Christ himself, every Man therefore that hath heard, and learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

In which Words we have both the necessity and the efficacy of these Divine Teachings: without them no Man can come, and under them no Man can miscarry. The words being fitly rendred, and the scene obvious,

The Notes are,

Doct. 1. That the teachings of God are absolutely necessary to every Man that cometh unto Christ in the way of Faith.

Doct. 2. No Man can miss of Christ, or miscarry in the way of Faith, that is under the special instructions and teachings of the Father.

Doct. 1. That the teachings of God are absolutely necessary to every Man that cometh unto Christ in the way of Faith.

Of the necessity of Divine teaching, in order to believing, the Apostle speaks in Eph. 4. 20, 21. But ye have not so learned Christ, if so be that you have heard him, and been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus, (i. e.) Your Faith must needs be effectual, both to the Reformation of your Lives, and your Perseverance in the ways of Holiness, if it be such a Faith as is begotten and introduced into your Hearts, by divine teachings. Now in the Explication of this point, I shall speak distinctly to the following Enquiries.

Qui credunt praedicatore foris secus insonante, intus a patre audiant, atque discunt: qui autem non credunt, foris audiunt, intus non audiunt. Aug. de Prædest. cap. 8.

1. How doth God teach Men, or what is imported in our being taught of God?
2. What those special Lessons are, which all Believers do hear, and are taught of God?
3. In what manner doth God teach these things to Men, in the day of their Conversion to Christ.
4. What Influence God's teaching hath upon our believing?
5. Why it is impossible for any Man to believe, or come to Christ, without the Father's teachings.

First, How doth God teach Men, or what is imported in our being taught of God? To this I will speak both negatively and positively, for your clearer apprehension of the sense and meaning of the Spirit of God in this phrase.

First, The teaching of God, and our hearing and learning of him, is not to be understood of any extraordinary visional Appearances, or Oracu-lous and immediate Voice of God to Men: God indeed hath so appeared unto some, Numb. 12. 8. Such Voices have been heard from Heaven; but now these extraordinary ways are ceased, Heb. 1. 1. 2. and we are no more to expect them; we may sooner meet with Satanical Delusions, than Divine Illumination, in this way. I remember the Learned Gerson tells us, that the Devil once appeared to an Holy Man in Prayer, personating Christ, and saying, I am come in Person to visit thee, for thou art worthy: But he with both hands shut his Eyes, saying, saying, Nolo hic Christum videre, satis est ipsum in gloria videre, (i. e.) I will not see Christ here, it is enough for me to see him in Glory. We are now to attend only to the Voice of the Spirit in the Scriptures; this is a more sure Word than any Voice from Heaven. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Secondly, The teachings of God are not to be understood as opposite unto, or exclusive of the teachings of Men. Divine teachings do not render Ministerial teachings vain or useless. Paul was taught of God, Gal. 1. 12. and his Conversion had something extraordinary in it, yet the Ministry of Ananias was used, and honoured in that work, Acts 9. 4. 17. compared. Divine teachings do indeed excel, but not exclude human teachings. I know that Scripture, Jer. 31. 34. to which Christ here refers, is objected against the necessity of a standing Ministry in the Church, they shall teach no more every Man his Neighbour and every Man his Brother, &c. But if those words should be understood absolutely, they would not only overthrow all publick Ordinances of God's own institution, 1 Cor. 12. 28. and deprive us of a principal Fruit of Christ's Ascension, Eph. 4. 11, 12. but for the same reason would destroy all private instructions, and fraternal admonitions also. Such a sense would make the Prophet to contradict the Apostle; and spoil the consent and harmony of the Scriptures: The sense therefore cannot be negative but comparative: It shews the excellency of Divine, but doth not destroy the usefulness of human, teachings, Subordinata non pugnant: The teachings of Men are made effectual by the teachings of the Spirit, and the Spirit in his teachings will use and honour the Ministry of Man.

Thirdly, But to speak positively, the teachings of God are nothing else, but that spiritual and heavenly Light, by which the Spirit of God shineth into the Hearts of Men to give the light of the knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 4, 6. and though this be the proper work of the Spirit, yet it is called the teachings of the Father, because the Spirit who enlightens us is commissionated, and sent by the Father so to do, Joh. 14. 26. Now these teachings of the Spirit of God, consist in two things, viz. in his

1. Sanctifying Impressions.
2. Gracious Assistances.

First, In his Sanctifying Impressions, or regenerating works upon the Soul, by vertue whereof it receives marvellous light and insight in spiritual things; and that not only as illumination is the first act of the Spirit in our conversion, Col. 3. 10. but as his whole work of Sanctification is illuminative and instructive to the converted Soul, 1 Joh. 2. 27. the anointing which you have received of him abideth in you, And ye need not that any Man teach you, but the same anointing teacheth you: The meaning is, that Sanctification gives the Soul experience of those Mysterious things, which are contained in the Scriptures, and that experience is the most excellent Key to unlock and open those deep Scripture Mysteries; no knowledge is so distinct, so clear, so sweet, as that which the Heart communicates to the Head, Joh. 7. 17. If any Man do his will, shall know the Doctrine: A Man that never read the Nature of Love in Books of Philosophy, nor the transports and Ecstasies thereof in History, may best truly describe and express it by the sensible motions of that Passion in his own Soul; yea, he that hath felt, much better understands, than he that hath only read or heard. O what a light doth spiritual sense and experience cast upon a great part of the Scriptures! For indeed Sanctification is the very Copy or Transcript of the Word of God upon the Heart of Man; Jer. 31. 33. I will write my Law in their Heart; So that the Scriptures, and the experiences of Believers by this means answer to each other, as the Lines and Letters in the Press, answer to the impressions made upon the Paper; or the Figures in the Wax to the engravings in the Seal. When a sanctified Man reads David's Psalms; or Paul's Epistles, how is he surprised with wonder to find the very workings of his own Heart so exactly decyphered, and fully expressed there! Oh, saith he, this is my very case; these Holy Men speak what my very Heart hath felt.

Secondly, The Spirit of God teacheth us, as by his sanctifying impressions, so by his gracious assistances which he gives us pro re nata, as our need requires, Matth. 10. 19. It shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. Joh. 14. 26. He shall bring all things to your remembrance: He assisteth both the Understanding in due apprehensions of Truth, and the Heart in the spiritual improvements of Truth: And so much briefly of the first particular.

Secondly, In the next place, we are to enquire what those special Truths are which Believers hear and learn of the Father, when they come to Christ.

And there are divers great and necessary Truths, wherein the Spirit enlightens Men in that day. I cannot say they are all taught every Believer in the same degree and order: but it is certain they are taught of God such Lessons as these are, which they never so understood before.

Lesson 1. First, They are taught of God, that there is abundantly more evil in their sinful natures and actions, than ever they discerned or understood before: the Spirit when he cometh shall convince the world of sin, John 16. 8, 9. Men have a general notion of Sin before; so had Paul when a Pharisee: But how vastly different were his apprehensions of Sin, from all that ever he had in his Natural state, when God brought home the Commandment to his very Heart! There is a threefold knowledge of Sin, viz. Traditional, Discussive, and Intuitive. The First is in the more rude and illiterate Multitude. The Second in more rational and knowing Men. The Third is only found in those that are enlightened, and taught of God: And there is as great a difference betwixt this intuitive knowledge of sin, whereby God makes a Soul to discern the nature and evil of it in a spiritual light, and the two former; as there is betwixt the sight of a painted Lyon upon the wall, and the sight of a living Lyon that meets us roaring in the way. The intuitive sight of sin is another thing than Men imagine it to be; 'tis such a sight as wounds a Man to the very Heart, Acts 2. 37. for God doth not only shew a Man this or that particular sin, but in the day of Convictions he sets all his sins in order before him, Psal. 50. 21. yea, the Lord shews him the sinfulness of his Nature, as well as Practice. Conviction digs to the Root, shews and lays open that Original Corruption, from whence the innumerable evils of the Life do spring, Jam. 1. 14, 15. and which is yet more, the Lord shews the Man, whom he is bringing to Christ, the sinful and miserable Estate which he is in by reason of both, Job. 16. 9. And now all Excuses, Pleas and Defences of Sin are gone; he shews them how their Iniquities have exceeded, Job 36. 8. 9. exceeded in number, and in aggravation of sinfulness; exceeding many, and exexceeding vile; no such Sinner in the World as I: Can such sins as mine be pardon'd? The Greatness of God greatens my Sin, the Holiness of God makes it beyond measure vile; the Goodness of God puts unconceivable weight into my Guilt. O can there be Mercy with God for such a Wretch as I, If there be, then there will not be a greater Example of the Riches of Free Grace in all the World than I am: Thus God teacheth the evil of Sin.

Lesson 2. Secondly, God teacheth the Soul whom he is bringing to Christ, what that wrath and misery is which hangs over it in the threatnings because of sin. Scripture-threatnings were formerly slighted, now the Soul trembles at them: they once apprehended themselves safe enough, Isa. 28. 15. Psal. 50. 21. they thought, because they heard no more of their sins, after the Commission of them, that therefore they should never hear more, that the effect had been as transient a thing as the act of Sin was, or if trouble must follow Sin, they should speed no worse than others; the generality of the World being in the same case; and besides, they hoped to find God more merciful, than sowre and precise Preachers represented him; but when a light from God enters into the Soul, to discover the Nature of God and of Sin; then it sees, that whatever Wrath is treasured up for Sinners, in the dreadful threatnings of the Law, is but the just demerit of Sin, the recompence that is meet: The wages of sin is death, Rom. 6. ult. The Penal evil of Damnation is but equal to the Moral evil of sin: So that in the whole Ocean of God's Eternal Wrath there is not one drop of Injustice: Yea, the Soul doth not only see the Justice of God in its Eternal Damnation, but the wonderful Mercy of God in the suspension thereof so long. O what is it that hath withheld God from Damning me all this while! How is it that I am not in Hell! Now do the fears and awful apprehensions of Eternity seize the Soul, and the worst of sensitive Creatures is supposed to be in a better condition than such a Soul: Never do Men tremble at the Threatnings of God, nor rightly apprehend the danger of their condition, until Sin and Wrath; and the Wages of Sin be discovered to them by a Light from Heaven.

Lesson 3. Thirdly, God teaches the Soul whom he brings to Christ, that deliverance from sin and wrath to come, is the greatest and most important business it hath to do in this World, Acts 16. 30. What must I do to be saved? q. d. O direct me to some effectual way (if there be any) to secure my poor wretched Soul from the Wrath of God. Sin, and the Wrath that follows it, are things that swallow up the Souls, and drink up the very Spirit of Men: Their thoughts never conversed with things of more confessed Truth, and awful Solemnity: These things float not upon their fancies as matters of meer speculation, but settle upon their Hearts day and night, as the deepest concernment in all the World: They now know much better than any meer Scholar, the deep sence of that Text, Matth. 16. 26. What is a Man profited, if he shall gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? Or what shall a Man give in exchange for his Soul?

Five things shew how weighty the thoughts and cares of Salvation are upon their Hearts.

First, Their continual thoughtfulness and sollicitude about these things; if earthly Affairs divert them for a while, yet they are still returning again to this solemn Business.

Secondly, Their careful redeeming of time, and saving the very moments thereof to employ about this Work: Those that were prodigal of Hours and Days before, look upon every Moment of Time as a precious and valuable thing now.

Thirdly, Their fears and tremblings lest they should miscarry, and come short at last, shew how much their Hearts are set upon this Work.

Fourthly, Their inquisitiveness, and readiness to embrace all the help and assistance, that they can get from others, evidently discovers this to be their great design.

Fifthly, and Lastly, The little notice they take of all other troubles and afflictions, tells you, their Hearts are taken up about greater things. This is the Third Lesson, they are taught of God.

Lesson 4. Fourthly, The Lord teaches the Soul that is coming to Christ, that though it be their duty to strive to the uttermost for Salvation; yet all strivings in their own strength are insufficient to obtain it. This work is quite above the power of Nature: 'Tis not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth Mercy: The Soul is brought to a full Conviction of this, by the discovery of the heinous Nature of Sin, and of the rigour and severity of the Law of God: No Repentance, nor Reformation, can possibly amount unto a just Satisfaction, nor are they within the compass and power of our Will. It was a saying that Dr. Hill often used to his Friends, speaking about the Power of Man's Will, he would lay his Hand upon his Breast, and say, Every Man hath something here to confute the Arminian Doctrine: This fully takes off the Soul from all expectations of Deliverance that way; it can not but strive, that is its Duty; but to expect Deliverance, as the Purchase of its own Strivings, that would be its Sin.

Lesson 5. Fifthly, The Soul that is coming to Christ Faith, is taught of God, that though the case it is in sad, yet it is not desperate and remediless: There is Door of Hope, a way of escape for poor Sinners how black and fearful soever their own thoughts and apprehensions are. There is usually, at the time, a dawning Light of Hope in the Soul that is under the Father's Teachings, and this commonly arises from the general and indefinite Incouragements and Promises of the Gospel; which though they do not presently secure the Soul from danger, yet they prop and mightily support it against Despair; for though they be not certain that Deliverance shall be the event of their Trouble; yet the possibilities, and much more the Probabilities, of Deliverance are a great stay to the sinking Soul: The troubled Soul cannot but acknowledge it self to be in a far better case than the Damned are, whose hopes are perished from the Lord, and a Death-pang of Despair hath seized their Consciences: And herein the Merciful and Compassionate Nature of God is eminently discovered, in hasting to open the Door of Hope, almost as soon as the Evil of sin is opened: It is not long, after Adam's Eyes were opened to see Misery, that God opened Christ his Remedy in the first Promise, Gen. 3. 15. and the same Method of Grace is still continued to his Elect Off-spring, Isa. 3. 21, 22. Rom. 3, 21, 22. These supporting hopes the Lord sees necessary to encourage Industry, the use of Means: 'Tis Hope that sets all the Wheels a-work; if all Hope were cut off, every Soul would sit down in a sullen despair, yielding it self to Hell.

Lesson 6. Sixthly, The Lord teaches those that come to Christ, that there is a fulness of saving power in him, whereby any Soul, that duly receives him, may be perfectly delivered from all its sin and misery, Heb. 7. 25. Col. 1. 19. Matth. 28. 18. This is a great and necessary point for every Believer to learn and hear from the Father; for unless the Soul be satisfied of the fulness of Christ's saving Power, it will never move forward towards him: And herein also the Goodness of God is most sweetly and seasonably manifested; for at this time 'tis the great design of Satan to fill the Soul with despairing thoughts of a Pardon; but all those black and heart-sinking thoughts vanish before the discovery of Christ's all-sufficiency. Now the Sin-sick Soul saith with that Woman; Mat. 9, 21. If I may but touch the hem of his Garment, I shall be healed: How deep soever the guilt and stain of Sin be, yet the Soul which acknowledges the infinite dignity of the Blood of Christ, the offering of it up to God in our room, and God's declared satisfaction in it; must needs be satisfied that Christ is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him, which is the sixth Lesson Believers are taught of God.

Lesson 7. Seventhly, Every Man that cometh to Christ is taught of God, that it can never reap any benefit by the Blood of Christ, except he have Union with the Person of Christ, 1 Joh. 5. 12. Eph. 4. 16. Time was when Men fondly thought nothing was necessary to their Salvation but the Death of Christ; but now the Lord shews them that their Union with Christ by Faith is as necessary in the place of an applying cause, as the death of Christ is in the place of a meritorious cause: The purchase of Salvation is an Act of Christ without us whilst we are yet sinners: The application thereof is by a work wrought within us, when we are Believers, Col. 1. 27. In the Purchase, all the Elect are redeemed together by way of price. In the application they are actually redeemed Man by Man, by way of power. Look, as the Sin of the first Adam could never hurt us, unless he had been our Head by way of Generation; so the Righteousness of Christ can never benefit us, unless he be our Head by way of Regeneration. In teaching this Lesson the Lord in Mercy unteaches and blots out that dangerous principle, by which the greatest part of the Christianized World do perish, viz. that the Death of Christ is in it self effectual to Salvation, though a Man be never regenerated or united unto him by saving Faith.

Lesson 8. Eighthly, God teaches the Soul whom he is bringing to Christ, that whatever is necessary to be wrought in us, or done by us in order to our Union with Christ, is to be obtained from him in the way of Prayer, Ezek. 36. 37. And it is observable that the Soul no sooner comes under the effectual teachings of God, but the Spirit of Prayer begins to breath in it, Acts, 9. 8. Behold he prayeth: Those that were taught to pray by Men before, are now taught of the Lord to pray; to pray did I say? yea, and to pray fervently too, as Men concerned for their Eternal Happiness; to pray not only with others, but to pour out their souls before the Lord in secret; for their Hearts are as Bottles full of new Wine, which must vent or break. Now the Soul returns upon its God often in the same day; now it can express its burdens and wants in Groans which the Spirit teacheth; they pray and will not give over praying till Christ come with compleat Salvation.

Lesson 9. Ninthly, All that come to Christ are taught of God to abandon their former ways and companions in sin as ever they expect to be received unto mercy, Isa. 55. 7. 2. Cor. 5. 17. Sins that were profitable and pleasant, as the right Hand, and right Eye, must now be cut off. Companions in sin, who were once the delight of their Lives must now be cast off. Christ saith to the Soul concerning these, as he said in another case, Joh. 18. 8. if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way: and the Soul saith unto Christ, as it is, Psal. 119. 115. depart from me ye evil doers, for I will keep the Commandments of my God: And now pleasant sins, and Companions in sin, become the very burden and shame of a Man's Soul: Objects of delight are become Objects of Pity and compassion: No endearments, no union of Blood, no earthly interests whatsoever, are found strong enough to hold the Soul any longer from Christ: Nothing but the effectual teachings of God is found sufficient to dissolve such bonds of iniquity as these.

Lesson 10. Tenthly, All that come unto Christ are taught of God, that there is such a beauty and excellency in the ways and people of God, as is not to be matched in the whole World, Psal. 16. 3. When the Eyes of Strangers to Christ begin to be opened and enlightned in his knowledge, you may see what a change of judgment is wrought in them, with respect to the People of God, and towards them especially, whom God hath and way made instrumental for the good of their Souls, Cant. 5. 9. they then called the Spouse of Christ, the fairest among women: The convincing Holiness of the Bride then began to enamour and affect them with a desire of nearer conjunction and communion: We will seek him with thee; with thee, that hast so charged us; that hast taken so much pains for the good of our Souls: Now, and never before, the Righteous appeareth more excellent than his Neighbour. Change of Heart is always accompanied with Change of Judgment, with respect to the People of God: Thus the Goaler, Acts 16. 33. washed the Apostles Stripes, to whom he had been so cruel before. The Godly now seem to be the Glory of the Places where they live: And the Glory of any place seems to be darkned by their removal; as one said of holy Mr. Barrington, Methinks the Town is not at home, when Mr. Barrington is out of Town: They esteem it a choice Mercy to be in their company and acquaintance, Zech. 8. 23. We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you: No People like the People of God now: As one said, when he heard of two Faithful Friends, Utinam tertius essem, O that I might make the Third! Whatever vile or low thoughts they had of the People of God before, to be sure now they are the Excellent of the Earth, in whom is all their delight: The Holiness of the Saints might have some interest in their Consciences before, but they never had such an interest in their estimations and affections, till this Lesson was taught them by the Father.

Lesson 11. Eleventhly, All that come to Christ are taught of God, that whatever difficulties they apprehend in Religion, yet they must not upon pain of damnation be discouraged thereby, or return again to sin. Luke 9. 62. No Man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God: Plowing work is hard work; a strong and steady hand is required for it, he that plows, must keep on, and make no balks of the hardest and toughest ground he meets with. Religion also is the running of a Race, 1 Cor. 9. 24. there is no standing still, much less turning back, if ever we hope to win the Prize.

The Devil indeed labours every way to discourage and daunt the Soul, by representing the insuperable difficulties of Religion to it; and young Beginners are but too apt to be discouraged, and fall under despondency; but the teachings of the Father, are encouraging teachings; they are carried on from strength to strength against all the oppositions they meet from without them, and the many discouragements they find within them: To this conclusion they are brought by the teaching of God, We must have Christ, we must get a Pardon, we must strive for Salvation, let the difficulties, troubles, and sufferings in the way be never so great or many. As he said, Necesse est ut eam, non ut vivam: 'Tis necessary that I go on, 'tis not necessary that I live; so saith the Soul that is taught of God; 'tis easier for me to dispense with Ease, Honour, Relations, yea, with Life it self, than to part with Christ and the Hopes of eternal Life.

Lesson 12. Twelfthly, They that come to Christ are taught of God, that whatever guilt and unworthiness they discover in themselves, and whatever fears and doubts hang upon their Hearts, as to pardon and acceptance; yet, as the case stands, it is their wisdom and great interest to venture themselves, in the way of Faith, upon Jesus Christ, whatever the issue thereof be.

Three great discouragements are usually found upon the Hearts of those that come to Christ in the way of Faith.

First, The sensible greatness of guilt and sin, How can I go to Christ that am in such a case, that have been so vile a Wretch? And here measuring the Grace and Mercy of Christ, by what it finds in it self, or in other Creatures, 1 Sam. 24. 19. the Soul is ready to sink under the weight of its own discouraging and mis-giving thoughts.

Secondly, The sense they have of their own weakness, and inability to do what God requires, and must of necessity be done, if ever they be saved: My Heart is harder than an Adamant, How can I break it? My Will is stubborn and exceeding obstinate, I am no way able to bow it; the frame and temper of my Spirit is altogether carnal and earthly; and it is not in the power of my hand to alter and change it: Alas, I cannot subdue any one corruption, nor perform one spiritual duty, nor bear one of those sufferings and burdens, which Religion lays upon all that follow Christ: This also proves a great discouragement in the way of Faith.

Thirdly, And, which is more than all, the Soul that is coming to Jesus Christ, hath no assurance of acceptance with him, if it should adventure it self upon him; 'tis a great hazard, a great adventure; 'tis much more probable (if I look to my self) that Christ will shut the door of Mercy against me.

But under all these discouragements, the Soul learns this Lesson from God, That, as ungodly as it is, as weak and impotent as it is, as full of fears and doubts as it is, nevertheless it is every way its great duty and concernment to go on in the way of Faith, and make that great adventure of it self upon Jesus Christ: And of this the Lord convinceth the Soul by two things, viz.

1. From the absolute necessity of coming.
2. From the incouraging probabilities of speeding.

First, The Soul seeth an absolute necessity of coming; necessity is laid upon it, there is no other way, Acts 4. 12. God hath shut it up, by a blessed necessity, to this only Door of escape, Gal. 3. 23. Damnation lies in the neglect of Christ, Heb. 2. 3. The Soul hath no choice in this case, Angels, Ministers, Duties, Repentance, Reformation cannot save me; Christ, and none but Christ, can deliver me from present Guilt, and the Wrath to come: Why do I dispute, demur, delay, when certain ruin must inevitably follow the neglect or refusal of Gospel-Offers?

Secondly, The Lord shewerh those that are under his teaching the probabilities of Mercy for their encouragement in the way of believing; and these probabilities the Soul is enabled to gather from the general and free invitations of the Gospel, Isai. 55. 1, 7. Rev. 22. 17. from the conditional Promises of the Gospel, Joh. 6. 37. Matth. 11. 28. Isa 1. 18. from the vast extent of Grace, beyond all the thoughts and hopes of Creatures, Isai. 55. 8, 9. Heb. 7. 25. from the incouraging Examples of other sinners, who have found Mercy in as bad condition as they, 1 Tim. 1. 13. 2 Chron. 33. 3. 2 Cor. 6. 10, 11. from the Command of God which warrants the action, and answers all the objections of unworthiness and presumption in them that come to Christ, 1 Joh. 3. 23. And lastly, from the sensible Changes already made upon the temper and frame of the Heart. Time was, when I had no sense of sin, nor sorrow for sin: no desires after Christ, nor heart to Duties; but it is not so with me now. I now see the evil of sin, so as I never saw it before; my heart is now broken in the sense of that evil; my desires begin to be enflamed after Jesus Christ. I am not at rest, nor where I would be, till I am in secret Mourning after the Lord Jesus. Surely these are the dawnings of the day of Mercy; let me go on in this way; it saith, as the Lepers at the Siege of Samaria, 2 King. 7. 3, 4. If I stay here, I perish; If I go to Christ, I can but perish. Hence Believers bear up against all objected discouragements, Certum exitium commutemus incerto, 'tis the dictate of Wisdom, the vote of Reason, to exchange a certain for an uncertain ruine. And thus you have heard what those excellent Lessons are, which all that come to Christ are taught by the Father.

SERMON XXIII.

JOHN VI. 45.

It is written in the Prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. every Man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me.

IN the former Sermon, you have been taught this great Truth.

Doct. That the teachings of God are absolutely necessary to every Soul that cometh unto Christ in the way of Faith.

What the teachings of God import, hath been formerly opened; and what those special Lessons are, which all Believers hear and learn of the Father was the last thing discoursed; that which remains to be farther cleared about this subject, before we come to the application of the whole, will be to shew you,

1. Wh

1. What are the Properties of Divine Teachings.
2. What Influence they have in bringing Souls to Christ.
3. Why it is impossible for any Man to come to Christ, without these Teachings of the Father.

First, What are the Properties of Divine Teachings. Concerning the Teachings of God we affirm in general, that tho' they exclude not, yet they vastly differ from all Humane Teachings: as the Power of God in effecting transcends all Humane Power, so the Wisdom of God in teaching transcends all Humane Wisdom. For,

First. God teacheth powerfully: he speaketh to the Soul with a strong Hand; when the Word comes accompanied with the Spirit, 'tis mighty through God, to cast down all Imaginations, 2 Cor. 10. 4. Now the Gospel comes not in word only (as it was wont to do) but in power, 1 Thes. 1. 4, 5. A Power that makes the Soul fall flat before it, and acknowledge, that God is in that Word, 1 Cor. 14. 25.

Secondly. The Teachings of God are sweet Teachings. Men never relish the Sweetness of a Truth, till they learn it from God, Cant. 1. 3. His name is as an Oyntment poured forth, Cant. 5. 16. His Mouth is most sweet. O how powerfully, and how sweetly doth the voice of God slide into the heart of a poor melting Sinner? how jejune, dry, and tasteless are all the Discourses of Men, compared with the Teachings of the Father!

Thirdly, God teacheth plainly and clearly, he not only opens Truths to the understanding, but he openeth the understanding also to perceive them, 2 Cor. 3. 16. In that day the Veil is taken away from the Heart; a Light shineth into the Soul; a clear Beam from Heaven is darted into the Mind, Luke 24. 45. Divine Teachings are fully satisfying; the Soul doubts no more, staggers and hesitates no more, but acquiesces in that which God teaches; 'tis so satisfied, that it can venture all upon the truth of what it hath learnt from God, as that Martyr said, I cannot Dispute, but I can die for Christ. See Prov. 8. 8, 9.

Fourthly, The Teachings of God are infallible Teachings, the wisest and holiest of Men may mistake, and lead others into the same mistakes with themselves; but it is not so in the teachings of God. If we can be sure that God teacheth us, we may be as sure of the Truth of what he teacheth; for his Spirit guideth us into all Truth, Joh. 16. 13. and into nothing but Truth.

Fifthly, The Teachings of God are abiding teachings, they make everlasting Impressions upon the Soul, Psal. 119. 98. they are ever with it; the Words of Men vanish from us; but the Words of God stick by us; what God teacheth he writeth upon the Heart, Jer. 31. 33. and that will abide; litera scripta manet. 'Tis usual with Souls, whose understandings have been opened by the Lord, many Years afterward to say, I shall never forget such a Scripture that once convinced, such a Promise that once encouraged me.

Sixthly, The Teachings of God are saving Teachings, they make the Soul wise unto Salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. There is a great deal of other Knowledge that goes to Hell with Men: The Pavement of Hell (as one speaks) is pitched with the Skulls of many great Scholars, but Eternal Life is in the Teachings of God, Joh. 17. 3. This is Eternal Life, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. This is deservedly stiled the Light of Life, Joh. 8. 12. In this light we shall see light, Psal. 36. 9.

Seventhly, The Teachings of God make their own way into the dullest and weakest Capacities, Isa. 32. 4. The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly: Upon this account Christ said, Matth. 11. 25. I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto Babes: 'Tis admirable to see what clear Illuminations some poor illiterate Christians have in the Mysteries of Christ and Salvation, which others, of great Abilities, deep and searching Heads, can never discover with all their Learning and Study.

Eighthly, To conclude, The Teachings of God are transforming Teachings, 2 Cor. 3. 18. they change the Soul into the same Image: God casts them, whom he teacheth, into the very mould of those Truths which they learn from him, Rom. 6. 17. These are the Teachings of God, and thus he instructeth those that come to Christ.

Secondly, Next let us see what Influences Divine Teachings have upon Souls in bringing them to Christ; and we shall find a three-fold influence in them.

1. They have an Influence upon the external Means by which they come to Christ.
2. They have an influence upon the Mind, to remove what hindred it from Christ.
3. They have an influence upon the Will, to allure and draw it to Christ.

First, They have influence upon the Means by which we come to Christ: The best Ordinances are but a dead Letter, except the Spirit, the teaching and quickning Spirit of God, work in Fellowship with them, 2 Cor. 3. 6. The best Ministers, like the Disciples, cast forth the Net, but take nothing, win not one Soul to God, till God teach as well as they. Paul is nothing, and Apollos nothing, but God that giveth the increase, 1 Cor. 3. 7. Let the most learned, eloquent, and powerful Orator be in the Pulpit, yet no Man's Heart is perswaded, till it hears the Voice of God; Cathedram in cœlis habet qui corda docet.

Secondly, They have influence upon the Mind, to remove what hindred it from Christ; except the Minds of Men be first untaught those Errors, by which they are prejudiced against Christ, they will never be perswaded to come unto him: And nothing but the Fathers teachings can unteach those Errors, and cure those Evils of the Mind: The natural Mind of Man slights the Truths of God, until God teach them; and then they tremble with an awful reverence of them. Sin is but a trifle, till God shews us the Face of it in the glass of the Law, and then it appears exceeding sinful, Rom. 7. 12. We think God to be such a one as our selves, Psal. 50. 21. until he discover himself unto us in his infinite Greatness, awful Holiness, and severe Justice; and then we cry, who can stand before this great and dreadful God! We thought it was time enough hereafter to mind the Concernments of another World, until the Lord open our Eyes, to see in what danger we stand upon the brink of Eternity; and then nothing scares us more, than the fears that our time will be finished, before the great Work of Salvation be finished. We thought our selves in a converted State before, till God make us to see the necessity of another man-manner of Converſation, upon pain of Eternal Damnation. We readily caught hold upon the Promiſes before, when we had no right to them; but the Teachings of God make the preſumptuous Sinner let go his hold, that he may take a better and ſurer hold of them in Chriſt. We once thought that the Death of Chriſt, in it ſelf, had been enough to ſecure our Salvation; but under the Teachings of God, we diſcern plainly the neceſſity of a change of Heart and State; or elſe the Blood of Chriſt can never profit us. Thus the Teachings of God remove the Errors of the Mind, by which Men are with-held from Chriſt.

Thirdly, The Teachings of God powerfully attract and allure the Will of a Sinner to Chriſt, Hoſ. 2. 14. But of theſe drawings of the Father I have largely ſpoken before, and therefore ſhall ſay no more of it in this place, but haſten to the laſt thing propounded, viz.

Thirdly, Why it is impoſſible for any Man to come to Chriſt, without the Father's Teachings; and the impoſſibilities hereof will appear three Ways.

1. From the Power of Sin.
2. From the Indiſpoſition of Man.
3. From the Nature of Faith.

By all which the laſt Point deſigned to be ſpoken to from this Scripture will be fully cleared, and the whole prepared for Application.

Firſt, the impoſſibility of coming to Chriſt, without the Teachings of the Father, will appear from the Power of Sin, which hath ſo ſtrong an holdfaſt upon the Hearts and Affections of all unregenerate Men, that no Humane Arguments or Perſwaſions whatſoever can divorce or ſeparate them; for, Firſt, Sin is connatural with the Soul, 'tis born and bred with a Man; Pſal. 51. 4. Iſa. 48. 8. It is as natural for fallen Man to ſin as it is to breath.

Secondly, The Power of Sin hath been ſtrengthening it ſelf from the beginning, by a long continued Cuſtom, which gives it the force of a ſecond Nature; and makes Regeneration and Mortification naturally impoſſible, Jer. 15. 23. Can the Æthiopian change his skin, or the Leopard his ſpots? Then may he alſo do good that is accuſtomed to do evil.

Thirdly, Sin is the delight of the ſinner: It is a ſport to a Fool to do miſchief, Prov. 10. 23. Carnal Men have no other Pleaſure in this World, but what ariſes from their Luſts; to cut off their Corruptions by Mortification, were at once to deprive them of all the pleaſure of their lives.

Fourthly, Sin being connatural, cuſtomary, and delightful, doth therefore bewitch their Affections, and inchant their Hearts, to that degree of Madneſs and Faſcination; that they rather chuſe Damnation by God, than Separation from Sin: Their hearts are fully ſet in them to do evil, Eccleſ. 8. 11. they ruſh into ſin, as the horſe ruſheth into the battle, Jer. 8. 6. And now, what think you can ſeparate a Man from his beloved Luſt, except the powerful and effectual Teachings of God? Nothing but a Light from Heaven can rectifie and reduce the inchanted Mind; no Power but that of God can change and alter the ſinful bent and inclination of the Will; 'tis a task above all Creature-power.

Secondly, The Impoſſibility of coming to Chriſt, without the Father's Teachings, evidently appears from the indiſpoſedneſs of Man, the ſubject of this change; the natural Man receives not the things which are of God, 1 Cor. 2. 14. Three things muſt be wrought upon Man, before he can come to Chriſt; his blind Underſtanding muſt be enlightned; his hard and rocky Heart muſt be broken, and melted; his ſtiff, fixed, and obſtinate Will muſt be conquered and ſubdued: But all theſe are Effects of a ſupernatural Power. The Illumination of the Mind is the peculiar Work of God, 2 Cor. 4. 6. Rev. 3. 17. Eph. 5. 8. The breaking and melting of the Heart is the Lord's own Work; 'tis he that giveth Repentance, Acts 5. 31. 'Tis the Lord that takes away the heart of ſtone, and giveth an heart of fleſh, Ezek. 36. 26. 'tis he that poureth out the Spirit of Contrition upon Man, Zech. 12. 10. The changing of the natural bent and inclination of the Will is the Lord's ſole Prerogative, Phil. 2. 13. all theſe things are effectually done in the Soul of Man, when God teacheth it, and never till then.

Thirdly, The Nature of Faith, by which we come to Chriſt, plainly ſhews the impoſſibility of coming without the Father's teaching. Every thing in Faith is ſupernatural; the Implantation of the habit of Faith is ſo, Eph. 2. 8. 'tis not of our ſelves, but the Gift of God; 'tis not an habit acquired by Induſtry, but infuſed by Grace, Phil. 1. 29. The light of Faith, by which ſpiritual things are diſcerned, is ſupernatural, Heb. 11. 1, 27. It ſeeth things that are inviſible. The Adventures of Faith are ſupernatural; for againſt hope, a Man believeth in hope, giving Glory to God, Rom. 4. 18. By Faith a Man goeth unto Chriſt, againſt all the Dictates and Diſcouragements of natural Senſe and Reaſon. The Self-denial of Faith is ſupernatural; the cutting off the Right-Hand, and plucking out of Right-Eye-Sins muſt needs be ſo, Matth. 5. 29. The Victories and Conqueſts of Faith do all ſpeak it to be ſupernatural; it overcomes the ſtrongeſt Oppoſitions from without, Heb. 11. 33, 34. it ſubdueth and purgeth the moſt obſtinate and deep rooted Corruptions within, Acts 15. 9. it overcometh all the Blandiſhments and charming Allurements of the bewitching World, 1 Joh. 5. 4. all which conſidered, how evident is the concluſion, that none can come to Chriſt without the Father's Teachings? The Uſes follow.

Inference 1.

How notoriouſly falſe and abſurd is that Doctrine which aſſerteth the poſſibility of believing without the Efficacy of ſupernatural Grace? The deſire of ſelf-ſufficiency was the ruine of Adam, and the conceit of ſelf-ſufficiency is the ruine of Multitudes of his Poſterity. This Doctrine is not only contradictory to the current ſtream of Scriptures, Phil. 2. 13. 1 John 1. 13. with many other Scriptures; but it is alſo contradictory to the common ſenſe and experience of Believers; yet the pride of Nature will ſtrive to maintain, what Scripture and Experience plainly contradict and overthrow.

Inference 2.

Hence we may alſo inform our ſelves, how it cometh to paſs, that many rational, wiſe, and learned Men miſs Chriſt, whilſt mean time the ſimple and illiterate, even Babes in Natural Knowledge, obtain intereſt in him and Salvation by him. The reaſon hereof is plainly given us by Chriſt in Matth. 13. 11. To you it is given to know the Myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given: 'Tis the droppings and dews of Divine teaching upon one, and not upon another another, that dryeth up the green Tree, and maketh the dry Tree to flouriſh. Many natural Men have very fine Brains, ſearching Wits, ſolid Judgments, nimble Fancies, tenacious Memories; they can ſearch out the Myſteries of Nature, ſolve the phænomena, ſatisfie the Enquiries of the moſt Curious; they can meaſure the Earth, diſcover the Motions of the Heavens; but after all take up their place in Hell: When, in the mean time, the Statutes of the Lord (by the help of his Teachings) make wiſe the ſimple, Pſal. 19. 17. 'Tis no matter how dull and incapable the Scholar be, if God undertake to be the Teacher. I remember Auſtin ſpeaks of one, who was commonly reputed a Fool, and yet he could not but judge him to be truly godly; and that by two Signs of Grace which appeared in him: one was his Seriouſneſs when he heard any Diſcourſes of Chriſt; the other was his Indignation manifeſted againſt Sin. It was truly ſaid by thoſe two Cardinals, (who riding to the Council of Conſtance, over-heard a poor Shepherd in the Fields, with Tears bewailing his ſin) ſurgent indocti & rapient cælum: The unlearned will riſe and take Heaven, whilſt we with all our Learning ſhall deſcend into Hell.

Infer. 3. This alſo informs us of the true reaſon of the ſtrange and various ſucceſſes of the Goſpel upon the Souls of Men: Here we ſee why the Miniſtry of one Man becomes fruitful, and anothers barren; yea, why the Labours of the ſame Man proſper excedingly at one time, and not at another: Theſe things are according as the Teachings of God do accompany our teachings: We often ſee a weaker and plainer Diſcourſe bleſſed with Succeſs, whilſt that which is artificial, neat, and laboured, comes to nothing. St. Auſtin hath a pretty Similitude to illuſtrate this: Suppoſe (ſaith he) two Conduits, the one very plain, the other curiouſly carved and adorned with Images of Lyons, Eagles, &c. the Water doth not refreſh, and nouriſh, as it cometh from ſuch a curious Conduit, but as it is Water. Where we find moſt of Man, we frequenly find leaſt of God. I ſpeak not this to encourage Careleſsneſs and Lazineſs, but to provoke the Diſpenſers of the Goſpel to more Earneſtneſs, and fervent Prayer for the aſſiſtance and bleſſing of the Spirit upon their Labours; and make Men leſs fond of their own Gifts and Abilities: Bleareyed Leah may bear Children, when beautiful Rachel proves barren.

Infer. 4. Learn hence the tranſcendent excellency of ſaving ſpiritual Knowledge, above that which is meerly litteral and natural. One drop of Knowledge taught by God, is more excellent, than the whole Ocean of Humane Knowledge and acquired Gifts, Phil. 3. 8. Joh. 17. 3. 1 Cor. 2. 2. Let no Man therefore be dejected at the want of thoſe Gifts, with which unſanctified Men are adorned. If God have taught thee the evil of Sin, the worth of Chriſt, the neceſſity of Regeneration, the Myſtery of Faith, the way of communion with God in Duties; trouble not thy ſelf becauſe of thine ignorance in natural or moral things; thou haſt that, Reader, which will bring thee to Heaven; and he is a truly wiſe Man that knows the way of Salvation, though he be ignorant and unskilful in other things: Thou knoweſt that, which all the learned Doctors and Libraries in the World could never teach thee, but God hath revealed them to thee: Others have more Science, thou haſt more Savour and Sweetneſs: Bleſs God and be not diſcouraged.

2. Uſe for Examination.

If there be no coming to Chriſt without the Teachings of the Father; then it greatly concerns us to examine our own Hearts, whether ever we have been under the ſaving Teachings of God, during the many Years we have ſate under the preaching of the Goſpel. Let not the queſtion be miſtaken, I do not ask what Books you have read, what Miniſters you have heard, what ſtock of natural or ſpeculative Knowledge you have acquired; but the queſtion is, whether ever God ſpake to your Hearts, and hath effectually taught you ſuch Leſſons, as were mentioned in our laſt Diſcourſe? O there is a vaſt difference betwixt that notional, ſpeculative, and traditional Knowledge which Men learneth from Man, and that ſpiritual, operative, and transforming Knowledge which a Man learneth from God. If you ask how the Teachings of God may be diſcerned from all other meer humane Teachings, I anſwer, it may be diſcern'd and diſtinguiſhed by theſe ſix Signs.

Sign 1.

The teachings of God are very humbling to the Soul that is taught. Humane Knowledge puffeth up, 1 Cor. 8. 1. but the Teachings of God do greatly abaſe the Soul, Job 42. 5. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear but now mine eye ſeeth thee; wherefore I abhor my ſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes: The ſame Light which diſcovers to us the Holineſs, Juſtice, Greatneſs, and Goodneſs of God, diſcovereth alſo the vileneſs, baſeneſs, emptineſs, and total unworthineſs of Man; yea, of the beſt and holieſt of Men, Iſa. 6. 5.

Sign 2. The teachings of God are deeply affecting, and impreſſive teachings: they fully reach the Heart of Man, Hoſ. 2. 14. I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderneſs, and ſpeak comfortably unto her: or, as it is in the Hebrew, I will ſpeak to her Heart. When God ſheweth unto Man the evil of Sin, he ſo convinceth the Soul that no Creature-comforts have any pleaſure or ſweetneſs in them; and when he ſheweth unto Man his Righteouſneſs, Pardon, and Peace in Chriſt, he ſo comforteth and refreſheth the Heart, that no outward Afflictions have any weight or bitterneſs in them; one drop of Conſolation from Heaven, ſweetens a Sea of trouble upon Earth, Pſal. 94. 19. In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my Soul.

Sign 3. The teachings of God are ſanctifying and renewing teachings: they reform and change the Heart, Eph. 4. 21, 22, 23. If ſo be that you have heard him, and been taught by him, as the truth is in Jeſus: that ye put off concerning the former converſation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful Luſts; and be renewed in the ſpirit of your mind, &c. See here what Holineſs and Purity is the effect of divine teaching: Holineſs both external and internal, negative and poſitive: Holineſs of every kind follows the Father's Teachings: All the Diſcoveries God makes to us of himſelf in Chriſt have an aſſimilating quality, and change the Soul into their own Likeneſs, 2 Cor. 3. 18.

Sign 4. All God's teachings are practical, running into obedience. Idle Notions and uſeleſs Speculations are not learn'd from God. As God's creating Words, ſo his teaching Words are with effect: As when he ſaid let there be light, and there was light; ſo when he ſaith to the Soul, be comforted, be humbled; it is effectually comforted, Iſa. 66. 13. it is humbled, Job 40. 4, 5. As God hath in Nature made no Creature in vain, ſo he ſpeaks no Word in vain: Every thing which Men hear, or learn from the Father, is for uſe, practice, and benefit to the Soul.

Sign 5. All the teachings of God are agreeable with the written word: The Spirit of God, and the Word of God do never jar, Joh. 14. 26. He ſhall take of mine and ſhew it unto you; When God ſpeaketh unto the Heart of Man, whether in a way of Conviction, Conſolation, or Inſtruction in Duty, he always either maketh uſe of the expreſs Words of God in Scripture, or ſpeaks to the Heart in Language every way conſentaneous and agreeable to Scripture: So that the written Word becomes the Standard to weigh, and try all divine Teachings, Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony; if they ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light (or morning) in them: Whatever is diſcrepant and jarring with the Scripture, muſt not paſs for an Inſpiration of God, but a deluding Sophiſm and Inſinuation of Satan.

Sign 6. The teachings of God are very ſatisfying teachings to the Soul of Man; the underſtanding Faculty, like a Dial, is enlightned with the Beams of divine Truth ſhining upon it; this no Man's Teachings can do; Men can only teach objectively, by propounding Truth to the Underſtanding; but they cannot enlighten the Faculty it ſelf, as God doth, 1 Joh. 5. 20. he giveth Man underſtanding, as well as Inſtructions to be underſtood; he opens the Eyes of the underſtanding, as well as propoundeth the Object, Eph. 1. 18. And thus we may diſcern and diſtinguiſh the Teachings of God, from all other Teachings.

3. Uſe of Exhortation.

The laſt uſe I ſhall make of this Point, ſhall be a word of Exhortation, both to them that never were yet effectually taught of God, and to them alſo that have heard his Voice, and are come to Chriſt.

Firſt, To thoſe that never yet heard the Voice of God ſpeaking to their Hearts; and truly this is the general Caſe of moſt Men and Women in the profeſſing World; they have heard the ſound of the Goſpel, but it hath been a confuſed, empty, and ineffectual ſound in their Ears: We have heard the Voice of Man, but have never yet heard the Voice of God: The Gifts and Abilities of Preachers have in a notional and meer humane way improved their Underſtandings, and ſometimes ſlightly touched their Affections: All this is but the effect of Man upon Man. O that you would look for ſomething which is beyond all this: Satisfie not your ſelves with what is meerly natural, and humane in Ordinances: Come to the Word with higher Ends and more ſpiritual Deſigns, than to get ſome Notions of Truth which you had not before, or to judge the Gifts and Abilities of the Speaker: If God ſpeak not to your Hearts, all the Ordinances in the World can do you no good, 1 Cor. 3. 7. O remember what a ſolemn and awful thing it is to come to thoſe Ordinances, and attend upon that Miniſtration, in and by which the eternal Decrees of Heaven are to be executed upon your Souls, which muſt be to you the ſavour of Life unto Life, or of Death unto Death: Wreſtle with God, by Prayer, for a Bleſſing upon the Ordinances. Say, Lord, ſpeak thy ſelf to my Heart, let me hear thy Voice, and feel thy Power in this Prayer, or in this Sermon: Others have heard thy Voice, cauſe me to hear it: It had been much better for me if I had never heard the Voice of Preachers, except I hear thy Voice in them.

Secondly, Let all thoſe that have heard the Voice of God, and are come to Chriſt in the vertue of his Teachings, admire the wonderful Condeſcenſion of God to them. O that God ſhould ſpeak to thy Soul, and be ſilent to others! there be many thouſands living at this day under Ordinances, to whom the Lord hath not given an Ear to hear, or an Heart to obey, Deut. 29. 4. To you it is given to know the Myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given, Matth. 13. 11. And I beſeech you walk as Men and Women that have been taught of God. When Satan and your Corruptions temper you to ſin, and to walk in the ways of the carnal and careleſs World: Remember then that Scripture, Eph. 4. 20, 21, But ye have not ſo learned Chriſt, if ſo be that you have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jeſus. To conclude, ſee that you be exceeding humble and lowly in Spirit; Humility qualifies you for divine Teachings, Pſal. 25. 9. The humble he will teach: and the more ye are taught of God, the more humble you will ſtill be.

And thus you ſee, that no Man can come to Chriſt without the Application of the Law, and the teachings of the Father; which being conſidered, may be very uſeful to convince us, (which indeed is the deſign of it) that among the Multitudes of Men and Women, living under the Ordinances of God, and the general profeſſion of Religion; there are but few, very few to be found, who have effectually recieved the Lord Jeſus Chriſt by ſaving Faith.

And now, Reader, I ſuppoſe by this time thou art deſirous to know by what Signs and Evidences thy Union with Chriſt by Faith may be cleared up, and made evident to thee: And how that great Queſtion, Whether thou haſt yet effectually applied Chriſt to thy Soul, or no, may be clearly decided; which brings me to the third general uſe of the whole, viz.

The Examination of our Intereſt in Chriſt, by

1. The Donation of the Spirit, from 1 John 3. 24.
2. The New Creation, from 2 Cor. 5. 17.
3. The Mortification of Sin, from Gal. 5. 24
4. The Imitation of Chriſt, from 1 Joh. 2. 6.

Of each of theſe Trials of our Intereſt in Chriſt I ſhall ſpeak in their Order: And, firſt, of the Donation of the Spirit.

SERMON XXIV.

1 JOHN III. 24.

——And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

Serm. 24 Of the Manner and Importance of the Spirits Indwelling.

THE Apoſtle in this Chapter is engaged in a very trying Diſcourſe; his Scope is to diſcriminate the Spirits and States of ſincere Believers, from meerly nominal and pretended Chriſtians; which he attempts not to do by any thing that is external, but by the internal Effects and Operations of the Spirit of God upon their Hearts. His enquiry is not into thoſe things which Men profeſs, or about the duties which they perform, but about the frames and tempers of their Hearts and and the Principles by which they are acted in Religion. According to this Teſt he puts Believers upon the ſearch and ſtudy of their own Hearts: calls them to reflect upon the Effects and Operations of the Spirit of God wrought within their own Souls: aſſuring them that thoſe gracious effects and fruits of the Spirit in their Hearts will be a ſolid Evidence unto them of their Union with Jeſus Chriſt, amounting to much more than a general conjectural ground of Hope, under which it is impoſſible there may ſubeſſe falſum, lurk a dangerous and fatal Miſtake: but the gracious Effects of the Spirit of God within them, are a Foundation upon which they may build the certainty and aſſurance of their Union with Chriſt: Hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us. In which Words we have three things to conſider, viz.

1. The thing to be tried, our Union with Chriſt.
2. The trial of it, by the giving of his Spirit to us.
3. The certainty of trial this way: hereby we know.

Firſt, The thing to be tried, which is indeed the greateſt and weightieſt Matter that can be brought to tryal in this World, or in that to come, namely our Union with Chriſt, expreſſed here by his abiding in us, a Phraſe clearly expreſſing the difference betwixt thoſe that by Profeſſion and common Eſtimation paſs for Chriſtians among Men, though they have no other Union with Chriſt, but by an external adheſion to him in the outſide Duties of Religion: and thoſe whoſe Union with Chriſt is real, vital and permanent, by the indwelling of the Spirit of Chriſt in their Souls, Joh. 15. 6. opens the force and importance of this Phraſe, I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him; the ſame bringeth forth much fruit: if a Man abide not in me, he is caſt forth as a branch, and is withered: the thing then to be tried, is, whether we ſtand in Chriſt as dead branches in a living Stock, which are only bound to it by external Ligatures, or Bonds, that hold them for a while together: or whether our Souls have a vital Union and Coalition with Chriſt, by the Participation of the living Sap of that bleſſed Root.

Secondly, The trial of this Union, which is by the giving of the Spirit to us: the Spirit of Chriſt is the very Bond of Union betwixt him and our Souls: I mean not that the very Perſon of the Spirit dwelleth in us, imparting his eſſential Properties to us: it were a horrid Blaſphemy ſo to ſpeak, but his ſaving Influences are communicated to us in the way of ſanctifying Operations: as the Sun is ſaid to come into the Houſe, when his Beams and comforting Influences ſhine there. Nor yet muſt we think that the Graces or Influences of the Spirit abide in us in the ſelf-ſame meaſure and manner as they do in Chriſt; for God giveth not the Spirit to him by meaſure; in him all Fulneſs dwells. He is anointed with the Spirit above his Fellows; but there are Meaſures and Proportions of Grace differently communicated to Believers by the ſame Spirit; and theſe communicated Graces and real Operations of the Spirit of Grace in our Hearts, do undoubtedly prove the Reality of our Union with Chriſt; as the communication of the ſelf ſame vital Juice, or Sap of the Stock to the Branch whereby it lives, and brings forth Fruit of the ſame kind, certainly proves it to be a real part or Member of the ſame Tree.

Thirdly, Which brings us to the third thing; namely, the certainty of the trial this way, ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκομεν in this, or by this we know: we ſo know, that we cannot be deceived. To clear this, let us conſider two things in Grace, viz.

1. Somewhat Conſtitutive } of its being.
2. Somewhat Manifeſtative }

There is ſomething in Grace which is eſſential and conſtitutive of its being; and ſomewhat that flows from Grace, and is manifeſtative of ſuch a Being: we cannot immediately and intuitively diſcern the Eſſence of Grace, as it is in its ſimple nature. So God only diſcerns it, who is the Author of it: but we may diſcern it mediately and ſecondarily by the Effects and Operations of it. Could we ſee the ſimple Eſſence of Grace, or intuitively diſcern our Union with Chriſt, our Knowledge would be demonſtrative, à priori ad poſterius, by ſeeing Effects, as they are lodged in their Cauſe; but we come to know the being of Grace, and the reality of our Union with Chriſt, à poſteriori, by aſcending in our Knowledge from the Effects and Operations, to their true cauſe and being.

And accordingly God hath furniſhed us with a Power of Self intuition and Reflection: whereby we are able to turn in upon our own Hearts, and make a Judgment upon our ſelves, and upon our own Acts. The Soul hath not only a Power to project, but a Power alſo to reflect upon its own Actions, not only to put forth a direct Act of Faith upon Jeſus Chriſt, but to judge and diſcern that Act alſo, 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed: and this is the way in which Believers attain their Certainty and Knowledge of their Union with Chriſt: from hence the Obſervation will be.

Doctr. That intereſt in Chriſt may be certainly gathered, and concluded from the gift of the Spirit to us: no Man (ſaith the Apoſtle) hath ſeen God at any time; if we love one another, God dwelleth in us; and his love is perfected in us: hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, becauſe he hath given us of his Spirit, 1 John 4. 12, 13. The Being of God is inviſible, but the Operations of his Spirit in Believers are ſenſible and diſcernable. The Souls Union with Chriſt is a ſupernatural Myſtery, yet is it diſcoverable by the Effects thereof, which are very perceptible in and by Believers. Two things require Explication, and Confirmation in the doctrinal part of this Point.

1. What the giving of the Spirit imports and ſignifies.
2. How it evidences the Soul's intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt.

Firſt, As to the importance of this Phraſe, we are to enquire what is meant by the Spirit, and what by the giving of the Spirit.

Now the Spirit is taken in Scripture two ways, viz.

Eſſentially: Or Perſonally.

In the firſt Sence it is put for the God-head, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Juſtified in the Spirit, (i. e.) by the Power of his divine Nature, which raiſed him from the Dead. In the ſecond Senſe it denotes the third Perſon, or ſubſiſtence in the glorious and bleſſed Trinity, and to him this Word Spirit is attributed, ſometimes properly in the Sence beforemention'd, as denoting his perſonality; at other times metonymically, and then it is put for the Effects, Fruits, Graces and Gifts of the Spirit, Communicated by him unto Men, Eph. 5. 11. Be ye filled with the Spirit. Now the Fruits or Gifts of the Spirit are either,

1. Common, and assisting Gifts: Or,
2. Special, and Sanctifying Gifts.

In the last Sence and Signification, it must be taken in this place: for as to the common, assisting and ministring Gifts of the Spirit, they are bestowed promiscuously upon one as well as another. Such Gifts in an excellent degree, and a large measure are found in the unregenerate, and therefore can never amount to a solid evidence of the Soul's Union with Christ: but his special sanctifying Gifts, being the proper effect and consequent of that Union, must needs strongly prove and confirm it. In this Sense therefore we are to understand the Spirit in this place: and by giving the Spirit to us, we are to understand more than the coming of the Spirit upon us: the Spirit of God is said to come upon Men in a transient way, for their present assistance in some particular Service, though in themselves they be unsanctified Persons: thus the spirit of God came upon Balaam, Numb. 24. 2. enabling him to Prophesie of things to come; and although those extraordinary Gifts of the Spirit be now ceased, yet the Spirit ceaseth not to give his ordinary assistances unto Men, both regenerate and unregenerate, 1 Cor. 12. 8, 9, 10, 31. Compared: but whatever Gifts he gives to others, he is said to be given, to dwell and to abide only in Believers, 1 Cor. 3. 16. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? An Expression denoting both his special propriety in them, and gracious familiarity with them: there is a great difference betwixt the assisting and the indwelling of the Spirit: the one is transient, the other permanent. That is a good rule the Schoolmen give us, illa tantum dicuntur inesse, quæ insunt per modum quietis: those things are only said to be in a Man, which are in him by way of rest, and permanency, and so the Spirit is in Believers: therefore they are said to live in the spirit, Gal. 5. 25. To be led by the spirit, ver. 18. To be in the spirit, and the spirit to dwell in them, Rom. 8. 9. And so much of the first thing to be opened, viz. what we are to understand by the giving of the Spirit.

Secondly, In the next place we are to enquire and satisfie our selves, how this giving of the Spirit evidently proves, and strongly concludes, that Souls interest in Christ unto whom he is given: and this will evidently appear by the consideration of these five particulars.

Fir. The Spirit of God in Believers is the very bond by which they are united unto Christ: if therefore we find in our selves the bond of union, we may warrantably conclude that we have union with Jesus Christ: this is evidently held forth in those words of Jesus Christ, John 17. 22, 23. The glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me: 'Tis the glory of Christ's humane nature to be united to the God-head: this (said Christ) thou gavest me, and the glory thou gavest me I have given them (i. e.) by me they are united unto thee: and how this is done he sheweth us more particularly, I in them; there is Christ in us, viz. mystically; and thou in me, there is God in Christ, viz Hypostatically; so that in Christ God and Believers meet in a blessed union. 'Tis Christ's glory to be one with God; 'tis our glory to be one with Christ, and with God by him; But how is this done? certainly no other way but by the giving of his Spirit unto us; for so much that phrase I in them must needs import; Christ is in us by the sanctifying Spirit which is the bond of our union with him.

Secondly, The Scripture every where makes this giving or indwelling of the Spirit the great mark and tryal of our interest in Christ; concluding from the presence of it in us positively, as in the Text; and from the absence of it, negatively, as in Rom. 8. 9. Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, the same is none of his, Jude ver. 19. sensual, not having the Spirit; this mark therefore agreeing to all Believers, and to none but Believers; and that always, and at all times; it must needs clearly infer the Souls union with Christ in whomsoever it is found.

Thirdly, That which is a certain mark of our freedom, from the Covenant of Works, and our Title to the Privileges of the Covenant of Grace, must needs also infer our Union with Christ, and special interest in him; but the giving or indwelling of the sanctifying spirit in us, is a certain mark of our freedom from the first Covenant, under which all Christless persons still stand; and our Title to the special Privileges of the second Covenant in which none but the Members are interested: and consequently it fully proves our Union with the Lord Jesus. This is plain from the Apostles reasoning, Gal. 4. 6, 7. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying Abba Father: wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ. The Spirit of the first Covenant was a servile Spirit, a Spirit of fear and bondage, and they that were under that Covenant were not Sons but Servants; but the Spirit of the New Covenant is a free, ingenuous Spirit, acting in the strength of God, and those that do so are the Children of God: and Children inherit the blessed privileges, and royal immunities contained in that great Charter, the Covenant of Grace; they are heirs of God, and the evidence of this their inheritance by vertue of the second Covenant, and of their freedom from the servitude and bondage of the first Covenant, is the Spirit of Christ in their hearts crying Abba Father: So Gal. 5. 18. If ye be led by the Spirit ye are not under the Law.

Fourthly, if the eternal decree of God's electing love be executed, and the vertues and benefits of the death of Christ applyed by the Spirit, unto every Soul in whom he dwelleth as a Spirit of Sanctification; then such a giving of the Spirit unto us must needs be a certain mark and proof of our special interest in Christ: but the decree of God's electing love is executed, and the benefits of the blood of Christ are applyed unto every Soul in whom he dwelleth as a Spirit of Sanctification. This is plain from, 1 Pet. 1. 2. Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father through Sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience, and sprinkling of the Blood of Jesus Christ: where you see both God's election executed, and the Blood of Jesus sprinkled or applyed unto us by the Spirit, which is given to us as a Spirit of Sanctification. There is a blessed order of working observed as proper to each person in the God-head: the Father electeth, the Son redeemeth, the Spirit sanctifieth. The Spirit is the last efficient in the work of our Salvation: what the Father decreed and the Son purchased, that the Spirit applyeth; and so puts the last hand to the compleat Salvation of Believers. And this some Divines give as the reason why the sin against the Spirit is unpardonable, because he being the last age agent in order of working, if the heart of a Man be filled with enmity againſt the Spirit, here can be no remedy for ſuch a ſin; there is no looking back to the death of Chriſt, or to the love of God for remedy; this ſin againſt the Spirit is that obex infernalis, the deadly ſtop and bar to the whole work of Salvation; oppoſitely, where the Spirit is received, obeyed, and dwelleth in the way of Sanctification; into that Soul the eternal love of God, the ineſtimable benefits of the Blood of Chriſt run freely without ſtop or interruption; and conſequently the intereſt of ſuch a Soul in Jeſus Chriſt is beyond all diſpute.

Fifthly, The giving of the Spirit to us, or his reſiding in us as a ſanctifying Spirit, is every where in Scripture made the pledge and earneſt of eternal Salvation, and conſequently muſt abundantly confirm and prove the Soul's intereſt in Chriſt; Eph. 1. 13, 14. In whom alſo after that ye believed, ye were ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe; which is the earneſt of our Inheritance, &c. So 2 Cor. 1. 22. who hath alſo ſealed us, and given the earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts. And thus you have the point opened and confirmed. The Uſe of all followeth.

Uſe. Now the only uſe I make of this point ſhall be that which lyeth directly both in the eye of the Text, and of the Deſign for which it was choſen; namely, by it to try and examine the truth of our intereſt, and the validity of our claim to Jeſus Chriſt. In purſuance of which deſign I ſhall firſt lay down ſome general rules, and then propoſe ſome particular tryals.

First, I ſhall lay down ſome general rules for the true information of our minds in this point upon which ſo great a weight hangs.

Rule 1. Though the Spirit of God be given to us and worketh in us, yet he worketh not as a natural and neceſſary, but as a free and arbitrary agent: he neither aſſiſts or ſanctifies as the fire burneth, ad ultimum ſui poſſe, as much as he can aſſiſt or ſanctifie, but as much as he pleaſeth: Dividing to every man ſeverally as he will, 1 Cor. 12. 11. Beſtowing greater meaſures of gifts and graces upon ſome, than upon others; and aſſiſting the ſame perſon, more at one Seaſon than another: and all this variety of operation floweth from his own good pleaſure: his grace is his own, and may give it as he pleaſeth.

Rule 2. There is a great difference in the manner of the Spirits working before, and after the work of regeneration: whileſt we are unregenerate, he works upon us as upon dead Creatures that work not at all with him; and what motion there is in our Souls, is a counter-motion to the Spirit: but after regeneration it is not ſo, he then works upon a complying and willing mind: we work and he aſſiſts, Phil. 2. 13. Our Conſcience witneſſeth, and he worketh witneſs with it, Rom. 8. 16. It is therefore an Error of dangerous conſequence to think that ſanctified perſons are not bound to ſtir or ſtrive in the way of duty without a ſenſible impulſe or preventing motion of the Spirit, Iſa. 64. 7.

Rule 3. Though the Spirit of God be given to believers, and worketh in them, yet believers themſelves may do, and commit ſuch things as may obſtruct the working, and grieve the very being of the Spirit of God in them; ita tractat, ut à nobis tractatur: he dealeth with us in his evidencing, and comforting work, as we deal with him in point of tenderneſs and obedience to his dictates: there is a grieving, yea, there is a quenching of the Spirit by the luſts and corruptions of thoſe hearts in which he dwelleth: though he will not forſake his habitation as a Spirit of Sanctification, yet he may for a time deſert it as a Spirit of Conſolation, Pſal. 51. 11.

Rule 4. Thoſe things which diſcover the indwelling of the Spirit in believers are not ſo much the matter of their duties, or ſubſtance of their actions; as the more ſecret ſprings, holy aims, and Spiritual manner of their doing, or performing of them; 'tis not ſo much the matter of a prayer, the neat and orderly Expreſſions in which it is uttered; as the inward Senſe, and Spiritual deſign of the Soul: 'tis not the choice of elegant words whereby our Conceptions are cloathed, or the copiouſneſs of the matter with which we are furniſhed; for even a poor ſtammering tongue, and broken language may have more of the Spirit of God in it. This made Luther ſay, he ſaw more excellency in the duty of a plain ruſtick Chriſtian, than in all the Triumphs of Cæſar and Alexander: the beauty and excellency of Spiritual duties is an inward hidden thing.

Rule 5. All the motions and operations of the Spirit are always harmonical and ſuitable to the written word: Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony; if they ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light in them. The Scriptures are by the inſpiration of the Spirit, therefore his inſpirations into the hearts of believers muſt either ſubſtantially agree with the Scriptures, or the inſpirations of the Spirit be ſelf-repugnant, and contradictory to one another. It is very obſervable that the works of grace wrought by the Spirit in the hearts of believers are repreſented to us in Scripture as a tranſcript or copy of the written word: Jer. 31. 33. I will write my Law in their hearts. Now as a true copy anſwers the original word for word, letter for letter, point for point; ſo do the works of the Spirit in our Souls harmonize with the dictates of the Spirit in the Scriptures: whatſoever motion therefore ſhall be found repugnant thereunto, muſt not be fathered upon the Spirit of God, but laid at the door of its proper parents, the Spirit of error, and corrupt nature.

Rule 6. Although the works of the Spirit in all ſanctified perſons do ſubſtantially agree, both with the written word, and with one another (as ten thouſand copies penned from one original muſt needs agree within themſelves) yet as to the manner of infuſion, and operation, there are found many circumſtantial differences: the Spirit of God doth not hold one and the ſame method of working upon all hearts: the work of grace is introduced into ſome Souls with more terrour and trouble for ſin than it is in others: He wrought upon Paul one way; upon Lydia in another way: he holds ſome much longer under terrours and troubles than he doth others: inveterate and more prophane ſinners find ſtronger troubles for ſin, and are held longer under them, than thoſe are into whoſe hearts grace is more early and inſenſibly infuſed by the Spirits bleſſing upon religious education: but as thoſe have leſs trouble than the others at firſt, ſo commonly they have leſs clearneſs, and more doubts and fears about the work of the Spirit afterwards.

Rule 7. There is a great difference found betwixt the ſanctifying, and the comforting influences of the Spirit upon believers in reſpect of conſtancy, and permanency: his ſanctifying influences abide for ever in the Soul: they never depart; but his comforting influences come and go, and abide not long upon the hearts of believers. Sanctification belongs to the being of a Chriſtian, Conſolation only to his well-being: the firſt therefore is fixed and abiding, the latter various and inconſtant. Sanctification brings us to Heaven hereafter, Conſolation brings Heaven into us here: our Safety lies in the former, our Cheerfulneſs only in the latter. There are times and ſeaſons in the lives of Believers wherein the Spirit of God doth more ſignally and eminently ſeal their Spirits and raviſh their Hearts with Joy unſpeakable: but what Bernard ſpeaketh, is certainly true in the experience of Chriſtians: It is a ſweet hour, and it is but an hour: a thing of ſhort continuance: the reliſh of it is exceeding ſweet, but it is not often that Chriſtians taſte it. And ſo much may ſuffice for the general rules about the in-being and workings of the Spirit in Believers, for the better Information of our Underſtandings, and prevention of miſtakes in this matter, I ſhall next, according to promiſe, lay down the particular marks and tryals by which we may diſcern whether God hath given us his Spirit or no: by which grown Chriſtians when they are in a due compoſed frame, may, by the aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God, (for which therefore they are bound to pray) diſcern his indwelling, and working in themſelves.

Rara hora, brevis mora; ſapit quidem ſuaviſſime, ſed guſtatur rariſſime. Bern.

Evidence 1. In whomſoever the Spirit of Chriſt is a Spirit of Sanctification, to that man or woman he hath been more or leſs a Spirit of Conviction and Humiliation: this is the order which the Spirit conſtantly obſerves in adult, or grown Converts. John 16. 8, 9. And when he is come he will reprove the world of Sin, and of Righteouſneſs, and of Judgment: of Sin becauſe they believed not on me. This you ſee is the method he obſerves all the World over: he ſhall reprove or convince the World of ſin. Conviction of ſin hath the ſame reſpect unto Sanctification, as the Bloſſoms of Trees have to the Fruits that follow them: a bloſſom is but fructus imperfectus, & ordinabilis; an imperfect fruit in it ſelf, and in order to a more perfect and noble fruit; where there are no Bloſſoms, we can expect no fruit, and where we ſee no Convictions of ſin, we can expect no Converſion to Chriſt. Hath then the Spirit of God been a Spirit of Conviction to thee? hath he more particularly convinced thee of ſin becauſe thou haſt not believed on him? (i.e.) hath he ſhewn thee thy ſin and miſery, as an Unbeliever? not only terrified and affrighted thy Conſcience with this or that more notorious act of ſin, but fully convinced thee of the ſtate of ſin that thou art in by reaſon of thy unbelief; which holding thee from Chriſt, muſt needs alſo hold thee under the guilt of all thy other ſins. This gives at leaſt a ſtrong probability that God hath given thee his Spirit, eſpecially, when this Conviction remains day and night upon thy Soul, ſo that nothing but Chriſt can give it reſt, and conſequently the great Inquiſition of thy Soul is after Chriſt, and none but Chriſt.

Evidence 2. As the Spirit of God hath been a convincing, ſo he is a quickening Spirit to all thoſe to whom he is given; Rom. 8. 2. The law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus hath made me free from the Law of ſin and death; he is the Spirit of life, (i. e.) the principle of ſpiritual life in the Souls whom he inhabiteth; for uniting them to Chriſt, he unites them to the fountain of life; and this ſpiritual life in Believers manifeſts it ſelf as the natural life doth in vital Actions and Operations. When the Spirit of God comes into the Soul of a Man that was dead, and ſenſeleſs under ſin, O (ſaith he) now I begin to feel the weight and load of ſin, Rom. 7. 24. now I begin to hunger, and thirſt after Chriſt and his Ordinances, 1 Pet. 2. 2. now I begin to breath after God in ſpiritual Prayer, Acts 9. 11. Spiritual life hath its ſpiritual Senſes, and ſuitable Operations. O think upon this, you that cannot feel any burthen in ſin, you that have no hungerings or thirſtings after Chriſt; how can the Spirit of God be in you? I do not deny but there may at ſome times be much deadneſs and ſenſeleſsneſs upon the hearts of Chriſtians, but this is their Diſeaſe, not their Nature; it is but at ſome times not always, and when it is ſo with them they are burthened with it, and complain of it as their greateſt Affliction in this World; their Spirits are not eaſie and at reſt in ſuch a condition as yours are, their Spirit is as a Bone out of joint, an Arm diſlocated which cannot move any way without pain.

Evidence 3. Thoſe to whom God giveth his Spirit have a tender ſympathy with all the intereſt and concernments of Chriſt; this muſt needs be ſo, if the ſame Spirit which is in Chriſt dwelleth alſo in thy heart: if thou be a Partaker of his Spirit, then what he loves, thou loveſt; and what he hateth, thou hateſt: this is a very plain caſe; even in nature it ſelf we find that the many members of the ſame natural body being animated by one and the ſame Spirit of life: whether one member ſuffer, all the members ſuffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it: now ye are the body of Chriſt, and members in particular, 1 Cor. 12. 26, 27. For look as Chriſt the head of that Body is touched with a tender Senſe and feeling of the miſeries and troubles of his People: he is perſecuted, when they are perſecuted, Acts 9. 4. ſo they that have the Spirit of Chriſt in them, cannot be without a deep and tender Senſe of the reproach and diſhonours that are done to Chriſt: this is as it were a ſword in their bones, Pſal. 42. 3. If his publick Worſhip ceaſe, the Aſſemblies of his People ſcattered, it cannot but go to the hearts of all in whom the Spirit of Chriſt is: they will be ſorrowful for the ſolemn aſſemblies: the reproach of them will be a burden, Zeph. 3. 18. Thoſe that have the Spirit of Chriſt do no more earneſtly long after any one thing in this World, than the advancement of Chriſt's Intereſt by Converſion and Reformation in the Kingdoms of the Earth, Pſal. 45. 3, 4. Paul could rejoice that Chriſt was preached, though his own Afflictions were increaſed, Phil. 1. 16, 18. and John could rejoice that Chriſt encreaſed, though he himſelf decreaſed; yet therein was his joy fulfilled, Joh. 3. 29. ſo certainly the Concernments of Chriſt muſt and will touch that heart which is the Habitation of his Spirit, & cannot deny but even a good Barnabas may be under a Temptation to ſeek great things for himſelf, and be too much ſwallowed up in his own Concernments, when God is plucking up and breaking down, Jer. 45. 4. 5. But this is only the influence of a Temptation: the true Temper and Spirit of a Believer inclines him to ſorrow and mourning, when things are in this poſture. Ezek. 9. 4. Go through the midſt of the City, through the midſt of Jeruſalem; and ſet a mark upon the foreheads of the men that ſigh, and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midſt thereof.

O Reader, lay thine hand upon thine heart: is it thus with thee? doſt thou ſympathize with the Affairs and Concernments of Chriſt in the World? or careſt thou not which way things go with the People of God, and Goſpel of Chriſt; ſo long as thine own Affairs proſper, and all things are well with thee?

Evidence

Evidence 4. Where-ever the Spirit of God dwelleth, he doth in some degree mortifie and subdue the evils and corruptions of the soul in which he resides: this Spirit lusteth against the flesh, Gal. 5. 7. and believers through the Spirit, do mortifie the deeds of the body, Rom. 8, 13. this is one special part of his sanctifying work. I do not say he so kills and subdues sin in believers, as that it shall never trouble or defile them any more: no, no, that freedom belongs to the perfect state in Heaven, but its dominion is taken away, though its life be prolonged for a season: it lives in believers still, but not upon the provision they willingly make to fulfil the Lust of it, Rom. 13. ult. The design of every true believer is co-incident with the design of the Spirit to destroy, and mortifie corruption: they long after the extirpation of it; and are daily in the use of all sanctified means and instruments, to subdue and destroy it; the workings of their corruption are the afflictions of their Souls; Rom. 7. 24. O wretched man that I am who shall deliver me from the body of this death? and there is no one thing that sweetens the thoughts of death to believers (except the sight and full enjoyment of God) more than their expected deliverance from sin doth.

Evidence 5. Where-ever the Spirit of God dwelleth in the way of sanctification, in all such he is the Spirit of prayer and supplication: Rom. 3. 26. Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit it self maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered: Where-ever he is poured out as the spirit of grace, he is also poured out as the spirit of supplication: Zech. 12. 10. his praying, and his sanctifying influences are undivided. There is a threefold assistance that the Spirit gives unto sanctified persons in prayer: he helps them before they pray, by setting an edge upon their desires and affections: he helps them in prayer by supplying matters of request to them, teaching them what they should ask of God: he assisteth them in the manner of Prayer, supplying to them suitable affections, and helping them to be sincere in all their desires to God: 'tis he that humbles the Pride of their hearts, dissolves and breaks the hardness of their hearts: out of deadness makes them lively; out of weakness makes them strong: he assisteth the Spirits of Believers after Prayer, helping them to Faith and Patience, to believe and wait for the returns, and answers of their Prayers. O Reader, reflect upon thy Duties, consider what spirituality, sincerity, Humility, Brokenheartedness, and melting Affections after God are to be found in thy Duties: Is it so with thee? or dost thou shuffle over thy Duties as an interruption to thy business and pleasures? Are they an ungrateful task imposed upon thee by God, and thy own Conscience? Are there no Hungerings and Thirstings after God in thy Soul? or if there be any pleasure arising to thee out of Prayer, is it not from the ostentation of thy Gifts? if it be so, reflect sadly upon the carnal state of thy heart, these things do not speak the Spirit of Grace, and Supplication to be given thee.

Evidence 6. Where ever the Spirit of Grace inhabits, there is an heavenly spiritual frame of Mind, accompanying and evidencing the Indwelling of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 5. 6. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the Flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit: for to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace: by the Mind, understand the musings, reasonings, yea and the cares, fears, delights and pleasures of the Soul, which follow the workings and meditations of the Mind; as these are, so are we; if these be ordinarily, and habitually taken up, and exercised about earthly things, then is the frame and state of the Man carnal and earthly: the workings of every creature follow the being, and nature of it: If God, Christ, Heaven and the World to come engage the thoughts, and affections of the Soul, the temper of such a Soul is spiritual; and the Spirit of God dwelleth there; this is the life of the regenerate, Phil. 3. 20. Our conversation is in Heaven; and such a frame of heart is life and Peace: a serene, placid, and most comfortable life: no pleasure upon earth; no gratifications of the senses do relish, and savour as spiritual things do. Consider therefore which way thy heart ordinarily works, especially in thy Solitudes and hours of retirement: these things will be a great evidence for, or against thy Soul. David could say, How precious are thy thoughts unto me O God! How great is the summ of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand; when I awake I am still with thee, Psal. 139. 17, 18. Yet it must be acknowledged for the relief of weaker Christians, that there is great odds, and variety found in this matter among the People of God: for the strength, steadiness, and constancy of a spiritual mind results from the depth and improvement of Sanctification: the more Grace, still the more evenness, spirituality, and constancy there is in the motions of the heart after God. The Minds of weak Christians are more easily entangled in earthly Vanities, and more frequently diverted by inward corruptions; yet still there is a spiritual pondus, inclination and bent of their Hearts towards God, and the vanity and corruption which hinders their communion with him, is their greatest grief and burthen under which they groan in this World.

Evidence 7. Those to whom the Spirit of Grace is given, are led by the Spirit, Rom. 8. 14. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God: Sanctified Souls give themselves up to the government, and conduct of the Spirit; they obey his voice, beg his direction, follow his motions, deny the sollicitations of the flesh and blood, in obedience to him, Gal. 1. 16. And they that do so, they are the Sons of God. 'Tis the Office of the Spirit to guide us in all truth; and 'tis our great duty to follow his guidance. Hence it is that in all enterprizes, and undertakements, the People of God so earnestly beg direction and counsel from him; Lead me, O Lord, in thy righteousness, (saith David) make thy way straight before my face, Psal. 8. 5. They dare not, in doubtful cases, lean to their own understandings; yea, in points of duty and in points of sin, they dare not neglect the one, or commit the other, against the convictions and perswasions of their own Consciences; though troubles and sufferings be unavoidable in that path of duty; when they have balanced duties with sufferings in their most serious thoughts, the conclusion and result will still be, it is better to obey God than Man, the dictates of the Spirit rather than the Counsels of flesh and blood.

But before I leave this Point, I reckon my self a debtor unto weak Christians, and shall endeavour to give satisfaction to some special doubts and fears with which their Minds are ordinarily entangled in this matter; for it is a very plain case, that many Souls have the presence and Sanctification of the spirit without the evidence and comfort thereof. Divers things are found in Believers, which are as so many Fountains of Fears, and doubts to them. And,

Obj 1. First, I greatly doubt the spirit of God is not in me (saith a poor Christian) because of the great darkness and ignorance which clouds my Soul; for I read, 1 Joh 2.27. that he enlightneth the Soul which he inhabiteth; The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you, but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, &c. but alas, my understanding is weak and cloudy, I have need to learn of the meanest of God's People; this only I know, that I know nothing as I ought to know.

Sol. Two things are to be respected in spiritual knowledge; viz. the quantity and the efficacy thereof: your condition doth not so much depend upon the measures of knowledge, for haply, you are under many natural disadvantages, and want those helps and means of increasing knowledge, which others plentifully enjoy: it may be you have wanted the helps of education, or have been encumbred by the necessities and cares of the World; which have allowed you but little leasure for the improvement of your Minds: but if that which you do know be turned into practice and obedience, Col. 1. 9. 10. If it have influence upon your hearts, and transform your affections into a spiritual frame and temper, 2 Cor. 3. 17, 18. If your ignorance humble you, and drive you to God daily for the increase of Knowledge: one drop of such Knowledge of Christ and your selves as this, is more worth than a Sea of Humane, Moral, Unsanctified, and Speculative knowledge: though you know but little, yet that little being sanctified is of great value: though you know but little, time was when ye knew nothing of Jesus Christ, or the state of your own Souls. In a word, though you know but little, that little you do know will be still encreasing, like the morning light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day, Prov. 4. 18. If thou knowest so much as brings thee to Christ, thou shalt shortly be where thy knowledge shall be as the light at noon day.

Obj. 2. I sometime find my heart raised, and my affections melted in duties, but I doubt it is in a natural way, and not from the Spirit of God: could I be assured those motions of my heart were from the Spirit of grace, and not meerly a natural thing, it would be singular comfort and satisfaction to me.

Sol. First, Consider, whether this be not the ground of your fear and doubting, because you are fain to take pains in the way of meditation, prayer, and other duties to bring your hearts to sense and savour the things of God: whereas, it may be, you expect your Spiritual enlargements and comforts should flow in upon you spontaneously, and drop from heaven immediately of their own accord, without any pains or industry of yours: here may be, (and probably is) a great mistake in this matter; for the Spirit of God works in the natural method, wherein affections use to be raised, and makes use of such duties as Meditation and Prayer, as instruments to do that work by, Ezek. 36. 37. So David was forced to reason with, and chide his own heart, Psal. 42. 5. Thy comfort and enlargement may nevertheless be the fruit of the Spirit, because God makes it spring up, and grow upon thy Duties.

Secondly, Take this as a sure rule, whatsoever rises from self, always aim at, and terminates in self; this stream cannot be carryed higher than the fountain, if therefore thy aim and end in striving for affections and enlargements in duty, be only to win applause from Men, and appear to be what in reality thou art not, this indeed is the Fruit of nature, and a very corrupt and hypocritical nature; but if thy heart be melted, or desire to be melted in the sense of the evil of sin, in order to the farther mortification of it; and under the apprehensions of the Free Grace and Mercy of God in the pardon of Sin, in order to the engaging of thy Soul more firmly to him: If these or such like be thy ends and designs, or be promoted and furthered by thine enlargements and Spiritual comforts, never reject them as the meer fruits of nature; a carnal root cannot bring forth such fruits as these.

Obj. 3. Upon the contrary, Spiritual deadness, and indispositedness to duties, and to those especially which are more secret, Spiritual, and self-denying than others, is the ground upon which many thousand Souls who are yet truly gracious, do doubt the indwelling of the Spirit in them. O, saith such a Soul, if the Spirit of God be in me, Why is it thus? Could my heart be so dead, so backward, and averse to spiritual duties? no, no, these things would be my meat, and my drink; the delights and pleasures of my life.

Sol. First, These things indeed are very sad and argue thy heart to be out of frame, as the Body is when it cannot relish the most desireable Meats, or Drinks: but the question will be, how thy Soul behaves its self in such a condition as this is, whether this be easy or burthensome to be born by thee: and if thou complain under it as a burthen; then what pains thou takest to ease thy self, and get rid of it.

Qui bonum vult, & malum non vult, is stadium retinet placendi deo: quamvis illeEius concupiscentia mala, nonnunquam ex infirmitate illud committat quoddeo displicet. Davenant.

Secondly, Know also that there is a great difference betwixt Spiritual death, and Spiritual deadness: the former is the state of the Unregenerate: the latter is the disease and complaint of many thousand Regenerate Souls: if David had not felt it as well as thee, he would never have cryed out nine times in the compass of one Psalm, Quicken me, quicken me. Besides,

Thirdly, Though it be often, it is not so always with thee: there are seasons wherein the Lord breaks in upon thy heart, enlarges thy affections: and sets thy Soul at liberty: to which times thou wilt do well to have an eye, in these dark and cloudy days.

Obj. 4. But the Spirit of God is a Comforter as well as a Sanctifier: he doth not only enable Men to believe, but after they believe he also seals them, Eph. 1. 13. but I walk in darkness, and am a stranger to the sealing, and comforting work of the Spirit: How therefore can I imagine the Spirit of God should dwell in me, who go from day to day in the bitterness of my Soul, mourning as without the Sun?

Sol. There is a two-fold sealing, and two-fold comfort: the Spirit sealeth both objectively in the work of Sanctification, and formally in giving clear evidence of that work: thou mayest be sealed in the first, whilst thou art not yet sealed in the second sense: if so, thy condition is safe, al-although it be at preſent uncomfortable: And as to comfort, that alſo is of two ſorts, viz. ſeminal, or actual: in the root, or in the fruit: Light is ſown for the righteous, Pſal. 97. 11. though the harveſt to reap and gather in that Joy and Comfort be not yet come; and there are many other ways beſides that of Joy and Comfort, whereby the indwelling of the Spirit may evidence it ſelf in thy Soul: if he do not enable thee to rejoyce, yet if he enable thee ſincerely to mourn for ſin; if he do not enlarge thy heart in Comfort, yet if he humble and purge thy heart by ſorrows, if he deny the aſſurance of Faith, and yet give thee the dependance of Faith, thou haſt no reaſon to call in queſtion, or deny the indwelling of the Spirit in thee for that cauſe.

Obj. But the Apoſtle ſaith, They that walk in the Spirit do not fulfil the Luſts of the fleſh, Gal. 5. 16. But I find my ſelf entangled, and frequently overcome by them, therefore I doubt the Spirit of God is not in me.

Sol. 'Tis poſſible the ground of your doubting may be your miſtake of the true ſenſe and meaning of that Scripture: it is not the Apoſtles meaning in that place, that Sin in Believers doth not work, tempt, and oftentimes overcome, and captivate them: for then he would contradict himſelf in Rom. 7. 23. where he thus complains, but I ſee another Law in my members warring againſt the Law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the Law of ſin which is in my members: but two things are meant by that expreſſion, you ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh.

Firſt, that the Principle of Grace will give cheque to ſin in its firſt motions, and cauſe it to miſcarry in the Womb like an untimely Birth, before it comes to its full Maturity: it ſhall never be able to gain the full conſent of the will as it doth in the Unregenerate.

Secondly, If notwithſtanding all the oppoſition Grace makes to hinder the Birth, or commiſſion of it, it do yet prevail, and break forth into act; yet ſuch acts of ſin as they are not committed without regret, ſo they are followed with ſhame, ſorrow, and true repentance: and thoſe very ſurprizals, and captivities of ſin at one time, are made cautions, and warnings to prevent it at another time; if it be ſo with thee, thou doſt not fulfill the Luſts of the fleſh.

And now, Reader, upon the whole; if upon examination of thy heart by theſe rules, the Lord ſhall help thee to diſcern the ſaving work of the Spirit upon thy Soul, and thereby thine Intereſt in Chriſt, What a happy Man or Woman art thou? What pleaſure will ariſe to thy Soul, from ſuch a Diſcovery! Look upon the frame of thine heart abſolutely as it is in it ſelf at preſent, or comparatively with what once it was, and others ſtill are, and thou wilt find enough to tranſport and melt thy heart within thee: certainly this is the moſt glorious piece of Workmanſhip that ever God wrought in the World upon any Man, Ep. 2. 10. The Spirit of God is come down from Heaven, and hath hallowed thy Soul to be a Temple for himſelf to dwell in; as he hath ſaid, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and I will be their God and they ſhall be my People, 2 Cor. 7. 16. Moreover this gift of the Spirit is a ſure pledge, and earneſt of thy future Glory: time was when there was no ſuch work upon thy Soul, and conſidering the frame and temper of it, the total averſation, ſtrong oppoſition, and rooted enmity that was in it; it is the wonder of wonders that ever ſuch a work as this ſhould be wrought upon ſuch an heart as thine; that ever the Spirit of God, whoſe nature is pure, and perfect holineſs, ſhould chuſe ſuch an unclean, polluted, abominable heart, to frame an habitation for himſelf there to dwell in; to ſay of thy Soul (now his ſpiritual Temple) as he once ſaid of the material Temple at Jeruſalem, Pſal. 132, 13. 14. The Lord hath choſen it, he hath deſired it for his habitation; this is my reſt for ever, here will I dwell, for I have deſired it. O what hath God done for thy Soul!

Think, Reader, and think again; Are there not many thouſands in the World of more ingenuous, ſweet, and amiable diſpoſitions than thy ſelf, whom yet the Spirit of God paſſeth by, and leaveth them as Tabernacles for Satan to dwell in? ſuch a one thou lately waſt, and hadſt ſtill remained, if God had not wrought for thee, beyond all the expectation, and deſires of thine own heart. O bleſs God that you have received not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God; that ye might know the things which are freely given unto you of God.

SERMON XXV.

2 COR. V, 17.

Wherefore if any Man be in Chriſt, he is a New Creature: old things are paſſed away, behold all things are become new.

v. 25 Text. Of the nature and neceſſity of the new Creature.

YOU have ſeen one tryal of an intereſt in Chriſt in our laſt Diſcourſe, namely, by the Donation of the Spirit: we have here another Tryal of the ſame matter, from one of the greateſt, and moſt noble effects of the Spirit upon our Souls; namely, his work of renovation, or new creation: If any man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature. The Apoſtles ſcope in the immediate context, is to diſſuade Chriſtians from a carnal, ſinful partiality, in their reſpects to Men: not to diſpenſe them after the manner of the World, according to the external differences, but the real internal worth and excellency that is in Men. This the Apoſtle preſſes by two Arguments; one drawn from the end of Chriſts death, verſe 15. which was to take off from thoſe ſelfiſh deſigns, and carnal ends by which the world is ſwayed. Secondly, from the new Spirit by which Believers are acted: they that are in Chriſt, are to judge and meaſure all things by a new rule: if any man be in Christ, he is a new Creature: old things are passed away; q. d. we have done with that low selfish Spirit of the World which was wholly governed by Carnal interest; we are now to judge by a new rule, to be acted from a new principle, aim at a new, and more noble end; behold all things are become new. In these words we have three general parts to be distinctly considered, viz.

1. The great question to be determined, if any man be in Christ.
2. The Rule by which it may be determined, viz. he is a new creature.
3. This general rule more particularly explained, old things are passed away, behold all things are become new.

First, We have here the great question to be determined, Whether a Man be in Christ? a question upon the determination whereof we must stand or fall for ever; by [being in Christ] the Apostle doth not here mean the general profession of Christianity which gives a Man the reputation of an interest in him; but by being in Christ he means an interest in him by vital union with his person, and real participation of his benefits; now this is the question to be determined, the matter to be tryed; than which nothing can be more solemn, and important in the whole World.

Secondly, The rule by which this great question may be determined, viz. The new creation; if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; by this rule all the titles and claims made to Christ in the professing world are to be examined: [if any man] be he what he will, high or low; great or small; learned or illiterate; young or old; if he pretend interest in Christ; this is the standard by which he must be tryed; if he be in Christ, he is a new Creature; and if he be not a new Creature, he is not in Christ; let his endowments, gifts, confidence, and reputation be what it will be: [a new Creature] not new Physically, he is the same Person he was, but a new Creature, that is, a creature renewed by gracious principles newly infused into him from above, which sway him and guide him in another manner, and to another end than ever he acted before: and these gracious principles not being educed out of any thing which was pre-existent in Man, but infused de novo, from above, are therefore called in this place a new creature: this is the rule by which our claim to Christ must be determined.

Thirdly, This general rule is here more particularly explained, old things are passed away, behold all things are become new: he satisfies not himself to lay down this rule concisely, or express it in general terms by telling us the Man in Christ must be a new Creature, but more particularly, he shews us what this new Creature is, and what the parts thereof are, viz.

1. Privative part, old things are passed away.
2. Positive part thereof, all things are become new.

By old things he means all those carnal principles, self-ends, fleshly lusts belonging to the carnal state, or the old Man: all these are passed away; not simply, and perfectly, but only in parts at present, and wholly in hope, and expectation hereafter. So much briefly of the privative part of the new Creature: old things are passed away. A Word or two must be spoken of the positive part, All things are become new. He means not that the old faculties of the Soul are abolished, and new ones created in their Room: but as our bodies may be said to be new bodies by reason of their new endowments, and qualities super-induced and bestowed upon them in their resurrection; so our Souls are now renewed by the infusion of new gracious principles into them in the work of regeneration. These two parts, viz. the privative part, the passing away of old things; and the positive part, the renewing of all things; do betwixt them comprize the whole nature of sanctification, which in other Scriptures is expressed by equivalent phrases: sometimes by putting off the old, and putting on the new Man, Eph. 4. 24. Sometimes by dying unto sin, and living unto righteousness, Rom. 6. 11. which is the self-same thing the Apostle here intends by the passing away of old things, and making all things new; and because this is the most excellent, glorious, and admirable work of the Spirit which is or can be wrought upon Man in this World; therefore the Apostle asserts it with an Ecce, a note of special remarque and observation, behold all things are become new, q. d. behold and admire this surprizing, marvellous change which God hath made upon Men: they are come out of darkness into his marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. out of the old, as it were, into a new World, behold all things are become new.

Non simpliciter, & perfecte, sed partim re, partim spe. Estius in loc.

Hence Note,

Doct. That God's creating of a new supernatural work of grace in the Soul of any Man, is that Man's sure and infallible evidence of a saving interest in Jesus Christ.

Suitable hereunto are those words of the Apostle, Eph. 4. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. But ye have not so learned Christ, if so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him as the truth is in Jesus: that ye put off concerning the former conversation the old Man which is corrupt according to deceitful lusts: and be renewed in the Spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new Man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness: where we have in other words of the same importance, the very self-same description of the Man that is in Christ, which the Apostle gives us in this Text. Now for the opening and stating of this point, it will be necessary that I shew you,

1. Why the regenerating work of the Spirit is called a new Creation.
2. In what respects every Soul that is in Christ is renewed or made a new Creature.
3. What are the remarkable properties, and qualities of this new Creature.
4. The necessity of this new Creation to all that are in Christ.
5. How this new Creation evidences our interest in Christ.
6. And then Apply the whole in the proper uses of it.

First, Why the regenerating work of the Spirit is called a new Creation: this must be our first enquiry: and doubtless the reason of this appellation is the Analogy, proportion, and similitude which is found betwixt the work of regeneration, and God's work in the first Creation: and their agreement, and proportion will be found in the following particulars.

First, The same Almighty Author who created the World, createth also this work of grace in the Soul of Man, 2 Cor. 4. 6. God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ : the same powerful word which created the Natural, createth also the Spiritual light : it is equally absurd for any Man to say, I make my self to repent, or to believe, as it is to say, I made my self exist and be.

Minus est, & facisse hominem, quam sanctum.

Secondly, The first thing that God created in the natural World was Light, Gen. 1. 3. and the first thing which God createth in the new Creation is the light of Spiritual knowledge, Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new man which is renewed in Knowledge after the image of him that created him.

Thirdly, Creation is out of nothing ; it requires no pre-existent matter ; it doth not bring one thing out of another, but something out of nothing ; it gives a being to that which before had no being. So it is also in the new Creation; 1 Pet. 2. 9, 10. Who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light ; which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy ; the work of grace is not educed out of the power, and principles of nature; but is a pure work of creation. The heathen Philosophers could neither understand, nor acknowledge the creation of the World, because that notion was repugnant to this maxim of reason, ex nihilo nihil fit, out of nothing, nothing can be made ; thus did they insanire cum ratione, befool themselves with their own reasonings ; and after the same manner some great Pretenders to Reason among us, voting it an Absurdity to affirm, that the Work of Grace is not virtually and potentially contained in nature; the new Creation in the old.

Fourthly, It was the Vertue and Efficacy of the Spirit of God which gave the natural World its Being by Creation, Gen. 1. 2. the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the Waters ; it hovered over the Chaos, as the Wings of a Bird do over her Eggs, as the same Word is rendred, Deut. 32. 11. cherishing, as it were by incubation, that rude Mass by a secret quickening Influence, by which it drew all the Creatures into their several Forms, and particular Natures. So it is in the new Creation : a quickning Influence must come from the Spirit of God, or else the new Creation can never be formed in us, John 3. 8. So is every one that is born of the Spirit : and ver. 6. That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit.

Fifthly, The word of God was the instrument of the first Creation, Psal. 33. 6, 9. By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth ; for he spake, and it was done ; he commanded, and it stood fast ; the word of God is also the instrument of the new Creation or work of Grace in Man, 1. Pet. 1. 23. Being born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible ; by the word of God which liveth, and abideth for ever. So James 1. 18. Of his own will begat he us, with the word of truth : of his own will, that was the impulsive Cause ; with the word of truth, that is the instrumental cause ; great respect and honour, love and delight is due to the word upon this account, that it is the instrument of our regeneration, or new Creation.

Sixthly, The same power which created the World, still under-props and supports it in its being : the World owes its conservation, as well as its existence to the power of God, without which it could not subsist one moment. Just so it is with the new Creation, which entirely depends upon the preserving power which first formed it, Jude ver. 1 Preserved in Christ Jesus ; and 1 Pet. 1. 5. Who were kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation : as in a natural way we live, move, and have our being in God, Acts 17. 28. so in a Spiritual way, we continue believing, repenting, loving, and delighting in God ; without whose continued influence upon our Souls we could do neither.

Seventhly, In a word, God surveyed the first Creation with complacence and great delight : he beheld the works of his hands and approved them as very good, Gen. 1. 31. so it is also in the second creation ; nothing pleaseth, and delights God more than the works of grace in the Souls of his People : it is not any outward privilege of Nature, or gift of Providence which commends any Man to God : Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but a new creature, Gal. 6. 15. And thus you see, upon what grounds the work of regeneration in Man is stiled a new Creature, which was the first thing to be opened.

Secondly, Next we must enquire in what respects every Soul that is in Christ is renewed ; or made a new Creature : and here we shall find a threefold renovation of every man that is in Christ, viz.

1. In his State and Condition.
2. In his Frame and Constitution.
3. In his Practice and Conservation.

First, He is renewed in his state and condition, for he passeth from death to life, in his Justification, 1 Joh. 3. 14. he was condemned by the Law, he is now justified freely by grace through the redemption which is in Christ : he was under the curse of the first Covenant ; he is under the blessing of the new Covenant : he was afar off, but is now made nigh unto God : an alien, a stranger once, now of the houshold of God, Eph. 2. 12, 13. O blessed change from a sad, to a sweet and comfortable condition ! There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, Rom. 8. 1.

Secondly, Every Man in Christ is renewed in his frame, and constitution ; all the faculties and affections of his Soul are renewed by regeneration ; his understanding was dark, but now is light in the Lord, Eph. 5. 8. his conscience was dead and secure, or full of guilt and horrour ; but is now become tender, watchful, and full of peace, Heb. 9. 14. his will was rebellious, stubborn and inflexible ; but is now made obedient, and complying with the will of God, Psal. 110. 2. his desires did once pant, and spend themselves in the pursuit of vanities, now they are set upon God, Isa. 26. 8. his Love did fondly dote upon ensnaring earthly objects, now it is swallowed up in the infinite excellencies of God and Christ, Psal. 119. 97. his joy was once in trifles, and things of nought ; now his rejoycing is in Christ Jesus, Phil. 3. 3. his fears once were versant about noxious creatures, now God is the object of the fear of reverence, Act. 9. 31. and sin the object of the fear of caution, 2 Cor. 7. 11. his hopes and expectations were only from the World present, but now, from that to come, Heb. 6 19. Thus the Soul in its faculties, and affections is renewed; which being done, the members and senses of the body must needs be destinated, and imployed by it in new services; no more to be the weapons of unrighteousness, but instruments of service to Jesus Christ, Rom. 6. 19. and thus all that are in Christ are renewed in their frame and constitution.

Thirdly, The Man in Christ is renewed in his practice and conversation: the manner of operation always follows the nature of beings: now the regenerate not being what they were, cannot walk and act, as once they did: Eph. 2, 1, 2, 3. And you hath he quickned, who were once dead in trespasses and sins; wherein ye walked according to the course of this World, They were carried away like water by the strength of the tyde, by the influence of their own corrupt natures, and the customs and examples of the World: but the case is now altered. So in 2 Cor. 6. 11. the Apostle shews believers their old companions in sin, and tells them such were some of you, but ye are sanctified, &c. q. d. the World is now well altered with you, thanks be to the grace of God for it. This wonderful change of practice which is so universal, and remarkable in all the regenerate, and immediately consequent to their conversion, sets the World a wondering at them: 1 Pet. 4. 4. Wherein they think it strange that you run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you: they think it strange, the word signifies to stand at gaze, as the Hen doth which hath brooded, and hatched Partridge Eggs, when she seeth the Chickens which she hath brought forth, take the wing and fly away from her: thus do the Men of the World stand amazed to see their old companions in sin, whose language once was vain, and earthly; it may be prophane, and filthy; now to be praying, speaking of God, Heaven, and things Spiritual; having no more to do with them as to sin, except by way of reprehension and admonition: this amazes the World, and makes them look with a strange admiring eye upon the people of God.

Thirdly, In the next place let us enquire into the Properties and Qualities of this new Creature, and shew you, as we are able, what they are: yet, Reader, expect not here an exact and accurate account of that which is so great a Mystery: for if questions may be moved about a silly Fly, which may puzzle the greatest Philosopher to resolve them; how much more may we conceive this great and marvellous work of God, the most mysterious, and admirable of all his Works, to surmount the understandings of the most illuminated Christians? O how little do we know of the nature, properties, and operations of this new Creature! so far as God hath revealed it to our weak understandings, we may speak of it. And

First. The Scripture speaks of it as a thing of great difficulty to be conceived by Man; Joh. 3. 8. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou heareſt the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit. The original of Winds is a question of great difficulty in Philosophy: we hear the voice of the wind, feel its mighty force, and behold its strange effects; but neither know whence it comes, or whither it goes: ask a Man, Do you hear the wind blow? yes: do you feel it blow? yes, very sensibly: do you see the effects of it rending and overturning the trees? yes, very plainly; but can you describe its nature, or declare its original? no; that is a mystery which I do not understand; who so, Just so it is with him that is born of the Spirit; the holy Spirit of God, whose nature and operations we understand but little of, comes from Heaven, quickens, and influences our Souls, beats down and mortifies our lusts by his almighty power; these effects of the Spirit in us we experimentally feel, and sensibly discern; but how the Spirit of God first entred into, and quickned our Souls, and produced this new creature in them, we understand little more of it, than how the bones do grow in the Womb of her that is with Child, Eccles. 11. 5. Therefore is the life of the new creature called a hidden life, Col. 3. 3. the nature of that life is not only hidden totally from all carnal Men, but in a very great measure it is an hidden and unknown Life unto Spiritual Men, though themselves be the Subjects of it.

Secondly. But though this life of the New Creature be a great Mystery and Secret in some respects, yet so far as it is known, and appears unto us, the New Creature is the most beautiful, and lovely Creature that ever God made: for the beauty of the Lord himself is upon it: the new Man is created after God, Eph. 4. 24. as the Picture is drawn after the Man: it is a draught of God himself, delineated by the Spirit, that admirable Artist, upon the Soul of Man: Holiness is the Beauty and Glory of God: and in Holiness the New Creature is created after God's own Image, Col. 3. 10. the Regenerate Soul hereby becomes holy, 1 Joh. 3. 3. not essentially holy as God is, nor yet efficiently holy: for the Regenerate Soul can neither make it self, nor others holy; but the Life of the New Creature may be said to resemble the Life of God in this, that as God lives to himself, so the New Creature wholly lives to God: as God loves Holiness, and hates the contrary, so doth the New Creature: 'tis in these things formed after the image of God that created it: when God creates this creature in the Soul of Man, we are said then to be partakers of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. so that there can be nothing communicated unto Men, which beautifies and adorns their Souls as this new creation doth: Men do not resemble God as they are noble, and as they are rich, but as they are holy: no gift, no endowment of nature imbellishes the Soul, as this New Creature doth: an awful Majesty sits upon the Brow of the New Creature, commanding the greatest, and worst of Men to do homage to it, Mark 6. 20. yea, such is the Beauty of the New Creature, that Christ, its Author, is also its Admirer, Cant. 4. 9. Thou hast ravished mine heart with one of thine eyes.

Thirdly. This New Creature is created in Man upon the highest design that ever any work of God was wrought: the End of its creation ation and infusion is high and noble: Salvation to the Soul in which it is wrought; this is both the finis operis, and the finis operantis: it is the design both of the work and of the workman that wrought it. When we receive the end of our Faith, we receive the salvation of our Souls. Salvation is the end of Faith, as death is the end of Sin, so Life eternal is the end of Grace. The New Creature doth, by the Instinct and steady Direction of its own Nature, take its course as directly to God, and to Heaven, the Place of his full Enjoyment, as the Rivers do to the Ocean; it declares it self to be made for God, by its restless workings after him. And as Salvation is the End of the new Creature, so it is the express Design and End of him that created it, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now he that hath wrought us for the self same thing is God; by this workmanship of his upon our Souls he is now polishing, preparing, and making them meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light, Col. 1. 12.

Fourthly, The New Creation is the most necessary work that ever God wrought upon the Soul of Man; the eternal well-being of his Soul depends upon it; and without it no Man shall see God, Heb. 12. 14. and Joh. 1. 3,5. Except ye be regenerate, and born again, ye cannot see the Kingdom of God; can ye be saved without Christ? you know you cannot: can you have interest in Christ without the New Creature? my Text expressly tells you it can never be; for if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. O Reader, whatever slight thoughts of this matter, and with what a careless and unconcerned Eye soever thou readest these lines; yet know, thou must either be a New Creature, or a miserable and damn'd creature for ever. If civility without the New Creature could save thee, Why are not the moral Heathens saved also? if strictness of Life, without the New Creature, could save thee, Why did it not save the Scribes and Pharisees also? if an high Profession of Religion, without the New Creature, can save thee, Why did it not save Judas, Hymenæus, and Philetus also? Nothing is more evident than this, that no Repentance, Obedience, Self-denyal, Prayers, Tears, Reformations, or Ordinances, without the New Creation, avail any thing to the Salvation of thy Soul; the very Blood of Christ himself without the New Creature, never did, and never will save any Man. Oh now necessary a work is the New Creation? Circumcision avails nothing, and Uncircumcision nothing, but a New Creature.

Fifthly, The new Creature is a marvellous and wonderful Creature: there are many wonders in the first Creation; the Works of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein, Psal. 111. 2. but there are no wonders in nature, like those in grace. Is it not the greatest Wonder that ever was seen in the World (except the Incarnation of the Son of God) to see the Nature and Temper of Man, so altered and changed as it is by Grace: to see Lascivious Corinthians, and Idolatrous Ephesians become mortified and Heavenly Christians: to see a fierce, and cruel Persecutor become a glorious Confessor, and Sufferer for Christ, Gal. 1. 23. to see the carnal Mind of Man, which was lately fully set in a strong bent to the World, to be wholly taken off from its lusts, and set upon things that are Spiritual and Heavenly; certainly it was not a greater Miracle to see dead Lazarus come out of his Sepulchre, that it is to see the Dead and Carnal Mind coming out of its Lusts, to embrace Jesus Christ. It was not a greater Wonder to see the dead dry bones in the Valley to move, and come together, than it is to see a dead Soul moving after God, and moving to Christ in the way of Faith.

Sixthly, The new Creature is an immortal Creature, a creature that shall never see death, John. 4. 14. it is in the Soul of Man a Well of Water, springing up unto Eternal Life. I will not adventure to say, it is immortal in its own nature, for it is but a Creature, as my Text calls it; and we know that essential interminability is the incommunicable Property of God: The New Creature hath both a Beginning and Succession, and therefore might also have an End, as to any thing in it self, or its own nature: Experience also shews us, that it is capable both of increasing and decreasing; and may be brought nigh unto death, Rev. 3. 2. the Works of the Spirit in Believers may be ready to die; but though its Perpetuity flow not out of its own nature, it flows out of God's Covenant, and Promises, which make it an immortal Creature: When all other excellencies in Man go away, as at Death they will, Job 4. 21. this Excellency only remains: our Gifts may leave us: our Friends may leave us, our Estates leave us: but our Graces will never leave us: they ascend up with the Soul (in which they inhere) into Glory, when the stroke of Death separates it from the Body.

Seventhly, The New Creature is an heavenly creature: 'tis not born of flesh, nor of Blood, or of the will of Man, but of God, Joh. 1. 13. its Descent and Original is heavenly, it is Spirit born of Spirit, Joh. 3 6. its Center is Heaven, and thither are all its Tendencies, Psal. 63. 8. its proper Food on which it lives are heavenly things, Psal. 4. 6, 7. It cannot feed as other Creatures do upon earthly Things: the Object of all its Delights and Loves is in Heaven, Psal. 73. 26. Whom have I in heaven but thee? The Hopes and Expectations of the New Creature are all from Heaven: it looks for little in this World, but waits for the coming of the Lord. The Life of the New Creature upon Earth is a Life of patient waiting for Christ: his Desires and Longings are after Heaven, Phil. 1. 23. The Flesh indeed lingers and would delay, but the New Creature hastens and would fain be gone, 2 Cor. 5. 2. It is not at home while it is here; it came from Heaven, and cannot be quiet, nor suffer the Soul in which it dwells to be so, until it comes thither again.

Eighthly, The New Creature is an active and laborious Creature: no sooner it is born, but it is acting in the Soul, Acts 9. 6. behold he prayeth! Activity is its very nature, Gal. 5. 25. If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit. Nor is it to be admired, that it should be always active and stirring in the Soul, seeing Activity in Obedience, was the very End for which it was created, For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good Works, Eph. 2. 10. and he that is acted in the duties of Religion, by this Principle of the New Creature, or Nature, will (so far as that Principle acts him) delight to do the Will of God;

God; rejoyce in the way of his Commandments; and find the sweetest Pleasure in the Paths of Duty.

Ninthly, The new Creature is a thriving Creature, growing from Strength to Strength, 1. Pet. 2. 2. and changing the Soul in which it is subjected from Glory unto Glory, 2 Cor. 3. 18. The vigorous Tendencies and constant Strivings of this New Creature is to attain its just Perfection and Maturity, Phil. 3. 11. It can endure no Stints and Limits to its Desires short of Perfection: every Degree of Strength it attains, doth but whet and sharpen his Desires after higher Degrees: upon this account it greatly delights in the Ordinances of God, Duties of Religion and Society of the Saints; as they are Helps and Improvements to it, in order to its great Design.

Tenthly, The new Creature is a creature of wonderful preservations: there are many Wonders of Divine Providences in the preservation of our natural Lives, but none like those whereby the Life of the new Creature is preserved in our Souls: there are critical Times of Temptation and Desertion, in which it is ready to die, Rev. 3. 2. The Degrees of its Strength and Livelinesse are sometimes sadly abated, and its sweet and comfortable Workings intermitted, Rev. 2. 4. the Evidences by which its being in us was wont to be discovered, may be, and often are darkned, 2 Pet. 1. 9. And the Soul in which it is may draw very sad conclusions about the Issue and Event; concluding its Life not only to be hazarded, but quite extinguished, Psal. 51. 10, 11, 12. but though it be ready to die, God wonderfully preserves it from Death: it hath as well its reviving as its fainting Seasons. And thus you see what are the lovely and eximious Properties of the new Creature. In the next place, Fourthly, We will demonstrate the necessity of this new creation to all that are in Christ, and by him expect to attain Salvation: and the necessity of the new Creature will appear divers ways.

First, From the positive and express will of God revealed in Scripture touching this matter; search the Scriptures and you shall find God hath laid the whole Stress and Weight of your eternal Happiness by Jesus Christ upon this work of the Spirit in your Souls. So our Saviour tells Nicodemus, John 3. 5. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God: agreeable whereunto are those words of the Apostle, Heb. 12. 14. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. And whereas some may think that their birth-right Privileges, injoyment of Ordinances and profession of Religion may commend them to God's Acceptance without this new Creation; he shews them how fond and ungrounded all such Hopes are, Gal. 6. 15. For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature: Christ and Heaven are the Gifts of God, and he is at liberty to bestow them upon what Terms and Conditions he pleaseth; and this is the Way, the only Way and stated Method in which he will bring Men by Christ unto Glory: Men may raise out the Impressions of these things from their own Hearts, but they can never alter the setled course and Method of Salvation: either we must be new Creatures, as the Precepts of the Word command us, or lost and damned Creatures, as the Threatnings of the Word plainly tell us.

Secondly, This new Creation is the inchoative part of that great Salvation which we expect through Christ, and therefore without this, all Hopes and Expectations of Salvation must vanish: Salvation and Renovation are inseparably connected. Our Glory in Heaven, if we rightly understand its nature, consisteth in two things; namely, our assimilation to God, and our fruition of God: and both these take their Beginning and Rise from our Renovation in this World: here we begin to be changed into his Image in some degree, 2 Cor. 3. 18. for the new Man is created after God, as was opened above. In the Work of Grace God is said to begin that good work which is to be finished or consummated in the Day of Christ, Phil. 1. 6. Now nothing can be more irrational than to imagine that ever that Design or Work should be finished or perfected which never had a Beginning.

Thirdly, So necessary is the new Creation to all that expect Salvation by Christ, that without this Heaven would be no Heaven, and the Glory thereof no Glory to us, by reason of the unsuitableness and aversion of our carnal Minds thereunto; the carnal mind is enmity against God, Rom. 8. 7. and Enmity is exclusive of all Complacency and Delight: There is a Necessity of a suitable and agreeable Frame of heart to God, in order to that complacential Rest of our Souls in him: and this agreeable Temper is wrought by our new Creation, 2 Cor. 5. 5. He that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God: Renovation you see is the working or moulding of a Man's Spirit into an agreeable Temper; or as it is in Col. 1. 12. the making of us meet for the Inheritance of the Saints in light.

From all which it follows, that seeing there can be no complacence or delight in God without suitableness and conformity to him, as is plain from 1 Joh. 3. 2. as well as from the Reason and Nature of the thing it self; either God must become like us suitable to our sinful, corrupt and vain Hearts, which were but a rude Blasphemy once to imagine; or else we must be made agreeable and suitable to God, which is the very thing I am now proving the Necessity of.

Fourthly, There is an absolute Necessity of the new Creature to all that expect Interest in Christ and the glory to come; since all the Characters, Marks and Signs of such an Interest are constantly taken from the new Creature wrought in us. Look over all the Marks and Signs of Interest in Christ or Salvation by him which are dispersed through the Scriptures, and you shall still find Purity of Heart, Matth. 5. 8. Holiness both in Principle and Practice, Heb. 12, 14. Mortification of Sin, Rom. 8. 13. longing for Christ's Appearance, 2 Tim. 4. 8. with Multitudes more of the same nature, to be constantly made the Marks and Signs of our Salvation by Christ. So that either we must have a new Bible, or a new Heart: for if these Scrip-

Scriptures be the true and faithful Words of God, no unrenewed Creature can see his Face; which was the Fourth thing to be open'd.

Fifthly. The last thing to be open'd is, how the new Creation is an infallible Proof and Evidence of the Souls interest in Christ; and this will appear diverse Ways.

First, Where all the saving Graces of the Spirit are, there Interest in Christ must needs be certain; and where the new Creature is, there all the saving Graces of the Spirit are: For what is the new Creature, but the Frame or System of all special saving Graces? It is not this or that particular Grace, as Faith, or Hope, or Love to God, which constitutes the new Creature, for these are but as so many particular Limbs or Branches of it: But the New Creature is comprehensive of all the Graces of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22, 23. The fruit of the Spirit is love, peace, joy, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, &c. any one of the saving special Graces of the Spirit gives proof of our Interest in Christ: How much more then the New Creature, which is the complex Frame or System of all the Graces together.

Secondly, To conclude; Where all the causes of an interest in Christ are found, and all the Effects and Fruits of an interest in Christ do appear; there undoubtedly a real interest in Christ is found: but where ever you find a new Creature, you find all the causes and all the effects of an interest in Christ; for there you shall find.

First, The impulsive cause, viz. The electing Love of God, from which the new Creature is inseperable, 1 Pet. 1, 2, with the new Creature also the meritorious, efficient and final causes of Interest in Christ, and Union with him are ever found, Eph. 2. 10. Eph. 1. 4, 5, 6.

Secondly, All the Effects and Fruits of Interest in Christ, are found in the new Creature; there are all the Fruits of Obedience, for we are created in Christ Jesus unto good Works, Eph. 2. 10. Rom. 7. 4, there is true spiritual Opposition to Sin, 1 Joh. 5. 18. He that is begotten of God. keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not: There is love to the People of God, 1 Joh. 4. 7. Every one that loveth is born of God. There is a conscientious respect to the Duties of both Tables; for the New Creature is created after God in Righteousness and true Holiness, Eph. 4. 24. there is Perseverance in the Ways of God to the very End, and Victory over all Temptations; for whosoever is born of God over-cometh the World, 1 Joh. 5. 4. It were easy to run over all other particular Fruits of our Union with Christ, and shew you every one of them in the New Creature. And thus much of the Doctrinal Part of this Point.

SERMON XXVI.

2 COR. V, 17.

Therefore if any Man be in Christ, he is a New Creature: old things are passed away, behold all things are become new.

After the Explication of the Sense of this Scripture we observed,

Doct. That God's creating of a new supernatural Work of Grace in the Soul of any Man, is that Man's sure and infallible Evidence of a saving Interest in Jesus Christ.

You have heard why the regenerating work of the Spirit is called a new Creation; in what respect every Soul in Christ is renewed; what the eximious Properties of this New Creature are; the indispensibleness and necessity thereof hath been also proved: And how it evidences our Interest in Christ, was cleared in the Doctrinal Part, which we now come to improve in the several Uses serving for our

Is the new creature the sure and infallible Evidence of our saving Interest in Christ? From hence then we are informed,

Infer. 1. How miserable and deplorable an estate all unrenewed Souls are in: who can lay no claim to Christ, during that State, and therefore are under an impossibility of Salvation. O Reader, if this be the State of thy Soul, better had it been for thee not to have been God's natural Workmanship as a Man, except thou be his spiritual Workmanship also as a new Man. I know the Schoolmen determine otherwise, and say that Damnation is rather to be chosen than Annihilation: A miserable Being is better than no Being: And it is very true, with respect to the Glory of God, whose Justice shall triumph for ever in the damnation of the Unregenerate; but with respect to us, 'tis much better never to have been his Creatures in the way of Generation, than not to be his new Creatures in the way of Regeneration. So Christ speaks of Judas, that Son of Perdition, Mark 14. 21. Good had it been for that Man if he had never been born; For what is a Being without the comfort of it? What is Life without the Joy and Pleasure of Life? A damned Being is a Being without comfort, no glimpse of Light shines into that Darkness; they shall indeed see and understand the Felicity, Light, and Joy of the Saints in Glory; but not partake in the least measure of the comfort, Luke 13. 28. They shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of God, but they themselves shut out: Such a Sight is so far from giving any comfort, that it will be the Aggravation and Increase of Torment. O 'tis better to have no Being at all, than to have a Being only to capacitate a Man for Misery; to desire Death while Death flies from him, Rev. 4. 6. The Opinion of the Schoolmen will never pass for sound Doctrine among the damned: Think on it, Reader, and God; rejoyce in the way of his Commandments; and find the ſweeteſt Pleaſure in the Paths of Duty.

Ninthly, The new Creature is a thriving Creature, growing from Strength to Strength, 1. Pet. 2. 2. and changing the Soul in which it is ſubjected from Glory unto Glory, 2 Cor. 3. 18. The vigorous Tendencies and conſtant Strivings of this New Creature is to attain its juſt Perfection and Maturity, Phil. 3. 11. It can endure no Stints and Limits to its Deſires ſhort of Perfection: every Degree of Strength it attains, doth but whet and ſharpen his Deſires after higher Degrees: upon this account it greatly delights in the Ordinances of God, Duties of Religion and Society of the Saints; as they are Helps and Improvements to it, in order to its great Deſign.

Gratia nec totaliter intermittitur, nec finaliter amittitur: actus omittitur, habitus non amittitur, actio pervertitur, fides non ſubvertitur: concutitur, non excutitur; defluit fructus, latet ſuccus; effectus juſtificationis ſuſpenditur, at ſtatus juſtificati non diſſolvitur. Suffrag. Brit.

Tenthly, The new Creature is a creature of wonderful preſervations: there are many Wonders of Divine Providences in the preſervation of our natural Lives, but none like thoſe whereby the Life of the new Creature is preſerved in our Souls: there are critical Times of Temptation and Deſertion, in which it is ready to die, Rev. 3. 2. The Degrees of its Strength and Livelineſs are ſometimes ſadly abated, and its ſweet and comfortable Workings intermitted, Rev. 2. 4. the Evidences by which its being in us was wont to be diſcovered, may be, and often are darkned, 2 Pet. 1. 9. And the Soul in which it is may draw very ſad concluſions about the Iſſue and Event; concluding its Life not only to be hazarded, but quite extinguiſhed, Pſal. 51. 10, 11, 12. but though it be ready to die, God wonderfully preſerves it from Death: it hath as well its reviving as its fainting Seaſons. And thus you ſee what are the lovely and eximious Properties of the new Creature. In the next place, Fourthly, We will demonſtrate the neceſſity of this new creation to all that are in Chriſt, and by him expect to attain Salvation: and the neceſſity of the new Creature will appear divers ways.

Firſt, From the poſitive and expreſs will of God revealed in Scripture touching this matter; ſearch the Scriptures and you ſhall find God hath laid the whole Streſs and Weight of your eternal Happineſs by Jeſus Chriſt upon this work of the Spirit in your Souls. So our Saviour tells Nicodemus, John 3. 5. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God: agreeable whereunto are thoſe words of the Apoſtle, Heb. 12. 14. Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee the Lord. And whereas ſome may think that their birth-right Privileges, injoyment of Ordinances and profeſſion of Religion may commend them to God's Acceptance without this new Creation; he ſhews them how fond and ungrounded all ſuch Hopes are, Gal. 6. 15. For in Chriſt Jeſus neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but a new creature: Chriſt and Heaven are the Gifts of God, and he is at liberty to beſtow them upon what Terms and Conditions he pleaſeth; and this is the Way, the only Way and ſtated Method in which he will bring Men by Chriſt unto Glory: Men may raſe out the Impreſſions of theſe things from their own Hearts, but they can never alter the ſetled courſe and Method of Salvation: either we muſt be new Creatures, as the Precepts of the Word command us, or loſt and damned Creatures, as the Threatnings of the Word plainly tell us.

Secondly, This new Creation is the inchoative part of that great Salvation which we expect through Chriſt, and therefore without this, all Hopes and Expectations of Salvation muſt vaniſh: Salvation and Renovation are inſeparably connected. Our Glory in Heaven, if we rightly underſtand its nature, conſiſteth in two things; namely, our aſſimilation to God, and our fruition of God: and both theſe take their Beginning and Riſe from our Renovation in this World: here we begin to be changed into his Image in ſome degree, 2 Cor. 3. 18. for the new Man is created after God, as was opened above. In the Work of Grace God is ſaid to begin that good work which is to be finiſhed or conſummated in the Day of Chriſt, Phil. 1. 6. Now nothing can be more irrational than to imagine that ever that Deſign or Work ſhould be finiſhed or perfected which never had a Beginning.

Thirdly, So neceſſary is the new Creation to all that expect Salvation by Chriſt, that without this Heaven would be no Heaven, and the Glory thereof no Glory to us, by reaſon of the unſuitableneſs and averſion of our carnal Minds thereunto; the carnal mind is enmity againſt God, Rom. 8. 7. and Enmity is excluſive of all Complacency and Delight: There is a Neceſſity of a ſuitable and agreeable Frame of heart to God, in order to that complacential Reſt of our Souls in him: and this agreeable Temper is wrought by our new Creation, 2 Cor. 5. 5. He that hath wrought us for the ſelf-ſame thing is God: Renovation you ſee is the working or moulding of a Man's Spirit into an agreeable Temper; or as it is in Col. 1. 12. the making of us meet for the Inheritance of the Saints in light.

From all which it follows, that ſeeing there can be no complacence or delight in God without ſuitableneſs and conformity to him, as is plain from 1 Joh. 3. 2. as well as from the Reaſon and Nature of the thing it ſelf; either God muſt become like us ſuitable to our ſinful, corrupt and vain Hearts, which were but a rude Blaſphemy once to imagine; or elſe we muſt be made agreeable and ſuitable to God, which is the very thing I am now proving the Neceſſity of.

Fourthly, There is an abſolute Neceſſity of the new Creature to all that expect Intereſt in Chriſt and the glory to come; ſince all the Characters, Marks and Signs of ſuch an Intereſt are conſtantly taken from the new Creature wrought in us. Look over all the Marks and Signs of Intereſt in Chriſt or Salvation by him which are diſperſed through the Scriptures, and you ſhall ſtill find Purity of Heart, Matth. 5. 8. Holineſs both in Principle and Practice, Heb. 12, 14. Mortification of Sin, Rom. 8. 13. longing for Chriſt's Appearance, 2 Tim. 4. 8. with Multitudes more of the ſame nature, to be conſtantly made the Marks and Signs of our Salvation by Chriſt. So that either we muſt have a new Bible, or a new Heart: for if theſe Scrip-

Scriptures be the true and faithful Words of God, no unrenewed Creature can see his Face; which was the Fourth thing to be open'd.

Fifthly. The last thing to be open'd is, how the new Creation is an infallible Proof and Evidence of the Souls interest in Christ; and this will appear diverse Ways.

First, Where all the saving Graces of the Spirit are, there Interest in Christ must needs be certain; and where the new Creature is, there all the saving Graces of the Spirit are: For what is the new Creature, but the Frame or System of all special saving Graces? 1. Use for Information.

Is the new creature the sure and infallible Evidence of our saving Interest in Christ? From hence then we are informed,

Infer. 1. How miserable and deplorable an estate all unrenewed Souls are in: who can lay no claim to Christ, during that State, and therefore are under an impossibility of Salvation. O Reader, if this be the State of thy Soul, better had it been for thee not to have been God's natural Workmanship as a Man, except thou be his spiritual Workmanship also as a new Man. I know the Schoolmen determine otherwise, and say that Damnation is rather to be chosen than Annihilation: A miserable Being is better than no Being: And it is very true, with respect to the Glory of God, whose Justice shall triumph for ever in the damnation of the Unregenerate; but with respect to us, 'tis much better never to have been his Creatures in the way of Generation, than not to be his new Creatures in the way of Regeneration. So Christ speaks of Judas, that Son of Perdition, Mark 14. 21. Good had it been for that Man if he had never been born; For what is a Being without the comfort of it? What is Life without the Joy and Pleasure of Life? A damned Being is a Being without comfort, no glimpse of Light shines into that Darkness; they shall indeed see and understand the Felicity, Light, and Joy of the Saints in Glory; but not partake in the least measure of the comfort, Luke 13. 28. They shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of God, but they themselves shut out: Such a Sight is so far from giving any comfort, that it will be the Aggravation and Increase of Torment. O 'tis better to have no Being at all, than to have a Being only to capacitate a Man for Misery; to desire Death while Death flies from him, Rev. 4. 6. The Opinion of the Schoolmen will never pass for sound Doctrine among the damned: Think on it, Reader, and and lay it to thine Heart, better thou hadſt died from the Womb, better the Knees had prevented thee, and the Breaſts which thou haſt ſucked, than that thou ſhouldſt live and die a Stranger to the New Birth, or that thy Mother ſhould bring thee forth only to encreaſe and fill up the Number of the damned.

Infer. 2. And on the contrary we may hence learn, what cauſe regenerate Souls have to bleſs God for the day wherein they were born. O what a privileged State doth the New Birth bring Men into! 'Tis poſſible, for the preſent, they underſtand it not; for many Believers are like a great Heir lying in the Cradle, that knows not to what an Eſtate and Honour he is born: Nevertheleſs on the ſame Day, wherein we become new Creatures by regeneration, we have a firm Title, and ſolid claim to all the Priviledges of the Sons of God, Joh. 1. 12. 13. God becomes our Father by a treble Title, not only the Father of our Beings by Nature, which was all the Relation we had to him before, but our Father by Adoption and by Regeneration: Which is a much ſweeter and more comfortable Relation. In that day the Image of God is reſtored, Eph. 3. 27. this is both the Health and Beauty of the Soul. In that day we are begotten again to a lively hope, 1 Pet. 1. 3. A Hope more worth than ten thouſand Worlds, in the troubles of Life, and in the ſtraits of Death: this is a Creature which lives for ever, and will make thy Life happy for ever. Some have kept their Birth-day as a Feſtival, a day of rejoycing, but none have more cauſe to rejoice that ever they were born, than thoſe that are new born.

Infer. 3. Learn from hence that the work of Grace is wholly ſupernatural; 'tis a Creation, and a Creation-work is above the power of the Creature: No Power, but that which gave Being to the World, can give a Being to the New Creature: Almighty Power goes forth to give Being to the New Creature: This Creature is not born of Fleſh or of Blood, nor of the Will of Man, but of God, Joh. 1. 13. The Nature of this New Creature ſpeaks its Original to be above the Power of Nature; the very Notion of a new New Creation ſpoils the proud Boaſts of the great Aſſerters of the Power and Ability of the Will of Man. When God therefore puts the Queſtion, who maketh thee to differ? And what haſt thou that thou haſt not received? Let thy Soul, Reader, anſwer it with all Humility and Thankfulneſs; 'tis thou, Lord, thou only, that madeſt me to differ from another, and what I have received, I have received from thy Free Grace.

Infer. 4. If the work of Grace be a New Creation, let not the Parents and Friends of the unregenerate utterly deſpair of the converſion of their Relations, how great ſoever their preſent diſcouragements are; if it had been poſſible for a Man to have ſeen the rude and indigeſted Chaos before the Spirit of God moved upon it, would he not have ſaid, Can ſuch a beautiful Order of Beings, ſuch a pleaſant Variety of Creatures ſpring out of this dark Lump? Surely it would have been very hard for a Man to have imagined it. It may be you ſee no Diſpoſitions or hopeful Inclinations in your Friends towards God and ſpiritual things; nay, poſſibly they are totally oppoſite and filled with Enmity againſt them; they deride and jeer all ſerious Piety, whereever they behold it; this indeed is very ſad; but yet remember the Work of Grace is Creation-work; though there be no Diſpoſition at all in their Wills, no Tenderneſs in their Conſciences, no Light or Knowledge in their Minds; yet God that commanded the Light to ſhine out of Darkneſs, can ſhine into their Hearts; to give them the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt; he can ſay to the dry Bones, live; to the proud and ſtubborn Heart, come down and yield thy ſelf to the Will of God; and if he command, the Work is done. God can make thee yet to rejoyce over thy moſt uncomfortable Relations, to ſay with the Father of the Prodigal, Luke 15. 24. This my Son was dead, and is alive again; he was loſt and is found; and they began to be merry; Difficulties are for Men, but not for God; he works in converſion by a Power which is able to ſubdue all things unto it ſelf.

Infer. 5. If none but New Creatures be in Chriſt, how ſmall a remnant among Men belong to Chriſt in this World! Among the Multitude of rational Creatures inhabiting this World, how few, how very few are New Creatures? 'Tis the Obſervation of the learned Mr. Brierwood, that if the World be divided into thirty parts, nineteen parts are heatheniſh Idolaters; ſix parts Mahumetans, and only five out of thirty, which may be in a large ſenſe called Chriſtians; of which the far greater part is overſpread with Popiſh Darkneſs; ſeparate from the remainder, the Multitudes of prophane, meerly civil and hypocritical Profeſſors of Religion; and how few will remain for Jeſus Chriſt in this World? Look over the Cities, Towns, and Pariſhes in this populous Kingdom; and how few ſhall you find that ſpeak the Language, or do the works of New Creatures? How few have ever had any awakening convictions on them? And how many of thoſe that have been convinced have miſcarried and never come to the New Birth? The more cauſe have they whom God hath indeed regenerated, to admire the Riches of God's diſtinguiſhing Mercy to them.

Infer. 6. If the change by Grace be a new creation, how univerſal and marvellous a change doth regeneration make upon men! The new Creation ſpeaks a marvellous and univerſal Alteration both upon the State and Tempers of Men; they come out of Darkneſs, groſs, helliſh Darkneſs into Light, a marvellous and heavenly Light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. Eph. 5. 8. their condition, diſpoſition and converſation (as you have heard) is all new; and yet this marvellous Change, as great and univerſal as it is, is not alike evident and clearly diſcernible in all New Creatures: And the Reaſons are,

Firſt, Becauſe the work of Grace is wrought in diverſe Methods and Manners in the People of God. Some are changed from a State of notorious prophaneneſs unto ſerious Godlineſs; there the Change is conſpicuous and very evident; all the Neighbourhood rings of it: But in others it is more inſenſibly diſtilled in their tender Years, by the Bleſſing of God upon religious Education, and there it is more indiſcernible.

Secondly, Though a great Change be wrought, yet much natural Corruption ſtill re-remains for their Humiliation and daily Exercise; and this is a Ground of Fear and Doubtings: They see not how such Corruptions are consistent with the New Creature.

Thirdly, In some the new Creature shews it self mostly in the affectionate part, in Desires and Breathings after God; and but little in the clearness of their Understandings, and strength of their Judgments; for want of which they are entangled, and kept in Darkness most of their Days.

Fourthly, Some Christians are more tryed and exercised by Temptations from Satan than others are, and these Clouds darken the Work of Grace in them.

Fifthly, There is great difference and variety found in the natural Tempers and Constitutions of the regenerate. Some are of a more melancholy, fearful, and suspicious Temper, than others are, and therefore much longer held under doubtings, and trouble of Spirit. Nevertheless, what differences soever these things make, the change made by Grace is a marvellous change.

Infer. 7. Lastly, How incongruous are carnal ways and courses to the Spirit of Christians? who being New Creatures can never delight or find pleasure in their former sinful Companions and Practices? Alas, those things are now most unsuitable, loathsome, and detestable, how pleasant soever they once were; that which they counted their Liberty, would now be reckoned their greatest Bondage; that which was their Glory is now their Shame, Rom. 6. 21. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed, for the end of those things is death; they need not be pressed by others, but will freely confess of themselves what Fools and Madmen they once were; none can censure their former conversation more severely than themselves do, 1 Tim. 1. 13, 14.

2. Use for Conviction.

If none be in Christ but new Creatures, and the new Creation make such a change as hath been described, This may convince us, how many of us deceive our selves, and run into dangerous and fatal mistakes in the greatest concernment we have in this World. But before I fall into this use, I desire none may make a perverse and ill use of it; let not the wicked conclude from hence, that there is no such thing as true Religion in the World, or that all who do profess it are but a pack of Hypocrites; neither let the godly injure themselves by that which is designed for their Benefit; let none conclude, that seeing there are so many Mistakes committed about this new Creature, that therefore assurance must needs be impossible, as the Papists affirm it to be. The proper use that should be made of this Doctrine is, to undeceive false Pretenders, and to awake all to a more deep and thorough search of their own conditions; which being precautioned, let all Men be convinced of the following Truths.

1. First, That the change made by civility upon such as were lewd and prophane, is in its whole kind and nature a different thing from the new Creature; the power and efficacy of moral Vertue is one thing, the influence of the regenerating Spirit is quite another thing; however some have studied to confound them. The Heathens excelled in moral and homilitical Virtues, Plato, Aristides, Seneca, and multitudes more have outvied many professed Christians in Justice, Temperance, Patience, &c. yet were perfect Strangers to the new Creation. A Man may be very strict and temperate, free from the gross pollutions of the World; and yet a perfect Stranger to Regeneration all the while, Joh. 3. 10.

Secondly, That many strong convictions and troubles for Sin may be found where the new Creature is never formed. Conviction indeed is an antecedent unto, and preparative for the new Creature, as the Blossoms of the Tree are to the Fruit that follows them; but as Fruit doth not always follow, where those Blossoms and Flowers appear; so neither doth the new Creature follow all convictions and troubles for Sin. Conviction is a common work of the Spirit, both upon the Elect and Reprobates; but the new Creature is formed only in God's Elect. Convictions may be blasted, and vanish away, and the Man that was under troubles for Sin, may return again with the Dog to his Vomit, and the Sow that was washed to her wallowing in the Mire, 2 Pet. 2. 22. but the new Creature never perishes, nor can consist with such a return unto Sin.

Thirdly, That excellent Gifts and Abilities fitting Men for Service in the Church of God, may be where the new Creature is not, for these are promiscuously dispensed by the Spirit, both to the regenerate and unregenerate, Matth. 7. 22. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy Name? Gifts are attainable by Study, Prayer and Preaching are reduced to an art; but Regeneration is wholly supernatural. Sin in dominion is consistent with excellent Gifts, but wholly incompatible with the new Creature. In a Word, these things are so different in Nature from the new Creature, that they oft-times prove the greatest Bars and Obstacles in the World to the Regenerating-work of the Spirit. Let no Man therefore trust to things, whereby multitudes deceive and destroy their own Souls. Reader, it may cost thee many an aking head to obtain Gifts, but thou wilt find an aking heart for Sin, if ever God make thee a new Creature.

Fourthly, Be convinced that multitudes of religious Duties may be performed by Men, in whom the new Creature was never formed. Though all new Creatures perform the Duties of Religion, yet all that perform the Duties of Religion are not new Creatures: Regeneration is not the only root from which the Duties of Religion spring, Isa. 58. 2. Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a Nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinances of their God, they ask of me the ordinances of Justice, they take delight in approaching to God. These are but weak and slippery Foundations for Men to build their Confidence and Hopes upon.

3. Use for Examination.

Next therefore, let me perswade every Man to try the state of his own Heart in this matter, and closely consider and weigh this great Question, Am I really and indeed a new Creature, or am I an old Creature still, in the new Creature's dress and habit? Some light may be given for the discovery thereof from the considerations of the

1. Antecedents
2. Concomitants } of the New Creation.
3. Consequents

First, Weigh and consider well the Antecedents of the new Creature; have those things past upon your Souls which ordinarily make way for the new Creature in whomsoever the Lord forms it?

First, Hath the Lord opened the Eyes of your understanding in the knowledge of Sin, and of Christ? Hath he shewed you both your Disease and Remedy, by a new Light shining from Heaven into your Souls? Thus the Lord doth where-ever he forms the new Creature, Acts 26. 18.

Secondly, Hath he brought home the word with mighty power and efficacy upon your Hearts, to convince and humble them? This is the method in which the new Creature is produced, Rom. 7, 9. 1 Thes. 1. 5.

Thirdly, Have these convictions overturned your vain confidences, and brought you to a great pinch, and inward distress of Soul, making you to cry what shall we do to be saved? These are the ways of the Spirit in the formation of the new Creature, Acts 16. 29. Acts 2. 27 If no such antecedent works of the Spirit have passed upon your Hearts, you have no ground for your confidence that the new Creature is formed in you.

Secondly, Consider the concomitant frames and workings of Spirit, which ordinarily attend the production of the new Creature, and judge impartially betwixt God and your own Souls, whether they have been the very frames and workings of your Hearts.

First, Have your vain Spirits been composed to the greatest seriousness, and most solemn consideration of things Eternal, as the Hearts of all those are whom God regenerates? When the Lord is about this great Work upon the Soul of Man, whatever vanity, levity, and sinful jollity was there before, it is banished from the Heart at this time; for now Heaven and Hell, Life and Death, are before a Man's Eyes, and these are the most awful and solemn things that ever our thoughts conversed with in this World: Now a Man of the most airy and pleasant constitution, when brought to the sight and sense of those things, saith of Laughter, it is Mad, and of Mirth, What doth it? Eccles. 2. 2.

Secondly, A lowly, meek, and humble frame of Heart accompanies the new Creation; the Soul is weary and heavy laden, Matth. 11. 28. Convictions of Sin hath plucked down the Pride and Loftiness of the Spirit of Man, emptied him of his vain Conceits; those that were of lofty, proud, and blustering Humours before, are meekened, and brought down to the very dust now: It is with them (to speak allusively) as it was with Jerusalem, that lofty City, Isa. 29. 1, 4. Wo to Ariel, to Ariel, the City where David dwelt; thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust. Ariel signifies the Lyon of God, so Jerusalem in her Prosperity was, other Cities trembled at her Voice; but when God brought her down by humbling Judgments, then she whispered out of the dust: So it is in this case.

Thirdly, A longing thirsting frame of Spirit accompanies the new Creation; the desires of the Soul are ardent after Christ; never did the hireling long for the shadow, as the weary Soul doth for Christ, and Rest in him; if no such frames have accompanied that which you take for your new Birth, you have the greatest reason in the World to suspect your selves under a cheat.

Thirdly, Weigh well the effects and consequents of the new Creature, and consider, whether such Fruits as these are found in your Hearts and Lives.

First, Wherever the new Creature is formed, there a Man's course and conversation is changed, Eph. 4. 22. That ye put off concerning the former conversation, the old Man which is corrupt, according to the deceitful Lusts, and be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind: The new Creature cannot but blush and be ashamed of the old Creatures conversation, Rom. 6. 21.

Secondly, The new Creature continually opposes, and conflicts with the motions of Sin in the Heart, Gal. 5. 17. The Spirit lusteth against the Flesh: Grace can no more incorporate with Sin, than Oyl with Water; contraries cannot consist in the same subject longer than they are fighting with each other; if there be no conflict with Sin in thy Soul; or if that conflict be only betwixt the Conscience and Affections, Light in the one strugling with Lust in the other; thou wantest that Fruit which should evidence thee to be a new Creature.

Thirdly, The Mind and Affections of the new Creature are set upon heavenly and spiritual things, Col. 3. 1, 2. Ephes. 4. 23. Rom. 8. 5. If therefore thy Heart and Affections be habitually earthly, and wholly intent upon things below, driving eagerly after the World, as the great business and end of thy Life: Deceive not thy self, this is not the Fruit of the new Creature, nor consistent with it.

Fourthly, The New Creature is a Praying Creature, living by its daily Communion with God, which is its livelihood and subsistence, Zech. 12. 10. Acts 9. 11. If therefore thou be a Prayerless Soul, or if in all thy Prayers, thou art a Stranger to Communion with God; if there be no brokenness of Heart for Sin in thy Confessions, no melting affections for Christ and holiness in thy supplications; surely Satan doth but baffle and delude thy overcredulous Soul, in perswading thee that thou art a new Creature.

Fifthly, The new Creature is restless after Falls into Sin, until it have recovered Peace and Pardon, it cannot endure itself in a state of defilement and pollution, Psal. 51. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. It is with the Conscience of a new Creature under Sin, as it is with the Eye when any thing offends it, it cannot leave twinkling and watering, till it have wept it out; and in the very same restless state it is under the hiding of God's Face, and Divine withdrawments, Cant. 5. 2, 3, 4, 4, 6, 7, 8. If therefore thou canst sin, and sin again, without such a burthensome sense of Sin, or restlesness, or solicitude how to recover Purity, and Peace, with the light of God's Countenance shining as in days past upon thy Soul; delude not thy self, thou hast not the signs of a new Creature in thee.

4. Use of Exhortation.

If the new Creation be a sound evidence of our

of our intereſt in Chriſt, then thence let me perſwade all that are in Chriſt to evidence themſelves to be ſo, by walking as it becomes new Creatures.

The new Creature is born from above, all its tendencies are Heaven-ward; accordingly, ſet your affections on things that are above, and let your converſation be in Heaven: If you live earthly and ſenſual Lives, as others do; you muſt croſs your new Nature therein; And can thoſe Acts be pleaſant unto you which are done with ſo much regret? Wherein you muſt put a force upon your own Spirits, and offer a kind of violence to your own Hearts: Earthly delights and ſorrows are ſuitable enough to the unregenerate and ſenſual Men of the World; but exceedingly contrary unto that Spirit by which you are renovated. If ever you will act becoming the Principles and Nature of new Creatures, then ſeek earthly things with ſubmiſſion, enjoy them with fear and caution, reſign them with cheerfulneſs and readineſs; and thus let your moderation be known unto all Men, Phil. 4. 5. Let your Hearts meditate, and your Tongues diſcourſe about heavenly things, be exceeding tender of ſin, ſtrict and punctual in every duty; and hereby convince the World that you are Men and Women of another Spirit.

5. Uſe for Conſolation.

Let every new Creature be chearful and thankful: If God have renewed your Natures, and thus altered the frame and temper of your Hearts; he hath beſtowed the richeſt Mercy upon you that Heaven or Earth affords: This is a work of greateſt rarity, a new Creature may be called, One among a Thouſand: 'Tis alſo an everlaſting work, never to be deſtroyed, as all other natural works of God (how excellent ſoever) muſt be, 'tis a work carried on by Almighty Power, through unſpeakable difficulties, and mighty oppoſitions, Epheſ. 1. 12. The exceeding greatneſs of God's Power goes forth to produce it; and indeed no leſs is required to enlighten the blind Mind, break the rocky Heart, and bow the ſtubborn Will of Man; and the ſame Almighty Power which at firſt created it, is neceſſary to be continued every moment to preſerve and continue it, 1 Pet. 1. 5. the new Creature is a Mercy which draws a train of innumerable and invaluable Mercies after it, Eph. 2, 13, 14. 1 Cor. 3. 22. when God hath given us a new Nature, then he dignifies us with a new Name, Rev. 2. 17. brings us into a new Covenant, Jer. 31. 33. begets us again to a new hope, 1. Pet. 1. 3. intitles us to a new Inheritance, Joh. 1. 12, 13. 'tis the new Creature, which through Chriſt makes our Perſons and Duties acceptable with God, Gal. 6. 15. In a word, it is the wonderful work of God, of which we may ſay, This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our Eyes; there are unſearchable wonders in its Generation, in its Operation, and in its Preſervation. Let all therefore whom the Lord hath thus renewed, fall down at the Feet of God, in an humble admiration of the unſearchable Riches of Free Grace, and never open their Mouths to complain under any adverſe or bitter Providences of God.

SERMON XXVII.

GAL. V, 24.

And they that are Chriſt's have crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts.

Serm. 27. Text. Of the Nature Principle, and Neceſſity of Mortification.

TWO great Tryals of our intereſt in Chriſt are finiſhed, we now proceed to a third, namely, the mortification of ſin: they that are Chriſt's have crucified the Fleſh. The ſcope of the Apoſtle in this context, is to heal the unchriſtian Breaches among the Galatians, prevailing by the inſtigation of Satan, to the breach of brotherly love: To cure this he urges four weighty Arguments.

Firſt, From the great Commandment, to love one another, upon which the whole Law, (i. e.) all the Duties of the ſecond Table do depend, ver. 14.

Secondly, He powerfully diſſwades them from the conſideration of the ſad events of their bitter Conteſts, Calumnies, and Detractions, viz. mutual ruine and deſtruction, ver. 15.

Thirdly, He diſſwades them from the conſideration of the contrariety of theſe practices unto the Spirit of God, by whom they all profeſs themſelves to be governed, from ver. 17, to the 23.

Fourthly, He powerfully diſſuades them from theſe Animoſities, from the inconſiſtency of theſe or any other Luſts of the Fleſh with an intereſt in Chriſt: They that be Chriſts have crucified the Fleſh, &c q. d. you all profeſs your ſelves to be Members of Chriſt, to be Followers of him; but how incongruous are theſe practices to ſuch a profeſſion? Is this the Fruit of the Dove-like Spirit of Chriſt? Are theſe the Fruits of your Faith, and profeſſed Mortification? Shall the Sheep of Chriſt ſnarl and fight, like rabid and furious Beaſts of Prey? Tantæne animis cœleſtibus iræ? O how repugnant are theſe practices the Study of Mortification, which is the great ſtudy and endeavour of all that be in Chriſt! They that are Chriſts have crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts.

——non ſecus ac cum duo converſis inimica in prælia tauri, Frontibus incurrunt.

So much for the order of the words; the words themſelves are a Propoſition, wherein we have to conſider both the

1. Subject. 2. Predicate.

Vere Chriſtiani qui ad Chriſtum pertinent, qui ſe ei d dere regendos. Pol. Synopſis.

Firſt, The Subject of the Propoſition, they that are Chriſt's, viz. true Chriſtians, real Members of Chriſt; ſuch as truly belong to Chriſt, ſuch as have given themſelves up to be governed by him, and are indeed acted by his Spirit; ſuch, all ſuch Perſons (for the indefinite is equipollent to an univerſal) all ſuch, and none but ſuch.

Secondly, The Predicate, they have crucified the Flesh, with the Affections and Lusts: By Flesh we are here to understand carnal Concupiscence, the workings and motions of corrupt Nature; and by the Affections we are to understand, not the natural, but the inordinate Affections; for Christ doth not abolish and destroy, but correct and regulate the Affections of those that are in him: And by crucifying the Flesh, we are not to understand the total extinction, or perfect subduing of corrupt Nature, but only the deposing of corruption from its regency and dominion in the Soul; its dominion is taken away, though its Life be prolonged for a Season; but yet, as Death surely, though slowly, follows crucifixion, (the Life of crucified Persons gradually departing from them with their Blood,) so it is just so in the Mortification of Sin; and therefore what the Apostle in this place calls crucifying, he calls in Rom. 8, 13. mortifying. If ye through the Spirit do mortifie, θανατοῦτε, if ye put to death the Deeds of the Body: But he chooses in this place to call it crucifying, to shew not only the conformity there is betwixt the Death of Christ, and the Death of Sin, in respect of shame, pain, and lingring slowness; but to denote also the principle, means and instrument of Mortification, viz. the Death or Cross of Jesus Christ, in the vertue whereof Believers do mortifie the corruptions of their Flesh; the great Arguments and Perswasives to Mortification being drawn from the sufferings of Christ for Sin. In a word, he doth not say, they that believe Christ was crucified for Sin, are Christ's; but they, and they only are his, who feel as well as profess the power and efficacy of the sufferings of Christ in the mortification, and subduing of their Lusts and sinful Affections. And so much briefly of the Parts and Sense of the Words.

The Observation followeth.

Doct. That a saving interest in Christ may be regularly and strongly inferred and concluded from the mortification of the Flesh, with the Affections and Lusts.

This point is fully confirmed by those words of the Apostle, Rom, 6. 5, 6, 7, 8. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his Death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection; knowing this, that our old Man is crucified with him, that the Body of Sin might be destroyed; that henceforth we should not serve Sin; for he that is dead is free from Sin: Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him.

Mark the force of the Apostle's reasoning; if we have been planted into the likeness of his Death, viz. by the mortification of Sin, which resembles, or hath a likeness to the kind and manner of Christ's Death (as was noted above) then we shall be also in the likeness of his Resurrection; and why so, but because this mortification of Sin is an undoubted evidence of the Union of such a Soul with Christ, which is the very ground work and principle of that blessed and glorious Resurrection: And therefore he saith, verse 11. Reckon ye also your selves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord, q. d. reason thus with your selves, these mortifying influences of the death of Christ are unquestionable presages of your future Blessedness: God never taking this course with any but those who are in Christ, and are designed to be glorified with him; the Death of your Sin is as evidential as any thing in the World can be, of your spiritual Life for the present, and of your eternal Life with God hereafter. Mortification is the Fruit and Evidence of your Union, and that Union is the firm groundwork, and certain pledge of your Glorification; and so you ought to reckon or reason the case with your selves, as the Word λογίζεσθε there signifies. Now for the stating and explicating of this part, I shall in the doctrinal Point labour to open and confirm these five things.

1. What the Mortification or Crucifixion of Sin imports.
2. Why this Work of the Spirit is expressed by crucifying.
3. Why all that are in Christ must be so Crucified, or Mortified unto Sin.
4. What is the true Evangelical Principle of Mortification.
5. How the Mortification of Sin evinces our interest in Christ.

And then apply the whole.

First, What the Mortification or Crucifixion of Sin imports.

And for the clearness sake, I shall speak to it both negatively and positively; shewing you what is not intended; and what is principally aimed at by the Spirit of God in this expression.

First, The Crucifying of the Flesh doth not imply the total abolition of Sin in Believers, or the destruction of its very Being and Existence in them for the present: Sanctified Souls so put off their Corruptions with their Bodies at Death: This will be the effect of our future Glorification, not of our present Sanctification; it doth exist in the most mortified Believer in the World, Rom. 7. 17. it still actethand lusteth in the regenerate Soul, Gal. 5. 17. yea, notwithstanding its crucifixion in Believers, it still may, in respect of single acts, surprize and captivate them, Psal. 65. 3. Rom. 7. 23. This therefore is not the intention of the Spirit of God in this expression.

Mortificari carnem non est eam ita perimi, ut aut prorsus non sit, aut nulla prava in homine desideria commoveat, quod in corpore mortis hujus non contingit, &c. Estius in loc.

Secondly, nor doth the Crucifixion of Sin consist in the suppression of the external acts of Sin only; for Sin may reign over the Souls of Men, whilst it doth not break forth into their lives in gross and open actions, 2 Pet. 2. 20. Matth. 12. 43. Morality in the Heathens (as Tertullian well observes) did abscondere, sed non abscindere vitia, hide them, when it could not kill them: Many a Man shews a white and fair hand, who yet hath a very foul and black heart.

Thirdly, The Crucifixion of the Flesh doth not consist in the cessation of the external act of Sin; for in that respect the lusts of Men may die of their own accord, even a kind of natural Death. The Members of the Body are the Weapons of Unrighteousness as the Apostle calls them; Age or Sickness may so blunt or break those Weapons, that the Soul cannot use them to such sinful purposes and services, as it was wont to do in the vigorous and healthful season of Life; not that there is less Sin in the Heart, but because there is less strength ſtrength and activity in the Body. Juſt as it is with an old Soldier, who hath as much skill, policy, and delight as ever in military Actions; but Age and hard Services have ſo infeebled him, that he can no longer follow the Camp.

Fourthly, The Crucifixion of Sin doth not conſiſt in the ſevere caſtigations of the Body, and penancing it by ſtripes, faſting and tireſome Pilgrimages. This may paſs for Mortification among Papiſts, but never was any luſt of the Fleſh deſtroyed by this rigour. Chriſtians indeed are bound not to indulge and pamper the Body, which is the Inſtrument of Sin, nor yet muſt we think that the ſpiritual corruptions of the Soul feel thoſe ſtripes which are inflicted upon the Body: See Col. 2. 23. 'tis not the vanity of ſuperſtition, but the power of true Religion which crucifies and deſtroys corruption; 'tis Faith in Chriſt's Blood, not the ſpilling of our own Blood, which gives ſin the Mortal wound.

Secondly, But if you enquire, what then is implied in the mortification or crucifixion of Sin, and wherein it doth conſiſt? I anſwer, Firſt, It neceſſarily implies the Soul's implantation into Chriſt, and union with him; without which it is impoſſible that any one corruption ſhould be mortified, they that are [Chriſt's] have crucified the Fleſh: The attempts and endeavours of all others are vain and ineffectual: When we were in the Fleſh (ſaith the Apoſtle) the motions of ſin which were by the Law did work in our Members to bring forth fruit unto death, Rom. 5. 7. Sin was then in its full dominion, no abſtinence, rigour, or outward ſeverity; no purpoſes, promiſes or ſolemn vows could mortifie or deſtroy it; there muſt be an implantation into Chriſt, before there can be any effectual crucifixion of Sin: What Believer almoſt hath not in the days of his firſt convictions, tryed all external methods and means of mortifying Sin, and found it in experience to be to as little purpoſe as the binding of Sampſon with green Withs or Cords? But when he hath once come to act Faith upon the Death of Chriſt, then the deſign of Mortification hath proſpered and ſucceeded to good purpoſe.

Errant in ipſa natura mortificationis Chriſtiane, nam corporis afflictionem & injuriam reputant pro vera mortificatione, cum illa non ad carnem præſtipue aut inferiorem animæ partem, ſed ad mentem & voluntatem, maxime pertineat. Davenant in Coloſſ. 256.

Secondly, Mortification of Sin implies the agency of the ſpirit of God in that work, without whoſe aſſiſtances and aids all our endeavours muſt needs be fruitleſs: Of this work we may ſay as it was ſaid in another caſe, Zech. 4. 6. Not by might, nor by power, but by my ſpirit, ſaith the Lord. When the Apoſtle therefore would ſhew by what hand this work of Mortification is performed, he thus expreſſeth it, Rom. 8. 13. If ye through the Spirit do mortifie the deeds of the Body, ye ſhall live: The Duty is ours, but the power whereby we perform it, is God's: The Spirit is the only ſucceſsful Combatant againſt the Luſts that war in our Members, Gal. 5. 17. 'tis true, this excludes not, but implies our endeavours; for it is we through the Spirit that mortifie the deeds of the Body; but yet all our endeavours without the Spirit's aid and influence avail nothing.

Thirdly, The Crucifixion of Sin neceſſarily implies the ſubverſion of its dominion in the Soul: A mortified Sin cannot be a reigning Sin, Rom. 6. 12, 13, 14. Two things conſtitute the dominion of Sin, viz. the fulneſs of its power, and the Souls ſubjection to it. As to the fulneſs of its power, that riſes from the ſuitableneſs it hath, and pleaſure it gives to the corrupt Heart of Man: It ſeems to be as neceſſary as the Right Hand, as uſeful and pleaſant as the Right Eye, Matth. 5. 29. but the mortified Heart is dead to all pleaſures and profits of Sin, it hath no delight or pleaſure in it; it becomes its burden and daily complaint. Mortification preſuppoſes the illumination of the mind and conviction of the Conſcience; by reaſon whereof Sin cannot deceive and blind the Mind, or bewitch and enſnare the Will and Affections, as it was wont to do, and conſequently its dominion over the Soul is deſtroyed and loſt.

Fourthly, The crucifying of the Fleſh implies a gradual weakning of the power of Sin in the Soul. The Death of the Croſs was a ſlow and lingering Death, and the crucified Perſon grew weaker and weaker every hour; ſo it is in the mortification of Sin: The Soul is ſtill cleanſing itſelf from all filthineſs of the Fleſh and Spirit, and perfecting holineſs in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1. And as the Body of Sin is weakned more and more; ſo the inward Man, or the new Creature is renewed day by day, 2 Cor. 4. 16. For Sanctification is a progreſſive work of the Spirit: And as Holineſs increaſes, and roots it ſelf deeper and deeper in the Soul; ſo the power and intereſt of Sin proportionably abates, and ſinks lower and lower, until at length it be ſwallowed up in Victory.

Fifthly, The crucifying of the Fleſh notes to us the Believers deſigned application of all ſpiritual means, and ſanctified inſtruments for the deſtruction of it: There is nothing in this World which a gracious Heart more vehemently deſires and longs for, than the death of Sin, and perfect deliverance from it, Rom. 7. 24. the ſincerity of which deſires doth accordingly manifeſt it ſelf in the daily application of all God's Remedies, ſuch are daily watching againſt the occaſions of Sin, Job 31. 1. I have made a Covenant with mine eyes; more than ordinary vigilancy over their ſpecial or proper Sin, Pſal. 18. 23. I kept my ſelf from mine iniquity: Earneſt cries to Heaven for preventing Grace, Pſal. 19. 13. Keep back thy Servant alſo from preſumptuous ſins, let them not have dominion over me: Deep humblings of Soul for Sins paſt, which is an excellent preventive unto future Sins, 2 Cor. 2. 11. in that he ſorrowed after a Godly ſort, what carefulneſs wrought it? Care to give no furtherance or advantage to the deſign of Sin, by making proviſion for the Fleſh, to fulfil the Luſts thereof, as others do, Rom. 13. 13, 14. Willingneſs to bear the due reproofs of Sin, Pſal. 141. 5. Let the righteous ſmite me, it ſhall be a kindneſs: Theſe and ſuch like means of mortification, regenerate Souls are daily uſing, and applying, in order to the death of Sin. And ſo much of the firſt particular, what the mortification of Sin, or crucifying of the Fleſh implies.

Secondly, In the next place, we ſhall examine the reaſons, why this work of the Spirit is expreſſed under that Trope, or figurative expreſſion, of crucifying the Fleſh. Now the ground and reaſon of the uſe of this expreſſion, is the reſemblance which the mortification of Sin bears unto the Death of the Croſs: And this appears in five particulars.

Firſt, The Death of the Croſs was a painful Death, and the mortification of Sin is very painful work, Matth. 25. 29. 'tis the cutting off our Right Hands, and plucking out our Right Eyes; it will coſt many thouſand Tears, and Groans, Prayers and ſtrong Cries to Heaven, before one Sin will be mortified. Upon the account of the difficulty of this work, and mainly upon this account, the Scripture ſaith, narrow is the way, and ſtrait is the gate that leadeth unto Life, and few there be that find it, Matth. 7. 14. and that the righteous themſelves are ſcarcely ſaved.

Secondly, The Death of the Croſs was univerſally painful, every Member, every Senſe, every Sinew, every Nerve was the Seat and Subject of tormenting pain. So is it in the mortification of Sin; 'tis not this or that particular Member, or Act; but the whole Body of Sin that is to be deſtroyed, Rom. 6. 6. and accordingly the conflict is in every Faculty of the Soul; for the Spirit of God, by whoſe hand Sin is mortified, doth not combat with this or that particular Luſt only, but with Sin as Sin; and for that reaſon with every Sin, in every Faculty of the Soul. So that there are conflicts, and and anguiſh in every part.

Thirdly, The Death of the Croſs was a ſlow and lingring Death; denying unto them that ſuffered it the favour of a quick diſpatch. Juſt ſo it is in the Death of Sin; though the Spirit of God be mortifying it day by day, yet this is a Truth ſealed by the ſad experience of all Believers in the World, that Sin is long a dying: And if we ask a reaſon of this diſpenſation of God, among others, this ſeems to be one; corruptions in Believers, like the Canaanites in the Land of Iſrael, are left to prove, and to exerciſe the People of God, to keep us watching and praying, mourning and believing; yea, wondering and admiring at the riches of pardoning and preſerving Mercy all our days.

Mortificatio peccato non fit uno momento, ſed opus eſt lucta aſſidua: peccatum langueſcit ab initio mortificationis noſtræ, in progreſſu tabeſcit: ad extremum (i. e.) in ipſa morte noſtra, abolebitur. Origen in Epiſt. ad Rom.

Fourthly, The Death of the Croſs was a very opprobrious and ſhameful Death; they that died upon the Croſs were loaded with ignominy; the Crimes for which they died were expoſed to the publick view; after this manner dieth Sin, a very ſhameful and ignominious Death. Every true Believer draws up a charge againſt it in every Prayer, aggravates and condemns it in every Confeſſion, bewails the evil of it with multitudes of Tears and Groans, making Sin as vile and odious as they can find words to expreſs it, though not ſo vile as it is in its own Nature. O my God (ſaith Ezra) I am aſhamed, and even bluſh to look up unto thee, Ezra 9. 6. So Daniel in his Confeſſion, Dan. 9. 7. O Lord, righteouſneſs belongeth unto thee, but unto us confuſion of Faces, as at this day. Nor can it grieve any Believer in the World, to accuſe, condemn, and ſhame himſelf for Sin, whilſt he remembers and conſiders, that all that ſhame and confuſion of Face which he takes to himſelf, goes to the Vindication, Glory and Honour of his God: As David was content to be more vile ſtill for God, ſo it pleaſeth the Heart of a Chriſtian to magnifie and advance the Name and Glory of God, by expoſing his own ſhame, in humble and broken-hearted confeſſions of Sin.

Fifthly, In a Word, the Death of the Croſs was not a natural, but a violent Death: Such alſo is the Death of Sin: Sin dies not of its own accord, as Nature dieth in old Men, in whom the Balſamum radicale, or radical moiſture is conſumed; for if the Spirit of God did not kill it, it would live to eternity in the Souls of Men; 'tis not the everlaſting burnings, and all the wrath of God which lies upon the damned for ever, that can deſtroy Sin. Sin, like a Salamander, can live to eternity in the Fire of God's wrath; ſo that either it muſt die a violent death by the hand of the Spirit, or never dieth at all. And thus you ſee, why the mortification of Sin is Tropically expreſſed by the crucifying of the Fleſh.

3. Thirdly, Why all that are in Chriſt muſt be ſo crucified, or mortified unto Sin: And the neceſſity of this will appear divers ways.

Firſt, From the inconſiſtency and contrariety that there is betwixt Chriſt and unmortified Luſt, Gal. 5. 17. Theſe are contrary the one to the other. There is a threefold inconſiſtency betwixt Chriſt and ſuch Corruptions; they are not only contrary to the holineſs of Chriſt, 1 Joh. 3. 6. Whoſoever abideth in him ſinneth not; whoſoever ſinneth hath not ſeen him, neither known him, (i. e.) whoſoever is thus ingulphed and plunged into the luſt of the Fleſh, can have no communion with the pure and holy Chriſt; but there is alſo an inconſiſtency betwixt ſuch Sin and the Honour of Chriſt, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Let every one that nameth the Name of Chriſt, depart from iniquity: As Alexander ſaid to a Soldier of his Name, recordare nominis Alexandri, remember thy Name is Alexander, and do nothing unworthy of that Name. And unmortified Luſts are alſo contrary to the Dominion and Government of Chriſt, Luke 9. 23. If any Man will come after me, let him deny himſelf and take up his Croſs daily, and follow me: Theſe are the ſelf-denying terms, upon which all Men are admitted into Chriſt's ſervice: And without Mortification and Self-denial he allows no Man to call him Lord and Maſter.

Secondly, The neceſſity of Mortification appears from the neceſſity of conformity betwixt Chriſt the Head, and all the Members of his myſtical Body; for how incongruous and uncomely would it be to ſee a holy heavenly Chriſt, leading a Company of unclean carnal, and ſenſual Members? Matth. 11. 29. Take my yoak upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly, q. d. it would be monſtrous to the World, to behold a company of Lions and Wolves following a meek and harmleſs Lamb. Men of raging and unmortified Luſts, profeſſing and owning me for their Head of Government: And again, 1 Joh. 2. 6. He that ſaith he abideth in him, ought himſelf alſo ſo to walk even as he walked, q. d. either imitate Chriſt in your Practice, or never make pretenſions to Chriſt in your Profeſſion: This was what the Apoſtle complained of, Phil. 3. 18. for many walk walk of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the Enemies of the Croſs of Chriſt: Men cannot ſtudy to put a greater diſhonour and reproach upon Chriſt, than by making his Name and Profeſſion a cloak and cover to their filthy Luſts.

Thirdly, The neceſſity of crucifying the Fleſh, appears from the method of Salvation as it is ſtated in the Goſpel. God every where requires the practice of Mortification under pain of Damnation, Matth. 18. 8. Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee; cut them off, and caſt them from thee; it is better for thee to enter into Life halt or maimed; rather than having two hands, or two feet, to be caſt into everlaſting fire: The Goſpel legitimates no hopes of Salvation, but ſuch as are accompanied with ſerious endeavours of Mortification, 1 Joh. 3. 3. Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure: 'Twas one ſpecial end of Chriſt's coming into the World, to ſave his People from their Sins, Matth. 1. 21. not will he be a Saviour unto any who remain under the dominion of their own Luſts.

Fourthly, The whole ſtream and current of the Goſpel puts us under the neceſſity of Mortification. Goſpel-Precepts have reſpect unto this, Col. 3. 5. Mortifie your Members therefore, which are upon the Earth, 1. Pet. 1. 15. Be ye holy for I am holy. Goſpel-Preſidents have reſpect unto this, Heb. 12. 1. Wherefore ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us lay aſide every weight, and the ſin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, &c. Goſpel-threatnings are written for this end, and do all preſs Mortification in a thundring dialect, Rom. 8. 13. If ye live after the Fleſh ye ſhall die, Rom. 1. 18. The wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all ungodlineſs, and unrighteouſneſs of Men: The Promiſes of the Goſpel are written deſignedly to promote it, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe Promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of Fleſh and Spirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God: But in vain are all theſe Precepts, Preſidents, Threatnings and Promiſes written in the Scripture, except Mortification be the daily ſtudy and practice of Profeſſors.

Fifthly, Mortification is the very ſcope and aim of our Regeneration, and the infuſion of the principles of Grace: If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit, Gal. 5. 25. In vain were the habits of Grace planted, if the Fruits of Holineſs and Mortification be not produced; yea, Mortification is not only the deſign and aim, but it is a ſpecial part, even the one half of our Sanctification.

Sixthly, If Mortification be not the daily practice and endeavour of Believers, then the way to Heaven no way anſwers to Chriſt's deſcription of it in the Goſpel: He tells us, Matth. 7. 13, 14. Wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to deſtruction, and many there be that go in thereat; becauſe ſtrait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto Life, and few there be that find it: Well then, either Chriſt muſt be miſtaken in the account he gave of the way to Glory, or elſe all unmortified Perſons are out of the way; for what makes the way of Salvation narrow, but the difficulties and ſeverities of Mortification?

Seventhly, In a word, he that denies the neceſſity of Mortification, confounds all diſcriminating marks betwixt Saints and Sinners; pulls down the Pale of diſtinction, and lets the World into the Church, and the Church into the World; 'tis a great deſign of the Goſpel to preſerve the boundaries betwixt the one and the other, Rom. 2, 7, 8. Rom. 8. 1, 4, 5, 6, 13. But if Men may be Chriſtians without Mortification, we may as well go into the Taverns, Ale-houſes, or Brothel-houſes, among the roaring or ſottiſh crew of Sinners, and ſay, here be thoſe that are redeemed by the Blood of Chriſt; here be his Diſciples and Followers; as go to ſeek them in the pureſt Churches, or moſt ſtrictly religious Families; by all which the neceſſity of Mortification, unto all that are in Chriſt, is abundantly evidenced.

Fourthly, In the next place we are to enquire into the true principle of Mortification: 'Tis true there are many ways attempted by Men for the Mortification of Sin, and many rules laid down to guide Men in that great work; ſome of which are very trifling and impertinent things; ſuch are thoſe preſcribed by Popiſh Votaries; but I ſhall lay down this as a ſure concluſion, that the ſanctifying Spirit is the only effectual principle of Mortification; and without him no Reſolutions, Vows, Abſtinences, Caſtigations of the Body, or any other external endeavours can ever avail to the Mortification of one Sin: The moral Heathens have preſcribed many pretty rules and helps for the ſuppreſſion of Vice: Ariſtides, Seneca, and Cato were renowned among them upon this account: But yet as Lactantius well obſerves, moral Philoſophy did rather abſcondere vitia, quam abſcindere, hide it, rather than kill it; formal Chriſtians have alſo gone far in the reformation of their Lives, but could never attain true Mortification; formality pares off the excreſcencies of Vice, but never kills the root of it; it uſually recovers it ſelf again, and their Souls like a Body not well purged, relapſe into a worſe condition than before, Matth. 12. 43, 44. 2 Pet. 2. 20.

This work of Mortification is peculiar to the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 13. Gal. 5. 17. and the Spirit becomes a principle of Mortification in Believers two ways, namely,

1. By the implantation of contrary Habits.
2. By aſſiſting thoſe implanted Habits in all the times of need.

Firſt, The Spirit of God implants Habits of a contrary Nature, which are deſtructive to Sin, and are purgative of Corruption, 1 Joh. 5. 4. Acts 15. 9. Grace is to Corruption what Water is to Fire; betwixt which there is both a formal and effective oppoſition; a contrariety both in Nature and Operation, Gal. 5. 17. There is a threefold remarkable advantage given us by Grace for the deſtruction and mortification of Sin. For,

Firſt, Grace gives the Mind and Heart of Man a contrary bent and inclination; by reaſon whereof ſpiritual and heavenly things become connatural to the regenerate Soul, Rom. 7. 22. For I delight in the Law of God after the inner Man: Sanctification is in the Soul as a living ſpring running with a kind of central force Heaven-ward, Joh. 4. 14.

Secondly, Holy Principles deſtroy the intereſt that Sin once had in the love and delight of of the Soul; the ſanctified Soul cannot take pleaſure in Sin, or find delight in that which grieves God, as it was wont to do; but that which was the object of delight, hereby becomes the object of grief and hatred, Rom. 7. 15. What I hate, that I do.

Thirdly, From both theſe follow a third advantage for the mortification of Sin, in as much as Sin being contrary to the new Nature, and the object of grief and hatred, cannot poſſibly be committed without reluctancy, and very ſenſible regret of Mind; and actions done with regret, are neither done frequently nor eaſily. The caſe of a regenerate Soul under the Surprizals, and particular Victories of Temptation, being like that of a Captive in War, who marches not with delight, but by conſtraint among his Enemies. So the Apoſtle expreſſeth himſelf, Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my Members, warring againſt the Law of my Mind; and bringing me into captivity unto the Law of ſin, which is in my Members: Thus the Spirit of God promotes the deſign of Mortification by the implantation of contrary Habits.

Αιχμαλωτίζω, cum ita quis capitur, ut nequeat luctari, nec ſe capienti obſiſtere. Sclat.

Secondly, By aſſiſting thoſe Gracious Habits in all the times of need, which he doth many ways; ſometimes notably awakening and rowzing Grace out of the dull and ſleepy Habit, and drawing forth the activity and power of it into actual and ſucceſsful reſiſtances of Temptations, as Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God? Holy fear awakens firſt, and raiſes all the powers of Grace in the Soul, to make a vigorous reſiſtance of temptation: The Spirit alſo ſtrengthens weak Grace in the Soul, 2 Cor. 12. 9. My Grace is ſufficient for thee, for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs: And by reaſon of Grace thus implanted, and thus aſſiſted, he that is born of God keepeth himſelf, and the wicked one toucheth him not.

Fifthly, The laſt Query to be ſatisfied, is, how Mortification of Sin ſolidly evinceth the Soul's intereſt in Chriſt; and this it doth divers ways, affording the mortified Soul many ſound evidences thereof, As, Whatſoever evidences the indwelling of the Holy Spirit of God in us, muſt needs be evidential of a ſaving intereſt in Chriſt, as hath been fully proved before; but the mortification of Sin doth plainly evidence the indwelling of the Spirit of God; for as we proved but now, it can proceed from no other Principle; there is a ſtrong and inſeparable connexion betwixt Mortification and the Spirit, as betwixt the Effect and its proper Cauſe, and the ſelf-ſame connexion betwixt the in-being of the Spirit, and union with Chriſt. So that to reaſon from mortification to the inhabitation of the Spirit, and from the inhabitation of the Spirit to our union with Chriſt, is a ſtrong Scriptural way of reaſoning.

Evidence 2.

That which proves a Soul to be under the Covenant of Grace, evidently proves its intereſt in Chriſt; for Chriſt is the Head of that Covenant, and none but ſound Believers are under the Bleſſings and Promiſes of it; but mortification of Sin is a ſound evidence of the Soul's being under the Covenant of Grace, as is plain from thoſe Words of the Apoſtle, Rom. 6. 12, 13, 14, Let not ſin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſt thereof, neither yield ye your Members, as inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin; but yield your ſelves unto God, as thoſe, that are alive from the dead, and your Members as inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God; for ſin ſhall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the Law, but under Grace: Where the Apoſtle preſſeth Believers unto Mortification by this encouragement, that it will be a good evidence unto them of a new Covenant-intereſt; for all legal duties and endeavours can never mortifie Sin: 'Tis the Spirit in the New Covenant which produces this; whoever therefore hath his corruptions mortified, hath his intereſt in the Covenant, and conſequently in Chriſt, ſo far cleared unto him.

Evidence 3.

That which is the Fruit and Evidence of ſaving Faith, muſt needs be a good evidence of our intereſt in Chriſt; but Mortification of Sin is the Fruit and Evidence of ſaving Faith, Acts 15. 9. Purifying their Hearts by Faith, 1 Joh. 5. 4. This is the Victory whereby we overcome the World, even our Faith: Faith overcomes both the allurements of the World upon the other hand; by mortifying the Heart and Affections to all earthly things: A mortified Heart is not eaſily taken with the enſnaring pleaſures of the World; or much moved with the diſgraces, loſſes, and ſufferings it meets with from the World; and ſo the ſtrength and force of its temptations is broken, and the mortified Soul becomes victorious over it, and all this by the inſtrumentality of Faith.

Evidence 4.

In a Word, there is an intimate and indiſſoluble connexion betwixt the mortification of Sin, and the Life of Grace, Rom. 6. 11. Reckon your ſelves to be dead indeed unto Sin, but alive unto God through Jeſus Chriſt: And the Life of Chriſt muſt needs involve a ſaving intereſt in Chriſt; by all which is fully proved what was aſſerted in the Obſervation from this Text. The Application follows in the next Sermon.

SER-

SERMON XXVIII.

GAL. V. 24.

And they that are Christ's have crucified the Flesh, with the Affections and Lusts.

From hence our Observation was,

Serm. 28. THAT a saving interest in Christ may be regularly and strongly inferred, and concluded from the Mortification of the Flesh, with its Affections and Lusts.

Having opened the Nature, and necessity of Mortification in the former Sermon and shewn how regularly a saving interest in Christ may be concluded from it; we now proceed to apply the whole, by way of

1. Information.
2. Exhortation.
3. Direction.
4. Examination.
5. Consolation.

1. Use for Information.

Inference 1.

If they that be Christ's have crucified the Flesh, Then the Life of Christians is no idle or easie Life: The corruptions of his Heart continually fill his Hands with work, with work of the most difficult nature, sin-crucifying work, which the Scripture calls the cutting off the Right Hand, and plucking out of the Right Eye: Sin-crucifying work is hard work, and it is constant work, throughout the Life of a Christian; there is no time or place freed from this conflict; every occasion stirs corruption, and every stirring of corruption calls for mortification: Corruptions work in our very best Duties, Rom. 7. 23. and put the Christian upon mortifying Labours. The World and the Devil are great Enemies and Fountains of many Temptations to Believers, but not like the corruptions of our own Hearts; they only tempt objectively and externally; but this tempts internally, and therefore much more dangerous; they only tempt at Times and Seasons: this continually at all Times and Seasons: Besides, whatever Satan or the World attempts upon us, would be altogether ineffectual, were it not for our own corruptions, Job. 14. 30. so that the corruptions of our own Hearts, as they give us most danger, so they must give us more labour; our Life and this labour must end together; for Sin is long a dying in the best Heart: Those that have been many years exercised in the study of Mortification, may haply feel the same corruption tempting and troubling them now, which put them into tears, and many times to their Knees twenty or forty years ago. It may be said of Sin as it was of Hannibal, that active Enemy; that will never be quiet, whether conquering or conquered; and until Sin cease working, the Christian must not cease mortifying.

Inference 2.

If mortification be the great work of a Christian, then certainly those that give the corruptions of Christians an occasion to revive, must needs do them a very ill Office: They are not our best Friends that stir the Pride of our Hearts by the flattery of their Lips. The Graces of God in others, I confess, are thankfully to be owned, and under discouragements, and contrary temptations, to be wisely and modestly spoken of; but the strongest Christians do scarcely shew their own weakness in any one thing more than they do in bearing their own Praises. Christian, thou knowest thou carriest Gunpowder about thee, desire those that carry Fire to keep at a distance from thee; 'tis a dangerous Crisis when a proud Heart meets with the flattering Lips, auferte ignem, &c. take away the Fire (said a Holy Divine of Germany, when his Friend commended him upon his Death-bed) for I have yet combustible matter about me: Faithful, seasonable, discreet reproofs are much more safe to us, and advantagious to our mortifying work; but alas, How few have the boldness or wisdom duly to administer them? 'Tis said of Alexander, that he bid a Philosopher (who had been long with him) to be gone; for, said he, so long thou hast been with me, and never Reproved me; which must needs be thy fault; for either thou sawest nothing in me worthy of Reproof, which argues thy Ignorance; or else thou durst not reprove me, which argues thy Unfaithfulness. A wise and faithful Reprover is of singular use to him that is heartily engaged in the design of mortification; such a faithful Friend, or some malicious Enemy, must be helpful to us in that work.

Inference 3.

Hence it follows, that manifold and successive afflictions are no more than is necessary for the best of Christians; the mortification of our Lusts require them all, be they never so many, 1 Pet. 1. 5. if need be, ye are in heavinesse; 'tis no more than need, that one loss should follow another, to mortify an earthly Heart; for so intensely are our Affections set upon the World, that it is not one, or two, or many checks of Providence, that will suffice to wean and alienate them. Alas, the earthliness of our Hearts will take all this, it may be much more than this to purge them: The wise God sees it but necessary to permit frequent discoveries of our own weakness, and to let loose the Tongues of many Enemies upon us, and all little enough to pull down the Pride and Vanity that is in our Hearts. Christian, how difficult soever it be for thee to bear it; yet the pride of thy Heart requires all the Scoffs and Jeers, all the Calumnies and Reproaches, that ever the Tongues or Pens of thy bittereſt Enemies, or mistaking Friends, have at any time thrown upon thee. Such rank Weeds, as grow in our Hearts, will require hard Frosts, and very sharp Weather to rot them; the straying Bullock needs a heavy clog, and so doth a Christian, whom God will keep within the bounds and limits of his Commandments, Psal. 119. 67. Dan. 11. 35.

Non eſt ſalvus extra crucem Chriſti, qui non eſt crucifixus in Chriſto qui non eſt membrum Chriſti Proſper.

Inference 4.

If they that be Chriſts have crucified the fleſh, then the number of real Chriſtians is very ſmall : 'tis true, if all that ſeem to be meek, humble and heavenly, might paſs for Chriſtians, the number would be great : but if no more muſt be accounted Chriſtians, than thoſe who crucify the fleſh, with its affections and luſts, O how ſmall is the number ! For O how many be there under the Chriſtian name, that pamper and indulge their luſts, that ſecretly hate all that faithfully reprove them, and really affect none but ſuch as feed their luſts, by praiſing and admiring them ? How many that make proviſion for the fleſh, to fulfil its luſts ? who cannot endure to have their corruptions croſt : How many are there that ſeem very meek and humble, until an occaſion be given to ſtir their paſſion, and then you ſhall ſee in what degree they are mortified : the Flint is a cold ſtone, till it be ſtruck, and then 'tis all Fiery. I know the beſt of Chriſtians are mortified but in part : and ſtrong corruptions are ofttimes found in very eminent Chriſtians ; but they love them not ſo well as to purvey for them ; to protect, defend and countenance them : nor dare they ſecretly hate ſuch as faithfully reprove them ; as many thouſands that go under the name of Chriſtians do. Upon the account of mortification it is ſaid, Matth. 7. 13. Narrow is the way, and ſtrait is the gate that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

Inference 5.

If they that be Chriſt's have crucified the Fleſh ; (i. e.) mortification is their daily work and ſtudy ; then how falſely are Chriſtians charged as troublers of the World, and diſturbers of the civil peace and tranquillity of the times and places they live in? Juſtly may they retort the charge, as Elijah did to Ahab, It is not I that trouble Iſrael, but thou and thy Father's houſe : It is not the holy, meek and humble Chriſtians that put the World into confuſion : this is done by the Prophane, and Atheiſtical ; or by the deſigning and hypocritical World, and laid at the innocent Chriſtians door : as all the publick Calamities which from the immediate hand of God, or by Foreign, or domeſtick enemies befel Rome, were conſtantly charged upon Chriſtians ; and they condemned and puniſhed, for what the righteous hand of God inflicted, or the working heads of the enemies of that State without their privity contrived. The Apoſtle James propounds and anſwers a very pertinent queſtion unto this diſcourſe, James 4. 1. From whence come wars and fightings among you ; come they not hence, even of your luſts that war in your members ? O if all Men did but ſtudy mortification and ſelf-denial, and live as much at home in the conſtant work of their own hearts, as ſome Men do ; What tranquillity and peace, what bleſſed halcyon days ſhould we quickly ſee ! 'Tis true, Chriſtians are always fighting and quarrelling, but it is with themſelves and their own corrupt hearts and affections : they hate no enemy but ſin, they thirſt for the Blood and Ruine of none but of that Enemy : they are ambitious of no victory but what is over the corruptions of their own hearts ; they carry no grudge except it be againſt this enemy ſin, and yet theſe are the Men who are the moſt ſuſpected, and charged of diſturbing the times they live in. Juſt as the Wolf accuſed the Lamb, which was below him, for puddling and defiling the ſtream. But there will be a day, when God will clear up the innocency and integrity of his miſtaken and abuſed ſervants ; and the World ſhall ſee it was not Preaching and Praying, but Drinking, Swearing, Prophaneneſs and Enmity unto true Godlineſs, which diſturbs and breaks the tranquillity, and quietneſs of the times ; mean time let innocency commit it ſelf unto God who will protect, and in due time vindicate the ſame.

Inference 6.

If they that be Chriſt's have crucified the fleſh, then whatſoever Religion, Opinion or Doctrine, doth, in its own nature countenance and encourage ſin, is not of Chriſt ; the Doctrine of Chriſt every where teacheth mortification ; the whole ſtream of the Goſpel runs againſt ſin ; the Doctrine it teacheth, is holy, pure and Heavenly ; it hath no tendency to extol corrupt nature, and feed its pride by magnifying its freedom and power ; or by ſtamping the merit and dignity of the Blood of Chriſt upon its works and performances ; it never makes the death of Chriſt a Cloak to cover ſin, but an inſtrument to deſtroy it ; and whatſoever Doctrine it is, which nouriſhes the pride of nature, to the diſparagement of Grace ; or incourages licentiouſneſs and fleſhly luſt, is not the Doctrine of Chriſt ; but a ſpurious off-ſpring begotten by Satan upon the corrupt nature of man.

Inference 7.

7. If mortification be the great Buſineſs, and Character of a Chriſtian, then that condition is moſt eligible and deſirable by Chriſtians, which is leaſt of all expoſed to Temptation, Prov. 30. 8. Give me neither poverty nor riches, but feed me with food convenient ; that holy judicious man was well aware of the danger lurking in both extreams ; and how near they border upon deadly temptations, and approach the very precipice of ruine, that ſtand upon either ground : few Chriſtians have an Head ſtrong and ſteady enough to ſtand upon the pinacle of wealth and honour, nor is it every one that can grapple with poverty and contempt. A mediocrity is the Chriſtians beſt external ſecurity, and therefore moſt deſirable, and yet how do the corruption, the pride and ignorance of our hearts graſp, and covet that condition which only ſerves to warm and nouriſh our luſts, and make the work of Mortification much more difficult ? 'Tis well for us, that our wiſe Father leaves us not to our own choice that he frequently daſhes our earthly projects and diſappoints our fond expectations. Children were left to carve for themſelves how often would they cut their own fingers

Inference 8.

If Mortification be the great buſineſs of Chriſtian, then Chriſtian fellowſhip, and ſocie duly managed, and improved, muſt needs be ſingular Uſe, and ſpecial Advantage to the People God. For thereby we have the friendly he and aſſiſtance of many other hands, to carry our great deſign, and help us in our moſt di cult buſineſs ; if corruptions be too hard for others this way come in to our aſſiſtance, G 6. 1. Brethren if a man be overtaken in a fa ye which are Spiritual reſtore ſuch an one in the Spirit of meekneſs. If temptations prevail, and over-bear us that we fall under ſin, 'tis a ſpecial mercy to have the reproofs and counſels of our Brethren, who will not ſuffer Sin to reſt upon us, Levit. 19. 17. Whilſt we are ſluggiſh and ſleepy, others are vigilant, and careful for our ſafety: The humility of another, reproves and mortifies my Pride: The Activity and Livelineſs of another, awakens and quickens my deadneſs: The Prudence and Gravity of another, detects and cures my Levity and Vanity: The Heavenlineſs and Spirituality of another, may be exceeding uſeful both to reprove, and heal the earthlineſs, and ſenſuality of my heart. Two are better than one, but wo unto him that is alone. The Devil is well aware of this great Advantage, and therefore ſtrikes with ſpecial Malice againſt embodied Chriſtians, who are as a well diſciplined army, whom he therefore more eſpecially endeavours to rout and ſcatter by Perſecutions, that thereby particular Chriſtians may be deprived of the ſweet Advantages of mutual ſociety.

Inf. 9. How deeply hath ſin fixed its roots in our corrupt nature, that it ſhould be the conſtant work of a Chriſtians whole life, to mortifie and deſtroy it? God hath given us many excellent Helps, his Spirit within us, variety of ordinances and duties are alſo appointed as inſtruments of Mortification: And from the very day of Regeneration unto the laſt Moment of Diſſolution the Chriſtian is daily at work in the uſe of all ſanctified means external and internal, yet can never dig up, and deſtroy corruption at the root all his life long. The moſt eminent Chriſtians of longeſt ſtanding in Religion, who have ſhed Millions of Tears for Sin, and poured out many thouſand Prayers for the Mortification of it do after all find the grudgings of their old Diſeaſe, that there is ſtill Life and Strength in thoſe Corruptions which they have given ſo many Wounds unto in Duty. O the Depth and Strength of Sin! which nothing can ſeparate from us, but that which ſeparates our Souls and Bodies. And upon that account the Day of a Believers Death, is better than the Day of his Birth. Never till then, do we put off our Armour, ſheath our Sword, and cry Victory, Victory.

2. Uſe for Exhortation.

If they that are Chriſt's have crucified the Fleſh, &c. Then as ever we hope to make good our Claim to Chriſt, let us give all Diligence to mortify Sin, in vain elſe are all our Pretences unto Union with him. This is the great Work, and diſcriminating Character of a Believer. And ſeeing it is the main Buſineſs of Life, and great Evidence for Heaven, I ſhall therefore preſs you to it by the following Motives and Conſiderations.

1. Motive. And firſt, methinks the Comfort and Sweetneſs reſulting from Mortification ſhould effectually perſwade every Believer to more Diligence about it. There is a double Sweetneſs in Mortification, one in the nature of the work, as it is a Duty, a ſweet Chriſtian Duty; another as it hath reſpect to Chriſt, and is Evidential of our Union with him. In the firſt Conſideration there is a wonderful Sweetneſs in Mortification, for doſt thou not feel a bleſſed Calmneſs, Chearineſs and Tranquillity in thy Conſcience, when thou haſt faithfully repelled temptations, ſucceſsfully reſiſted and overcome thy Corruptions? Doth not God ſmile upon thee; Conſcience incourage, and approve thee? Haſt thou not an Heaven within thee? whilſt others feel a kind of Hell in the deadly Gripes and bitter accuſations of their own Conſciences, are covered with Shame, and filled with Horrours. But then, conſider it alſo as an Evidence of the Soul's intereſt in Chriſt, as my Text conſiders it; and what an Heaven upon Earth muſt then be found in Mortification! Theſe Indeavours of mine to ſubdue and mortify my Corruptions, plainly ſpeak the Spirit of God in me, and my being in Chriſt; and O what is this! What Heart hath largeneſs and ſtrength enough to receive and contain the Joy and Comfort which flows from a cleared Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt! Certainly, Chriſtians, the Tranquillity and Comfort of your whole Life depends upon it; and what is Life without the Comfort of Life, Rom. 8. 13. If ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye ſhall live, (i. e.) you ſhall live a ſerene, placid, comfortable Life, for it is Corruption unmortified which clouds the Face of God, and breaks the Peace of his People, and conſequently imbitters the Life of a Chriſtian.

2. Motive. As the Comfort of your own Lives which is much, ſo your inſtrumental Fineſs for the ſervice of God which is much more, depends upon the Mortification of your Sins, 2 Tim. 2. 21. If a man therefore purge himſelf from theſe, he ſhall be a veſſel unto honour; ſanctified and meet for the maſters uſe, and prepared unto every good work. Where is the Mercy of Life, but in the uſefulneſs and ſerviceableneſs of it unto God? It is not worth while to live ſixty, or ſeventy Years in the World, to eat, and drink, to buy and ſell, to laugh and cry, and then go down to the Place of ſilence. So far as any Man lives to God, an uſeful ſerviceable Life to his praiſe and honour; ſo far only, and no farther doth he anſwer the End of his Being. But it is the purged mortified Soul which is the Veſſel of Honour, prepared, and meet for the Maſter's uſe. Let a proud or an earthly Heart be imployed in any ſervice for God, and you ſhall find that ſuch an Heart will both ſpoil the Work, by managing it for a ſelf-end as Jehu did; and then devour the Praiſe of it by a proud Boaſt: Come, ſee my zeal. When the Lord would employ the Prophet Iſaiah in his Work and Service, his Iniquity was firſt purged; and after that he was employed, Iſai. 6,6,7,8. Sin is the Soul's Sickneſs, a Conſumption upon the inner Man; and we know that languiſhing conſumptive perſons are very unfit to be imployed in difficult and ſtrenuous Labours: Mortification, ſo far as it prevails, cures the Diſeaſe, recovers our Strength, and enables us for Service to God in our Generations.

3. Motive. Your Stability, and Safety in the Hour of Temptation depends upon the Succeſs of your mortifying Endeavours. Is it then a valuable Mercy in your Eyes to be kept upright and ſtedfaſt in the critical Seaſon of Temptation, when Satan ſhall be wreſtling with you for the Crown, and Prize of eternal Life? Then give Diligence to mortify your Corruptions. Temptation is a Siege, Satan is the Enemy without the Walls, labouring to force an Entrance, natural Corruptions are the Traytors within, that hold Correſpondency with the Enemy without, and open the Gate of the Soul to receive him. It was the covetouſneſs of Judas his Heart which overthrew him in the Hour of Temptation. They are our fleſhly Luſts which go over unto Satan in the day of Battel, and fight againſt our ſouls, 1. Pet. 2. 11. the Corruptions (or infectious Atoms which fly up and down the World in times of Temptation, as that Word μιάσματα imports) are through Luſts, 2 Pet. 1, 4. 2 Pet. 2. 20. 'Tis the Luſt within which gives a Luſtre to the Vanities of the World without, and thereby makes them ſtrong Temptations to us, 1 Joh. 2. 16. Mortify therefore your Corruptions as ever you expect to maintain your Station in the day of trial: cut off thoſe Advantages of your Enemy, leſt by them he cut off your Souls, and all your Hopes from God.

4. Motive. As Temptations will be irreſiſtable, ſo Afflictions will be unſupportable to you without Mortification. My Friends, you live in a mutable World, Providence daily rings the Changes in all the Kingdoms, Cities, and Towns all the World over. You that have Husbands or Wives to day, may be left deſolate to morrow: You that have Eſtates, and Children now, may be bereaved of both before you are aware. Sickneſs will tread upon the Heel of Health, and Death will aſſuredly follow Life, as the Night doth the Day. Conſider with your ſelves, are you able to bear the Loſs of your ſweet Enjoyments with Patience? Can you think upon the parting Hour without ſome Tremblings? O get a heart mortified to all theſe things, and you will bleſs a taking as well as a giving God. 'Tis the living World, not the crucified World, that raiſes ſuch Tumults in our Souls in the Day of Affliction. How cheerful was holy Paul under all his Sufferings! and what think you gave him that Peace, and Cheerfulneſs, but his Mortification to the World? Phil. 4. 12. I know both how to be abaſed, and I know how to abound; every where, and in all things I am inſtructed, both to be full, and to be hungry, both to abound, and ſuffer need. Job was the mirror of Patience in the greateſt Shock of Calamity, and what made him ſo, but the mortifiedneſs of his Heart in the fulleſt Enjoyment of earthly things? Job 31. 25.

5. Motive. The Reputation and Honour of Religion is deeply concerned in the Mortification of the Profeſſors of it: For unmortified Profeſſors will firſt or laſt be the Scandals, and Reproaches of it. The profeſſion of Religion may give credit to you, but to be ſure you will never bring credit to it. All the Scandals and Reproaches that fall upon the name of Chriſt in this World, flow from the Fountain of unmortified Corruption. Judas and Demas, Hymeneus and Philetus, Ananias and Saphira ruined themſelves, and became Rocks of offence to others by this means. If ever you will keep Religion ſweet, labour to keep your Hearts mortified and pure.

6. Motive. To conclude, what an hard tug will you have in your dying Hour, except you get a Heart mortified to this World, and all that is in it? Your parting Hour is like to be a dreadful hour without the help of mortification. Your Corruptions like Glew faſten your Affections to the World, and how hard will it be for ſuch a Man to be ſeparated by Death? O what a bitter and doleful parting have carnal Hearts from carnal things! whereas the mortified Soul can receive the Meſſengers of death without trouble, and as cheerfully put off the Body at Death, as a Man doth his Clothes at night: Death need not pull and hale; ſuch a Man goes half Way to meet it, Phil. 1. 23. I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better. Chriſtian, wouldſt thou have thy Death-bed ſoft and eaſy? wouldſt thou have an εὐθανασία, as the Philoſopher deſired for himſelf, an eaſy Death without Pain or Terrour; then get a mortified Heart: the Chirurgeons Knife is ſcarce felt, when it cuts off a mortified Member.

2. Uſe for Direction.

Are you convinced and fully ſatisfied of the Excellency and Neceſſity of Mortification, and inquiſitive after the Means, in the uſe whereof it may be attained? then for your Help and Encouragement I will in the next place offer my beſt aſſiſtance, in laying down the Rules for this work.

1. Rule. If ever you will ſucceed and proſper in the Work of Mortification, then get and daily exerciſe more Faith. Faith is the great inſtrument of Mortification. This is the Victory (or ſword by which the Victory is won, the inſtrument) by which you overcome the World, even your faith, 1 John 5. 4. By Faith alone eternal things are diſcovered to our Souls in their reality and excelling Glory, and theſe are the preponderating things for the ſake whereof Self-denial and Mortification becomes eaſy to Believers, by oppoſing things eternal to things temporal we reſiſt Satan, 1 Pet. 5. 8. This is the ſhield by which we quench the fiery Darts of the wicked one, Eph. 6. 16.

2. Rule. Walk in daily Communion with God, if ever you will mortify the Corruptions of Nature, that is the Apoſtles own preſcription, Gal. 1. 16. This I ſay then, walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the Luſts of the fleſh. Spiritual and frequent Communion with God, gives manifold Advantages for the Mortification of ſin: as it is a bright Glaſs wherein the Holineſs of God and the exceeding ſinfulneſs of Sin, as it is oppoſite thereunto, are moſt clearly and ſenſibly diſcovered, than which ſcarce any thing can ſet a keener Edge of Indignation upon the Spirit of a Man againſt Sin. Beſides, all Communion with God is aſſimilating, and tranſformative of the Soul into his Image, it leaves alſo a heavenly Reliſh and ſavour upon the Soul: it darkens the Luſtre and Glory of all earthly things, by preſenting to the Soul a Glory which excelleth. It marvelouſly improves, and more deeply radicates Sanctification in the Soul, by all which means it becomes ſingularly uſeful, and ſucceſsful in the Work of Mortification.

3. Rule. Keep your Conſciences under the awe, and in the fear of God continually, as ever you hope to be ſucceſsful in the Mortification of Sin. The Fear of God is the great Preſervative from Sin, without which all the external Rules and Helps in the World ſignify nothing. By the Fear of the Lord, Men depart from Evil. Prov. 16. 6. Not only from external and more open Evils, which the Fear of Men as well as the Fear of God may prevent, but from the moſt ſecret, and inward Evils, which is a ſpecial part of Mortification, Levit. 19. 14. it

It keeps Men from thoſe Evils which no Eye, nor Ear of Man can poſſibly diſcover. The Fear of the Lord breaks Temptations baited with Pleaſure, with Profit and with Secreſy. In a word, if ever you be cleanſed from all Filthineſs of Fleſh, and Spirit, it muſt be by the Fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1.

Readers, if ever you would have a true ſight of the emptineſs and vanity of the Creature, and get a mortified Heart to the world; now is the time, for at this day the providence of God hath withered all the fading flowers of earthly delights, and ſhewed you the worlds back parts, as it is departing from you.

4. Rule. Study the vanity of the Creature, and labour to get true notions of the emptineſs and tranſitorineſs thereof, if ever you will attain to the Mortification of your affections towards it. 'Tis the falſe picture and image of the World in our Fancy, that crucifies us with ſo many Cares, Fears, and Sollicitudes about it: and it is the true Picture and Image of the World, repreſented to us in the glaſs of the Word, which greatly helps to crucify our Affections to the World. O if we did but know and believe three things about the World, we would never be ſo fond of it as we are, viz. the fading, defiling, and deſtroying nature of it: the beſt and ſweeteſt enjoyments of the world are but fading flowers, and withering graſs, Iſa. 14. 6. James 1. 10, 11. Yea, it is of a defiling as well as a fading nature, 1 John 5. 19. It lies in wickedneſs. it ſpreads univerſal infection among all Mankind, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Yea, it deſtroys, as well as defiles multitudes of Souls, drowning Men in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Millions of Souls will wiſh to eternity they had never known the riches, pleaſures or honours of it: were this believed, how would Men ſlack their pace, and cool themſelves in the violent and eager purſuit of the World! This greatly tends to promote Mortification.

5. Rule. Be careful to cut off all the occaſions of Sin, and keep at the greateſt Diſtance from Temptations, if ever you will mortify the Deeds of the Body. The Succeſs and Prevalency of Sin mainly depends upon the Wiles and Stratagems it makes uſe of to enſnare the incautelous Soul, therefore the Apoſtle bids us keep off at the greateſt Diſtance, 1 Theſ. 5. 22. Abſtain from all appearances of evil. Prov. 8. 8. Come not nigh unto the door of her houſe. He that dares venture to the very Brink of Sin, diſcovers but little Light in his Underſtanding, and leſs Tenderneſs in his Conſcience, he neither knows Sin, nor fears it as he ought to do: and 'tis uſual with God to chaſtiſe ſelf-confidence by ſhameful Lapſes into Sin.

6. Rule. If you will ſucceſsfully mortify the Corruptions of your Nature, never engage againſt them in your own ſingle Strength, Eph. 6. 10. When the Apoſtle draws forth Chriſtians into the Field againſt Sin, he bids them be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. O remember what a meer Feather thou art in the Guſts of Temptation. Call to mind the height of Peter's Confidence, though all Men forſake thee, yet will not I, and the depth of his Fall, Shame and Sorrow. A weak Chriſtian trembling in himſelf, depending by Faith upon God, and graciouſly aſſiſted by him, ſhall be able to ſtand againſt the Shock of Temptation, when the bold and confident Reſolutions of others (like Pendleton in our Engliſh Story) ſhall melt away as Wax before the Flames.

7. Rule. Set in with the mortifying Deſign of God in the Day of thine Affliction. Sanctified Afflictions are ordered and preſcribed in Heaven for the purging of our corruptions, Iſa. 27. 9. By this therefore ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away his ſin. 'Tis a fair Glaſs to repreſent the evil of ſin, and the vanity of the creature, to imbitter the World, and diſguſt thy affections towards it: fall in therefore with the gracious deſign of God, follow home every affliction with prayer, that God would follow it with his Bleſſing. God kills thy comforts out of no other deſign but to kill thy corruptions with them. Wants are ordained to kill wantonneſs: Poverty is appointed to kill Pride, Reproaches are permitted to pull down Ambition: Happy is the Man who underſtands, approves, and heartily ſets in with the deſign of God in ſuch afflicting providences.

8. Rule. Bend the ſtrength of your duties and endeavours againſt your proper and ſpecial Sin. 'Tis in vain to lop off branches, whilſt this Root of Bitterneſs remains untouched: This was David's practice, Pſal. 18. 23. I was alſo upright before him, and I kept my ſelf from iniquity. We obſerve in Natural Men, that one faculty is more vigorous than another: We find in nature that one Soil ſuits with this Seed, rather than another: and every believer may find his nature and conſtitution inclining him to one ſin rather than another. As graces, ſo corruptions excel one another even in the regenerate. The power of ſpecial corruptions ariſes from our conſtitutions, education, company, cuſtom, callings, and ſuch like occaſions. But from whenceſoever it comes, this is the Sin that moſt endangers us, moſt eaſily beſets us, and accordingly to the progreſs of mortification in that ſin, we may ſafely eſtimate the degrees of mortification in other ſins: ſtrike therefore at the life and root of your own iniquity.

9. Rule. Study the nature and great importance of thoſe things which are to be won or loſt, according to the Succeſs and Iſſue of this conflict: your life is as a race, eternal Glory is the prize, grace and corruption are the antagoniſts, and accordingly as either finally prevails, eternal life is won or loſt, 1 Cor. 9. 24. Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the prize: So run that ye may obtain. This condition will make mortification appear the moſt rational and neceſſary thing to you in the whole World. Shall I loſe Heaven for indulging the Fleſh, and humouring a wanton appetite? God forbid. I keep under my body (ſaith Paul) and bring it into ſubjection; leaſt that by any means, when I have preached to others, I my ſelf ſhould be a caſt-away, 1 Cor. 9. 28.

10 Rule. Accuſtom your thoughts to ſuch Meditations as are proper to mortify Sin in your Affections, elſe all endeavours to mortify it will be but faint and languid. To this purpoſe I ſhall recommend the following Meditations, as proper means to deſtroy the intereſt of Sin.

1. Meditation. Conſider the evil that is in Sin, and how terrible the appearances of God will one day be againſt thoſe that obey it, in the luſt thereof, Rom. 1. 18. The wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all ungodlineſs and unrighteouſneſs of men, 1 Theſ. 1. 7, 8, 9. The Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power. Let your thoughts dwell much upon the consideration of the fruits and consequences of Sin: it shows its fairest side to you in the hour of temptation. O but consider how it will look upon you in the day of affliction, Numb. 22. 23. In that day your Sin will find you out: think what its aspect will be in a dying hour, 1 Cor. 15. 56. The sting of death is sin. Think what the frightful remembrances of it will be at the bar of Judgment when Satan shall accuse, Conscience shall upbraid, God shall condemn, and everlasting burnings shall avenge the evil of it: such thoughts as these are mortifying thoughts.

2. Meditat. Think what it cost the Lord Jesus Christ to expiate the guilt of sin, by the suffering the wrath of the great and terrible God for it in our room: the meditations of a crucified Christ, are very crucifying meditations unto sin, Gal. 6. 14. He suffered unspeakable things for sin: it was a divine wrath which lay upon his Soul for it: that wrath of which the Prophet saith, Nah. 1. 5, 6. The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, Who can stand before his indignation? And who can abide in the fierceness of his anger? his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him. It was the unmixed, and unallayed wrath, poured out in the fulness of it, even to the last drop; and shall we be so easily drawn to the Commission of those sins which put Christ under such sufferings? O do but read such Scriptures as these, Luke 22.44. Mat. 26.36, 37. Mark 14.33. And see what a plight sin put the Lord of glory into: how the wrath of God put him into a sore amazement, a bloody sweat, and made his Soul heavy even unto Death.

3. Med. Consider what a grief and wound the sins of believers are to the Spirit of God, Eph. 4. 30. Ezek. 16. 43. Isa 63. 10. O how it vexes, frets and grieves the holy Spirit of God! Nothing is more contrary to his nature. O do not that abominable thing which I hate, saith the Lord, Jer. 44. 4. Nothing obstructs and crosses the sanctifying design of the Spirit as Sin doth, defacing and spoiling the most rare, and admirable workmanship that ever God wrought in this World, violating all the engagements laid upon us by the love of the Father, by the death of his Son, by the operations of his Spirit, in all his illuminations, convictions, compunctions, renovation, preservation, obsignation, and manifold consolations. Lay this Meditation upon thy heart Believer, and say, Sicne reprendis? Dost thou thus requite the Lord, O my ungrateful heart, for all his goodness? Is this the fruit of his temporal, spiritual, common, and peculiar Mercies, which are without number?

4. Med. Consider with your selves, that no real good, either of profit or pleasure can result from sin, you can have no pleasure in it, whatever others may have, it being against your new nature; and as for that brutish pleasure, and evanid joy which others have in sin, it can be but for a moment, for either they must repent or not repent: if they do repent, the pleasure of sin will be turned into the gall of Aspes here, if they do not repent, it will terminate in everlasting howlings hereafter: that's a smart question, Rom. 6. 21. What fruit had ye in those things whereof ye are now ashamed, for the end of those things is death. You that are believers must never expect any pleasure in sin, for you can neither quit it without regret, nor reflect upon it without shame and confusion: Expect no better consequents of sin, than the woundings of Conscience, and dismal cloudings of the face of God; that is all the profit of Sin. O let these things sink into your heart.

5. Med. Consider what the damned suffer for those sins which the Devil now temptech you to commit: it hath deprived them of all good, all outward good, Luke 16.25. all spiritual good Mat. 25.41. and of all hope of enjoying any good for ever. And as it hath deprived them of all good, so it hath remedilesly plunged them into all positive misery. Misery from without, the wrath of God being come upon them to the uttermost, and misery from within, for their worm dieth not, Mark 9. 44. The memory of things past, the sense of things present, and the fearful expectations of things to come, are the niblings and bitings of the worm of Conscience, at every bite whereof damned Souls give a dreadful shriek, crying out, O the worm! the worm! Would any man that is not forsaken by reason, run the hazard of those eternal miseries for the brutish Pleasures of a moment?

6. Med. Bethink your selves what inexcusable hypocrisy it will be in you to indulge your selves in the private satisfaction of your lusts, under a contrary profession of Religion: you are a people that profess holiness, and professedly own your selves to be under the Government and Dominion of Christ: And must the worthy Name of Christ be only used to cloak and cover your lusts and corruptions, which are so hateful to him? God forbid. You daily pray against sin, you confess it to God, you bewail it, you pour out supplications for pardoning and preventing Grace, Are you in jest or earnest in these solemn duties of Religion? Certainly, if all those duties produce no mortification, you do but flatter God with your lips, and put a dreadful cheat upon your own Souls. Nay, Do you not frequently censure, and condemn those things in others, and dare you allow them in your selves; What horrid hypocrisy is this? Christians are dead to Sin, Rom. 6. 2. Dead to it by profession, dead to it by obligation, dead to it by relation to Christ who died for it; And how shall they that are so many ways dead to sin live any longer therein? O think not that God hates sin the less in you because you are his People: nay, the very consideration aggravates it the more, Amos 3. 2.

Ipsa delicta & peccata fidelium odio sunt, & displicent Deo, sed odio simplici, non redundanti in personam, Davenant. in Col. 1. 10.

Med. 7. Consider with your selves what hard things some Christians have chosen to endure and suffer, rather than they would defile themselves with guilt; and shall every small temptation insnare and take your Souls? Read over the Eleventh Chapter to the Hebrews, and see what the Saints have endured to escape sin: no torments were so terrible to them, as the displeasure of God, and woundings of conscience; and did God oblige them more by his grace and favour than he hath obliged you? O Christians, how can you that have found such such Mercies, Mercies as free, Pardons as full as ever any Souls found, show less Care, less Fear, less tenderness of grieving God than others have done; Certainly, if you did see Sin with the same Eyes they saw it, you would hate it as deeply, watch against it as carefully, and resist it as vigorously as any of the Saints have done before you.

8. Meditation. Consider with your selves Med. 8. what sweet Pleasure, rational and solid Comfort is to be found in the Mortification of Sin: 'Tis not the fulfilling of your Lusts can give you the thousandth part of that Comfort and Contentment that the resistance of them, and victory over them will give you. Who can express the Comfort that is to be found in the chearing testimony of an acquitting and absolving Conscience? 2 Cor. 1. 12. Remember what satisfaction and peace it was to Hezekiah upon his supposed Death-bed, when he turned to the Wall and said Remember now O Lord, I beseech thee how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart; and have done that which is good in thy sight, Isa. 38. 3.

4th Use for Examination.

Use. 4. In the next place this point naturally puts us upon the Examination and Trial of our own Hearts, whether we who so confidently claim a special Interest in Christ have crucify'd the Flesh with its Affections and Lusts; and because two sorts of Persons will be concerned in this Trial, viz. the weaker and the stronger Christians; I shall therefore lay down two sorts of Evidences of Mortification, one respecting the Sincerity, and Truth, the other respecting the Strength, and Progress of that Work in confirmed and grown Christians, and both excluding false Pretenders.

First, There are some things that are Evidential of the truth and sincerity of Mortification, even in the weakest Christians: as,

First, True tenderness of Conscience in all known Sins, one as well as another, is a good sign Sin hath lost its Dominion in the Soul? O 'tis a special Mercy to have a Heart that shall smite and reprove us for those things that others make nothing of: To check and admonish us for our secret Sins which can never turn to our Reproach among Men; this is a good Sign that we hate Sin as Sin: However, through the weakness of the Flesh we may be ensnared by it, Rom. 7. 15. What I hate, that I do.

Secondly, The sincere and earnest Desires of our Souls to God in Prayer for Heart-purging and Sin-mortifying Grace, is a good sign our Souls have no love for Sin. Canst thou say, poor Believer, in the truth of thy Heart; that if God would give thee thy choice, it would please thee better to have Sin cast out, than to have the World cast in; that thy Heart is not so earnest with God for daily Bread, as it is for Heart-purging Grace? This is a comfortable Evidence that Sin is nailed to the Cross of Christ.

Thirdly, Do you make Conscience of guarding against the Occasions of Sin? Do you keep a daily watch over your Hearts and Senses, according to 1 John 5. 18. Job 31. 1. This speaks a true design and purpose of Mortification also.

Fourthly, Do you rejoice and bless God from your Hearts when the Providence of God orders any means for the prevention of Sin? Thus did David, 1 Sam. 25. 33. And David said to Abigail, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel which sent thee this Day to meet me, and blessed be thy Advice, and blessed be thou which hast kept me this day from coming to shed Blood, and from avenging my self with my own Hand.

Fifthly, In a word, though the Thoughts of Death may be terrible in themselves, yet if the expectation and hope of your Deliverance from Sin thereby, do sweeten the Thoughts of it to your Souls, it will turn unto you for a Testimony, that you are not the Servants and Friends of Sin. And so much briefly of the first sort of Evidences.

Secondly, There are other signs of a more deep and thorough Mortification of Sin in more grown and confirmed Believers, and such are these.

First, The more submissive and quiet any Man is under the Will of God in smart and afflicting Providences, the more that Man's Heart is mortified unto Sin, Psal. 119. 67, 71. Col. 1. 11.

Secondly, The more able any one is to bear the Reproaches and Rebukes of his Sin, the more Mortification there is in that Man, Psal. 141. 5.

Thirdly, The more easily any Man can resign and give up his dearest Earthly Comforts at the call and command of God, the more progress that Man hath made in the Work of Mortification, Heb. 11. 17. 2 Sam. 15. 25.

Fourthly, The more Power any Man hath to resist Sin in the first Motions of it, and stifle it in the Birth; the greater degree of Mortification that Man hath attained, Rom. 7. 23. 24.

Fifthly, If great Changes upon our outward Condition make no Change for the worse upon our Spirits, but we can bear prosperous and adverse Providences with an equal Mind; then Mortification is advanced far in our Souls, Phil. 4. 11. 12.

Sixthly, The more fixed and steady our Hearts are with God in Duty, and the less they are infested with wandring Thoughts and earthly Interpositions; the more Mortification there is in that Soul. And so much briefly of the Evidences of Mortification.

5th Use for Consolation.

Use. 5. It only remains, that I shut up all with a few Words of Consolation unto all that are under the mortifying Influence of the Spirit. Much might be said for the Comfort of such. In brief.

First, Mortified Sin shall never be your Ruin: 'tis only reigning Sin that is ruining Sin, Rom. 8. 13. Mortified Sins, and pardoned Sins shall never lie down with us in the dust.

Secondly, If Sin be dying, your Souls are living; for dying unto Sin, and living unto God, are inseparably connected, Rom. 6. 11.

Thirdly, If Sin be dying in you, it is certain that Christ died for you, and you cannot desire a better Evidence of it, Rom. 6. 5. 6.

Fourthly, If Sin be dying under the Mortifying Influences of the Spirit, and it be your daily labour to resist and overcome it, you are then in the direct Way to Heaven, and eternal Salvation; which few, very few in the World shall find, Luke 13. 24.

Fifthly, To shut up all, if you, through the Spirit, be daily mortifying the Deeds of the Body, then the Death of Christ is effectually applied by the Spirit unto your Souls, and your Interest in him is unquestionable: For they that are Christs have crucified the Flesh with the Affections and Lusts, and they that have so crucified the Flesh with its Affections and Lusts, are Christs.

Blessed be God for a Crucified Christ.

SERMON XXIX.

1 JOHN II. 6.

He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

Serm. 29. Text. Of the Imitation of Christ in Holiness of his Life, and the necessity of it in all Believers.

THE express and principal Design of the Apostle in this Chapter, is to propound Marks and Signs both Negative and Positive, for the Trial and Examination of Men's Claims to Christ; amongst which (not to spend time about the Coherence) my Text is a principal one; a trial of Men's Interest in Christ by their imitation of Christ. It is supposed by some Expositors, that the Apostle, in laying down this Mark, had a special Design to overthrow the wicked Doctrine of the Carpocratians, who taught (as Epiphanius relates it) that Men might have as much Communion with God in Sin, as in Duty. In full opposition to which, the Apostle lays down this Proposition, wherein he asserts the necessity of a Christ-like Conversation, in all that claim Union with him, or Interest in him. The Words resolve themselves into two parts, viz.

1. A Claim to Christ supposed.
2. The only way to have our Claim warranted.

First, We have here a Claim to Christ supposed; if any Man say he abideth in him: Abiding in Christ is an Expression denoting proper and real Interest in Christ, and Communion with him; for it is put in opposition to those temporary, light, and transient Effects of the Gospel, which are called a Morning Dew, or an early Cloud; such a receiving of Christ as that, Matth. 13. 21. which is but a present flash, a sudden vanishing pang; abiding in Christ notes a solid, durable, and effectual Work of the Spirit, throughly and everlastingly joining the Soul to Christ. Now, if any Man whosoever he be (for this indefinite is equivalent to an universal term) let him never think his Claim to be good and valid, except he take this course to adjust it.

(2.) Secondly, The only way to have this Claim warranted, and that must be by so walking even as he walked; which Words carry in them the necessity of our imitation of Christ. But it is not to be understood indifferently and universally of all the Works or Actions of Christ, some of which were extraordinary and miraculous; some purely mediatory and not imitable by us: In these Paths no Christian can follow Christ; nor may so much as attempt to walk as he walked. But the Words point at the ordinary and imitable Ways and Works of Christ; therein it must be the Care of all to follow him, that profess and claim Interest in him; they must so walk as he walked, this [so] is a very bearing Word in this Place; the Emphasis of the Text seems to lie in it; however, certain it is that this so walking doth not imply an equality with Christ in Holiness and Obedience; for as he was filled with the Spirit without Measure, and anointed with that Oil of Gladness above his Fellows, so the Purity, Holiness, and Obedience of his Life is never to be matched and equalized by any of the Saints. But this so walking only notes a sincere Intention, Design, and Endeavour to imitate and follow him in all the Paths of Holiness and Obedience according to the different Measures of Grace receiv'd. The Life of Christ is the Believer's Copy, and though the Believer cannot draw one Line or Letter exact as his Copy is, yet his Eye is still upon it, he is looking unto Jesus, Heb. 12. 2. and labouring to draw all the Lines of his Life, as agreeably as he is able unto Christ his Pattern.

Hence the Observation is,

Doct. That every Man is bound to the imitation of Christ, under penalty of forfeiting his Claim to Christ.

Doct.

The Saints Imitation of Christ is solemnly enjoined by many great and express Commands of the Gospel; so you find it, 1 Pet. 1. 15. But as he that hath called you is Holy, so be ye Holy in all manner of Conversation: So Eph. 5. 1, 2. Be ye therefore followers of God as dear Children, and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us. Christians (saith Bernard) receive this Name from Christ; and it is very meet that as they inherit his Name, so they should also imitate his Holiness. Now to state the Method of this Discourse, it will be needful to discuss and open three things in the Doctrinal part.

Christiani a Christo nomen acceperunt, & operæ pretium est, ut sint quæ sunt hæredes nominis, ita sint imitatores sanctitatis. Bern. serm. 2. p. 436.

1. What the Saints Imitation of Christ supposes and comprizes.
2. In what particulars they are especially bound to imitate Christ.
3. Why no Claim to Christ is valid without this imitation of him.

And then apply the whole in divers Uses.

(1.) First, What the Saints Imitation of Christ supposeth and compriseth. Now there are divers great and weighty Truths supposed and implied in this Imitation of Christ; or walking as he walked, viz.

First, It supposes, that no Christian is or may pretend to be a Rule to himself, to act according to the Dictates of his own Will and Pleasure; for as no Man hath Wisdom enough to direct and govern himself; so if his own Will were made the Rule of his own Actions, it would be the highest Invasion of the Divine Prerogative that could be imagined: I know, O Lord, (saith Jeremy) that the Way of Man is not in himself, it is not in him that walketh to direct his own Steps, Jer. 10. 23. We may as well pretend to be our own Makers as our own Guides. It is a pretty Observation of Aquinas, that if the Workman's Hand were the Rule of his Work, it were impossible he should ever err in Working: And if the Will of Man were the only Law and Guide of his Way, we might then say no Man would sin in his Walking. The Apostle indeed saith of the Heathens, Rom. 2. 14. that they are a Law to themselves; but it is not his meaning that their Will is their Law, but the Law of God engraven upon their Hearts; the Light and Dictates of their own Consciences, did oblige and bind them as a Law.

Second

Secondly, This Imitation of Christ implies, that as no Man is or may pretend to be his own Guide, so no meer Man, how wise or holy soever he be, may pretend to be a Rule to other Men; but Christ is the Rule of every Man's Way and Walking. 'Tis true indeed, the Apostle saith, We should be followers of them, who through Faith and Patience inherit the Promises, Heb. 6. 12. And again, James 5. 10. Take my Brethren the Prophets who have spoken in the Name of the Lord for an Example of suffering Affliction and of Patience; but you must always remember that there is a two-fold Rule.

1. Regula regulans, the Rule ruling.
2. Regula regulata, the Rule ruled.

The wisest and holiest among Men may pretend no higher than a ruled Rule. The great Apostle, though filled with as great a Measure of the Spirit of Wisdom and Holiness as ever was possessed by any meer Man; yet goes no higher than this, 1 Cor. 11. 1. Be ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ. The best of Men are but Men at best; they have their Errors and Defects which they freely acknowledge; and where they differ from Christ, 'tis our Duty to differ from them; we may not pin our Faith upon any Man's Sleeve, for we know not where he will carry it. It was the Commendation which Paul gave of the Thessalonians, 1 Thes. 1. 6. And ye became Followers of us, and of the Lord. The Noble Bereans were also commended for searching the Scriptures, and examining the Apostles Doctrine by it; and it was a good Reply of the Father, to a clamorous Disputant, crying, hear me, hear me, I will neither hear thee, nor do thou hear me; but let us both hear Christ.

Nec ego te, nec tu me, sed ambo audiemus Christum. Aug.

Thirdly, The Imitation of Christ implies the necessity of Sanctification in all his Followers; forasmuch as it is impossible there should be a practical Conformity in point of Obedience, where there is not a Conformity in Spirit and Principle; all external Conformity to Christ's Practice, depends upon an internal Conformity to Christ in the Principle and Spirit of Holiness. 'Tis very plain from Ezek. 11. 19. 20. that a new Heart must be given us, and a new Spirit put into us, before we can walk in God's Statutes; we must first live in the Spirit, before we can walk in the Spirit, Gal. 5. 25.

Fourthly, The Imitation of Christ plainly holds forth this, that Christian Religion is a very precise and strict Religion; no way countenancing Licentiousness, or indulging Men in their Lusts, it allows no Man to walk loosely and inordinately; but rejects every Man's Claim to Christ, who studies and labours not to tread exactly in the Footsteps of his holy and heavenly Example. Profaneness and Licentiousness therefore can find no shelter or protection under the Wing of the Gospel; this is the universal Rule, laid upon all the Professors of the Christian Religion: Let every one that nameth the Name of Christ, depart from Iniquity, 2 Tim. 2. 19. (i. e.) let him either put on the Life of Christ, or put off the Name of Christ; let him shew the Hand of a Christian in Works of Holiness and Obedience, or else the Tongue and Language of a Christian must gain no Belief or Credit.

Fifthly, The Imitation of Christ necessarily implies the defectiveness and imperfection of the best men in this Life; for if the Life of Christ be our Pattern, the best and holiest of Men must confess they come short in every thing of the Rule of their Duty. Our Pattern is still above us; the best of Men are ashamed when they compare their Lives with the Life of Christ. 'Tis true, a vain Heart may swell with Pride, when a Man compares himself with other Men; thus measuring our selves by our selves, and comparing our selves among our selves, we shew our Folly, and nourish our Pride; but if any Man will compare his own Life with Christ's, he will find abundant cause at every time, in every thing to be humbled. Paul was a great proficient in Holiness and Obedience; he had been long striving to come up to the top of Holiness; yet when he looks up and sees the Life of Christ and Rule of Duty so far above him, he reckons himself still but at the Foot of the Hill, Phil. 3. 12. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect, but I follow after, if that I may apprehend; that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus, q. d. Alas I am not come up to my Duty; I am a great way behind, but I am following after, if at last I may attain it; Perfection is in my Expectation and Hope at last, not in my Attainment here.

Primum & optimum in unoquoque genere est regula & mensura cæterorum.

Sixthly, The Imitation of Christ, as our general Rule and Pattern, necessarily implies the transcending Holiness of the Lord Jesus. His Holiness is greater than the Holiness of all Creatures; for only that which is first and best in every kind, is the Rule and Measure of all the rest. 'Tis the heighth of Saints Ambition to be made conformable to Christ, Phil. 3. 10. Christ hath a double perfection, a perfection of Being, and a perfection of Working: His Life was a perfect Rule, no blot or error could be found therein; for he was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from Sinners: And such an High-Priest became us, as the Apostle speaks, Heb. 7. 26. The Conformity of Professors to Christ's Example, is the test and measure of all their Graces: The nearer any Man comes to this Pattern, the nearer he approaches towards Perfection.

Seventhly, The Christians Imitation of Christ, under penalty of losing his Claim to Christ, necessarily implies Sanctification and Obedience to be the Evidences of our Justification and Interest in Christ; Assurance is unattainable without Obedience, we can never be comfortable Christians, except we be strict and regular Christians, Gal. 6. 16. As many as walk according to this Rule, Peace be on them, and Mercy; and upon the Israel of God. A loose and careless Conversation can never be productive of true Peace and Consolation, 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our rejoicing, the Testimony of our Conscience; that in simplicity and godly Sincerity; not with fleshly Wisdom, but by the Grace of God; we have had our Conversation in the World. Let Men talk what they will of the immediate Sealings, and Comforts of the Spirit, without any regard to Holiness, or respect to Obedience: Sure I am, whatever Delusion they meet with in that way; true Peace and Consolation is only to be expected and found here: The Fruit of Righteousness shall be Peace, and the Effect of Righteousness Quietness, and Assurance for ever: We have it not for our Holiness, but we always have it in the Way of Holiness. And so much of the first Particular, namely, what the Imitation of Christ implies and comprizes in it.

Secondly, In the next place, we are to enquire, in what Things all that profess Christ are obliged to the Imitation of him; or what those excellent Graces in the Life of Christ were, which are propounded as Patterns to the Saints.

Quid vobis cum virtutibus qui virtutem Christi ignoratis? Ubinam, quæso, vera prudentia, nisi in Christi doctrina? Ubi vera temperantia, nisi in Christi vita? Ubi vera fortitudo, nisi in Christi passione? Bernard.

The Life of Christ was a Living Law; all the Graces and Vertues of the Spirit were represented in their Glory, and brightest Lustre, in his Conversation upon Earth: Never Man spake as he spake; never any lived as he lived: We beheld his Glory (saith the Evangelist) as the Glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth, Joh. 1. 14. But to descend to the particular imitable Excellencies in the Life of Christ, which are high Patterns, and excellent Rules, for the Conversations of his People, we shall, from among many others, single out the ten following Particulars, which we are obliged to imitate.

Pattern 1. And first of all, the Purity and Holiness of the Life of Christ, is proposed as a Glorious Pattern for the Saints Imitation, 1 Pet. 1. 15. As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of Conversation: ἐν πάσῃ τῇ ἀναστροφῇ, in every Creek and turning of your Lives. There is a two-fold Holiness in Christ; the Holiness of his Nature, and the Holiness of his Practice; his holy Being, and his holy Working; this obligeth all that profess Interest in him, to a two-fold Holiness, viz. Holiness in actu primo, in the Pinciples of it in their Hearts; and Holiness in actu secundo, in the Practice and Exercise of it in their Conversations: 'Tis very true, we cannot in all respects imitate the Holiness of Christ; for he is essentially Holy; proceeding by Nature, as a pure Beam of Holiness from the Father; and when he was Incarnate he came into the World immaculate, and pure from the least stain of Pollution; therefore it was said, Luke 1. 25. That Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God: In this we can never be like Christ in the Way of our Production; for who can bring a clean Thing out of that which is unclean? not one. The Lord Jesus was also efficiently holy, (i. e.) he makes others holy; therefore his Sufferings and Blood are called a Fountain opened for Sin, and for uncleanness, (i. e.) to cleanse other Men's Souls, Zech. 13. 1. In this Christ also is inimitable: No Man can make himself or others holy. That's a great Truth though it will hardly go down with proud Nature, minus est te fecisse hominem, quam sanctum, we may sooner make our selves to be Men than to be Saints. Beside, Christ is infinitely holy as he is God, and there are no stints or measures set to his Holiness as Mediator, Joh. 3. 34. for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. But notwithstanding these excepted Respects, the Holiness of Christ is propounded as a Pattern for our Imitation six Ways.

First, He was truly and sincerely holy, without fiction or simulation; and this appeared in the greatest trial of the Truth of Holiness that ever was made in this World, John 14. 30. The Prince of this World cometh, and hath nothing in me: When he was agitated and shaken with the greatest temptations, no dregs appeared; he was like pure Fountain-water in a Crystal Glass. The Hypocrite makes shew of more Holiness than he hath; but there was more Holiness in Christ, than ever appeared to the view of Men. We may say of the way of Christ, what the Philosopher saith of the Milky Way in the Heavens; that those faint Streams of Light which we see there, are nothing else but the reflection of innumerable Stars which shine there, though they be invisible to us: There was much inward Beauty in him, and so there ought to be in all his Followers; our Holiness, like Christs, must be sincere and real, Eph. 4. 24. shining with inward Beauty towards God, rather than towards Men.

Secondly, Christ was uniformly holy, at one time as well as another; in one place and company as well as another; he was still like himself, an Holy Christ; one and the same tenour of Holiness ran throughout his whole Life, from first to last; so must it be with all his People, Holy in all manner of Conversation. Christians, look to your Copy, and be sure to imitate Christ in this; write fair after your Copy; let there not be here a Word and there a Blot; one part of your Life heavenly and pure, and another earthly and dreggy; or (as one expresses it) now an Heavenly Rapture, and by and by a Fleshly Frolick.

Thirdly, Christ was exemplarily holy; a Pattern of Holiness to all that come nigh him, and conversed with him. O imitate Christ in this. It was the commendation of the Thessalonians, that they were Ensamples to all that believed in Macedonia and Achaia, and that in every Place their Faith to God-ward was spread abroad, 1 Thes. 1. 7, 8. Let no Man go out of your Company without Conviction or Edification; so exemplary were the primitive Christians, Phil. 3. 17.

Fourthly, Christ was strictly and precisely Holy: Which of you convinceth me of Sin? The most envious and observing Eyes of his greatest Enemies could not pick a Hole, or find a Flaw in any of his Words or Actions: 'Tis our Duty to imitate Christ in this, Phil. 2. 15. That ye may be blameless and harmless, the Sons of God without Rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse Nation, among whom ye shine (or as the word may be rendred imperatively, among whom shine ye) as Lights in the World. Thus it becomes the Followers of Christ to walk circumspectly or precisely, for so is the Will of God, that with Well-doing ye may put to silence the Ignorance of foolish men, 1 Pet. 2. 15.

Fifthly, Christ was preservingly Holy, Holy to the last Breath; as he began, so he finished his whole Life in a constant course of Holiness; in this also he is our great Pattern; it becomes not any of his People to begin in the Spirit, and end in the Flesh; but on the contrary, their last Works should be more than their first; let him that is holy be holy still, Rev. 22. 11.

Sixthly, In a word, the Delight of Christ was only in holy Things and holy Persons; they were his chosen Companions; even so it becometh his People to have all their Delights in the Saints, and in the Excellent of the Earth, Psal. 16. 3. Thus Christians, be ye followers of Christ in his Holiness. God hath decreed this Conformity to Christ in all that shall be saved, Rom. 8. 29. he banisheth all unholy Ones from his gracious presence for ever, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Heb. 12. 14. The Design of Christ in dying for you, was to make you pure and holy, Eph. 5. 25, 26. O then study Holiness; eye your Pattern; and, as dear Children, be ye Followers of your most holy Lord Jesus Christ.

Pattern 2. The Obedience of Christ to his Father's Will is a Pattern for the Imitation of all Christians; 'tis said of Christ, Heb. 5. 8. That he learned Obedience by the Things which he suffered: A Text which labours under some difficulties: Christ learned Galaxia est maxima frequentia minimarum stellarum, quæ præ exiguitate ad nostrum aspectum distincte pervenire nequeunt, ut cæteræ stellæ, atque ita inter se lumen commiscent, & confundunt, Conimb. de Meteor. cap. 2.

Obedience, and yet was not ignorant before of what he learned afterward: He was perfect in Knowledge; and yet the Apostle speaks of him as a Proficient in the School of Wisdom. But we must consider there are two Ways of Learning, viz. by.

1. The Comprehension of the Mind.
2. By the Experience of the Sense.

Christ, as God, was perfect in Knowledge; nothing could be added to him: But when he became Man, then he came to understand, or learn by Sufferings, as the Apostle here speaks; which though it added nothing to his Knowledge, yet it was a new Method and Way of knowing. Now the Obedience of Christ is our Pattern, whereunto we are obliged (as ever we will warrant our claim of Interest in him) to conform our selves in the following Properties of it.

First, Christ's Obedience was free and voluntary, not forced or compulsory; it was so from the very first Undertakement of the Work of our Redemption, Prov. 8. 30, 31. Then was I by him as one brought up with him, and I was daily his Delight, rejoicing always before him; rejoicing in the habitable Part of his Earth; and my Delights were with the Sons of Men. And when the fulness of time was come for executing that blessed Design, which had been in prospect from all Eternity, how cheerfully did the Will of Christ echo to his Father's call, Psal. 40. 7. Then said I, lo I come, in the Volume of the Book it is written of me, I delight to do thy Will, O my God, yea, thy Law is within my Heart. Nor was this Flourish before he came into the Field, and saw the Enemy; for he laid down his Life with the greatest chearfulness and spontaneity that could be, John 10. 17, 18. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my Life, that I might take it again; no Man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my self: And indeed the voluntariness of Christ, in his Obedience unto Death, gave his Death the Nature and Formality of a Sacrifice; for so all Sacrifices ought to be offered, Lev. 1. 3. and so Christ's Sacrifice was offered unto God, Eph. 5. 2. It was as grateful a work to Christ to die for us, as it was to Moses his Mother to take him to Nurse from the hand of Pharoah's Daughter; O Christians tread in the steps of Christ's Example; do nothing grudgingly for God, let not his Commands be grievous, 1 John 5. 3. If you do any thing for God willingly, you have a Reward; if otherwise, a dispensation only is committed to you, 1 Cor. 9. 7. Obedience in Christ was an abasement to him, but in you very great Honour and Advancement, you have reason therefore to obey with chearfulness.

Secondly, The Obedience of Christ was universal and compleat, he was obedient to all the Will of God, making no demur to the hardest Service imposed by the Will of God upon him, Phil. 2. 8. He became obedient unto Death, even the Death of the Cross: And though its true the humanity of Christ recoiled and staggered, when that bitter Cup of the Wrath of God was given him to drink; yet how soon was that innocent Aversion overcome in him, by a perfect Submission? Nevertheless not my Will, but thine be done, Matth. 26. 39. Christians here is your Pattern: Happy art thou, Reader, if thou canst say, when God calls thee to suffering and self-denying work, I am filled with the Will of God. Such was Paul's obedience, Acts 21. 13. I am ready not only to be bound, but to die at Jerusalem for the Name of the Lord Jesus.

Thirdly, The obedience of Christ was sincere and pure, without any base or by end, purely aiming at the Glory of God, Joh. 17. 4. I have glorified thee on Earth, I have finished the work thou gavest me to do. He sought not Honour of Men. This was the great desire of his Soul, Joh. 12. 28. Father glorifie thy Name: And truly the choicest part of your obedience consists in the purity of your ends, and in this Christ is propounded as your Pattern, Phil. 2. 3, 4. 5.

Fourthly, The Streams of Christ's Obedience flowed from the Spring and Fountain of ardent love to God, Joh. 14. 31. But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do: Thus let all your obedience to God turn upon the hinge of Love; for Love is the fulfilling of the Law, Rom. 13. 10. Not as if no other Duty but Love were required in the Law; but because no act of Obedience is acceptable to God, but that which is performed in Love.

Fifthly, In a word, The obedience of Christ was constant, he was obedient unto the Death, he was not weary of his work to the last. Such a patient continuance in well-doing is one part of your Conformity to Christ, Rom. 2. 7. 'tis laid upon you by his own express command, and a command back'd with the most incouraging promise, Rev. 2. 10. Be thou faithful unto the Death, and I will give thee the Crown of Life.

Pattern 3. The Self-denial of Christ is the Pattern of Believers, and their Conformity unto it is their indispensable Duty, Phil. 2. 4, 5, 6. 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye, through his Poverty, might be rich. Jesus Christ, for the Glory of God, and the love he bare to the Elect, denied himself all the Delights and Pleasures of this World, Matth. 20. 28. The Son of Man came not to be ministred unto, but to minister, and to give his Life a Ransom for many; he was all his Life long in the World a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with Grief, Isa. 53. 3. more unprovided of comfortable Accommodations, than the Birds of the Air, or Beasts of the Earth, Luke 9. 58. The Foxes have holes, and the Birds of the Air have Nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his Head. Yet this was the least part of Christ's self-denial: What did he not deny when he left the Bosom of his Father, with the ineffable Delights and Pleasures he there enjoyed from Eternity, and instead thereof to drink the Cup, the bitter Cup of his Father's Wrath for our Sakes? O Christians, look to your Pattern; and imitate your self-denying Saviour. There is a three-fold Self you are to deny for Christ.

Volpibus in saitu rupes excisa latebras. Præbet & aereis avibus dat sylva quietem: Ast hominis nato nullis succedere tectis: Est licitum. Heinsius.

First, Deny your Natural Self for him, Luke 14. 26. Hate your own Life in competition with his Glory, as well as your Natural Lusts, Titus 2. 12.

Secondly, Deny your Civil Self for Christ; whether they be Gifts of the Mind, Phil. 3. 8. or your dearest Relations in the World, Luke 14. 26.

Thirdly, Deny your Moral and Religious Self for Christ, your own Righteousness, Phil. 3. 10. Deny sinful Self absolutely, Col. 3. 4, 5. Deny Natural Self conditionally (i. e.) be ready to forsake its Interests at the call of God. Deny your Religious Self, even your own Graces comparatively, not in the Notion of Duties but in the notion of Righteousness: And to encourage you in this difficult Work, consider,

First, What great things Christ denied for you, and what small matters you have to deny for him.

Secondly, How readily he denied all for your sakes, making no Objections against the difficultest Commands.

Thirdly, How uncapable you are apt to put any obligation upon Christ to deny himself in the least for you, and what strong Obligations Christ hath put you under to deny your selves in your greatest Interests upon Earth for him.

Fourthly, Remember, that your self-denial is a Condition consented to, and subscribed by your selves, if ever you received Christ aright.

Fifthly, In a word, consider how much your self-denial for Christ makes for your advantage in both Worlds, Luke 18. 29. O therefore look not every Man upon his own things, but upon the things that are of Christ, let not that be justly charged upon you, which was charged upon them, Phil. 2. 21. All seek their own, not the things which are Christs.

Pattern 4. The activity and diligence of Christ in finishing the work of God, which was committed to him, was a Pattern for all Believers to imitate. 'Tis said of him, Acts 10. 38. He went about doing Good. O what a great and glorious work did Christ finish in a little time! A work to be celebrated to all Eternity by the Praises of the Redeemed. Six things were very remarkable in the diligence of Christ about his Father's Work.

First, That his Heart was intently set upon it, Psal. 4. 8. Thy Law is in the midst of my Heart, or Bowels.

Secondly, That he never fainted under the many great discouragements he frequently met withal in that work, Isa. 42. 4. He shall not fail, nor be discouraged.

Thirdly, That the shortness of his time provoked him to the greatest diligence, Joh. 9.4. I must work the Work of him that sent me, while it is Day, for the Night cometh when no Man can work.

Fourthly, That he improved all Opportunities, Companies, and Occurrences to further the great Work which was under his Hand, Joh. 4. 6, 10.

Fifthly, Nothing more displeased him than when he met with diswasions and discouragements in his Work; upon that account it was that he gave Peter so sharp a check, Matth. 8. 33. Get thee behind me Satan.

Sixthly, Nothing rejoiced his Soul more than the prosperity and success of his Work, Luke 10. 20,21. When the Disciples made the report of the success of their Ministry, it is said, In that hour Jesus rejoiced in Spirit. And O what a triumphant shout was that upon the Cross, at the Accomplishment of his Work, Joh. 19. 30. It is finished.

Now, Christians, eye your Pattern, look unto Jesus, trifle not away your Lives in Vanity. Christ was diligent, be not you slothful. And to encourage you in your imitation of Christ in labour, and diligence, consider,

First, How great an Honour God puts upon you in employing you for his Service: Every Vessel of Service is a Vessel of Honour, 2 Tim. 2. 21. The Apostle was very ambitions of that Honour, Rom. 15. 20. It was the Glory of Eliakim to be fasten'd as a Nail in a sure place, and to have many People hang upon him, Isa. 22. 33.

φιλοτιμούμαι, ambio dictum verbum ab amore honoris. Zanch.

Secondly, Your diligence in the Work of God will be your great security in the hour of temptation, for the Lord is with you, while you are with him, 2 Chron. 15. 2. The School-men put the question: How the Saints in Heaven become impeccable? And resolve it thus, that they are therefore freed from Sin, because they are continually employed and swallowed up in the blessed Visions of God.

Thirdly, Diligence in the Work of God is an excellent help to the improvement of Grace. For though gracious Habits are not acquired, yet they are greatly improved by frequent Acts. To him that hath shall be given, Matth. 25. 29. It is a good Note of Luther, Fides pingueſcit operibus, Faith is made fat by Obedience.

Fourthly, Diligence in the Work of God is the direct way to the assurance of the Love of God, 2 Pet. 15. 10. This Path leads you into Heaven upon Earth.

Fifthly, Diligence in Obedience is a great security against back-sliding: Small Remissions in Duty, and little Neglects, increase by degrees unto great Apostasies, you may see how that Disease is bred, by the method prescribed for its cure, Rev. 2. 5. Do thy first Works.

Sixthly, In a word, Laborious Diligence in the day of Life will be your singular Comfort when the Night of Death overtakes you, 2 Pet. 1. 11. 2 Kings 20. 3.

Pattern 5. Delight in God, and in his Service, was eminently conspicuous in the Life of Christ, and is a rare Pattern for Believers Imitation, Joh. 4. 32.34. But he said unto them I have Meat to eat that ye know not of, my Meat is to do the Will of him that sent me, and to finish his Work. The Delights of Christ were all in Heaven. The Son of Man was in Heaven in respect of Delight in God, while he conversed here among Men. And if you be Christ's, Heavenly Things will be the Delight of your Souls also. Now spiritual Delight is nothing else but the complacency and well-pleasedness of a renewed Heart in conversing with God, and the Things of God; resulting from the agreeableness of them to the spiritual Temper of his Mind. Four things are considerable about spiritual Delights.

First, The Nature of it, which consisteth in the complacency, rest, and satisfaction of the Mind in God, and spiritual Things. The Heart of a Christian is centred, it is where it would be; it is gratified in the highest in the actings forth of Faith and Love upon God; as the taste is gratified with a suitable delicious Relish, Psal. 63. 5, 6. Psal. 119. 14, 24. Psal. 17. 18.

Secondly, The Object of spiritual Delight, which is God himself, and the things which relate to him. He is the blessed Ocean into which all the streams of spiritual Delight do pour themselves, Psal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee, and on Earth there is none that I desire in comparison of thee.

Thirdly, The Subject of spiritual Delight, which is a renewed Heart, and that only so far as it is renewed, Rom. 7. 22. I delight in the Law of God after the inward Man.

Fourthly, The Principle and Spring of this Delight, which is the agreeableness of spiritual things to the temper and frame of a renewed Mind. A sensative pleasure arises from the suitableness of the Faculty and Object. So it is here, no delicious Sweetness can be so pleasant to the Taste, or beautiful Colours to the Eye, or melodious Sounds to the Ear, as Spiritual Things to the renewed Souls, because spiritual Senses are delicate, and the Objects more excellent.

But my Business here is not so much to open its Nature, as press you to the practice thereof in conformity formity to your great Pattern, whose Life was a Life of Delight in God, and whose Work was performed with the greatest Delight for God. I delight to do thy Will, O my God. O Christians strive to imitate your Pattern in this; and to encourage you, I will briefly hint a few things.

First, Scarce any thing can be more evidential of Sincerity than a Heart delighting in God, and the Will of God. Hypocrites go as far as others in the material part of Duties, but here they are defective, they have no delight in God and things spiritual; but do whatsoever they do in Religion from the compulsions of Conscience, or Accommodations of Self-ends.

Secondly, An Heart delighting in God will be a choice help and means to Perseverance. The reason why many so easily part with Religion is, because their Souls never tasted the sweetness of it; they never delighted in it, but the Christian who delights in the Law of God, will be meditating Day and Night, and shall be like a Tree planted by a River of Water, whose Leaf fadeth not, Psal. 1. 2, 3.

Thirdly, This will represent Religion very beautifully, and takingly to such as are yet Strangers to it; you will then be able to invite them to Christ by by your Example, the Language whereof will be like that, Psal. 34. 8. O taste and see that God is good.

Fourthly, This will make all your Services to God very pleasing and acceptable through Christ, you will now begin to do the Will of God on Earth, as it is done in Heaven, your Duties are so far Angelical as they are performed in the strength of Delight in God.

But may not a sincere Christian act in duty without delight? Yea, may he not feel some kind of weariness in Duties.

Yes, doubtless he may, but then we must distinguish betwixt the Temper and Distemper of a renewed Heart, the best Hearts are not always in their right Frame.

Pattern 6. The inoffensiveness of the Life of Christ upon Earth, is an excellent Pattern to all his People; he injured none, offended none, but was holy and harmless, as the Apostle speaks, Heb. 7. 26. He denied his own Liberty to avoid occasion of Offence; as in the Case of the Tribute Money, Matth. 17. 27. The Children are free, notwithstanding lest we should offend them go, &c. So circumspect was Christ, and inoffensive among all Men, that though his Enemies sought Occasion against him, yet could they find none, Luke 6. 7. Look unto Jesus, O ye Professors of Religion, imitate him in this gracious Excellency of his Life, according to his Command, Phil. 2. 15. That ye may be harmless and blameless, the Sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse Nation. You are indeed allowed the Exercise of your Prudence, but not a jot farther than will consist with your Innocence. Be ye wise as Serpents, and harmless as Doves. 'Tis the Rule of Christ, that you offend none, 1 Cor. 10. 32. 2 Cor. 6. 3. And to engage you to the imitation of Christ in this, I will briefly press it with a few Encouragements, which methinks should prevail with any Heart that's truly gracious.

First, For the Honour of Jesus Christ, be you inoffensive, his Name is called upon you, his Honour is concerned in your Deportment; if your Carriage in the World give just matter of Offence, Christ's worthy Name will be blasphemed thereby, James 2. 7. Your inoffensive Carriage is the only means to stop the Mouths of Detractors, 1 Pet. 2. 15.

Secondly, For the sake of Souls, the precious and immortal Souls of others, be wary that you give no offence: Wo to the World, saith Christ, because of Offences, Matth. 13. 7. Nothing was more commonly objected against Christ and Religion, by the Heathen in Cyprian's time, than the loose and scandalous Lives of Professors: Behold, say they, these are the Men, who boast themselves to be redeemed from the tyranny of Satan, to be dead to the World: nevertheless see how they are overcome by their own Lusts. And much after the same rate Salvian brings in the wicked of his time, stumbling at the looseness of Professors, and saying, where is that Catholick Law which they believe? Where are the Examples of Piety and Chastity which they have learned, &c. O Christians, draw not the guilt of other Men's eternal Ruin upon your Souls.

Thirdly, In a word, answer the ends of God in your Sanctification, and providential dispose in the World this Way; by the holiness and harmlessness of your Lives, many may be won to Christ, 1 Pet. 3. 1. What the Heathens said of Moral Vertue (which they called verticordia, turn-heart) that if it were but visible to mortal Eyes, all Men would be enemoured upon it, will be much more true of Religion, when you shall represent the Beauty of it in your Conversations.

Pattern 7. The Humility and Lowliness of Christ is propounded by himself, as a Pattern for his People's Imitation. Matth. 11. 29. Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly. He could abase and empty himself of all his Glory, Phil. 2. 5, 6, 7. He could stoop to the meanest Office, even to wash the Disciples Feet. We read but of one Triumph in all the Life of Christ upon Earth, when he rode to Jerusalem, the People strewing Branches in the Way, and the very Children in the Streets of Jerusalem, crying, Hosanna to the Son of David, Hosanna in the highest; and yet with what lowliness and humility was it performed by Christ, Matth. 21. 5. Behold thy King cometh unto thee meek and lowly. The humility of Christ appeared in every thing he spake, or did. Humility discovered it self in his Language, Psal. 22. 6. I am a Worm, and no Man. In his Actions, not refusing the meanest Office, Joh. 13. 14. In his Condescensions to the worst of Men, upon which ground they called him a Friend of Publicans and Sinners, Matth. 11. 19. But especially, and above all, in stooping down from all his Glory to a state of deepest Contempt for the Glory of God, and our Salvation. Christians here is your Pattern, look to your meek and humble Saviour, and tread in his Steps, be you cloathed with Humility, 1 Pet. 5. 5. Whoever are ambitious to be the World's great ones, let it be enough for you to be Christ's little ones. Convince the World, that since you knew God, and your selves, your Pride hath been dying from that Day. Shew your Humility in your Habits, 1 Pet. 3. 3. 1 Tim. 2. 9, 10. In your Company, not contemning the meanest and poorest that fear the Lord, Psal. 15. 4. Rom. 12. 16. In your Language, that Dialect befits your Lips, Eph. 3. 8. less than the least of all Saints; but especially in the low value, and humble thoughts you have of your selves, 1 Tim. 1. 15. And to press this I beseech you to consider.

First,

First, From how vile a Root Pride ſprings. Ignorance of God, and of your ſelves, gives Riſe and Being to this Sin: They that know God will be humble, Iſa. 6. 5. And they that know themſelves cannot be proud, Rom. 7. 9.

Secondly, Conſider the miſchievous Effects it produces; it eſtrangeth the Soul from God, Pſal. 138. 6. It provokes God to lay you low, Job. 40. 11.12, It goes before deſtruction, and a dreadful fall, Prov. 10. 18.

Thirdly, As it is a great Sin, ſo it is a bad Sign, Hab. 2. 4. Behold his Heart which is lifted up, is not upright in him.

Fourthly, How unſuitable it is to the Senſe you have, and the Complaints you make of your own Corruptions, and Spiritual Wants, and, above all, how contrary it is to your Pattern and Example: Did Chriſt, ſpeak, act, or think as you do? O learn Humility from Jeſus Chriſt; it will make you precious in the Eyes of God, Iſa. 57. 15.

Pattern 8. The Contentation of Chriſt, in a low and mean Condition in the World, is an excellent Pattern for his People's Imitation. His Lot, in this World, fell upon a condition of deepeſt Poverty and Contempt: Yet how well was he ſatisfied and contented with it! Hear him expreſſing himſelf about it, Pſal. 16. 6. The Lines are fallen unto me in pleaſant Places; yea, I have a goodly Heritage. The Contentation of his Heart, with a ſuffering Condition, evidenced it ſelf in his ſilence, under the greateſt Sufferings, Iſa. 53. 7. He was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted: yet he opened not his Mouth: He is brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and as a Sheep before the Sheerers is dumb, ſo he openeth not his Mouth. O that in this alſo the pooreſt Chriſtians would imitate their Saviour, and learn to manage an afflicted Condition with a contented Spirit: Let there be no Murmurs, Complaints, or fooliſh Charges of God heard from you, whatever ſtrait or troubles he bring you into: For,

First, The meaneſt and moſt afflicted Chriſtian is owner of many rich invaluable Mercies, Eph. 1. 3. 1 Cor. 3. ult. Is Sin pardoned, and God reconciled? then never open your Mouths any more, Ezek. 16. 63.

Secondly, You have many precious Promiſes, that God will not forſake you in your Straits, Heb. 13. 5. Iſa. 41. 17. And your whole Life hath been a Life of Experiences of the Faithfulneſs of God in his Promiſes. Which of you cannot ſay with the Church, Lam. 3. 23. His Mercies are new every Morning, and great is his Faithfulneſs.

Thirdly, How uſeful and beneficial are all your Afflictions to you? They purge your Sins, prevent your Temptations, wean you from the World, and turn to your Salvation; And how unreaſonable then muſt your diſcontentedneſs at them be?

Fourthly, The time of your Relief, and full deliverence from all your Troubles is at hand; the time is but ſhort that you ſhall have any concernment about theſe things, 1 Cor. 7. 29. If the Candle of your earthly Comfort be blown out, yet remember it is but a little while to the break of Day, and then there will be no need of Candles. Beſides, Fifthly, Your Lot falls, by Divine direction, upon you, and as bad as it is, it is much eaſier and ſweeter than the Condition of Chriſt in this World was: Yet he was contented, and why cannot you? O that we could learn contentment from Chriſt in every Condition. And thus I have laid before you ſome excellent Patterns in the Life of Chriſt, for your Imitation.

SERMON XXX.

1 JOHN II. 6.

He that ſaith he abideth in him, ought himſelf alſo ſo to walk, even as he walked.

THESE Words having been reſolved into their Parts, and their Senſe opened in the former Sermon: The Obſervation was this:

Doct. Doct. That every Man is bound to the imitation of Chriſt, under penalty of forfeiting his Claim to Chriſt.

In proſecution of this Point, we have already ſhewn what the Imitation of Chriſt imports, and what the imitable Excellencies in the Life of Chriſt are: It now remains that I ſhew you, in the next place, why all that profeſs Chriſt, are bound to imitate his Example, and then apply the whole. Now the neceſſity of this Imitation of Chriſt will convincingly appear divers ways.

First, From the eſtabliſhed Order of Salvation, which is fixed and unalterable: God that hath appointed the End, hath alſo eſtabliſhed the Means and order by which Men ſhall attain the ultimate-end. Now Conformity to Chriſt is the eſtabliſh'd Method in which God will bring Souls to Glory, Rom. 8. 29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate, to be conformed to the image of his Son; that he might be the firſt-born among many Brethren. The ſame God who hath predeſtinated Men to Salvation, hath, in order thereunto, predeſtinated them unto Conformity to Chriſt, and this Order of Heaven is never to be reverſed, we may as well hope to be ſaved without Chriſt, as to be ſaved without Conformity to Chriſt.

Secondly, The Nature of Chriſt myſtical requires this Conformity, and renders it indiſpenſably neceſſary. Otherwiſe, the Body of Chriſt muſt be heterogeneous; of a Nature different from the Head. And how monſtrous, and uncomely would this be? This would repreſent Chriſt to the World in an Image, or Idea, much like that, Dan. 2. 32. 33. The Head of fine Gold, the Breaſt and Arms of Silver, the Thighs of Braſs, the Legs of Iron, the Feet part Iron, part of Clay. Chriſt the Head is pure and holy, and therefore very unſuitable to ſenſual and earthly Members. And therefore the Apoſtle in his Deſcription of Myſtical Chriſt deſcribes the Members of Chriſt (as they ought to be) of the ſame Nature and Quality with the Head, 1 Cor. 15. 48. As is the Heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are Heavenly, and as we have born the Image of the Earthly, ſo we ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly. The Image Image or Reſemblance of Chriſt which ſhall be compleat and perfect after the Reſurrection, muſt be begun in its firſt draught here, by the work of Regeneration.

Thirdly, This Reſemblance and Conformity to Chriſt appears neceſſary from the Communion, which all Believers have with Chriſt in the ſame Spirit of Grace and Holineſs. Believers are called Chriſt's Fellows or Co-partners, Pſal 45. 7. from their Participation with him of the ſame Spirit, as it is, 1 Theſ. 4. 8. God giveth the ſame Spirit unto us, which he more plentifully poured out upon Chriſt. Now where the ſame Spirit and Principle is, there the ſame Fruits and Operations muſt be produced, according to the Proportions and Meaſures of the Spirit of Grace communicated; and this Reaſon is farther enforced, by the very deſign and end of God in the infuſion of the Spirit of Grace; for it is plain from Ezek. 36. 27. that practical Holineſs and Obedience is the ſcope and deſign of that infuſion of the Spirit. The very innate Property of the Spirit of God in Men, is to elevate their Minds, and ſet their Affections upon heavenly things, to purge their Hearts from earthly droſs, and fit them for a Life of Holineſs and Obedience: Its Nature alſo is aſſimilating, and changeth them in whom it is, into the ſame Image with Jeſus Chriſt their Heavenly Head, 2 Cor. 3. 18.

Fourthly, The neceſſity of this Imitation of Chriſt may be argued from the deſign and end of Chriſt's Exhibition to the World in a Body of Fleſh. For though we deteſt that Doctrine of the Socinians, which makes the exemplary Life of Chriſt to be upon the matter, the whole End of his Incarnation; yet we muſt not run ſo far from an Error as to loſe a precious Truth. We ſay the ſatisfaction of his Blood was a main and principal End of his Incarnation, according to Matth. 20. 28. We affirm alſo that it was a great deſign and end of the Incarnation of Chriſt, to ſet before us a Pattern of Holineſs for our Imitation: For ſo ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 2. 21. He hath left us an Example, that we ſhould follow his ſteps. And this Example of Chriſt greatly obliges Believers to his Imitation, Phil. 2. 5. Let this Mind be in you which alſo was in Chriſt Jeſus.

Fifthly, Our Imitation of Chriſt is one of thoſe great Articles which every Man is to ſubſcribe, whom Chriſt will admit into the number of his Diſciples, Luke 14. 27. Whoſoever doth not come after me, cannot be my Diſciple. And again, Joh. 12. 26. If any Man ſerve me, let him follow me. To this Condition we have ſubmitted, if we be ſincere Believers, and therefore are ſtrictly bound to the imitation of Chriſt, not only by God's Command, but by our own Conſent. But if we profeſs Intereſt in Chriſt, when our Hearts never conſented to follow and imitate his Example; then are we ſelf-deceiving Hypocrites, wholly diſagreeing from the Scripture-character of Believers, Rom. 8. 1. They are Chriſt's being there deſcribed to be ſuch as walk not after the Fleſh, but after the Spirit: and Gal. 5. 25. If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit.

Sixthly, The Honour of Chriſt neceſſitates the Conformity of Chriſtians to his Example, elſe what plea is there left to ſtop detracting Mouths, and vindicate the Name of Chriſt from the Reproaches of the World? How can Wiſdom be juſtified of her Children, except it be this Way; By what means ſhall we cut off Occaſion from ſuch as deſire Occaſion, but by regulating our Lives by Chriſt's Example? The World hath Eyes to ſee what we practiſe, as well as Ears to hear what we profeſs. Therefore either ſhew the Conſiſtency betwixt your Profeſſion and Practice, or you can never hope to vindicate the Name and Honour of the Lord Jeſus. The Uſes follow, for,

1. Information.
2. Exhortation.
3. Conſolation.

1. Uſe for Information.

Inferenece 1. Uſe 1. Infer. 1.

If all that profeſs Intereſt in Chriſt be ſtrictly bound to imitate his Holy Example, then it follows, that Religion is very unjuſtly charged by the World with the Scandals and Evils of them that profeſs it. Nothing can be more unjuſt, and irrational, if we conſider, Firſt, That Chriſtian Religion ſeverely cenſures looſe and ſcandalous Actions in all Profeſſors; and therefore is not to be cenſured for them. 'Tis abſurd to condemn Religion, for what it ſelf condemns: Looſeneſs no way flows from the Principles of Chriſtianity, but is moſt oppoſite, and contrary to it, Tit. 2. 11, 12. For the Grace of God that bringeth Salvation hath appeared to all Men: teaching us, that denying Ungodlineſs, and Worldly Luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly, in this preſent World.

Secondly, It is an argument of the Excellency of Chriſtian Religion, that even wicked Men themſelves covet the Name, and Profeſſion of it, though they only cloak and cover their Evils under it. I confeſs it is a great abuſe of ſuch an excellent thing as Religion is, but yet if it had not an awful Reverence paid it, by the Conſciences of all Men, it would never be abuſed to this purpoſe by Hypocrites, as it is.

Thirdly, According to this reaſoning there can be no Religion in the World, for name me that Religion which is not ſcandalized by the Practices of ſome that profeſs it. So that this Practice hath a natural tendency to Atheiſm, and is no doubt incouraged by the Devil for that end.

Inference 2. Infer 2.

If all Men forfeit their Claim to Chriſt who endeavour not to imitate him in the holineſs of his Life, then how ſmall a number of real Chriſtians are there in the World? Indeed if liberal talking without accurate walking, if common Profeſſion without holy Practices were enough to conſtitute a Chriſtian, then this Quarter of the World would abound with Chriſtians. But if Chriſt owns none for ſuch, but thoſe that tread in the ſteps of his Example, then the number of real Chriſtians is very ſmall. The generality of Men that live under the Chriſtian Name, are ſuch as walk after the Fleſh, Rom. 8. 2. According to the courſe of this World, they yield their Members as Inſtruments of Unrighteouſneſs unto Sin, Rom. 6. 13. ſtrict Godlineſs is a meer Bondage to them; narrow is the Way, and few there be that walk therein.

Inference 3. Infer. 3.

What Bleſſed Times ſhould we all ſee if true Religion did once generally obtain and prevail in the World! How would it humble the Proud, meeken the Paſſionate, and ſpiritualize thoſe that are carnal! The perverſe World charges Religion with all the Tumults and Diſturbances that are in it, when as nothing in the World, but Religion, advanced in the Power of it, can heal and cure theſe Epidemical Evils. O if Men were once brought under the Power of Religion indeed, to walk after ter Christ in Holiness, Obedience, Meekness, and Self-denial; no such Miseries as these would be heard of among us, Isa. 11. 8. 9. The sucking Child shall play upon the hole of the Asp, and a weaned Child shall put his hand on the Cockatrice Den, they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy Mountain: for the Earth shall be full of the Knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters cover the Sea.

Inference 4.

Infer. 4. Hence it also follows, That real Christians are the sweetest Companions. 'Tis a comfortable thing to walk with them that walk after the Example of Christ. The Holiness, Heavenliness, Humility, Self-denial, and Diligence in Obedience which was in Christ, is in some measure to be found in all sincere Christians. They shew forth the Vertues of him that calleth them. The Graces of the Spirit do more or less shine forth in them. And oh how endearing, sweet, and engaging are these things? Upon this very Account the Apostle invited others into the Fellowship of the Saints, 1 Joh. 1. 3. That ye may have Fellowship with us, and truly our Fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Christ Jesus: And is it not sweet to have Fellowship with them who have Fellowship with Christ? O let all your Delights be in the Saints, and in the Excellent of the Earth, who excel in Vertue, Psal. 16. 3. Yet mistake not, there is a great deal of difference betwixt one Christian and another, and even the best of Christians are sanctified but in part. If there be something sweet and engaging, there is also something bitter and distasteful in the best of Men. If there be something to draw forth your Delight and Love, there is also something to exercise your Pity and Patience. Yet this is most certain, that notwithstanding all their Infirmities and Corruptions, they are the best and sweetest Company this World affords.

Inference 5.

Infer. 5. In a word, if no Man's Claim to Christ be warranted, but theirs that walk as he walked, How vain and groundless then are the Hopes and Expectations of all unsanctified Men who walk after their own Lusts? None are more forward to claim the Priviledges of Religion, than those that reject the Duties of it; Multitudes hope to be saved by Christ, who yet refuse to be govern'd by him. But such Hopes have no Scripture Warrant to support them. Yea, they have many Scripture Testimonies against them, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Know ye not that the Unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived, neither Fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abusers of themselves with Mankind. Nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Drunkards, nor Revilers, nor Extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God. O how many thousand vain Hopes are laid in the Dust; and how many thousand Souls are sentenced to Hell by this one Scripture.

2. Use for Exhortation.

Use 2. If this be so, it naturally presses all the Professors of Christianity to strict Godliness in their Conversations, as ever they expect Benefit by Christ. O Professors be ye not conformed unto this World, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your Minds. Set the Example of Christ before you, and labour to tread in his Steps. This is the great Business of Religion; the main scope of the Gospel. Give me leave therefore closely to press it upon your Hearts by the following Motives.

1. Motive. Christ has conformed himself to you by his abasing Incarnation: How reasonable therefore is it that you conform your selves to him in the way of Obedience and Sanctification? He came as near to you as is possible for him to do, strive you therefore to come as near to Christ as it is possible for you to do. He hath taken your Nature upon him, Heb. 2. 14. Yea, and with your Nature he hath taken your Weaknesses and Infirmities, Rom. 8. 3. and not only your Natures, and your Infirmities, but your Condition also; for he came under the Law for your sakes, Gal. 4. 4. He conformed himself to you, though he was infinitely above you, that was his abasement; do you conform your selves to him, who are infinitely beneath him, that will be your Advancement; his Conformity to you emptied him of his Glory; your Conformity to him will fill you with Glory: He conformed himself to you, though you had no Obligation upon him: Will not you conform your selves to him, who lie under infinite Obligations so to do.

Motive 1.

2. Motive. You shall be conformed to Christ in Glory: How reasonable therefore is it you should now conform your selves to him in Holiness? The Apostle saith, 1 Joh. 3. 2. We shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. Yea not only your Souls shall be like him, but your very Bodies, even those vile Bodies of yours shall be changed, that they may be fashioned like unto his Glorious Body. How forcible a Motive is this to bring Men into Conformity with Christ here! especially seeing our Conformity to him in Holiness, is the Evidence of our Conformity to him in Glory, Rom. 6. 5. 2 Pet. 3. 11. O Professors, as ever you look to be with Christ in Glory hereafter, see that ye walk after Christ's Example, in Holiness and Obedience here.

Motive 3.

3 Motive. The Conformity of your Lives to Christ your Pattern, is you highest Excellency in this World; the measure of your Grace is to be estimated by this Rule. The Excellency of every Creature rises higher and higher, according as it approaches still nearer and nearer to its Original; the more you resemble Christ in Grace, the more illustrious and respendent will your Conversations be in true spiritual Glory.

Motive 4.

4. Motive. So far as you imitate Christ in your Lives, and no farther, you will be beneficial to the World in which you live. So far as God helps you to follow Christ, you will be helpful to bring others to Christ, or build them up in Christ; for all Men are forbidden by the Gospel to follow you one step farther than you follow Christ, 1 Cor. 11. 1. and when you have finished your Course in this World, the remembrance of your ways will be no farther sweet to others, than they are Ways of Holiness and Obedience to Christ, 1 Cor. 4. 17. If you walk according to the course of this World, the World will not be the better for your walking.

Motive 5.

5. Motive. To walk as Christ walked is a Walk only worthy of a Christian; this is to walk worthy of the Lord, 1 Thess. 2. 12. Col. 1. 10. by worthiness the Apostle doth not mean meritoriousness, but comeliness, or that decorum which befits a Christian, as when a Man walks suitably to his Place and Calling in the World, we say he acts like himself. So when you walk after Christ's Pattern, you then act like your selves, like Men of your Character and Profession. This is consonant to your Vocation, Eph. 4. 1. I beseech you that you walk worthy of the Vocation wherewith you are called. This walking ſuits with your obligation, 2 Cor. 5. 15. For it is to live unto him who died for us. This walking only ſuits with your deſignation, Eph. 2. 10. For you are created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good Works, which God hath before ordained we ſhould walk in them. In a word, ſuch walking as this, and ſuch only, becomes your expectation, 2 Pet. 3. 14. Wherefore [beloved] ſeeing that you look for ſuch things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in Peace without ſpot and blame-leſs.

Motive. 6. 6. Motive. How comfortable will the cloſe of your Life be at Death, if you have walked after Chriſt's Pattern and Example in this World! A comfortable Death is ordinarily the cloſe of a Holy Life, Pſal. 37. 37. Mark the perfect Man, and behold the upright; for the end of that Man is Peace. A looſe careleſs Life puts many terrible Stings into Death. As Worms in the Body are bred of the putrefaction there, ſo the Worm of Conſcience is bred of the Moral Putrefaction, or Corruption that is in our Natures and Converſations. O then be prevailed with by all theſe Conſiderations to imitate Chriſt in the whole courſe and compaſs of your Converſations.

3. Uſe for Conſolation.

Uſe 3. Laſtly, I would leave a few Words of Support and Comfort to ſuch as ſincerely ſtudy and endeavour according to the tendency of their new Nature, to follow Chriſt's Example, but being weak in Grace, and meeting with ſtrong Temptations, are frequently carried beſide the holy purpoſes and deſigns of their honeſt meaning Hearts, to the great grief and diſcouragement of their Souls. They heartily wiſh and aim at Holineſs, and ſay with David, Pſal. 119. 5. O that my Ways were directed to keep thy Statutes. They follow after exactneſs in Holineſs as Paul did, Phil. 3. 12. If by any means they might attain it. But finding how ſhort they come in all things of the Rule and Pattern, they mourn as he did, Rom. 7. 24. O wretched Man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death? Well, well, if this be thy Caſe, be not diſcouraged, but hearken to a few words of Support and Comfort, with which I ſhall cloſe this point.

1. Support. 1. Support. Such Defects in Obedience make no flaw in your Juſtification. For your Juſtification is not built upon your Obedience, but upon Chriſt's, Rom. 3. 24. and how incompleat and defective ſoever you be in your ſelves, yet at the ſame inſtant, you are compleat in him which is the head of all Principality and Power, Col. 2. 10. Wo to Abraham, Moſes, David, Paul, and the moſt eminent Saints that ever lived, if their Juſtification and Acceptation with God had depended upon the perfection and compleatneſs of their own Obedience.

2. Support. 2. Support. Your deep Troubles for the defectiveneſs of your Obedience, doth not argue you to be leſs, but more ſanctified, than thoſe who make no ſuch Complaints; for this proves you to be better acquainted with your own Hearts, than others are, to have a deeper hatred of Sin than others have, and to love God with a more fervent Love than others do; the moſt eminent Saints have made the bittereſt Complaints upon this Account, Pſal. 65. 3. Rom. 7. 23. 24.

3. Support. 3. Support. The Lord makes excellent uſes even of your Infirmities and Failings to do you good, and makes them turn to your unexpected advantage: For by theſe defects he hides Pride from your Eyes; he beats you off from Self-dependance; he makes you to admire the Riches of Free Grace; he makes you to long more ardently for Heaven, and entertain the ſweeter thoughts of Death; And doth not the Lord then make bleſſed Fruits to ſpring up to you from ſuch a bitter Root? O the bleſſed Chymiſtry of Heaven, to extract ſuch Mercies out of ſuch Miſeries!

4. Support. 4. Support. Your bewailed Inrfimities do not break the Bond of the everlaſting Covenant. The Bond of the Covenant holds firm, notwithſtanding your Defects and Weakneſſes, Jer. 32. 40. Iniquities prevail againſt me, ſaith David, yet in the ſame Breath he adds, as for our Tranſgreſſions thou ſhalt purge them away, Pſal. 65. 3. He's ſtill thy God, thy father for all this.

5. Support. 5. Support. Though the Defects of your Obedience are grievous to God, yet your deep Sorrows for them are well-pleaſing in his Eyes, Pſal. 51. 17. The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit, a broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe. Ephraim was never a more pleaſant Child to his Father, that when he moaned himſelf, and ſmote upon his Thigh as thou doſt, Jer. 31. 20. Your Sins grieve him, but your Sorrows pleaſe him.

6. Support. 6. Support. Though God have left many defects to humble you, yet he hath given many things to comfort you. This is a comfort, that the deſire of thy Soul is to God, and to the remembrance of his Name. This is a comfort, that thy Sins are not thy delight as once they were; but thy Shame and Sorrow. This is a comfort, that thy Caſe is not ſingular; but more or leſs the ſame Complaints and Sorrows are found in all gracious Souls through the World; and, to ſay all in one word, this is the Comfort above all Comforts, that the time is at hand, in which all theſe Defects, Infirmities and Failings ſhall be done away, 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.

For ever bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

And thus I have finiſhed the third General Uſe of Examination, whereby every Man is to try his Intereſt in Chriſt, and diſcern whether ever Chriſt hath been effectually applied to his Soul. That which remains is An Uſe of Lamentation.

Wherein the miſerable and moſt wretched ſtate of all thoſe to whom Jeſus Chriſt is not effectually applied, will be yet more particularly diſcovered and bewailed.

SERMON XXXI.

EPHES. V. 14.

Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and riſe from the Dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Light.

Of the State of Spiritual Death and the Miſery thereof.

THIS Scripture repreſents unto us the miſerable and lamentable ſtate of the unregenerate, as being under the Power of ſpiritual Death, which is the cauſe and in-let of all other Miſeries. From hence therefore I ſhall make the firſt Diſcovery of the woful and wretched State of them that apply not Jeſus Chriſt to their own Souls.

The Scope of the Apoſtle in this Context, is to preſs Believers to a circumſpect and holy Life; to walk as Children of Light. This Exhortation is laid down in ver. 8. and preſſed by divers Arguments in the following Verſes.

Firſt, From the tendency of holy Principles unto holy Fruits and Practices, ver. 9. 10.

Secondly, From the convincing Efficacy of Practical Godlineſs upon the Conſciences of the Wicked, ver. 11. 12, 13. It awes and convinces their Conſciences.

Thirdly, From the co-incidence of ſuch a Converſation with the great deſign and drift of the Scriptures; which is to awaken Men by regeneration out of that ſpiritual Sleep, or rather Death, which Sin hath caſt them into: And this is the Argument of the Text, Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, &c. There is ſome difficulty in the reference of theſe Words. Some think it refers to Iſa. 26. 19. Awake and ſing ye that dwell in the Duſt. Others to Iſa. 60. 1. Ariſe, ſhine, for thy Light is come, &c. But moſt probably the Words neither refer to this or that particularly, but to the Drift and Scope of the whole Scriptures, which were inſpired and written upon this great Deſign to awaken and quicken Souls out of the ſtate of ſpiritual Death. And in them we are to conſider theſe three things more diſtinctly and particularly.

1. The miſerable State of the Unregenerate; they are aſleep and dead.
2. Their Duty; which is to awake, and ſtand up from the Dead.
3. The Power enabling them thereunto; Chriſt ſhall give thee Light.

Firſt, The miſerable State of the Unregenerate, repreſented under the Notions of Sleep and Death; both Expreſſions intending one and the ſame thing, though with ſome variety of Notion. The Chriſtleſs and Unregenerate World is in a deep ſleep; a Spirit of ſlumber, ſenſeleſneſs and ſecurity is fallen upon them, though they lie expoſed immediately to eternal Wrath and Miſery, ready to drop into Hell every moment. Juſt as a Man that is faſt aſleep in a Houſe on Fire, and whilſt the conſuming Flames are round about him, his Fancy is ſporting it ſelf in ſome pleaſant Dream; this is a very lively Reſemblance of the Unregenerate Soul. But yet he that ſleeps hath the Principle of Life entire in him, though his Senſes be bound, and the Actions of Life ſuſpended by ſleep. Leſt therefore we ſhould think it is only ſo with the Unregenerate, the Expreſſion is deſignedly varied, and thoſe that were ſaid to be aſleep, are poſitively affirmed to be dead; on purpoſe to inform us that it is not a ſimple ſuſpenſion of the Acts and Exerciſe, but a total privation of the Principle of ſpiritual Life, which is the miſery of the Unregenerate.

Secondly, We have here the Duty of the Unregenerate, which is to awake out of Sleep, and ariſe from the Dead. This is their great Concernment: No Duty in the World is of greater Neceſſity and Importance to them. Strive (ſaith Chriſt) to enter in at the ſtrait Gate, Luke 13. 24. And the order of theſe Duties is very natural. Firſt awake, then ariſe. Startling and rouſing Convictions make way for ſpiritual Life; till God awake us by Convictions of our Miſery, we will never be perſwaded to ariſe, and move towards Chriſt for Remedy and Safety.

Thirdly, But you will ſay, if unregenerate Men be dead Men, to what purpoſe is it to perſwade them to ariſe and ſtand up? The very Exhortation ſuppoſes ſome Power or Ability in the Unregenerate; elſe in vain are they commanded to ariſe. This Difficulty is ſolved in this very Text, though the Duty be ours, yet the Power is God's. God commands that in his Word, which only his Grace can perform. Chriſt ſhall give thee Light. Popiſh Commentators would build the Power of Free-will upon this Scripture, by a very weak Argument drawn from the order wherein theſe things are here expreſſed; which is but a weak Foundation to build upon, for it is very uſual in Scripture to put the Effect before, and the Cauſe after, as it is here, ſo in Iſa. 26. 19. Awake and ſing, ye that dwell in the Duſt. But I will not here intangle my Diſcourſe with that Controverſie, that which I aim at is plain in the Words, viz.

Quamvis verba videntur velle, primum excitari, & ſurgere, deinde illuminari; tamen intelligendum eſt, vi lucis Chriſti excitari eum, & ſurgere, Rol. in Loc.

Doct. That all Chriſtleſs Souls are under the Power of Spiritual Death, they are in the State of the Dead. Doct.

Multitudes of Teſtimonies are given in Scripture to this Truth, Eph. 2. 1, 5. You hath he quickened who were dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins. Col. 2. 13. And you being dead in your Sins, and the uncircumciſion of your Fleſh, hath he quickened together with him; with many other places of the ſame importance. But the Method in which I ſhall diſcourſe this Point will be this:

Firſt, I will ſhew you in what ſenſe Chriſtleſs and Unregenerate Men are ſaid to be dead.

Secondly, What the State of Spitiual Death is.

Thirdly, How it appears that all unregenerate Men are in this ſad State. And then apply it.

Firſt, In what ſenſe are Chriſtleſs and Unregenerate Men ſaid to be dead Men.

To open this, we muſt know there is a threefold Death, viz.

1. Natural

1. Natural.
2. Spiritual.
3. Eternal.

Natural Death is nothing elſe but the privation of the Principle of Natural Life, or the ſeparation of the Soul from the Body, James 2. 26. The Body without the Spirit is dead. Spiritual Death is the privation of the Principle of Spiritual Life, or the want and abſence of the quickening Spirit of God in the Soul; the Soul is the Life of the Body, and Chriſt is the Life of the Soul; the abſence of the Soul is death to the Body, and the abſence or want of Chriſt is Death to the Soul. Eternal Death is the ſeparation both of Body and Soul from God, which is the miſery of the Damned. Now Chriſtleſs and Unregenerate Men are not dead in the firſt ſenſe; they are naturally alive, though they are dead while they live: Nor are they yet dead in the laſt ſenſe, eternally ſeparated from God, by an irrevocable Sentence as the damned are; but they are dead in the ſecond ſenſe, they are ſpiritually dead, whilſt they are naturally alive, and this ſpiritual Death is the Fore-runner of eternal Death. Now ſpiritual Death is put in Scripture in oppoſition to a two-fold ſpiritual Life. viz.

1. The Life of Juſtification.
2. The Life of Sanctification.

Spiritual Death in oppoſition to the Life of Juſtification is nothing elſe but the guilt of Sin, bringing us under the Sentence of Death. Spiritual Death in oppoſition to the Life of Sanctification is the Pollution or Dominion of Sin. In both theſe ſenſes Unregenerate Men are dead Men; but it is the laſt which I am properly concerned to ſpeak to in this place: And therefore,

Secondly, Let us briefly conſider what this Spiritual Death is, which as before was hinted, is the abſence of the quickening Spirit of Chriſt from the Soul of any Man. That Soul is a dead Soul into which the Spirit of Chriſt is not infuſed in the Work of Regeneration, and all its Works are dead Works; as they are called, Heb. 9. 14. For, look how it is with the Damned, they live, they have Senſe and Motion, and an Immortality in all theſe; but becauſe they are eternally ſeparated from God, the Life which they live, deſerves not the name of Life, but is every where in Scripture ſtiled Death: So the Unregenerate, they are naturally alive: They eat, and drink, they buy and ſell, they talk, and laugh, they rejoice in the Creatures; and many of them ſpend their Days in Pleaſures, and then go down to the Grave. This is the Life they live, but yet the Scripture rather calls it Death than Life; becauſe though they live, yet it is without God in the World, Eph. 2. 12. Though they live, yet it is a Life alienated from the Life of God, Eph. 4. 18. And therefore while they remain naturally alive, they are in Scripture ſaid to remain in Death, 1 John 3. 14. and to be dead while they live, 1 Tim. 5. 6. And there is great reaſon why a Chriſtleſs an unregenerate ſtate ſhould be repreſented in Scripture under the notion of Death; for there is nothing in nature which more aptly repreſents that miſerable ſtate of the Soul than natural Death doth. The Dead ſee and diſcern nothing, and the natural man perceiveth not the things that are of God. The Dead have no beauty or deſirableneſs in them; Bury my Dead, ſaid Abraham, out of my ſight: Neither is there any ſpiritual Loveline ſs in the Unregenerate. True it is, ſome of them have ſweet natural Qualities, and Moral Excellencies, which are amiable things; but theſe are as ſo many Flowers decking and adorning a dead Corpſe. The Dead are Objects of Pity, and great Lamentation; Men uſe to mourn for the Dead, Eccleſ. 12. 5. Man goeth to his long home, and the Mourners go about the Streets. But unregenerate, and Chriſtleſs Souls are much more the Objects of Pity and Lamentation: How are all the People of God (eſpecially thoſe that are naturally related to them) concerned to mourn over them, and for them, as Abraham did for Ishmael, Gen. 17. 18. O that Ismael might live before thee. Upon theſe, and many other Accounts, the ſtate of Unregeneracy is repreſented to us in the notion of Death.

Thirdly, And that this is the ſtate of all Chriſtleſs and unſanctified Perſons, will undeniably appear two Ways.

1. The Cauſes of Spiritual Life have not wrought upon them.
2. The Effects and Signs of Spiritual Life do not appear in them; and therefore they are in the State, and under the Power of Spiritual Death.

Firſt, The Cauſes of Spiritual Life have not wrought upon them. There are two Cauſes of Spiritual Life.

1. Principal and Internal.
2. Subordinate and External.

The Principal Internal Cauſe of Spiritual Life, is the regenerating Spirit of Chriſt, Rom. 8. 2. The Law of the Spirit of Life in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the Law of Sin and Death. 'Tis the Spirit as a regenerating Spirit that unites us with Chriſt in whom all Spiritual Life originally is, John 5. 25, 26. Verily, I ſay unto you, that the hour is coming, and now is, when the Dead ſhall hear the Voice of the Son of God; and they that hear, ſhall live: For as the Father hath Life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son to have Life in himſelf. As all the Members of the natural Body receive Animation, Senſe, and Motion by their Union with their natural Head; ſo all Believers, the Members of Chriſt, receive Spiritual Life and Animation by their Union with Chriſt their myſtical Head, Eph. 4. 15. 16. Except we come to him and be united with him in the way of Faith, we can have no Life in us, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me that ye may have Life. Now the Spirit of God hath yet exerted no regenerating, quickning Influences, nor begotten any ſpecial ſaving Faith in natural unſanctified Men; what ever he hath done for them in the way of natural, or ſpiritual common Gifts, yet he hath not quickened them with the Life of Chriſt. And as the ſubordinate external means of Life, viz. the preaching of the Goſpel, which is the Inſtrument of the Spirit in this Glorious Work, and is therefore called The Word of Life, Phil. 2. 16. this Word hath not yet been made a regenerating quickning Word to their Souls. Poſſibly it hath enlightened them, and convinced them: It hath wrought upon their Minds in the Way of common Illumination, and upon their Conſciences in the way of Conviction, but not upon their Hearts and Wills by way of effectual Converſion: To this day the Lord hath not given them an heart opening it ſelf in the way of Faith to receive Jeſus Chriſt.

Secondly, The Effects and Signs of Spiritual Life do not appear in them: for.

Firſt, They have no feeling or ſenſe of Miſery and Danger. I mean, no ſuch Senſe as throughly awakens them to apply Chriſt their Remedy. That ſpiritual Judgment lies upon them, Iſa. 6. 9, 10. And he ſaid, go and tell this People, Hear ye indeed, but underſtand not; and ſee ye indeed, but perceive not; make the Heart of this People fat, and their Ears heavy, and ſhut their Eyes.

Secondly, They have no spiritual Motions towards Christ, or after things that are spiritual; all the Arguments in the World cannot perswade their Wills to move one step towards Christ in the way of Faith, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me: Were there a Principle of spiritual Life in their Souls, they would move Christ-ward, and Heaven-ward, John 4. 14. it would be in them a Well of Water springing up into Eternal Life. The natural tendency of the Spiritual Life is upward.

Thirdly, The Unregenerate have no Appetite unto spiritual Food, they savour not things that are spiritual; they can go from Week to Week, and from Year to Year, all their Life time without any Communion betwixt God and their Souls, and feel no need of it, nor any hungerings, nor thirstings after it, which could never be if a Principle of spiritual Life were in them; for then they would esteem the Words of Gods Mouth more than their necessary Food, Job 30. 12.

Fourthly, They have no heat or spiritual warmth in their Affections to God, and things above; their Hearts are as cold as a Stone to spiritual Objects. They are heated indeed by their Lusts and Affections to the World, and the things of the World; but O how cold and dead are they towards Jesus Christ and spiritual Excellencies.

Fifthly, They breath not spiritually, therefore they live not spiritually: Were there a spiritual Principle of Life in them, their Souls would breath after God in spiritual Prayer, Acts 9. 11. Behold, he prayeth. The Lips of the Unregenerate may move in Prayer, but their Hearts and Desires do not breath and pant after God.

Sixthly, They have no Cares or Fears for Self-preservation, which is always the Effect of Life; the poorest Fly or sillyest Worm will shun danger: The Wrath of God hangs over them in the Threatnings, but they tremble not at it: Hell is but a little before them, they are upon the very Precipice of eternal Ruin; yet will use no means to avoid it. How plain therefore is this sad Case which I have undertaken here to demonstrate, viz. that Christless and Unregenerate Souls are dead Souls? The Uses follow.

Inference 1.

Infer. 1. If all Christless and Unregenerate Souls be dead Souls, then how little Pleasure can Christians take in the Society of the Unregenerate?

Certainly 'tis no Pleasure for the living to converse among the dead. It was a cruel Torment invented by Mezentius the Tyrant, to tie a dead and living Man together: The pleasure of Society arises from the harmony of Spirits, and the hopes of mutual Enjoyment in the World to come; neither of which can sweeten the Society of the Godly with the Wicked in this World. 'Tis true, there is a necessary Civil Converse which we must have with the ungodly here; or else (as the Apostle speaks) we must go out of the World. There are also duties of Relation which must be faithfully and tenderly paid even to the Unregenerate: But certainly, where we have our free Election, we shall be much wanting both to our Duty and Comfort, if we make not the People of God our chosen Companions. Excellently to this Purpose speaks a Modern Author, 'Art thou a godly Master? When thou takest a Servant into thine 'House, choose for God, as well as thy self. A 'godly Servant is a greater Blessing than we think 'on: He can work, and set God on Work also for 'his Masters good, Gen. 24. 12. O Lord God of my 'Master Abraham, I pray thee send me good Speed this 'day, and shew kindness unto my Master: And sure 'he did his Master as much service by his Prayer, 'as by his Prudence, in that Journey. Holy David observed while he was at Saul's Court, the 'Mischief of having wicked and ungodly Servants, '(for with such was that unhappy King so compassed, that David compares his Court to the 'prophane and barbarous Heathens, among whom 'there was scarce more Wickedness to be found, 'Psal. 120. 6. Wo is me, that I sojourn in Mesheck, 'that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar, (i. e.) among 'those who were as prodigiously wicked as any 'there) and no doubt but this made this gracious 'Man in his Banishment before he came to the 'Crown (having seen the evil of a disordered 'House) to resolve what he would do when 'God should make him the Head of such a Royal 'Family, Psal. 101. 7. He that worketh Deceit shall 'not dwell within my House; he that telleth Lies, shall 'not tarry in my Sight.

'Art thou godly? shew thy self so in the choice 'of Husband or Wife. I am sure, if some (and 'those godly also) could bring no other Testimonial for their godliness than the care they have 'taken in this particular, it might justly be called 'into question both by themselves and others. 'There is no one thing that gracious Persons (even 'those recorded in Scripture as well as others) 'have shewn their weakness, yea, given Offence 'and Scandal more in, than in this particular. 'The Sons of God saw that the Daughters of Men were 'fair, Gen. 6. 2. One would have thought, the Sons 'of God should have looked for Grace in the 'Heart, rather than Beauty in the Face; but we 'see, even they sometimes turn in at the fairest 'Sign, without much enquiring what Grace is to 'be found dwelling within. Look to the Rule, 'O Christian, if thou wilt keep the Power of Holiness! That is clear as a Sun-beam written in the Scripture; be not unequally yoked together with Unbelievers, 2 Cor. 6. 14.

Inference 2.

Infer. 2. How great and wholly supernatural, marvellous and wonderful is that change which Regeneration makes upon the Souls of Men! It is a change from Death to Life, Luke 15. 24. This my Son was dead, and is alive again. Regeneration is Life from the Dead, The most excellent Life from the most terrible Death. 'Tis the Life of God re-inspired into a Soul alienated from it by the Power of Sin, Eph. 4. 18. There are two stupendious Changes made upon the Souls of Men, which justly challenge highest Admiration, viz. That,

1. From Sin to Grace.
2. From Grace to Glory.

The Change from Grace to Glory is acknowledged by all, and that justly, to be a wonderful Change; for God to take a poor Creature out of the Society of sinful Men, yea from under the Burden of many sinful Infirmities which made him groan from day to day in this World; and in a Moment to make him a compleat and perfect Soul, shining in the Beauties of Holiness, and filling him as a Vessel of Glory with the unspeakable and unconceivable Joys of his presence, to turn his Groanings into Triumphs, his Sighing

Ut solent vitia alibi connata in propinqua membra perniciem suam effluere; sic improborum vitia in eos derivantur qui cum illis vitæ habent consuetudinem. Tertul. adverse. Valentin. Gurnals Christian armour, part 2. p. 257.

Songs of Praiſe: This I ſay is marvellous, and yet the former Change from Sin to Grace is no way inferiour to it. Nay, in ſome reſpect beyond it; for the Change which Glory makes upon the Regenerate, is but a gradual Change, but the Change which Regeneration makes upon the Ungodly, is a ſpecifical Change. Great and admirable is this Work of God, and let it for ever be marvellous in our Eyes.

Inference 3.

Infer. 3. If Unregenerate Souls be dead Souls, what a fatal ſtroke doth Death give to the Bodies of all Unregenerate Men? A Soul dead in Sin, and a Body dead by vertue of the Curſe for Sin, and both Soul and Body remaining for ever under the Power of eternal Death, is ſo full and perfect a Miſery, as that nothing can be added to make it more miſerable: 'Tis the Comfort of a Chriſtian, that he can ſay when Death comes non omnis moriar, I ſhall not wholly die; there is a Life I live which Death cannot touch, Rom. 8. 13. The Body is dead becauſe of Sin, but the Spirit is Life becauſe of Righteouſneſs. Bleſſed and holy is he, that hath part in the firſt Reſurrection, on ſuch the ſecond Death hath no Power. As Death takes a Believer from amidſt many Sorrows and Troubles, and brings him to the Viſion of God, to the general Aſſembly of all the perfected Saints, to a State of compleat Freedom, and full Satisfaction; ſo it drags the Unregenerate from all his ſenſative Delights and Comforts, to the place of Torments. It buries the dead Soul out of the Preſence of God for ever. 'Tis the King of Terrors, 'tis a Serpent with a deadly Sting to every Man that is out of Chriſt.

Inference 4.

Infer. 4. If every Unregenerate Soul be a dead Soul, how ſad is the Caſe of Hypocrites, and temporary Believers who are twice dead? Theſe are thoſe curſed Trees of which the Apoſtle Jude ſpeaks, Jude ver. 12. Trees whoſe Fruit withereth, without Fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the Roots. The Apoſtle alludes unto dying Trees. Trees that are dying the firſt time in the Spring, then they fade, decay, and caſt their Leaves, when other Trees are fragrant and flouriſhing. But from this firſt Death they are ſometimes recovered by pruning and dreſſing, or watering the Roots: But if in Autumn they decay again, which is the Critical and Climacterical time of Trees to diſcover whether their Diſeaſe be Mortal or not; if then, they wither and decay the ſecond time, the Fault is ab intra, the Root is rotten, there is no hope of it. The Husbandman beſtows no more Labour about it, except it be to root it up for Fewel to the Fire. Juſt thus ſtands the Caſe with falſe and hypocritical Profeſſors, who though they were ſtill under the power of Spiritual Death, yet in the beginning of their Profeſſion they ſeemed to be alive: They ſhewed the World the fragrant Leaves of a fair Profeſſion, many hopeful Buddings of Affection towards ſpiritual things were ſeen in them, but wanting a Root of Regeneration, they quickly began to wither, and caſt their untimely Fruit. However, by the help of Ordinances, or ſome rouzing and awakening Providences they ſeem to recover themſelves again; but all will not do, the Fault is ab intra from the want of a good Root, and therefore at laſt they who were always once dead, for want of a Principle of Regeneration; are now become twice dead, by the withering and decay of their vain Profeſſion. Such Trees are prepared for the ſevereſt Flames in Hell. Matth. 24. 51. Their Portion is the ſaddeſt Portion allotted for any of the Sons of Death. Therefore the Apoſtle Peter tells us, 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21. For if after they have eſcaped the Pollutions of the World through the Knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, and overcome; the latter end is worſe with them than the Beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the Way of Righteouſneſs, than after they have known it, to run from the holy Commandment delivered unto them. Double Meaſures of Wrath ſeem to be prepared for them that die this double Death.

Infer. 5. If this be ſo, then Unregenerate Perſons deſerve the greateſt Lamentations. And were this Truth heartily believed, we could not but mourn over them with the moſt tender Compaſſion, and hearty Sorrow. If our Husbands, Wives, or Children be dying a natural Death, how are our Hearts rent in pieces with Pity and Sorrow for them? What Cries, Tears and wringing of Hands diſcover the deep Senſe we have of their Miſery! O Chriſtians, is all the Love you have for your Relations ſpent upon their Bodies? Are their Souls of no value in your Eyes? Is ſpiritual Death no miſery? Doth it not deſerve a Tear? The Lord open our Eyes, and duly affect our Hearts with Spiritual Death and Soul Miſeries.

Conſider my Friends, and let it move your Bowels, (if there be Bowels of Affection in you) whilſt they remain ſpiritually dead, they are uſeleſs and wholly unſerviceable unto God: in the World as to any ſpecial and acceptable Service unto him, 2 Tim. 2. 21. They are uncapable of all Spiritual Comforts from God: They cannot taſte the leaſt ſweetneſs in Chriſt, in Duties or in Promiſes, Rom. 8. 6. They have no Beauty in their Souls; how comely ſoever their Bodies be, 'tis Grace and nothing but Grace that beautifies the inner Man, Ezek. 16. 6, 7. The Dead have neither Comfort nor Beauty in them; they have no hope to be with God in Glory, for the Life of Glory is begun in Grace, Phil. 1. 6. Their Graves muſt ſhortly be made, to be buried out of the ſight of God for ever in the loweſt Hell, the Pit digged by Juſtice for all that are ſpiritually dead; the Dead muſt be buried. Can ſuch Conſiderations as theſe draw no Pity from your Souls, nor excite your Endeavours for their Regeneration? Then 'tis to be feared your Souls are dead as well as theirs. O pity them, pity them, and pray for them; in this Caſe only, Prayers for the Dead are our Duty; who knows but at the laſt God may hear your Cries, and you may ſay with Comfort as he did, This my Son was dead, but is alive; was loſt, but is found; and they began to be merry, Luke 15. 24.

SER.

SERMON XXXII.

JOHN III. 18.

The Condemnation of Unbelievers opened and applied.

But he that Believeth not is Condemned already, because he hath not Believed in the Name of the only begotten Son of God.

CHRIST having discourſed Nicodemus in the beginning of this Chapter about the neceſſity of Regeneration, proceeds to ſhew in this following Diſcourſe the Reaſon and Ground why Regeneration and Faith are ſo indiſpenſably neceſſary, viz. Becauſe there is no other way to ſet Men free from the Curſe and Condemnation of the Law. The Curſe of the Law, like the fiery Serpents in the Wilderneſs, hath ſmitten every Sinner with a deadly Stroke and Sting, for which there is no Cure, but Chriſt lifted up in the Goſpel, as Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderneſs, ver. 14. Neither doth Chriſt cure any but thoſe that believingly apply him to their own Souls. The reſult and concluſion of all you have in my Text, He that believeth in him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, &c. In this Clauſe which I have pitched upon, we find theſe three Parts.

1. The Sin threat'ned, viz. Unbelief.
2. The Puniſhment inflicted, viz. Condemnation.
3. The immediate Relation of the one to the other; he is condemned already.

Firſt, Let us take into Conſideration the Sin which is here threat'ned, viz. Unbelief. The neglecting or refuſing of an exalted and offered Jeſus. Unbelief is twofold, viz. Negative or Poſitive. Negative Unbelief is the Sin of the Heathens, who never had the Goſpel among them, nor the Offers of Chriſt made to them; theſe cannot believe on him, of whom they have not heard. Poſitive Unbelief is the Sin of Men and Women under the Goſpel, to whom Chriſt is actually opened and offered by the preaching of the Goſpel, but they make light of it, neglect the great Salvation; receive not Chriſt into their Hearts, nor conſent to the ſevere, and ſelf-denying terms upon which he is offered. This is the Sin threat'ned.

Secondly, The Puniſhment inflicted, and that is Condemnation: A Word of deep and dreadful Signification, appearing in this Text as the Hand-writing upon the Plaiſter of the Wall unto Belſhazzar, Dan. 5. 5. A Word whoſe deep Senſe and Emphaſis is fully underſtood in Hell. Condemnation is the Judgment or Sentence of God condemning a Man to bear the Puniſhment of his eternal Wrath for Sin, the moſt terrible of all Sentences.

Thirdly, The immediate Relation, or Reſpect this Puniſhment hath to that Sin of Unbelief. The Unbeliever is condemned already (i. e.) he is virtually condemned by the Law of God: His Mittimus is already made for Hell, he is condemned as a Sinner, by the Breach of the firſt Covenant; but that Condemnation had never been his Ruin, except it had been ratified by the Sentence of God, condemning him as an Unbeliever, for ſlighting and rejecting the Grace offered in the ſecond Covenant. So that the Unbeliever is already virtually condemned by both, as he is a Sinner, and as he is an Unbeliever, as he hath tranſgreſſed the Law, and as he hath refuſed the Goſpel, as he hath contracted Sin, the Mortal Diſeaſe, and refuſed Chriſt, the only effectual Remedy. He is virtually condemned now, and will be ſententially condemned in the Judgment of the great Day. Unbelief is his great Sin, and Condemnation is his great Miſery. Hence the Obſervation will be this:

Doct. That all Unbelievers are preſently and immediately under the juſt and dreadful Sentence of God's Condemnation. John 12. 48. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my Words, hath one that judgeth him: The Word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him in the laſt Day. John 3. 36. He that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life, but the Wrath of God abideth on him.

Three Things are to be opened in the Doctrinal Part of this Point.

1. What Unbelief, or the not receiving of Jeſus Chriſt is.
2. What Condemnation the Puniſhment of this Sin is.
3. Why this Puniſhment unavoidably follows that Sin.

Firſt, What the Sin of Unbelief, or not receiving Chriſt is. By Unbelief we are not here to underſtand the Relicks or Remains of that Sin in the People of God which is mixed with their imperfect Faith, for there is ſome Unbelief ſtill mingled with Faith in the beſt Hearts. He that can ſay, Lord I believe, hath Cauſe enough to cry out with Tears, help thou my Unbelief. However, this doth not bring the Soul under Condemnation, or into the ſtate of Wrath. The Word condemns this Unbelief in them, but doth not condemn their Perſons for this Unbelief. But the Unbelief here ſpoken of, is the neglecting or refuſing to take Chriſt upon the terms of the Goſpel, and ſo is excluſive of the ſaving Act and Effects of Faith.

Firſt, It is excluſive of the ſaving Act of Faith, which (as hath been already declared) is the due receiving of Chriſt offered in the Goſpel, conſenting to take him upon his own Terms. This the Unbeliever will by no means be perſwaded to do. He will be perſwaded to accept the Promiſes of Chriſt, but not to accept the Perſon of Chriſt: He is willing to accept Chriſt in part, a divided Chriſt, but not to accept Chriſt entirely in all his Offices. He will accept the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, in Conjunction with his own Righteouſneſs; but he will not accept the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, as the ſole matter of his Juſtification excluſive of his own Righteouſneſs; he is willing to wear the Crown of Chriſt, but cannot be perſwaded to bear the Croſs of Chriſt. Thus Chriſt and Unbelievers part upon Terms; God will come down no lower, and the Unbeliever will come up no higher. God will not alter his Terms, and the Unbeliever will not alter his Reſolution, and ſo Chriſt is refuſed, Salvation neglected, and in the Effect the Unbeliever chuſeth rather to be damned, than than to comply with the ſevere Terms of Self-denial, Mortification and bearing the Croſs of Chriſt. Thus it excludes the ſaving Act of Faith.

Secondly, It is excluſive of the ſaving Fruits and Effects of Faith. Faith produces Love to God, but the Unbeliever doth not truly love him. But I know you (ſaith Chriſt to Unbelievers) that the love of God is not in you, Joh. 5.42. Faith purifies the Heart of a Believer, but the Hearts of Unbelievers are full of all Impurity. The Believer overcomes the World, the World overcomes the Unbeliever: Faith makes the Croſs of Chriſt ſweet and eaſie to the Believer; Unbelief makes Chriſt, becauſe of the Croſs, bitter and diſtaſteful to the Unbeliever. Thus Unbelief excludes both the ſaving Act and Fruits of Faith; and conſequently bars the Soul from the ſaving Benefits and Privileges of Faith, viz. Juſtification and Peace with God.

Secondly, Next let us conſider the Puniſhment of this Sin, which is Condemnation. Condemnation in the general, is the Sentence of a Judge awarding a Mulct, or Penalty to be inflicted upon the guilty Perſon. There is a twofold Condemnation.

1. Reſpectu Culpæ, in reſpect of the Fault.
2. Reſpectu pœnæ, in reſpect of the Puniſhment.

Firſt, Condemnation with reſpect to the Fault, is the caſting of the Perſon as guilty of the Crime charged upon him. Condemnation with reſpect to the Puniſhment, is the ſentencing the convicted Offender to undergo ſuch a Puniſhment for ſuch a Fault, to bear a penal for a moral Evil. This Forenſick Word Condemnation, is here applied unto the Caſe of a guilty Sinner caſt at the Bar of God, where the Fact is clearly proved, and the Puniſhment righteouſly awarded. Thou art an Unbeliever; for this Sin thou ſhalt die eternally. Condemnation with reſpect to the Puniſhment, ſtands oppoſed to Salvation, Mar. 16. 16. More particularly,

Firſt, Condemnation is the Sentence of God, the great and terrible God, the omniſcient, omnipotent, ſupreme and impartial Judge; at whoſe Bar the guilty Sinner ſtands. 'Tis the Law of God that condemns him now: he hath one that judgeth him, a great and terrible one too. 'Tis a dreadful thing to be condemned at Man's Bar; but the Courts of humane Judicature, how awful and ſolemn ſoever they are, are but Trifles, and Childrens Play to this Court of Heaven and Conſcience, wherein the Unbeliever is arraigned and condemned.

Secondly, 'Tis the Sentence of God adjudging the Unbeliever to eternal Death, than which nothing more terrible. What is a Priſon to Hell? What a Scaffold, an Ax, to Go ye curſed into everlaſting fire? What is a Gallows and a Halter to everlaſting Burnings?

Thirdly, Condemnation is the final Sentence of God, the ſupreme Judge, from whoſe Bar and Judgment there lies no Appeal for the Unbeliever, no Execution certainly follows Condemnation, Luke 19. 27. If a Man condemn, God may juſtify and ſave: But if God condemn, no Man can acquit or deliver. If the Law caſt a Man as a Sinner, the Goſpel may ſave him as a Believer: But if the Goſpel caſt him as an Unbeliever, a Man that finally rejects Jeſus Chriſt whom it offers to him, all the World cannot ſave that Man. O how what a dreadful Word is Condemnation! All the Evils and Miſeries of this Life are nothing to it. Put all Afflictions, Calamities, Sufferings, and Miſeries of this World into one Scale, and this Sentence of God into the other, and they will be all lighter than a Feather.

Thirdly, In the next place, I ſhall ſhew you that this Puniſhment, viz. Condemnation, muſt unavoidably follow that Sin of Unbelief. So many unbelieving Perſons as be in the World, ſo many condemned Perſons there are in the World; and this will appear two ways.

1. By conſidering what Unbelief excludes a Man from.
2. By conſidering what Unbelief includes a Man under.

Firſt, Let us conſider what Unbelief excludes a Man from; and it will be found, that it excludes him from all that may help and ſave him. For,

Firſt, It excludes him from the Pardon of Sin; Joh. 8. 24. If ye believe not that I am he, ye ſhall die in your Sins. Now he that dies under the guilt of all his Sins, muſt needs die in a ſtate of Wrath and Condemnation for ever. For the wages of ſin is death, Rom. 6. ult. If a Man may be ſaved without a Pardon, then may the Unbeliever hope to be ſaved.

Secondly, Unbelief excludes a Man from all the ſaving Benefits that come by the Sacrifice or Death of Chriſt. For if Faith be the only Inſtrument that applies and brings home to the Soul the Benefits of the Blood of Chriſt, as unqueſtionably it is; then Unbelief muſt of neceſſity exclude a Man from all thoſe Benefits, and conſequently leave him in the ſtate of Death and Condemnation. Faith is the applying Cauſe, the Inſtrument by which we receive the ſpecial ſaving Benefit of the Blood of Chriſt, Rom. 5. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, Eph. 2. 8. By grace are ye ſaved through faith. So then, if the Unbeliever be acquitted and ſaved, it muſt be without the Benefit of Chriſt's Death and Sacrifice, which is utterly impoſſible.

Thirdly, Unbelief excludes a Man from the ſaving Efficacy and Operation of the Goſpel, by ſhutting up the Heart againſt it, and croſſing the main drift and ſcope of it; which is to bring up Men to the terms of Salvation. To perſuade them to believe, this is its great Deſign, the ſcope of all its Commands, 1 Joh. 3. 23. Mar. 1. 14, 15. Joh. 12. 36. So then, if the Unbeliever eſcape Condemnation, it muſt be in a way unknown to us by the Goſpel; yea, contrary to the eſtabliſh'd Order therein. For the Unbeliever obeyeth not the great Command of the Goſpel, 1 Joh. 3. 17. Nor is he under any one ſaving Promiſe of it, Gal. 3. 14, 22.

Fourthly, Unbelief excludes a Man from Union with Chriſt, Faith being the Bond of that Union Eph. 3. 17. The Unbeliever therefore may as reaſonably expect to be ſaved without Chriſt, as to be ſav'd without Faith. Thus you ſee what Unbelief excludes a Man from.

Secondly, Let us next ſee what Guilt and Miſery Unbelief includes Men under; and certainly it will be found to be the greateſt Guilt and Miſery in the World: For, Firſt, It is a Sin which reflects the greateſt Diſhonour upon God, 1 Joh. 5. 10. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witneſs in himſelf. He that believeth not God, hath made him a liar; becauſe he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

Secondly, Unbelief makes a Man guilty of the vileſt Contempt of Chriſt, and the whole Deſign of Redemption manag'd by him. All the glorious Attributes of God were ſignally manifeſted in the Work of Redemption by Chriſt; therefore the Apoſtle calls him the Wiſdom of God, and the Power of God, 1 Cor. 1. 23,24. But what doth the careleſs Neglect and wilful Rejection of Chriſt ſpeak, but the Weakneſs and Folly of that Deſign of Redemption by him?

Thirdly, Unbelief includes in it the ſoreſt ſpiritual Judgment that is, or can be inflicted in this World upon the Soul of Man: even ſpiritual Blindneſs, and the fatal darkening of the Underſtanding by Satan, 2 Cor. 4.4. of which more hereafter.

Fourthly, Unbelief includes a Man under the Curſe, and ſhuts him up under all the Threatenings that are written in the Book of God; amongſt which, that is an expreſs and terrible one, Mar. 16. 10. He that believes not ſhall be damned. So that nothing can be more evident than this, that Condemnation neceſſarily follows Unbelief. This Sin and that Puniſhment, are faſtned together with Chains of Adamant.

The Uſes follow. Inference 1.

If this be ſo, then how great a Number of Perſons are viſibly in the State of Condemnation! So many Unbelievers, ſo many condemned Men and Women That's a ſad Complaint of the Prophet, Iſa. 53. 1. Who hath believed our Report, and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? Many there be that talk of Faith, and many that profeſs Faith; but they only talk of and profeſs it: There are but few in the World unto whom the Arm of the Lord hath been revealed in the Work of Faith with Power. 'Tis put among the great Myſteries and Wonders of the World, 1 Tim. 3. 16. That Chriſt is believ'd on in the World. O what a great and terrible Day will the Day of Chriſt's coming to Judgment be, when ſo many Millions of Unbelievers ſhall be brought to his Tribunal to be ſolemnly ſentenc'd! They are (as my Text ſpeaks) condemned already; but then that dreadful Sentence will be ſolemnly pronounc'd by Jeſus Chriſt, whom they have deſpis'd and rejected: Then ſhall that Scripture be fulfill'd, Luk. 19. 27. Theſe mine enemies that would not that I ſhould reign over them, bring them hither, and ſlay them before me.

Inference 2.

Hence be inform'd how great a Mercy the leaſt Meaſure of ſaving Faith is; for the leaſt Meaſure of true Faith unites the Soul to Jeſus Chriſt; and then there is no Condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, Rom. 8. 1. Not one Sentence of God againſt them. So Acts 13. 29. By him all that believe are juſtify'd from all things. The weakeſt Believer is as free from Condemnation as the ſtrongeſt; the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt comes upon all Believers without any Difference, Rom. 3. 22. Even the Righteouſneſs of God; which is by Faith of Chriſt Jeſus unto all, and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference. 'Tis not imputed, as it is in inherent Righteouſneſs: One Man hath more Holineſs than another. The Faith that receives the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, may be very different in degrees of Strength; but the receiv'd Righteouſneſs is equal upon all Believers: A piece of Gold is as much worth in the hand of a Child, as it is in the hand of a Man. O the exceeding Preciouſneſs of ſaving Faith!

Inference 3.

How dreadful a Sin is the Sin of Unbelief, which brings Men under the Condemnation of the great God! No Sin ſtartles leſs, or damns ſurer: 'Tis a Sin that doth not affright the Conſcience, as ſome other Sins do, but it kills the Soul more certainly than any of thoſe ſins could do: For indeed other ſins could not damn us, were it not for Unbelief, which fixes the guilt of them all upon our Perſons. This is the Condemnation. Unbelief is the ſin of ſins; and when the Spirit comes to convince Men of ſin, he begins with this as the capital ſin, John 16. 9. But more particularly, Firſt, Eſtimate the evil of Unbelief from its Object. It is the ſlighting and refuſing of the moſt excellent and wonderful Perſon in Heaven or Earth. The fiducial Viſion of Chriſt is the Joy of Saints on Earth; the facial Viſion of Chriſt, is the Happineſs of Saints in Heaven. 'Tis a deſpiſing of him who is altogether lovely in himſelf, who hath loved us, and given himſelf for us.

'Tis a rejecting of the only Mediator betwixt God and Man; after the rejecting of whom there remains no Sacrifice for Sin.

Secondly, Let the Evil of Unbelief be valued by the Offer of Chriſt to our Souls in the Goſpel: 'Tis one part of the great Myſtery of Godlineſs, that Chriſt ſhould be preached to the Gentiles, 1 Tim. 3. 16. That the Word of this Salvation ſhould be ſent to us, Acts 13. 26. A Mercy denied to the fallen Angels, and the greateſt Part of Mankind, which aggravates the Evil of this Sin beyond all imagination. So that in refuſing or neglecting Jeſus Chriſt, is found vile ingratitude, higheſt Contempt of the Grace and Wiſdom of God; and in the event, the loſs of the only ſeaſon and opportunity of Salvation, which is never more to be recovered to all Eternity.

Inference 4.

If this be the Cauſe of all Unbelievers, it is not to be admired, that Souls under the firſt Convictions of their miſerable Condition, are plunged into ſuch deep Diſtreſſes of Spirit. It's ſaid of them, Acts 2. 37. That they were pricked at the heart, and cried out, Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? And ſo the Jailor, He came in trembling and aſtoniſhed, and ſaid, Sirs, what muſt I do to be ſaved? Certainly, if Souls apprehend themſelves under the Condemnation and Sentence of the great God, all their Tears and Tremblings, their weary Days and reſtleſs Nights, are not without juſt Cauſe and Reaſon. Thoſe that never ſaw their own miſerable Condition by the light of a clear and full Conviction, may wonder to ſee others ſo deeply diſtreſs'd in Spirit. They may miſjudge the Caſe, and call it Melancholy or Madneſs; but ſpiritual Troubles do not exceed the Cauſe and Ground of them, let them be as deep and great as they will: And indeed, it is one of the great Myſteries of Grace and Providence; a thing much unknown to Men, how ſuch poor Souls are ſupported from day to day under ſuch Fears and Sorrows as are able in a few Hours to break the ſtouteſt Spirit in the World. Luther was a Man of great natural Courage; and yet, when God let in ſpiritual Troubles upon his Soul, it is noted of him, ut nec vox, nec ſanguis ſupereſſet; he had neither Voice, nor Heat, nor Blood appearing in him.

Inference 5.

How groundleſs and irrational is the Mirth and Jollity of all carnal and unregenerate Men? They feaſt in their Priſon, and dance in their Fetters. O the Madneſs that is in the Hearts of Men! If Men did but ſee their Mittimus made for Hell, or believe they are condemned already, it were impoſſible for them to live at that rate of Vanity they do: And is their Condition leſs dangerous, becauſe it is not underſtood? Surely no; but much more dangerous for that. O poor Sinners, you have found out an effectual way to prevent your pre-resent Troubles; it were well if you could find ut a way to prevent your Eternal Misery: But is easier for a Man to stifle Conviction, than pre- ent Damnation. Your Mirth hath a twofold ischief in it; it prevents Repentance, and in- reaseth your future Torment. O what an Hell ill your Hell be, who drop into it out of all the nsitive and sinful Pleasures of this World! If ever an may say of Mirth, that it is mad; and of aughter, what doth it? He may say so in this case.

Lastly, what cause have they to rejoice, admire d praise the Lord to Eternity, who have a well- ounded confidence that they are freed from God's ondemnation? O give thanks to the Father who h deliver'd you from the power of darkness, and trans- ed you into the kingdom of his dear Son, Col. 1. 13. joice and be exceeding glad; for if you be freed m Condemnation, you are out of Satan's Pow- he hath no more any dominion over you. The wer of Satan over Men comes in by vertue of ir Condemnation, as the Power of the Jaylor Executioner over the Bodies of condemned Priso- s doth, Heb. 2. 14. If you he freed from Con- mnation, the Sting of Death smites the Souls of en with a deadly stroke only by virtue of God's ndemnating Sentence. 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. The sting death is sin, and the strength of sin is the Law. If u be freed from Condemnation now, you shall nd with Comfort and Boldness at the Judgment- of Christ in the great Day; and verily in this thing is the Love of God perfected, 1 Joh. 4. 17. O 'tis a Privilege in which the Grace, Mer- cy and Love of God doth shine forth as clearly as the Sun when it shineth in its full strentgth. And certainly you will find cause to lie at the Feet of God astonished, and overwhelmed with the sense of this Mercy, when you shall find your selves free from the Condemnation of God, whilst many o- thers as good as you were, are still under Condem- nation. Yea, your selves freed, and many of your Superiors in the world still under the curse; 1 Cor. 1. 26. Yea, your selves freed, and others that sat under the same means of Grace, and had the same external advantages you had, still in Chains, 2 Cor. 2. 16. O Brethren! This is a marvelous Deliverance; look on it which way you will, your ransom is paid, and not a penny of it by you; it cost you nothing to procure your Discharge; your Pardon is sealed in his Blood, and is irrecoverable for ever, so that you shall ne- ver any more come into condemnation. He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death to life, Joh. 5. 24.

Let them that are so delivered, spend their days on Earth in Praise and chearful Obedience; and when they die, let them not shrink away from death, nor be afraid to take it by the cold hand, it can do them no harm. Yea, let them close their dying Lips with, Thanks be to God for Jesus Christ.

SERMON XXXIII.

JOHN III. 19.

And this is the Condemnation, that Light is come into the World, and Men loved Darkness rather than Light, because their Deeds were evil.

The Aggravation of Sin and Pu- ishment of Unbe- lief under the Light of the Gospel.

OUT of the foregoing Verse it was fully prov- ed in our last Sermon, that all Christless and ngenerate Men are no better than dead Men, g condemned already. Our Saviour proceeds in Verse to aggravate the Misery of those that re- and despise him; yet farther, and to let them w, that those who remain in Unbelief, and the of Unregeneracy, must expect some greater orer Wrath than other Men; not only a simple demnation, but an aggravated and peculiar Con- ation. This is the Condemnation, that Light is &c.

the Words we find these three Parts.

The Aggravation of Sin, by the Abuse of Gospel-Light. Light is come, &c.

The Aggravation of Misery in proportion to hat Abuse of Light, This is the Condemnation.

The Cause and Occasion drawing Men into his Sin and Misery, Because their deeds were evil.

st, We have here the Aggravation of Sin by buse of Gospel-Light, Light is come. By Light e to understand the Knowledge, Discovery, Manifestation of Christ, and Redemption by n the Gospel. He is the Son of Righteous- hat arises in the Gospel upon the Nations, 1. When he came in the Flesh, then did the Day-spring from on high visit us, Luke 1. 78. And the Light may be said to come two ways, ei- ther,

First, In the means by which it is conveyed to us; or, Secondly, in the Efficacy of it upon our Minds, when it actually shines in our Souls. Light may come among a People in the means, and yet they actually remain in Darkness all the while. As it is in nature; the Sun may be up, and a ve- ry glorious Morning far advanc'd, whilst many Thousands are drouzing upon their Beds with their Curtains drawn about them: Light in the Means, we may call potential Light. Light in the Mind, we may call actual Light. It is but seldom that Light comes in the Means, and continues long among Men; but some Light must needs actually shine into their Souls also; but this actual Light is twofold.

1. Common and intellectual only to Conviction, or,
2. Special and efficacious Light, bringing the Soul to Christ, by real Conversion,

Call'd in 1 Cor. 4. 6. —— God shining into the heart. Wherever Light comes in this last sense, it is im- possible that such Men should prefer Darkness be- fore it: But it may come in the Means, yea, it may actually shine into the Consciences of Men, by those means, and convince them of their Sins, and yet Men may hate it, and chuſe Darkneſs rather than Light. And this is the Senſe of this Place, Light was come in the Goſpel-Diſpenſation among them; yea, it hath ſhined into many of their Conſciences, galled and reproved them for Sin; but they hated it, and had rather be without ſuch a troubleſome Inmate. In a word, by the coming of Light, we are here to underſtand a more clear and open Manifeſtation of Chriſt by the Goſpel than ever was made to the World before: For we are not to think that there was no Light in the World till Chriſt came, and the Goſpel was publiſh'd in the World by the Apoſtles Miniſtry. For Abraham ſaw Chriſt's Day, Joh. 8. 56. and all the Faithful before Chriſt ſaw the Promiſes (i. e.) their Accompliſhment in Chriſt afar off, Heb. 11. 13. For it was with Chriſt the Son of Righteouſneſs, as it is with the Natural Sun, that illuminates the Hemiſphere before it actually riſes, or ſhews its Body above the Horizon; but when it riſes and ſhews it ſelf, the Light is much clearer; ſo it was in this caſe. The greater therefore was their Sin, that rebelled againſt it, and preferred Darkneſs to Light; this was their Sin, with its fearful Aggravation.

Sol nondum conſpectus illuminat orbem.

Secondly, In a moſt juſt Proportion to this Sin we have here the aggravated Condemnation of them who ſinned againſt ſuch clear Goſpel-light: This is the Condemnation, this is the Judgment of all Judgments, the greateſt and moſt intolerable Judgment; a ſeverer Judgment than ever did paſs againſt any others that ſinned in the times of Ignorance and Darkneſs; they that live and die impenitent and unregenerate, how few ſoever the Means of Salvation have been which they have enjoyed, muſt be condemned; yea, the Pagan World who have no more but natural Light to help them, will be condemned by that Light; but this is the Condemnation, (i. e.) ſuch ſinning as this, is the Cauſe of the greateſt Condemnation, and ſoreſt Puniſhment, as it's called Heb. 10. 19.

Thirdly, The Cauſe and Occaſion drawing Men into this Sin and Miſery, becauſe their deeds were evil, (i. e.) the convincing Light of Truth put a great deal of Vigour and Activity into their Conſciences which they could not endure. The Accuſations and Condemnations of Conſcience are very irkſome and troubleſome things to Men: To avoid this they are willing to be ignorant. An enlighten'd Conſcience gives an Interruption alſo unto Men in their ſinful Courſes and Pleaſures; they cannot ſin at ſo eaſie a rate in the Light, as they did in Darkneſs; and this made them hate the Light as a very troubleſome thing to them. Thus you ſee what was the Sin, and what the Cauſe of both.

Hence the Obſervation is,

Doct. That the greater and clearer the Light is, under which the impenitent and unregenerate do live in this World; by ſo much greater and heavier will their Condemnation and Miſery be in the World to come.

Mat. 11. 21, 22. Wo unto thee Chorazin, wo unto thee Bethſaida; for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in ſackcloth and aſhes: but I ſay unto you, it ſhall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you. Two things require Explication in the doctrinal Part of this Point, viz.

1. How Light puts a deeper Guilt and Aggravation into Sin.

2. Why Sin ſo aggravated, makes Men liable to greater Condemnation.

Firſt, We will enquire into the Grounds and Reaſons why greater and clearer Light greatens and aggravates proportionably the Sins that are committed under it; and it will appear, that it doth ſo upon divers accounts.

Firſt, All Light (eſpecially Evangelical Light) is a great Preſervative from Sin, and an excellent Means to prevent it: 'Tis the Property of Light to inform the Judgment, and rectifie the Miſtakes and Errors of it; and thereby to give check to the Affections in the purſuit of ſinful Deſigns and Courſes: 'Tis a plain caſe, that many Men would never do as they do, if their Underſtandings were better informed. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Which none of the Princes of this World knew; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory: It was want of Light and better Information which drew them under that horrid and unparallell'd Guilt. Our Saviour alſo ſuppoſes in the Place before cited, That if Tyre and Sidon had enjoyed the ſame Light, and Means of Grace that Chorazin and Bethſaida did, they would never have been ſo ſinful as they were: Light diſcovers Danger, and thereby overaws and ſtops Men from proceeding farther in thoſe Paths and Courſes that will run them into it.

Secondly, Sinning under and againſt the Light ſuppoſes and involves it in a greater Contempt and Deſpite of God's Authority, than ſinning in Ignorance and Darkneſs doth: Every Man that breaks the Law of God, doth not in the ſame degree deſpiſe and ſlight the Authority of the Law-maker. But when a Man hath Light to diſcover the Evil and the Danger of what he doth, and yet will dare to do it, what is this but the treading of God's Authority under foot? The caſting of his Word behind our Backs? Wilful ſinning is a deſpiteful ſinning againſt God, Heb. 26. it argues a low and vile Eſteem of the Law of God, which is reverend and holy: and by ſo much the more it makes Sin to be exceeding ſinful.

Thirdly, Sinning under, and againſt the Light admits not of thoſe Excuſes and Pleas to extenuate the Offence, which Sins of pure Ignorance do. Thoſe that live without the Sound of the Goſpel may ſay, Lord, we never heard of Chriſt and the great Redemption wrought by him; if we had, we would never have lived and acted as we did. And therefore Chriſt ſaith, Joh. 15. 22. If I had not come and ſpoken unto them, they had not had ſin, but now they have no cloak for their ſin.

The meaning is, that if the Goſpel-Light had not ſhined among them, their Sin had not been of that deep guilt that now it is: For now it is foul and heinous by reaſon of the Light under, againſt which it is committed, that they have no Pretence or Excuſe to extenuate or mitigate it.

Fourthly, Evangelical Light is a very rich Fruit and Mercy of God to Men; one of the choiceſt Gifts beſtowed upon the Nations of the World; and therefore it's ſaid, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. He ſhewed his word unto Jacob, and his ſtatutes and his judgments unto Iſrael: He hath not dealt ſo with any nation; and as for his judgments they have not known them. Other Nations have Corn and Wine, Gold and Silver, abundance of earthly Delights and Pleaſures: but they have not a Beam of heavenly Light ſhining upon them. We may account this Mercy ſmall, but God, who is beſt able to value the worth of things, accounts it great. Hoſ. 8. 12. I have written them the great things of my Law. Christ reckoned Capernaum to be exalted unto Heaven by the Ministry of the Gospel in that place. Now the greater the Mercy is which the Light of Truth brings with it; by so much the more horrid and heinous must the abusing and despising of it be.

Fifthly, Sinning against the Light, argues a Love to Sin, as Sin; to naked Sin without any Disguise or Covert. It is nothing so bad for a Man to sin through a Mistake of Judgment, when he thinks that to be lawful which is indeed sinful: He doth not now close with Sin, as Sin; but he either closes with it as his Duty, or at least, his Liberty. 'Tis hard for Satan to persuade many Men to embrace a naked Sin; and therefore he cloaths it in the Habit of a Duty or Liberty, and thereby deceives and draws Men to the Commission of it. But if a Man have Light shining into his Conscience, and convincing him that the way he is in, is the way of Sin, quite contrary to the revealed Will of God; stripping the Sin naked before the Eye of his Conscience, so that he hath no covert or excuse, and yet will persist in it: This, I say, argues a Soul to be in love with sin, as sin. Now as for a Man to love Grace, as Grace, is a solid Argument to prove the Truth of his Grace; so on the contrary, for a Man to love sin as sin, doth not only argue him to be in the state of sin, but to be in the fore-front, and amongst the highest rank of sinners.

Sixthly, The greater and clearer the Light is, under and against which Men continue in sin, the more must the Consciences of such Sinners be supposed to be wasted and violated by such a way of sinning: For this is a sure Rule, that the greatest Violation of Conscience is the greatest Sin. Conscience is a noble and tender Part of the Soul of Man; it is in the Soul as the Eye in the Body, very sensible of the least Injury; and a Wound in the Conscience is like a Blow in the Eye: But nothing gives a greater Blow to Conscience, nothing so much wastes it and destroys it, as sins against the Light do. This puts a plain force upon the Conscience, and gives a dreadful stab to that noble Power, God's Vicegerent in the Soul. And thus you see the first thing made good that Light puts deep Guilt and Aggravation into sin.

Maxima violatio conscientiæ est maximum peccatum.

Secondly, In the next place, let us examine why sin so aggravated by the Light, makes Men liable to the greater Condemnation: For that it doth so, is beyond all debate or question; else the Apostle Peter would not have said of those Sinners against Light as he doth, 2 Pet. 2. 21. That it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness. Nor would Christ have told the Inhabitants of Chorazin or Bethsaida, that it should be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the Day of Judgment, than for them. There is a twofold Reason of this.

1. Ex parte Dei, on God's part.
2. Ex parte peccatoris, on the Sinner's part.

First, Ex parte Dei, on God's part, who is the righteous Judge of the whole Earth; and will therefore render unto every Man according to the different Degrees of their sins. Now that there are different degrees of sin, is abundantly clear from what we have lately discoursed under the former Head; where we have shewed, that the Light under which Men sin, puts extraordinary Aggravations upon their sins; answerable whereunto will the degrees of Punishment be awarded by the righteous Judge of Heaven and Earth. The Gentiles who had no other Light of Nature, will be condemned for disobeying the Law of God written upon their Hearts: But yet the greater wrath is reserved for them who sin both against the Light of Nature, and the Light of the Gospel also; and therefore it is said, Rom 2. 9. Tribulation and Anguish upon every soul of Man that doeth evil; of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile. Impenitent Jews and Gentiles will all be condemned at the Bar of God: but with this difference, to the Jew first, (i. e.) principally and especially, because the Light and Mercy which he abused and violated, were far greater than those bestow'd upon the Gentiles, because unto them were committed the Oracles of God: and God had not dealt with any Nation as with that Nation. Indeed in the Rewards of Obedience the same Reason doth not hold: He that came into the Vineyard the last Hour of the day, may be equal in Reward with him that bare the Heat and Burthen of the whole day; because the Reward is of Grace and Bounty, not of Debt and Merit: but it is not so here, Justice observes an exact proportion in distributing Punishments according to the Degrees, Deserts and Measures of Sin; and therefore it is said concerning Babylon, Rev. 18. 7. How much she hath gloried her self, and lived deliciously; so much torment and sorrow give her.

Secondly, Ex parte Peccatoris, upon the account of Sinners, it must needs be, that the heaviest Wrath and most intolerable Torments should be the portion of them who have sinned against the clearest Light and Means of Grace; for we find in the Scripture-Account, that a principal and special part of the Torment of the damned will arise from their own Consciences, Mar. 9. 44. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And nothing is more manifest than this, that if Conscience be the Tormenter of the damned, then Sinners against Light must needs have the greatest Torments. For,

First, The more Knowledge any Man had in this world, the more was his Conscience violated and abused here, by sinning against it: And O what work will these Violations and Abuses make for a tormenting Conscience in Hell! With what rage and fury will it then avenge it self upon the most stout, daring and impudent Sinner! The more Guilt now, the more rage and fury then.

Secondly, The more Knowledge or means of Knowledge any Man hath enjoyed in this World, so much the more matter is prepared and laid up for Conscience to upbraid him with in the place of Torments; and the upbraidings of Conscience are a special part of the Torments of the damned. O what a Peal will Conscience ring in the Ears of such Sinners! Did not I warn thee of the Issue of such sins, undone Wretch? How often did I strive with thee, if it had been possible to take thee off from thy course of sinning, and to escape this Wrath? Did not I often cry out in thy Bosom, stop thy course, sinner? Hearken to my counsel, turn and live; but thou wouldest not hearken to my Voice? I forewarned thee of this Danger, but thou slightedst all my Warnings; thy Lusts were too strong for my Light, and now thou seest whither thy way tended, but alas too late!

Thirdly, The more Knowledge or Means of Knowledge any Man hath abused and neglected in in this World, ſo many fair Opportunities and great Advantages he hath loſt for Heaven, and the more Opportunities and Advantages he hath had for Heaven, the more intolerable will Hell be to that Man; as the Mercy was great which was offer'd by them, ſo the Torment will be unſpeakable that will ariſe from the Loſs of them. Sinners, you have now a wide and open door, many bleſſed Opportunities of ſalvation under the Goſpel, it hath put you in a fair way for everlaſting Happineſs. Many of you are not far from the Kingdom of God; there will be time enough in Hell to reflect upon this Loſs. What think you, will it not be ſad to think there? O how fair was I once for Heaven, to have been with God, and among yonder Saints! My Conſcience was once convinc'd, and my Affections melted under the Goſpel. I was almoſt perſuaded to be a Chriſtian indeed, the Bargain was almoſt made betwixt Chriſt and my Soul; there were but a few points in difference betwixt us; but Wretch that I was, at thoſe points the bargain ſtruck, and there the Treaty ended, to my eternal Ruin. I could not deny my Luſts, I could not live under the ſtrict Yoak of Chriſt's Government; but now I muſt live under the inſupportable Wrath of the righteous and terrible God for ever; and this Torment will be peculiar to ſuch as periſh under the Goſpel. The Heathen who enjoyed no ſuch means, can therefore have no ſuch Reflections; nay, the very Devils themſelves, who never had ſuch a Plank after their ſhipwreck, I mean, a Mediator in their nature, or ſuch Terms of reconciliation offer'd them, will not reflect upon their loſt opportunities of recovering, as ſuch ſinners muſt, and will; this therefore is the condemnation, that light is come into the world; but men loved darkneſs rather than light.

Infer. 1. Hence it follows, that neither Knowledge, nor the beſt means of Knowledge, are in themſelves ſufficient to ſecure Men from Wrath to come. Light in it ſelf is a choice Mercy, and therefore the Means that begat and encreaſed it, muſt be ſo too; but yet it is a Mercy liable to the greateſt Abuſe, and the Abuſe of the beſt Mercies brings forth the greateſt Miſeries. Alas, Chriſtians, your Duty is but half learnt when you know it; Obedience to Light makes Light a Bleſſing indeed, Joh. 13. 17. If ye know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them. Happineſs is not entailed upon ſimple knowing, but upon doing; upon obedience to our Knowledge; otherwiſe, he that encreaſeth Knowledge, doth but encreaſe Sorrow: for that ſervant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himſelf, nor did according to his will, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, Luk. 12. 47. And to him that knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is ſin, Jam. 4. 17. We are bound with all thankfulneſs to acknowledge the Bounty of Heaven to this ſinful generation, in furniſhing us with ſo many excellent means of Light beyond many other Nations and Generations that are paſt; but yet we ought to rejoice with trembling when we conſider the Abuſes of Light in this wanton Age, and what a diſmal Event is like to happen unto many thouſands among us. I fear, the time is coming when many among us will wiſh they had never ſet Foot on Engliſh ground. God hath bleſſed this Nation with many famous burning and ſhining Lights; it was once ſaid to the Honour of this Nation, that the Engliſh Miniſtry was the World's Wonder; and when a Man of another Nation began to preach methodically and convincingly, they were wont to ſay, We perceive this Man hath been in England; the greater will our account be for abuſing ſuch Light, and rebelling againſt it; the clearer our Light is now, the thicker will the Miſts of Darkneſs be hereafter, if we thus wantonize under it. The Devils have more Light than we, and therefore the more Torment; of them it is ſaid, Jam. 2. 19. The Devils alſo believe and tremble; the Horror of their Conſciences is anſwerable to their Illumination, they tremble; the Word ſignifies the Rote of the Sea, or ſuch a Murmuring dreadful Noiſe as the tempeſtuous Seas uſe to make when they break themſelves againſt the Rocks.

Infer. 2. If the Abuſe of Light thus aggravates Sin and Miſery, then times of great Temptation are like to be times of deep Guilt. Wo to an enlighten'd knowing Generation when ſtrong Temptations befal them. How do many in ſuch times impriſon the known Truth, to keep themſelves out of Priſon? offer Violence to their own Conſciences, to avoid Violence from other hands? * Plato was convinced of the Unity of God, but durſt not own his own Convictions; but ſaid, it was a Truth neither eaſie to find, nor ſafe to own. And even † Seneca, the renowned Moraliſt, was forced by Temptation to diſſemble his Conviction; of whom ‡ Auguſtin ſaith, he worſhipped what himſelf reprehended; and did what himſelf reproved; and even a great Papiſt of latter times, was heard to ſay as he was going to Maſs, Eamus ad communem errorem, Let us go to the common Error. O how hard is it to keep Conſcience pure and peaceable in Days of Temptation! Doubtleſs it is a Mercy to many weak and timorous Chriſtians to be remov'd by a ſeaſonable death out of harms way, to be diſbanded by a merciful Providence before the heat of the Battel. Chriſt and Antichriſt ſeem at this day to be drawing into the Field, a fiery Trial threatens the Profeſſors of this Age; but when it comes to a cloſe grapple indeed, we may juſtly tremble to think how many thouſands will break their way through the Convictions of their own Conſciences to ſave their Fleſh. Believe it, Sirs, if Chriſt hold you to himſelf by no other Tye than the ſlender Thread of a ſingle conviction, if he have not Intereſt in your Hearts and Affections, as well as in your Underſtandings and Conſciences; if you be Men of great Light and ſtrong unmortified Luſts; if you profeſs Chriſt with your Tongues, and worſhip the World with your Hearts; a Man may ſay of you without the gift of Prophecy, what the Prophet ſaid of Hazael, I know what ye will do in the day of temptation.

Infer. 3. If this be ſo, what a ſtrange Engagement lieth upon all enlighten'd Perſons to turn heartily to God, and reduce their Knowledge into Practice and Obedience? The more Men know, the more violence they do to their own Conſciences in rebelling againſt the Light: This is to ſin with an high hand, Num. 15. 30. Believe it, Sirs, you cannot ſin at ſo cheap a rate as others do: Knowledge in a wicked Man, like like high mettle in a blind horſe, doth but the ſooner precipitate him into Ruin. You may know much more than others; but if ever you come to Heaven, it muſt be in the ſame way of Faith and Obedience, Mortification and Self-denial in which the weakeſt Chriſtian comes thither; whatever Knowledge you have, to be ſure you have no Wiſdom, if you expect Salvation upon any other or eaſier Terms, than the moſt illiterate Chriſtian finds it. It was a ſad Obſervation of the Father, Surgunt indocti, & rapiunt cælum, the Unlearned riſe, and take Heaven. What a pity 'tis that Men of ſuch excellent Parts ſhould be enſlaved to their Luſts! that ever it ſhould be ſaid, Sapientes ſapienter deſcendunt in Gehennam, their Learning doth but hang in their Light, it doth but blind them in ſpiritual things, and prepareth them for greater Miſery.

Infer. 4. Hence it alſo follows, that the Work of Converſion is a very difficult Work; the Soul is ſcarcely half won to Chriſt, when Satan is caſt out of the Underſtanding by Illuminations. The Devil hath deeply intrenched himſelf, and ſtrongly fortified every Faculty of the Soul againſt Chriſt. The Underſtanding indeed is the firſt Entrance into the Soul, and out of that Faculty he is oftentimes expulſed by Light and Conviction, which ſeems to make a great Change upon a Man. Now he becomes a Profeſſor, now he takes up the Duties of Religion and paſſes up and down the World for a Convert; but alas, alas! all the while Satan keeps the Fort Royal, the Heart, and Will are in his own poſſeſſion; and this is a Work of more difficulty. The Weapons of that Warfare muſt indeed be mighty thro' God, which do not only caſt down Imaginations, but bring every Thought of the Heart into captivity to the obedience of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. While the Heart ſtands out, tho' the Underſtanding be taken in, the Soul remains in Satan's poſſeſſion; 'tis a greater Work (and we daily find it) to win one Heart, than to convince twenty Underſtandings.

Infer. 5. Hence alſo we may learn what Strength and Power there is in the Luſts of Mens Hearts, which are able to bear down ſo ſtrong Convictions of the Conſcience before them. That is a great Truth, tho' a very ſad one, Eccleſ. 8. 11. The heart of the ſons of men is fully ſet in them to do evil. O how common it is every day, and in every place to ſee Men hazarding their Souls to ſatisfie their Luſts! Every Man, ſaith the Prophet, turneth to his courſe, as the horſe ruſheth into the battel. The Horſe is a very fierce and warlike Creature; and when his courage is rouzed by the ſound of Trumpets and ſhouts of Armies, he breaks headlong into the Ranks of armed Men, though Death be before him. Such boiſterous and headlong Luſts are found in many enlighten'd Perſons, though their Conſciences repreſent Damnation before them, onward they will ruſh, though God be loſt, and a precious Soul undone for ever Infer. 6. To conclude, As ever you will avoid the deepeſt Guilt, and eſcape the heavieſt Condemnation, open your hearts to obey and practiſe whatſoever God hath opened your Underſtandings and Conſciences to receive on his revealed Will; Obey the Light of the Goſpel while you have Opportunity to enjoy it; this was the great Counſel given by Chriſt, Joh. 12. 35, 36. Yet a little while the Light is with you, walk whilſt you have the Light, leſt Darkneſs come upon you. The Manifeſtation of Chriſt in the Goſpel is the Light of the World; all the Nations of the Earth, that want this Light, are benighted; and thoſe upon whom this Light is riſen, have but ſhort time under it; yet a little while the Light is with you, and whatever Patience God may exerciſe towards poor ignorant Souls, yet commonly he makes ſhort Work with the Deſpiſers of this Light; the Light of the Goſpel is a ſhining Lamp, fed with golden Oil. God will not be at the Expence of ſuch a Light for them that do but trifle with it. The Night is coming when no Man can work: There are many ſad ſigns upon us of a ſetting Sun; a Night of Darkneſs approaching; many burning and ſhining Lights are extinguiſhed and many put under a Buſhel; your work is great, your time ſhort, this is the only ſpace you have for Repentance, Rev. 2. 21. If this Opportunity of Salvation be loſt, it will never come again, Ezek. 24. 13. How pathetical was that Lamentation which Chriſt made over Jeruſalem, Luke 19. 41, 42. And when he was come near he beheld the City, and wept over it, ſaying, If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes. Chriſt is threatening theſe Nations with the Removal of his Goſpel Preſence; he hath found but cold Entertainment among us. England hath been unkind to Chriſt; many thouſands there are that rebel againſt the Light, that ſay unto God, depart from us, we deſire not the Knowledge of thy Ways. Chriſt will not tarry where he is not welcome; who would, that hath any whither elſe to go? Obey the Light therefore, leſt God put it out in obſcure Darkneſs.

SERMON XXXIV.

2 COR. IV. 3, 4.

But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt; in whom the God of this World hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them.

The blinding Power of Satan operates the Cauſe of Belief, and Forerunner of Deſtruction; News of Deliverance ſhould make the Hearts of Captives leap for Joy. The Tidings of a Saviour ſhould tranſport the Heart of a loſt Sinner. A Man would think a little Rhetorick might perſuade the naked Soul of a Sinner to put on the rich Robes of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, which coſt him nothing but Acceptance; or the periſhing ſtarving ſtarving Sinner to accept the Bread of God which cometh down from Heaven, and giveth Light unthe World. This is the great Deſign I have managed in this whole Diſcourſe; the Centre to which all theſe Lines are drawn; many Arguments have been uſed, and many Ways attempted to prevail with Men to apply and put on Chriſt, and I am afraid, all too little. I have but labour'd in vain, and ſpent my Strength for nought; all theſe Diſcourſes are but the beating of the Air, and few, if any, will be perſuaded to come unto Chriſt, who is clearly opened, and freely offered in the Goſpel to them. For alas, while I am reaſoning, Satan is blinding their Minds with falſe Reaſonings and contrary Perſuaſions; the God of this World turns away the Ears, and draws away the Hearts of almoſt the whole World from Chriſt; The God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them. Satan is a great and jealous Prince, and is well aware, that ſo many of his Subjects as ſhall be brought to ſee the Miſery of their condition, will never endure to abide any longer in ſubjection to him: 'Tis therefore his great Policy to put out their Eyes, that he may ſecure their Souls; to darken their Underſtandings, that he may keep his Intereſt firm and entire in their Wills and Affections; and this makes the effectual Application of Chriſt ſo great a Difficulty; that upon the contrary, it is juſt Matter of Admiration, that any Soul is perſuaded and prevailed with, to quit the ſervice of Satan, and come to Chriſt. And therefore in the laſt place, to diſcover the great difficulty of Converſion, and ſhew you where it is that all our Endeavours ſtick and ſet, ſo that we can move the Deſign no further, with all our tugging and ſtriving, reaſoning and perſuading; as alſo to mourn over and bewail the Miſery of Chriſtleſs and unregenere Souls, with whom we muſt part upon the ſaddeſt Terms; I have choſen this Scripture, which is of a moſt awakening nature, if haply the Lord at laſt may perſuade any ſoul to come over to Chriſt thereby.

Theſe Words come into the Apoſtles Diſcourſe, by way of Prolepſis; he had been ſpeaking in the former Chapter of the tranſcendent Excellency of the Goſpel above the Law; and among other reſpects he prefers it to the Law in point of Clearneſs. The Law was an obſcure and cloudy Diſpenſation, there was a Veil upon the Face of Moſes, and the Hearts of the People, that they ſhould not ſee to the End of that which is aboliſhed; but under the Goſpel we all with open Face behold as in a Glaſs, the Glory of the Lord. Againſt this Diſcourſe the Apoſtle foreſaw and obviated this Objection. If your Goſpel be ſo clear, what is the reaſon that many who live under the Miniſtration of it (and they none of the meaneſt neither, for Wiſdom and Underſtanding) do yet ſee no Glory nor Excellency in it? To this he returns in the Words I have read, If our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt, whoſe Eyes the God of this World hath blinded, &c. q. d. 'Tis true, Multitudes there are who ſee no Glory in Chriſt or the Goſpel, but the fault is not in either; but in the Minds of them that believe not. The Sun ſhines forth in its Glory, but the Blind ſee no Glory in it; the Fault is not in the Sun, but in the Eye. In the Words themſelves we have three Parts to conſider.

1. A dreadful ſpiritual Judgment inflicted.
2. The wicked Inſtrument by whom it is inflicted.
3. The politick manner in which he doth it.

Firſt, We have here a very dreadful ſpiritual Judgment inflicted upon the Souls of Men, viz. the hiding of the Goſpel from them; if our Goſpel be hid. For theſe Words εἰ δὲ καὶ ἔστι, are a Conceſſion, that ſo it is; a very ſad, but undeniable Truth. Many there are that ſee no Beauty in Chriſt, nor Neceſſity of him; though both are ſo plainly and evidently revealed in our Goſpel; if our Goſpel be hid: 'tis called our Goſpel, not as if St. Paul and the other Preachers of it, were the Authors and Inventers of it; but our Goſpel, becauſe we are the Preachers and Diſpenſers of it. We are put in truſt with the Goſpel, and though we preach it in the Demonſtration of the Spirit and of Power, uſing all plainneſs of ſpeech to make Men underſtand it; yet it is hid from many under our Miniſtry. 'Tis hid from their Underſtandings, they ſee no Glory in it; Our Goſpel, notwithſtanding all our Endeavours, is a hidden Goſpel unto ſome; this is the ſoreſt and moſt dreadful Judgment.

Secondly, We have here an account of that wicked Inſtrument by whom this Judgment is inflicted, viz. Satan, called here (by a Mimeſis) the God of this World; not ſimply and properly, but becauſe he chalenges to himſelf the Honour of a God, rules over a vaſt Empire, and hath multitudes of Souls, even the greater part of the World in ſubjection, and blind obedience to his Government.

Thirdly, Here alſo we have an account of the politick manner of his Government, how he maintains his Dominion among Men, and keeps the World in quiet ſubjection to him; namely, by blinding the Minds of all them that believe not; putting out the Eyes of all his Subjects, darkning that noble Faculty, the Mind or Underſtanding; the thinking, conſidering and reaſoning Soul which the Philoſophers truly call τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν, the leading and directing Faculty: For it is to the Soul what Eyes are to the Body, and it is therefore called the Eyes of the Underſtanding, Eph. 1. 18. Theſe Eyes Satan blinds (i. e.) he darkens the Mind and Underſtanding with Ignorance and Error; ſo that when Men come to ſee and conſider ſpiritual things, they ſee indeed, but perceive not, Iſa. 6. 9, 10. They have ſome general confuſed Notions, but no diſtinct, powerful and effectual Apprehenſions of thoſe things: And this is the way indeed, none like it, to bar Men effectually from Jeſus Chriſt, and hinder the Application of the Benefits of Redemption to their Souls. 'Tis true, the righteous God permits all this to be done by Satan upon the Souls of Men: but whereſoever he finally prevails thus to blind them, it is, as the Text ſpeaks, ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, in them that are loſt, or appointed of God unto Perdition. The Elect of God are all blinded for a time, but Chriſt applyeth unto them his Eye-ſalve: Effectually opens the Eyes of their Underſtandings, and recovers them thereby out of Satan's Power and Dominion: But as for thoſe who ſtill continue thus blinded, they the Symptoms and Characters of Eternal Death appear upon their ſouls; they are a company of loſt Men.

Doct. That the Underſtandings of all Unbelievers are blinded by Satan's Policies, in order to their everlaſting Perdition.

Four Things muſt be opened in the doctrinal art of this Point.

Firſt, What the Blinding of the Underſtanding, hiding of the Goſpel from the Underſtanding

Secondly, I ſhall demonſtrate that the Underndings of many are thus blinded, and the Goel hidden from them.

Thirdly, I ſhall ſhew what Policies Satan uſes to ind the Minds of Men.

Fourthly, That this Blindneſs is the ſoreſt Judgent, and in order to Mens everlaſting Perdition.

Fifthly, And then apply the whole.

Firſt, We ſhall enquire what the Blinding of Mind, or hiding the Goſpel from it is. Two ts of Men are thus blinded in the World.

1 Thoſe that want the Means of Illumination.

2 Thoſe that have the Means, but are denied the eſſing and Efficacy of them.

The former is the Caſe of the Pagan World, who Midnight Darkneſs, for want of the Goſpel. he latter is the Caſe of the Chriſtian World. The eateſt Part of them that live within the Sound of Goſpel, being blinded by the God of this World, . 6. 9, 10. And he ſaid, Go, and tell this People; ye indeed, but underſtand not; and ſee ye indeed, perceive not: Make the Heart of this People fat, make their Ears heavy; and ſhut their Eyes, leſt ſee with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears, and erſtand with their Heart, and convert and be healed. us when the Son of Righteouſneſs actually a- in the World, it is ſaid, John 1. 5. The light ed in darkneſs, but the darkneſs comprehended it not. we may ſay of all that Light which is in the derſtanding of all Unbelievers, what Job ſpeaks he Grave, Job 10. 22. That the light there is as neſs. But more particularly to open the nature his ſpiritual Bleſſedneſs, I will ſhew you,

. What it is not oppoſed unto.

. What it is oppoſed unto.

irſt, Let us examine what ſpiritual Blindneſs, or hiding the Goſpel from the Minds of Men is oppoſed unto: And we ſhall find, irſt, That it is not oppoſed unto natural Wiſ; a Man may be of an acute and clear Underding; Eagle-eyed to diſcern the Myſteries Nature, and yet the Goſpel may be hidden from . Who were more ſagacious and quick-ſighted natural Things, than the heathen Philoſophers, own'd for Wiſdom in their Generation? Yet them the Goſpel was but Fooliſhneſs, 1 Cor. 1. 1. S. Auguſtine confeſſeth that before his Conon, he was filled with Offence and Contempt e Simplicity of the Goſpel. Dedignubar eſſe parus, ſaith he, I ſcorned to become a Child again. that great Bradwardine, the profound Doctor, was learned, uſque ad ſtuporem, even to a Wonprofeſſed that when he firſt read Paul's Epiſtles, eſpiſed them, becauſe he found not in them, phyſicum ingenium, thoſe Metaphyſical Notions h he expected. Upon this Account it was Chriſt brake forth into that Pathetical Gratun of his Father's Love to the Elect, Mat. 11. 25. at time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O r, Lord of Heaven and Earth; becauſe thou haſt eſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt real them unto babes.

ondly, It is not oppoſed to all Light and wledge in ſpiritual Truths. And Man may a true Underſtanding of the Scriptures, give rthodox Expoſition of them, and enlighten Minds of others by them; and yet the Goſpel may be hidden from himſelf, Matt. 7. 22. Many will ſay unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy name? So, Rom. 2. 19. And are confident that thou thy ſelf art a guide of the blind, a light to them that ſit in darkneſs, &c. A Man ſhew others the way to Chriſt and Salvation, whilſt both are hid from himſelf.

Thirdly, It is not oppoſed to all manner of Influences upon the Affections; for it is poſſible the Goſpel may touch the Affections themſelves, and cauſe ſome ſweet Motions and Raptures in them; and yet be an hidden Goſpel to the Soul, Heb 6. 5, 9.

Secondly, But if theſe three Things may conſiſt with ſpiritual Blindneſs, unto what then is it oppoſed? To which I anſwer, that ſpiritual Blindneſs ſtands only oppoſed unto that ſaving Manifeſtation of Jeſus Chriſt in the Goſpel, by the Spirit whereof the Soul is regenerated, and effectually changed by a real Converſion unto God: Where ever the Goſpel thus comes in the Demonſtration of the Spirit, and of Power; producing ſuch an Effect as this in the Soul; it is no longer an hidden Goſpel to that Soul, tho' ſuch Perſons do not ſee clearly all the Glory which is revealed by the Goſpel: tho' they know but in part, and ſee darkly as through a Glaſs; yet the Eyes of their Underſtandings are open'd, and the things which belong to their Peace are not hidden from them.

Secondly, But tho' this be the Happineſs of ſome Men, yet it is demonſtrable, that the Eyes of many are blinded by the God of this World, and the Goſpel is an hidden Goſpel from them; for, Firſt, Many that live under the Goſpel are ſo entirely ſwallowed up in the Affairs of this World, that they allow themſelves no Time to ponder the great Concernment of their Souls in the World to come; and judge you what ever the Gifts and Knowledge of theſe Men are, whether the God of this World hath not blinded their Eyes. If it were not ſo, it were impoſſible that ever they ſhould thus waſt the moſt precious Opportunities of Salvation, upon which their everlaſting well-being depends, and ſpend Time at the Door of Eternity about Trifles which ſo little concern them. Yet this is the Caſe of the greateſt Number that go under the Chriſtian Name. The Earth hath opened her Mouth, and ſwallowed up their Time, Thoughts, Studies and Strength, as it did the Bodies of Corah and his Accomplicies. The firſt, the freeſt, and upon the Matter, the whole of their Time is devoted to the Service of the World; for even at that very Time when they preſent their Bodies before the Lord in the Duties of his Worſhip, their Hearts are wandring after Vanities, and going after their Covetouſneſs, Ezek. 43. 31. Judge whether the God of the World hath blinded theſe Men or no, who can ſee ſo much Beauty in the World, but none in Chriſt, and put ſuch an abſolute Neceſſity upon the Vanities of this World, but none upon their own Salvation. If this be not ſpiritual Blindneſs, what is?

Secondly, The great Stillneſs and Quietneſs of Mens Conſciences under the rouzing and awakening Truths of the Goſpel, plainly proves that the God of this World hath blinded their Eyes. For did Men ſee and apprehend the Dangerous Condition they are in, as the Word repreſents it; nothing in the World would quiet them but Chriſt. As ſoon as Mens Eyes come to be open'd, the next enquiry they make, is, What ſhall we do to be ſav'd? It is not not poſſible that a Man ſhould hang over Hell, see Christ and the Hopes of Salvation going, and yet be quiet. O it cannot be, that Conscience should let them be quiet in such a Case, if it were not blinded and stupify'd; but whilst the God of this World, that strong man armed, keepeth the house, all his goods are in peace, Luke 11. 20. If once your Eyes were opened by Conviction, a Man may then say, be quiet if you can; sit still, and let the Hopes and Seasons of Salvation pass quietly away if you can. Suppose one should come into the Congregation, and whisper but such a Word as this in your Ears, your Child is fallen into the fire, and is dying, since you came from home; will it be in the Power of all the Friends you have, to quiet you, and make you still after such an Information? much less when a Man apprehends his own Soul in immediate Danger of everlasting Burnings.

Thirdly, The strong Confidences and presumptuous Hopes Men have of Salvation, whilst they remain in the State of Nature, and unregeneracy, plainly shews their Minds to be blinded by the Policy of Satan. This Presumption is one of those strong false Reasonings, by which Satan deludes the Understanding, as the Apostle calls them, Jam. 1. 22. 'Tis the cunning Sophistry of the Devil, farthered by Self-love, Prov. 21 2 Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, and partly by Self-ignorance, Rev. 3. 17. Thou saidst I am rich, and have need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art poor. You have no Fears, no Doubts, no Case to propound that concerns your future State; and why so? but because you have no Sight, your Consciences are quieted because your Eyes are blinded.

Fourthly, The trifling of Men with the Duties of Religion, plainly discovers the blinding Power of Satan upon their Minds and Understandings, else they would never play and dally with the serious and solemn Ordinances of God, at that Rate they do; if their Eyes were once opened, they would be in earnest in Prayer, and apply themselves with the closest Attention of Mind in hearing the Gospel. There are two sorts of Thoughts about any Subject of Meditation. Some think at Distance, and others think close to the Subject. Never do the Thoughts of Men come so close to Christ, to Heaven and to Hell, as they do immediately upon their Illumination. When John's Ministry enlightened the Peoples Minds, it is said Matt. 11. 12. From the days of John the Baptist until now, the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. Surely these Men were more in good earnest, that would receive no Repulse, take no Denial, but even force themselves thro' all Difficulties into Heaven; and so would it be with you. If the God of this World had not blinded your Minds, you would never pray with so much Unconcernedness, nor hear with so much Oscitancy and Carelessness; pray, as if you pray'd not, and hear as if you heard not. It is with many of our Hearts, as it was with Aristotle, who after a quaint Oration made before him, was asked how he liked it; truly, said he, I did not hear it; for I was thinking all the while of another Matter.

Fifthly, This also is a plain Evidence, that the God of this World hoth blinded many Mens Eyes among us, for that they fear not to commit great Sins, to avoid small Hazards and Troubles, which all the World could never persuade them to do, if they were not hoodwink'd by the God of this World. Those that have seen sin as sin in the Glass of God's Law, will choose, as Moses did, suffer any Affliction with the People of God, rather than enjoy the Pleasures of Sin, which are but for a season, Heb. 11. 25. Those that have seen and felt the Evil of Sin in the deep Troubles of their Spirit for it, will account all Reproaches, all Losses, all Sufferings from Men, to be but Flea-bitings to the Burthen of Sin.

Sixthly, The Pride and Self-conceitedness of many Thousands who profess Christianity, plainly shew their Minds to be blinded by the Sophistry of Satan, and that they do not understand themselves and the woful state of their own souls. Those that see God in the cleerest Light, abhor themselves in the deepest Humility, Isa. 6. 5. Job 42. If ever the Lord had effectually opened your eyes by a clear Discovery of your state by Nature, and the course of your Life under the Efficacy and Influence of continual Temptations and Corruptions, how would your Plumes fall? None in the World wou'd rate you lower, than you your selves would. By all which it appears, that Multitudes are blinded by the God of this World.

Thirdly, In the third place, we are to consider what Policies Satan useth to blind the Minds of them that believe not, and we shall find there are three sorts of Policies practised by the God of this World upon the Minds and Understandings of Men, which he darkens, by

1. Hindering the Reception of Gospel-Light.
2. Obstructing the Efficacy of it when received.
3. Making Misapplication of it to other Purposes.

First, It is a great Policy in Satan to blind the Understandings of Men, by hindering and preventing the Reception of Gospel-Light, which doth especially these five ways;

First, By tempting the Dispensers of the Gospel, to darken the Truths thereof in their delivering of them, to shoot over the Heads of the Hearers, in lofty Language and Terms of Art, that common Understandings can give no account when the Sermon is done, what the Preacher would have, but however commend him for a good Scholar, and an excellent Orator. I make no doubt but the Devil is very busie with Ministers in their Studies, tempting them by the Pride of their own Hearts to gratifie his Design here, he teaches them how to paint the Glass, that might keep out the Light.

I acknowledge, a proper, grave and comely Style befits the Lips of Christ's Ambassadors, they should not be rude and careless in their Language or Method. But this Affectation of great swelling words of Vanity, is but too like the proud Gnosticks, which the Apostle is supposed to tax for this Evil, Jude Ver. 16. This is to darken Counsel, by words without knowledge, Job 38. 2. To amuse and benight poor ignorant souls, and nullifie the design of Preaching; for every thing is accounted so far good as it is good to the end it is ordained for. A sword that hath an Hilt of Gold set thick with Diamonds is no good sword if it hath no edge to cut, or want a good back to follow home the stroke. So that the Ministers of Christ would chuse rather to found than great Words, such as are apt to pierce the Heart, rather than h as tickle the Fancy, and let People beware of thering the Design of Satan against their own h's, in putting a Temptation upon their Mini- rs, by despising plain Preaching. The more ular plain, and intelligible our Discourses are, much the more probable they are to be succes- ; that is the most excellent Oratory that per- des Men to Christ.

Secondly, Satan hinders the Access of Light to Understandings of Men, by imploying their nds about impertinent things, while they are nding upon the Ordinances of God, Thus he pted them in Ezek. 33. 31, 32. And they come thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee, people; and they hear thy Words, but they will do them; for with their Mouth they shew much but their Heart goeth after their Covetousness. lo! thou art unto them as a very lovely Song of one hath a pleasant Voice. The Modulation of the phet's Voice was very pleasing to their Ears, mean while their Fancies and Thoughts were ding after their Lusts, their Hearts were full arthly Projects.

Thirdly, Satan hinders the Access of Light to the erstandings of Men, by raising Objections, picking Quarrels with the Word, on purpose ake its Authority, and hinder the Assent of Understanding to it, and so the Word makes nore Impression than a Fable or a Romance ld do. And never did this Design of Satan in more than in this Atheistical Age, wherein main Pillars and Foundation of Religion are en in the Minds of Multitudes. The Devil persuaded many, that the Gospel is but a ingly devised Fable; Fabula Christi, as that heming Pope called it; That Ministers must omething to get a Living. That Heaven and are but Fancies, or at most, Things of great rainty and doubtful credit. This being once ned, the Door of the soul is shut against h. And this Design of Satan hath prospered ore in this Generation, by the corrupt Do- s of seducing Spirits, which have overthrown ith of some, 2 Tim. 2. 18. And partly from candalous Lives of loose and vain Professors, Gospel hath been brought into Contempt; specially by Satan's artificial Improvement of orrupt Natures of Men, in an Age wherein cience hath been so much debauched, and sm thereby spread as a Gangrene in the Body ck.

Fourthly, Satan hinders the Access of Light, by g erroneous Minds to draw false Conclusions perverse Inferences from the great and preci- ruths of the Gospel; and thereby bringing under Prejudice and Contempt: Thus he the Errors of Mens Minds about the Do- of Election; when he either persuades them, is an unreasonable Doctrine, and not wor- Credit, That God should chuse some, and others every way as good as those he hath n; or if there be any Certainty in that Do- then Men may throw the Reins upon the of their Lusts, and live at what rate they list. God have chosen them to Salvation, their dness shall not hinder it; and if he have nted them unto Wrath, their Diligence and enial cannot prevent it.

us the Doctrine of Free Grace is by the like stry of Satan turned into Lasciviousness. If abound, Men may sin the more freely; and the shortness of our time upon Earth, which in its own nature awakens all Men to Diligence, is by the subtilty of Satan turned to a quite contrary purpose, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we die.

Fifthly, Satan darkens the Minds of Men, and shuts them up against the Light, by blowing them up with Pride and self-conceitedness, persuading them that they know all these things already, and causing them to contemn the most weighty and precious Truths of God, as trite and vulgar Notions. The Word cannot be received without Meekness and Humility of Mind, Jam. 1. 21. Psal. 25. 8, 9. and Pride is the Nurse of Ignorance, 1 Tim. 6. 4. 1 Cor. 8. 7. The Devil is aware of this, and therefore blows up the Pride and Conceitedness of Mens Hearts all that he can: And this Temptation of his generally prevails wherever it meets with a knowing Head, match'd with a graceless and unsanctified Heart. And thus we see by what Wiles and Policies Satan keeps out the Light, and prevents the Access of it to the Minds of Men.

But if he miss his Design here, and Truth gets into the mind, Then Secondly, He labours to obstruct the Efficacy and Operation of the Light; and though it do shine into the Understanding, yet it shall be imprisoned there; and send down no converting Influences upon the Will and Affections: And this Design he promotes and manages divers ways.

First, By hastening to quench Convictions betime, and nip them in the Bud. Satan knows how dangerous a thing it is, and destructive to his Interest, to suffer Convictions to continue long; and therefore it is said of him, Mat. 13. 19. When any one heareth the word of the Kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his Heart. Satan is compared in this Scripture to the Fowls in the Air, which pick up the seed before it take any root in the Earth. The Devil is very jealous of this, and therefore labours all he can to destroy the Word before it comes to operate upon the Heart; which he doth sometimes by the Cares of the World, and sometimes by vain Companions, who prove meer Quench-Coals unto the beginning Convictions. One Sinner destroyeth much good.

Secondly, No sooner doth the God of this world observe the Light of Truth begin to operate upon the Heart, but he obstructeth that Design by Procrastinations and Delays, which delude and baffle the convinced soul; he persuades them if they will alter their Course, it will be time enough hereafter, when such Incumbrances and Troubles in the World are over; if he prevail here, 'tis a thousand to one but the Work miscarries. James 1. 23, 24. If the Hearer of the Word be not a Doer (i. e.) a present Doer, while the Impressions of it are fresh upon the soul, he doth but deceive himself. For it is with the Heart, as it is with melted Wax, if the seal be clapp'd to it presently, it will receive a fair Impression; but if it be let alone but for a little while, you can make none at all; It was therefore David's great Care and Wisdom to set about the Work of Religion under the first Impetus or vigorous motion of his Heart and Affections. Psal. 119. 60. I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy Commandments. Multitudes of Souls have perished by these Delays. 'Tis a Temptation incident to all that are under beginning Con-Convictions, especially young Persons, whom the Devil persuades that it were no better than madness in them to abridge and deny themselves so much Delight and Pleasure, and steep their youthful Thoughts in such a melancholy Subject as Religion is.

Thirdly, If all this will not do, but Convictions still continue to get ground in the Conscience, then he endeavours to scare and fright them out of their Convictions, by representing to them the inward Terrors, Troubles and Despairs into which they are about to plunge themselves, and that henceforth they must never expect a pleasant Day or comfortable Hour. Thus doth the God of this World blind the minds of them that believe not, both by hindering the access of Light to the Mind, and the Influence of it upon the Heart.

Thirdly, There is yet one Policy of Satan to keep souls in darkness, and that is, by the misapplication of Truth; persuading them, that whatsoever they read or hear of the misery and danger of Christless and unregenerate Persons, doth not in the least touch or concern them, but the more notorious and prophane part of the World; and by this Policy he blinds the minds of all civil and moral Persons. Thus the Pharisees trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others. And so the Laodiceans thought themselves rich, and encreased with Goods; that is, in a very safe and good condition. Now there are divers things notably improved by Satan's Policy, in order to these misapplications of Truth: As,

See my Touchstone of Sincerity upon Rev. 3. 17, 18.

First, The Freedom of their Lives from the most gross Pollutions of the World. Mat. 19. 20. All these things have I kept from my youth up. A civil, sober course of Life is a most effectual Blind before the Eyes of many a Man's Conscience.

Secondly, It is the Policy of Satan to prevent Conviction by Conviction: I mean effectual Convictions, by Convictions that have been ineffectual, and are now vanished away. Thus the Troubles that some Persons have been under, must pass for their Conversion, though the Temper of their Heart be the same it was: Their ineffectual troubles are made use of by the Devil to blind them in the true Knowledge and Apprehension of their Condition. For these Men and Women can speak of the Troubles they have had for sin, and the many Tears they have shed for it; whereby thorough Conviction is effectually prevented.

Thirdly, Gifts and Knowledge are improved by the Policy of Satan, against the true Knowledge of Jesus Christ, and our own Estate by Nature. As Conviction is improved by Satan's Policy against Conviction, so is Knowledge against Knowledge. This was the case of them in Rom. 2. 17, 18. Thou art called a Jew, and restest in the Law, and makest thy boast of God, and knowest his Will, and approvest the things that are excellent; being instructed out of the Law, and art confident that thou thy self art a guide to the blind, &c. And this is the Temptation and Delusion of knowing Persons, who are so far from being blind in their own account, that they account themselves the Guides of the Blind: Yet who blinder than such Men?

Fourthly, External Reformation is improved by the Policy of Satan against the spiritual Reformation, and passes current up and down the World. For Conversion, tho' it serves only to strengthe Satan's Interest in the soul, Mat. 12. 44. and f want of a real change of Heart, doth but encrea their sin and misery, 2 Pet. 2. 20. This is the G neration that is pure in their own Eyes, and y are not washed from their Filthiness. The Cle*ness* of their Hands blinds them in discovering t*Foulness* of their Hearts.

Fifthly, The Policy of Satan improves diligen in some Duties, against the Convictions of oth Duties. The external Duties of Religion, Hearing, Praying, Fasting, against the great D ties of Repenting and Believing. This was th case, Isa. 58. 2, 3. Yet they seek me daily, and d to know my ways, as a Nation that did righteousn and forsook not the Ordinances of their God. They of me the Ordinances of Justice, they take delight approaching to God. Wherefore have we walked, they, and thou seest not? Wherefore have we affli our souls, and thou takest no knowledge? This Dut improved against Duty, the Externals against Internals of Religion, and multitudes are blind this way.

Sixthly, The Policy of Satan improves Zea gainst Zeal; and thereby blinds a great part of world: He allows Men to be zealous again false Religion, if thereby he may prevent th from being zealous in the true Religion. He verts their Zeal against their own sins, by spend it against other Mens. Thus Paul was once blin by his own Zeal for the Law, Acts 22. 3. A many Men at this day satisfie themselves in t own Zeal against the Corruptions of God's W ship and the Superstitions of others, who ne felt the Power of True Religion upon their o Hearts; a dangerous Blind of Satan.

Seventhly, The Policy of Satan improves Esteem and Respect Men have from the Peopl God, against their great Duty and Interest to come such themselves, Rev. 3. 1. Thou hast a n that thou livest, but thou art dead. It is enough many Men that they obtain acceptation among Saints, tho' they be none of that Number; good Opinion of others begets and confirms th good Opinion of themselves.

Eighthly, The Policy of Satan improves sou ness of Judgment, against soundness of He An Orthodox Head against an Orthodox H and Life; Dogmatical Faith against Justify Faith. This was the Case of them before-men ned, Rom. 2. 18, 19. Men satisfie themselves, they have a sound Understanding, tho' mean w they have a very rotten Heart. 'Tis enough them that their Heads are regular, tho' their He and Lives be very irregular.

Ninthly, The Policy of Satan improves the B sings of God, against the Blessings of God, bli ing us by the Blessings of Providence, so as no discern the want of spiritual Blessings, persuad Men that the smiles of Providence in their p sperity, success, and thriving designs in the wo are good evidences of the Love of God to t souls, not at all discerning how the Prosperit Fools deceives them, and that Riches are o given to the hurt of the Owners thereof.

Tenthly, The Policy of Satan improves C forts against Comfort, false and unground Comf under the word, against the real Grounds of C fort lying in the souls Interest in Christ. T many Men finding a great deal of comfort in Promises, are so blinded thereby, as never to l after Union with Christ, the only solid ground of all true Comfort, Heb. 6. 5, 9.

And thus you see, how the God of this World blindeth the minds of them that believe not, and how the Gospel is hid to them that are lost.

SERMON XXXV.

2 COR. IV. 3, 4.

But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, lest the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them.

THE Words have been opened, and this Point observ'd:

Doct. That the Understanding of all Unbelievers are blinded by Satan's Policies, in order to their everlasting Perdition.

We have shewn already what the Blinding of the Mind, or hiding of the Gospel from it, is; it hath also been demonstrated that the Gospel is hid, and the Minds of many blinded under it; you have also seen what Policies Satan uses to blind the Minds of Men, even in the clearest Light of the Gospel. It remains now that I open to you the dreadful Nature of this Judgment of God upon the Souls of Men, and then make Application of the whole.

There are many Judgments of God inflicted upon the Souls and Bodies of Men in this World; but none of them are so dreadful as those Spiritual Judgments are, which God inflicts immediately upon the Soul: And among Spiritual Judgments few or none are of more dreadful Nature and Consequence, than this of Spiritual Blindness; which will appear by considering

First, the Subject of this Judgment, which is the Soul, and the principal Power of the Soul, which is the Mind and understanding Faculty; the Soul is the most precious and valuable Part of Man, and the Mind is the superior and most noble Power of the Soul; it is to the Soul, what the Eye is to the Body, the directive Faculty. The bodily Eye is the most precious Part of the Body. When we would express the Value of a Thing, we say, we prize it as our Eyes. The Loss of the Eyes is a sore Loss, we lose a great part of the Comfort of this world by it. Yet such an Affliction (speaking comparatively) is but a Trifle to this. If our bodily Eyes be blinded, we cannot see the Sun; but if our spiritual Eye be blinded, we cannot see God, we wander in the Paths of Sin, 1 John 2. 11. We are led blindfold to Hell by Satan, as the Syrians were into Samaria, 2 Kin. 6. 19, 20. And then our Eyes, like theirs, will be opened to see our Misery, when it is too late. The Light of the Body is the Eye (saith Christ.) If therefore thine Eye be single, thy whole Body shall be full of Light; but if thine Eye be evil, thy whole Body shall be full of Darkness. If therefore the Light that is in thee be Darkness, how great is that Darkness? Mat. 6. 22, 23. By the Eye he means the practical Judgment, the understanding Faculty, which is the Seat for Principles, the common Treasury of Rules of Practice, according unto which a Man's Life is formed, and his way directed. If therefore this Power of the Soul be darkened, how great must this Darkness be! For now the Blind lead the Blind, and both fall into the Ditch. The blind Judgment mis-guides the blind Affections, and both fall into Hell. O what a sad thing is it, that the Devil should lead that, that leads thee! That he should sit at the Helm, and steer thy Course to Damnation! The blinding of this noble Faculty precipitates the Soul into the most dangerous Courses, Persecution by this means seems to be true Zeal for God, John 16. 2. They that persecute you, shall think that they do God service. Paul once thought verily with himself, that he ought to do many things contrary to the Name of Jesus of Nazareth, Acts 26. 9. (i. e.) He thought he had pleased God, when he was imprisoning and persecuting his People; as many do at this day; it will make a Man to sin conscientiously, which is a very dangerous way of sinning, and difficult to be reclaimed.

Secondly, It is a dreadful Judgment, if we consider the Object about which the Understanding is blinded, which is Jesus Christ, and Union with him; Regeneration and the Nature and Necessity thereof. For this Blindness is not universal, but respective and particular. A Man may have abundance of Light and Knowledge in things natural and moral; but spiritual things are hidden from his Eyes. Yea, a Man may know spiritual Things in a natural way, which encreaseth his Blindness; but he cannot discern them spiritually; This is a sore Judgment, and greatly to be bewailed. Thou hast hid these things (said Christ) from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto Babes, Mat. 11. 25. Learned and knowing Men are ignorant of those things, which very Babes in Christ understand. They are prudent in the management of Earthly Affairs; but to save their own souls they have no Knowledge. They are able with Berengarius, to dispute de omni scibili, of every thing investigable by the Light of Nature; yea, to open the Scripture solidly, and defend the Doctrines and Truths of Christ against his Adversaries successfully; and yet blinded in the great Mystery of Regeneration. Blindness in part (saith the Apostle) is happened unto Israel; and that indeed was the principal Part of Knowledge, viz. the Knowledge of Jesus Christ and him crucified, we see farther than they. The literal Knowledge of Christ shines clearly in our Understanding. We are only blinded about those things which should give us saving Interest in him, about the effectual Application of Christ to our own souls.

Thirdly, The dreadful Nature of this spiritual Blindness farther appears from the consideration of the

the Season in which it befals Men, which is the very time of God's Patience, and the only Opportunity they have for Salvation; after these Opportunities are over, their Eyes will be opened to see their Misery, but alas, too late. Upon this account Christ shed those Tears over Jerusalem, Luke 19. 42. O that thou hadst known, at least in this thy Day, the things that belong to thy peace; but now they are hid from thine eyes. Now the season of Grace is past and gone; Opportunities are the Golden Spots of Time, and there is much time in a short Opportunity, as there are many Pieces of Silver in one Piece of Gold. Time signifies nothing when Opportunities are gone, to be blinded in the very season of Salvation, is the Judgment of all Judgments, the greatest Misery incident to Man; to have our Eyes opened when the seasons of Salvation are past, is but an Aggravation of Misery: There is a twofold opening of Mens Eyes to see their danger, viz.

1. Graciously to prevent Danger.
2. Judicially to aggravate Misery.

They whose Eyes are not opened graciously in this World to see their Disease and Remedy in Christ, shall have their Eyes opened judicially in the World to come, to see their Disease without any Remedy. If God open them now, it is by way of Prevention, if they be not opened until then, it will produce Desperation.

Fourthly, The horrible Nature of this Judgment farther appears, from the exceeding Difficulty of curing it, especially in Men of excellent natural Endowments and Accomplishments, John 9. 40, 41. And some of the Pharisees which were with him, heard these words, and said unto him, are we blind also? Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, we see, therefore your sin remaineth, q. d. The Pride and Conceitedness of your Hearts add Obstinacy and Incurableness to your Blindness, these are the blind People that have Eyes, Isa 43. 8. In seeing they see not. The Conviction of such Men is next to an Impossibility.

Fifthly, The Design and End of this Blindness under the Gospel is most dreadful, so saith my Text, The God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, lest the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them. Answerable whereunto are those Words, Isa. 6. 10. Make the Heart of this People fat, and make their Ears heavy, and shut their Eyes, lest they see with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears, and understand with their Hearts, and convert and be healed. So that it is plain, this Binding is a Præludium to Damnation, as the covering of Haman's Face was to his Destruction. When the Lord hath no purpose of Grace and Mercy to a Man's Soul, than to bring about the Damnation of that Man by a righteous Permission; many Occasions of Blindness befal him, which Satan improves effectually to his eternal Ruine; among which fatal Occasions, blind Guides, and scandalous Professors are none of the least, they shall be fitted with Ministers suitable to their Humours, who shall speak smooth things; If a Man walk in the Spirit, and Falshood (i. e. by an ἐν δὲ τὸ ψεῦδος —— the Spirit of Falshood) do lie, saying, I will prophesie to thee of wine and strong drink, he shall even be the prophet of his people; and the Slips and Falls of Professors shall do the Devil not a little Service in this his fatal Design. Mat. 18. 7. Wo to the world because of offences: This shall blind them, and harden them to purpose. Thus you see what a dreadful Judgment this is, a stroke of God upon the Soul which cuts off all the present Comforts of Christ and Religion from it, takes away the Bridle of Restraint from Sin, and makes way for the final Ruine of the Soul. A far greater Judgment it is, than the greatest Calamity or Affliction, which can befal us in this world. If our Names suffer by the greatest Reproaches, our Bodies by the most painful Diseases, our Estates by the greatest Losses; if God strike every Comfort we have in this world dead by Affliction: All this is nothing compared with this blinding Judgment of God upon the Soul. For they may come from the tender Love of God to us, Heb. 12. 6. But this is the Effect of his wrath; they may cleanse Sin, Isa. 27. 9. but this encreases it; they often prove occasions of Conversion, Job 36. 8, 9. but this is the great Obstruction to it. In a word, they only wound the Flesh, and that with a curable wound; but this stabbs the Soul, and that with a mortal wound.

Ira est Dei non intelligere delicta, ne sequatur pœnitentia. Cyp. Ep. Percussit sunt animi cæcitate ut nec intelligant delicta, nec plangant: indignantis Dei major hæc est ira, Cypr. de Lapsis.

First Use of Information.

Infer. 1. If this be the case of the unbelieving world to be so blinded by the God of the world; how little should we value the Censures and Slanders of the blind world? Certainly they should move no other Affection but Pity, in our souls: If their Eyes were opened, their Mouths would be shut, they would never traduce Religion and the sincere Professors of it as they do, if Satan had not blinded their Minds: They speak evil of the Things they know not; their Reproaches which they let fly so freely, are but so many Arrows shot by the blind Man's Bow, which only stick in our Cloaths, and can do us no hurt, except we thrust 'em onward by our own Discontent to the wounding of our Spirits. I could almost be proud upon it, (said Luther) that I have got an ill Name among the worst of Men. Beware Christians, that you give them no occasion to blaspheme the Name of your God, and then never trouble your selves, however they use your Names. If they tread it in the Dirt now, God (as one speaks) will take it up, wash off all that Dirt, and deliver it you again clear and shining. Should such Men speak well of us, we might justly suspect ourselves of some Iniquity which administers to them the occasion of it.

Superbus fio quod video no-men pessimum mihi crescere Luth. Gratias ago Deo meo quod dignum sum quem mundus oderit. Heron.

Infer. 2. How absurd and dangerous must it be for Christians to follow the Examples of the blind World? Let the blind follow the blind, but let not those whom God hath enlightened, do so. Christians, never let those lead you, who are led blindfolded by the Devil themselves. The Holiness and Heavenliness of Christians was wont to set the World a wondring that they would not run with them into the same Excess of Riot, 1 Pet. 4. 4. But sure since God hath opened your Eyes, and shewed you the dangerous Courses they walk in, it would be the greatest wonder of all, if you should be the Companions of such Men, and tread in the steps of their Examples. Christian, as humble and lowly Thoughts as thou hast of thy self, yet I would have thee understand thy self to be too good to be the Associate of such Men. Discamus sanctam superbiam, & sciamus nos esse illis meliores. If they will walk with you in the way of Duty and Holiness, let them come and welcome: Receive them with both Arms, and and be glad of their Company; but beware you walk not in their Paths, lest they be a Snare unto you. Did they see the end of their way, they would never walk in it themselves, why then will you walk with them who do see it?

Infer. 3. If this be so, let Christians be exact, and circumspect in their walking, lest they lay a Stumbling-block before the blind. 'Tis a great sin to do so in a proper sense. Lev. 19. 14. Thou shalt not put a stumbling-block before the blind. And a far greater to do it in a Metaphorical sense, Rom. 14. 13. 'Tis the express Will of God, that no Man put a stumbling-block, or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way. 'Tis an Argument of little regard to the Honour of Christ, or the Souls of Men so to do. O Professors, look to your steps. The Devil desires to make use of you for such Purposes. The sins of Thousands of others who make no profession of Godliness, will never so fit his purpose for the blinding of those Mens Eyes, as the least slip or failing of yours will do. 'Tis the living Bird that makes the best stale to draw others into the Net: The grossest Wickedness of prosane Sinners passeth away in silence, but all the Neighbourhood shall ring with your Miscarriages. A righteous Man falling down before the wicked is a troubled Fountain, and a corrupt Spring, Prov. 25. 26. The Scandalous Falls of Good Men are like a Bag of Poison cast by Satan into the Spring from whence the whole Town is supplied with Water. You little know what mischief you do, and how many blind Sinners may fall into Hell by your Occasion.

Infer. 4. How dangerous a thing is Zeal in a wicked Man? 'Tis a sharp Sword in a blind Man's hand, or like high Mettle in a blind Horse. How much hath the Church of God suffered upon this account, and doth suffer at this day? The world hath ever been full of such blind and blustering Zeal, which like a Hurricane, overturns all that stands in its way: Yea, (as we noted before) it makes a Man a kind of conscientious Persecutor: I confess, it is better for the Persecutor himself to do it ignorantly, because Ignorance leaves him in capacity for Mercy, and sets him a degree lower than the malicious enlighten'd Persecutor, 1 Tim. 1. 13. Else it were the dreadful Case described in Heb. 10. But yet as it is, John 16. 2. these are the fierce and dreadful Enemies of the Church of God. Such a Man was Paul, a devout Persecutor, and such Persecution God afterwards suffered to befall himself. Acts 13 50. But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable Women, and the chief Men of the City; and raised Persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their Coast. An erroneous Conscience binds as well as an informed Conscience, and where-ever God gives such Men Opportunity to vent the Spleen and Rage of their Hearts upon his People, they will be sure to do it to purpose. With other men Gamaliel's counsel may have some Influence, and they may be afraid lest they be found Fighters against God; but blind Zeal spurs on, and saith as John did, Come see my Zeal for the Lord of Hosts. O blind Sinners, be sure of your Mark before you discharge your Arrows. If you shoot a wicked Man (as you suppose him) and find finds one of his dear Children wounded, or destroyed, what Account will you give of the Fact to God, when you shall come before his Judgment Seat?

2d. Use of Exhortation.

This Point is very improveable by way of Exhortation. Both,

1. Unto those, who are blinded by the God of this World.
2. To those that are enlightened in the Knowledge of Christ, by the true God.

First, To those who are still blinded by the God of this World, to whom the Lord hath not given to this Day, Eyes to see their Misery in themselves, or their remedy in Christ, so as to make an essential Application of him to their own Souls. To all such my Counsel is,

1. To get a Sence of your own Blindness.
2. To seek out for a Cure, whilst yet it may be had.

First, Labour to get a deep Sence of the Misery of such a Condition; for till you be awakened by Conviction, you can never be healed. O that you did but know the true Difference betwixt common and saving Light; the want of this keeps you in Darkness: You think because you know the same Things that the most sanctified Man doth, that therefore there is no Difference betwixt his Knowledge and yours; and are therefore ready to say to them as Job to his Friends. Lo, mine Eye hath seen all this, mine Ear hath heard, and understood it: What ye know, the same do I know also; I am not inferiour unto you, Job 13. 1, 2. But O that you would be convinced that your Knowledge vastly differs from the Knowledge of Believers. Though you know the same Things that they do, it is a Knowledge of another kind of Nature. You know spiritual Things in another way, meerly by the Light of Reason assisted and improved by the common Light of the Gospel: They know the same Things by spiritual Illumination, and in an experimental way. 1 John 2.20. Ye have an Unction from the holy one, and ye know all things. Their Knowledge is practical, yours is Idle. They are working out their Salvation by that Light which God hath given them, Psal. 111. 10. Their Knowledge of God and Christ produces the Fruits of Faith, Obedience, and Mortification; and heavenly Mindedness in them: It hath no such Fruits in you; whatever Light there be in your Understandings, it makes no alteration at all upon your Hearts. The Light brings them to Heaven, John 17. 3. Yours shall be blown out by Death, 1 Cor. 13. 8. and your selves left in the Mists of eternal Darkness: Except your Eyes be opened seasonably by the anointing of the Holy Ghost. Conviction is a great Part of your Care.

Secondly, Labour to get a Remedy for this dangerous Disease of your Minds: Awake to Righteousness, and sin not, for some have not the Knowledge of God; I speak this to your shame, 1 Cor. 15. 34. These speak Incouragement to you, though it be a sore Judgment that lies upon you, and very difficult to be removed: Yet remember Jesus Christ is put into Commission by God the Father, to open the blind Eyes, Is. 42. 6, 7. and this excellent Physician bespeaks you for his Patients, Rev. 3. 18. Anoint thine Eyes (saith he) with Eye-salve that thou mayest see. Yea, the most enlighten'd Christians were once as dark and blind in spiritual Things as you are, and Christ hath cured them, Eph. 5. 8. Once were you Darkness, now are ye light in the Lord. Attend therefore upon the Ordinances Ordinances of the Gospel diligently; that's God's enlightening instrument, by which he couches those Cataracts which blind the Eyes of Mens Understandings, Acts 26. 18. And if ever you will have your Eyes opened, allow your selves Time to ponder, and consider what you hear. The Duty of Meditation is a very enlightening Duty: Above all cry to the Lord Jesus Christ as that poor Man did, Lord that mine Eyes may be opened, that I may receive my Sight. Say, Lord, this is my Disease and Danger, that in seeing I see not. Others see natural Things in a spiritual Way, whilst I see spiritual Things only in a natural Way: Their Light is operative upon their Hearts, mine is but an idle impractical Notion of Religion, which brings forth no Fruit of Holiness. Their Knowledge sets their Hands a Work in Duties of Obedience; mine only sets my Tongue a work in Discourses of those things which my Heart never felt. Lord, open mine Eyes, and make me to see out of this Obscurity: All the Light that is in me is but Darkness. O Lord, enlighten my Darkness, enlighten mine Eyes, lest I sleep the Sleep of Death.

Secondly, Let it be a Word of Counsel and Exhortation to such as once were blind, but do now see.

First, I beseech you, bless God for the least degree of spiritual Illumination. Truly Light is sweet, and it is a pleasant thing for the Eyes to behold the Sun, Eccles. 11. 7. But Oh, how sweet is spiritual Light! And what a pleasant thing to behold the Son of Righteousness! Blessed are your Eyes, for they see God hath brought you out of Darkness into marvellous Light. And marvellous indeed it must needs be, when you consider how many wise and prudent Men are under the the Power of spiritual Darkness, whilst such Babes as you, are enlightned. Mat. 11. 25. It greatly affected the Heart of Christ, O let it affect yours also.

Secondly, Labour to get a clearer Sight of spiritual Things every Day. For all spiritual Light is encreasing Light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect Day, Pro. 4. 18. O if a little spiritual Light be so comfortable, what would more be? The Wisdom of God is a manifold Wisdom, Eph. 3. 10. The best of us see but little of it. Labour therefore to know spiritual Things more extensively, and more experimentally, Phil. 3. 8, 9. Be still encreasing in the Knowledge of God.

Thirdly, Walk as Men whose Eyes are opened. Once ye were in Darkness, now are ye Light in the Lord; walk as Childeren of the Light, Eph. 5. 8. Else your Light will but aggravate your Sin. Remember how it displeased God, that Solomon's Heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel who appeared to him twice, 1 Kings 11. 9. Remember how angry God was with the Heathens for abusing the dim common Light of nature, Rom. 1. 21. How much more Evil is it in you to abuse the most precious Light that shineth in this World? And what mischievous Effects the Abuse of your light will have upon this blind World. It was a smart Rebuke given once by an Atheist to a good Man, who being asked by him, how he could satisfie his Conscience to live as he did? nay, rather said the Atheist, I wonder how you can satisfie your self to live as you do; for did I believe as you do, that that there is such a Christ, and such a Glory as you believe there is, I would pray and live another Rate than you do.

The Conclusion.

And now, Reader, after all my Discourses of the Method of Christ in purchasing the great Salvation for us, and the way of the Spirit in applying it, and making it effectual to God's Elect; thou hast two Wonders before thine Eyes, either of which may astonish thy Soul in the consideration of them, viz.

1. The admirable Grace of God in preparing
2. The desperate Wickedness of Man in rejecting

} this great Salvation.

First, Behold the Riches of the Goodness and Mercy of God for preparing such a Remedy as this for lost Man. This is that which is justly called The great Mystery of Godliness, 1 Tim. 3. 16. That Mystery which the Prophets enquired diligently after, yea, which the Angels desire to look into, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 12. In this glorious Mystery of Redemption that πολυποικιλος σοφια manifold Wisdom of God, or that Wisdom which hath more curious and Admirable Variety in it, is illustriously displayed, Eph. 4. 10. Yea, the Contrivement of our Redemption this Way is the most glorious Display of divine Love that ever was made, or can be made in this World to the Children of Men: For so the Apostle will be understood, when he saith, Rom. 3. 8. συνιστησι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἀγάπην —— God hath set forth, or presented his Love to Man in the most taking Manner, in a Way that commends it beyond all compare, to the Acceptation of Men. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the World to save Sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. It might be justly expected, that when this glorious Mystery should come to be published by the Gospel in the Ears of Sinners, all Eyes should be withdrawn from all other Objects, and fixed with Admiration upon Christ, all Hearts should be ravished with these glad Tidings; and every Man pressing to Christ with the greatest Zeal and Diligence. But behold, instead thereof,

Secondly, The desperate Wickedness of the World in rejecting the only Remedy prepared for them. This was long since foretold by the Prophet, Isa. 53. 3. He is despised and rejected of Men, a Man of Sorrows acquainted with Grief; and hid our Faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not: His poor and mean Appearance, which should render him beyond all Considerations to the Souls of Men (since it was for their Sakes, that he emptied himself of all his Glory) yet this lays him under Contempt, he is looked on as the very off-cast of Men; when his own Love to Man had emptied him of all his Riches, the Wickedness of Men loaded him with Contempt, and as it was prophesied of him, so it was, and, at this Day is sadly verified all the World over; For,

First, the Pagan World hath no Knowledge of him, they are lost in Darkness. God hath suffered them to walk in their own Ways, Acts 14. 16.

Secondly, The Mahumetans which overspread so great a Part of the World reject him, and instead of the blessed Gospel which they hiss out with Abhorrence, embrace the Alcoran, which they confidently affirm to have come down from God immediately in that Lalatio Hanzili, (as they call it) the Night of Demiſſion, calling all Chriſtians Caſtrouna, (i. e.) Infidels.

Thirdly, The Jews reject him with Abhorrence, nd ſpit at his very Name, and being blindolded by the Devil, they call Jeſus Anathema, Cor. 12. 13. And in a blind Zeal for Moſes, laſpheme him as an Impoſtor. He came to s own, and his own received him not, John 1.

Fourthly, The far greater Part of the Chriſtiazed World reject him; thoſe that are called after his Name, will not ſubmit to his Government. The Nobles of the World think themſelves diſhonoured by ſubmitting their Necks to his Yoak.
The Senſualiſts of the World will not deny their Luſts, or forſake their Pleaſures, for all the Treaſures of Righteouſneſs, Life and Peace, which his Blood hath rchaſed. Worldlings of the Earth prefer the Dirt Dung of the World before him; and few there among them that profeſs Chriſtianity, who e the Lord Jeſus in Sincerity. The only aſon why they are called Chriſtians is beſe by the advantageous Caſt of Providence, were born and educated in a Nation where iſti nomen uere, & per Chri-ſum perge-quid aliud quam pra-icatio di-

i nominis?
p. de Zelo.

Chriſtianity is profeſſed, and eſtabliſhed by the Laws of the Country; and if the Wind ſhould turn, and the publick Authority think fit to eſtabliſh another Religion, they can ſhift their Sail, and ſteer a contrary Courſe.

But now Reader, let me tell thee, that if ever God ſend forth theſe two grim Sergeants, his Law and thine own Conſcience, to arreſt thee for thy Sins, if thou find thy ſelf dragged away by them towards that Priſon from whence none return, that are once clapt up therein, and that in this unſpeakable Diſtreſs Jeſus Chriſt manifeſt himſelf to thy Soul, and open thy Heart to receive him, and become thy Surety with God, pay all thy Debts, and cancel all thy Obligations, thou wilt love him at another rate than others do; his Blood will run deeper in thine Eyes than it doth in the ſhallow Apprehenſions of the World; he will be altogether lovely, and thou wilt account all Things but Dung and Droſs in Compariſon of the Excellency of Jeſus Chriſt thy Lord. To work thy Heart to this Frame theſe Things are written, which the Lord proſper upon thy Soul, by the Bleſſing of his good Spirit upon them.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SOUL of MAN.

To the much Honoured his dear Kinſman, Mr. John Flave and Mr. Edward Criſpe, of London, Merchants; and t reſt of my worthy Friends in London, Ratcliffe, Shadwe and Lymehouſe; Grace, Mercy, and Peace.

Dear Friends,

Nihil in terra magnum præter hominem, nihil in homine præter mentem. Favorin.

E Cœlo deſcendit γνῶθι σεαυτόν, Juvenal.

AMong all the Creatures in this lower World, none deſerv be ſtiled Great, but Man; and in Man nothing is found thy of that Epithet, but his Soul.

The Study and Knowledge of the Soul was therefor ways reckon'd a rich and neceſſary Improvement of Time. All have magnified theſe two Words, Know thy ſelf, as an Oracle deſcending from Heaven.

Nulla ſcientia melior illa qua homo novit ſeipſum: relinque ergo cætera, & teipſum diſcute: per te curre: in te conſiſte: à te incipiat cogitatio tua, & in te finiatur.

No Knowledge, ſaith Bernard, is better than that whereby we our ſelves; leave other matters therefore, and ſearch thy ſelf, a ſtand in thy ſelf; let thy Thoughts, as it were, circulate, and end in thy ſelf. Strain not thy Thoughts in vain about thing thy ſelf being neglected.

The Study and Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt muſt ſtill be allow'd to be moſt excellent neceſſary: But yet the Worth and Neceſſity of Chriſt is unknown to Men, till th lue, Wants, and Dangers of their own Souls be firſt diſcover'd to them.

The Diſaffectedneſs and Averſation of Men to the Study of their own Souls, more to be admir'd; not only becauſe of the Weight and Neceſſity of it, but the al Pleaſure and Sweetneſs that is found therein. What * Cardan is experimentally felt by many, that ſcarce any thing is more p and delectable to the Soul of Man, than to know what he is, he may, and ſhall be; and what thoſe Divine and Supreme are, which he is to enjoy after Death, and the Viciſſitudes preſent World. For we are Creatures conſcious to our ſelves of an Immortal and that we have ſomething about us which muſt over-live this mortal Fleſh, and is fore ever and anon ſome way or other hinting and intimating to us its Expectati and Deſignation for a better Life than now it lives in the Body, and that we ſha ceaſe to be, when we ceaſe to breath.

*. Quid jucundius quam ſcire quid ſimus, quid fuerimus quid erimus, & cum his etiam divina atque ſuprema illa poſt obitum. Mundique viciſſitudines.

And certainly, my Friends, Diſcourſes of the Soul and its Immmortality; of Heaven d of Hell, the next and only Receptacle of unbodied Spirits, were never more ſeaſona- and neceſſary than in this Atheiſtical Age of the World, wherein all ſerious Piety and houghts of Immortality are redicul'd, and hiſſed out of the Company of many: As if ole old condemn'd Hereticks the Θνητοψυχίται, who aſſerted the the Corruptibility and Mor- ity of the Soul as well as Body, had been again revived in our Days.

And as the Atheiſm of ſome, ſo the Tepidity and unconcern'd Careleſneſs of the moſt, eds and calls for ſuch potent Remedies, as Diſcourſes of this Kind do plentifully af- d. I dare appeal to your charitable Judgments, whether the Converſations and Diſcour- of the Many, do indeed look like a ſerious Purſuit of Heaven, and a Flight from ell?

Long have my Thoughts bended towards this great and excellent Subject, and many earneſt ſires I have had, (as I beleive all thinking Perſons muſt needs have) to know what I ſhall be en I breath not. But when I had engaged my Meditations about it, two great Rubs oppo- the farther Progreſs of my Thoughts therein: Namely,

I. The Difficulty of the Subject I had choſen: And,
II. The Diſtractions of the Times in which I was to write upon it.

I. As for the Subject, ſuch is the Subtilty of its Nature, and ſuch the knotty Controverſies which it is involv'd, that it better deſerves that Inſcription, than Minerva's Temple at Saum * Never did any Mortal reveal me plainly.

Ἐμὲ μὲν πίτνει εἰδὼς πωδνητὸς ἀπεσσέλυσεν.

t is but little that the moſt clear and ſharp ſighted do diſcern of r own Souls, now in the State of Compoſition; and what can we ively and diſtinctly know of the Life they live in the State of Se- tion? The Darkneſs in which theſe Things are involv'd doth great- xerciſe even the greateſt Wits, and frequently elude and fruſtrate the t generous Attempts. Many great Scholars whoſe natural and acquir- Abilities ſingularly furniſhed and qualified them to make a clearer covery, have labour'd in this Field uſque ad ſudorem & pallorem, even to Sweat and neſs, and done little more but intangle themſelves and the Subject more than before. s cannot but diſcourage new Attempts.

Animam præſentem mentis acie vix, aut ne vix quidem, aſſequimur; ſed qualis ſit futura, quomodo indagabimus? Laborant hic maxima ingenia & caligo conatus etiam generoſos non rarò eludit. Joſ. Stetn. de Morte, cap. 20.

nd yet without ſome Knowledge of the Habitity and ſubjective Capacity of our Souls njoy the good of the World to come, even in a State of Abſence from the Body, a Prin- l Relief muſt be cut off from them under the great and manifold Trials they are to ounter in this evil World.

s for my ſelf, I aſſure you, I am deeply ſenſible of the inequality of my Shoulders to Burden; and have often thought (ſince I undertook it) of that grave and neceſſa- Caution of the Poet to weild and poiſe the Burden as Porters uſe do, before I undertook it. Zuinglius blam'd Caroloſtadius (as ſome do me) for undertaking the Controverſie of that Age, becauſe, he, Non habet ſatis humerorum; his Shoulders are too weak for it.

nd yet I know Mens Labours proſper not according to the Art and Elegancy of the poſure, but according to the Divine Bleſſing which pleaſeth to accompany them. us tells us of a learned Philoſopher at the Council of Nice, who ſtoutly defended his s againſt the greateſt Wits and Scholars there, and yet was at laſt fairly vanquiſh'd by n of no extraordinary Parts; of which Conqueſt the Philoſopher gave this candid and in- ous Account, Againſt Words (ſaid he) I oppos'd Words, and what was ſpoken, I overthrew he Art of ſpeaking: But when inſtead of Words, Power came out of the Mouth of the Spea- Words could no longer withſtand Truth; nor Man oppoſe the Power of God.

that my weak Endeavours might proſper under the like Influence of the Spirit upon the ts of them that ſhall read this inartificial, but well-meant Diſcourſe.

am little concern'd about the Contempts and Cenſures of faſtidious Readers. I have v'd to ſay nothing that exceeds Sobriety, nor to provoke any Man, except my Diſſent his unprov'd Dictates muſt be his Provocation.

rhaps there are ſome Doubts and Difficulties relating to this Subject, which will never be ſolv'd till we come to Heaven. For Man by the Fall being leſs than himſelf, doth not not underſtand himſelf, nor will ever perfectly do ſo, until he be fully reſtor'd to himſel which will not be whilſt he dwells in a Body of Sin and Death. And yet it is to m paſt Doubt, that this as well as other Subjects might have been much more clear'd than it i if inſtead of the proud Contendings of Maſterly Wits for Victory, all had humbly and peaceabl applied themſelves to the Impartial Search of Truth.

Truth, like an Orient Pearl in the Bottom of a River, would have diſcover'd it ſelf b its native Luſtre and Radiancy, had not the Feet of Heathen Philoſophers, cunning Atheiſ and daring School Divines, diſturb'd and foul'd the Stream.

II. And as the Difficulties of the Subject are many, ſo many have been the Interu tions and Avocations I have met with whilſt it was under my Hand: Which I mentio for no other End but to procure a more favourable Cenſure from you, if it appears l exact than you expected to find it. Such as it is, I do with much Reſpect and Affectio tender it to your Hands, humbly requeſting the Bleſſing of the Spirit may accompany to your Hearts. If you will but allow your ſelves to think cloſe to the Matter befo you, I doubt not but you will find ſomewhat in it apt both to inform your Minds, a quicken your Affections. I know you have a Multiplicity of Buſineſs under your Hand but yet I hope your great Concern makes all others to give Place; and that how c morous and importunate ſoever the Affairs of this World be, you both can and do fi Time to ſit alone, and bethink your ſelves of a more important Buſineſs you have do.

My Friends, we are Borderers upon Eternity: we live upon the Confines of the Spi tual and Impartial World. We muſt ſhortly be aſſociated with bodileſs Beings, and sh have (after a few Days are paſt) no more concerns for Meat, Drink and Sleep, buyi and ſelling, Habitations and Relations, than the Angels of God now have. Beſide, we li here in a State of Trial. Man (as Scaliger fitly calls him) is Utriuſque Mundi nex one in whom both Worlds do meet; his Body participates of the lower, his Soul of t upper World. Hence it is that he finds ſuch tugging and pulling, this Way, and that Wa upward and downward; both Worlds as it were contending for this invaluable Pri the precious Soul. All Chriſt's Ordinances are inſtituted, and his Officers ordained for other Uſe or End, but the Salvation of Souls: Books are valuable according to their Co ducibility to the End. How rich a Reward of my Labours ſhall I account it, if t Treatiſe of the Soul may but promote the Sanctification and Salvation of any Reade Soul!

To your Hands I firſt tender it. It becomes your Property, not only as a Debt Juſtice, the fulfilling of a Promiſe made you long ſince upon your joint and earneſt I ſires for the Publication of it; but as an Accknowledgment of the many Favours I h receiv'd from you. To one of you I ſtand obliged in the Bond of Relation, and un the Sence of many Kindneſſes, beyond whatever ſuch a Degree of Relation can be f pos'd to exact.

You have here a ſuccinct Account of the Nature, Faculties and Original of the S of Man, as alſo of its Infuſion into the Body by God, without intitling himſelf to the G and Sin reſulting from that their Union.

You will alſo find the Breath of your Noſtrils to be Nexus, Tie, or Bond, which ho your Souls and Bodies in a perſonal Union; and that whilſt the due Graſis and Temp ament of the Body remains, and Breath continues, your Soul hangs as by a weak and ſlen Thred, over the State of a vaſt Eternity in Heaven or in Hell: Which will inform y both of the value of your Breath, and the beſt Way of improving it, whilſt you en it.

The Immortality of the Soul is here aſſerted, proved, and vindicated from the moſt c ſiderable Objections; ſo that it will evidently appear plain, by this Diſcourſe, you do ceaſe to be, when you ceaſe to breath: And ſeeing they will over-live all Temporal joyments, they muſt neceſſarily periſh, as to all their Joys, Comforts, and Hopes, (whic all the Death that can be incident to an Immortal Spirit) if they be not in the pro Seaſon ſecur'd and provided of that never-periſhing Food of Souls, God in Chriſt, their P tion for ever.

Here you will find the Ground and Reaſons of that ſtrong Inclination which you feel them to have to your Bodies, and the neceſſity (notwithſtanding that) of their vorce and Separation from their beloved Bodies; and that it would manifeſtly be to their judice if it ſhould be otherwiſe. And to overcome the unreaſonable Averſation of Believ and bring them to a more becoming cheaful Submiſſion to the Laws of Death, whenſoe the Writ of Ejection ſhall be ſerved upon them; you will here find a Repreſentation of that bleſſed Life, comely Order, and moſt delightful Imployment of the incorporeal People inhabiting the City of God; wherein, beſide thoſe ſweet Meditations which are proper to Feaſt your hungry Affections, you will meet with divers unuſual, tho' not vain or unuſeful Queſtions ſtated and reſolved; which will be a grateful Entertainment to your inquiſitive and ſearching Minds.

'Tis poſſible they may be cenſur'd by ſome as undeterminable and unprofitable Curioſities; but as I have a preſumptuous Intruſion into unrevealed Secrets, ſo I think it a Weakneſs to be diſcourag'd in the ſearch of Truth, ſo far as it is fit to trace it, by ſuch damping and cauſeleſs Cenſures. Nor am I ſenſible I have in any thing trangreſſed the Bounds of Chriſtian Sobriety, to gratify the Palate of a nice and delicate Reader.

I have alſo here ſet before the Reader an Idea or Repreſentation of the State and Caſe of damn'd Souls, that, if it be the Will of God, a ſeaſonable Diſcovery of Hell may be the Means of ſome Men's Recovery out of the Danger of it; and cloſed up the whole with a Demonſtration of the invaluable Precioufneſs of Souls, and the ſeveral dangerous Snares and Artifices of Satan, their profeſſed Enemy, to deſtroy and caſt them away for ever.

This is the Deſign and general Scope of the whole, and of the principal Parts of this Treatiſe. And O that God would grant me my Heart's Deſire on your behalf in the Peruſal of it! Even that it may prove a ſanctified inſtrument in his Hand both to prepare you for, and bring you in Love with the unbodied Life, to make you look with Pleaſure into your Graves, and die by conſent of Will, as well as Neceſſity of Nature. I remember Dr. Stoughton in a Sermon preached before King James, relates a ſtrange Story of a Child in a Ship wrack faſt aſleep upon its Mothers Lap as ſhe ſate upon a Peice of the Wreck amidſt the Waves; the Child being awaked with the Noiſe, asked the Mother what thoſe Things were; ſhe told it, they were drowning Waves to ſwallow them up; the Child with a pretty ſmiling Countenance, beg'd a Stroke from its Mother to beat away thoſe naughty Waves, and chid them as if they had been its Play mates. Death will ſhortly ſhip-wrack your Bodies; your Souls will ſit upon your Lips ready to expire, as they upon the Wrack ready to go down: Would it not be a comfortable and moſt becoming Frame of Mind to ſit there with as little Dread, as this little One did among the terrible Waves? Surely if our Faith had at firſt united us with Chriſt, and then looſed our Hearts off from this inchanting and enſnaring World, we might make a fair Step towards this moſt deſirable Temper; but Unbelief and earthly Mindedneſs make us loth to venture.

I bluſh to think what bold Adventures thoſe Men made, who upon the Contemplation of the Properties a deſpicable of Stone firſt, adventur'd quite out of ſight of Land under its Guide, Conduct and Direction, and ſecurely truſted both their Lives and Eſtates to it, when all the Eyes of Heaven were veiled from them, amidſt the dark Waters, and thick Clouds of the Sky; when either ſtart, or at leaſt give an unwilling Shrug, when I think of adventuring out of ſight of this World, under the more ſure and ſteady Direction and Conduct of Faith and the Promiſes. To cure theſe Evils in my own and the Reader's Heart, theſe Things are written, and in much Reſpect and Love tendered to your Hands, as a Teſtimony of my Gratitude, and deep Sence of the many Obligations you have put me under. That the Bleſſing of the Spirit may accompany theſe Diſcourſes to your Souls, afford you ſome Aſſiſtance in your laſt and difficult Work of putting them off at Death with a becoming Chearfulneſs, ſaying in that Hour, Can I not ſee God till this Fleſh be laid aſide in the Grave? Muſt I die before I can live like my ſelf? Then take my Body, and go to thy Duſt, that I may be with Chriſt. With this Deſign, and with theſe hearty Wiſhes, dear and honoured Couſin, and worthy Friends, I put theſe Diſcourſes into your Hands, and remain

Your moſt obliged

Kinſman and Servant,

Jo. Flavel.

THE

* Demonſtravimus à communi omnium jam inde à condito orbe gentium ac populorum, præſertim bonorum & literatorum, conſenſione, animam humanam incorruptibilem & immortalem eſſe; eóque, corrupto corpore, ipſam manere ſuperſtitem; ut in ſempiternum aut pro benefactis à Deo coronetur, aut pro malefactis puniatur. Zanch. de Animarum immortalitate, p. 653.

AMong many other Largeſſes and rich Endowments beſtowed by the Creator's Bounty upon the Soul of Man, the * Sentiments and Impreſſions of the World to come, and the Ability of Reflection and Self-intuition, are peculiar, invaluable and heavenly Gifts. By the former, we have a very great Evidence of our own Immortality, and Deſignation for nobler Employments and Enjoyments than this imbodied State admits; and by the latter we may diſcern the Agreeableneſs of our Hearts, and therein the Validity of our Tittle to that expected Bleſſedneſs.

But theſe heavenly Gifts are neglected and abuſed all the World over. Degenerate Souls are every where fallen into ſo deep an Oblivion of their excellent Original, Spiritual and Immortal Nature, and Alliance to the Father of Spirits that (to uſe the upbraiding Expreſſion of a great † Philoſopher) they ſeem to be buried in their Bodies, as ſo many ſilly Worms that lurk in their Holes, and are loath to peep forth, and look abroad † ἡ δὲ δειλῶν ψυχὴ κατακεκρυγμένη ἐν σώμασι καὶ ἱματίοις ἐνθεὶς, εἰς φωλεὸν φιλεῖ τὸν φόλεον, &c. Max. Tyr. Diſſ. 41.

So powerfully do the Care, and Pleaſures of this World charm all (except a ſmall Remnant of regenerate Souls) that nothing but ſome ſmart Stroke of Calamity, or terrible Meſſengers of Death can ſtartle them; (and even they are not always able to do it) and when they do, all the Effect is but a tranſient Glance to another, and unwilling Shrug to leave this World; and ſo to ſleep again: And thus the Impreſſions and Sentiments of the World to come (which are the natural Growth and Off-ſpring of the Soul) are either ſtifled and ſuppreſt, as in Atheiſts; or born down by impetuous maſterly Luſts, as in Senſualiſts.

And for its ſelf-reflecting and conſidering Power, it ſeems in many to be a Power received in vain. It is with moſt Souls as it is with the Eye, which ſees not itſelf, tho' it ſees all other Objects. There be thoſe that have almoſt finiſhed the Courſe of a long Life (wherein a great Part of their Time hath lain upon their Hands as a cheap and uſeleſs Commodity, which they knew not what to do with) who yet never ſpent one ſolemn, entire Hour in Diſcourſe with their own Souls. What ſerious Heart doth not melt in Compaſſion over the deluded Multitude, who are mocked with Dreams, and perpetually buſied about Trifles? Who are (after ſo many fruſtrated Attempts both of their own, and all paſt Ages) eagerly purſuing the fleeting Shadows, who torture and rack their Brains to find out the Nature and Qualities of Birds, Beaſts, and Plants; indeed any thing rather than their own Souls, which are certainly the moſt excellent Creatures that inhabit this World. They know the true Value and worth of other Things, but are not able to eſtimate the Dignity of that high-born Spirit which is within them. A Spirit which (without the Addition of any more natural Faculties or Powers, if thoſe it hath be but ſanctified and devoted to God) is capable of the higheſt Perfections and Fruitions, even compleat conformity to God, the ſatisfying Viſions of God throughout Eternity. They herd themſelves with Beaſts, who are capable of an Equality with Angels. O what compaſſionate Tears muſt ſuch a Conſideration as this draw from the Eyes of all that underſtand the Worth of Souls!

Ita Dei eſt iſta vita mortalis, ubi homo vanitati ſimilis factus eſt; & diis ejus velut umbra prætereunt. Aug. de Civ. lib. 21. c. 24.

As for me, it hath been my Sin, and is now the Matter of my Sorrow, that whilſt Miriads of Souls (of higher Original than mine) are ſome of them beholding the higheſt Majeſty in Heaven, and others giving all Diligence to make ſure their Salvation on Earth; I was carried away ſo many Years in the Courſe of this World (like a Drop with the Current of the Tide) Wholly forgetting my beſt Self, my invaluable Soul; while I prodigally waſted the Stores of my Time and Thoughts upon Vanities, that long ſince paſſed away as the Waters which are remembred no more. * It ſhall be no Shame to me to confeſs my Folly, ſince the Matter of my Confeſſion ſhall go to the Glory of my God. I ſtudied to know many other Things, but I know not my ſelf. It was with me as with a Servant to whom his Maſter commits two Things, viz. the Child and the Child's Clothes; the Servant is careful of the Clothes, waſhes and bruſhes, ſtarches and ſteals them, and keeps them ſafe and clean; but the Child is forgotten and loſt. My Body which is but the Garment of my Soul I kept and nouriſhed with exceſſive Care; but my Soul was long forgotten and had been loſt for ever, as others daily are, had not God rouz'd it by the Convictions of his Spirit out of that Oblivion and deadly Slumber.

* Nec enim pudet ſanctus viros, poſtquam renovata corda fuerint per reſipiſcentiam, lapſus, ſui & dedecoris ad Dei gloriam meminiſſe. Nihil nobis decedit, quod cedit in illius honorem qui præteritis peccatis noſtris ab inferno nos transfert in Cœl. Brightman in Cantic. p. 21.

When the God that formed it, out of free Grace to the Work of his own Hands, had thus recovered it to a Senſe of its own Worth and Danger; my next Work is to get it united with Chriſt, and thereby ſecured from the Wrath to come. Which I found to be a Work difficult to effect, (if it be yet effected) and Work of Time to clear, tho' but to the Degree of good Hope thro' Grace.

And since the Hopes and Evidences of Salvation began to spring up in my Soul, and settle the State thereof, I found these three great Words, viz. Christ, Soul and Eternity, to have a far different, and more awful Sound in my Ear than ever they used to have. I looked on them from that Time, as Things of the greatest certainty, and most awful Solemnity. These Things have laid some Weight upon my Thoughts, and I have felt at certain Seasons a strong Inclination to sequester my self from all other Studies and spend my last Days and most fixed Meditations upon these three great and weighty Subjects.

I know the Subject Matter of my Studies and Enquiries (be it never so weighty) doth not therefore make my Meditations and Discourse upon it great and weighty: Nor am I such a vain Opinionator as to imagine my Discourses every way suitable to the Dignity of such Subjects; No, no, the more I think and study about them, the more I discern the Indistinctness, Darkness, Crudity, and Confusion of my own Conceptions, and Expression of such great and transcendent Things as those: But In magnis voluisse sat est, I resolved to do what I could; and accordingly some Years past I finished and published in two Parts the Doctrine of Christ; and by the Acceptation and Success the Lord gave that, he hath encouraged me to go on in this second Part of my Work, how unequal soever my Shoulders are to the Burden of it.

The Nature, Original, Immortality, and Capacity of mine own Soul, for the present lodged in, and related to this vile Body, destinated to Corruption; together with its Existence, Imployment, Perfection, Converse with God, and other Spirits, both of its own, and of a superior Rank and Order, when it shall (as I know it shortly must) put off this its Tabernacle; These Things have a long time been the Matters of my limited Desires to understand, so far as I could see the Pillar of Fire (God in his Word) enlightening my Way to the Knowledge of them. Yea, such is the Value I have for them, that I have given them the next Place in my Esteem, to the Knowledge of Jesus Christ, and my Interest in him.

God hath formed me (as he hath other Men) a prospecting Creature. I feel my self yet uncentred, and short of that State of Rest and Satisfaction to which my Soul in its Natural and Spiritual Capacity hath a Designation. I find that I am in a continual Motion towards my everlasting Abode, and the Expence of my Time; and many Infirmities tell me that I am not far from it: By which I am strongly prompted to look forward, and acquaint my self as much as I can with my next Place, and Imployment. I look with a greedy and inquisitive Eye that way.

Yet would I not be guilty of an unwarrantable Curiosity, in searching into unrevealed Things which Jesus Christ hath purchased and prepared for me, and all the rest that are waiting for his Appearance and Kingdom. I feel my Curiosity checked and repressed by that elegant Paronomasia, Rom. 12. 3. Μὴ ὑπερφρονεῖν παρὸ δεῖ φρονεῖν, ἀλλὰ φρονεῖν εἰς τὸ σωφρονεῖν, In all Things I would be wise unto Sobriety. I groan under the Effects of Adam's itching Ambition to know, and would not by repeating his Sin encrease my own Misery: Nor yet would I be scared by his Example into the contrary Evil of neglecting the Means God hath afforded me, to know all that I can of his revealed Will.

* The Helps Philosophy affords in some Parts of this Discourse, are too great to be despised and too small to be admired. I confess I read the Definitions of the Soul given by the ancient Philosophers, with a compassionate Smile. When Thales calls it a Nature without Repose; Asclepiades, an Exercitation of Sence; Hesiod, a Thing composed of Earth and Water; Parmenides, a Thing composed of Earth and Fire; Galen saith it is Heat; Hippocrates, a Spirit diffused thro' the Body; Plato, a self-moving Substance; Aristotle, calls it Entelechia, that by which the Body is moved: If my Opinion should be asked, which of all these Definitions I like best, I should give the same Answer which Theocritus gave an ill Poet, repeating many of his Verses, and asking which he liked best, Those (said he) which you have omitted. Or if they must have the Garland as the Prize they have shot for, let them have it upon the same Reason that was once given to him that always shot wide. Difficilius est toties non attingere, Because it was the greatest Difficulty to aim so often at the Mark, and never come near it. One Word of God gives me more Light than a thousand such Laborous Trifles. As Cæsar was best able to write his own Commentaries, so God only can give the best Account of his own Creature, on which he hath impressed his own Image.

* Cui enim veritas comperta sine Deo? Cui Deus cognitus sine Christo? Cui Christus exploratus sine Spiritu? Cui Spiritus accomodatus sine fide? Tert. de Anima.

Modern Philosophers, assisted by the divine Oracles, must needs come closer to the Mark, and give us a far better Account of the Nature of the Soul. Yet I have endeavoured not to cloud this Subject with their Controversies, or abstruse Notions; remembring what a smart but deserved Check Tertullian gives those, Qui Platonicum & Aristotelicum Christianismum producunt Christianis. Words are but the Servants of Matter. I value them as Merchants do their Ships, not by the gilded Head and Stern, the Neatness of their Mould, or curious Streamers, but by the Soundness of their Bottoms, Largeness of their Capacity, and Richness of their Cargo, and Loading. The Quality of this Subject necessitates in many Places the Use of Scholastick Terms, which will be obscure to the Vulgar Reader: But apt and proper Words must not be rejected for their Obscurity, except plainer Words could be found that fit the Subject as well, and are as fully expressive of the Matter. The unnecessary I have avoided, and the rest explained as I could.

The principal Fruits I especially aim at, both to my own and the Reader's Soul, are, That whilst we contemplate the Freedom, Pleasure, and Satisfaction of that Spiritual, Incorporeal People who dwell in the Region of Light and Joy, and are hereby forming to our Selves a true Scriptural Idea of the blessed State of those disembodied Spirits with whom we are to serve and converse in the Temple-worship in Heaven; and come more explicitly and distinctly to understand the Constitution, Order, and delightful Imployment of those our everlasting Associates: We may answerably feel the fond and inordinate Love of this Animal Life subacted and wrought down; the frightful Vizard of Death drop off, and a more pleasing Aspect appear; that no upright Soul that shall read these Discourses may henceforth be convulsed at the Name of Death, but chearfully aspire, and with pleasant Expectation wait for the blessed Season of its Transportation to that blessed Assembly. 'Tis certainly our Ignorance of the Life of Heaven that makes us dote as we do upon the present Life. There is a Gloom, a thick Mist overspreading the next Life, and hiding even from the Eyes of Believers, the Glory that is there. We send forth our Thoughts to penetrate this Cloud, but they return to us without the desired Success. We reinforce them with a Salley of new and more vigorous Thoughts, but ſtill they come back in Confuſion and Diſappointment, as to any perfect Account they can bring us from thence; tho' the oftener and cloſer we think ſtill the more we grow up into Acquaintance with theſe excellent Things.

Another Benefit I pray for, and expect from theſe Labours, is, that by deſcribing the horrid State of thoſe Souls which go the other way, and ſhewing to the Living the diſmal Condition of Souls departed in their unregenerate State, ſome may be awakned to a ſeaſonable and effectual Conſideration of their wretched Condition, whilſt they yet continue under the Means, and among the Inſtruments, of their Salvation.

Whatever the Fruits of this Diſcourſe ſhall be to others, I have Cauſe to bleſs God for the Advantage, it hath already given me. I begin to find more than ever I have done, in the ſeparate State of ſanctified Souls, that is capable of attracting an intellectual Nature; and if God will but fix my mind upon this State, and cauſe my pleaſed Thoughts about it to ſettle into a ſteddy Frame and Temper, I ſhall daily more and more depreciate and deſpiſe this common way of exiſtence in a Corporeal Priſon; and when the bleſſed Seaſon of my Departure is at hand, I ſhall take a chearful Farewel of the greater and leſſer Elementary World, to which my Soul hath been confined, and have an abundant Entrance through the broad Gate of Aſſurance, unto the bleſſed unbodied Inhabitants of the World to come.

A TREATISE OF THE SOUL of MAN.

GEN. II. Verse 7.

And the Lord God formed Man out of the Dust of the Ground, and breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life; and Man became a living Soul.

THree Things (saith * Athanasius) are unknown to Men according to their Essence, viz. God, Angels, and the Souls of Men. Of the Nature of the divine and high-born Soul, we may say as the learned † Whitaker doth of the way of its Infection by Original Sin; it is easier sought than understood, and better understood than explicated: And for its Original, the most sagacious and renowned for Wisdom amongst the || antient Philosophers understood nothing of it. It is said of Democritus, that there is * nothing in the whole Workmanship of Nature of which he did not write; and in a more lofty and swelling Hyperbole, they stile their Eagle-eyed Aristotle, the Rule, yea, and Miracle of Nature; Learning it self, the very Sun of Knowledge: Yet both these are not only said, but proved by Lactantius to be learned Ideots. How had the Schools of Epicurus and Aristotle, the Cartesians, and other Sects of Philosophers, abused and troubled the World with a kind of Philosophical Enthusiasm, and begat many ridiculous Fancies about the Original of the Soul of Man! and when all is done, three Words of God by the Pen of his inspired Moses, enlightens us more than all their subtil Notions of the accidental Concretion of Atoms, their Materia subtilis and Anima Mundi, and the rest of their unintelligible Fancies could ever do.

The account Moses gives us in this Context of the Birth of the World, and of Man the Epitome of it, is full of Sense, Reason, Congruity, and Clearness; and such as renders all the Essays of all the then Philosophers to be vain, inevident, self-repugnant, and inexplicable Theories.

The inspired Penman gives us in this Context a compendious Narrative of the World's Creation, telling more generally the rude, inform, and indigested Chaos; and then more particularly the specifying and diversifying of the various beautiful things, thence educed by the Motion of the Spirit brooded upon the Face of the Waters.

When the first Matter was strictly created out of nothing, the Spirit (as Moses excellently expresseth it, chap. 1. v. 2.) hovered, or moved over it as a Bird over her Eggs, and, as it were by way of Incubation, cherishing and influencing it, did thereby draw forth all the Creatures into their several Forms, and distinct particular Natures, wherein we now with Delight and Admiration behold them.

In this manner and order was the stately Fabrick of the World produced and erected; but as yet it remained as a fair and well furnished House without an Inhabitant. God had imployed infinite Wisdom and Power about it, and engraven his Name upon the meanest Creature in it; but there was no Creature yet made (except Angels, the Inhabitants of another City) to read the Name, and celebrate the Praises of the Almighty Creator.

He therefore thought the World imperfect till there was a Creature made to contemplate, praise and worship the Maker of it: For this very use and purpose was Man created, not only to see, but consider the Things he saw; discourse, and rationally collect out of them the Things he saw not; and both praise and love the Maker for, and in, them all.

The Palaces of Princes are not beautified and adorned to the intent Men should pay their Respects and Honours to the Walls, but to shew the Grandeur and Magnificence of the King, to whose Person their Honour is due, as Athenagoras in his excellent Apology for the Christians, speaks. The World is a glorious and magnificent Pile, raised designedly to exhibit the Wisdom and Power of its Creator to the reasonable Creature Man, that from him God might receive the Glory of all his other Works *

Of this Creature Man, the Master-piece of all the visible World, (and therefore crowned King over it the first Moment he was made, Psal. 8. 5.) Moses in the next place gives us the account, both of his Original whence he came, and of the Dignity what he is. The Lord God formed Man out of the Dust of the Ground, and breathed into

The Original { I. Of the Body / II. Of the Soul } of Man.

I. The Original of the Body of Man: Formed out of the Dust of the Ground. Dust was its original Matter: of Dust was it made, and into Dust it must be resolved, Gen. 3. 19. The Consideration is humbling, and serves to tame the Pride of Man, who is apt to dote upon his own Beauty. Man's Body was not made of heavenly Matter, as the radiant Sun, and sparkling Stars: No, nor yet of the most precious and orient earthly Matter; God did not melt down the pure and splendid Gold and Silver, or powder the precious Pearls and sparkling Diamonds; but he formed it of the vile and despicable Dust.

We find that the sprinkling of Dust upon new Writing prevents many a foul blot: I am sure, the sprinkling of our originary Dust upon our Minds by serious Consideration, is the way to prevent many a proud Boast.

However, the baseness of the Matter, and coarseness of the Stuff, serves to set off the admirable Skill of the most wise and powerful Architect, who out of such mean and despicable Materials, has fashioned so exact and elegant a Piece. The Lord God formed Man out of the Dust.

The Lord God.] The Name of God is here set down at full, * to set forth the Dignity of Man, the subject Matter wrought upon, as some conceive.

Pressit יצר Compressit, & per Metalepsin, premendo & comprimendo finxit, formavit.

Formed.] Fashioned, or curiously Moulded, and figured it. The Hebrew Verb primarily signifies to press, compress, or squeeze together; and by a Metalepsis, by pressing and compressing, to mould or fashion, as the Potter doth his Clay. The Psalmist useth another Word to express the artificial elegancy of the Body of Man, Psal. 139. 15. 16. רקמתי acupictus sum, I am embroidered painted, or flourished as with a Needle: We render it curiously wrought. Whatsoever Beauty and comely proportion God hath bestowed by Creation upon it, 'tis all answerable to that excellent Idea, or Model before conceived in his Mind and Purpose. All this Care and Cost was bestowed upon the Body of Man, which, when all is done, is but the Case in which that inestimable Jewel, the Soul, was to be lodged. This therefore I must lay aside, and come to the more noble Subject, Imaginem mente divinâ conceptam, quasi manu format. Fagius.

II. The Soul of Man: About which we have before us four Things to ponder in this Text, viz.

(1.) The Nature and Property,
(2.) The Descent and Original,
(3.) The manner of Infusion,
(4.) The Nexus, or Bond that unites
} the Soul of Man.

(1.) The Nature and Property of it, a living Soul. The Word נפש as also the Chaldee Naphsha; and his Nostrils the Breath of Life; and Man became a living Soul. Where we find, the Greek ψυχὴ have one and the same Etymology, all signifying to breathe, or respire; not that the Breath is the Soul, but denoting the manner of its Infusion by the Breath of God, and the means of its continuation in the Body, by the Breath of the Nostrils. God's Breath infused it, and our Breath continues its Union with the Body. It signifies here the rational Soul: and the Hebrew Word נפש a Soul hath a very near affinity with the Word נשמה the Heavens; and indeed there is a nearer affinity betwixt the Things, viz. Soul and Heaven, than there is betwixt the Names.

The Epithet חיה which we translate Living, the Arabick renders a rational Soul; and indeed none but a rational deserves the Name of a living Soul: for all other Forms or Souls which are of an earthly Extract, do both depend on, and die with the Matter out of which they were educed; but this being of another Nature, a spiritual and substantial Being, is therefore rightly stiled a living Soul.

The Chaldee renders it a speaking Soul. And indeed it deserves a Remark, that the ability of Speech is conferred on no other Soul but Mans. Other Creatures have apt and excellent Organs; Birds can modulate the Air, and form it into sweet delicious Notes, and charming Sounds; but no Creature except Man, whose Soul is of an Heavenly Nature and Extraction, can articulate the Sound, and form it into Words, by which the Notions and Sentiments of one Soul are in a noble, apt, and expeditious manner conveyed to the Understanding of another Soul. And indeed, what should any other Creature do with the faculty or power of Speech without a Principle of Reason to guide and govern it? It is sufficient to them that they discern each others meaning by dumb signs, much after the manner that we traded at first with the Indians: But Speech is proper only to the rational or living Soul, however we render it a living, a rational, or a speaking Soul, it distinguishes it the Soul of Man from all other Souls.

(2.) We find here the best Account that was ever given of the Origin of the Soul of Man, whence it came, and from whom it derives its being. O what a dust and pudder have the Disputes and Contests of Philosophers raised about this matter which is cleared in a few Words in this Scripture.

* God breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul: which plainly speaks it to be the immediate effect of God's creating Power. Not a Result from the Matter; no, no, Results flow sinu materiæ, out of the Bosom of Matter; but comes ex halitu divino, from the Inspiration of God. That which is born of the Flesh, is Flesh; but is a Spirit descending from the Father of Spirits God formed it, but not out of any pre-existent Matter, whether Celestial or Terrestrial; much out of himself, as the * Stoicks speak; but out of nothing. An high born Creature it is, but no Particle of the Deity. The indivisible and immutable Essence of God is utterly repugnant to such Notions: and therefore they speak strictly or warily enough that are bold to call Ray or Emanation from God.

* Sufflavit ad ostendendum animam hominis extrinseco esse per creationem, simulque creando inspiravit. Poli Synop. in locum.

* The Stoicks, saith Simplicius, call the soul ἀπόσπασμα τοῦ θείου pars vel fragmentum Dei: and Seneca, Deum in humano corpore hospitantem; which is near to Θεὸς ἐν σαρκὶ φανείς

A Spirit it is, and flows by way of Creation, im ediately from the Father of Spirits; but yet 'tis a irit of another inferiour Rank, and Order.

(3.) We have alſo the Account of the Way and nner of its Infuſion into the Body, viz. by the e Breath of God which gave it its Being. It is erefore a rational, ſcriptural, and juſtifiable Exſſion of S. Auguſtine, Creando infunditur, & infundo creatur; it is infuſed in creating, and created in infuſing; though Dr. Brown * too ſlightingly calls it a meer Rhetorical Antimetathesis. Some of the Fa-rs, as Juſtin, Ireneus, and Tertullian, were of Oion, That the Son of God aſſumed a human pe at this time, in which afterward he often apred to the Fathers, as a Prelude to his true and Incarnation; and took Duſt or Clay in his nds, out of which he formed the Body of Man, ording to the Pattern of that Body in which he eared: And that being done, he afterwards by thing infuſed the Soul into it. But I rather k it's an Anthropopathy, or uſual Figure in ech, by which the Spirit of God ſtoops to the ecility of our Underſtandings. He breathed into Noſtrils the Breath of Life; Heb. Lifes. But this al Word הימים notes rather the twofold Life of , in this World, and in that to come; or the ral Faculties and Powers belonging to one and ſame Soul, viz. the intellective, ſenſitive, and tive Offices thereof; than that there are more s than one, eſſentially differing, in one and the ſame Man; for that, as * Aquinas truly ſaith, is impoſſible. We cannot trace the way of the Spirit, or tell in what manner it was united with this Clod of Earth. But it is enough, that he who formed it, did unite or marry it to the Body. This is clear, me not by way of natural Reſultancy from the , by way of Inſpiration from the Lord; not the warm Boſom of the Matter, but from the th of its Maker.

of the Text thus opened, ariſe two Doctripoſitions, which I ſhall inſiſt upon, viz.

Doct. I. That the Soul of Man is of Divine Original, created and inſpired immediately by the Lord.

Doct. II. That the Souls and Bodies of Men are link'd or knit together by the feeble Band of the Breath of their Noſtrils.

In the Proſecution of theſe two Propoſitions many things will come to our Hands, of great Uſe in Religion; which I ſhall labour to lay as clearly and orderly in the Reader's Underſtanding, and preſs as warmly upon his Heart as I can. And firſt of the firſt;

Doct. I. That the Soul of Man is of Divine Original, created and inſpired immediately by the Lord.

In this firſt Propoſition two Things are to be diſtinctly pondered, viz.

I. The Nature
II. The Original } of the Soul.

Or what it is, and from whence it came.

I. The firſt thing which arreſts our Thoughts, and requires their Immoration and Exerciſe, is the Nature of the Soul, or what kind of Being it is. The Nature of the Soul.

Thoſe that are moſt curiouſly inquiſitive into all other Beings, and put Nature upon the Rack to make her confeſs her Secrets, are in the mean time found ſhamefully ſlight and negligent in the Study of themſelves. Few there are that can prevail with themſelves to ſit down and think cloſe to ſuch Queſtions as theſe are: What manner of Being is this Soul of mine? Whence came it? Why was it infuſed into this Body? And where muſt it abide, when Death hath diſlodg'd it out of this frail Tabernacle? There is a natural Averſation in Man to ſuch Exerciſes of Thoughts as theſe, although in the whole Univerſe of Beings in this lower World, a more noble or deſirable Creature is not to be found *.

* Cui igitur de Anima unquam diſputârunt, is certè non de re inani, & quæ nihil præter nomen habeat, ſed de re graviſſima, maximique momenti, quâ nihil ſub cœlo præſtantius, diſputâſſe judicandi ſunt Zanch. de Anima, lib. 2. pag. 555.

The Soul is the moſt wonderful and aſtoniſhing Piece of Divine Workmanſhip: 'Tis no Hyperbole to call it the Breath of God, the Beauty of Man, the Wonder of Angels, and the Envy of Devils. One Soul is of more Value than all the Bodies in the World.

The Nature of it is ſo ſpiritual and ſublime, that it cannot be perfectly known by the moſt acute and penetrating Underſtanding, aſſiſted in the Search by all the Aids Philoſophy can contribute.

It is not my Deſign in this Diſcourſe to treat of the ſeveral Faculties and Powers of the Soul, or to give you the Riſe, Natures, or Numbers of its Affections and Paſſions: but I ſhall confine my Diſcourſe to its general Nature, and Original. And ſeeing none can ſo well diſcover the Nature of it, as he who is the Author of it, as * Tertullian ſpeaks, I therefore juſtly expect the beſt Light from his Words, though I will not neglect any other Aid he is pleaſed elſewhere to afford.

* Si quid de Anima examinandum eſt, ad Dei regulas dirigat: certè nullum alium potiorem animæ Demonſtratorem, quàm Auctorem, &c. Tertul. de Anima.

† The Soul is variouſly denominated from its ſeveral Powers and Offices, as the Sea from the several Shores it washes. I will not spend time about the several Names by which it is known to us in Scripture, but give you that Description of it, with which my Understanding is most satisfied, which take thus:

The Description of the Soul.

The Soul of Man is a vital, spiritual, and immortal Substance, endowed with an Understanding, Will, and various Affections; created with an Inclination to the Body, and infused thereinto by the Lord.

IN this Description we have the two general Parts into which I distributed this Discourse; viz. its general Nature, and Divine Original. The Nature of the Soul is expressed to us in these following Terms.

I. It is a Substance.

That is to say, not a Quality, or an Accident inhering in another Being, or Subject; as Whiteness doth in the Snow: but a Being * by it self. Qualities and Accidents have no Existence of their own, but require another Being or Subject to their Existence; but the Soul of Man is a substantial Being of it self, which will evidently appear upon the following Grounds.

* Anima est Ens per se, (i. e.) non est in aliquo per modum partis, aut formæ, à quo in suo esse dependeat. Colleg. Conimb. in lib. 11.

(1.) Because it is in a strict and proper Sense created by God. He formeth or createth the Spirit in Man, Zech. 12. 1. To him we are advised to commit it, as to a faithful Creator, 1 Pet. 4. 19. The substantial Nature of the Soul is implied in the very Notion of its Creation; for * whatsoever is created, is a Substance, an Ens per se. Accidents are not said to be created, but concreated; the Crasis of Humours, and Results of Matter, are not Substances created, but things rising in a natural way from created Substances. They flow from, and, as to their very Essence, depend upon pre-existent Matter; but the Soul was created out of nothing, and infused into the Body after it was formed and organized; which evidenceth its substantial Nature.

* Quicquid à Deo proprie creatum est, substantia est: accidentia enim non dicuntur creari, sed concreari, Polani Syntag. p. 319.

(2.) This evidenceth the Soul to be a Substance, that it can and doth exist and subsist by it self alone, when separated from the Body by Death, Luke 23. 43. To Day shalt thou (i. e. thy Soul) be with me in Paradise; and Mat. 10. 28. Fear not them that kill the Body, but are not able to kill the Soul. Were the Soul but an Accident, a Quality, a Result, he that kills the Body must needs kill the Soul too; as he that casts a Snow-ball into the Fire must needs destroy the whiteness with the Snow. Accidents fail and perish with their Subjects: but seeing it's plain in these and many other Scriptures, the Soul doth not fail with the Body; nothing can be more plain and evident, than that it is of a substantial Nature.

When the Spaniards came first among the poor Indians, they thought the Horse and his Rider to be one Creature; as many ignorant ones think the Soul and Body of Man to be nothing but Breath and Body: whereas indeed they are two distinct Creatures, as vastly different in their Natures as the Rider and his Horse, or the Bird and his Cage. While the Man is on Horseback he moves according the motion of the Horse; and whilst the Bird incaged, he eats and drinks, and sleeps, and hops his Cage. But if the Horse fail and die under Rider, or the Cage be broken, the Man can go his own Feet, and the Bird enjoy himself as we yea better, in the open Fields and Woods than the Cage: Neither depend, as to Being or Actio on the Horse or Cage.

(3.) Both Scripture and Philosophy consent in th that the Soul is the chief, most noble, and prin pal part of Man, from which the whole Man and ought to be denominated. So Gen. 46. 26. the Souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, (i. e.) the Persons; as the Latines say, tot capita, so ma Heads or Persons. The Apostle in 2 Cor. 5. 8. see to exclude the Body from the Notion of Personal when he saith, We are willing rather to be absent fr the Body and to be present with the Lord: That Ille term of Personality, is there given to the Soul exc sively of the Body, for the Body cannot be abs from it self: but We, that is, the Souls of Believ may be both absent from it and present w Christ.

To this we may add 2 Cor. 4. 16. where Soul is called the Man, and the inner Man too, Body being but the external Face or Shadow of Man. And to this Philosophers agree. The best Philosophers are so far from thinking that the Bod the substantial part of Man, and the Soul a th dependent on it; that contrarily they affirm, the Body depends upon the Soul, * and that it is the Soul that conserves and sustains it; and that the Body is in the Soul, rather than the Soul in the Body, and that which is seen is not the Man, but that is the Man which is invisible, that the Body might be killed and the Man not hurt; meaning the Soul, which only deserves the Name of Man. Now if it be the chief part of Man, and that which is only worthy the Name of a Man, and from which therefore whole is and ought to be denominated a Man it be so far from depending on the Body, or be contained within the Body, that the Body re depends on it, and is in it; then surely the must be what we describe it to be, a substa Being.

* Anima corpus ani tum conservat, & sustent ubi autem illa relinquit pus, & animalis ratio, ma non est in corpore, quam in loco, cùm à circumscribi nequeat; per totum meat corp non est pars in qua n ta adsit: non enim à re tenetur, sed ipsi corpus. Neque est in pore ut in vase, vel in sed potius in ipsa est Nyssen. de Anima lib. ἐν ὅσῳ Ἀνθρωπός ἐστι Anima cujusque est que.

(4.) It is past all controversie, that the Soul Substance, because it is the subject of Properties, fections, and Habits; which is the very strict formal Notion of a Substance. All the Affect and Passions of Hope, Desire, Love, Delight, Sorrow, and the rest, are all rooted in it, and sp out of it; and so for Habits, Arts and Sciences *; 'tis the Soul in which they are lodged and seated. Having once gotten a promptitude to act, either by some strong, or by some frequent peated acting, they abide in the Soul, even the Acts are intermitted; as in Sleep a Navig Scribe or Musician, are really Artists, when are neither sailing, writing, or playing; the Habits ſtill remain in their Minds as is evident in this, that when they awake they can perform their ſeveral Works without learning the Rules of their Art anew.

* Anima subjectu δεκτικὸν omnium vir & vitiorum, scientiar artium. Buchan. lat. 86.

II. The Soul is a vital Subſtance, i. e.

A Subſtance which hath an eſſential Principle of Life in itſelf; a living, active Being. A living Soul, ſaith Moſes in the Text; and hereby it is diſtinguiſhed from, and oppoſed to Matter or Body. The Soul moves it ſelf and the Body too; it hath a ſelf-moving Virtue or Power in it ſelf; whereas the Matter or Body is wholly paſſive, and is moved and acted, not by itſelf, but by this vital Spirit. Jam. 2. 26. The Body without the Spirit is dead. It acts not at all, but as it is acted by this inviſible Spirit. This is ſo plain that it admits of ſenſible Proof and Demonſtration. Take meer Matter, and compound or divide it, alter it and change it how you will, you can never make it ſee, feel, hear, or act vitally without a quickning and actuating Soul: yet we muſt ſtill remember, that this active vital Principle, the Soul, tho' it hath this vital Power in it ſelf, it hath it not from it ſelf, but in a conſtant receptive Dependence upon God, the firſt Cauſe both of its Being and Power.

III. It is a Spiritual Subſtance.

All Subſtances are not groſs, material, viſible and palpable Subſtances, but ſpiritual and immaterial, as well as corporeal Subſtances diſcernible by ſight or touch. To deny this were to turn a downright Sadducee, and to deny the exiſtence of Angels and Spirits, Acts 23. 8. The Word Subſtance, as it is applied to the Soul of Man, puzzles and confounds the dark Underſtandings of ſome, that know not what to make of an immaterial Subſtance whereas in this place it is no more than ſubſtare accidentibus*, (i. e.) to be a Subject in which Properties, Affections and Habits are ſeated and ſubjected. This is a Spiritual Subſtance, and is frequently in Scripture called a Spirit; Into thy Hands I commit my Spirit, Luke 23. 46. Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit, Acts 7. and ſo frequently all over the Scriptures. And the Spirituality of its Nature appears, (1.) By its deſcent in a peculiar way from the Father of Spirits. (2.) In that it rejoyceth in the eſſential Properties of a Spirit. (3.) That at Death it returns to that great Spirit who was its efficient and former. (1.) It deſcends in a peculiar way from the Father of Spirits, as hath been ſhewn in the opening of this Text: God ſtiles himſelf its Father, Heb. 12. 9. its former, Zech. 12. 1. 'Tis true, he giveth to all living Things ζωὴν καὶ πνοὴν Life and Breath, Acts 17. 25. Other Souls are from him as well as the rational Soul; but in a far different way and manner. They flow not immediately from him by Creation, as this doth. It is ſaid, Gen. 1. 24. 27. Let the Earth bring forth the living Creature after its kind; but God created Man in his own Image: Which ſeems plainly to make a ſpecifical difference betwixt the reaſonal and all other Souls.

(2.) It rejoiceth in the eſſential Properties of a Spirit: for it is an incorporeal Subſtance as Spirits are. It hath not partes extra partes, extenſion of Parts; nor it is diviſible as the Body is. It hath not Dimenſions and Figures as Matter hath; but is a moſt pure, inviſible, and (as the acute and judicious Mr. More expreſſeth it) indiſcerpible ſubſtance It hath the Principle of Life and Motion in it ſelf, or rather, it is ſuch a Principle it ſelf, and is not moved as the dull and ſluggiſh Matter is, per aliud, by another. Its efficacy is great, though it be unſeen, and not liable to the teſt of our touch, as no ſpiritual Subſtances are. A Spirit (ſaith Chriſt) hath not Fleſh and Bones, Luke 24. 39. We both grant and feel, that the Soul hath a Love and Inclination to the Body, (which indeed is no more than it is neceſſary it ſhould have; yet can we no more infer its Corporiety from that Love to the Body, than we can infer the Corporiety of Angels from their affection and benevolent Love to Men. It is a Spirit of a Nature vaſtly different from the Body in which it is immerſed. There is (ſaith a learned Author) no greater Myſtery in Nature, than the Union betwixt the Soul and Body: That a Mind and Spirit ſhould be ſo tied and link'd to a Clod of Clay, that while that remains in a due Temper, it cannot by any Art or Power free it ſelf!--- What ſo much a kin are a Mind and a piece of Earth, a Clod and a Thought, that they ſhould be thus affixed to one another? Mr. How's Fun. Serm. p. 9. to

Certainly, the Heavenly pure Bodies do not differ ſo much from a Dunghil, as the Soul and Body differ: they differ but as more pure and leſs pure Matter; but theſe, as material and immaterial. If we conſider wherein conſiſts the Being of a Body, and wherein that of a Soul, and then compare them, the Matter will be clear.

We cannot come to an Apprehenſion of their Beings, but by conſidering their primary Paſſions and Properties, whereby they make diſcovery of themſelves. The firſt and primary affection of a Body * (as is rightly obſerved) is that extenſion of Parts whereof it is compounded, and a Capacity of diviſion, upon which, as upon the fundamental Mode, the particular Dimenſions (that is, the Figures) and the local Motion do depend.

* Philoſophical Eſſay, p. 2. §. 2. p. 39.

Again, for the Being of our Souls, if we reflect upon our ſelves, we ſhall find that all our Knowledge of them reſolves into this, that we are Beings conſcious to our ſelves of ſeveral kinds of Cogitations; that by our outward Senſes we apprehend bodily Things preſent, and by our Imagination we apprehend Things abſent; and that we oft recover into our Apprehenſion things paſt and gone, and upon our perception of things we find our ſelves variouſly affected.

Let theſe two Properties of a Soul and Body be compared, and upon the firſt view of a conſidering Mind it will appear, that diviſibility is not Apprehenſion, or Judgment, or Deſire, or Diſcourſe: That to cut a Body into ſeveral Parts, or put it into ſeveral Shapes, or bring it to ſeveral Motions, or mix it after ſeveral ways, will never bring it to apprehend, or deſire. No Man can think the combining of Fires and Air, and Water, and Earth, ſhould make the lump of it to know or comprehend what is done to it, or by it. We ſee manifeſtly, that upon the diviſion of the Body, the Soul remains entire and undivided. It is not the loſs of a Leg, or Arm, or Eye, that can maim the Underſtanding, or the Will, or cut off the Affections.

Nay,

* A Subſtance in this uſe of the Word, is that which ſtands not in reſpect of its being upon any other fellow Creature, as Accidents and Qualities do, whoſe Being is in having their in being in ſome other fellow Creature as their Subject; but this Being of the Soul, exiſts in it ſelf.

Nay, it pervades the Body it dwells in, and is whole in the whole, and in every part, * which it could never do if it were material. Yea, it comprehends in its Understanding, the Body or Matter in which it is lodged; and more than that, it can and doth from Conceptions of pure spiritual and immaterial Beings, which have no Dimensions or Figures; all which shews it to be no corporeal, but a spiritual and immaterial Substance.

* Understand it negatively, that the Soul is not in the Parts of the Body per partes, part in one Part and part in another, seeing it is indivisible, and hath no Parts.

(3.) As it derives its Being from the Father of Spirits in a peculiar way, and rejoiceth in its spiritual Properties: so at Death it returns to that great Spirit from whence it came. It is not annihilated, or resolved into soft Air, or suck'd up again by the Element of Fire, or catch'd back again into the Soul of the World, as some have dreamed; but it returns to God who gave it, to give an Account of it self to him and receive its Judgment from him. Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return to God who gave it, Eccles. 12. 7. Each part of Man to its like, Dust to Dust, and Spirit to Spirit. Not that the Soul is resolved into God, as the Body is into Earth; but as God created it a rational Spirit, conscious to it self of moral good and evil, so when it hath finish'd its time in the Body, it must appear before the God of the Spirits of all Flesh, its Arbiter and final Judge.

By all which we see, that as it is elevated too high on the one Hand, when it is made a Particle of God himself; not only the Creature, but a part of God, * as Plutarch and † Philo-Judeas, and others have term'd it; (Spirit it is, but of another and inferiour kind:) So it is degraded too low, when it is affirmed to be Matter, tho' the purest, finest, and most subtile in Nature; which approacheth neerest to the Nature of Spirit. A Spirit it is, as much as an Angel is a Spirit, tho' it be a Spirit of another species. This is the Name it is known by throughout the Scriptures. In a Word, it is void of mixture and composition; there are no jarring Qualities, compounded Elements, or divisible Parts in the Soul, as there are in Bodies; but it is a pure, simple, invisible and indivisible Substance, which proves its Spirituality, and brings us to the fourth particular, viz.

IV. It is an Immortal Substance.

The simplicity and spirituality of its Nature, of which I spake before, plainly shews us, that it is in its very Nature designed for Immortality; for such a Being or Substance as this hath, none of the Seeds of Corruption and Death in its Nature, as all material and compounded Beings have. It hath nothing within it tending to dissolution: No jarring Elements, no contrary Qualities are found in Spirits, as there are in other Creatures of a mixed Nature. Physitians and Philosophers have disputed and contended eagerly about the true causes of natural Death *; and whilst they have been contending about the way, they have come to the end. The ingress of the Soul is obscure, and its Egress not clear. But this seems to be the thing in which they generally center, that the expence and destruction of the † natural Moisture, or radical Balsam, as others call it, which is as the Oil that maintains natural heat, or the Bridle that restrains that flame of Life from departing (as others express it); this is the cause of natural Death. Others ‖ assign the unequal reparation of the Parts of the Body, as the cause of Death. But be it one or other, 'tis evident the Soul, which consists neither of contrariant Qualities, nor of dissimiliar Parts, must be above the reach and stroke of Death. For if the Soul die, it must be either from some Seeds and Principles of Death and Corruption within it self, or by some destructive Power without it self, it must be either by the stroke of some Creature, or from the Hand of God that first formed and created it: But the Hand and Power of no Creature can destroy it; Creatures-power reaches no further than the Body, Matth. 10. 28. They cannot kill the Soul. And though the Almighty Power of God that created it out of nothing, can as easily reduce it to nothing; yet he will never do so. For besides the designation for Eternity, which is discernible in its very Nature (as before was observed) and which speaks the Intention of God to perpetuate his threatnings of eternal Wrath, and promises of everlasting Life, respectively made to the Souls of Men, as they shall be found in Christ or out of Christ, puts it beyond all doubt that they shall never die; as will be more fully evidenced in the following Discourse.

* Litigamus de via, interim ad terminum rapimur.

Tum flammat & micat callidum nativum corporis nostri in humido primigenio, ejus humidi substantia consumitur, non aliter, quàm in lampade oleum à flamma exhauritur. Heurnius Aphor. 1. Tam diu durat vigor vitæ, quam diu stat calidum nativum, donec ad mortem sit accessus. J. Bapt. Montan. Ortus nostri primordia, caloris & humoris nativi habent summum complementum, &c. Fernelius liber de spir. & cal. ‖ Vergente ætate, inæqualiter modum sit reparatio, aliæ partes reparantur satis feliciter, sed aliæ ægrè, & in pejus. Ut ab eo tempore corpora humana subire incipiunt tormentum illud Mezentii, ut viva in amplexu mortuorum immoriantur. Verulam. in additu Hist. vit. & mort.

Well then, I hope so far our way is clear in the search of the Nature of the Soul, that it is a Substance, a spiritual Substance, and being so, it is also an immortal Substance. No doubt remains with me as to either of these. Let us then proceed to the consideration of its Faculties and Powers, by which it may be yet more fully known, and we shall find that,

It is a vital, spiritual, and immortal Substance, endued with an Understanding.

This is the noble leading Faculty of the Soul we are not distinguished from Brutes by our Senses but by our Understanding. As Grace sets out one Man above another, so Understanding sets the meanest Man above the best of Brutes. Strange and wonderful things are performed by the natural instinct and sagacity of Beasts; but yet what is said of one, is true of them all, God hath not imparted Understanding to them, Job 39. 17. This is a Jewel which adorns none but rational Creatures, Men and Angels.

* It is a Faculty of the reasonable Soul, by which a Man apprehends and judgeth all intelligible things.

* What the Understanding is.

The Object of its every Being, ſo far as it is true in ſelf, and apprehenſible by Man. It hath a two fold uſe in the Life of Man, viz.

(1) To diſtinguiſh Truth from Error and Falſhood. By this Candle of the Lord, lighted up in the Soul of Man, he may diſcern betwixt Duty and Sin, Good and Evil: 'Tis the Eye of the Soul, by which ſeeth the way in which we ſhould go, and the angerous Precipices that are on either ſide. It is e Souls Taſter, and diſcerns wholeſom Food from aneful Poyſon, Job. 12. 11. Doth not the ear (i. e. the Underſtanding by the Ear) try Words, as the Mouth ſteth Meat? It brings all things, as it were, in the amp before it, and then ſorts them, and orderly nks them into their proper Claſſes of lawful and un-wful, neceſſary and indifferent, expedient and in-pedient, that the Soul may not be damnified by ſtaking one for another. And this Judgment of iſcretion every Man muſt be allowed for himſelf. o Man is obliged to ſhut the Eyes of his own nderſtanding, and follow another Man blind-ld.

(2.) To direct and guide us in our Practice. This culty is by Philoſophers rightly called τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν the ding Faculty, becauſe the Will follows its practi l Dictates. It ſits at Helm, and guides the ourſe of the Soul: Not impelling or rigorouſly forcing its Dictates upon the Will; for the Will nnot be ſo impoſed upon; but by giving it a rective Light, or pointing as it were with its nger, at what it ought to chuſe, and what to re-e.

To this Faculty belong two other excellent and wonderful Powers of the Soul, viz.

1. Thoughts.
2. Conſcience.

1. The Power or Ability of Cogitation: Thoughts are properly the Actings and Agitations of the Mind, or any actual Operation of the Underſtanding. They are the Muſings of the Mind which are acted in the ſpe-ative part of the Underſtanding. It is obſerva-ble that the * Hebrew Word שיח ſuach, which is uſed for Meditation, or thinking, ſig-nifies both to think and to ſpeak in the Mind. When Underſtanding or Mind revolves and meditates Things that come into it, that very Meditation n inward ſpeaking, or a hidden Word in the rt, Deut. 15. 9. Beware leſt there be a Thought in wicked Heart, as ſome render it: In the Hebrew דבר עם לבבך a Word in thy Heart, Mat. 21. 25. Mat. 9. 3, 4 ἔλεγον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς they ſpake within themſelves, they thought in their Hearts. The Objects pre-ed to the Mind are the Companions with whom Hearts talk and converſe.

What a Thought is.

πνω cum puncto ſini-locutus eſt ore, aut & διανοίχομαι eſt ſer-mari intra ſe, (i. e.) ſe in animis ſuis.

houghts are the Figments and Creatures of the d: they are formed within in multitudes innu-ble. The Power of Cogitation is in the Mind, yea in the Spirit of the Mind. * The Fancy indeed, while the Soul is embodied, or-rily, and for the moſt part preſents the appear-s and likeneſſes of things to the Mind; yet it orm Thoughts of things which the Fancy can preſent no Image of, as when † the Soul thinks of God, or of it ſelf. This Power of Cogitation goes with the Soul, and is root-ed in it when it is ſeparated from the Body; and by it we ſpeak to God, and con-verſe with Angels, and other Spirits in the unbo-died State, as will be more fully opened in the Pro-ceſs of this Diſcourſe.

† When we think of God, ſaith Max. Tyr. Diſſ. 1. we muſt think of nothing material, μήτε ὕλης τι μετὰ τοῦ θεοῦ νοῶμεν, ἄπειρα γὰρ ἐκεῖνα καὶ ἀσώματα.

2. The Conſcience belongs alſo to this Faculty; for it being the Judgment of a Man upon himſelf, with reſpect or relation to the Judgment of God, it muſt needs belong to the underſtanding Part or Fa-culty. Thoughts are form-ed in the ſpeculative, but Con-ſcience belongs to the practi-cal Underſtanding. It is a very high and aw-ful Power; it is ſolo Deo minor, and rides (as Joſeph did) in the ſecond Chariot; the next and immediate Officer under God. He ſaith of Con-ſcience with reſpect to every Man, as he once ſaid of Moſes with reſpect to Pharaoh, See, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, Exod. 7. 1. The Voice of Conſcience is the Voice of God; for it is his Vicegerent and Repreſentative. What it binds on Earth, is bound in Heaven; and what it looſeth on Earth, is looſed in Heaven. It obſerves, records, and bears Witneſs of all our Actions; and acquits and condemns as in the Name of God for them. Its Conſolations are moſt ſweet, and its Condemnations moſt terrible; ſo terrible, that ſome have choſen Death, which is the King of Terrors, rather than to endure the ſcorching Heat of their own Conſciences. The greateſt Defe-rence and Obedience is due to its Commands, And a Man had better * en-dure any Rack or Torture in the World, than incur the Torments of it. It ac-companies us as our Shadow, where-ever we go; and when all others forſake us, (as at Death they will) Conſci-ence is then with us, and is never more active and vigorous than at that Time. Nor doth it forſake us after Death; but where the Soul goes, it goes, and will be its Companion in the o-ther World for ever. How glad would the Dam-ned be if they might but have left their Con-ſciences behind them when they went hence! And thus briefly of the Underſtanding, which hath many Offices, and as many Names from thoſe Offices.

It is ſometimes called Wit, Reaſon, Underſtanding, Opinion, Wiſdom, Judgment. And why we beſtow ſo many Names upon one and the ſame Faculty, the learned Author of that ſmall, but excellent || Tract de Ani-ma, gives this true and inge-nious Account.

The Wit, the Pupil of the Soul's clear Eye,
And in Man's World the only ſhining Star,

Looks in the Mirrour of the Fantasie,
Where all the Gatherings of the Senses are;
And after by discoursing to and fro,
Anticipating and comparing Things,
She doth all universal Natures know,
And all Effects into their Causes brings.

When she rates Things, and moves from Ground to Ground,
The Name of Reason she obtains by this:
But when by Reason she the Truth hath found,
And standeth fix'd, she Understanding is.
When her Ascent she lightly doth incline
To either Part, she is Opinion light:
But when she doth by Principles define
A certain Truth, she hath true Judgment's Sight.

And as from Senses, Reason's Work doth spring,
So many Reasons Understanding gain;
And many Understandings Knowledge bring,
And by much Knowledge Wisdom we obtain.

VI. God hath endued the Soul of Man not only with an Understanding to discern and direct, but but also a Will to govern, moderate, and over-rule the Actions of this Life.

6. Endu'd with a Will.

The Will is a Faculty of the rational Soul, whereby a Man either chuseth or refuseth the Things which the Understanding discerns andknows.

What the Will is.

This is a very high and noble Power of the Soul. The Understanding seems to bear the same Relation to the Will, as a grave Councellor doth to a great Prince. It glories in two Excellencies, viz.

1. Liberty.
2. Dominion.

1. It hath Freedom and Liberty; it cannot be compelled and forced: Coaction is repugnant to its very Nature. In this it differs from the Understanding, that the Understanding is wrought upon necessarily, but the Will acts spontaneously. This Liberty of the Will respects the Choice or Refusal of the means for attaining those Ends it prosecutes, according as it finds them more or less conducible thereunto. The Liberty of the Will must be understood to be in Things natural, which are within its own proper Sphere, not in Things supernatural. It can move or not move the Body as it pleases, but it cannot move towards Christ in the Way of Faith as it pleaseth; it can open or shut the Hand or Eye at its Pleasure, but not the Heart. True indeed, it is not compelled or forced to turn to God by supernatural Grace, but in a Way suitable to its Nature, it is determined and drawn to Christ, Psal. 110. 3. It is drawn by a mighty Power, and yet runs freely; Cant. 1. 4. Draw me, and I will run after thee.

Ἐνυσιεχὲ ἑξωσία αὐτὸ ἀφαιρεῖσθαι. ZENO.

Efficacious Grace, and victorious Delight, is a Thing very different from compulsive Force. 'Pelagius (as late * Author speaks) at first gave all to Malure, acknowledged no Necessity of Divine Grace; but when this proud Doctrine found little Countenance, he called Nature by the Name of Grace; and when that Deceit was discovered, he acknowledged no other Grace but outward Instruction, or the Benefit of external Revelation, to discourse and put Men in mind of their Duty. Being yet driven farther, he acknowledged the Grace of Pardon; and before a Man could do any Thing acceptably, there was a Necessity of the Remission of Sin, and then he might obey God perfectly. But that not sufficing, he acknowledged another Grace, viz. the Example of Christ, which doth both secure our Rule and encourage our Practice. And last of all, his Followers own'd some kind of internal Grace, but they made that to consist in some Illumination of the Understanding, or moral Persuasion, by probable Arguments, to excite the Will, and this not absolutely necessary, but only for Facilitation, as a Horse to a Journey, which otherwise a Man might go a foot. Others grant the secret Influences of God's Grace, but make the Will of Man a co-ordinate Cause with God, namely that God doth propound the Object, hold forth inducing Considerations; give some remote Power and Assistance; but still there is an Indifferency in the Will of Man, to accept or refuse as liketh him best. Thus have they been forced to quit and change their Ground; but still the Pride of Nature will not let Men see the Necessity of divine efficacious Influences upon the Will and the Consistency thereof with natural Liberty.

* Dr. Manto in Psal. 119. v. 36.

2. Its Dignity in its Dominion as well as in its Liberty. The Will hath an Empire and Sceptre belonging to it; yea, a double Empire; for it rules.

Imperium { 1. Despoticum. 2. Politicum. } { 1. Over the imperio dispotico, by Way of absolute Command. 2. Over the other Powers and Passions of the Soul, imperio politico, by Way of Suasion.

(1.) The Will, like an absolute Sovereign * reigns over the Body, (i. e.) its external Members by way of absolute Command. It saith, as the Centurion did, I am in Authority, and God hath put the many Members of the Body in subjection to me: I say to one, move, and it moves; to another, stop, and it stops; and to a third do this, and it doth. The obsequious Members of the Body like so many Servants, have their Eyes waiting on the imperial Commands of the Will, and it is admirable to behold with what great Dispatch and Speed they execute its Commands, as if their obedient Motion were rather concomitant than subsequent Acts to the Will's Mandates. Let it but command to have the Windows of the Body open or shut, and it's done in a Moment, in the Twinkling of an Eye; and so for the rest of the external Senses and Members, they pay it most ready Obedience. Yet when I say, the Will hath a despotical and absolute Sovereignity over the Members, it must be understood with a double Limitation. First they are only at its beck for Use and Service; it can use them whilst well, and rightly disposed; but it cannot perpetuate them or restore them when indisposed. If the Soul quits the Health and Life of the Body never so intensely and vehemently, it cannot keep off Death one Moment the longer from it. And secon ts Sovereignty no way intrenches upon nor in-erferes with the Dominion of Providence over e Members of the Body, and the various Mo-ons of them. God hath reserved a Sovereign gative Voice to himself, whatever Decrees the ill passes. Jeroboam stretches out his Hand a-inst the Man of God to smite him; but God its a Remora in the very Instant to the loco-otive Faculty, that tho' he would never so fain, he uld not pull in his Hand again to him, 1 Kings . 4. The Will commands the Service of the ongue, and chargeth to deliver faithfully such or h Words, in which, it may be, the Ruin of me good Man may be imported; and when comes to do its Office, the Tongue falters; d contrary to the Command of the Will, drops e Word that discovers and defeats the Design the Will, according to that in Job 12. 20. removeth away the Speech of the Trusty. This s despotical and sovereign Power over the ex nal Members of the Body.

* Homo non agit ex necessitate naturæ, sed libertate, sc. modo rationali, hoc est modo imperii. Ad imperium requiritur dictamen primum intellectus practici & stante efficacia imperii voluntas liberè, movet. Cumel. de Volun. p. 50.

(2.) It hath a political Power over the Facul and Passions of the Soul, not by way of olute Command, but by way of Suasion and asion. Thus it can oft-times persuade the Un standing and Thoughts to lay by this or that ect, and apply themselves to the Study of ther. It can bridle and restrain the Affections Passions, but yet it hath no absolute Com-d over the inner, as it hath over the out-d Man. Its Weakness and Inability to govern inner Man appears in two Things more espe-y remarkable, viz. 1. It cannot with all its er and Skill command and fetch off the ughts from some Subjects which are set on me Times with extraordinary Weight upon oul. However the Thoughts may obsequiously w its beck at some Times, yea, for the most ; yet there are Cases and Seasons, in which uthority and Persuasions cannot disengage one ght:

(1.) When God hath to do with the Soul e Work of Conversion, when he convinceth of and Danger, and sets a Man's Evil in order e his Eyes: these are terrible Representations, hain would the carnal Will disengage the ghts from some sad Subjects, and strives by nner of Persuasions and diversions so to do; ll to no Purpose Psal 51. v. 3. My Sin is before me. The Thoughts are fixed, and is no removing of them. It may give them e interruption, but they return with the mpetuous Violence. And instead of gaining off, they at last (or rather God by them gains e Will also.

When Satan hath to do with the Soul in y of Temptation and hellish Suggestion: Look Carnal Will opposed it self to the hts in the former Case to no purpose; the Sanctified Will opposes it self to them in ase, oft-times with as little Effect or Succes, hat opposeth his weak Breath to the strong t of a mighty River. Well were it, if ctified Will were now the Master of the , and could controul the Thoughts of the but like a mad Horse, the Fancy takes it in its Teeth, and runs whither it ; the Will cannot govern it. Think quite Way, saith the Will; turn thy Thoughts r Things; but much the near, the Soul a deaf Ear to its Councels. 2. It can-t and compose a raging Conscience, and reduce it at its Pleasure to Rest and Peace. This is the peculiar Work of God. He only that stills the stormy Seas, can quiet the distressed and Tempestuous Soul. The Impotence of the Will in this Case is known to all that have been in those Deeps of Trouble. And this is the Misery of the Devil and the Damned, that tho' they would never so fain, yet they cannot get rid of those tormenting Impressions made upon them by their own trembling and condemning Consciences. There would not be so many pale, sweating, affrighted Consciences on Earth, and in Hell, if the Will had any Command or Power over them.

Criminibus; tacitâ sudant præcordia culpâ.

'Tis an horrible Sight to see such a Trembling upon all the Members, such a cold Sweat upon the panting Bosom of a self-condemned and wrath-presaging Soul, in which it can by no means relieve or help it self. These Things are exempt from the Liberty and Dominion of the Will of Man; but notwithstanding these Exemptions, it is a noble Faculty, and hath a vastly-extended Empire in the Soul of Man; it is the Door of the Soul, at which the Spirit of God knocks for entrance. When this is won, the Soul is won to Christ; and if this stand out in Rebellion against him, he is barred out of the Soul, and can have no saving Union with it. The Truth of Grace is to be judged and discerned by its Compliance with his call, and the Measure of Grace to be estimated by the Degree of its Subjection to his Will.

VII. The Soul of Man is not only indued with an Understanding, and Will, but also with various Affections and Passions, which are of great Use and Service to it, and speak the Excellency of its Nature. They are originally design'd and appointed for the Happiness of Man, in promoting and securing its chiefest Good, to which Purpose they have a natural aptitude: For the true Happiness and Rest of the Soul not being in it self, nor in any other Creature but in God, the Soul must necessarily move out of it self, and beyond all other created Beings, to find and enjoy its true Felicity in him. The Soul considered at a Distance from God, its true Rest and Happiness, is furnished and provided with Desire and Hope to him. These are the Arms it is to stretch out towards him, in a State of Absence from him. And seeing it is to meet with many Obstacles, Enemies and Difficulties in its Course, which hinder its Motion, and hazard its Fruition of him, God hath planted in it Fear, Grief, Indignation, Jealousie, Anger, &c. to grapple with, and break, thro' those intercurrent Difficulties and Hazards. By these Weapons in the Hands of Grace, it conflicts with that which opposes its Passages to God, as the Apostle expresseth that Holy Fret and Passion of the Corinthians, and what a Fume their Souls were in by the gracious Motion of the irracible Appetite; 2 Cor. 7. 11. For behold this self-same Thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly Sort; what Carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing your selves, yea, what Indignation, 7. Furnished with various Affections and Passions.

dignation, yea, what Fear, yea, what vehement Desire, yea, what Zeal, yea, what Revenge? Much like the Raging and Strugling of Waters, which are interrupted in their Course by some Dam or Obstacle, which they strive to bear down, and sweep away before them.

But the Soul considered in full Union with and Fruition of God, and supreme Happiness, is accordingly furnished with Affections of Love, Delight, and Joy; whereby it rests in him, and enjoys its proper Blessedness in his Presence for ever. Yea, even in this Life these Affections are in an imperfect Degree exercised upon God, according to the Prelibations and Enjoyments it hath of him by Faith in its Way to Heaven. In a Word,

The True Uses and most excellent Ends for which these Affections and Passions are bestowed upon the Soul of Man, are to qualify it, and make it a fit Subject to be wrought upon in a moral way of Persuasions and Allurements, in order to its Union with Christ, for (for by the Affections, as Mr. Fenner rightly observes, the Soul becomes marriagible, or capable of being espoused to him;) and being so, then to assist it in the Prosecution of its full enjoyment in Heaven, as we heard but now.

But alas! how are they corrupted and inverted by Sin! The concupiscible Appetite greedily fastens upon the Creature, not upon God; and the irascible Appetite is turn'd against Holiness, not Sin. But I must insist no farther on this Subject here, it deserves an entire Treatise by it self.

VIII. The Soul of Man hath in the very Frame and Nature of it, an inclination to the Body. There is in it a certain Pondus or Inclination which naturally bends or sways it towards Matter, or a Body. There are three different Natures found in living Creatures, viz.

1. The Brutal.
2. The Angelical.
3. The Humane.

(1.) The Soul of a Brute is wholly confined to, and dependent on the Matter or Body with which it is united. It is dependent on it both in esse & in operari, in its being and working; it is but a material Form, which rises from, and perisheth with the Body. The Soul of a Brute (saith a great Person) is a fluid bodily Substance, the more lively, and refined Part of Blood (called Spirit) quick in Motion, and from the Arteries by the Branches of the Carotides carried to the Brain; and from thence conveyed to the Nerves and Muscles, move the whole Frame and Mass of the Body; and receiving only certain weak Impressions from the Senses, and of short Continuance, hindered and obstructed of its Work and Motion, vanishes into the soft Air.

Lord Chief Justice Hale in his Treatise de Anima, p. 56.

(2.) An Angel is a Spirit free from a Body, and created without an Appetite or Inclination to be embodied. The Stoicks call the Angels ἀσώματας ψυχὰς, Souly Substances; and the *Peripatetick*s, formas abstractas, abstract Forms. They are Spirits free from the Fetters and Clogs of the Body.

* An Angel is a perfect Soul, and an Humane Soul is an imperfect Angel. Yet Angels have no such rooted Disaffection and Abhorrence of a Body, but they have, and can, in a ready Obedience to their Lord's Commands, and Delight to serve him, assume Bodies for a Time to converse with Men in them, (i. e.) Aerial Bodies. So we read, Gen. 18. 2. Three Men (i. e. Angels in humane Shape and Appearance) stood by Abraham, and talked with him; and CHRIST's Sepulchre, Luke 24. There appear two Men in shining Garments. But They abide these Bodies as we do in an Inn, for a Night or short Season: They dwell not in them as our Souls in those Houses of Flesh, which we cannot put off at Pleasure, as they do; but as we walk in our Garments, which we can put off without Pain.

(3.) The humane Soul is neither wholly [illegible] to the Body, as the brutal Soul is, nor created without Inclination to a Body, as Angels are, but loves, and inclines to it, tho' it can both live and act without it, when it is parted from it at Death. The Proof of this Assertion, and the Reasons why God created it with such an Inclination, will in their proper Place be more fully spoken to in the following Discourse. One that I shall add, is, That in this, as well as in some other Respects, our Souls are made a little lower than the Angels; but when they are uncloathed of the Body, and have received it again in a glorious Edition, a spiritual Body, then they shall be in a Manner equal to Angels in the Way and Manner of Being.

Thus I have, as briefly as I can, dispatched the first Thing propounded, viz. the Nature of the Soul, in the Explication of these several particulars: It is a Substance, a vital, Spiritual, immortal Substance, a Substance endued with Understanding, Will, Affections, and an Inclination to the Body. And now we are come to the

II. Branch, viz. Its Original and Infusion.

I. As to its Original, I have described it to be immediately from God, in the Way of Creation, an Honour done to no other living Creature but Angels. The World hath been troubled with a great many extravagant and wild Notions about the Original of the Soul of Man; (a clear Mark and Argument of its Apostacy from God). * Solinus writes of one, who by a Wound in the hinder Part of his Head, fell into such a Degree of Ignorance and Oblivion, that he forgot his own Name, and could not tell whether he had any Name at all. But what a stunning Blow did Man receive by the Fall, that he should forget the very Author of their Being, and rather claim Alliance, and derive the Being of his Soul from any Thing than God; tho' it bears the very Marks and Characters of its Divine Author and Father upon it! One principal Errors about the Origin of the Soul, that wild Notion of Epicurus hath been of late flat by the Pens of many learned Men, (and it is a Vanity to strike one Blow more at it) may be reduced to these three Heads.

* Solinus refert [illegible] dam, quod accepto, in occipitio ad tan[illegible] venit ignorantiam, ciret se habuisse Augusto dun. de Mundi, lib. 4. c. 24.

(1.) Some affirm it to be by way of † Traduction, or natural generation from the Parents to the Child. This Opinion is very ancient, Tertullian and divers of the Western Fathers closed with it, as judging it best expedient to solve the Difficulties of the Soul's Taint and Defilement with Original Sin. But Antiquity is no Pasport for Errors. The grey Hairs of Opinion (as one well notes) are then honourable, when they are found in the Way of Truth. Doctor Brown tells us, He should rather incline to the Creation, than the Traduction of the Soul, tho' either opinion (saith he) will consist well enough with Religion, did not one Objection haunt him, and this is a Confusion from the equivocal and monstrous Productions by unnatural Copulations; as of a Man and Beast: For if the Soul of Man (saith he) be not transmitted and transfused in the Seed, why are not those Productions meerly Beasts, but have also an Impression and Tincture of Reason in as high a Measure as it can evidence it self in those improper Organs?

† Datur agens Physicum quod aliud esse non potest quam parens; qui ei semini animam materiæ sinu elicit.

* Religio Medici, Sect. 36.

Which way the Doctor's Judgment had inclined in this Controversy, had been of no great Consideration to the Determination of it; tho' it is pity we should lose his Consent and Company, for the sake of such a beastly Objection as this, which haunts his Mind: For if there be any such Creatures, that seem to have a Tincture of Reason, it is but a Tincture, and a seeming, not a real Tincture neither, which many other Brutes have.

The Doctor is too well acquainted with Philosophy, and a Man of too much Reason to allow himself to think that such a Production, as he speaks of, hath two Natures and essential Forms in one Body, as of a Man and a Horse. He knows that every Entity hath but one specifical Essence, and can have no more except he will make one and the same Thing under divers Species in the Predicament of Substance. And as there cannot be two distinct Forms, so neither can there be a Mixtion of them in the Centaur or monstrous Birth: For ex duobus entibus per se, non fit unum per se. But he confesseth this Objection was bred among the Weeds and Tares of his own Brain, (a rank Soil no doubt) and I am pretty confident he had weeded it out in his latter Years; for had this Notion of the Centaurs (that is, half Horse half Man) put into its proper Place among his vulgar Errors, Book I. Ch. 4. And so I suppose that he being out of the Way, he return'd again to us.

(2.) A second Opinion was, that they were created by Angels; and that which gave the Ground (such as it is) to this Opinion, or Fancy, was the Similitude or Resemblance which is found betwixt Angels and the Souls of Men. But this Fancy needs not any Industry to overthrow it; though it be certain there is a Similitude and Resemblance * betwixt Angels and Souls, both being immaterial and spiritual Substances, yet Angels neither propagate by generation, nor is it in their Power to create the least Fly or Worm in the World, much less the Soul of Man, the highest, and noblest, and most excellent Being. Great Power they have, but no creating Power, that is God's incommunicable Property; and procreate our Souls they did not, for they are Spirits yet Spirits of another Species.

(3.) A third Sort there are who deny not, that Souls are created Substances, and proceeded from God; but affirm withal, that he created them simul, & semel, together and at once, as the Angels were, and not one by one, as Men are born into the World. Of this Opinion was Plato, who thought * all humane Souls to be created together before their Bodies, and placed in some glorious and suitable Mansions, as the Stars, till at last growing weary of heavenly, and falling in love with Earthly Things, for a Punishment of that Crime, they were cast into Bodies, as into so many Prisons. Origin suck'd in the Notion of the Pre-existence of Souls. And upon this Supposition it was that Porphyry tells us, in the Life of Plotinus, he blushed as often as he thought of his being in a Body, as a Man that liv'd in Reputation and Honour, blushes when he is lodged in a Prison. The Ground on which the Stoicks bottom'd their Opinion was, the great Dignity and Excellency of the Soul, which inclin'd them to think they had never been degraded and abased as they are by dwelling in such vile Bodies, but for their Faults; and that it was for some former Sin of theirs, that they slid down into gross Matter, and were caught into a vital Union with it: Whereas, had they not sinned, they had liv'd in celestial and splendid Habitations more suitable to their Dignity.

The coetaneous Creation of Souls rejected.

* Plato in Timæo finxit Deum omnes animas humanas ante corpora simul creasse, & in comparibus stellis constituisse: tum eas cœlestium rerum tædio, & terrenarum amore captas, ut tanti sceleris pœnas luerent, in corpora tanquam in carcerem conjectas.

But this is a pure Creature of Fancy; for (1) no Soul in the World is conscious to it self of such a Pre-existence, nor can remember when it was owner of any other Habitation than that it now dwells in. (2.) Nor doth the Scripture give us the least Hint of any such Thing. Some indeed would catch hold of that Expression, Gen. 2. 2. God rested the seventh Day from all the Works which he had made: And it is true, he did so, the Work of Creation was finished and sealed up, as to any new Species or kind of Creature to be created; no other sort of Souls will be created, than that which was at first: But yet God still creates individual Souls (My Father worketh hitherto, and I work) of the same Kind and Nature with Adam's Soul. And (3.) for their Detrusion into these Bodies as a Punishment of their Sins in the former state; if we speak of Sin in Individuals, or particular Persons; the Scripture mentions none, either original, or actual, defiling any Soul in any other Way but by its Union with the Body. Pre-existence therefore is but a Dream.

But to me it's clear, that the Soul receives not its Beginning by Traduction or Generation; for that which is generable, is also corruptible; but the spiritual immortal Soul (as it hath been prov'd to be) is not subject to Corruption. Nor is it imaginable how a Soul should be produced out of Matter, which is not endued with Reason: Or how a bodily Substance can impart that to another, which it hath not in it self. If it be said, the Soul of the Child proceeds from the Parents, that cannot be; for spiritual Substances are impartible, and nothing can be discinded from them. * And it is absurd to think the Soul of Adam should spring from one Original, and the Souls of his Off spring from another, whilst both his and theirs are one and the same Nature and Species. To all which let me add, that as this Assertion of their Creation is most reasonable, so it is most scriptural. It is reasonable to think and say, † that no active Power can act beyond or above the proper Sphere of its activity and Abilitiy. But if the Soul be elicited out of the Power of Matter, here would be an Effect produced abundantly more noble and excellent than its Cause. And as it is most reasonable, so it is most scriptural. To this Purpose divers Testimonies of Scripture are cited and produced by our Divines, amongst which we may single out four, which are of special Remark and Use; Heb. 12. 9. Furthermore, we had Fathers of our Flesh which corrected us and we gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection to [the Father of Spirits] and live? Here God is called the Father of Spirits, or of Souls, and that in an emphatical Antithesis, or Contradistinction to our natural Fathers of our Flesh, or Bodies only. The true Scope and Sense of this Text is with great Judgment and Clearness given us by that learned and judicious Divine Mr. * Pemble, in these Words: [Nothing is more plain and emphatical than this Antethesis, We receive our Flesh and Body from our Parents, but our Souls from God: if then we patiently bear the Chastisements of our Parents, who are Authors of the vilest Part, and have the least Right or Power over us, with how much more equal a Mind should we bear his Chastisements, who hath the supreme Right to us, as he is the Father and only Giver of that which is most expedient in us, viz. our Souls or Spirits?] Here it seems Evident, that our Souls flow not to us in the material Channel of fleshly Generation or Descent, as our Bodies do, but immediately from God their proper Father, in the way of Creation. Yet he begets them not out of his own Essence or Substance, as Christ his natural Son is begotten, but ἐκ μὴ ὄντων, out of Nothing that had been before, as Theodoret well expresseth it. Agreeable hereunto is that place also in † Zech. 12. 1. The Lord which stretcheth forth the Heavens, and laieth the Foundations of the Earth, and formeth the Spirit of Man within him: Where the forming of the Spirit or Soul of Man is associated with those two other glorious Effects of God's creating Powers, namely, the Expansion of the Heavens, and laying the Foundations of the Earth; all three are here equally assumed by the Lord, as his remarkable and glorious Works of Creation. He that created the one, did as much create the other.

Now the two former we find frequently instanced in Scripture, as the Effects of his creating Power, or Works implying the Almighty Power of God; and therefore are presented as strong Props to our Faith, when it is weak and staggering, for want of visible Matter of Incouragement, Is. 40. 22. and 42. 5. Jer. 10. 12. Job 9. 8. Psal. 104. 2. q. d. Are my People in Captivity, and their Faith nonplust and at a Loss, because there's nothing in night that hath a Tendency to their Deliverance, no prepared Matter for their Salvation? Why let them consider who it was that created the Heavens, and the Earth, yea, and their Souls also, which are so perplexed with Doubts, out of Nothing; the same God that did this, can also create Deliverance for his People, tho' there be no pre-exestent Matter to work it out of.

Add to this that excellent Place of Solomon in Eccles. 12. 7. Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was; and the Spirit to God who gave it. Where he shews us what becomes of Man, and how each Part, of which he consists, is bestowed and disposed of after his Dissolution, by Death. And thus he states it: These two constitutive Parts of Man are a Soul, and a Body: These two Parts have two distinct Originals: The Body as to its material Cause is Dust, the Soul in its Nature is a Spirit, and as to its Origin, it proceeded from the Father of Spirits; 'tis his own Creature in an immediate Way. He gave it: He gave it the Being it hath by Creation, and gave it to us (i. e.) to our Bodies by Inspiration. Now qualis Genesis, talis Analysis: When Death dissolves the Union which is betwixt them, each Part returns to that from whence it came, Dust to Dust, and the Spirit to God that gave it. The Body is expressed by its material Cause Dust; the Soul only by its efficient Cause, the Gift of God, because it had no material Cause at all, nor was made out of any pre-existent Matter, as the Body was. And therefore Solomon here speaks of God, as if he had only to do with the Soul, leaving the Body to its material and instrumental Causes; with whom he concurs by a general Influence. 'Tis God, not Man alone; or God by Man, that hath given us these Bodies; but 'tis not Man but God alone who hath given us these Souls. He therefore passeth by the Body, and speaks of the Soul as the Gift of God, because that part of Man, and that only flows immediately from God, and to Death returns to him that gave it. All the Expressions, The Father of Spirits, the Former of the Spirit in Man, the Giver of the Spirit, how agreeable are they to each other, and all of them to the Point under Hand, that the Soul flows from God by immediate Creation? You see it hath no Principle out of which (according to the Order of Nature) it did arise as the Body had, and therefore it hath no Principle it can be returned, as the Body hath, but returns to God its efficient Cause, if reconciled, to a Father, not only by Creation but Adoption; if unreconciled, as a Creature guilty of unnatural Rebellion against God that formed it, to be judged.

II. God created and infused it into the Body, with an inherent Inclination and Affection to it. The Nature of the Soul and Body are vastly different, there is no Affinity or Similitude betwixt them; but it is in this Case, as in that of Marriage. Two Persons of vastly different Educations, Constitutions and Inclinations, coming under God's Ordinance, into the nearest Relation to each other, find their Affections knit and endeared by their Relation to a Degree beyond that which results from the Union of Blood: so it is here. Whence this Affection rises, in what Acts it is discovered, and for what Reason implanted, will be at large discovered in a distinct Branch of the following Discourse, to which it is assigned. Mean while I find my self concerned to vindicate what hath here been asserted from the Arguments which are urged against the immediate Creation and Infusion of the Soul, and in defence of the Opinion of its Traduction from the Parents. To conceal, or dissemble the Arguments and Objections, would be but a betraying of the Truth I have here asserted, and give occasion for some Jealousy, that they are unanswerable. To come then to an Issue, and first:

Anima, quæ est corporis organici perfectio, corpus necessarium est; non est enim forma separata (i. e.) propriè forma est, itaque adeo, ut anima à corpore disjuncta, vivat tamen & inclinationem retineat suam, quam corporis resurrectio consequitur Camerarius paleæt. in Math. p. 124. Object. I.

Obj. 1. It is urged, that it is manifest in it self, and generally yielded, that the Souls of all other Creatures come by Generation, and therefore it's probable that humane Souls flow in the same Channel also.

Sol. There is a Specifick difference betwixt rational Souls, and the Souls of all other Creatures, and therefore no Force at all in the Consequence. A material Form may rise out of Matter; but a spiritual rational Being (as the Soul of Man is) cannot so rise, being much more noble and excellent than Matter is.

What Animal is there in the World, out of whose Soul the Acts of Reason spring, and flow, as they do out of human Souls? Are they capable of inventing, (or which is much less) of learning the Arts and Sciences? Can they correct their Senses, and demonstrate a Star to be far greater than the whole Earth, which to the Eye appears no bigger than the Rowel of a Spur? Do they foreknow the Positions, and Combinations of the Planets, and the Eclipses of the Sun and Moon many Years before they suffer them? And if they cannot perform these Acts of Reason, as it is sure they cannot, how much less can they know, fear, love, delight in God, and long for the Enjoyment of him? These things do plainly evince humane Souls to be of another Species, and therefore of a better Original than the Souls of Brutes. If all have a Common Nature and Original, why are they not all capable of performing the same rational and virtuous Acts?

Obj. 2. But tho' it should be granted that the Soul of the first Man was by immediate Creation and Inspiration from God; yet it follows not, that the Souls of all his Posterity must be so too. God might create him with a Power of begetting other Souls after his own Image. The first Tree was created with its Seed in its self to propagate its Kind, so might the first Man.

1. Trees, Animals and such-like, were not created immediately out of Nothing, as the Soul of Man was; but the Earth was pre-existent Matter out of which they were produced by the Word of God's Blessing and Power; but Man's Soul was immediately breathed into him by God, and had no pre-existent Matter at all: And besides, all humane Souls being of one Species, have therefore one and the same Original: The Soul of the poorest Child is of equal Dignity with the Soul of Adam. And if we consult Job 33. 4. we shall find Elihu giving us there the same Account, and almost in the same Words, of the Original of his Soul, that Moses in my Text gives us of Adam's Soul: The Spirit of God hath formed me, and the Breath of the Almighty hath given me Life.

Sol. 2. But it is evident, Souls spring not from the Parent, as one Plant or Animal doth from another; for they have their Seed in themselves apt and proper to produce their Kind; but the Seed of Souls is not to be found in Man: It is not to be found in his Body; for then (as was said before) a spiritual and nobler Essence must be produced out of a material and baser Matter (i. e.) the Matter must give to the Soul that which it hath not in it self, nor is it to be found in its Soul; for the Soul being a pure, simple, and invisible Being, can suffer nothing to be discinded from it towards the production of another Soul. A Spirit, as the Soul is, is Substantia simplex & impartibilis; an uncompounded and indiscerpible or impartible Being. Nor can it spring partly from the Body, and partly from the Soul, as from Con-causes; for then it should be partly corporeal, and partly incorporeal, as its Causes are. So that there is no Matter, Seed, or Principle of Souls found in Man; and to be sure (as Baronius strongly argues) * he cannot produce a Soul without pre-existent Matter; for that were to make him Omnipotent; and assign a creating Power to a Creature. Besides that which is generable is also corruptible, as we see Trees, Animals, &c. which are produced that way, to be; but the Soul is not corruptible, as hath in part been already proved, and will more fully in the following Discourse. So that Adam's Soul and the Souls of his Posterity spring not from each other, but all from God by Creation.

* Pater neque producit animam filii ex aliqua re præexistente; neque producit eam ex nulla re præexistente; hoc enim est creare: ergo nullo modo eam producit. Baronius differt. secunda de Origine Animæ, p. 120.

Obj. 3. If the Soul be created and infused immediately by God, either it comes out of his hands pure, or impure; if pure, how comes it to be defiled and tainted with Sin? If impure, how do we free God from being the Author of Sin.

Sol. If the question be, whether Souls be pure or impure as they are united with their Bodies? the Answer is, They are impure, and tainted as soon as united: For the Union constitutes a Child of Adam, and consequently a sinful impure Creature. But if it respect the condition and State in which God created them, I answer with Baronius † They are created neither morally pure, nor impure; they receive neither Purity nor Impurity from him, but only their naked Essence, and the natural Powers and Properties flowing therefrom. He inspires not any Impurity into them; for he cannot be the Author of Sin, who is the Revenger of it. Nor doth he create them in their original Purity and Rectitude; for for the Sin of Adam loſt that, and God juſtly withholds it from his Poſterity. Who wonders (ſaith * one) to ſee the Children, the Palaces, and Gardens of Traitors to droop and decay, and the Arms of his Houſe, and the Badge of his Nobility, to be defaced and reverſed? That which is is abuſed by Man to the Diſhonour of God, may juſtly be deſtroyed (I add in this Caſe or with hold) by God to the Detriment of Man. Adam voluntarily and actually deprived himſelf, and meritoriouſly deprived all his Poſterity of that original Righteouſneſs and Purity in which he was created. As an Holy God, he cannot inſpire any Impurity, and as a juſt and righteous God, he may and doth with-hold, or create them void and deſtitute of that Holineſs and Righteouſneſs which was once their Happineſs and Glory.

* Jenkins on Jude, Vol. 1. p. 559.

Obj. 4. But how come they then to be defiled and tainted with Original Sin? It's confeſſed God did not impure them, and the Body cannot; for its being Matter, cannot act upon a Spirit; yea of it ſelf it's a dead Lump, and cannot act at all.

Sol. What if this be one of the Myſteries reſerved for the World to come, about which we cannot in this ſtate ſolve every Difficulty that can be moved? muſt we therefore deny its Divine Original? What if I cannot underſtand ſome Myſteries or anſwer ſome Queſtions about the Hypoſtatical Union of the Two Natures in the wonderful Perſon of our Emmanuel? muſt I therefore queſtion whether he be Θεάνθρωπος, God-Man? We muſt remain ignorant of ſome Things about our own Souls, till we come into the Condition of the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect. Mean Time I think it much more our Concernment to ſtudy how we may get Sin out of our Souls, than to puzzle our Brains to find how it came into them.

Man ſince the Fall, being leſs than himſelf, underſtands not himſelf; nor will he fully, till he be fully reſtored to himſelf in Glory. Norton's Orth. Evang. p. 337.

But that the Objector may not take this for an handſome ſlide or go by to his great Objection, I return to it in a few Particulars.

The Soul (ſay ſome) in the Moment of its Creation and Infuſion by God, being united with the Body by the plaſtick and formative Virtue of the paternal Seed; the Parent may be truly ſaid to generate the Man tho' he do not produce the Form: becauſe proper Generation conſiſts in this Union, and not the Production of Parts. So that Original Sin is not propagated from Body to Body, nor yet from Soul to Soul; but from Man to Man.

(1.) That I think not Original Sin follows either part ſingly; it comes neither by the Soul alone, nor by the Body alone apart from the Soul; but upon the Union and Conjunction of both in One Perſon. 'Tis the Union of theſe Two which conſtitutes a Child of Adam, and as ſuch only we are capable of being infected with his Sin.

(2.) And whereas it is confidently aſſerted in the Objection, That Sin cannot come into the Soul by or from the Body, becauſe it being Matter, cannot act upon a Spirit: I ſay, this is gratis dictum, eaſily ſpoken; but difficultly proved. Cannot the Body act upon, or influence the Soul? Pray then how comes it to paſs that ſo many Souls become fooliſh, forgetful, injudicious, &c. by their Union with ill diſpoſed Bodies? Nothing is more ſenſibly plain and evident, than that there is a reciprocal Communication betwixt the Soul and Body. The Body doth as really (tho' we know not how) affect the Soul with its Diſpoſitions, as the Soul influences it with Life and Motion. The more excellent any Form is, the more intimate is its Union and Conjunction with the Matter. The Soul of Man hath therefore a more intimate and perfect Union with the Body, than Light with the Air; which is made by ſome the beſt Emblem and Similitude to ſhadow forth this Union. But the Union betwixt them are too intimate to be conceiv'd by the help of any ſuch Similitudes. That this infection is by way of Phyſicial Agency, as a ruſty Scabbard infects and defiles a bright Sword, when ſheathed therein; I will not confidently affirm, as ſome do. It may be by way of Natural Concomitancy, as Eſtius will have it; or to ſpeak, as Dr. Reynolds (modeſtly, and as becomes Men that are conſcious of Darkneſs and Weakneſs) by way of ineffable Reſultancy and Emanation.

(3.) In ſum, Original Sin conſiſts in two things viz.

1. In the Privation of that original Rectitude which ought to be in us.

2. In that habitual Concupiſence which carrieth Nature to inordinate Motions.

This Privation and inordinate Inclination, make up that Original Corruption, the riſe whereof we are ſearching for: And to bring us as near as we can come, without a daring Intruſion into unrevealed Secrets, our ſolid Divines proceed by theſe ſteps in anſwering this Objection.

(1.) If it be demanded, how it comes to paſs that an Infant becomes guilty of Adam's ſin; The anſwer is, becauſe he is a Child of Adam by natural Generation.

(2.) But why is he deprived of that Original Rectitude in which Adam was created? They anſwer becauſe Adam loſt it by his ſin, and therefore could not tranſmit what he had loſt to his Poſterity.

(3.) But how comes he to be inclined to that which is evil? their anſwer is, becauſe he wants the Original Rectitude: For whoſoever wants Original Rectitude, naturally inclines to that which is evil. And ſo Propenſion of Nature to that which is evil, ſeems to be by way of Concomitancy, with the defect or want of Original Righteouſneſs.

And thus I have given ſome account of the Nature and Original of the Soul of Man, tho' alas my dim Eyes ſee but little of its Excellency and Glory. Yet by what hath been ſaid, it appears the Maſterpiece of all God's Works of Creation in this lower World.

But becauſe I ſuſpect the Deſcription I have given to it will be obſcure and cloudy to vulgar Readers of a plain and low capacity, by reaſon of Diſuſe of Philoſophical Terms which I have been forced to make uſe of; and reckoning my ſelf a Debtor to the weak and unlearned, as well as others, I will endeavour to ſtrip the Deſcription of the Soul, for their ſakes, out of thoſe artificial Terms which obſcure it to them, and preſent it once more in the most plain and intelligible Epitome I am capable to give it in; that ſo the weaker underſtanding may be able to form a true Notion of the Nature and Original of the Soul in this manner.

The Soul a Subſtance,

This Soul of mine is a true and real Being; not a Fancy, a Conceit, a very nothing. It hath a proper and true being in it whether I conceit it or not. Nor indeed can I conceive of it, but by it. It is not ſuch a thing as Whiteneſs is in Snow, a meer Accident, which pends upon the Snow in which it is, for the Being ithath: and muſt periſh as ſoon as the Snow is diſ- ſolved: my Soul doth not ſo depend upon my Bo- dy, or any other Fellow-Creature for its Being; but is as truly ſubſtance as my Body is, tho' not of ſo groſs and material a kind and nature. My Soul can and will ſubſiſt and remain what it is, when my Body is ſeparated from it. So that I find my Soul to be the moſt ſubſtantial and noble part of me; it is not my Body, but my Soul which makes me a Man. And if this depart, all the reſt of me is but a dead Log, a Lump of inanimate Clay, a heap of vile Duſt and Corruption. From this independent Subſiſtence it hath in it ſelf, and the Dependence its Properties and Affections have upon it, I truly ap prehend and call it a Subſtance.

but a Spiritual Subſtance.

But yet when I call it a Subſtance, I muſt not con- ceive of it as a groſs mate- rial palpable Subſtance, ſuch as my Body is, which I can ſee and feel. No there are Spiritual Subſtances as well as groſs, viſible, material Subſtances. An An- gel is a ſpiritual Subſtance, a real Creature, and yet imperceptible by my Sight or Touch, ſuch a Sub- ſtance is my Soul. Spiritual Subſtances are as real, and much more excellent then bodily Subſtances are. I can neither ſee, hear, nor feel it; but I both ſee, hear, and feel by it.

A Vital Subſtance.

My Soul is alſo a vital Subſtance. It is a Princi- ple of Life to my Body: It hath a Life in it ſelf, and quickens my Body there- with. My Soul is the Spring of all the Actions and Motions of Life which I perform. It hath been an Error taken in from my Childhood, That Senſe is performed in the outward Organs, or Members of my Body; as Touching in the Hand, Seeing in the Eye, Hearing in the Ear, &c. in them, I ſay, and not only by them, as if nothing were required to make Senſe, but an Object and an Organ. No, no, 'tis not my Eye that ſeeth, nor my Ear that heareth, nor my Hand that toucheth, but my Soul in and by them performs all this. Let but an Apoplex hinder the Operations of my Soul in the Brain, and of how little uſe are my Eyes, Ears, Hands or Feet to me? My Life is originally in my Soul, and ſecondarily by way of communication, in my Body. So that I find my Soul to be a vital, as well as a Spiritual Sub- ſtance.

An Immortal Subſtance.

And Being both a vital and ſpiritual Subſtance, I muſt needs conclude it to be an immortal Subſtance. For in ſuch a pure, ſpi- ritual Nature, as my Soul is, there can be found no Seeds or Principles of Death. Where there is no Compoſition there will be no Diſſolution. My Bo- dy indeed having ſo many Jarring Humours, mixed Elements, and contrary Qualities in it, muſt needs fail and die at laſt: But my Soul was formed for Immortality, by the ſimplicity and ſpirituality of its Nature. No ſword can pierce it from without, nor Oppoſition can deſtroy it from within; Man will not, and God will not.

Endued with Underſtand- ing, Will and Affections.

And being an immortal Spirit fitted and framed to live for ever, I find that God hath anſwerably endued and furniſh'd it with an Underſtanding, Will, and Affe- ctions whereby it is capable of being wrought up- on by the Spirit in the way of Grace and Sanctifi- cation in this World in order to the enjoyment of God, its chief Happineſs in the World to come.

By this its Underſtanding, I am diſtinguiſhed from and advanced above all other Creatures in this World. I can apprehend, diſtinguiſh, and judge of all other intelligible Beings. By my Underſtanding I diſcern Truth from Falſhood, Good from Evil; it ſhews me what is fit for me to chuſe, and what to refuſe.

To this Faculty or Power of Underſtanding, my Thoughts and Conſcience do belong; the former to my ſpeculative, the latter to my practical Under- ſtanding. My Thoughts are all formed in my Mind or Underſtanding in innumerable Multitudes and vareity. By it I can think of things preſent, or ab- ſent; viſible, or inviſible; of God, or my ſelf; of this World, or the World to come.

To my Underſtanding alſo belongs my Conſcience, a noble, divine, and awful Power: By which I ſum- mon and judge my ſelf, as at a ſolemn Tribunal; bind and looſe, condemn and acquit my ſelf and actions, but ſtill with an eye and reſpect to the Judgment of God. Hence are my beſt Comforts, and worſt Terrors.

This Underſtanding of mine is a Director and Guide of my Will; This is a Councellor; This is a Prince: it freely chuſeth and refuſeth as my Underſtand- ing directs and ſuggeſts to it. The Members of my Body, and the Paſſions of my Soul, are under its Dominion: the former are under its abſolute Com- mand, the latter under its ſuaſions and inſinuations, tho' not abſolutely and always with effect and ſuc- ceſs.

And both my Underſtanding and Will, I find to have great influence upon my Affections.

Theſe Paſſions and Affections of my Soul are of great uſe and dignity. I find them as manifold as there are Conſiderations of Good and Evil. They are the ſtrong and ſenſible Motions of my Soul, ac- cording to my apprehenſions of Good and Evil. By them my Soul is capable of Union with the higheſt Good. By Love and Delight I am capable of enjoy- ing God, and reſting in Him as the Centre of my Soul. This noble Underſtanding, Thoughts, Conſcience, Will, Paſſions, and Affections, are the principal Facul- ties, Acts, and Power of this my high and heavenly born Soul. And being thus richly endowed and furniſhed, Created and infus'd with an inclination to the Bo- dy.

I find it could never riſe out of Matter, or come in- to my Body by way of na- tural Generation; the Souls of Brutes, that riſe that way, are deſtitute of Underſtanding, Reaſon, Conſcience, and ſuch other excellent Faculties and Powers as I find in my own Soul. They cannot know, or love, or delight in God, or ſet their Affections upon things ſpiritual, inviſible and eternal, as my Soul is capable to do; is was therefore created and infuſed imme- diately into this Body of mine by the Father of Spi- rits, and that with a ſtrong Inclination and tender Affection to my Fleſh, without which it would be remiſs and careleſs in performing its ſeveral Duties and Offices to it, during the time of its abode there- in.

Fearfully and wonderfully therefore am I made, and deſigned for nobler ends and uſes, than for a few days to eat, and drink, and ſleep, and talk, and die. My Soul is of more value than ten thou- ſand Worlds. What ſhall a Man give in exchange for his Soul?

USE

USE I.

FROM the several Parts and Branches of this Description of the Soul, we may gather the choice Fruits which naturally grow upon them in the following Inferences and Deductions of Truth and Duty. For we may say of them all what the Historian doth of Palestine, that there is nihil infructuosum, nihil sterile, no Branch or Shrub is barren, or unfruitful. Let us then search it Branch by Branch; and,

Inference I.

FROM the substantial Nature of the Soul, which we have proved to be a Being distinct from the Body, and subsisting by it self, we are informed, That great is the difference betwixt the Death of Man, and the Death of all other Creatures in the World. Their Souls depend on, and perish with their Bodies; but Ours neither result from them, nor perish with them. My Body is not a Body, when my Soul hath forsaken it; but my Soul will remain a Soul, when this Body is crumbled into Dust. Men may live like Beasts, a meer sensual Life; yea, in some sense, they may die like Beasts, a stupid Death; but in this there will be found a vast difference: Death kills both Parts of the Beasts, destroys the Matter and Form; it toucheth only One part of Man; it destroyeth the Body, and only dislodgeth the Soul, but cannot destroy it.

1. The Soul a substantial Being.

Tanta prærogativa manifestè testatur ipsius animam, penes quam ratio principatus est, non esse materialem & caducam, sed superioris cujusdem atque eminentis naturæ, à conditione reliquarum animarum longè distantem. Conimb. Disp. de Anima separ. p. 584.

In some things Solomon shews the Agreement betwixt our Death and Theirs, Eccles. 3. 19, 20, 21. That which befalleth the Sons of Men, befalleth the Beasts; even one thing befalleth them. As the one dieth, so dieth the other; all go to one place; all are of the Dust, and all turn to Dust again. We breathe the same common Air they breathe; we feel the same Pains of Death they feel; our Bodies are resolved into the same Earth theirs are. Oh! but in this is the difference, The Spirit of Man goeth upward, but the Spirit of a Beast goeth downward to the Earth. Their Spirits go two ways at their Dissolution; the one to the Earth, and the other to God that gave it, as he speaks Chap. 12. 7. Tho' our Respiration and Expiration have some Agreement, yet great is the odds in the Consequences of Death to the one and the other. They have no Pleasures nor Pains besides those they enjoy or feel now; but so have We; and those eternal or unspeakable too. The Soul of Man, like the Bird in the shell, is still growing or ripening in Sin or Grace, till at last the Shell breaks by Death, and the Soul flees away to the place it is prepared for, and where it must abide for ever. The Body, which is but its Shell, perisheth; but the Soul lives when it is fallen away.

Concretum, fuit, & discretum est; reditiq; undevenerat: terra deorsum, spiritus sursum. Epibea.

How doth this consideration expose and aggravate the Folly and the Madness of this sensual World, who herd themselves with Beasts, tho' tho' they have Souls so near of kin to Angels! The Princes and Nobles of the World abhor to associate themselves with Mechanicks in their shops or to take a place among the sottish Rabble upon an Ale-bench; they know and keep their Distance and Decorum, as still carrying with them a sense of Honour, and abhorring to act beneath it: But we equalize our high and noble Souls in the way of Life with the Beasts that perish. Our Tables differ little from the Crib at which they feed; or our Houses from the Stalls and Stables in which they lie down to rest, in respect of any Divine Worship, or Heavenly Communication that is to be heard there. Happy had it been for such Men (if so they live and die) that their Souls hath been of no higher Extraction, or larger Capacity, or longer Duration than that of a Beast: for then, as their Comforts, so also their Miseries had ended at Death. And such they will one Day wish they had been.

A separate Soul immediately capable of Blessedness.

Inference II.

THE Soul of Man being a Substance, and not depending in its Being on the Body, or any other Fellow-creature; There can be no reason on the Soul's account, why its Blessedness should be delayed till the Resurrection of the Body.

'Tis a great mistake (and 'tis well 'tis so) that the Soul is capable only of sociable Glory, or a Blessedness in partnership with the Body; and that it can neither exert its own Powers, nor enjoy its own Happiness, in the Absence of the Body. The Opinion of a sleeping Interval took its rise from this Error, (as it is usual for one Soul to be so dependent on the Body, at least in all its Operations that when Death rends it from the Body, it must needs be left as in a Swoon, or Sleep, unable to exert its proper Powers, or enjoy that Felicity which we ascribe to it in its state of separation.

But certainly its substantial Nature being considered, it will be found, that whatever Perfection soever the Body receives from the Soul, and how necessary soever its Dependence upon it is, * the Soul receives not its Perfection from the Body, nor doth it necessarily depend on it in its principal Operations; but it can live and act out of a Body, as well as in it. Yea, I doubt not but it enjoys it self in a much more sweet and perfect Liberty than ever it did or could whilst it was clogg'd and fettered with a Body of flesh. Doubtless, † saith Tertullian, when it is separated, and as it were strained by Death, it comes out of Darkness into its own pure, perfect light, and quickly finds it self a substantial Being able to act freely in that light. Before the Eyes of the dead Body are clos'd, I doubt not but the believing Soul with open Eyes beholdeth the Face of Jesus Christ Luke 23. 43. Philp, 1. 23. But this will also be farther spoken to hereafter.

* Anima rationalis nihil perfectionis recipit à materia, quod extra illam non possit recipere. Conimb. Disp. 2. Art. 3.

Inference III.

THE Souls of Men being created immediately out of nothing, and seminally traduced; it follows, That all Souls by nature are of equal Value and Dignity gnity: One Soul is not more excellent, honourable, or cious than another; but all by nature equally precious.

The Soul of the pooreſt Beggar that cries at the oor for a Cruſt, is in its own nature of equal Digni- and Value with the Soul of the moſt glorious Mo- rch that ſits upon the Throne. And this appears be ſo.

1. Becauſe all Souls flow out of one and the ſame untain, viz. the creating Power of God. They re not made of better or worſe, finer or courſer tter, but ἐξ μὴ ὄντων, out of nothing at all. The ſame mighty Power was put forth, to the forming of , as of another. All Souls are mine, ſaith he that ated them, Ezek. 18. 4. the Soul of the Child well as of the Father; the Soul of the Beggar as l as the King; thoſe that had no pre-exiſtent tter, but received their Beings from the ſame cient Cauſe, muſt needs be equal in in their ori- al Nature and Value. The Bodies of Men, that formed out of Matter, do greatly differ from another; ſome are moulded (as we ſay) è me- luto, out of better and finer Clay; ſome are e exact, elegant, vigorous, and beautiful than ers: but Souls have no Matter of which they ſift, are not ſo differenced.

All Souls are created with a Capacity of en- ng the infinite and bleſſed God. They need ther Powers, Faculties, or Capacities than they y Nature endued with (if theſe be but ſancti- nd devoted to God) to make them equally hap- nd bleſſed with them that are now before the one of God in Heaven, and with unſpeakable ght and Joy behold his bleſſed Face. We paſs gh the Fields, and take up an Egg which lies r a Clod, and ſee nothing in it but a little id Matter; yea, but in that Egg is ſeminally potentially contained ſuch a melodious Lark as y be at the ſame time we ſee mounting Hea- ard, and ſinging delicious Notes above. yet we muſt not underſtand this Parity of hu- ouls univerſally, or in all reſpects. Tho' be- ing of one Species and common Nature, they are all equal, and thoſe of them that are purchaſed by the Blood of Chriſt are all purchaſed at one rate; yet there are divers other Reſpects and Conſiderations, wherein there are remarkable differences betwixt Soul and Soul. As (1.) Some Souls are much better lodg'd and accommodated in their Bodies than others are, tho' none dwell at perfect Reſt and Eaſe. God hath lodged ſome Souls in ſtrong, vigorous, comely Bodies; others in feeble, crazy, deformed and uncomfortable ones. The Hiſtorian ſaith of Galba, Anima Galbæ malè habitat; The Soul of Galba dwelt in an ill Body. And a much better Man than Galba was as ill accomodated. John wiſhes in behalf of his beloved Gaius, that his Body might but proſper as his Soul did, Epiſt. 3. v. 2: Timothy had his often Infirmities. Indeed the World is full of Inſtances and Examples of this kind. * If ſome Souls had the Advantages of ſuch Bodies as others have, who make little, or very bad uſe of them; oh what ſervice would they do for God! (2.) There is a remarkable difference alſo betwixt Soul and Soul, in reſpect of Natural Gifts and Abilities of Mind. Some have great advantages above others in this reſpect. The natural Spirits and Organs of the Body being more brisk and apt, the Soul is more vegete, vigorous, and able to exert it ſelf in its Functions and Operations. How clear, nimble, and firm are the Apprehenſions, Fancies and Memories of ſome Souls beyond others! What a Prodigy of Memory, Fancy, and Judgment, was Father Paul the Venetian! and Suarez, of whom Strada ſaith, ſuch was the ſtrength of his Parts, that he had all St. Auguſtine's Works (the moſt copious and various of the Fathers) as it were by heart, ſo that I have ſeen him (ſaith he) † readily pointing with the finger to any Place or Page he diſputed of. Our Dr. Reynolds excelled this way, to the aſtoniſhment of all that knew him, ſo that he was a living Library, a third Univerſity. But above all, the Character given by Vives of Budeus is amazing, That there was nothing written in Greek or Latin which he had not turned over and examined; that both Languages were alike to him, ſpeaking either with more facility than he did the French, his Mother-tongue; and all by the penetrating force of his own natural parts, without a Tutor: ſo that ‖ France never brought forth a Man of ſharper Wit, more piercing Judgment, exact Diligence, and greater Learning, nor in his time Italy it ſelf. Fœlix & fœcundum ingenium, quod in ſe uno invenit & Doctorem, & Diſcipulum! A happy and fruitful Wit, which in it ſelf found both a Maſter and a Scholar! And yet Paſquier relates what is much more admirable of a young Man, who came to Paris in the 20th year of his age, and in the year 1445, ſhewed him ſelf ſo excellent in all the Arts, Sciences and Languages, that if a Man of ordinary good Wit, and ſound Conſtitution, ſhould live an hundred years, and during that time ſtudy inceſſantly, without eating, drinking, ſleeping, or any Recreation, he could hardly attain to that perfection. (3.) And yet a far greater difference is made betwixt one Soul and another, by the ſanctifying Work of the Spirit, of God. This makes yet a greater Disparity; for it alters and new molds the Frame and Temper of the Soul, and restores the lost Image of God to it; by reason whereof the Righteous is truly said to be more excellent than his neighbour, Prov. 12. 26. This ennobles the Soul, and stamps the highest Dignity and Glory upon it, that it is capable of in this World 'Tis true it hath naturally an Excellency and Perpetuity in it above other Beings; as Cedar hath not only a Beauty and Fragrancy, but a Soundness and Durability far beyond other Trees of the Wood: But when it comes under the Sanctification of the Spirit, then it is a Cedar over-laid with gold. (4) Lastly, a wonderful Difference will be made betwixt one Soul and another, by the Judgment of God in the great day. Some will be blessed, and others cursed Souls, Matth. 25. ult. some received into Glory, others shut out into everlasting Misery; Matth. 8. 11. 12. Many shall come from the East, and West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven; but the children of the Kingdom shall be cast out into outer Darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of Teeth. And that which will be the sting and aggravation of the Difference which will then be made, will be this Parity and Equality in the Nature and Capacity of every Soul: by reason whereof they that perish, will find they were as naturally capable of Blessedness, as those that enjoy it; and that it was their own inexcusable Negligence and Obstinacy that were their ruine.

* Toſtatus Biſhop of Abulum had ſo ſtrong and firm a Conſtitution to endure ſevere Studies, that he is ſaid ænea inteſtina habuiſſe to have had a Body of Braſs.

Inference IV.

III. The Soul a created Substance.

IF God be the immediate Creator and Former of the Soul of Man, Then Sin must needs involve the most unnatural Evil in it, as it is an horrid Violation of the very Law of Nature. No Title can be so full, so absolute, as that which Creation gives. How clear is the light of Reason? If God created my Soul, then my Soul had once no being at all: That it had still remained nothing, had not the Pleasure of its Creator chosen and called it into the being it hath, out of the Millions of meer possible Beings: For as there are Millions of possible Beings, which yet are nothing; so there are Millions of possible Beings which never shall be at all. So that since the Pleasure and Power of God was the only Fountain of my Being, he needs must be the rightful Owner of it What can be more his own, than that whose very Being flowed meerly from him, and which had never been at all, had he not called it out of nothing?

And seeing the same Pleasure of God which gave it a Being, gave it also a reasonable Being, by Laws, which other inferior Natures are incapable of; it must needs Follow then he is the Supreme Governour, as well as the rightful Owner of this Soul.

Moreover it is plain that he who gave my Soul its Being, and such a Being, gave it also all the Good it ever had, hath, or shall have; and that it neither is, nor hath any thing but what is purely from him: And therefore he must needs be my most bountiful Benefactor, as well as absolute Owner and supreme Governour. There is not a Soul which he hath created, but stands bound to him, in all these Ties and Titles. Now for such a Creature, to turn rebelliously upon its absolute Owner, whose only and wholly it is; upon its supreme Governour, to whom it owes entire and absolute Obedience; upon its Bountiful Benefactor, from whom it hath received all and every Mercy it ever had, or hath; to violate his Laws, slight his Sovereignity, despise his Goodness, contemn his Threatnings, pierce his very Heart with Grief, darken the Glory of all his Attributes, confederate with Satan, his malicious Enemy and strike as far as a Creature can strike, at his very Being, (for in a Sense, Omne peccatum est Deicidium, every Sin strikes at the Life and very Existence of God:) Blush, O Heavens, at this; and be ye horribly afraid! O cursed Sin, the Evil of all Evils which no Epithet can match; no Name worse than its own, can be invented, sinful Sin. This is as if some venomous Branch should drop Poison upon the root that bears it. Love and Gratitude to Benefactors, is an indelible Principle ingraven by Nature, upon the Hearts, of all Men. It teaches Children to love and honour their Parents, who are but meer Instruments of their Being. O how just must this Perdition be, who casting off the very Bonds of Nature, turn again with enmity against that, God, in whom they both live, and move and have their Being! O think, and think again on what an holy * Man once said; What a sad Charge will this be against many a Man at the great Day, when God shall say, Had thou been made a Dog, I never had had so much Dishonour as I have had? 'Tis Pity God should not have Honour from the meanest Creature that ever he made, from every Pile of Grass in the Field or Stone in the Street; much more that he should not have Glory from a Soul more precious and excellent than all the other Works of his Hands. Surely 'tis better for us our Souls had still remained only in the number of possible Beings, and had never had an actual Existence in the second Rank of Beings, but a very little lower than the Angels; that we should still be dishonouring God by it. O that he should be put to levy his Glory from us passively; that it should be with us as it was with Nebuchadnezzar, from whom God had more Glory when he was driven out amongst the Beasts of the Field, than when he sat on the Throne. In like manner his Glory will rise passively from us, when driven out amongst Devils, and not actively and voluntarily, as from the Saints.

* Mr. Burroughs's Excellency of the Soul of Man, P. 232.

Inference V.

IF God create and inspire the reasonable Soul immediately, this should instruct and incite all Christian Parents, to pray earnestly for their Children, not when they are born into the World, but when they are conceived in the Womb.

It is of great Concernment both to us, and our Children, not only to receive them from the Womb with Bodies perfectly and comely fashioned, but also with such Souls inspired into them, whereby they may Glorify God to all Eternity. 'Tis natural to Parents to desire to have their Children sound and perfect in all their Bodily Members; and it would be a grievous Affliction to see them come into the World defective, monstrous, and misshapen Births; should a Leg, an Arm, an Eye be wanting, such a defect would make their Lives miserable, and the Parents uncomfortable. But how few are concerned with what Soul they are born into World! Good God (saith * Musculus) how shall we find, who are equally solicitous to have such Children as may live piously and honestly, as they are to leave them Inheritances, upon which they may live splendidly and bravely? It pleaseth us to see our own Image stamp't upon their Bodies; but O! how few pray, even whilst they are in the Womb, that their Souls may in due time bear the Image of the heavenly, and not animate and use the Members of their Bodies, as Weapons of unrighteousness against the God that formed them?

Certainly except they be quickened with such Souls, as may in this World be united with Christ, better had it been for them that they had perished in the Womb, whilst they were pure Embryoes, and had never come into the Account of Men and Women; for such Embryoes go for nothing in the World, being only Rudiments and rough Draughts of Bodies, never animated and informed by a reasonable Soul; Job. 3. 11, 12. But as soon as such a Soul enters into them, though for never so little a time, it entails Eternity upon them. We also know, that as soon as ever God breathes or infuses their Souls into them, Sin presently enters, and Death by Sin, and that by us, as the Instruments of conveying it unto them: Which should have the Efficacy of a mighty Argument with us, to lay our Prayers and Tears for Mercy in the very Foundation of that Union.

Think on this Particularly, you that are Mothers of Children, when you find the Fruit of the Womb quickened within you, that you then bear a Creature within you of more value than all this visible World; a Creature, upon whom, from that very moment, an Eternity of Happiness or Misery is entailed; and therefore it concerns you to travel as in pain for their Souls, before you feel the Sorrows and Pangs of Travail for their Bodies. O! what a pity is it, that a part of your selves should eternally perish! That so rare and excellent a Creature as that you bear, should be cast away for ever, for want of a new Creation superadded to that it hath already! O let your Cries and Prayers for them, anticipate your Kisses and Embraces of them. If you be faithful and successful herein, then happy the Womb that bears them; if not, happy had it been for them, that the Knees had prevented them, and the Breasts they have sucked. O! you cannot begin your suits for Mercy too early for them, nor continue them too long, though your Prayers measure all the time betwixt their Conception and their Birth.

Inference VI.

MOreover, if God have created our Souls vital Substances, to animate and act those Bodies,

A vital Substance.

How indispensably necessary is it that a Principle of spiritual Life do quicken and govern that which quickens and governs our Bodies, and all the powers of them? Otherwise, tho' in a natural sense we have living Souls, yet they are dead whilst they

† The Apostle in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. compares the natural Life we live, by the Union of our Souls and Bodies, with the spiritual Life we live, by the Union of our Souls with Jesus Christ. And so it is written (viz. in my Text) The first Man Adam was made a living Soul, the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit. He opposes the animal to the spiritual Life, and the two Adams from whom they come, and shews in both respects, the Excellency of the spiritual above the Animal Life; not in Point of Priority, for that which is natural, is before that which is spiritual, (and it must be so, because the natural Soul is the recipient Subject of the Spirits quickning and Sanctifying Operations;) but in point of Dignity and real Excellency. To how little purpose, or rather to what a dismal and miserable purpose, we are made living Souls, except the Lord from Heaven by his quickning Power makes us spiritual and holy Souls? The natural Soul rules and uses the Body, as an Artificer doth his Tools: and except the Lord renew it by Grace, Satan will rule that which rules thee, and so all thy Members will be Instruments of Iniquity to fight against God. The Actions performed by our Bodies, are justly reputed and rekon'd by God to the Soul, † because the Soul is the Spring of all its Motions, the Fountain of its Life and Operations. What it doth by the Body its Instrument, is as if it were done immediately by it self; for without the Soul it can do nothing.

Inference VII.

V. A Spiritual Substance.

MOreover, from the immaterial and spiritual nature of the Soul we are informed, That Communion with God, and the Enjoyment of him, are the true and proper Intentions and Purposes for which the Soul of Man was created.

Such a Nature as this, is not fitted to live upon grosse, material and perishing things, as the Body doth. The Food of every Creature is agreeable to its Nature; one cannot subsist upon that which another doth: as we see among the several Sorts of Animals, what is Food to one, is none to another. In the same Plant is found a Root, which is Food for Swine, a Stalk which is Food for Sheep, a Flower which feeds the Bee, a Seed on which the Bird lives: The Sheep cannot live upon the Root, as the Swine doth; nor the Bird upon the Flower as the Bee doth; but every one feeds upon the different Parts of the Plant, which are agreeable to its Nature. So it is here, our Bodies being of an earthly material Nature, can live upon things earthly and material, as most agreeable to them; they can relish and suck out the sweetness of these things; but the Soul can find nothing in them suitable to its Nature and Appetite; it must have spiritual Food, or perish. It were therefore too brutish, and unworthy of a Man that understood the Nature of his own Soul, to chear it up with the Stores of earthly Provision made for it, as he did, Luke 12. 20. I will say to my Soul, Soul, thou hast much Goods laid up for many years take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. Alas, the Soul can no more eat, drink, and be merry with carnal things, than the Body can with spiritual and immaterial things: It cannot feed upon Bread that perisheth, it can relish no more in the best and daintiest Fare of an earthly Growth, than in the White of an Egg: But bring it to a reconciled God in Christ, to the Covenant of Grace, and the sweet Promises of the Gospel; set before it the Joys, Comforts and Earnests of the Spirit; and if it be a sanctified renewed Soul, it can make a rich Feast upon these. These make it a Feast of fat things, full of Marrow, as it is express'd Isa. 25. 6. Spiritual things are proper Food for spiritual and immaterial Souls.

Inference VIII.

THE spiritual Nature of the Soul farther informs us, That no acceptable Service can be performed to God, except the Soul be employed and engag'd therein.

VI A Spiritual Substance.

The Body hath its part and share in God's Worship, as well as the Soul; but its part is inconsiderable in comparison: Prov. 23. 26. My Son, give me thy heart, (i. e.) thy Soul, thy Spirit. The holy and religious Acts of the Soul are suitable to the nature of the Object of Worship: John 4. 24. God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in Truth. Spirits only can have Communion with that great Spirit. They were made Spirits for that very end, that they might be capable of Converse with the Father of Spirits. They that worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in Truth; that is, with inward Love, Fear, Delight and Desires of Soul, that is, to worship him in our Spirits: And in Truth (i. e.) according to the Rule of his Word which prescribes our Duty. Spirit respects the inward Power; Truth, the outward Form. The former strikes at Hypocrisie, the latter at Superstition and Idolatry: The one opposes the Inventions of our Heads, the other the Looseness and Formality of our Hearts.

No doubt but the Service of the Body is due to God, and expected by him: For both the Souls and Bodies of his People are bought with a Price, and therefore he expects we glorifie him with our Souls and Bodies, which are his: But the service of the Body is not accepted of him, otherwise than it is animated and enlivened by an obedient Soul, and both sprinkled with the Blood of Christ. Separate from these, bodily Exercise profits nothing, 1 Tim. 4. 8. What pleasure can God take in the Fruits and Evidences of Mens Hypocrisie? Ezek. 33. 31.

Holy Paul appeals to God in this matter, Rom. 1. 9. God is my witness (saith he) whom I serve with my spirit; q. d. I serve God in my Spirit, and he knows that I do so. I dare appeal to him who searches my Heart, that it is not idle and unconcerned in his Service. The Lord humble us, the best of us, for our careless, dead, gadding, and vain Spirits, even when we are engaged in his solemn services. Oh that we were once so spiritual, to follow every Excursion from his service with a Groan, and retract every wandring Thought with a deep Sigh! Alas, a cold and wandring Spirit in Duty is the Disease of most Men, and the very Temper and Constitution of unsanctified ones. It is a weighty and excellent Expression of the Jews in their Euchologium, or Prayer-Book, Wherewithal shall I come before his Face, unless it be with my Spirit? For Man hath nothing more precious to present to God than his Soul. Indeed it is the best Man hath: Thy Heart is thy totum posse; 'tis all that thou art able to present to him. If thou cast thy Soul into thy Duty, thou dost as the poor Widow did, cast in all thou hast: And such an Offering the great God takes more pleasure than in all the external, costly, pompous Ceremonies, adorned Temples, and external Devotions in the World. It is a remarkable and astonishing Expression of his own in this Case, Isa 66. 1, 2. Thus saith the Lord, The Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footstool: Where is the House that ye built me, and where is the place of my rest? For all these things have mine hands made, and all these things have been, saith the Lord; but unto this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my Word; q. d. Think not to please me with magnificent Temples, and adorned Altars; if I had pleasure in such things, Heaven is a more glorious Throne than any you can build me; and yet I have more delight in a poor contrite Spirit, that trembles with an holy Awe and Reverence at my Word, than I have in Heaven or Earth, or all the Works of my Hands in either. Oh! if there had been more trembling at his Word, there had not been such trembling as now there is, under Fears of the Loss and Removal of it. Some can superstitiously reverence and kiss the sacred Dust of the Sanctuary, as they call it, and express a great deal of Zeal for the Externals of Religion, but little consider how small the Interest of these things is in Religion, and how little God looks at, or regards them.

Inference IX.

HOW much are the Spirits of Men sunk by Sin, how low the Dignity and Excellency of their Nature!

Our Souls are Spirits by Nature, yet have they naturally no Delight in things spiritual: They decline that which is homogeneal and suitable to Spirits, and relish nothing but what is carnal and unsuitable to them. How are its Affections invited and mis-placed by Sin! That noble, spiritual, heaven-born Creature the Soul, whose Element and Center God alone should be, is now sunk into a deep Oblivion both of God and it self, and wholly spends its strength in the pursuit of sensual and earthly Enjoyments, and becomes a mere Drudge and Slave to the Body. Carnal things must measure out and govern its Delights and Hopes, its Fears and Sorrows. Oh! how unseemly is it to behold such an high-born Spirit lacqueying up and down the World in the service of the perishing Flesh. Their heart (saith the Prophet) goeth after their covetousness, Ezek. 33. 31. as a Servant at the Beck or Nod of his Master.

Oh, how many are there to be found in every place, who melt down the precious Affections and Strength of their Souls, in sensitive brutish Pleasures and Delights? James 5. 5. Ye have lived in pleasures upon earth, as the Fish in the Water, or rather as the Eel in the Mud; never once lifting up a Thought or Desire to the spiritual and eternal Pleasures that are at God's right-hand.

Our Creation did not set us so low; we were made capable of better and higher things.

God did not inspire such a noble, excellent, spiritual Soul into us, meerly to salt our Bodies, or carry them up and down this World for a few years to gaze at the Vanities of it. It was a great saying of an Heathen, * I am greater, and born to greater things, than that I should be a Slave to my Body. We have a Spirit about us, that might better understand its Original, and know it is not so base a Being, as its daily Employments speak it to be. The Lord raise our Apprehensions to a due Value of the Dignity of our own Souls, that we may turn from these sordid Employments with a generous Disdain, and set our Affections on what is agreeable to, and worthy of an high-born Spirit.

Inference X.

VII. The Soul an immortal Substance.

IS the Soul of Man a vital, spiritual, and immortal Substance? Then it is no wonder, that we find the Refreshments and Impressions of the World to come, naturally engraven upon the Souls of Men all the World over. These Impressions and Sentiments of another Life after this, do as naturally and necessarily spring out of an immortal Nature, as Branches spring out of the Body of a Tree, or Feathers out of the Body of a Bird. So fairly and firmly are the Characters and Impressions of the Life to come sealed upon the immortal Spirits of all Men, that no Man can offer Violence to this Truth, but he must also do Violence to his own Soul, and unman himself by the Denial of it. Who feels not a Cheerfulness to spring from his absolving, and an Horror from his accusing Conscience? Neither of which could rise from any other Principle than this. We are Beings conscious to our selves of a future state, and that our Souls do not vanish when our Breath doth; that we cease not to be, when we cease to breathe.

And this is common to the most barbarous and salvage Heathens: They shew (saith the Apostle) the work of the Law written in their hearts, their Conscience also bearing them witness, and their thoughts in the mean time accusing, or else excusing one another. By the Work of the Law, understand the Sum and Substance of the Ten Commandments, comprizing the Duties to be done, and the Sins to be avoided. This Work of the Law is said to be written in the Hearts of the Gentiles, who had no external written Law; upon their Hearts it was written, tho' many of them gave themselves over to all Uncleanness: And they shewed, or gave evidence and proof, that there was such a Law written upon their Hearts. They shewed it two ways: (1.) Some of them shew'd it in their Temperance, Righteousness, and moral Honesty, wherein they excelled many of us, who have far greater Advantages and Obligations. (2.) In the Efficacy of their Consciences; which, as it cleared and comforted them for things well done; so it witnessed against them, yea, judged and condemned them for things done. And these Evidences of a Law written on the Heart are to be found, where-ever Men are to be found. Their Ignorance and Barbarity cannot stifle these Sentiments, and Impressions of a future State, and a just Tribunal to which it must come. And the Universality of it plainly evinces, that it springs not out of Education, but the very nature of an immortal Soul.

Let none say that these universal Impressions are but the Effects of an universal Tradition, which have been Time out of Mind spread among the Nations of the World: For as no such universal Tradition can be proved; so if it could, the very Propension that is found in the Minds of all Men living to embrace and close with the Proposals of a Life to come, will evince the Agreeableness of them to the Nature of an immortal Soul. Yea, the natural closing of the Soul with these Proposals, will amount to an Evidence of the Reality and Existence of those invisible Things. For as the natural Senses, and their Organs, prove that there are Colours, Sounds, Savours, and Juices; as well as, or rather because there are Eyes, Ears, &c. naturally fitted to close with, and receive them; so it is here, if the Soul naturally looks beyond the Line of Time, to Things eternal, and cannot bound and confine its Thoughts and Expectations within the too narrow Limits of present Things, surely there is such a future State, as well as Souls made apprehensive of it, and propense to close with the Discoveries thereof. So natural are the Notions of a future State to the Souls of Men, that those who have set themselves designedly to banish them, and struggled hard to suppress them, as Things irksom and grievous to them, giving Interruption to their sensual Lusts and Pleasures; yet still these Apprehensions have returned upon them, and gotten a just Victory over all their Objections and Prejudices; they follow them whersoever they go; they can no more flee from them, than from themselves; whereby they evidence themselves to be natural and indelible Things.

Inference XI.

VIII. Endued with Understanding, Will and Affections.

HAth God endued the Soul of Man with Understanding, Will and Affections, whereby it is made capable of knowing, loving, and enjoying God? 'Tis then no Wonder to find the Malice and Envy of Satan engaged against Man more than any other Creature, and against the Soul of Man rather than any thing else.

It grates that Spirit of Envy, to see the Soul of Man adorning and preparing by Sanctification to fill that Place in Glory from which he fell irrecoverably. It cut Haman to the very Heart, to see the Honour that was done to Mordecai; much more doth it grate and gall Satan, to see what Jesus Christ hath purchased and designed for the Souls of Men. Other Creatures being naturally uncapable of this Happiness, do therefore escape his Fury; but Men shall be sure to feel it, as far as he can reach them; 1 Pet. 5. 8. Your Adversary the Devil, goeth about like a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour. He walks to and fro, that speaks his Diligence; seeking whom he may devour, that speaks his Design; his Restlessness in doing Mischief, is all the Rest and Relief he hath in his own Torments. 'Tis a Mark of pure and perfect Malice, to endeavour to destroy, tho' he knows he shall never be successful in his Attempts. We read of many Bodies possessed by him; but he never takes up his Quarters in the Body of any but with Design to mischief the Soul. No Room but the best best in the House will satisfy him; no Blood so sweet to him as Soul-blood. If he raise Persecution against the Bodies of Men, it is to destroy their Souls: Holiness is that he hates, and Happiness is the Object of his Envy; The Soul being the Subject of both, is therefore pursued by him as his Prey.

Inference XII.

UPon the consideration both of its excellent Nature and divine Original, it follows, That the Corruption and Defacing of such an excellent Creature by Sin, deserves to be lamented, and greatly bewailed; and the Recovery of it by Sanctification to be studied, and diligently prosecuted, as the great Concern of all Men.

What a beautiful and blessed Creature was the Soul of Man at first, whilst it stood in its Integrity? His Mind was bright, clear, and apprehensive of the Law and Will of God: His Will chearfully complied therewith; his sensitive Appetite and inferior Powers stood in an obedient subordination. God made Man upright, Eccles. 7. 20. ישר streight, and equal, bending to neither extreme. The Law of God was fairly engraven on the Table of his Heart. Principles of Holiness and Righteousness were inlayed in the frame of his Mind, fitting him for an exact and punctual Discharge of his Duties both to God and Man. This was the soundness of his Constitution, the healthful Temper of his inner Man, whereby it became the very Region of Light, Peace, Purity, and Pleasure. For think how serene, lightsome, and placid the state of the Soul must be, in which there was no Obliquity, not a Jar with the Divine Will; but Joy and Peace continually transfused through all its Faculties!

But Sin hath defaced its Beauty, raz'd out the Divine Image which was its Glory, and stampt the very Image of Satan upon it; turn'd all its noble Powers and Faculties against the Author of its Being. Surely, if all the Posterity of Adam, from the beginning to the end of the World, should do nothing else but weep and sigh for the Sin and Misery of the Fall, it could not be sufficiently deplored: Other Sins, like single Bullets, kill particular Persons; but Adam's Sin, like a Chain shot, mowed down all Mankind at once. It murder'd him self actually, all his Posterity virtually, and Christ himself occasionally. Oh! what a black Train of Doleful Consequents attend this Sin! It hath darkned the bright Eye of the Soul's Understanding, 1 Cor. 2. 14. made its complying and obedient Will stubborn and rebellious, Joh. 5. 40. rendered his tender Heart obdurate and senseless, Ezek. 36. 26. filled its serene and peaceful Conscience with Guilt and Terror, Tit. 1. 15. The consideration of these things is very humbling, and could cause those that glory in their high and illustrious Descents, to wrap their silver Star in Cypress, and cover all their Glory with a mourning Veil. But this is but one part of their Duty.

How should this consideration provoke us to apply our selves with most serious Diligence to recover our lost Beauty and Dignity, in the way of Sanctification! This is the great and most proper use of the Fall, as Musculus excellently speaks; ut gratiam Christi eo subnixius ambiamus, to inflame our Desires the more vehemently after Grace.

Sanctification restores the Beauty of the Soul, which Sin defaced, Ephes. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. Yea, it restores it with this advantage, that it shall never be lost again; Holiness is the Beauty of God impress'd upon the Soul, and the Impression is everlasting. Other Beauty is but a fading Flower: Time will plough up deep Furrows upon the faireſt Faces, but this will be fresh to Eternity.

All moral Vertues, homilitical Qualities, which adorn and beautifie Nature, and make it attractive and lovely in the Eyes of Men, are but separable Accidents, which Death discinds and crops off like a sweet Flower from the stalk. Job 4. 21. Doth not their excellency that is in them go away? But Sanctification is inseparable, and will ascend with the Soul into Heaven. Oh! that God would set the Glass of the Law before us, that we may see what defiled Souls we have by Nature, that we might come by Faith to Jesus Christ, who cometh to us by Water and by Blood, 1 Joh. 5. 6.

Inference XIII.

TO conclude. Upon the consideration of the whole matter before us, If this excellent Creature the Soul receive both its Being and Excellencies from God; Then he that formed it must needs have the full and only right to possess and use it, and is therefore most injuriously kept out of the possession, by unsanctified and disobedient Persons.

The Soul of Man is a Building of God; he hath laid out the Treasures of his Wisdom, Power and Goodness in this noble Structure; he built it for a Habitation for Himself to dwell in; and indeed such noble Rooms as the Understanding, Will, and Affections, are too good for any other to inhabit. But Sin hath set open the Gates of this hallowed Temple, let in the Abomination that maketh desolate. All the Doors of the Soul are barred and chained up against Christ, by Ignorance and Infidelity; he seeks for Admission into the Soul which he hath made, but findeth none. A forcible Entry he will not make; but expects when the Will shall bring him the Keys of the Soul, and to its rightful Owner. So he expresseth himself to us in Rev. 3. 20. Behold I stand at the door and knock: If any Man hear my Voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him and he with me. His standing at the Door, denotes his earnest Desire, and patient Waiting, in the Use of all those Means that are introductive of Jesus Christ into the Souls of Men. His knocking signifies the various Essays he makes by Ordinances and Providences externally, and the Convictions and Persuasions of his Spirit, and the Consciences of Sinners internally: every Call of the Word, and every Conviction of Conscience is a Call, a Knock from Heaven, at the Door of the Soul, for Admission of Christ into it. By the Soul's hearing his Voice, and opening the Door, understand its Approbation, and Consent to the Motion and Offer of God. By Christ's coming in, is meant his uniting that Soul unto himself that opens unto him. And as his coming in denotes Union, his supping with the Soul, and the Soul with him, denotes his sweet Communion; imperfect here, complete and full in Heaven.

Oh the admirable Condescension of God to poor Sinners! The God that formed you with a Word, can as easily ruin you with a Frown; yet waits at the Gates of your Souls for Admission into them. There be many Souls within the sound of this Complaint, that have kept God out of his own Right all their Days. They have shut out Jesus Christ, and delivered up their Souls to Satan; if he but knock by a slight Temptation, the Door is presently opened: but Jesus Christ may wait in vain upon them, from Sabbath to Sabbath, and from Year to Year. But the longest Day of his Patience hath an End; and there is a refusal of Grace, after which no more Tenders of Mercy shall be ever made.

What say you, Souls? will you at last open the Door to Jesus Christ, or will you still exclude him? If you will open to him, he will not come in empty-handed, he will bring a Feast with him, such a Feast as you never tasted any thing like it in your Lives: But if you will not open to him, then I call Heaven and Earth to witness against you this day, that you have once more barr'd the Doors of your Souls against him, whose Pleasure and Power gave them their very Beings; against him who is their sovereign Lord, and rightful Owner; and consequently, this Act of yours must stop your Mouths, and deprive you of all Pleas and Apologies, when you shall knock hereafter at the Door of Mercy, and God shall for ever shut it up against you, according to his just, but dreadful Threatnings, Matt. 7. 21. Prov. 1. 24, 25. And thus much of the divine Original, and excellent Nature of the Soul of Man.

Having taken a View of this excellent Creature the Soul, in opening the former Proposition; we come next to the Consideration of its Union with the Body, in this second Proposition:

Doct. II. That the Souls and Bodies of Men are knit together by the feeble Band of the Breath in their Nostrils.

There is (saith a learned Man) no greater Mystery in Nature, than the Union betwixt the Soul and Body; That a Mind and Spirit should be so tied and linked with a Clod of Clay, that while that remains in a due Temper, it cannot by any Art or Power free it self. It can by an Act of the Will move an Hand, or a Foot, or the whole Body, but cannot move from it one Inch. If it move hither, or thither, or by a Leap upward do rebound a little, the Body still follows; it cannot shake it off, or throw it off. We cannot take our selves out; (by any allowable Means we cannot; nor by any at all unless we are at least, within meer Human Power) as long as the Temperament lasts. While that remains we can go; if that fail, we cannot stay; though there be so many open Avenues (could we suppose any material Bounds to hem in, or exclude a Spirit) we cannot go out or in at pleasure. A wonderful thing! I wonder we no more wonder at our own Make and Frame in this respect. —— What so much a-kin are a Mind and a piece of Earth, a Clod and a Thought, that they should be thus affixed to one another?

Mr. How in a Funeral Sermon, p. 9, 10.

My Design here is to shew by what Ligament, Tie, or Bond it hath pleased the great and wise Creator, to affix and link these so different Parts of Man together: And this Moses in the Text tells us, is no other but the Breath of his Nostrils.

The Breath and Soul of Man are two distinct things. His Breath is not his Soul, nor his Soul his Breath, but the Nexus or Bond that couples and unites his Soul and Body in a personal Union. The Body hath no Life in it self, but its Life results from its Union with the Soul, Jam. 2. 26. This Union is maintained by the Breath of our Nostrils, which upon that account is here called the Breath of Life. Breath is an Act of Life, proceeding from the Soul's Union with its Body, and ending with the Dissolution of it. Life is continu'd by its Respiration, and ended by its Expiration. Whilst we live, and whilst Breath is in our Bodies, are Terms synonymous.

What Breath is.

That little Quantity of Air, which we thus breathe in and out at our Nostrils, is more to us, than all the three Regions of Air, which fill up the vast space between Earth and Heaven. It is in a sense our Life.

For the the Use and Office of Respiration, the Lungs were formed and placed where they are, not without the most wise Counsel and Direction of God. They are that Organ in the * Body, which by the Help of that Artery called Arteria Trachea, leading to them as a Channel, for the Passage of Air from the Mouth and Nostrils, the Air is transmitted to, and ventilated by them for the Refreshment of the † Heart, and exhaling the Fumes thereof.

What the Lungs are.

* Pulmo est spirandi & respirandi instrumentum, ad pulmones inducitur, fistula, quæ dicitur Trachea arteria, ad geminos usus condita, &c.

† Cor movetur motu duplici, nempe διαστολῆς & συστολῆς, qua calor innatus attracto aere mitigatur & refrigeratur, Alsted. Theol. Nat. p. (mihi) 614.

The Heart hath continual need of such a Vent and Refreshment; and therefore the Lungs, like a Pair of Bellows, must be kept continually going. Longer than Breath is going, the Heart is dying; that which stops the one, suffocates the other.

And here we may with Admiration contemplate the Wonders by which our Lives are continued. These Lungs are the most frail and tender Part of the Body, and kept in continual Motion and Agitation; yet are made serviceable for seventy or eighty Years together, which is the Wonder of Providence. Were a Piece of Brass, Iron or Steel kept in continual and incessant Use, it would not endure half the time. In a word, the || Heart, that noble Part of the Body, is the Shop wherein the Spirits are laboured and prepared, which therefore is in restringueretur, necesse fuerit, & calidum & humidum nativum nimia affluatione opprimi & suffocari. Pulmones sunt nihil aliud quàm folles quidam naturales, qui sese dilatando aërem attrahunt, inque cor effundunt, ita ut cor perpetuò æstuans, aëre refrigeretur; qui, aer ubi intra cordis meatus incaluit, iterum à corde effunditur in pulmones, qui sese contrahendo foras emittunt. Keckerm. Phys. p. 142.

God hath therefore prepared the Lungs for this service; which being of a thin, porous, and spungy substance can easily be dilated and contracted. By dilating themselves, they attract and suck in the Air into themselves; first duly to prepare and temper it, and then communicate it to the Heart for its Refreshment; which being quickly heated in the Heart, is again breathed out by the Lungs by contracting themselves again. This double Motion of Inspiration and Expiration we call Respiration; and this Respiration is the Bond that holds our Souls and Bodies together.

And indeed, this is but a feeble Bond, a very slender and weak Thread, which holds our Souls and Bodies in union. What more volatile, evanid and uncertain, than a Puff of Breath? The Nostrils are the outer Door of the Body, our Breath is continually in our Nostrils; and how soon may that depart, which is Day and Night at the door, as if it were still taking leave of us? Our Breath is always going; and what is still going, will be gone at last. How small a difference is there betwixt Respiration and Expiration, a breathing and a breathless Lump of Clay? Breath cannot continue long, and Death cannot stay a Moment behind it. Psal. 104. 29. Thou takest away their Breath, they die, and return to their Dust. Life is Breath given, and Death is Breath taken away. The Breath of Man is like a written Sentence, in which there are divers Comma's, or short Pauses, after which speedily follows a full Stop, and there's an end of it.

Some conceive Solomon Points at the continual Motion of the Lungs, in that figurative and elegant Description of the Death of Man, Eccles. 12. 6. Or ever the Silver Cord be loosed, or the golden Bowl be broken; or the Pitcher be broken at the Fountain, or the Wheel be broken at the Cistern. The double Motion of the Lungs he seems here to compare to the double Motion of the Buckets in a Well; the Turn of the Wheel sends one down, and draws the other up. But as we use to say proverbially, The Bucket or Pitcher that goes so often to the Cestern or Well, is broken at last: so must we say of these, they will fail at last. One sitting by the Bedside of a dying Person, sighed out this compassionate Expression, Ah! quid sumus? His sick Friend hearing it, replied, Pulvis, & umbra, fumus, Dust, a Shadow, a puff of Wind. The Wind without us is fickle and inconstant to a Proverb, and so is that within us too. Many grudge at the Shortness of Life; but considering the Feebleness of this Bond, we have more cause to wonder at the Slowness of Death. For let us seriously consider the Frailty of our Breath on a double account, viz.

Pulmones sunt veluti rotæ ad Cisternam: sicut enim rota in fonte situlam modo deprimit deorsum, modo sursum attollit; ita & pulmones perpetuo motu aërem attrahunt, & expellunt. Alsted. Theol. Nat. p. 623.

1. In respect of our Breathing Instruments.
2. Or of breath-stopping Accidents.

1. Great is the Frailty of our breathing Instruments. What is flesh but Weakness? even the most solid and substantial; it is as fading Grass, Isa. 40. 6. But our * Lungs are the most lax, spongy, and tender of all Flesh, if that which is so airy, light, and spumous, deserve the Name of Flesh. And as it is the most frail of all Flesh, so it is in continual Motion, labouring night and Day, without rest or intermission; and that which wants alternate Rest cannot be durable. We see Motion wears out the Wheels of the Watch, tho' made of Brass; but our strength (as Job speaks) is not the strength of Stones nor our Bones (the most solid, much less our Lungs, the most frail and feeble Parts) of Brass. Beside,

* Est enim substantia pulmonum caro laxa, spongiosa, aerea; & similis coagulatæ spumæ sanguinis. Alsted. ib.

2. There are a multitude of breath-stopping Accidents, which may, and daily do beat the last Breath out of Mens Noistrils, before any Decay of nature cause it to expire.

Many mortal Diseases are incident to these frail and tender Parts. Phtysicks, Interenations, Ulcers, easily bar the Passage of our Breath there; yea, and Slighter Accidents, which immediately touch not that Part, are sufficient to stop our Breath, and dislodge our Souls. A Fly, a Gnat, the Stone of a Raisin, a Crum of Bread, have often done it. There is not a Pore in the Body, but is a Door large enough to let in Death; nor a Creature so despicably small, but is strong enough (if God commissionate it) to serve a Writ of Ejectment upon the Soul. The Multitudes of Diseases are so many lighted Candles put to this slender Thread of our Breath, besides the infinite Diversity of external Accidents, by which Multitudes daily Perish: So that there are as great and astonishing Wonders in our Preservation as in our Creation.

Inference I.

HOW admirable then is the Mystery of Providence in the daily Continuation of the Breath of our Nostrils.

That our Breath is yet in our Nostrils, is only from hence, that he who breathed it into them at first is our Life, and the length of our Days, as it is Deut. 30. 20. It is because our Breath is in his Hand, Dan. 5. 23. not in our own, or in our Enemies Hand. Till he take it away, none shall be able to do it; Psal. 104. 29. Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their Dust.

'Tis neither Food nor Physick, but God in and by them, that holdeth our Souls in Life, Psal. 66. 9. We hang every moment of our Life over the Grave, and the Gulph of Eternity, by this slender Thread of our Breath: but it cannot break, how feeble soever it be, till the time appointed be fully come. If it be not extinguished and suffocated as others daily are, it is because he puts none of these Diseases upon us, as it is Exod. 15. 26. or if he do, yet he is Jehovah Rophe, the Lord that healeth us, as it follows in that Text.

We live in the midst of cruel enemies, yea, among them that breath out cruelty, as the Psalmist complaineth, Psal. 27. 12. Such Breath would quickly suffocate ours, did not he in whose hand ours is wonderfully prevent it. Oh what cause have we to employ and spend that Breath in his Praise, who works so many daily Wonders to secure it!

Infer. 2. Is it but a puff of feeble Breath which holds our Souls and Bodies in Union? Then every Man is deeply concerned to make all haste, to take all possible care and pains to secure a better and more durable habitation for his Soul in Heaven, whilst yet it sojourns in this frail Tabernacle of the Body.

The time is at hand, when all these comely and active Bodies shall be so many breathless Carcases, no more capable of any use or service for our Souls than the seats you sit on, or the dead bodies that lie under your feet. Your breath is yet in your Nostrils, and all the means and seasons of Salvation will expire with it; and then it will be as impossible for the best Minister in the world to help your Souls, as for the ablest Physician to recover your Bodies. As Physick comes too late for the one, so Counsels and Persuasions for the other.

Three things are worth thinking on in this matter.

1. That you are not without the hopes and possibilities of Salvation, whilst the breath of life is in your Nostrils. A mercy (how lightly soever you value it) that would ravish with joy those miserable Souls that have already shot the gulf of Eternity, and turn the shrieks and groans of the damned into joyful shouts and acclamations of praise. Poor wretch, consider what thou read'st; that thy Soul is not yet in Christ, is thy greatest misery; but that yet it may be in Christ, is an unspeakable mercy; though thy Salvation be not yet secured, yet what a mercy is it that it is not desperate?

2. When this uncertain breath is once expired, the last hope of every unregenerate person is gone for ever: It is as impossible to recover hope, as it is to recover your departed breath, or recal the day that is past. When the breath is gone, the Compositum is dissolved; we cease to be what now we are, and our life is as water spilt on the ground, which shall not be gather'd up till the Resurrection. Our life is carried like a precious liquor in a brittle Glass, which death breaks to pieces. The Spirit is immediately presented to God, and fixed in its unalterable State, Heb. 9. 27. All means of Salvation now cease for ever; no Ambassadors of peace are sent to the Dead; no more Calls or strivings of the Spirit: no more place for Repentance. O! what an inconceivable weight hath God hanged on a puff of breath!

3. And since matters stand thus, it is to be admired what shift Men make to quiet themselves in so dangerous a state as most Souls live in; quiet and unconcerned, and yet but one puff of breath betwixt them and Hell! O the stupifying and besotting nature of Sin! O the efficacy and power of spiritual Delusions! Are our lives such a throng and hurry of business, that we have no time to go alone and think where we are, and where we shortly must be? What shall I say? If bodily concerns be so weighty, and the matters of Eternity such trifles; if meat and drink, and trade, and children, be such great things, and Christ, and Soul, and Heaven, Hell, and the World to come, such little things in your eyes, you will not be long in that opinion I dare assure you.

Inference III.

Is the Tie so weak betwixt our Souls and Bodies? how close and near then do all our Souls confine and border upon Eternity?

There is no more but a puff of breath, a blast of wind betwixt Time and Eternity: There is a breath which will be our last breath; Respiration must and will terminate in Expiration: The Dead are the Inhabitants, and the Living are Borderers upon the invisible world. This consideration deserves a dwelling place in the hearts of all Men, whether,

I. Regenerate, or
II. Unregenerate.

I. Regenerate Souls should ponder this with pleasure. O 'tis transporting to think how small a matter is betwixt them and their complete Salvation. No sooner is your breath gone, but the full desire of your hearts is come; every breath you draw, draws you a degree nearer to your perfect happiness; Rom. 13. 11. Now is your Salvation nearer than when you believed; therefore both your chearfulness and diligence should be greater than when you were * in the infancy of your Faith. You have run through a considerable part of your Christian course and race, and are now come nearer the Globe and prize of eternal Life. O despond not, loiter not now at last, who were so fervent and zealous in the beginning.

* Hoc dicit, quod in fidei primordiis, ferventiores, & ad opera bona alacriores fuissent fideles; temporis autem progressu, refriguissent. Estius in loc.

'Tis transporting to think how near you approach the Region of light and joy. O that you would distinctly consider,

1. Where you lately were.
2. Where now you are.
3. Where shortly you shall be.

1. You that are now so near Salvation, were lately very near unto Damnation: there was but a puff of breath betwixt you and Hell. How many nights did you sleep securely in the state of nature and unregeneracy? How quietly did you rest upon the brink of Hell, not once imagining the danger you were in? Had any of those sicknesses you then suffered, been suffered by God, like a candle, to burn asunder this slender thread of life which was so near them, you had been as miserable and as hopeless, as those that now are roaring in the lowest Hell. I have heard of one that rid over a dangerous Bridge in the night, who upon the review of the place next day, fell into a swoon, when he was sensible of that danger which the darkness of the night hid from him. O Reader, shall not an escape from Hell affect thee, as much as such an escape would do?

2. 'Tis no less marvellous to consider where you now are; you that were afar off, are now made nigh, Ephes. 2. 13. you that were not beloved, are now beloved, Rom. 9. 25. You were in the state of death and condemnation; you are now passed from death to life, by your free justification, 1 John 3. 14. Your union with Christ hath set you free from condemnation, Rom. 8. 1. Die you must tho' Christ be in you, but there is no hazard or hurt in your death. The stopping of your breath can put no stop to your happiness, it will hasten, not hinder it: If the pale Horse come for you, Heaven, not Hell will now follow him; your sins are pardoned, the covenant of your Salvation sealed. Death is disarmed of its fatal sting; and what then should hinder you from a like Triumph even upon your death-bed with that, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory?

3. And yet you have more room for Joy, whilst you consider where you must and shall be shortly. You are now in Christ, but in a few days you shall be with Christ as well as in him; 'tis well now, but it will be better e'er long. Your sin is now fully pardoned, but not fully purged out of your Souls. Your Persons are freed from guilt, but your Hearts are not either freed from filth or grief: But in a little time you shall be absolutely and eternally freed from both. Your present condition is in Heaven, compared with your former, and your future state will be an Heaven indeed, compared with your present The path of the just is as the shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day, Prov. 4. 18.

II. But on the other side, what meditation can be more startling and amazing to all the unregenerate and Christless World? Ponder it, thou poor Christless and unsanctified Soul. Get thee out of the noise and clamour of this World, which makes such a continual din in thine ears, and consider how thou hangest over the mouth of Hell it self, by the feeble Thread which is spun every moment out of thy Nostrils; as soon as that gives way, thou art gone for ever. What shift do you make to quiet your fears, and eat, drink, and labour with any pleasure? 'Tis storied of Dionysius the Tyrant, that when Damocles would have flattered him into a conceit of the perfection of his happiness, as he was an absolute sovereign Prince, and could do what he pleased with others, as his Vassals; Dionysius, to confute his fancy, caused him to be placed at a Table richly furnished, and attended with the most curious Musick, but just over his head hanged a sharp and heavy Sword by one single hair; which when Damocles saw, no Meat would go down with him, but he earnestly begged for a discharge from that place. This is the lively Emblem of thy condition, thou unregenerate man.

There are three things in thy state sadly opposed to the former state last described.

1. The state you were born in, was bad.
2. The state you are now in, is worse.
3. The state you shall shortly be in, if you thus continue, will be unspeakably worst of all.

1. The state you were born in, was a sad state; you were born in sin, Psal. 51, 5. and under wrath, Ephes. 2. 3. The Womb of Nature cast you forth into this World defiled and condemned Creatures.

2. The state you are in now, is much worse than that you were born in; for what have you been doing ever since you were born, but treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath? Rom. 2. 5. For every Sand of Time which run out of the Glass of God's patience towards you, a Drop of Wrath hath been running into the Vials of his Indignation against you. Oh! what a Treasure of Sin and Wrath then is laid up in so many years as you have lived in sin! Every sin committed, every mercy abused, every Call of God neglected and slighted, adds still more and more to this Treasure.

3. It will be much worse shortly than it is now, except preventing, renewing Grace step in betwixt you and that Wrath into which you are hastning so fast. 'Tis sad to be under the Sentence of Condemnation, but unspeakably worse to be under the Execution of that Sentence. To be a Christless man is lamentable, but to be a hopeless man is more lamentable. For tho' you be now without Christ, yet whilst the Breath of Life is in your Nostrils you are not absolutely without hope: but when once that Breath is gone, all the World cannot save or help you. Your last Breath and your last Hope expire together. Tho' you be under God's damning Sentence, yet that Sentence through the riches of forbearance is not executed; but as soon as you die, all that Wrath which hang'd over your heads so many years, in the black Clouds of God's threatnings, will pour down in a furious storm upon you, which will never break up whilst God is God. Oh! think, and think again, and let your thoughts think close to this sad and solemn Subject, there is but a Breath betwixt you and Hell.

Inference IV.

Doth God maintain your Life by Breath? Let no that Breath destroy your Life, which God gave to preserve it.

No man can live without Breath; and yet some might live longer than they do, if their Breath were better employed. *

Some mens Throats have been cut by their own Tongues, as the Arabian Proverb intimates. Life and Death (saith Solomon) are in the power of the Tongue. Criticks observe, that a Word and a Plague grow upon the same Root in the Hebrew Tongue. 'Tis certain that some Mens Breath hath been baneful Poyson both to themselves and others. It was a Word that cut off the life of Adonijah, 1 King. 2. 25. and thousands since his day have died upon the point of the same Weapon. 'Tis therefore wholesom Advice that is given us, Psal. 34. 12. What man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good? keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

And the more evil the times are, the stricter guard we should keep upon our lips. It is an evil time, the prudent will keep silence, Amos 5. 13. When wicked men watch to make a man an offender for a word, as it is, Isa. 29. 20, 21. it behoves us to be upon our watch, that we offend not with our lips. 'Tis good to keep what is not safe to trust. David was a deaf and dumb man, when in the company of wicked men, Psal. 38. 13. he thought silence then to be his prudence. It is bet-better they should call you fools, than find you so.

Inference V.

Employ not that Breath to the dishonour of God, which was first given, and is still graciously maintained by him for your comfort and good.

'Twere better you had never breathed at all, than to spend your Breath in prophane Oaths, or foolish and idle Chat, whereby at once you wound the Name of God, draw guilt upon your own Souls, and help on the ruin of others. That is a startling Text, Matt. 12. 36. But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give an account thereof in the day of Judgment.

To give an account, is here, by a Metalepsis of the Antecedent for the Consequent, put for punishment in Hell-fire, without an intervening change of heart, and sprinkling of the Blood of Jesus.

And there is more evil in this abuse of our Breath, than we can easily discern, especially upon two Accounts, (1.) Because it is a sin most frequently committed, and seldom repented of. The intercourse betwixt the Heart and Tongue is quick, and the sense of the evil as easily and quickly passeth away. (2.) Because the poisonous and malignant influence thereof abides and continues long after: Our words may mischief others, not only a long time after they are spoken, but a long time after the Tongue that spake them is turned to Dust. How many years may a foolish or filthy word, a prophane scoff, an atheistical expression, stick in the minds of them that heard them, after the speaker's death! A word spoken is physically transient, and pass'd away with the breath that delivered it: but it's morally permanent; for as to its moral efficacy, no more is required, but its objective existence in the minds and thoughts of them that once heard it: And upon that very ground Suarez argues for a general Judgment, after Men have past at death their particular Judgment; because (saith he) long after that, abundance of Good and Evil will be done in this World by the dead, in the persons of others that over-live them. For look, as it was said of Abel, that being dead he yet speaketh: so it may be said of Julian, Porphyry, and multitudes of scoffing Atheists, that being dead, they yet speak. Oh therefore get a sanctified Heart, to season your Breath, that it may minister Grace to the hearers.

Inference VI.

Let your Breath promote the spiritual life of others, as well as maintain the natural life in your selves.

Tho' the maintaining of your natural life be one end why God gave you breath, yet it is not the only, or principal end of it. Your Breath must be Food to others, as well as Life to you: Prov. 10. 21. The lips of the righteous feed many. It will be comfortable to resign that Breath to God at Death, which hath been instrumental to his Glory in this Life. It was no low Encomium Christ gave of the Church, when he said, Cant. 4 11. Thy lips, Oh my Spouse, drop as the Honeycomb, Honey and Milk are under thy tongue. Sweet, wholsome, and pleasant words, drop from her lips. They drop (saith Christ) as the Honeycomb. Some drops ever and anon fall actually, and others hang at the same time prepared and ready to fall. Such a prepared and habitual disposition should every Christian continually have. Your words may stick upon mens hearts to their Edification and Salvation, when you are in your Graves. Your Tongues may now sow that precious Seed, which may spring up to the praise of God, tho' you may not live to reap the comfort of it in this World. John 4. 36, 37. 'Tis a rich expence of your Breath, to bring but one Soul to God, and yet God hath used the Breath of one, as his Instrument, to save, edifie, and comfort the Souls of thousands, Prov. 11. 30. The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and he that winneth Souls is wise. The good Lord make all his People wise in this.

Surely, whether we consider the invaluable worth and preciousness of Souls, the benefits you have had from the breath of others your selves, the innate Property of Grace where-ever it is, to diffuse and communicate it self; how short a time you have to breath, and how comfortable it will be, when you breath your last, to remember how it hath been employed for God: All this should open your lips, to counsel, reprove, and comfort others, as often as opportunity is ministred.

Did Christ spend his Blood for our Souls, and shall not we spend our Breath for them? Oh! let our Lips dispence Knowledge. If you will not spend your Breath for God, how will you spend your Blood for him? If you will not speak for him, I doubt you will not die for him. Away with a sullen reservedness, away with unprofitable Chat, all Subjects of Discourse are not fit for a Christian's Lips. 'Tis a grave Admonition God once gave his People by the Pen of a faithful * Minister. You may rue (saith he) the opportunities you have lost. * Mr. West. Here lay a poor Wretch with one foot in Hell, would he not have started back, if he had had light to discover his danger? Well, you are now together, something you must say; the same breath would serve for a compassionate Admonition as for a complacent Impertinency, which will redound to neither of your advantages. You part, the Man dies, and in the midst of Hell cries out against you, one word of yours might have saved me; you had me in your reach, you might have told me my danger; you forbare, I hardened; the Lord reward your negligence.

Inference VII.

If Breath be the tie betwixt Soul and Body, how are we concerned to improve, and draw forth the precious Breath of Ministers and Christians whilst it is yet in their Nostrils?

The Breath of many Ministers is judicially stopt already, their Breath serves to little other use than to preserve their own lives; it will be stopt e'er long by Death, and then those excellent Treasures of Gifts and Graces wherewith they are richly furnished, will be gone out of your reach, never to be further useful to your Souls. You should do by them therefore (as one aptly speaks) as Scholars do by some choice Book they have borrowed, and must return in a few days to the Owner: They diligently read it night and day, and carefully transcribe the most useful and excellent Notes they can find in it, that they may make them their own when the Book is called out of their hands.

But alas! we rather divert, than draw forth these Excellencies that are in them. You may yet converse with them, and greatly benefit your selves by these Converses; but (as one speaks) by the stream of your impertinent talk that season is neglected: afterwards you see your lack of your Knowledge, but then the Instrument is removed. How must it gall an awakened Jew, to think what discourse he had with Jesus Christ! Is it lawful to give Tribute to Cesar? Why do not thy Disciples fast? Oh! had I nothing else to enquire of the Lord Jesus? Would it not have been more pertinent to have asked, What shall I do to be saved? But he is gone, and I dead in my Sins. How many persons have we sent away, that had a word of Wisdom in their hearts, having only learnt from them what a Clock it is, what Weather, or what News; forgetting to ask our own hearts, What is all this to us? and to enquire of them things worthy of their Wisdom and Experience. Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a Fool, seeing he hath no heart to it? Prov. 17. 16. The expence of one minutes breath in season, may, if God concur with it, be to you the ground of breathing forth Praises to God to all Eternity.

Inference VIII.

Are Souls and Bodies tack'd together by so frail a thing as a puff of Breath? How vain and groundless then are all those Pleasures Men take in their carnal Projects and Designs in this World!

We lay the plot and design of our future earthly Felicity in our own thoughts; we mould and contrive a design for a long and pleasant Life. The Model for raising an Estate is already formed in our thoughts, and we have not patience to defer our pleasure till the accomplishment of it, but presently draw a train of pleasing Consequents from this Chimera, and our thoughts can stoop to nothing less than sitting down all the remainder of our days in the very lap of Delight and Pleasure; forgetting that our Breath is all the while in our Nostrils, and may expire the next moment; and if it do, the structure of all our Expectations and Projects comes to nothing in the same moment. His Breath goeth forth, he returneth to his Dust: and in that very day his thoughts perish, Psal. 146. 4. The whole frame of his thoughts falls instantly abroad, by drawing out this one pin, his Breath. 'Tis good with all our earthly designs to mingle the serious thoughts of the Dominion of Providence, and our own frailty; James 4. 15. If the Lord will, and we live.

'Tis become a common Observation, that as soon as Men have accomplished their earthly designs, and begin to hug and bless themselves in their own Acquisitions, a sudden and unexpected period is put to their Lives and Pleasures, as you may see Luke 12. 19, 20. Dan. 4. 30.

Oh then drive moderately; you will be at the end of all these things sooner than you imagine. We need not victual a Ship to cross the Channel, as they do that are bound to the Indies. What is your Life? It is even a Vapour, which appeareth for a little while, and then vanisheth away, James 4. 14. In one moment the Projects of many years are overturned for ever.

Inference IX.

Is it but a puff of Breath that holds Man in life? Then build not too much hope and confidence upon any Man.

Build not too high upon so feeble a foundation. Cease ye from Man (saith the Prophet) whose Breath is in his Nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of? Isa. 2. 22. There are two things that should deter us from dependence upon any man, viz. his falseness and his frailty. Grace in a great measure may cure the first, but not the last. The best of Men must die, as well as the worst, Rom. 8. 10. 'tis a vanity therefore to rely upon any man. It was the saying of a Philosopher, when he heard how Merchants lost great Estates at Sea in a moment, Non amo fœlicitatem è funibus pendentem; I love not that happiness (saith he) which hangs upon a Rope. But all the happiness of many men hangs upon a far weaker thing than a Rope, even the perishing Breath of a Creature.

Let not Parents raise their hopes too high, or lean too hard upon their Children. Say not of thy Child, as Lamech did of Noah, This Son shall comfort us, Gen. 5. 29. The World is full of the laments and bitter cries of disappointed Parents. Let not the Wife depend too much on her Husband, as if her earthly comforts were secured in him against all danger. God is often provok'd to stop our friends Breath, that thereby he may stop our way to sin, 1 Tim. 5. 5. The trust and dependence of a Soul is too weighty to be hang'd upon such a weak and rotten pin as a Creature's breath is.

Inference X.

To conclude; If this frail Breath be all that differenceth the living from the dead, Then fear not Man whose Breath is in his Nostrils. There is as little ground for our fear of Man, as there is for our trust in Man. As Death in a moment can make the best Man useless, and put him out of capacity to do us any good; so it can in a moment make the worst Man harmless, and put him out of a capacity to do us any injury. Indeed if the Breath of our Enemies were in their power, and ours at their mercy, there would be just cause to tremble at them; but they are neither masters of their own or ours. Who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a man that shall die? said God to Jacob, Isa.

Isa. 51. 12. The Breath of the mightiest is no better secured than of the meanest, nor never in more danger to be stopt than when they breath out Threatnings against the Upright.

Julian's breath was soon stopt after he threatned to root out the Galileans. Queen Mary resigned her breath at the very time when she had filled the Prisons with many of Christ's Sheep designed for the slaughter. Read Isa. 17. 12. and see what Mushrooms we are afraid of. The best way to continue your Relations and Friends to your comfort, is to give God, and not them, your dependence; and the best way to secure your selves against the rage of Enemies, is to give God your fear, and not them. And thus much of the Nature of the Soul, and its Tie with the Body.

Rev. VI. 9, 10, 11.

And when he had opened the Fifth Seal, I saw under the Altar the Souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the Testimony which they held.

And they cried with a loud Voice, saying, How long, O Lord! holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our Blood on them that dwell on the Earth?

And white Robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, That they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also, and their Brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

HAving from the former Text spoken of the Nature of the Soul and the Tie betwixt it and the Body; I shall from this Scripture evince the Immortality of the Soul, which is a chief part of its Excellency and Glory; and in this Scripture it hath a firm foundation.

This Book of the Revelation completes and seals up the whole Sacred Canon, Rev. 22. 18. It also comprehends all the great and signal events of Providence, relating either to the Christian Church, or to its Antichristian Enemies, in the several Periods of Time, to the end of the World, Chap. 1. 19. All which the Spirit of God discovers to us in the opening of the seven Seals, the sounding of the seven Trumpets, and the pouring out of the seven Vials.

The first five Seals express the State of the Church under the bloody, persecuting Heathen Emperours.

Seal 1. The First Seal opened, ver. 2, gives the Church a very encouraging and comfortable prospect of the Victories, Successes, and Triumphs of Christ, notwithstanding the Rage, Subtlety, and Power of all its Enemies. He shall ride on conquering, and to conquer, and his Arrows shall be sharp in the hearts of his Enemies, whereby the People shall fall under him: And this chearing Prospect was no more than was needful. For,

Seal 2. The Seal opened, v. 3, 4. represents the first bloody Persecution of the Church under Nero, whom Tertullian calls Dedicator Damnationis nostræ: He that first condemned Christians to the Slaughter. And the Persecution under him is set forth by the Type of a red Horse, and a great Sword in the hand of him that rode thereon. His cruelty is by Paul compared to the mouth of a Lion, 2 Tim. 4. 17. Paul, Peter, Bartholomew, Barnabas, Mark, are all said to die by his cruel hand; and so fierce was his rage against the Christians, that at that time, as Eusebius * saith, a Man might see Cities lie full of dead Bodies, the old and young, Men and Women, cast out naked, without any reverence of Persons or Sex, in the open street.

Tertul. Apol. c. 5.

* Adeo ut videret repletas humanis corporibus civitates, jacentes mortuos, simul cum parvulis senes, fœminarumque, absque ulla sexûs reverentia, in publico rejecta Cadavera. Tacit. l. 15. Annal.

And when the day failed, Christians (saith Tacitus) were burnt in the Night instead of Torches, to give them Light in the streets.

Seal 3. The third Seal opened, ver. 5. 6. sets forth the Calamities which should befal the Church by Famine; yet not so much a litteral, as a figurative Famine, as a grave and learned Commentator * expounds it, like that mentioned Amos 8. 11. 12. which fell out under Maximinus and Trajan; the former directing the Persecution, especially against Ministers, in which many bright Lamps were extinguished; the latter expresly condemned all Christian Meetings and Assemblies by a Law. The Type by which this Persecution was set forth, is a black Horse. A gloomy and dismal day it was indeed to the poor Saints, when they ate the Bread of their Souls as it were by weight; for he that sate on him had a pair of Ballances in his hand. Then did John hear this sad Voice, A measure of Wheat for a penny, and three measures of Barley for a penny. The quantity was but the ordinary Allowance to keep a Man alive for a day; and a Roman Penny was the ordinary Wages given for a day's Work to a Labourer. The meaning is, that in those days all the spiritual food men should get to keep their Souls alive from day to day, with all their Travel and Labour, should be but sufficient for that end.

* Durham in loc.

Seal 4. The fourth Seal opened, ver. 7, 8. represents a much more sad and doleful State of the Church; for under it are found all the former Sufferings, with some new kinds of trouble superadded. Under this Seal Death rides upon the pale Horse, and Hell, or the Grave follows him. 'Tis conceived to point at the Persecution under Diocle-

sian, cleſian, when the Church was mowed down as a Meadow.

Seal 5. The fifth Seal is opened in my Text, under which the Lord Jeſus repreſents to his Servant John, the ſtate and condition of thoſe precious Souls which had been torn and ſeparated from their Bodies by the bloody hands of Tyrants, for his Names ſake, under all the former Perſecutions. The deſign whereof is, to ſupport and encourage all that were to come after in the ſame bloody path. I ſaw under the Altar, &c. In which we have an account,

1. Of what John ſaw.
2. Of what he heard.

1. We have an account of what he ſaw: I ſaw the Souls of them that were ſlain for the Word of God, and for the Teſtimony which they held.

Souls in this place are not put for the Blood, or the dead Carcaſs of the Saints who were ſlain, as ſome have groundleſly imagined; but are to be underſtood properly and ſtrictly for thoſe ſpiritual and immortal Subſtances which once had a vital Union with their Bodies but were now ſeparated from them by a violent Death; yet ſtill retained a love and inclination to them, even in the ſtate of ſeparation; and are therefore here brought in complaining of the ſhedding of their Blood, and deſtruction of their Bodies.

Ἦδον τὰς ψυχὰς. Anima pro immortali Spiritu hominis capitur, ſicuti Matt. 10. 28. hoc ſenſu dicit hîc Johannes ſe vidiſſe animas, &c. Marlorat. in loc.

Theſe Souls (even of all that died for Chriſt, from Abel to that time) John ſaw, that is, in Spirit; for theſe immaterial Subſtances are not perceptible by the groſs external ſenſes. He had the privilege and favour of a ſpiritual repreſentation of them, being therein extraordinarily aſſiſted, as Paul was when his Soul was rapt into the third Heaven, and heard things unutterable, 2 Cor. 12. 2. God gave him a tranſient viſible repreſentation of thoſe holy Souls, and that under the Altar; he means not any material Altar, as that at Jeruſalem was; but as the holy place figured Heaven, ſo the Altar figured Jeſus Chriſt, Heb. 13. 10. And moſt aptly Chriſt is repreſented to John in this figure, and Souls of the Martyrs at the foot or baſis of this Altar; thereby to inform us (1.) That however Men look upon the Death of thoſe perſons, and tho' they kill their Names by Slanders, as well as their perſons by the Sword; yet in God's account they die as Sacrifices, and their Blood is no other than a Drink-offering poured out to God, which he highly prizeth, and graciouſly accepteth. Sutable whereunto Pauls expreſſion is, Philip. 2. 17. (2.) That the value and acceptation their Death and Blood-ſhed hath with God, is through Chriſt, and upon his account; for it is the Altar which ſanctifieth the Gift, Matth. 23. 19. And (3.) it informs us that theſe holy Souls, now in a ſtate of ſeparation from their Bodies, were very near to Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven. They lay as it were at his foot.

Animæ corporibus exutæ inviſibiles ſunt oculis corporeis; vidit ergo eas Johannes Spiritu. Paræus in loc.

Once more, they are here deſcribed to us by the cauſe of their Sufferings and Death in this World, and that was, for the Word of God, and for the Teſtimony which they held; (i. e.) They died in defence of the Truths, or Will of God revealed in his Word, againſt the Corruption, Oppoſitions, and innovations of Men. As one of the Martyrs that held up the Bible at the Stake, ſaying, This is it that hath brought me hither. They died not as Malefactors, but as Witneſſes: they gave a threefold Teſtimony to the Truth, a Lip-teſtimony, a Life Teſtimony, and a Blood-Teſtimony: whilſt the Hypocrite gives but one, and many Chriſtians but two. Thus we have an account of what John ſaw.

2. Next he tells us what he heard; and that was,

(1.) A vehement Cry from thoſe Souls to God.
(2.) A gracious Anſwer from God to them.

(1.) The Cry which they uttered with a loud voice was this, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, doſt thou not avenge our Blood on them that dwell on the Earth? A cry like that from the Blood of Abel. Yet let it be remembred, (1.) This Cry doth not imply theſe holy Souls to be in a reſtleſs State, or to want true ſatisfaction and repoſe out of the Body; nor yet, (2.) That they carried with them to Heaven any malevolent or revengeful diſpoſition: that which is principally ſignified by this Cry, is their vehement deſire after the abolition of the Kingdom of Satan, and the completion and conſummation of Chriſt's Kingdom in this World: That thoſe his Enemies, which oppoſe his Kingdom by ſlaying his Saints, may be made his footſtool; which is the ſame thing Chriſt waits for in Glory, Heb. 10. 13.

(2.) Here we find God's gracious Anſwer to the cry of theſe Souls, in which he ſpeaks ſatisfaction to them two ways:

1. By ſomewhat given them for preſent.
2. By ſomewhat promiſed them hereafter.

1. That which he gives them in hand; White Robes were given to every one of them. It is generally agreed, that theſe white Robes given them denote heavenly Glory, the ſame which is promiſed to all ſincere and faithful ones, who preſerve themſelves pure from the corruptions and defilements of the World, Rev. 3. 4. And it is as much as if God ſhould have ſaid to them, Altho' the time be not come to ſatisfie your deſires in the final ruine and overthrow of Satan's tyrannical Kingdom in the World, and Chriſt's conſummate Conqueſt of all his Enemies, yet it ſhall be well with you in the mean time; you ſhall walk with me in white, and enjoy your Glory in Heaven.

1. And this is not all; but the very things they cry for ſhall be given them alſo after a little ſeaſon; q. d. wait but a little while, till the reſt that are to follow in the ſame ſuffering path be got through the Red Sea of Martyrdom, as you are, and then you ſhall ſee the foot of Chriſt upon the Necks of all his Enemies, and Juſtice ſhall fully avenge the precious innocent Blood of all the Saints, which in all Ages hath been ſhed for my ſake; from the Blood of Abel to the laſt that ſhall ever ſuffer for righteouſneſs ſake in the World. From all which, this Concluſion is moſt fair and obvious.

Doct.

Doct. That the Souls of Men perish not with their Bodies, but do certainly over-live them, and subsist in a state of separation from them. Mat. 10. 28. Fear not them that kill the Body, but are not able to kill the Soul.

The Bodies of these Martyrs of Jesus were destroyed by divers sorts of Torments, but their Souls were out of the reach of all those cruel Engines: they were in safety under the Altar, and in Glory, clothed with their white Robes, when the Bodies they lately inhabited on Earth were turned to Ashes, and torn to pieces by wild Beasts.

The Point I am to discourse from this Scripture, is the Immortality of the Soul. For the better understanding whereof, let it be noted that there is a twofold Immortality.

I. Simple, and absolute in its own Nature.
II. Derived, dependent, and from the pleasure of God.

In the former sense, God only hath Immortality, as the Apostle speaks, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Our Souls have it as a Gift from him. He that created our Souls out of nothing, can, if he please, reduce them to nothing again; but he hath bestowed Immortality upon them, and produced them in a Nature sutable to that his appointment, fitted for an everlasting Life. So that tho' God by his absolute Power can, yet he never will annihilate them, but they shall and must live for ever in endless Blessedness or Misery; Death must destroy these mortal Bodies, but it cannot destroy our Souls. And the certainty of this Assertion is grounded upon these Reasons, and will be cleared by these following Arguments.

Argument I.

The first Argument for proof of the Soul's Immortality, may be taken from the Simplicity, Spirituality, and Uncompoundedness of its Nature: It is a pure, simple, unmixed Being. † Death is the dissolution of things compounded; where therefore no composition or mixture is found, no Death or Dissolution can follow.

Death is the great Divider, but it is of things that are divisible. The more simple, pure, and refined any material thing is, by so much the more permanent and durable it is found to be. The nearer it approacheth to the Nature of Spirits, the farther it is remov'd from the power of Death: but that which is not material, or mixed at all, is wholly exempt from the stroke and power of Death. It is from the contrariant qualities and jarring humours in mixed Bodies, that they come under the Law and Power of Dissolution. Matter and Mixture are the doors at which Death enters naturally upon the Creatures.

But the Soul of Man is a simple, spiritual, immaterial, and unmixed Being, not compounded of Matter and Form, as other Creatures are, but void of Matter, and altogether spiritual; as may appear in the vast capacity of its Understanding Faculty, which cannot be straitned by receiving multitudes of Truths into it. It need not empty it self of what it had received before, to make way for more Truth; nor doth it find it self clogg'd or burdened by the greatest multitudes or varieties of Truths; but the more it knows, the more it still desires to know. Its Capacity and Appetite are found to enlarge themselves according to the increase of Knowledge. So that, to speak as the matter is, If the Knowledge of all Arts, Sciences, and Mysteries of Nature could be gathered into the Mind of one Man, yet that Mind would thirst, and even burn with desire after more Knowledge, and find more room for it than it did when it first sipt and relish'd the sweetness of Truth. Knowledge, as Knowledge, never burdens or cloys the Mind; but like fire increases and enlarges, as it finds more Matter to work upon. Now this could never be, if the Soul were a material Being. Take the largest Vessel, and you shall find that the more you pour into it, the less room is still left for more; and when it is full, you cannot pour in one drop more, except you let out what was in it before. But the Soul is no such Vessel, it can retain all it had, and be still receptive of more; so that nothing can fill it and satisfie it, but that which is infinite and perfect.

Intus existens prohibet alienum.

The natural appetite after food is sometimes sharp and eager, but then there is a stint and measure, beyond which it craves not; but the appetite of the Mind is more eager and unlimited; it never saith, till it come to rest in God, it is enough, because the faculty which produceth it, is more active, spiritual, and immaterial. All Matter hath its limits, bounds, and measures, beyond which it cannot be extended. But the Soul is boundless, and its appetitions infinite; it rests not, but in the spiritual and infinite Being, God alone being its adequated Object, and able to satisfie its desires, which plainly proves it to be a spiritual, immaterial, and simple Being. And being so, two things necessarily follow therefrom.

Appetitus finis est infinitas. There is no end of desiring, till we attain the desired End, which is God.

1. That it is void of any Principle of Corruption in it self.
2. That it is not liable to any stroke of Death, by any adverse power without it self.

1. It cannot be liable to Death from any Seeds or Principles of Corruption within it self; for where there is no Composition, there is no Dissolution: the spirituality and simplicity of the Soul admits of no Corruption.

2. Nor is it liable to Death, by any adverse power without it self; no Sword can touch it, no Instrument of Death can reach it: 'tis above the reach of all Adversaries, Mat. 10. 28. Fear not them that kill the Body, but cannot kill the Soul. The bounds and limits of Creature power are here fixed by Jesus Christ, beyond which they cannot go. They can wound, torment, and destroy the Body, when God permits them: but the Soul is out of their reach; a Sword can no more hurt or wound it, than it can wound or hurt the Light; and consequently it is, and must needs be of an immortal Nature.

Objecti

Object. But there ſeems to be a decay upon our Souls in our old Age, and Decays argue and imply Corruption, and are ſo many ſteps and tendencies towards the Death and Diſſolution thereof. The experience of the whole World ſhews us how the Apprehenſions, Judgments, Wit and Memory of old Men fail, even to that degree, that they become Children again, in reſpect of the abilities of their Minds: their Souls only ſerving as it were to ſalt their Bodies, and keep them from putrefaction for a few days longer.

Sol. 'Tis a great miſtake, there is not the leaſt decay upon the Soul, no time makes any change upon the Eſſence of the Soul: all the alteration that is made is upon the Organs and Inſtruments of the Body, which decay in time, and become inept and unſerviceable to the Soul.

The Soul, like an expert and skilful Muſician, is as able as ever it was, but the Body, its Inſtrument, is out of Tune: and the ableſt Artiſt can make no pleaſing Melody upon an Inſtrument whoſe ſtrings are broken, or ſo relaxed that they cannot be ſcrued up to their due height.

Let Hippocrates the Prince of Phyſicians decide this matter for us. † The Soul (ſaith he) cannot be changed or altered as to its eſſence by the acceſs of Meat or Drink, or any other thing whatſoever; but all the alterations that are made, muſt be referred either to the ſpirits with which it mixeth it ſelf, or to the Veſſels and Organs through which it ſtreameth. So that this proves not its corruptibility, and being neither corruptible in it ſelf, nor vulnerable by any Creature without it ſelf; nor ſeeing Man cannot, and God will not deſtroy it, the concluſion is ſtrongly inferred, that therefore it is immortal.

Argu. II. The Immortality of the Souls of Men may be concluded from the promiſes of everlaſting Bleſſedneſs, and the threatnings of everlaſting Miſeries, reſpectively made in the Scriptures of Truth, to the godly and ungodly, after this life; which Promiſes and Threatnings had been altogether vain and deluſory, if our Souls periſh with our Bodies.

1. God has made many everlaſting Promiſes of Bleſſedneſs, yea he hath eſtabliſhed an everlaſting Covenant betwixt himſelf and the Souls of the Righteous, promiſing to be their God for ever, and to beſtow endleſs Bleſſedneſs upon them in the World to come. Such a Promiſe is that, John 8. 28. I give unto them eternal life, and they ſhall never periſh. And Joh. 4. 14. Whoſoever drinketh of the Water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt; but the Water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a Well of Water, ſpringing up into everlaſting life. And again, John 11. 26. Whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, ſhall never die. And once more, Rom. 2. 7. To them who by patient continuance in well doing, ſeek for Glory and Honour, and Immortality, eternal Life; with multitudes more of like nature.

Now if theſe be no vain and deluſory Promiſes, (as to be ſure they are not, being the Words of the true and faithful God) then thoſe Souls to whom they are made, muſt live for ever: for if the ſubject of the Promiſes fail, conſequently the performance of the Promiſes muſt fail too. For how ſhall they be made good, when thoſe to whom they are made, are periſhed?

Let it not be objected here, That the Bodies of Believers are concerned in the Peomiſes, as well as their Souls, and yet their Bodies periſh notwithſtanding.

For we ſay, tho' their Bodies die, yet they ſhall live again, and enjoy the fruit of the Promiſes in eternal Glory: And whilſt their Bodies lie in the grave, their Souls are with God, enjoying the covenanted Bleſſedneſs in Heaven, Rom. 8. 10, 11. and ſo the Covenant-bond is not looſed betwixt them and God, by Death, which it muſt needs be, in caſe the Soul periſh when the Body doth. And upon this Hypotheſis that Argument of Chriſt is built, Matt. 22. 32. proving the Reſurrection from the Covenant God made with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob: God is not the God of the Dead, but of the Living, q. d. If Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, be periſhed in Soul as well as in Body, how then is God their God; what is become of the Promiſe and Covenant relation? for if one Correlate fail, the Relation neceſſary fails with it. If God be their God, then certainly they are in being; for God is not the God of the Dead, i. e. of thoſe that are utterly periſhed. Therefore it muſt needs be, that tho' their Bodies be naturally dead, yet their Souls ſtill live; and their Bodies muſt live again at the Reſurrection by vertue of the ſame Promiſe.

On the contrary, many threatnings of eternal Miſery after this life are found in the Scriptures of Truth againſt ungodly and wicked Perſons. Such is that in 2 Theſ. 1. 7. 8, 9. The Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from Heaven in flaming Fire, to render Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord, and the Glory of his Power. And ſpeaking of the Torments of the Damned, Chriſt thus expreſſeth the miſery of ſuch wretched Souls in Hell, Mark 9. 44. Where their Worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. But how ſhall the wicked be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction, if their Souls have not an everlaſting Duration? Or how can it be ſaid, That their Worm (viz. the remorſe and anguiſh of their Conſciences) dieth not, if their Souls die? Puniſhment can endure no longer than its ſubject endureth. If the being of the Soul ceaſe, its pains and puniſhments muſt have an end.

You ſee then, there are everlaſting Promiſes and Threatnings to be fulfilled, both upon the Godly and Ungodly, He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life; and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life, but the wrath of God abideth on him, John 3. 36. The Believer ſhall never ſee Spiritual death, viz. the ſeparation of his Soul from God; and the Unbeliever ſhall never ſee Life, viz. the bleſſed fruition of God; but the Wrath of God ſhall abide on him. If Wrath muſt abide on him, he muſt abide alſo as the wretched ſubject thereof, which is another Argument of the Immortality of Souls.

Argu.

Argument III. The Immortality of the Soul is a Truth asserted and attested by the universal consent of all Nations and Ages of the World.

* Multum dare solemus præsumptioni omnium hominum; cum de Animæ Æternitate disserimus, non leve momentum apud nos habet consensus hominum aut timentium inferos, aut colentium. Seneca Ep. 7.

* We give much (saith Seneca) to the Presumption of all Men, and that justly; for it would be hard to think that an Error should obtain the general consent of Mankind, or that God would suffer all the World, in all Ages of it, to bow down under an universal Deception.

This Doctrine sticks close to the Nature of Man; it springs up easily, and without force from his Conscience. It hath been allowed as an unquestionable thing, not only among Christians, who have the Oracles of God to teach and confirm this Doctrine, but among Heathens also, who had no other Light but that of Nature, to guide them into the knowledge and belief of it. Learned Zanchius cites out of Cicero an excellent passage to this purpose. † In every thing (saith he) the consent of all Nations is to be accounted the Law of Nature; and therefore with all good Men it should be instead of a thousand Demonstrations: and to resist it, (as he there adds) what is it, but to resist the Voice of God? and how much more, when with this consent the Word of God doth also consent? As for the consent of Nations in this point, the learned Author last mentioned hath industriously gathered many great and famous Testimonies from the antient Chaldeans, Grecians, Pythagoreans, Stoicks, Platonists, &c. which evidently shew they made no doubt of the Immortality of their Souls. How plain is that of Phocylides? Ψυχὴ ϑ ἀϑάνατος, καὶ ἀγήρως ζωὴ διὰ παντός. Speaking of the Soul, in opposition to the Body, which must be resolved into dust, he saith, But for the Soul, that is Immortal, and never grows old, but lives for ever. And Trismegistus, the famous and celebrated Philosopher, gives this account of Man. * That he consists of two parts, being mortal in respect of his Body, but immortal in respect of his Soul, which is his best and principal part, Plato not only asserts the Immortality of the Souls of Men, but disputes for it, and among other Arguments urges this. † That if it were not so, wicked Men would certainly have the advantage of righteous and good Men, who after they have committed all manner of evils, should suffer none. But what speak I of Philosophers? the most barbarous Nations in the World constantly believe it ||. The Turks acknowledge it in their Alcboran; and tho' they grosly mistake the Nature of Heaven, in fansying it to be a Paradise of sensual Pleasures, as well as the way thither, by their Impostor Mahomet; yet 'tis plain they believe the Soul's Immortality, and that it lives in pain or pleasure after this life.

* Ἄνθρωπος δυσλύτης, διὰ μὲν σῶμα θνητὸς, ἀϑάνατος δὲ διὰ ψυχήν, ἣ ἐστὶν ἄνθρωπος.

The very salvage and illiterate Indians are so fully persuaded of the Soul's Immortality that Wives cast themselves chearfully into the Flames to attend the Souls of their Husbands; and Subjects, to attend the Souls of their Kings into the other World.

Two things are objected against this Argument.

1. That some particular Persons have denied this Doctrine, as Epicurus, &c. and by Argument maintained the contrary.

To which I answer, That tho' they have done so, yet (1). This no way shakes the Argument from the consent of Nations, because some few persons have denied it: we truly say the Earth is Spherical, tho' there be many Hills and Risings in it. If Democritus put out his own eyes, must we therefore say all the World is blind?

(2). It is worth thinking on, whether they that have questioned the Immortality of the Soul, have not rather made it the matter of their option and desire, than of their Faith and Persuasion. We distinguish Atheists into three Classes, such as are so in Practice, in Desire, or in Judgment; but of the former sorts there may be found multitudes, to one that is so in his settled judgment. If you think it strange that any Man should wish his Soul to be mortal, Hierocles gives us the true reason of it. * A wicked Man (saith he) is afraid of his Judge, and therefore wishes his Soul and Body may perish together by Death, rather than it should come to Gods Tribunal.

* Ὁ κακὸς ἀθάνατον εἶναι πῶς ἂν αὐτῷ ψυχήν τε καὶ σῶμα μὴ ἐπιθυμήσειεν ἢ φθαρτὸν ἐκεῖ δικάσην. Hier.

Object. 2. Nor can the strength of the Argument be eluded by saying, all this may be but an universal Tradition, one Nation receiving it from another.

Sol. For as this is neither true in it self, nor possible to be made good, so if it were, it would not invalidate the Argument: for if it were not a Truth agreeable to the light of Nature, and so easily received by all Men upon the proposal of it, it were impossible that all Nations in the World should embrace it so readily, and hold it so tenaciously as they do.

Argument IV. The Immortality of the Soul may be evinced from the everlasting Habits which are subjected and inherent in it. If these Habits abide for ever, certainly so must the Souls in which they are planted.

The Souls of good Men are the good Ground, in which the Seed of Grace is sown by the Spirit, Matth. 13. 23. (i. e.) the Subjects in which gracious properties and affections do inhere and dwell, (which is the formal notion of a Substance) and these implanted Graces are everlasting things. So, John 4. 14. It shall be in him a Well of Water, springing up into everlasting Life, (i. e.) the Graces of the Spirit shall be in Believers permanent Habits, fixed Principles, which shall never decay. And therefore that Seed of Grace which is cast into their Souls at their Regeneration, is in 1 Pet. 1. 23. called incorruptible Seed, which liveth and abideth for ever: and it is incorruptible, not only considered abstractly, in its own simple nature, but concretely, as it is in the sanctified Soul, its subject: for it is said, 1 John 3. 9. The Seed of God remaineth in him. It abideth for ever in the Soul. If then these two thing be clear to us, viz.

1. That the Habits of Grace be everlasting;

2. That they are inseparable from sanctified Souls;

It must needs follow that the Soul, their Subject, is so too, an everlasting and immortal Soul. And how plainly do both these Propositions lie before us in the Scriptures? As for the immortal and interminable nature of saving Grace, it is plain to him that considers, not only what the fore-cited Scriptures speak about it, calling it incorruptible Seed, a Well of Water springing up into everlasting life; but add to these what is said of these divine Qualities, in 2 Pet. 1. 4. where they are called the Divine nature; and Ephes. 4. 18. The Life of God, noting the perpetuity of these Principles in Believers, as well as their resemblance of God in Holiness, who are endowed with them.

I know it is a great question among Divines, An gratia in renatis sit naturâ & essentiâ sua interminabilis? Whether these Principles of Grace in the Regenerate be everlasting and interminable in their own nature and essence? For my own part, I think that God only is naturally, essentially, and absolutely interminable and immortal. But these gracious Habits, planted by him in the Soul, are so by virtue of God's Appointment, Promise and Covenant. And sure it is that by reason hereof they are interminate, which is enough for my purpose if they be not essentially interminable. Tho' Grace be but a Creature, and therefore hath a posse morti, yet it is a Creature begotten by the Word and Spirit of God, which live and abide for ever, and a Creature within the Promise and Covenant of God by reason whereof it can never actually die.

And then as for the inseparableness of these Graces from the Souls in whom they are planted, how clear is this from John 2. 27. where sanctifying Grace is compared to an Unction, and this Unction is said to abide in them? And 1 John 3. 9. 'tis called the Seed of God, which remaineth in the Soul. All our natural and moral Excellencies and Endowments go away when we die; Job 4. 21. Doth not their Excellency that is in them go away? Men may outlive their acquired Gifts, but not their supernatural Graces. These stick by the Soul, as Ruth to Naomi, and where it goes they go too: so that when the Soul is dislodged by Death, all its graces ascend up with it into Glory; it carries away all its Faith, Love, Delight in God, all its comfortable experiences, and fruits of Communion with God, along with it to Heaven. For Death is so far from divesting the Soul of its Graces, that it perfects in a moment all that was defective in them; 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is perfect shall come, then that which is in part shall be done away, as the Twilight is done away when the Sun is up, and at its Zenith. So then, Grace never dieth, and this never-dying Grace is inseparable from its Subject; by which it is plain to him that considers, that as Graces, so Souls abide for ever.

Object. But this only proves the Immortality of regenerate Souls.

Sol. It doth so. But then consider, as there be gracious habits in the Regenerate that never die, so there are vicious habits in the Unregenerate, that can never be seperated from them in the World to come. Hence John 8. 21. they are said to die in their sins; and Job 20. 11. Their iniquities lie down with them in the dust; and Ezek. 24. 13. They shall never be purged. Remarkable is that place, Rev. 22. 11. Let him that is filthy, be filthy still. And if guilt sticks so fast, and sin be so deeply engraven in impenitent Souls, they also must remain for ever, to bear the Punishment of them.

Argument V. The Immortality of the Soul of Man may be evinced from the Dignity of Man above all other Creatures, (Angels only excepted) and his Dominion over them all.

In this the Scriptures are clear, that Man is the Master piece of all God's other Works; Psal. 8, 5. 6. For thou hast made him a little lower than the Angels, and hast crowned him with Glory and Honour. Thou hast made him to have Dominion over the Works of thy hand, thou hast put all things under his feet. Other Creatures were made for his service, and he is crown'd King over them all. One Man is of more worth than all the inferiour Creatures.

But wherein is his Dignity and Excellency above all other Creatures, if not in respect of the Capacity and Immortality of his Soul? Sure it can be found no where else; for as to the Body, many of the Creatures excel Man in the perfections of Sense, greatness of Strength, agility of Members, &c. Nos aper auditu præcellit, aranea tactu, vultur odoratu, linx visu, simia gustu: And for Beauty, Solomon in all his Glory was not arrayed like one of the Lillies of the field. The Beasts and Fowls enjoy more pleasure, and live divested of those cares and cumbers which perplex and wear out the Lives of Men. It cannot be in respect of bodily Perfections or Pleasures that Man excels other Creatures.

If you say, He excels them all in respect of that noble Endowment of Reason, which is peculiar to Man, and his singular Excellency above them all.

'Tis true, this is his glory: But if you deprive the reasonable Soul of Immortality, you despoil it of all, both of its glory and comfort, and put the reasonable into a worse condition than the unreasonable and brutish Creatures. For if the Soul may die with the Body, and Man perish as the Beast, happier is the life of the Beast, which is perplexed with no cares nor fears about futurities; our Reason serves to little other purpose but to be an Engine of Torture, a meer Rack to our Souls.

Certainly the Privilege of Man doth not consist in that, as abstracted from Immortality. But in this it properly consists, that he enjoys not only a reasonable, but also rejoiceth in an immortal Soul, which shall overlive the World, and subsist separate from the Body, and abide for ever, when all other Souls being but material Form, perish with that Matter on which they depend. This is the proper Dignity of Man above the Beast that perisheth; and to deprive him of Immortality, and leave him his Reason, is but to leave him a more miserable and wretched Creature than any that God hath put under his feet. For Man is a prospecting Creature, and raiseth up to himself vast hopes and fears from the World to come: by these he is restrained from the sensual Pleasures which other Creatures freely enjoy, and exercised with ten thousand Cares which they are unacquainted with; and to fail at last of all his hopes and expectations of Happiness in the World to come, is to fall many degrees lower than the lowest Creature shall fall; even so much lower as his expectations and hopes had lifted him higher.

Argument VI. The Souls of Men must be immortal, mortal, or else the desires of Immortality are planted in their Souls in vain.

That there are desires of Immortality found in the Hearts of all Men, is a Truth too evident to be denied or doubted. Man cannot bound and terminate his desires within the narrow limits of this World, and the time that measures it. Nothing that can be measured by time is commensurate to the desires of Man's Soul. No Motto better sutes it than this, Non est mortale quod opto; I seek for that which will not die, Rom. 2. v. 7. And his great relief against Death lies in this, Non omnis moriar; That he shall not totally perish. Yea, we find in all Men, even in those that seem to be most drowned and lost in the loves and delights of this present World, a natural desire to continue their Names and Memories to Posterity after Death. Hence it is said, Psal. 49. 11. Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names.

I beseech Men for God's sake, that if at any time there arise in them a desire, or a wish that others should speak well of them rather than evil after their death, then at that time they would seriously consider whether those motions are not from some Spirit, to continue a Spirit after it leaves its earthy Habitation, rather than from an earthly Spirit, a Vapour, which cannot act, or imagine, or desire, or fear things beyond its continuance. Hale de Anim p 73.

And hence is the desire of Children, which is, as one saith, nodosa Æternitas, a knotty Eternity; when our thread is spun out and cut off, their Thread is knit to it; and so we dream of a continued succession in our Name and Family.

Absalom had no Children to continue his memory; to supply which defect, he reared up a Pillar, 2 Sam. 18. 18. Now it cannot be imagined that God should plant the desire of Immortality in those Souls that are incapable of it; nor yet can we give a rational account how these apprehensions of Immortality should come into the Souls of Men, except they themselves be of an Immortal Nature. For, either these Notions and Apprehensions of Immortality are impress'd upon our Souls by God, or do naturally spring out of the Souls of Men: If God impress them, those impressions are made in vain, if there be no such thing as Immortality to be enjoyed; and if they spring and rise naturally out of our Souls, that is a sufficient evidence of their Immortality. For we can no more conceive and form to our selves Ideas and Notions of Immortality, if our Souls be mortal, than the Brutes, which are void of Reason, can form to themselves Notions and Conceptions of Rationality. So then the very Apprehensions and Desires that are found in Mens Hearts of Immortality, do plainly speak them to be of an Immortal Nature.

It forms conceptions of things spiritual and abstract from matter, and discerns Objects which have no dimensions, figure, colour, or affection of matter. Si conceptus de immortalitate fons sit ipsamet anima, est ipsa immortalis; quoniam quod momentaneum est, ideam naturæ perennis fabricare non potest, quemadmodum anima rationis expers, conceptum rationalitatis formare nequit. Cherne de morte, p. 198.

Argument VII. Moreover, the account given us in Scripture of the return of several Souls into their own Bodies again, after death, and real separation from them, shews us that the Soul subsists and lives in a separate state after death, and perisheth not by the stroke of death: for if it were annihilated or destroyed by death, the same Soul could never be restored again to the same Body. A dead Body may indeed be acted by an assisting Form, which may move and carry it from place to place: So the Devil hath acted the dead Bodies of many; but they cannot be said to live again by their own Souls, after a real separation by death, unless those Souls overlived the Bodies they forsook at death, and had their abode in another place and state. You have divers unquestionable Examples of the Souls return into the Body recorded in Scripture. As that of the Shunamite's Son, 2 King. 4. 18, 19, 20, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37. That of the Ruler's Daughter, Mat. 9, 18, 23, 24, 25. That of the Widow's Son, Luke 7. 12, 13, 14, 15. And that of Lazarus, John 11. 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45. These are no other * but the very same Souls, their own Souls, which returned into them again; which, as Chrysostom well observes, is a great proof of their Immortality, against them that think the Soul is annihilated after the death of the Body.

* Non aliam, sed ipsam priorem animam corpori mortuo restitutam esse, contra eos qui putaverunt & hodie putant animam post mortem corporis nihil esse.

'Tis true, the Scripture gives us no account of any sense or apprehension they retained after their re-union, of the place or state they were in during their separation. There seemed to be a perfect ἀμνησία, forgetfulness of all that they saw or felt in the state of separation. And indeed it was necessary it should be so, that our Faith might be built rather upon the sure Promises of God, than such Reports and Narratives of them that came to us from the dead, Luke 16. 31. And if we believe not the Word, neither would we believe if one came from the dead.

Argument VIII. Moreover, eighthly, The supposition of the Soul's perishing with the Body, is subversive of the Christian Religion in the principal Doctrines and Duties thereof: Take away the Immortality of the Soul, and all Religion falls to the ground. I will instance in,

1. The Doctrines } of Religion.
2. The Duties }

First, It overthrows the main Principles and Doctrines of Christian Religion, upon which both our Faith and Comfort is founded; and consequently, it undoes and ruins us, as to all solid hope and true joy. The Doctrines or Principles it overthrows, are, among many others, such as follow.

1. It nullifies and makes void the great design and end of God's eternal Election. The Scriptures tell us, That from all Eternity God hath chosen a certain number in Christ Jesus, to Eternal Life, and to the means by which they shall attain it, out of meer good Pleasure, and for the Praise of his Grace. This was (1). an eternal Act of God, Ephes. 1. 4. long before we had our Being, Rom. 9. 11. (2). This choice of God, or his purpose to save some, is immutable, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Jam. 1. 17. (3). This choice he made in Christ, Eph. 1. 4. Not that Christ is the cause of God's chusing us: for we were not elected because we were, but that we might be in Christ. Christ was ordain'd to be the Medium of the execution of this Decree. And all the Mercies which were purposed and ordained for us, were to be purchased by the Blood of Christ. He was not the Cause of the Decree, but the Purchaser of the Mercies decreed for us. (4). This choice was of a certain number of Persons, who are all known to God, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and all given to Christ in the Covenant of Redemption, John 17. 2, 6. So that no Elect person can be a Reprobate, no Reprobate an Elect person. (5). This number was chosen to Salvation, 1 Thes. 5. 9. No less did God design for them than glory and happiness, and that for ever. (6). The same persons that are appointed to Salvation as the End, are also appointed to Sanctification as the Way and Means by which they shall attain that End, 1 Pet. 1. 1, 2. 2 Thes. 2. 13, 14. (7). The impulsive cause of this choice was the meer good pleasure of his Will, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Rom. 9. 15. 16. Ephes. 1. 9. (8). The end of all this is, the praise of his glorious Grace, Eph. 1. 5, 6. to make a glorious Manifestation of the Riches of his Grace for ever. This is the account the Scripture gives us of God's eternal Choice.

But if our Souls be mortal, and perish with our Bodies, all this is a mistake, and we are imposed upon, and our Understandings abused by this Doctrine: For to what purpose are all these Decrees and Contrivances of God from everlasting, if our Souls perish with our Bodies? Certainly, if it be so, he loses all the Thoughts and Counsels of his Heart about us; and that Counsel of his Will, which is so much celebrated in the Scriptures, and admired by his People, comes to nought. For this is evident to every Man's consideration, That if the Soul (which is the Object about which all those Counsels and Thoughts of God were employed and laid out) fail in its Being, all those Thoughts and Counsels that have been employ'd about it, and spent on it, must necessarily fail, and come to nothing with it. The Thoughts of his Heart cannot stand fast, as it is said Psal. 33. 11. if the Soul slide, about which they are conversant. In that day the elect Soul perisheth, the eternal Consultations and Purposes of God's heart perish with it. Keckerman tells us, that * Albertus Magnus, with abundance of Art, and the study of thirty years, made a vocal Statue in the Form of a Man. It was a rare contrivance, and much admired; the cunning Artist had so fram'd it, that by Wheels and other Machines plac'd within it, it could pronounce words articulately. Aquinas being surprized to hear the Statue speak, was affrighted at it, and brake it all to pieces; upon which Albertus told him he had at one blow destroy'd the work of thirty years. Such a blow would the death of the Soul give to the Counsels and Thoughts, not of Man, but of God, not of thirty years, but from everlasting.

* Albertus Mag. statuam hominis construxit, quæ cum libramentis quibusdam, rotis, atq; aliis machinis intra latentibus peritissimè compositis, linguam quadam ratione & disciplina moventibus, articulata verba pronunciaret.

If the Souls of Men perish at death, either God never did appoint any Souls to Salvation, as the Scriptures testifie he did, 1 Thess. 5. 9. or else the foundation of God stands not sure, as his Word tells us it doth, 2 Tim. 2. 19. So then this supposition overturns the eternal Decrees and Counsels of God, which is the first thing.

2. It overthrows the Covenant of Redemption betwixt the Father and the Son, before this World was made. There was a federal Transaction betwixt the Father and the Son from eternity about our Salvation, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Zech. 6. 13. In that Covenant Christ engaged to redeem the Elect by his Blood; and the Father promised him a reward of those his sufferings, Isa. 53. 12. Accordingly he hath poured out his Soul to death for them, finished the work, Joh. 17. 4. and is now in Heaven, expecting the full reward and fruits of his sufferings, which consist not in his own personal Glory, which he there enjoys, but in the completeness and fulness of his Mystical Body, John 17. 24.

But certainly, if our Souls perish with our Bodies, Christ hath a very bad bargain of it: nor can that promise be ever made good to him; Isa. 53. 12. He shall see of the travel of his Soul, and be satisfied. He hath done his Work, but where is his Reward? See how this supposition strikes at the Justice of God, and wounds his faithfulness in his Covenant with his Son. He hath as much Comfort and Reward from the Travail of his Soul, as a Mother that is delivered after many sharp pangs of a Child that dies almost as soon as born.

3 It overthrows the Doctrines of Christ's Incarnation, Death, Resurrection, Ascension, and Intercession in Heaven for us. And these are the main Pillars both of our Faith and Comfort: Take away these, and take away our Lives too, for these are the springs of all Joy and Comfort to the People of God, Rom. 8. 34.

His Incarnation was necessary to capacitate him for his Mediatorial Work: it was not only a part of it, but such a part, without which he could discharge no other part of it. This was the wonder of Men and Angels, 1 Tim. 3. 16. A God incarnate is the World's wonder; No condescension like this, Philip. 2. 6, 7.

The Death of Christ hath the nature and respect of a Ransom, or equivalent Price laid down to the Justice of God for our Redemption, Mat. 20. 28. Acts 20. 28. It brought our Souls from under the Curse, and purchased for them everlasting Blessedness, Galat. 4. 4, 5.

The Resurrection of Christ from the dead hath the nature both of a Testimony of his finishing the Work of our Redemption, and the Father's full satisfaction therein, John 6. 10. and of a Principle of our Resurrection to eternal Life, 1 Cor. 15. 20.

The Ascension of Christ into Heaven was in the capacity and relation of a Fore runner, Heb. 6. 20. It was to prepare places for the Redeemed, who were to come after him to glory in their several generations, John 14. 2, 3.

The Intercession of Christ in Heaven is for the security of our purchased Inheritance to us, and to prevent any new breaches which might be made by our sins, whereby it might be forfeited, and we divested of it again, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2.

All these jointly make up the foundation of our Faith, and hope of Glory: But if our Souls perish, or be annihilated at death, our Faith, Hope, and Comforts, are all Delusions, vain Dreams, which do but amuse our fond Imaginations. For,

(1). It was not worth so great a stoop and abasement of the blessed God, as he submitted to in his Incarnation, when he appeared in flesh, yea, in the likeness of sinful flesh, Rom. 8. 3. and made himself of no reputation, Philip. 2. 7. An act that is, and ever will be admired by Men and Angels: I say, it was not worth so great a Miracle as this, to procure for us the vanishing comfort of a few years, and that short-liv'd comfort no other than a deluding Dream, or mocking Phantasm: for seeing it consists in hope and expectation from the World to come, as the Scriptures every where speak, 1 Thes. 5. 8. and 2 Cor. 3. 12.

3. 12. Rom. 5. 3, 4, 5. if there be no ſuch enjoyments for us there (as moſt certainly there are not, if our Souls periſh) it is but a vanity, a thing of nought, that was the errand upon which the Son of God came from the Father's Boſom, to procure for us.

(2). And for what, think you, was the Blood of God upon the Croſs? What was ſo vaſt and inconceivable a Treaſure expended to purchaſe? What! the flattering and vain hopes of a few years, of which we may ſay as it was ſaid of the Roman Conſulſhip, unius anni volaticum gaudium; the fugitive joy of a year: yea, not only ſhort-liv'd and vain hopes in themſelves, but ſuch for the ſake whereof we abridge our ſelves of the pleaſures and deſires of the fleſh, 1 John 3. 3. and ſubmit our ſelves to the greateſt ſufferings in the World, Rom. 8. 18. For the Hope of Iſrael am I bound with this Chain, &c. Acts 28. 20. Was this the Purchaſe of his Blood? Was this it for which he ſweat, and groan'd, and bled, and di'd? Was that precious Blood no more worth than ſuch a trifle as this?

(3). To what purpoſe did Chriſt riſe again from the dead? was it not to be the firſt-fruits of them that ſleep? Did he not riſe as the common Head of Believers, to give us aſſurance we ſhall not periſh and be utterly loſt in the grave? Col. 1. 18. But if our Souls periſh at death, there can be no Reſurrection; and if none, then Chriſt died and roſe in vain, we are yet in our ſins, and all thoſe abſurdities are unavoidable, with which the Apoſtle loads this ſuppoſition, 1 Cor. 15. 13. &c.

(4). And to as little purpoſe was his triumphant Aſcenſion into Heaven, if we can have no benefit by it. The profeſſed end of his Aſcenſion was to prepare a place for us, John 14. 2. But to what purpoſe are thoſe Manſions in the Heavens prepared, if the Inhabitants for whom they are prepared be utterly loſt? And why is he called the Fore-runner, if there be none to follow him? as ſurely they are not, if our Souls periſh with our Bodies. Thoſe heavenly Manſions, that City prepared by God, muſt ſtand void for ever if this be ſo.

(5). To conclude; In vain is the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven for us, if this be ſo. They that ſhall never come thither, have no buſineſs there to be tranſacted by their Advocate for them. So that the whole Doctrine of Redemption by Chriſt is utterly ſubverted by this one ſuppoſition.

4. As it ſubverts the Doctrine of Redemption by Chriſt, and all the Hopes and Comforts we build there, ſo it utterly deſtroys all the Works of the Spirit upon the hearts of Believers, and makes them vaniſh into nothing.

There are divers Acts and Offices of the Spirit of God about and upon our Souls, I will only ſingle out three, viz. his ſanctifying, ſealing, and comforting Work; all things of great weight with Believers.

(1). His ſanctifying Work, whereby he alters the frames and tempers of our Souls, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are paſſed away, all things are become new.

The declared and direct end of this Work of the Spirit upon our Souls, is to attemper and diſpoſe them for Heaven, Col. 1. 12. For ſeeing nothing that is unclean can enter into the holy place, Rev. 21. 27. and without Holineſs no man ſhall ſee the Lord, Heb. 12. 14. it is neceſſary that all thoſe that have this hope in them, ſhould expect to be partakers of their hopes in the way of Purification, 1 John 3. 3. And this is the ground upon which the People of God do mortifie their Luſts, and take ſo much pains with their own Hearts, Mat. 18. 8. counting it better (as their Lord tells them) to enter into Life halt or maimed, than having two eyes or hands to be caſt into Hell. But to what purpoſe is all this ſelf-denial, all theſe heart-ſearchings, heart-humblings, cries and tears upon the account of Sin, and for an Heart ſuited to the Will of God, if there be no ſuch Life to be enjoyed with God, after this Animal Life is finiſhed?

Object. If you ſay there is a preſent advantage reſulting to us in this World, from our abſtinence and ſelf-denial; we have the truer and longer enjoyment of our Comforts on Earth by it: Debauchery and Licentiouſneſs do not only flat the Appetite, and debaſe and alloy the Comforts of this World, but cut ſhort our Lives by the exorbitances and abuſes of them.

Sol. Tho' there be a Truth in this worth our noting, yet (1.) Morality could have done all this without Sanctification; there was no need for the pouring out of the Spirit, for ſo low an uſe and purpoſe as this. (2.) And therefore as the Wiſdom of God would be cenſured and impeached, in ſending his Spirit for an end which could as well be attained without it; ſo the Veracity of God muſt needs be affronted by it, who, as you heard before, hath declared our Salvation to be the end of our Sanctification.

(2). His Sealing, Witneſſing, and Aſſuring Work. We have a full account in the Scriptures, of theſe Offices and Works of the Spirit, and ſome ſpiritual ſenſe and feeling of them upon our own hearts, which are too good aſſurances that there are ſuch things as his bearing witneſs with our Spirit, Rom. 8. 16. his ſealing us to the day of Redemption, Eph. 4. 30. his earneſts given into our hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 22. All which Acts and Works of the Spirit have a direct and clear aſpect upon the Life to come, and the Happineſs of our Souls in the full enjoyment of God to Eternity; for it is to that Life we are now ſealed; and of the full ſum of that Glory, that theſe are the Pledges and Earneſts of. But if our Souls periſh by death, theſe Witneſſes of the Spirit are deluſions, and his Earneſts are given us but in jeſt.

(3). His Comforting Work is a ſweet fruit and effect ſenſibly felt and taſted by Believers in this World. He is from this Office ſtiled the Comforter, John 16. 7. ſignanter, & eminenter: He ſo comforts, as none other doth, or can. And what is the matter of his Comforts, but the Bleſſedneſs to come, the Joys of the coming World? John 16. 13. Eye hath not ſeen, &c.

Upon the account of theſe unſeen things, he enableth Believers to glory in Tribulations, Rom. 5. 4. to deſpiſe preſent things, whether the ſmiles or the frowns of the World, Heb. 11. 24. and v. 26. But if the Being of our Souls fail at death, theſe are but the fantaſtick Joys of Men in a Dream, and the experiences of all God's People are found but ſo many fond conceits, and groſs miſtakes.

5. This ſuppoſition overthrows the Doctrine of the Reſurrection, which is the Conſolation of Chriſtians. We believe according to the Scripture, that after Death hath divorced our Souls and Bodies for a time, they ſhall meet again, and be re-united, and that the Joy at their re-union will be to all that are in Chriſt, greater than the Sorrows they felt at parting. This ſeems not incredible to us, whatever natural improbabilities and carnal reasons may be against it, Acts 26. 8. and that because the Almighty power, which is able to subdue all things to himself, undertakes this task, Philip. 3. 21.

We believe this very same numerical Body shall rise again, Job. 21. 27. by the return of the same Soul into it, which now dwelleth in it; and that we shall be the same persons that now we are: the remunerative Justice of God requiring it to be so.

We believe the Souls of the righteous shall be much better accommodated, and have a more comfortable habitation in their Bodies than now they have, 1 Cor. 15. 42, 43. seeing they shall be made like unto Christ's glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. and that then we shall live after the manner of Angels, Luke 20. 36. without the necessities of this animal life. These are the things we look for according to promise; and this expectation is our great relief against (1.) the fears of death, 1 Cor. 15 55. (2.) Against the death of our Friends and Relations, 1 Thess. 4. 14. (3.) Against all the pressures and afflictions of this life, Job 19. 25. 26, 27.

But if the being of our Souls fail at death, all hopes and comforts from the Resurrection fail with it; for it is not imaginable that the Body should rise till it be revived, nor how it should be revived, but by the re-union of the Soul with it: and if it be not the same Soul that now inhabits it, we cannot be the same persons in the Resurrection we are now; and consequently, this supposition subverts not only the Doctrine of the Resurrection, but,

6. It overthrows also the faith of the Judgment to come. For if the Soul perish, the Body cannot rise; or if it rise by a new created Soul; the person raised is another, and not the same that lived and died in this World; and consequently, the rewards and punishments to be bestowed and awarded to all men in that day, cannot be just and equal: for we believe, according to the Scriptures, that,

(1) The Actions which men perform in this life, are not transient, but are filed to their account in the world to come; Gal. 6. 7. here we sow, and there we reap. Actions done in this World are two ways considerable, viz. Physically, or Morally; in the first consideration they are transient, in the last, permanent and everlasting. A Word is spoken, or an Act done, in a moment; but tho' it be past and gone, and perhaps by us quite forgotten, God registers it in his Book, in order to the day of account.

(2) We believe that God hath appointed a day in which all men shall appear before his Judgment-seat, to give an account of all they have done in the Body, whether it be good or evil, 2 Cor. 5. 10.

(3) And that in order hereunto, the very same persons shall be restored by the Resurrection and appear before God, the very same Bodies and Souls, which did good or evil in this World: Shall not the Judg of all the earth do right? Justice requires that the rewards and punishments be then distributed to the same persons that did good or evil in this World: which strongly infers the immortality of the Soul, and that it certainly overlives the Body, and must come back from the respective places of their abode, to be again united to them, in order to their great account.

By all which you see the clearest proof of the Soul's Immortality, and how the contrary supposition overthrows our Faith, Duties, and Comforts Yet notwithstanding all this, how apt are we to suspect this Doctrine, and remain still dissatisfied and doubting about it, when all is said? Which comes to pass partly from the subtlety of Satan, who knows he can never persuade men to live the life of Beasts, till he first persuade them to think they shall die as the Beasts do. (2.) and partly from the influence of Sense, and Reason upon us, whereby we do too much suffer our selves to be swayed, and imposed upon in matters of greatest moment in Religion. For these being proper Arbiters and Judges in other matters within their sphere, they are arrogant, and we easy enough to admit to them be Arbiters also in things that are quite above them. Hence come such plausible objections as these:

Obj. 1. The Soul seems to vanish and die, when it leaves the Body: for when it hath strugled as long as it can keep its possession in the Body, and at last is forced to depart, we can perceive nothing but a puff of breath, which immediately vanishes into air, and is lost.

Sol. We cannot perceive, therefore it is nothing but what we do and can perceive, viz. a puff of vanishing breath. By this argument the being of the Soul in the Body is as questionable, as after its departure out of the Body; for we cannot discern it by sight in the Body: yea, by this Argument we may as well deny the existence of God and Angels, as of Souls; for it is a spiritual and invisible Being as they are; our gross senses are incapable of discerning Spirits, which are immaterial and invisible substances.

Object. 2. But you allow the Soul to have a rise and beginning, it is not eternal à parte ante; and it is certain, whatever had a beginning must have an end.

Sol. Every thing which had a beginning may have an end, and what once was nothing, may by the power that created it, be reduced to nothing again. But tho' we allow it may be so, by the absolute power of God, we deny the consequence, that therefore it shall and must be so. Angels had a beginning, but shall never have an end. And indeed their Immortality, as well as ours, flows not so much from the nature of either, as from the will and pleasure of God who hath appointed them to be so. He can, but never will annihilate them.

Object. 3. But the Soul depends upon Matter in its operations, nothing is in the Understanding which was not first in the Senses; it useth the natural Spirits as its servants and tools in all its Operations, and therefore how can it either subsist or act in a state of Separation?

Sol. 1. The Hypothesis is not only uncertain, but certainly false. There are acts performed by the Soul, even whilst it is in the Body, wherein it makes no use at all of the Body. Such are the acts of Self-intuition, and Self-reflection: and what will you say of its acts in Raptures and Extasies, such as that of Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 2, and John, Rev. 21. 10. what use did their Souls make of the bodily Senses or natural Spirits then?

Sol. 2. And tho' in its ordinary actions in this Life it doth use the Body as its Tool or Instrument in working, doth it thence follow that it can neither subsist or act separate from them in the other World? Whilst a Man is on horse-back in his Journey, he useth the help and service of his Horse, and is moved according to the motion of his Horse; but doth it thence follow, he cannot stand nor walk alone when dismounted at his Journey's end? We know Angels both live and act, without the ministery of the Bodies, and our Souls are spiritual Substances as well as they.

Object. 4. But many Scriptures seem to favour the total cessation of the Soul's actions, if not of its Being also after Separation as that in 2 Sam. 14. 14. We must needs die, and are as Water spilt upon the ground which cannot be gathered up; and Psal. 88. 10, 11, 12. with Isaiah 38. 18, 19. The dead cannot praise thee.

Sol. Those words of the Woman of Tekoa are not to be understood absolutely, but respectively: and the meaning is, that the Soul is in the Body as some precious liquor in a brittle glass, which being broken by death, the Soul is irrecoverably gone, as the Water spilt on the ground, which by no humane power or art of Man can be recovered again. All the means in the World cannot fetch it back into the Body again. She speaks not of the Resurrection, or what shall be done in the World to come, by the Almighty power of God, but of what is impossible to be done in this World by all the skill and power of Man.

And for the expressions of Heman and Hezekiah, they only respect and relate to those services their Souls were now imployed about for the praise of God, which respect to the conversion or edification of others, as Psal. 30. 8, 9. or at most, to that mediate Service and Worship, which they give God, in and by their attendance upon his Ordinances in this World, and not of that immediate service and praise that is performed and given him in Heaven by the Spirits of just Men made perfect; such was the sweetness they had found in these Ordinances and Duties, that they express themselves as loth to leave them.

The same Answer solves also the Objections grounded upon other mistaken Scriptures, as that Psal. 78. 39. where Man is called a Wind, that passeth away, and cometh not again. It is only expressive of the frailty and vanity of the present animal Life we live in this World to which we shall return no more after death; it denies not Life to departed Souls, but the end of this animal Life at death: the Life we live in the other World, is of a different nature.

Inference I. Is the Soul immortal, Then 'tis impossible for Souls to find full rest and contentment in any enjoyments on this side Heaven. All temporary things are inadequate, and therefore unsatisfying to our Souls. What gives the Soul rest and satisfaction, must be as durable as the Soul is; for if we could possibly find in this World a condition and state of things most agreeable in all other respects to our desires and wishes, yet if the Soul be conscious to it self, that it shall and must overlive and leave them all behind it, it can never reach true contentment in the greatest affluence and confluence of them. Man being an immortal, is therefore a prospecting Creature, and can never be satisfied with this, that 'tis well with him at present, except he can be satisfied that it shall be for ever. The thoughts of leaving our delightful and pleasant enjoyments, imbitters them all to us whilst we have them. All outward things are in fluxu continuo, passing away as the Waters, 1 Cor. 7. 31. Riches are uncertain, 1 Tim. 6. 17. They fly away as an Eagle towards Heaven, and with Wings of their own making, Prov. 23. 5. (i. e.) As the Feathers that enable a Bird to fly from us, grow out of his own substance, so doth that vanity that carries away all earthly enjoyments. This alone will spoil all contentment.

Infer. II. Then see the ground and reason of Satan's envy and enmity against the Soul, and his restless designs and endeavours to destroy it. It grates that Spirit of Envy, to find himself, who is by nature immortal, sunk everlastingly and irrecoverably in Misery, and the Souls of Men appointed to fill up those vacant places in Heaven from which the Angels fell. No Creature but Man is envied by Satan, and the Soul of Man much more than his Body: 'Tis true, he afflicts the Bodies of Men when God permits him, but he ever aims at the Soul when he wounds the Body. Heb. 10. 37. This roaring Lion is continually going about, seeking whom he may devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8. 'Tis the precious Soul he hunts after; that's the Morsus Diaboli, the bit he gapes for, as the Wolf tears the Fleece to come at the Flesh. All the pleasure those miserable Creatures find, is the success of their Temptations upon the Souls of Men. 'Tis a kind of delight to them to plunge Souls into the same condemnation and misery with themselves. This is the trade they have been driving ever since their Fall. By destroying souls, he at once exercises his Revenge against God, and his Envy against Man, which is all the relief his miserable condition allows him.

Infer. III. Do the Souls of Men over-live their Bodies? Then 'tis the height of madness and spiritual Infatuation, to destroy the Soul for the Body's Sake; to cast away an immortal Soul for the gratification of perishing flesh; to ruin the precious Soul for ever, for the pleasures of Sin which are but for a moment: yet this is the madness of millions of Men. They will drown their own Souls in everlasting perdition, to procure unnecessary things for the Body, 1 Tim. 6. 9. They that will be rich, &c. Every cheat and circumvention in dealing, every lie, every act of oppression, is a wound given the immortal Soul for the procuring some accommodations to the Body.

O what Soul-undoing bargains do some make with the Devil! Some sell their Souls outright for the gratification of their Lusts, 1 King, 21. 20. Many pawn their Souls to Satan in a conditional bargain, so do all that venture upon Sin, upon a presumption of Pardon and Repentance. The Devil is a great trader for Souls, he hath all sorts of Commodities to suit all Mens humours that will deal with him. He hath Profits for the Covetous, Honours for the Ambitious, Pleasures for the Voluptuous: but a Soul is the price at which he sells them; only he will be content to sell at a day, and not require present pay: so that it be paid on a death-bed, in a dying hour, he is satisfied. But Oh! what an undoing bargain do Sinners make, to part with a Treasure for a Trifle! Mat. 16. 26. the precious Soul for ever, for the pleasures of sin, which are but for a season! Heb. 11. 25. We are charmed with the present pleasure and sweetness there is in Sin; but how bitter will the after-fruits thereof be! See the Texts in the Margin; you will say hereafter as Jonathan did, 1 Sam. 14. 31. I tasted but a little Honey, and I must die.

Prov. 20. 17. Prov. 23. 31, 32. Job. 20. 12, 13. Jam. 1. 15.

Infer. IV. Then the exposing of the Body to danger, yea, to certain destruction, for the preservation of the Soul, is the dictate of spiritual Wisdom, and that which every Chriſtian is bound to chuſe and practiſe, when both Intereſts come in full oppoſition, Heb. 11. 35. Dan. 3. 28. Rev. 12. 11. No promiſes of Preferment, no threats of Torments, have been able to prevail with the People of God to give the leaſt wound, or do the leaſt wrong to their own Souls. When Secundus was commanded to deliver his Bible, he anſwered, Chriſtianus ſum, non traditor; I am a Chriſtian, I will not deliver it: then they deſired him to deliver aliquam ecvolam, a Chip, a Straw, any thing that came to his hand, in lieu of it: he refuſed to redeem his Life by delivering the leaſt trifle on that account to ſave it.

That is a great word of our Lord's, Luke 9. 24. He that will ſave his Life, ſhall loſe it; and he that loſeth it for my ſake ſhall find it. Chriſtians, this is your Duty and Wiſdom, and muſt be your Reſolution and Practice in the day of Temptation, to yield your Bodies to preſerve your Souls, as we offer our Arm to defend the Head. Oh! better thy Body had never been given thee, than that it ſhould be a ſnare to thy Soul, and the inſtrument of caſting it away for ever. Oh! how dear are ſome perſons like to pay for their tenderneſs and indulgence to the fleſh, when the hour of Temptation ſhall come! Mortifie your irregular affections to the Body, and never hazard your precious immortal Souls for their ſakes. 'Tis the character of an Hypocrite to chuſe Sin rather than Affliction, Job 36. 21. But if ever thou haſt been in the deeps of ſpiritual troubles for ſin, if God have opened thine eyes to ſee the evil of ſin, the immenſe weight and value of thy Soul, and of Eternity, Thou wilt not count thy life dear to thee to finiſh thy courſe with joy, Acts 20. 24.

Infer. V. If the Soul be an immortal Being, that ſhall have no end, Then 'tis the great concern of all men to ſtrive to the utmoſt for the Salvations of their Souls, whatever become of all leſſer temporary Intereſts in this World, Luke 13. 24. There is a gate, (i. e.) an introductive means of Life and Salvation: this gate is ſtrait (i. e.) there are a world of difficulties to be encounter'd in the way of Salvation: but he that values and loves his never-dying Soul, muſt and will be diligent and conſtant in the uſe of all thoſe means that have a tendency to Salvation, be they never ſo difficult or unpleaſant to fleſh and blood. There be difficulties from within our ſelves, ſuch as Mortification, Self-denial, Contempt of the World, parting with all at the call of Chriſt: and difficulties from without, the Reproaches, Perſecutions, and Sufferings for Chriſt, which would not be ſo great as they are, were it not for our unmortified Luſts within; but be they what they will, we are bound to ſtrive through them all, for the Salvation of our precious and immortal Souls.

(1.) For 'tis the greateſt concernment of the Soul, yea, of our own Souls; we are bound to do much for the ſaving of another's Soul, 2 Tim. 2. 10. much more for our own; this is our darling, Pſal. 22. our only one.

(2.) Others have done and ſuffered much for the ſaving of their Souls; and are not ours, or ought they not to be, as dear to us, as the Souls of any others have been to them? Mat. 21. 32.

(3.) The utmoſt diligence is little enough to ſave them. Do all that you can do, and ſuffer all that you can ſuffer, and deny your ſelves as deeply as ever any did, yet you ſhall find all this little enough to ſecure them, 1 Pet. 4. 18. The Righteous themſelves are ſcarcely ſaved, 1 Cor. 9. 24.

(4.) The time to ſtrive for Salvation is very ſhort and uncertain, Luke 13. 25. Joh. 12. 35. 'Twill be to no purpoſe, when the ſeaſons and opportunities of Salvation are once over. There is no ſtriving in Hell, a death-pang of Deſpair hath ſeized them, hope is extinguiſhed, and endeavours fail.

(5.) Doth not Reaſon dictate and direct you to do now, whilſt you are in the way, as you will wiſh you had don, and repent with rage, and ſelf-indignation, becauſe you did it not, when you come to the end, and behold the final iſſues of things? Suppoſe but thy ſelf now either, (1.) upon a death-bed, launching into Eternity; (2.) or at the Bar of Chriſt; (3). or in view of Heaven; (4.) or in the ſight and hearing of the Damned: what think you? will you not then wiſh, Oh! that I had ſpent every moment in the World, that could poſſibly be redeemed from the pure neceſſities of Life, in Prayer, in hearing, in ſtriving for Salvation? From a proſpect of this it was, that one ſpent many hours daily on his knees to the macerating of his Body; and being admoniſhed of the danger of health, and adviſed to relax, he anſwered, I muſt die, I muſt die.

Object. 1. Do not ſay, you have many incumbrances, and other employments in the World: for (1.) One thing is neceſſary, Luke 10. 42. Thoſe are Conveniences, but this is of abſolute neceſſity. (2.) They will thrive the better for this, Mat. 6. 33. Seek this, and they ſhall be added. (3.) Do but redeem the time that can be redeemed to this purpoſe; let not ſo much precious time run waſte as daily doth.

Object. 2. Say not, no Man can ſave his Soul by his own ſtriving, and therefore 'tis to little purpoſe; for it is not of him that willeth, or of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth mercy, Rom. 9. 16.

True, this in it ſelf cannot ſave you; but what then? muſt we oppoſe thoſe things which God hath ſubordinated? Bring this home to your natural or civil actions, eating, drinking, ploughing or ſowing, and ſee how the conſequence will look.

Object. 3. Say not, 'tis a mercenary Doctrine, and diſparages free Grace; for are not all the Enjoyments and Comforts of this Life confeſſedly from free Grace, tho' God hath diſpenſed them to you in the way of your diligence and induſtry.

Object. 4. To conclude; Say not, the difficulties of Salvation are inſuperable; 'tis ſo hard to watch every motion of the heart, to deny every Luſt, to reſiſt a ſutable Temptation, to ſuffer the loſs of All for Chriſt, that there is no hope for overcoming them.

For (1.) God can and doth make difficult things eaſie to his People, who work in the ſtrength of Chriſt, Phil. 4. 13. (2.) Theſe ſame difficulties are before all others that are before you, yet it diſcourageth not them, Phil. 3. 11. Others ſtrive to the uttermoſt. There are extremes found in this matter: ſome work for Salvation, as an hireling for his Wages, ſo the Papiſts; theſe diſparage Grace, and cry up Works. Others cry down Obedience as legal, as the Antinomians, and cry up Grace to the diſparagement of Duties. Avoid both theſe, and ſee that you ſtrive: but (1.) think not Heaven to be the price of your ſtriving, Rom. 4. 3. (2.) Strive, but not for a ſpurt; let this care and diligence run throughout your lives; whilſt you are living, be you ſtill ſtriving: your Souls are worth worth it, and infinitely more than all this amounts to.

Infer. VI. Doth the Soul over-live the Body, and abide for ever? Then 'tis a great evil and folly to be excessively careful for the mortal Body, and negligent of the immortal Inhabitant. In a too much indulged Body, there ever dwells a too-much neglected Soul.

The Body is but a vile thing, Phil. 3. 21. the Soul more valuable than the whole World, Mat. 16. 26. To spend time, care, and pains for a vile Body, whilst little or no regard is had to the precious immortal Soul, is an unwarrantable folly and madness. To have a clear and washed Body, and a Soul all filth, (as one speaks) a Body neatly cloathed and dressed, with a Soul all naked and unready; a Body fed, and a Soul starved; a Body full of the Creature, and a Soul empty of Christ; these are poor Souls indeed. We smile at little Children, who in a kind of laborious idleness take a great deal of pains to make and trim their Babies, or build their little Houses of sticks and straws: And what are they but Children of a bigger size, that keep such ado about the Body, a House of Clay, a weak Pile, that must perish in a few days. 'Tis admirable, and very convictive of most Christians what we read in a Heathen. I confess (saith Seneca) there is a love to the Body implanted in us all; we have the tutelage and charge of it; we may be kind and indulgent to it, but must not serve it; but he that serves it, is a servant to many cares, fears, and passions. Let us have a diligent care of it, yet so as when Reason requires, when our Dignity or Faith requires it, we commit it to the fire.

Fateor insitam esse nobis corporis nostri charitatem. Fateor nos hujus gerere tutelam, nec nego indulgendum illi, serviendum nego. Multis enim serviet qui corpori servit, qui pro illo nimium timet, qui ad illud omnia refert; hujus nos nimius amor timoribus inquietat, solicitudinibus onerat, contumeliis objicit: honestum ei vile est cui corpus nimis charum est: agatur ejus diligentissimè cura: ita tamen, ut cum exiget ratio, cum dignitas, cum fides, mittendum in ignem sit. Senec. Ep 14. p. 545.

'Tis true, the Body is beloved of the Soul, and God requires, that it moderately care for the necessities and conveniences of it; but to be fond, indulgent, and constantly solicitous about it, is both the sin and snare of the Soul. One of the Fathers being invited to dine with a Lady, and waiting some hours till she was dress'd, and fit to come down; when he saw her, he fell a weeping; and being demanded why he wept, Oh! saith he, I am troubled that you should spend so many hours this morning in pinning and trimming your Body, when I have not spent half the time in praying, repenting, and caring for my own Soul. Two things a Master commits to his Servant's care, (saith one) the Child, and the Child's Cloaths: It will be but a poor excuse for the Servant to say, at his Master's return, Sir, here are all the Child's Cloaths neat and clean, but the Child is lost. Much so will be the account that many will give to God of their Souls and Bodies at the great day, Lord, here is my Body, I was very careful for it, I neglected nothing that belonged to its content and welfare: but for my Soul, that is lost and cast away for ever, I took little care or thought about it. 'Tis remarkable what the Apostle saith, Rom. 8. 12. We owe nothing to the flesh, we are not in its debt, we have given it all, more than all that belongs to it: but we owe many an hour, many a care, many a deep thought to our Souls, which we have defrauded of for the vile Body's sake. You have robb'd your Souls to pay your Flesh. This is madness.

Infer. VII. How great a Blessing is the Gospel, which brings Life and Immortality to light, the most desirable Mercies to immortal Souls! This is the great benefit we receive by it, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Christ hath abolished Death, and brought Life and Immortality to light by the Gospel. Life and Immortality by a ἐν διὰ δυοῖν, is put for immortal Life, the thing which all immortal Souls desire and long for. These desires are found in Souls that enjoy not the Gospel-light; for, as I said before, they naturally spring out of the very Nature of all immortal Souls: But how and where it is to be obtained, that is a secret for which we are entirely beholden to the Gospel-discovery. It lay hid in the Womb of God's purpose, till by the light of Gospel-Revelation it was made manifest. But now all men may see what are the gracious thoughts and purposes of God concerning Men, and what that is he hath designed for their Immortal Souls, even an Immortal Life; and this Life is to be obtained by Christ, than which no tidings can be more welcome, sweet or acceptable to us.

Oh therefore study the Gospel. This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent, John 17. 3. And see that you prize the Gospel above all earthly Treasures. 'Tis a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation. You have two inestimable benefits and blessings by it. (1.) It manifests and reveals eternal life to you, which you could never have come to the knowledge of any other way; those that are without it, are groping or feeling after God in the dark, Acts 17. 27. Poor Souls are conscious to themselves, that there is a just and terrible God, and that their sins offend and provoke him; but how to attone the offended Deity they know not, Micah 6. 6, 7. But the way of Reconciliation and Life is clearly discovered to us by the Gospel. (2). As it manifests and reveals Eternal Life to us, so it frames and moulds our hearts, as God's sanctifying Instrument for the enjoyment of it. 'Tis not only the Instrument of Revelation, but of Salvation, the Word of Life, as well as the Word of Light, Phil. 2. 16. It can open your Hearts as well as your Eyes, and is therefore to be entertained as that which is the first rank of Blessings, a peerless and inestimable Blessing.

Infer. VIII. If our Souls be Immortal, certainly our Enemies are not so formidable as we are apt by our sinful fears to represent them. They may, when God permits them, destroy your Bodies, they cannot touch or destroy your Souls, Mat. 10. 28. As to your Bodies, no Enemy can touch them till there be leave and permission given them by God, Job 1. 10. The Bodies of the Saints as well as their Souls, are within the line or hedge of Divine Providence: they are securely fenc'd, sometimes mediately by the Ministry of Angels, Psal. 34. 7. and sometimes immediately by his own Hand and Power, Zech. 2. 5. As to their Souls, whatever power Enemies may have upon them, (when Divine Permission opens a gap in the hedge of Providence for them) yet they cannot reach their Souls to hurt them, or destroy them, but by their own consent. They can destroy our perishing Flesh, it is obnoxious to their malice and rage; they cannot reach home to the Soul: no Sword can cut asunder the band of Union between them and Christ; they would be dreadful Enemies indeed if they could do so. Why then do we tremble and fear at this rate, as if Soul and Body were at their mercy, and in their power and hand? The Souls of those Martyrs were in safety under the Alter in Heaven, they were cloathed with white Robes, when their Bodies were given to be meat to the Fowls of Heaven, and Beasts of the Earth. The Devil drives but a poor trade by the Persecution of the Saints; he tears the Nest, but the Bird escapes; he cracks the Shell, but loseth the Kernel. Two things make a powerful defensative against our fears: (1). That all our Enemies are in the hand of Providence. (2). That all Providences are steered by that promise, Rom. 8. 28.

Infer. IX. If Souls be Immortal, then there must needs be a vast difference betwixt the aspects and influences of Death upon the Godly and Ungodly.

Oh! if Souls would but seriously consider what an alteration Death will make upon their condition, for evil or for good, how useful would such Meditations be to them! (1.) They may be disseized and turned out of these houses of Clay, and live in a state of separation from them: of this there is an inevitable necessity, Eccl. 8. 8. 'Tis vain to say, I am not ready; ready or unready, they must depart when their Lease is out. 'Tis as vain to say, I am not willing; for willing or unwilling, they must be gone; there's no hanging back, and begging, Lord, let death take another at this time, and spare me; for no man dies by a Proxy. (2). The time of our Souls departure is at hand, 2 Pet. 1. 13, 14. Job 16. 22. The most firm and well-built Body can stand but a few days, but our ruinous Tabernacles give our Souls warning that the day of their departure is at hand. The lamp of Life is almost burnt down, the glass of Time is almost run; yet a few, a very few days and nights more, and then time, nights and days shall be no more. (3.) When that most certain and near-approaching time is come, wonderful alterations will be made on the state of all Souls, godly and ungodly.

(1.) A marvellous alteration will then be made on the Souls of the godly. For (1.) No sooner is the dividing stroke given by Death, and the parting pull over, but they shall find themselves in the arms of Angels, mounting them through the upper Regions in a few moments, far above all the aspectable Heavens, Luke 16. 22. The airy Region is indeed the place where Devils inhabit, and have their haunts and walks; but Angels are the Saints Convoy thro' Satan's Territories from the arms of mourning Friends into the welcome arms of officious and benevolent Angels. (2.) From the sight and converses of Men to the sight of God, Christ, and the general assembly of blessed and sinless Spirits. The Soul takes its leave of all men at death, Isa. 38. 11. Farewel vain World, with all the mixed and imperfect comforts of it, and welcome the more sweet, suitable, and satisfying company of Father, Son, and Spirit, holy Angels, and perfected Saints, Heb. 12. 13. (3.) From the bondage of corruption to perfect liberty, and everlasting freedom; so much is implied, Heb. 12. 13. The Spirits of just men made perfect. (4.) From all fears, doubtings, and questionings of our conditions, and anxious debates of our title to Christ, to the cleerest, fullest, and most satisfying assurance: for what a Man sees, how can he doubt of it? (5.) From all burdens of affliction, inward and outward, under which we have groaned all our days, to everlasting rest and ease, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3. Oh what a blessed change to the Righteous must this be!

(2.) A marvelous change will also be then made upon the Souls of the ungodly, who shall then part from (1.) All their comforts and pleasant enjoyments in the World, for here they had their consolation, Luke 16. 25. here was all their Portion, Psal. 17. 14. and in a moment find themselves arrested and seized by Satan, as God's Gaoler, hurrying them away to the Prison of Hell, 1 Pet. 3. 19. there to be reserved to the judgment of the great day, Jude ver. 6. (2.) From under the means of Grace, Life, and Salvation, to a state perfectly void of all means, instruments, and opportunities of Salvation, John 9. 4. Eccles. 9. 10. never to hear the joyful sound of Preaching or Praying any more; never to hear the wooing Voice of the blessed Bridegroom, saying, Come unto me, Come unto me, any more. (3.) From all their vain, ungrounded, presumptuous Hopes of Heaven, into absolute and final Desperation of Mercy. The very sinews and nerves of hope are cut by death, Prov. 14. 32. The wicked is driven away in his wickedness, but the righteous hath hope in his death. These are the great and astonishing alterations that will be made upon our Souls, after they part with the Bodies which they now inhabit. Oh that we, who cannot but be conscious to our selves that we must over-live our Bodies, were more thoughtful of the condition they must enter into, after that separation which is at hand.

Infer. X. If our Souls be Immortal, then Death is neither to be feared by them in Heaven, nor hoped for by them in Hell. The Being of Souls never fails, whether they be in a state of Blessedness or of Misery. In glory they are ever with the Lord, 1 Thess. 4. 17. There shall be no death there, Rev. 21. 4. And in Hell, tho' they shall wish for death, yet death shall flee from them. Tho' there be no fears of annihilation in Heaven, yet there be many vain wishes for it in Hell, but to no purpose; there never will be an end put either to their being or to their torments. In this respect no other Creature is capable of the Misery that wicked Men are capable of: When they die, there is the end of all their Misery; but it is not so with men. Better therefore had it been for them, if God had created them in the basest and lowest order and rank of Creatures; a Dog, a Toad, a Worm is better than a Man in endless Misery, ever dying, and never dead. And so much of the Soul's Immortality.

Ephes. V. 29.

For no Man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, as the Lord the Church.

HAving given some account of the Nature and Immortality of the Soul, we next come to discourse its Love and Inclination to the Body with which it is united, from this Text. The scope of the Apostle is, to press Christians to the exact exact discharge of those relative Duties they owe to each other; particularly he here urgeth the mutual Duties of Husbands and Wives, ver. 22. Wives to an obedient Subjection; Husbands, to a tender Love of their Wives. This Exhortation he enforceth from the intimate Union, which by the Ordinance of God is betwixt them, they being now one Flesh. And this Union he illustrates by comparing it with,

1. The Mystical Union of Christ and the Church.
2. The Natural Union of the Soul and Body.

And from both these, as excellent Examples and Patterns, he with great strength of Argument urgeth the Duty of Love; ver. 28. So ought Men to love their Wives as their own Bodies; he that loveth his Wife, loveth himself. Self-love is naturally implanted in all Men, and it is the Rule by which we measure out and dispense our Love to others. —— Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self.

This Self-Love he opens in this place, by,

(1.) The Universality of it.

(2.) The Effects that evidence it.

(1.) The Universality of it, No Man ever yet hated his own Flesh. By Flesh, understand the Body, by an usual Metonymy of a part for the whole called Flesh. By hating it, understand a simple hatred, or hatred it self. 'Tis usual for Men to hate the deformities and diseases of their own Bodies, and upon that account to deal with the Members of their own Bodies as if they hated them; hence it is, they willingly stretch forth a gangren'd Leg or Arm to be cut off, for the preservation of the rest: but this is not simple hatred of a Man's self, but rather an Argument of the strength of the Soul's love to the Body, that it will be content to endure so much pain and anguish for its sake. And if the Soul be at any time weary of, and willing to part, not with a single Member only, but with the whole Body, and loaths its Union with it any longer, yet it hates and loaths it not simply in and for it self, but because it is so filled with Diseases all over, and loads the Soul daily with so much grief, that, how well soever the Soul loves it in it self, yet upon such sad terms and conditions it would not be tied to it. This was Job's case, Job 10. 1. My Soul is weary of my Life; yet not simply of his Life, but such a Life, in pain and trouble. Except it be in such respects and cases, No man, saith he, ever yet hated his own Flesh; i. e. no Man in his right mind, and in the exercise of his Reason and Sense; for we must except distracted and delirious Men, who know not what they do, as also Men under the terrors of Conscience, when God suffers it to rage in extremity, as Spira, and others, who would have been glad with their own hands to have cut the Thread that tied their miserable Souls to their Bodies, supposing that way, and by that change, to find some Relief. Either of these cases forces Men to act beside the stated Rule of Nature and Reason.

(2.) This Love of the Soul to the Body is further discovered by the Effects which evidence it, viz. its nourishing and cherishing the Body, ἐκτρέφει καὶ θάλπει. These two comprize the Necessaries for the Body, viz. Food and Rayment. The first signifies to nourish with proper food; the latter, to warm by cloathing, as the word θαλπῆν is render'd, Jam. 2. 16. to which the Hebrew word חם answers, Job 31. 20. The Care and Provision of these things for the Body evidences the Soul's Love to it.

Doct. That the Souls of Men are strongly inclined, and tenderly affected, towards the Bodies in which they now dwell.

The Soul's Love to the Body is so strong, natural, and inseparable, that it is made the Rule and Measure by which we dispense and proportion our Love to others, Mat. 19. 29. Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self. And the Apostle, Galat. 5. 14. tells us, That the whole Law, (i. e.) the second Table of the Law, is fulfilled, or summ'd up in this Precept, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self. The meaning is not, that all and every one who is our Neighbour must be equally near to us as our own Bodies; but it intends (1.) The sincerity of our Love to others, which must be without Dissimulation, for we dissemble not in Self-love. (2.) That we be as careful to avoid injuring others, as we would our selves, Matth. 7. 12. To do by others, or measure to them, as we would have done, or measured unto us: for which Rule, Severus the Heathen Emperour honoured Christ and Christianity, and caused it to be written in Capital Letters of Gold. (3.) That we take direction from this Principle of Self love, to measure out our Care, Love and Respects to others, according to the different degrees of nearness in which we stand to them. As, (1.) The Wife of our Bosom, to whom by this Rule, is due our first Care and Love, as in the Text. (2.) Our Children and Family, 1 Tim. 5. 8. (3.) To all in general, whether we have any Bond of natural Relation upon them or no; but especially those to whom we are spiritually related, as Gal. 6. 10. And indeed, as every Christian hath a right to our Love and Care, above other Men, so in some cases, we are to exceed this Rule of Self-love, by a transcendent act of Self-denial for them, 1 John 3. 16. And Paul went higher than that, in a glorious excess of Charity to the Community or Body, of God's People, preferring their Salvation not only to his own Body, but to his Soul also, Rom. 9. 3. But to these extraordinary Cases we are seldom called; and if we be, the Gospel furnisheth us with an higher Rule than Self-love, John 13. 34. But by this principle of Self-love in all ordinary Cases, we must proportion and dispense our Love to all others: by which you see what a deep rooted fixed Principle in Nature Self-love is, how universal and permanent alone this is, which else were not fit to be made the measure of our Love to all others.

Two things will deserve our Consideration in the Doctrinal part of this point.

First, Wherein the Soul evidenceth its love to the Body.

Secondly, What are the Grounds and fundamental Causes or Reasons of its love to it; and then apply it.

First, Wherein the Soul evidenceth its love to the Body, and that it doth in divers respects.

1. In its Cares for the things needful to the Body, as the Text speaks, in nourishing and cherishing it, (i. e.) taking care for Food and Rayment for it. This Care is universal, it's implanted in the most salvage and barbarous People; and is generally so excessive and exorbitant, that tho' it never needs a Spur, yet most times and with most Men it doth need a Curb; and therefore Christ in Matth. 6. 32. shews how those Cares torture and distract the Nations of the World, warms them against the like Excesses, and propounds a Rule to them for the allay and mitigation of them, v. 25, 26, 27. So doth the Apostle also, 1. Cor. 7. 29, 30, 31. To speak as the matter is, most Souls are over-heated with their Cares, and eager pursuit after the concerns of the Body. They pant after the Dust of the Earth. They pierce themselves through with many Sorrows, 1 Tim. 6. 10. They are cumbred like Martha with much Serving. 'Tis a perfect Drudg and Slave to the Body, bestowing all its time, strength and studies about the Body: for one Soul that puts the Question to it self, what shall I do to be saved? a thousand are to be found, that mind nothing more, but, What shall I eat, what shall I drink, and wherewith shall I and mine be cloathed? I do not say, that these are proofs of the Soul's regular Love to the Body; no, they differ from it, as a Fever from natural Heat. This is a doating Fondness upon the Body. He truly loves his Body, that moderately and ordinately cares for what is necessary for it, and can keep it under, 1 Cor. 9. 27. and deny its whining Appetite, when Indulgence is prejudicial to the Soul, or warms its Lusts. Believers themselves find it hard to keep the Golden Bridle of Moderation upon their Affections in this matter. 'Tis not every Man hath attained Agur's cool Temper, Prov. 30. 8. that can slack his pace, and drive moderately, where the Interests of the Body are concerned: the best Souls are too warm, the generality are in raging Heats, which distract their minds, as that word, Mat. 6. μὴ μεριμνᾶτε, signifies. If the Body were not exceeding dear to the Soul, it would never torture it self day and night with such anxious Cares about it.

2. The Soul discovers its esteem and value for the Body in all the Fears it hath about it. Did not the Soul love it exceedingly, it would never be affrighted for it, and on its account, so much and so often as it is. What a panick fear do the dangers of the Body cast the Soul into? Isa. 7. 2. When the Body is in danger, the Soul is in distraction, the Soul is in fears and tremblings about it: These Fears flow from the Soul's tender Love and Affection to the Body; if it did not love it so intensely, it would never afflict and torment it self at that rate it doth about it: Satan the professed Enemy of our Souls, being throughly acquainted with those Fears which flow from the Fountain of Love to the Body, politickly improves them in the way of temptation, to the utter ruin of some, and the great hazard of other Souls; he edges and sharpens his Temptations upon us this way; he puts our Bodies into danger, that he may thereby endanger our Souls; he reckons, if he can but draw the Body into danger, fear will quickly drive the Soul into Temptation: It is not so much from Satan's Malice or Hatred of our Bodies, that he stirs up Persecutions against us; but he knows the tie of Affection is so strong betwixt these friends, that Love will draw, and Fear will drive the Soul into many and great Hazards of its own Happiness, to free the Body out of those Dangers. Prov. 29. 25. The Fear of Man brings a Snare: and Heb. 11. 37. tortured and tempted.

Upon this ground also it is, that this Life becomes a Life of Temptation to all Men, and there is no freedom from that danger, till we be freed from the Body, and set at liberty by Death. Separated Souls are the only free Souls. They that carry no Flesh about them, need carry no Fears of Temptation within them. 'Tis the Body which catches the sparks of Temptation.

3. The Soul manifests its dear Love and Affection to the Body, by its Sympathy, and compassionate feeling of all its burdens: Whatever touches the Body by way of Injury, affects the Soul also by way of Sympathy. The Soul and Body are as strings of two Musical Instruments, set exactly at one height; if one be touched, the other trembles. They laugh and cry, are sick and well together. This is a wonderful Mystery, and a rare Secret (as a learned Man observes) how the Soul comes to sympathize with the Body, and to have not only a knowledge, but as it were a feeling of its Necessities and Infirmities; how this fleshly Lump comes to affect, and make its deep impressions upon a Creature of so different a nature from it, as the Soul or Spirit is. But that it doth so, tho' we know not how, is plain and sensible to any man. If any Member of the Body, tho' but the lowest and meanest be in pain and misery, the Soul is presently affected with it, and commands the Eyes to watch, yea to weep, the Hands to bind it up with all tenderness, and defend it from the least injurious touch; the Lips to complain of its misery, and beg pity and help from others for it. If the Body be in danger, how are the Faculties of the Soul, Understanding, Memory, Invention, &c. employ'd with utmost strength and concernment for its deliverance! This is a real and unexceptionable evidence of its dear and tender Love to the Body. As those that belong to one mystical Body shew their sincere Love this way, 1 Cor. 12. 25, 26. Ephes. 4. 19. so the Soul.

4. The Soul manifesteth its love to the Body by its fears of Death, and extreme aversation to a separation from it. On this account Death is called in Job 18. 14. the King of Terrors, or the black Prince, or the Prince of Clouds and Darkness, as some translate that place. We read it, the King of Terrors, meaning that the Terrors at Death are such Terrors as subdue and keep down all other Terrors under them, as a Prince doth his Subjects. Other Terrors compared with those that the Soul conceives and conflicts with at parting, are no more than a cut finger to the laying ones Head on the Block: Oh! the Soul and Body are strongly twisted and knit together in dear Bands of intimate Union and Affection, and these Bands cannot be broken without much struggling. Oh! 'tis a hard thing for the Soul to bid the Body farewel; 'tis a bitter parting, a doleful separation: Nothing is heard in that hour but the most deep and emphatical Groans; I say, emphatical Groans, the deep sense and meaning of which, the living are but little acquainted with: for no Man living hath yet felt the Sorrows of a parting pull; whatever other Sorrows he hath felt in the Body, yet they must be supposed to be far short of these.

The Sorrows of Death are in Scripture set forth unto us, by the bearing Throes of a travailing Woman, Acts 2. 24. ὠδῖνας θανάτου and what those mean, many can tell: The Soul is in labour, it will not let go its hold of the Body but by constraint; Death is a close Siege, and when the Soul is beaten out of its Body, it disputes the passage with Death, as Soldiers use to do an Enemy that enters by Storm, and fights and strives to the last. It's also compar'd to a Battle, or sharp sharp Fight, Eccles. 8. 8. that War. That War with an Emphasis. No Conflict so sharp, each labour to the utmost to drive the other from the ground they stand on, and win the Field. And tho' Grace much over-powers Nature in this matter, and reconciles it to Death, and makes it desire to be dissolved, yet Saints wholly put not off this Reluctation of Nature, 2 Cor. 5. 2. Not that we would be uncloathed; as it is with one willing to wade over a Brook to his Father's House, puts his Foot into the Water, and feels it cold, starts backward, and is loth to venture in; Not that we wou'd be uncloathed. And if it be so with sanctified Souls, how is it, think you, with others? Mark the Scripture Language, Job 27. 8. God taketh away their Souls, saith our Translation; but the Root is, נשל extrahere, and signifies to pull out by plain force and violence. A graceless Soul dieth not by consent, but force. Thus Adrian bewailed his departure, O Animula, vagula, blandula, heu quo vadis! Yea, tho' the Soul have never so long a time been in the Body, tho' it should live as long as the Antediluvian Fathers did for many hundred Years, yet still it would be loth to part; yea, tho' it endure abundance of Misery in the Body, and have little rest or Comfort, but time spent in Griefs and Fears, yet for all that 'tis loth to part with it. All this shews a strong Inclination and Affection to it.

5. Its desire of Re-union continuing still with it in its state of Separation, speaks its love to the Body. As the Soul parted with it in Grief and Sorrow, so it still retains even in Glory an Inclination to Re-union, and waits for a Day of Re-espousals: and to that Sense, some searching and judicious Men understand those words of Job, ch. 14. 14. If a Man die, shall he live again? viz. by a Resurrection: if so, then all the days of my appointed Separation, my Soul in Heaven shall wait till that Change come. And to the same sense is that cry of separated Souls, Rev. 6. 9, 10, 11. How long, O Lord how long? (i. e.) to the Consummation of all things, when Judgment shall be executed on them that killed our Bodies, and our Bodies so long absent, restored to us again? In that day of Resurrection, the Souls of the Saints come willingly from Heaven it self, to repossess their Bodies, and bring them to a Partnership with them in their Glory: for it is with the Soul in Heaven as it is with an Husband who is richly entertained, feasted, and lodged abroad, but his dear Wife is solitary and comfortless; it abates the completeness of his Joy. Therefore we say, The Saints Joy is not consummate till that Day.

There is an exercise for Faith, Hope, and Desires on this account in Heaven.

The Union of Soul and Body is natural, their Separation is not so: many benefits will redound to both by a Re-union, and the Resurrection of the Body is provided by God, as the grand relief against those prejudices and losses the Bodies of the Saints sustain by separation. I say not that the Propension or Inclination of the Soul to Re-union with its Body, is accompanied with any perturbation or Anxiety in its State of Separation; for it enjoys God, and in him a placid rest; and as the Body, so the Soul rests in hope; 'tis such a hope as disturbs not the rest of either: but when the time is come for the Soul to be Re-espoused, it is highly gratified by that second Marriage, glad it is to see its old dear Companion, as two Friends after a long Separation. And so much of the Evidence of the Soul's love to the Body.

Secondly, Next we are to enquire into the Grounds and Reasons of its Love and Inclination to the Body. And,

1. The fundamental Ground and Reason thereof will be found in their Natural Union with each other. There my Text lays it: No Man ever yet hated his [own] flesh. Mark, the Body is the Soul's own; they are strictly married and related to each other: the Soul hath a propriety in its Body, these two make up, or constitute one Person: True, they are not essentially one, they have far different Natures, but they are personally one; and tho' the Soul be what it was, after its separation, yet to make a Man the who he was, (i. e.) the same complete and perfect Person, they must be reunited. Hence springs its Love to the Body. Every Man loves his own, John 17. 19. All the World is in love with its own, and hence it cares to provide for its welfare, 1 Tim. 5. 8. If any Man provide not for his own, he is worse than an Infidel. For Nature teacheth all Men to do so. Why are Children dearer to Parents than to all others, but because they are their own? Job 19. 17. But our Wives, our Children, our Goods, are not so much our own as our Bodies are; this is the nearest of all Natural Unions.

And this is no more than necessary for the conversation of the species, else the Body would be neglected, exposed, and quickly perish, being had in no more regard than any other Body.

In this Propriety and Relation are involved the Reasons and Motives of our love to, and care over the Body, which is no more than what is necessary to their Preservation. For, were it not for this Propriety and Relation, no Man would be at any more cost or pains for his own Body, than for that of a Stranger. 'Tis Propriety which naturally draws Love, Care, and Tenderness along with it; and these are ordered by the Wisdom of Providence, for the conservation of the Body, which would quickly perish without it.

2. The Body is the Soul's ancient Acquaintance, and intimate Friend, with whom it hath assiduously and familiarly conversed from its beginning. They have been Partners in each others Comforts and Sorrows. They may say to each other, as Miconius did to his Collegue, with whom he had spent twenty Years in the Government of the Thuringian Church: Cucurrimus, certavimus, laboravimus, pugnavimus, vicimus, & viximus conjunctissime; We have run, laboured, fought, overcome, and lived most intimately and lovingly together. Consuetude and daily Conversation begets and conciliates Friendship and Love betwixt Creatures of contrary Natures: Let a Lamb be brought up with a Lion, and the Lion will express a Tenderness towards it, much more the Soul to its own Body.

3. The Body is the Soul's House and beloved Habitation, where it was born, and hath lived ever since it had a Being, and in which it hath enjoyed all its Comforts, natural and supernatural, which cannot but strengthen the Soul's Engagement to it. Upon this account the Apostle calls it the Soul's home, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Whilst we are at home in the Body. 'Tis true, this House is not so comfortable a Habitation, that it should be much desired by many Souls: we may say of many many gracious Souls, that they pay a dear Rent for the House they dwell in; or, as it was said of Galba, Anima Galbæ male habitat, their Souls are but ill accommodated; but yet it is their home, and therefore beloved by them.

4. The Body is the Soul's Instrument by which it doth its Work and Business in the World, both natural and religious, Rom. 6. 13. Through the bodily senses it takes in all the natural Comforts of this World, and by the bodily Members it performs all its Duties and Services. When these are broken and laid aside by Death, the Soul knows it can work no more in that way it now doth, John 9. 4. Eccles. 9. 10. Natural Men love their Bodies for the natural Pleasures they are instrumental to convey to their Souls; and spiritual Men, for the use and service they are of to their own and others Souls, Phil. 1. 23.

5. The Body is the Soul's Partner in the benefit of Christ's Purchases. It was bought with the same Price, 1 Cor. 6. 20. sanctified by the same Spirit, 1 Thess. 5. 23. interested in the same Promises, Matt. 22. 32. and designed for the same Glory, 1 Thess. 4. 16, 17. So that we may say of it as it was said of Augustine and his Friend Alippius, they are sanguine Christi conglutinati, glewed together by the Blood of Christ. And thus of the grounds and reasons of its Love.

Infer. 1. Is it so? Learn hence the mighty strength and prevalence of Divine Love, which over-powering all natural Affections, doth not only enable the Souls of Men to take their separation from the Body patiently, but to long for it ardently, Phil. 1. 23. While some need patience to die, others need it as much to live, 2 Thess. 3. 5. 'Tis said, Rev. 12. 11. They loved not their lives. And indeed on these terms they first closed with Christ, Luke 12. 26. to hate their lives for his sake, (i. e.) to love them in so remiss a Degree, that whenever they shall come in competition with Christ, to regard them no more than the things we hate.

The love of Christ is to be the supreme love, and all others to be subordinate to it, or quenched by it. 'Tis not its own comfort in the Body it principally and ultimately designs and aims at, but Christ's Glory; and so this may be furthered by the death of the Body, its death thereupon becomes as eligible to the Soul as its Life, Phil. 1. 20. Oh! this is a high pitch of Grace, a great attainment, to say as one did, Vivere renuo, ut Christo vivam; I refuse life, to be with Christ: Or another, when he was asked whether he was willing to die? answered, Illius est nolle mori, qui nolit ire ad Christum; Let him be loth to die, that is loth to go to Christ. So, 2 Cor. 5. We are willing rather to be absent from the Body, and present with the Lord.

'Tis not every Christian that can arrive to this degree of Love; tho' they love Christ sincerely, yet they shrink from Death cowardly, and are loth to be gone. There are two sorts of Grounds upon which Christians may be loth to be unbodied; 1. Sinful. 2. Allowable.

1. The sinful and unjustifiable grounds are such as these, viz. (1) Guilt upon the Conscience, which will damp and discourage the Soul, and make it loth to die. It arms Death with terror, the sting of Death is sin. (2.) Unmortified Affections to the World, I mean in such a degree as is necessary to sweeten Death, and make a Man a Voluntier in that sharp Engagement with that last and dreadful Enemy. It is with our Hearts as with Fuel; if green, and full of sap, it will not burn; but if that be dried up, it catches presently. Mortification is the drying up of carnal Affections to the Creature, which is that that resists Death, as green Wood doth the fire. (3.) The weakness and cloudiness of Faith. You need Faith to die by, as well as to live by, Heb. 11. 13. All these died by Faith. The less strength there is in Faith, the more in Death. A strong Believer welcomes the Messengers of Death, when a weak one, unless extraordinarily assisted, trembles at them.

2. There are grounds on which we may desire a longer continuance in the Body, warrantably and allowably: As (1.) to do him yet more service in our Bodies, before we lay them down. This the Saints have pleaded for longer Life, Psal. 30. 9. Psal. 88. 11, 12, 13. and Isa. 38. 18, 19. (2.) To see the Clouds of God's anger dispelled, whether publick or personal, and a clear Light break out e'er we die; Psal. 27. 13. (3.) They may desire with submission to outlive the days of Persecution, and not to be delivered into the hands of cruel Men, but come to their Graves in peace, Psal. 31. 15. and 2 Thess. 3. 2. that they may be delivered from absurd Men.

3. But tho' some Christians shun Death upon a sinful account, and others upon a justifiable one; yet others there are, who seeing their Title clear, their Work done, and relishing the Joys of Heaven in the prelibations of Faith, are willing to be unclothed, and to be with Christ. Their love to Christ hath extinguished in them the love of Life; and they can say with Paul, Acts 21. 13. I am ready. Ignatius longed to come to those Beasts that were to devour him; and to many of the Primitive Christians Christ was so dear, that their Lives were cheap, and low priz'd things for his Enjoyment. And here indeed is the glory and triumph of a Christian's Faith and Love to Christ: For (1.) it enables him to part chearfully with what he sees and feels, for what his Eyes yet never saw, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not seen, ye love. (2.) To part with what is dearest on Earth, and lies nearest the Heart of all he enjoys, for Christ's sake. (3.) To reconcile his Heart to what is most abhorrent and formidable to Nature. (4.) To endure the greatest of pains and torments to be with him. (5.) To cast himself into the vast Ocean of Eternity, the most amazing change, to be with Christ. Oh the glorious Conquests of Love!

Infer. 2. Then the Apostacy of unregenerate Professors in times of imminent Danger is not to be wondred at. They will and must warp from Christ, when their Lives are in hazard for him. The love of the Body will certainly prevail over their love to Christ and Religion. Amor meus pondus meum. Self-love will now draw. Love is the weight of the Soul, which inclines and determines it, in the competition of Interests, and the predominant Interest always carries it. Every unregenerate Professor loves his own Life more than Christ, prefers his Body before his Soul; such a one may upon divers accounts, as Education, Example, slight Convictions of Conscience, or ostentation of Gifts, fall into a Profession of Religion, and continue a long time in that Profession, before he visibly recede from Christ. Hope of the Resurrection of the Interest of Religion in the World; Shame of retracting his Profession; Applause of his Zeal and Constancy in higher Trials; the Peace of his own Conscience, and many such Motives, may prevail with a carnal Professor to endure a while; but when dangers of Life come to an height, they are gone, Matth. 24. 8, 9, 10. And therefore our Lord tells us, That they who hate not their Lives, cannot be his Disciples, Luke 12. 26. Now will they lose their Lives by saving them, Mat. 16. 25. And the Reasons are plain and forcible. For,

1. Now is the proper season for the predominant Love to be discovered, it can be hid no longer: And the love of Life is the predominant Love in all such persons; for do but compare it with their love to Christ, and it will easily be found so. They love their Lives truly and really, they love Christ but feignedly and pretendedly; and the real will and must prevail over the feigned Love. They love their Lives fervently and intensely, they love Christ but coldly and remisly: And the fervent Love will prevail over the remiss Love. Their love to their Bodies hath a root in themselves, their Love to Christ hath no root in themselves, Mat. 13.21. And that which hath a root mustneeds outlast and outlive thatwhich hathnone.

2. Because when Life is in hazard, Conscience will work in them by way of discouragement; 'twill hint the danger of their eternal state to them, and tell them they may cast away their Souls for ever in a Bravado; for tho' the Cause they are called to suffer for be good, yet their Condition is bad; and if the Condition be not good as well as the Cause, a Man is lost for ever, tho' he suffer for it, 1 Cor. 13. 3. Conscience, which encourages and supports the Upright, will daunt and appal the Hypocrite, and tell him, he is not on the same terms in Sufferings that other Men are.

3. Because then all the Springs by which their Profession was fed and maintained, fail and dry up. Now the Wind that was in their backs is come about, and blows a storm in their faces; no Preferments nor Honours are now to be had from Religion. These mens Sufferings are a perfect surprize to them, for they never counted the Cost, Luke 14. 28. Now they must stand alone, and resist unto Blood, and sacrifice all Visibles for Invisibles; and this they can never do.

Oh therefore Professors look to your Hearts, try their predominant Love; compare your love to Christ with that to your Lives. Now the like question will be put to you that once was put to Peter, John 21. 15. Lovest thou me more than these? What say you to this? You think now, you do, but alas, your love is not yet brought to the fire to be tried: You think you hate sin, but will you be able to strive unto blood against sin? Heb. 12. 4. Will you chuse suffering rather than sin? Job 36. 21. O try your love to Christ before God bring it to the trial. Sure I am, the love of Life will make you warp in the hour of temptation; except,

1. You sat down and counted the Cost of Religion before-hand: If you set out in Procession only for a Walk, not for a Journey; if you go to Sea for Recreation, not for a Voyage; if you be mounted among other Processors only to take the Air, and not to engage an Enemy in sharp and bloody Encounters, you are gone.

2. Except you live by Faith, and not by Sense, Cor. 4. 18. Whilst we look not at the things that are seen. You must ballance present Sufferings with future Glory. You must go by that account and reckoning, Rom. 8. 18. or you are gone. Now the Just shall live by Faith; and if Faith don't support, your fears will certainly sink you.

3. Except you be sincere and plain-hearted in Religion, driving no design in it but to save your Souls; else see your lot in that Example, 2 Tim. 4. 10. Demas hath forsaken me. O take heed of a cunning, subdolous, double heart in Religion; be plain, be open, care not if your Ends lie open to the eyes of all the World.

4. Except you experience the power of Religion in your own Souls, as well as wear the name of it. O my Brethren, 'tis not a name to live that will do you service now. Many Ships are gone down to the bottom, for all the brave names of the Success, the Prosperous, the Happy Return, and so will you. There is a knowing in our selves by taste and real experience, Heb. 10. 34. which doth a Soul more service in a suffering hour, than all the splendid Names and Titles in the World.

5. Except you make it your daily work to crucify the Flesh, deny self for Christ, in all the Forms and Interests of it. He that can't deny himself, will deny Jesus Christ, Mat. 16. 24. let him deny himself, take up his Cross, and follow me, else he can't be my Disciple. Ponder these things in your Hearts, whilst yet God delays the Trial.

Infer. III. If the Souls of Men be naturally so strongly inclin'd and affected towards the Body; then hence you may plainly see the Wisdom of God in all the Afflictions and Burdens he lays upon his People in this World, and find that all is but enough to wean off their Souls from their Bodies, and make them willing to part with them.

The Life of the Saints in this World, is generally a burdened and a groaning Life; 2 Cor. 5. 2. In this Tabernacle we groan, being burdened. Here the Saints feel, (1) A burden of Sin. Rom. 7. 24. this is a dead and a sinking weight. (2.) A burden of Affliction; of this all are partakers, Heb. 12. tho' not all in an equal degree, or in the same kind, yet all have their burdens equal to, and even beyond their own strength to support it; 2 Cor. 1. 8. pressed above measure. (3.) A burden of inward troubles for Sin, and outward troubles in the Flesh both together, so had Job, Heman, David, &c.

Certainly this befals them not, (1.) Casually, Job 5. 6. It rises not out of the Dust: (2) Nor because God loves and regards them not, for they are fruits of his love; Heb. 12. 6. whom he loveth he correcteth: (3.) Nor because he takes pleasure in our Groans; Lament. 3. To tread under his feet the Prisoners of the Earth the Lord hath no pleasure: 'Tis not for his own pleasure, but his Childrens profit, Heb. 12. 10. And among the profits that result from these burdens, this is not the least, to make you less fond of the Body than you would else be, and more willing to be gone to your everlasting Rest. And certainly all the diseases and pains we endure in the Body, whether they be upon inward or outward accounts, by Passion or Compassion from God or Men, will be found but enough to wean us, and loose off our Hearts from the fond love of Life. Afflictions are bitter things to our taste, Ruth 1. 20. so bitter, that Naomi thought a name of a contrary signification fitter for her afflicted Condition; call me Marah (i.e.) bitter, not Naomi, pleasant, beautiful. And the Church, Lam. 3. 19. calls them Wormwood and Gall.

The

The great design of God in afflicting them, is the same that a tender Mother projects in putting Wormwood to her Breast when she would wean the Child.

It hath been observed by some discreet and grave Ministers, that before their remove from one place to another, God hath permitted and ordered some weaning Providence to befal them; either denying wonted success to their labour, or alienating and cooling the affections of their People towards them, which not only makes the manner of their departure more easy, but the grounds of it more clear. Much so it falls out in our natural Death, the comfort of the World is imbittered to us before we leave it; the longer we live in it, the less we shall like it. We overlive most of our Comforts which engaged our Hearts to it, that we may more freely take our leave of it. It were good for Christians to observe the voice of such Providences as these, and answer the Designs of them in a greater willingness to die.

1. Is thy Body which was once hale and vigorous, now become a crazy, sickly, pained Body to thee, neither useful to God, nor comfortable to thee? a Tabernacle to groan and sigh in? And little hopes it will be recovered to a better temper; God hath ordained this to make thee willing to be divorced from it: the less desirable Life is, the less formidable Death will be.

2. Is thy Estate decayed and blasted by Providence, so that thy life which was once full of Creature-comforts, is now fill'd with Cares and Anxieties; O 'tis a weaning Providence to thee, and bespeaks thee the more chearfully to bid the World farewel. The less comfort it gives you, the less it should entangle and engage you. We little know with what aking Hearts, and pensive Breasts, many of God's People walk up and down, tho' for Religion, or Reputation sake they put a good face upon it; but by these things, God is bespeaking and preparing them for a better State.

3. Is an Husband, a Wife, or dear Children dead, and with them the comfort of Life laid in the Dust? why this the Lord sees necessary to do to persuade you to come after willingly? 'Tis the cutting a sunder the roots in the Earth, that thou mayst fall the more easily. O how many stroaks must God give at our Names, Estates, Relations, and Health, before we will give way to the last stroak of Death that fells us to the ground?

4. Do the times frown upon Religion? Do all things seem to threaten stormy times at hand? Are desirable Assemblies scattered? Nothing but sorrows and sufferings to be expected in this World? By these things God will imbitter the Earth, and sweeten Heaven to his People.

5. Is the beauty and sweetness of Christian Society defaced and decayed? Does that Communion which was wont to be pithy, substantial, spiritual, and edifying, become either frothy or contentious; so that thy Soul has no pleasure in it; This also is a weaning Providence to our Souls; Strigelius desired to die that he might be freed ab implacabilibus Theologorum odiis, from the Wranglings and Contentions that were in his time. Our fond affection to the Body requires all this, and much more to wean and mortify them.

Infer. IV. How comfortable is the Doctrine of the Resurrection to Believers, which assures them of receiving their Bodies again, tho' they part with them for a time!

Believers must die as well as others; their Union with Christ privileges them not from a Separation from their Bodies, Rom. 8. 10. Heb. 9. 27. But yet they have special grounds of Consolation against this doleful separation above all others. For,

1. Tho' they part with them, yet they part in hopes of receiving them again, 1 Thess. 4. 13, 14. They take not a final leave of them when they die. Husbandmen cast their Seed corn into the Earth chearfully and willingly, because they part with it in hope; so should we when we commit our Bodies to the Earth at Death.

2. Tho' Death separate these dear Friends from each other, yet it cannot separate either the one or other from Christ, Luke 20. 37, 38. I am the God of Abraham, &c. Your very Dust is God's, and the Grave rots not the bond of the Covenant.

3. The very same Body we lay down at Death, we shall assume again at the Resurrection; not only the same specifical, but the same numerical Body; Job 19. 25, 26. With these Eyes shall I see God.

4. The unbodied Soul shall not find the want of its Body so as to afflict or disquiet it; nor the Body the want of its Soul; but the one shall be at rest in Heaven, and the other sweet asleep in the Grave; and all that long interval shall slide away without any afflicting sense of each other's absence. The time will be long, Job 14. 12. but if it were longer, it cannot be afflicting, considering how the Soul is clothed immediately, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2. and how the Body sleeps sweetly in Jesus, 1 Thess. 4. 14.

5. When the day of their re-espousals is come, the Soul will find the Body so transformed and improved, that it shall never receive prejudice from it any more, but a singular addition to its Happiness and Glory. Now it clogs us: Mat. 26. 41. The Spirit indeed is willing, but the Flesh is weak. It incumbers us with cares to provide for it, and eats up time and thoughts; but then it will be a spiritual Body, 1 Cor. 15. 43. like to the Angels for manner of subsistence, Luke 20. 35, 36. 1 Cor. 6. 13. and, which is the highest step of Glory, like unto Christ's glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. Well therefore might the Father say, Resurrectio mortuorum est Consolatio Christianorum; The Resurrection of the Dead is the Consolation of Christians.

Use II. Of Reproof. In the next place let me press you to regulate your love to your Bodies, by the rules of Religion and right Reason: I must press you to love them, tho' Nature it self teacheth you so to do; but I press you to love them as Christians, as Men that understand the right use and improvement of their Bodies. There are two sorts of errors in our love to the Body, one in Defect, the other in Excess; both come fitly here to be censured and healed.

First, Some offend in the defect of love to their own Bodies, who use them as if they had no love for them, whose Souls act as if they were enemies to their own Bodies: They do not formally and directly hate them, but consequentially and eventually they may be said to hate them, and that

(1.) By defiling them with filthy Lusts; so the Apostle speaks, 1 Cor. 6. 18. Every sin that Ma

Man doth, is without the Body, but he that committeth Adultery sinneth against his own Body: in other sins 'tis the Instrument, but here 'tis both Instrument and Object; not only God, but your own Bodies are abused, and wronged by it. The Body may be considered two ways, either. 1, As our Vessel; or
2. As the Spirit's Temple.

1. As our Vessel or Instrument for natural and spiritual uses and services: and on that account we should not injure or defile it, 1 Thess. 4. 4, 5. but possess it in Sanctification and Honour. The lusts of Uncleanness, Gluttony, and Drunkenness quench the vigour, blast the beauty, and destroy the health and honour of the Body; and so render it both naturally and morally unfit for the service and use of the Soul.

2. And the injury is yet greater, if we consider it as the Spirit's Temple. On this ground the Apostle strongly convinceth, and dissuadeth Christians from these abuses of the Body, 1 Cor. 6. 15, 16. He argues from the Dignity God will put upon our Bodies by the Resurrection, ver. 13, 14. They are to be transformed, and made like unto Christ's glorious Body; and from the Honour he has already put upon the Bodies of the Saints in their union with Christ, ver. 15, 16. They, as well the Soul, are ingrafted into him, and joined with him; they are his Temples, to be dedicated, hallowed, and consecrated to his service. O let them not be made a sink for lusts, or meer strainers for meat and drink.

(2.) By macerating them with covetous lusts, denying them their due comforts and refreshments, and unmercifully burdening them with labours and sorrows about things that perish. (1) Some deny their Bodies due comforts and refreshments, which the natural and positive Laws of God both allow and command. Their Souls are cruel Step-mothers to their Bodies, and keep them too short; not out of a prudent and Christian design to starve their lusts, but to advance their estates. Of this evil Solomon speaks, Eccles. 6. 22. There is an evil which I have seen under the Sun, and it is common among men; A man to whom God hath given Riches, Wealth and Honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his Soul of all that he desireth; yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it. This is vanity, and it is an evil disease. Tenacity is a disease of the Soul, like that of a Dyscracy in the stomach, which so indispoſeth it that it cannot receive with any appetite or delight the best refreshments at a plentiful Table. (2) And others there are that wrong and abuse their own Bodies by laying unreasonable and unmerciful loads upon them, especially loads of grief and sorrow, wasting and weakning them beyond all rules of Reason or Religion. If a friend or relation die, they have less mercy on their own Bodies, than a conscientious Man hath on the Horse he rides. Cares and sorrows are as deadly to the Body as a Sword, 1 Tim. 6. 10. Intense and immoderate Griefs about worldly losses and crosses have slain their ten thousands: and which is strange, the Soul seems to take a certain kind of Pleasure in loading and tormenting the Body. There is a real truth in that strange Expression of Seneca, Sorrow it self hath a certain kind of pleasure attending it.

Inest quiddam dulce tristitiæ. Senec. Ep. 99.

The Souls of some Mourners do willingly excite and provoke their own Griefs, when they begin to abate, which is like the whetting of the Knife that grows dull, to make it cut the deeper into the Body. Thus, as Seneca observes, some Parents that have lost their beloved Children, willingly call to mind their pleasant Sayings, and pretty Actions, to find a kind of pleasure in a fresh shower of Tears for them; when, poor hearts! sorrow hath so broken them already, that they need Consolations under their present Sorrows, rather than irritations of new ones. And the Soul's unmercifulness to the Body, is in such Cases farther discovered by its obstinate refusal of all that is comforting and relieving. So it is said of Rachel, Jerem. 31. 15. Rachel weeping for her children, would not be comforted, because they were not. So the Israelites harkned not unto Moses, because of the anguish of Spirit, and the cruel Bondage, Exod. 6. 9. Thus we studiously rake together, and exasperate whatsoever is piercing, wounding, and overwhelming; and shut our Ears to all that is relieving and supporting, which is cruelty to our own Bodies, and that which hath so far broken the health and strength of some Bodies, that they are never like to be useful instruments to the Soul any more in this World; such deep and desperate Wounds have their own Souls given them by immoderate Grief, as will never be perfectly healed but by the Resurrection. Of those wounds the body may say, as it is Zech. 13. 6. These are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house (or by the hand) of my friend; thus my own Soul hath dealt cruelly and unmercifully with me.

Cum occurrant sermones eorum jucundi, conversatio hilaris, officiosa pietas; tunc oculi velut in gaudio relaxantur. Id. ibid.

Secondly, Others offend in the Excess and extravagancy of their love to the Body, and these are a hundred to one in number with those that sin in defect of love. My friends, upon a due search it will be found, that the love of our Souls generally degenerates into fondness and folly: There is but little well tempered and ordinate love found among Men. We make fondlings, yea, we make Idols of our own Bodies; we rob God, yea our own Souls, to give to the Body. It is not a natural and kindly heat of love, but a meer feverish heat which preys upon the very Spirits of Religion, which is found with many of us. This feverish distemper may be discovered by the beating of our pulse in 3 or 4 particulars.

(1.) This appears by our sinful indulgence to our whining appetites. We give the flesh whatsoever it craves, and can deny it nothing it desires; pampering the Body, to the great injury and hazard of the Soul. Some have their Conversation in the lusts of the flesh, as it is, Eph. 2. 3. trading only in those things that please and pamper the flesh: They sow to the flesh, Gal. 6. 8. (i. e.) all their studies and labours are but the sowing of the seeds of pleasure to the flesh. Not a handful of spiritual seed sown in Prayer for the Soul all the day long; what the Body craves, the obsequious Soul like a slave, is at its beck to give it. Tit. 3. 3. Serving divers lusts and pleasures; attending to every knock and call, to fulfil the desires of the flesh. O how little do these Men understand the life of Religion, or the great design of Christianity? which consists in mortifying, and not pampering and gratifying the Body, Rom. 14. 13, 14. And according to that rule all serious Christians order their Bodies, giving them what is needful to keep them serviceable and useful to the Soul, but not gratifying their irregular desires; giving what their wants, not what their wantonness calls for. So Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 27. I beat it down, and keep it under; he understood it as his Servant not his Master. He knew that Hagar would quickly perk up, and domineer over Sarah, expect more attendance than the Soul, except it were kept under: These two verbs, ὑπωπιάζω and παιδαγωγῶ are very emphatical; the former signifies to make it black and blew with buffeting, the other, to bring it under by checks and rebukes, as Masters that understand their Place and Authority use to do with insolent and wanton Servants.

It was a rare Expression of a Heathen, Major sum, & ad majora natus, quàm ut corporis mei sim mancipium: I am greater, and born to greater things, than that I should be a drudg or vassal to my Body. And it was the saying of a pious Divine, when he felt the Flesh rebellious and wanton, Ego faciam, asselle, ut non calcitres: I will make thee, thou Ass, that thou shalt not kick. I know the superstitious Papists place much of Religion in these external things, but tho' they abuse them to an ill purpose, there is a necessary and lawful use of these abridgments and restraints upon the Body; and it will be impossible to mortify, and starve our Lusts, without a due rigour and severity to our Flesh. But how little are many acquainted with these things? They deal with their Bodies as David with Adonijah, of whom it's said, 1 Kings 1. 6. His Father had not displeased him at any time, in saying, Why hast thou done so? And just so our Flesh requites us by its Rebellions and Treasons against the Soul; it seeks the life of the Soul, which seeks nothing more than its content and pleasure: this is not ordinate love, but fondness and folly, and what we shall bitterly repent for at last.

(2.) It appears by our sparing and favouring of them, in the necessary uses and services we have for them in Religion. Many will rather starve their Souls, than work and exercise their Bodies, or disturb their sluggish rest: thus the idle excuses and pretences of endangering our Health, oftentimes put by the duties of Religion, or at least lose the fittest and propereſt season for them: We are lazying upon our beds when we should be wrestling upon our knees: The World is suffered to get the start of Religion in the Morning, and so Religion is never able to overtake it all the day long. This was none of David's course, he prevented the dawning of the Morning, and cried, Psal. 119. 147. and Psal. 5. 3. My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord, in the morning will I direct my Prayer unto thee, and will look up. And indeed we should consecrate unto God the freshest and fittest parts of our time, when our bodily Senses are most vigorous; and we would do so (except God by his providence disable us) were our Hearts fully set for God, and Religion lay with weight upon our Spirits.

Some I confess cannot receive this injunction, being naturally disabled by prevailing Infirmities; but those that can, ought to do so. But O how many slothful excuses doth the Flesh invent to put off duty! We shall injure our Health, &c. O the hypocrisy of such pleas! If profit or pleasure call us up, we have no shifts, but can rise early, and sit up late.

O Friends, why hath God given you Bodies, if not to waste and wear them out in his service, and the service of your own Souls? if your Bodies must not be put to it, and exercised this way, where is the Mercy of having a Body? If a stately Horse were given you on this condition, that you must not ride or work him, what benefit would such a gift be to you? Your Bodies must and will wear out, and it's better wear them with working, than with rusting: we are generally more solicitous to live long, than to live usefully and serviceably; and it may be our Health had been more precious in the eyes of God, if it had been less precious in our own eyes. 'Tis just with God to destroy that Health with diseases, which he sees we would cast away in slothfulness and idleness. Think with thy self, had such a Soul as Timothy's or Gaius's been blest with such a Body as thine, so strong and vigorous, so apt and able for service, they would have honoured God more in it in a day, than perhaps you do in a year. Certainly this is not Love, but Laziness; not a due improvement, but a sinful neglect and abuse of the Body, to let it rust out into idleness, which might be imployed so many ways for God, for your own and others Souls. Well, remember Death will shortly dissolve them, and then they can be of no more use; and if you expect God should put Glory and Honour upon them at the Resurrection, use them for God now, with a faithful self-denying diligence.

(3.) It appears by our cowardly shrinking from dangers that threaten them, when the Glory of God, our own and others Salvation, bid us expose and not regard them. Some there are, that rather than they will adventure their Flesh to the rage of Man, will hazard their Souls to the wrath of God. They are too tender to suffer pain or restraint for Christ, but consider not what sufferings are prepared for the fearful and unbelieving in the World to come, Rev. 21. 8. How many sad examples do the Church Histories of antient and latter times afford us, of Men who consulting with flesh and blood in time of danger, have in pity to their Bodies ruined their Souls!

Here the Soul receives a deadly wound upon it self, to ward it off from the Body. So did Spira.

There be but few like-minded with Paul, who set a low price upon his liberty or life for Christ, Acts 20. 24. or with those worthy Jews, Jews, Dan. 3.28. who yielded their Bodies to preserve their Consciences. Few of Chrysostom's mind, who told the Empress, Nil nisi peccatum timeo, I fear nothing but Sin; or of Basil's who told the Emperor, God threatned Hell, whereas he threatned but a Prison. That is a remarkable Rule that Christ gives us, Mat. 10.28. The sum of it is, to set God against Man, the Soul against the Body, and Hell against temporal sufferings; and so surmounting these low fleshly considerations, to cleave to our duty in the face of dangers. You read, Gal. 1.16. how in pursuit of duty, tho' surrounded with danger, Paul would not confer or consult with flesh and blood, i.e. ask its opinion which were best, or stay for its consent till it were willing to suffer; he understood not that the Flesh had any voice at the Council-table in his Soul, but willing or unwilling, if duty call for it, he was resolved to hazard it for God.

We have a great many little Politicians among us, who think to husband their Lives and Liberties a great deal better than other plain-hearted and too forward Christians do: but these Politicks will be their perdition, and their craft will betray them to ruin. They will lose their Lives by saving them, when others will save them by losing them. Matth. 10.39. For the interest of the Body depends on and follows the safety of the Souls as the Cabin doth the Ship.

O my Friends, let me beg you not to love your Bodies into Hell, and your Souls too for their sakes: be not so scar'd at the sufferings of the Body, as with poor Spira to dash them both against the wrath of the great and terrible God. Most of those Souls that are now in Hell, are there upon the account of their indulgence to the flesh, they could not deny the Flesh, and now are denied by God. They could not suffer from Men, and now must suffer the vengeance of eternal Fire.

(4.) In a word; it appears we love them fondly and irregularly, in that we cannot with any patience think of death and separation from them. How do some men fright at the very name of Death! and no Arguments can persuade them seriously to think of an unbodied and separated state. 'Tis as Death to them, to bring their thoughts close to that ungrateful Subject. A Christian that loves his Body regularly and moderately, can look into his own Grave with a composed mind, and speak familiarly of it, as Job 17.14. And Peter speaks of the putting off of his Body by Death, as a man would of the putting off of his Cloaths at night, 2 Pet. 1.13, 14. And certainly such men have a great advantage above all others, both as to the tranquillity of their Life and Death. You know a parting time must come, and the more fond you are of them, the more bitter and doleful that time will be. Nothing, except the guilt, and terrible charges of Conscience, put men into terrors at death, more than our fondness of the Body. I confess, Christless persons have a great deal of reason to be shy of death; their dying day is their undoing day: but for Christians to startle and fright at it, is strange, considering how great a friend Death will be to them that are in Christ. What are you afraid of? What, to go to Christ? to be freed of Sin and Affliction too soon? Certainly this hath not been so comfortable a habitation to you, that you should be loth to exchange it for a heavenly one.

Use III. Of Exhortation.

To conclude; Seeing there is so strict a Friendship and tender Affection betwixt Soul and Body, let me persuade every Soul of you to express your love to the Body, by labouring to get Union with Jesus Christ, and thereby to prevent the utter ruin of both to all Eternity.

Souls, if you love your selves, or the Bodies you dwell in, shew it by your preventing care in season, lest they be cast away for ever. How can you say you love them, when you daily expose them to the everlasting wrath of God, by employing them as Weapons of Unrighteousness, to fight against him that formed them? You feed and pamper them on Earth, you give them all the delights and pleasures you can procure for them in this World; but you take no care what shall become of them, nor your Souls neither, after Death hath seperated them. Oh cruel Souls! cruel not to others, but to your selves, and to your own flesh, which you pretend so much love to! Is this your love to your Bodies? What, to employ them in Satan's service on Earth, and then to be cast as a Prey to him for ever in Hell? You think the rigor and mortification of the Saints, their abstemiousness and self-denial, their cares, fears, and diligence, to be too great severity to their Bodies: but they know, these are the most real evidences of their true love to them; they love them too well to cast them away as you do. Alas! your love to the Body doth not consist in feeding, and cloathing, and pleasing it; but in getting it united to Christ, and made the Temple of the Holy Ghost; in using it for God, and dedicating it to God.

I beseech you, Brethren, by the Mercies of God, to present your Bodies living Sacrifices to God, which is your reasonable service, Rom. 12.1. The Soul should look upon the Body as a wise Parent upon a rebellious or wanton Child, that would (if left to it self) quickly bring it self to the Gallows; the Father looks on him with compassion and melting bowels, and saith, with the Rod in his hand, and Tears in his eyes, My Child, my naughty, disobedient, headstrong Child, I resolve to chastise thee severely, I love thee too well to suffer thee to be ruin'd, if my care or corrections may prevent it. So should our Souls evidence their love to, and care over their own rebellious flesh. 'Tis cruelty, not love or pity, to indulge them to their own destruction.

Except you have gracious Souls, you shall never have glorified Bodies: except your Souls be united with Christ, the happiness of your Bodies as well as Souls is lost to all Eternity. Know you not that the everlasting condition of your Bodies follows and depends on the Interest your Souls now get in Christ? Oh! that this one sad Truth might sink deep into all our considerations this day; That if your Bodies be snares to your Souls, and your Souls be now regardless of the future estate of themselves and them; assuredly they will have a bitter parting at Death, a terrible meeting again at the Resurrection, and horrid reflections upon each other, naturally charging their Ruin upon each other to all Eternity. Whilst they that are in Christ part in hope, meet with joy, and bless God for each other for evermore.

II Pet. I. 13, 14.

Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this Tabernacle, to stir you up, by putting you in remembrance.

Knowing that shortly I must put off this my Tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.

AT the 10th of this Chapter, the Apostle sums up his foregoing Precepts and Exhortations in one great and most important Duty, the making sure of their Calling and Election. This Exhortation he enforceth on them by a most solemn and weighty motive, ver. 11. Even an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom. No Work of greater necessity or difficulty, than to make sure our Salvation, no Argument more forcible and prevalent, than an easie and free entrance into Glory at death, an εὐσυναίσια, a sweet and comfortable dissolution, to enter the Port of Glory before a Wind, with our full lading of Comfort, Peace and Joy in believing, our Sails full, and our Streamers flying: Oh! how much better is this, than to lie Windbound, I mean Heart-bound, at the Harbour's mouth! tos'd up and down with fears, doubts, and manifold temptations, making many a-board to fetch the Harbour; for so much is signified in his figurative and allusive expression, ver. 11.

And for their encouragement in this great and difficult work, he engageth himself by promise to give them all the assistance he can, whilst God should continue his life; and knowing that would be but a little while, he resolves to use his utmost endeavour to secure these things in their Memories after his death, that they might not die with him. This is the general scope and order of the Words.

Wherein more particularly we have,

1. His exemplary industry and diligence in his Ministerial Work.
2. The Consideration stimulating and provoking him thereunto.

1. His exemplary industry and diligence in his Ministerial Work. In which two things are remarkable, viz. (1.) The quality of his work, which was to stir them up, by putting them in remembrance, to keep the heavenly flame of Love and Zeal lively upon the Altar of their Hearts. He well knew what a sleepy Disease the best Christians are troubled with, and therefore he had need to be stirring them up, and awakening them to their Duty. (2.) The constancy of his Work, as long as I am in this Tabernacle; (i. e.) as long as I live in this World. The Body is here called a Tabernacle, in respect of its moveableness and frailty, and in opposition to that House made without hands, eternal in the Heavens. And it is observable how he limits and bounds his serviceableness to them by his commoration in his Tabernacle or Body, as well knowing after death he could be no longer useful to them, or any others in this World. Death puts an end to all our Ministerial usefulness: but till that time he judged it meet, and becoming him, to be aiding and assisting their Faith: Our Life and Labour must end together.

Διεγείρειν, excitare, expergefacere, i. e. mentes vestras tanquam dormitantes ac torpescentes, &c. Poli Synopsis.

2. We have here the Motive or Consideration stimulating and provoking him to this diligence, knowing that I must shortly put off this Tabernacle, even as the Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me: In which words he gives an account of, (1.) The speediness; (2.) Necessity; (3.) Voluntariness of his Death, and the way and means by which he knew it. All these must be considered singly and apart, and then valued all together, as they amount to a weighty Argument or Motive to excite him to a diligence in his Duty.

(1.) He reflects upon the speediness or near approach of his death. I must, (shortly) put off this my Tabernacle; which is a form of Speech of the same importance with that of Paul, 2 Tim. 4. 6. The time of my departure is at hand, my time in the Body is almost at an end.

Ταχινὴ. brevi futurum, Every Christian knows not the time of his death, as Peter did, by special Revelation. ——But tho' we know it not by a word spoken to us in particular, we know it by a word written for all in common, Eccl. 9. 5. The living know that they must die.

(2.) The necessity of his death: It is not I may, but I must put off this my Tabernacle; yea, I must put it off shortly; for so the Lord had shewed him: Christ had signified it expresly to him, John 21. 18, 19. And besides this, most Expositors think this Clause refers to some special Vision or Revelation which Peter had of the time and manner of his own death: so that besides the natural necessity, or the inevitableness of his death by the Law of Nature, he was certified of it by special Revelation. We have here also,

(3.) The voluntariness of his death; for Voluntariness is consistent enough with the necessity of the Event. I must put off, or lay down my Tabernacle; he saith not, I must be torn by violence from it, but I must depose, or lay it down. Camero will have the word here used for Death, properly to signifie the laying down of one's Garments: he made no more of putting off his Body than his Garments.

Deponere dicit, ut significet se voluntariè mortem obiturum esse pro Christo. Pool.

Upon the consideration of the whole matter, the speediness of his death, which he knew to be at hand; the necessity of it, that when it came he must be gone from, and could be no more useful to them; and his own inclination to be with Christ in a better state, being as willing to be gone as a weary Traveller to be at home; he judged it meet, or becoming him, as he was called of Christ to feed his Sheep, as he was gifted extraordinarily for the Church's service, full of spiritual Excellencies, all which in a short time would be taken away from them by death:

I

I say, upon all these accounts he could not but judge it meet to be stirring them up, and every way striving to be as useful as he might.

Hence the Note will be,

Doct. How strong soever the Affections and Inclinations of Souls are to the fleshly Tabernacles they now live in, yet they must put them off, and that speedily.

(1) The certainty of death, Job 16. 22.

The point lies very plain before us in the Scriptures. That is a remarkable expression we have in Job 16. 22. When a few years are come, I shall go the way whence I shall not return. In the Hebrew it is, When the years of number, or my numbred years are come; years so numbred, that they are circumscribed in a very short period of Time. When those few years are past, then I must go to my long home, my everlasting abode, never more to return to this World: The way whence I shall not return; elsewhere called the way of all flesh, Josh. 23. 15. and the way of all the Earth, 1 King. 2. 2.

Anni numeri (i. e.) qui numerati sunt adeo ut brevissima periodo circumscripti.

There is no man that hath power over the Spirit to retain the Spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death, and there is no discharge in that War. Eccl. 8. 8. By Spirit understand the natural Spirit, or breath of Life, which, as I shewed before, connects or ties the Soul and Body together. This Spirit no man can retain in the day of death. We can (as one speaks) as well stop the Chariot of the Sun when posting to night, and chase away the shadows of the evening, as escape this hour of darkness that is coming upon us.

Mortem (inquit Senaca) nulla diligentia evitat, nulla fœlicitas domat, nulla potentia vincit.

A Man may escape the Wars by pleading privilege of years, or weakness of Body, or the King's Protection, or by sending another in his room; but in this War the Press is so strict, that it admits no dispensation; young or old, weak or strong, willing or unwilling, all's one, into the Field we must go, and look that last and most dreadful Enemy in the face. 'Tis in vain to think of sending another in our room, for no man dieth by Proxy; or to think of compounding with Death, as those self-deluding Fools did, Isa. 28. 15. who thought they had been discharged of the Debt by seeing the Sergeant: No, no! there is no discharge in that War. Nihil prodest ora concludere, & vitam fugientem retinere, saith Hierom on that Text; Let us shut our mouths never so close, struggle against death never so hard, there is no more retaining the Spirit, than a Woman can retain the Fruit of her Womb, when the full time of her deliverance is come. Suppose a Man were sitting upon a Throne of Majesty, surrounded with armed Guards, or in the midst of a College of expert and learned Physicians, Death will pass all these Guards to deliver thee the fatal Message: Neither can Arts help thee, when Nature it self gives thee up.

The Law of Mortality binds all, good and bad, young and old, the most useful and desirable Saints, whom the World can worst spare, as well as useless and undesirable Sinners, Rom. 8. 10. And if Christ (or tho' Christ) be in you, the Body is dead because of Sin. Peter himself must put off his Tabernacle, for they are but Tabernacles, frail and movable frames, not built for continuance: these will drop off from our Souls, as the Shell falls off from the Bird in the Nest; be our earthly Tabernacles never so strong or pleasant, we must depose them, and that shortly; our Lease in them will quickly expire, we have but a short term. James 4. 14. like a thin Mist in the Morning, which the Sun presently dissipates; this is a Metaphor chosen from the Air: You have one from the Land, where the swift Post runs, Job 9. 25. So doth our Life from Stage to Stage, till its journey be finished; and a third from the Waters, there fail the swift Ships, Job 9. 26. which weighing Anchor, and putting into the Sea, continually lessen the Land, till at last they have quite lost sight of it: from the Fire, Psal. 58. 4. The lives of Men are as soon extinct as a blaze made with dry Thorns, which is almost as soon out as in. Thus you see how the Spirit of God hath borrowed Metaphors from all the Elements of Nature, to shadow forth the brevity and frailty of that Life we now live in these Tabernacles: so that we may say as one did before us, Nescio an dicenda sit vita mortalis, an vitalis mors; I know not which to call it, a mortal Life, or a living Death.

(2) The speediness of death. The Scriptures horrour Metaphors from all the Elements to this purpose.

The continuance of these our Tabernacles or Bodies is short, whether we consider them absolutely or comparatively.

1. Absolutely. If they should stand 70 or 80 years, which is the longest duration, Psal. 90. 10. how soon will that time run out? What are years that are past but as a Dream that is vanished, or as the waters that are past away? it is in fluxu continuo: there is no stopping its swift course, or calling back a moment that is past. Death set out in its journey towards us the same hour we were born; and how near is it come this day to many of us? It hath us in chase, and will quickly fetch us up, and overtake us; but few stand so long as the utmost date.

2. Comparatively. Let us compare our time in these Tabernacles, (1.) either with Eternity, or with him who inhabits it, and it shrinks up into nothing; Psal. 39. 5. Mine age is nothing unto thee. So vast is the disproportion, that it seems not only little, but nothing at all. Or (2.) with the duration of the Bodies of Men in the first Ages of the World, when they lived many hundred years in these fleshly Tabernacles. The length of their Life was the benefit of the World, because Religion was then [illegible], a thing handed down from Father to Son; but certainly it would be no benefit to us that are in Christ, to be so long suspended the fruition of God in the everlasting Rest.

The grounds and reasons of this Necessity that lies upon all, to put off their earthly Tabernacles so soon, are.

1. The Law of God, or his Appointment.
2. The Providence of God ordering it suitable to this Appointment.

1. The

1. The Law or appointment of God which came in force immediately upon the Fall; Gen. 2. 17. In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die. And accordingly it took place upon all Mankind immediately upon the first Transgression, Rom. 5. 12. Death entered by sin. The threatning was not his immediate actual personal Death in the day that he should eat, but a state of Mortality to commence from that time to him and his posterity; hence it's said, Heb. 9. 27. It is appointed to all Men once to die.

2. The Providence of God ordering and framing the Body of Man suitably to this his appointment; a frail, weak Creature, having the seeds of death in his Constitution: thousands of Diseases and Infirmities are bred in his Nature, and the smallest pore in his Body is a door large enough to let in death. Hence his Body is compared to a piece of Cloth which Moths have fretted, Psal. 39. 11. it's become a sorry rotten thing which cannot long hang together. And indeed it is a wonder it continues so long as it doth.

Quotidie morimur, quotidie enim demitur aliqua pars vitæ; & tunc quoque cum crescimus, vita decrescit. Infantiam amisimus, deinde Adolescentiam, usque ad hesternam. Quicquid transit temporis perit.

And both these, viz. the divine Appointment and Providence, are in pursuance of a double design, or for the payment of a twofold debt which God owes to the first and to the second Adam.

(1.) By cutting off the Life, or dissolving the Tabernacles of wicked Men, God pays that debt of Justice owing to the first Adam's sinful Posterity, whose sins cry daily to his Justice to cut them off. Rom. 6. 23. The wages of sin is death. And indeed it is admirable that his patience suffers ungodly Men to live so long as they do, for he endures with much long suffering, Rom. 9. 22. He sees all their sins, he is grieved at the heart with them: his forbearance doth but encourage them the more to sin against him; Eccles. 8. 11. Because Sentence, &c. yet forbears: Forty years long was I grieved with this Generation, Psal. 95. 10. And it's wonderful that Patience doth not crack under such a Load. Habakkuk admired it, Habak. 1. 13. Thou art of purer Eyes, &c. Yet he suffers them to spend lavishly upon his patience from year to year, but Justice must do its Office at last.

(2.) By cutting off the lives of good Men, God pays to Christ the reward of his Sufferings, the end of his Death, which was to bring many Sons to Glory, Heb. 2. 10. Alas! it answers not Christ's end and intention in dying, to have his People so remote from him; John 17. 24. He would have them where he is, that they might behold his Glory. Two vehement desires are satisfied by this appointment of God, and its execution, viz.

1. Christ's,
2. The Saints.

1. Christ's desires are satisfied; for this is the thing he all along kept his eye upon in the whole Work of his Mediation; it was to bring us to God, 1 Pet. 3. 18. Tho' he be in Glory, yet his Mystical Body is not full till all the Elect be gathered in by Conversion, and gathered home by Glorification, Ephes. 1. 23. The Church is his fulness. He is not fully satisfied till he see his Seed, the Souls he died for, safe in Heaven; and then the Debt due to him for all his Sufferings is fully paid him, Isa. 53. 11. He sees the travail of his Soul. As it is the greatest satisfaction and pleasure a Man is capable of in this World, to see a great Design which hath been long projecting and managing, at last by an orderly Conduct brought to its perfection.

2. The desires of the Saints are hereby satisfied, and their weary Souls brought to rest. Oh! what do gracious Souls more pant after than the full enjoyment of God, and the Visions of his Face! the state of freedom from sin, and complete conformity to Jesus Christ! From the day of their espousals to Christ, these desires have been working in their Souls. Love and Patience have each acted its part in them, 2 Thess. 3. 5. Love hath put them into a holy ardor and longing to be with Christ; Patience hath qualified and allayed those desires, and supported the Soul under the delay. Love cries, Come, Lord, come; Patience commands us to wait the appointed time. This appointed time on which so great hopes and expectations depend, is the time of dissolving these Tabernacles; for till then the Soul's Rest is suspended; and if it were perfectly freed from all other loads and burdens, both of Sin and Affliction, yet its very absence from Christ would alone make it restless: for it is with the Soul in the Body, as it is with any other Creature that is off its Centre, it doth and must gravitate and propend, it is still moving and inclining farther, and feels not it self easie and at rest where it is, be its condition in other respects never so easie, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Whilst we are at home in the Body, we are absent from the Lord. You have a little Shadow or Emblem of this in other Creatures: You see the Rivers, tho' they glide never so sweetly betwixt the fragrant Banks of the most pleasant Meadows in their course and passage, yet on they go towards the Sea; and if they meet with never so many Rocks or Hills to resist their course, they will either strive to get a passage through them, or if that may not be, they will fetch a compass, and creep about them, and nothing can stop them till by a central force they have finished their weary course, and poured themselves into the bosom of the Ocean. Or as it is with your selves, when abroad from your Habitations and Relations; this may be pleasing a little while; but if every day might be a Festival, it would not long please you, because you are not at home.

The main Motives that persuade gracious Souls to abide here, are to finish the Work of their own Salvation, and farther other Mens; but as their Evidences for Heaven grow clearer to themselves, and their capacity of service less to others, so must their desires to be with Christ be more and more inflamed.

Now the case so standing, that Christ's condition in Heaven being a condition of desire and longing for the enjoyment of his People there, and all the Glory of Heaven would not content him without that; and the con-condition of his People on Earth being also a state of longing, groaning, and panting to be with him, and all the Pleasures and Delights and Comforts they have on Earth will not content them without it: How wise and gracious an appointment of Heaven is it, that these our Tabernacles shall and must be put off, and that shortly! For hereby a full and mutual satisfaction is given to the restless desires both of Christ's heart and of theirs. See the reflected flames of Love betwixt them in Rev. 22. The Spirit, and the Bride say, Come, and let him that is athirst come; Behold, I come quickly even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Delays make the heart sad, Prov. 13. 12. Should our commoration on Earth be long, our Patience had need be much greater than it is; but under all our burdens here, this is our relief, it is but a little while, and all will be well, as well as our Souls can desire to have it.

Infer. I. Must we put off these Tabernacles? Is Death necessary and inevitable? Then 'tis our wisdom to sweeten to our selves that Cup which we must drink, and make that as pleasant to us as we can, which we know cannot be avoided. Die we must, whether we be fit or unfit, willing or unwilling: 'tis to no purpose to shrug at the name, or shrink back from the thing. In all Ages of the World, Death hath swept the Stage clean of one Generation to make room for another, and so it will from Age to Age till the Stage be taken down in the general dissolution.

But tho' Death be inevitable by all, it is not alike evil, bitter and dreadful to all. Some tremble, others triumph at the appearance of it. Some meet it half way, receive it as a friend, and can bid it welcome, and die by consent, making that the matter of their Election, which in it self is necessary and unavoidable: so did Paul, Philip. 1. 23. But others are drawn or rent by plain violence from the Body, Job 27. 8. when God draws out their Souls.

That Man is happy indeed, whose heart falls in with the appointment of God, so voluntarily and freely, as that he dare not only look Death in the face with confidence, but go along with it by consent of will. Remarkable to this purpose is that which the Apostle asserts of the frame of his own heart, 2 Cor. 5. 8. We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the Body, and present with the Lord. Here is both Confidence and Complacence, with respect to Death. Θαρρῦμεν. The word signifies Courage, Fortitude; or, if you will, an undaunted boldness and presence of Mind, when we look the King of Terrors in the face. We dare venture upon Death, we dare take it by the cold hand, and bid it welcome. We dare defie its Enmity, and deride its noxious Power, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O death, where is thy sting? And that's not all, we have complacence in it, as well as confidence to encounter it. Εὐδοκῦμεν. We are willing; the Translation is too flat, We are well pleased; it is a desirable, a grateful thing to us, to die; but yet not in an absolute, but comparative consideration, εὐδοκῦμεν μᾶλλον, we are willing rather, (i. e.) rather than not see and enjoy our Lord Jesus Christ; rather than to be here always sinning and groaning. There is no complacency in Death, in it self it is not desirable. But if we must go thro' that streight gate, or not see God; we are willing rather to be absent from the Body. So that you see Death was not the matter of his submission only, he did not yield to what he could not avoid, but he ballances the evils of Death with the privileges it admits the Soul into, and then pronounces, εὐδοκῦμεν, we are content, yea, pleased to die.

We cannot live always if we would, and our Hearts should be wrought to that frame, as to say, we would not live always if we could. Job 7. 16. I would not live always, or long, saith he. But why should Job deprecate that which was not attainable? I would not live alway; he needed not to trouble himself about that, it being impossible that he should: both statute and natural Law forbid it. Ay, but this is his sense: Supposing no such necessity as there is, if it were pure matter of election; upon a due ballancing of Accounts, and comparing the Good and Evil of Death, I would not be confin'd always, or for any long time to the Body: It would be a Bondage unsupportable to be here always.

Indeed those that have their Portion, their All, in this life, have no desire to be gone hence. They that were never changed by Grace, desire no change by Death; if such a Concession were made to them, as was once to an English Parliament, That they should never be dissolved but by their own consent, when would they say as Paul, I desire to be dissolved? But it's far otherwise with them whose Portion and Affections are in another World; they would not live always if they might; knowing, that never to die, is never to be happy.

Quest. If you say, This is an excellent and most desirable temper of Soul; but how did these holy men attain it? Or what is the course we may take to get the like frame of willingness?

Sol. They attained it, and you may attain it in such Methods as these.

1. They lived in the believing views of the invisible World, and so must you, if ever Death be desirable in your eyes, 2 Cor. 4. 18. It's said of all that died comfortably, that they died in Faith, Heb. 11. 13. You will never be willing to go along with Death, except you know where it will carry you.

2. They had assurance of Heaven, as well as Faith to discern it. Assurance is a lump of Sugar indeed in the bitter Cup of Death; nothing sweetens like it. So 2 Cor. 5. 1. so Job 19. 26, 27. This puts Roses into the pale Cheeks of Death, and makes it amiable, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. and Rom. 8. 38, 39.

3. Their Hearts were weaned from this World, and the inordinate affectation of a terrene life, Phil. 3. 8. all was dung and dross for Christ; they trampled under foot what we hug in our bosoms. So 'tis said, Heb. 10. 34. Ye took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in your selves, &c. And so it must be with us, if ever we obtain a complacency in Death.

4. They ordered their Conversations with much Integrity, and so kept their Consciences pure and void of offence; Acts 24. 16. Herein do do I exercise my self, &c. and this was their comfort at last, 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our rejoycing, &c. So Job 27. 5. My Integrity will I not let go till I die. Oh! this unstings Death of all its terrors.

5. They kept their love to Christ at the height: that flame was vehement in their Souls, and made them despise the terror, and desire the friendly assistance of Death, to bring them to the sight of Jesus Christ. Phil. 1. 23. so Ignatius, O how I long, &c. Thus it must be with you, if ever you make Death eligible and lovely to you, which is terrible in it self. There is a lovelinesse in the Death, as well as in the Life of a Christian: Let me die the death of the righteous, said Balaam.

Inser. II. Many cry out on a death bed, O send for Ministers and Christians to pray! Alas! what can they do then? Is that a time for so great a work to be shuffled up in a hurry amidst distractions and agonies?

Must we put off these Tabernacles of Flesh? How necessary is it that every Soul look out in season, and make provision for another habitation? If you must be turned out of one House, you must provide another, or lie in the streets. This the Apostle comforted himself with, That if uncloathed, he shall not be found naked, 2 Cor. 5. 1. a Building of God, a House not made with hands. You must turn out, and that shortly, from these earthly habitations. Oh! what provision have you made for your Souls against that day? The Soul of Adrian was at a sad loss, when he saw he must be turned out of this World; O Animula vagula, blandula, heu quo vadis! But it was Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob's privilege, that God had prepared for them a City, Heb. 11. 16.

I know 'tis a common presumption of most Men, that they shall be in Heaven, when they can be no longer on Earth. Præsumendo sperant, & sperando pereunt. But a few moments will convince them of their fatal mistake; their poor Souls will meet with a confounding repulse, like that, Matth. 7. 22. There is indeed a City full of heavenly Mansions prepared for some: but who are they that are entitled to it, and may confidently expect to be received into it? To be sure, not the presumptuous, who make a Bridge of their own Shadows, and so fall and perish in the Waters. Brethren, it is one of the most solemn enquiries you were ever put upon: and therefore I beseech you see whether your Characters set you among those Men or no.

1. Those that are new-born shall be cloathed with their new House from Heaven, when Death uncloths them of these Tabernacles: The New Jerusalem hath none but new born Inhabitants, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. and Christ tells us, John 3. 3. all others are excluded. Glory is the Privilege of Grace. Let Nature be adorned and cultivated how it will, if not renewed by Grace, there's no hope of Glory. You must be born again, or turned back again from the Gates of Heaven disappointed. You must be regenerated or damned. This alters the temper of thy heart, and sutes it to the life of God which is indispensably necessary to them that shall live with him. Else Heaven would be no Heaven to us, Rom. 8. 7. and therefore we must be wrought this way to it, 2 Cor. 5. 5. No privilege of Nature, no duties of Religion avail without this, Gal. 6. 15. If Morality without Regeneration could bring Men to Heaven, why are not the Heathens there? If Strictness in Duty without Regeneration, why not the Pharisees there? Believe it, neither Names nor Duties, no nor the Blood of Christ, ever did or shall bring one Soul to glory without it. O then thou that boastest of a house in Heaven, lay thine hand on thy heart, and ask it; Am I a new Creature (i. e.) Am I renewed (1) In my state and condition? 1 John 3. 14. past from death to life. (2) In my frame and temper? Eph. 5. 8. once darkness, now light in the Lord. (3) In my practice and conversation? Eph. 2. 12, 13. 1 Cor. 6. 11. If not, my Soul is destitute of a habitation in the City of God; and when I die, my Body must lie in the lonely house of the Grave, that dark Vault and Prison, and my Soul be shut out from God into outer darkness.

2. Those that live as Strangers and Pilgrims on Earth, seeking a better place and state than this World affords them, for them God hath made preparations in Glory, Heb. 11. 13, 16. If you be strangers on earth, you are the Inhabitants of Heaven. Now there be six things included in this Character. (1) They look not on this World as their own home, nor on the people of it, as their own people, 2 Cor. 5. 8. ἐνδημῆσαι, to be unpeopled. These are none of my fellow-Citizens, we must go two ways at death. (2) They set not their affections on things present as their portion, 1 Cor. 4, 18. Psal. 17. 13, 14. Their Bodies are here, their Hearts in Heaven. (3) Their carriage and manner of life not like the Men of this World, 1 Pet. 4. 4. ξενίζονται. So the Rule guides them, Rom. 12. 2. and so their course is steered; at least intended, Philip. 3. 20. our τὸ πολίτευμα, our Trade is in Heaven. (4.) Their Dialect and Language differs from the Natives of this World. Their Language is earthly, 1 John 4. 5, 6. but these have a pure lip, Zeph. 3. 9. (5) Their Society and chosen Companions are not of this World, Psal. 16. 3. They are a company of themselves, Act. 4. 21. (6) Their spirit and temper of heart is not after the World, 1 Cor. 2. 12. They have another Spirit, Num. 14. 24. These things discover us to be strangers on earth, and consequently the Men for whom God hath prepared heavenly Habitations when we die.

3. Those that live and die by Faith, shall not fail to be received into a better Habitation by Death. This is another Character of them that shall be received into Glory, laid down in the same place, Heb. 11. 13. They lived by Faith and then they died, they died embracing the Promises, which is Characteristical of those that shall dwell in that heavenly City; and implies, (1.) Intimate acquaintance with the Promises, they are things well known and familiarized to them. The word ἀσπασάμενοι, Salutantes, saluting them, is a Metaphor from the manner of parting betwixt two dear and intimate Friends. The Faith of a Christian embraces the Promises in its arms, as dear friends use to do at parting, and saith, Fare-Farewel sweet Promises, from which I have sucked out so much relief and refreshment in all the troubles of my life; I must now live no more by Faith on you, but by sight: O you have often cheared my Soul, and been my Song in the house of my Pilgrimage. (2.) It implies the firm credit that a Believer gives to things unseen, upon the grounds of the Promises, as if he did sensibly take and grasp them in his very arms and bosom. They take Christ, and all the invisible things in the Promises into their sensible embraces, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Faith is to them instead of Eyes. (3.) It implies the sincerity of a Believer's profession, who dares trust to that at last gasp, which he professed to believe in the midst of life, and the Comforts of this World. As he professed to believe in health, so you shall find his Actings when his eye and heart strings are cracking, Rom. 14. 9. Christ in the Promises was his professed joy in life, and this is what he grasps at death and lays his last hold on. (4.) It shews you whence all a Believer's comforts come in life and death. O 'tis from the Promises, Christ in the Promises is the spring of their Consolation. This they fetch their comfort from, when the World cannot administer one drop of refreshment to them. There be two great works Faith performs for the Saints, one in life, the other death. In life it is the Principle of Mortification to their sins, in death it is the spring of Consolation to their hearts: It makes them die whilst they live, and live when they die.

4. Those that love the Person and Appearance of Christ, have a mark that sets them among the Inhabitants of Heaven and Glory, 2 Tim. 4. 8. but then this Love must be (1) Sincere, and without hypocrisy. (2) Supreme, and above all others Beloved. (3) Conforming the Soul to Christ; if Sincere and Supreme, it will be transformative. (4) Longing to be with him. Such Love is a mark of Souls for whom Heaven is prepared.

Infer. III. Must we put off our Tabernacles, and that shortly? What a Spur is this to a diligent redemption and improvement of time? This is the use Peter made of it here, and every one of us should make. It was said of Bishop Hooper, he was spare in his diet, spare in his words, but most of all spare of his time. You have but little time in these Tabernacles, what pity is it to waste much out of a little?

(1) Great is the worth and excellency of Time, all the Treasures of the World cannot protract, stop, or call back one minute of time. Oh what is Man, that the heavenly Bodies should be wheel'd about by Almighty Power in constant Revolutions, to beget Time for him! Psal. 8. 3.

(2.) More precious are the seasons and Opportunities that are in time for our Souls; those are the golden spots of Time, like the Pearl in the Oyster-shell, of much more value than the Shell that contains it. There is much time in a short opportunity. There is a day on which our eternal happiness depends, Luke 19. 41, 42. Heb. 4. 7.

(3.) Invaluable are the things which God doth for Mens Souls in time. There are works wrought upon Mens hearts in a seasonable hour in this life, which have an influence into the Soul's happiness throughout Eternity. There is a time of Mercy, a time of Love, viz. of Illumination and Conversion; and on that point of Time, Eternal Life hangs in the whole weight of it.

(4.) Lost opportunity is never to be recovered by the Soul any more, Ezek. 24. 13. Rev. 22. 11. To come before the opportunity, is to come before the Bird be hatch'd; and to come after it, is to come when the Bird is flown. There is no calling back time, when it is once past. See this in the Examples you find, Luke 13. 26. Eccles. 9. 10.

(5.) It is wholly uncertain to every Soul, whether the present day may not determine his Lease in this Tabernacle, and a Writ of Ejection be served by Death upon his Soul to morrow, James 4. 13. Luke 12. 20.

(6.) As soon as ever Time shall end, Eternity takes place. The stream of Time delivers Souls daily into the boundless Ocean of vast Eternity. Ab hoc momento pendet æternitas. We are now measured by Time, hereafter by Eternity.

(7.) In Eternity all things are fixed and unalterable. We have no more to do, all means and works are at an end, John 9. 4. and Eccles. 11. 3. As the Tree falls, so it lies. Oh that these weighty Considerations might lie upon your hearts, as long as you are in these Tabernacles! If they did, (1.) The Unregenerate would not so desperately hazard their eternal Happiness, by trifling away their precious seasons under the Gospel. Oh how many aged Sinners, gray-headed Sinners hear me this day, who in fifty or sixty years never redeemed one solemn hour to take their poor Souls aside out of the clutter and distracting noise of the World, to ask and debate this question with them, Oh my Soul, how stands the case with thee in reference to the World to come! They have found no time to bethink themselves in what World their Souls shall be landed, when Time shall deliver them up into Eternity. Their whole Life hath been a continual diversion from one trifle to another; they have been serious in trifles, and trifled in things most serious: this will afford horrid reflections in the World to come. (2.) The Regenerate would not cast away the comfort of their lives in the Evidences of eternal Life, at so cheap a rate as they do. May I not say to you, as the Apostle doth, Heb. 5. 12. for the time you have had under the Gospel, you might have attained a rich Treasure both of Grace and Comfort; Turpe est senex elementarius. Is it not shameful and inexcusable, to be where you were twenty years past? Oh! let these things sink deep into every Soul.

Infer. IV. Must we shortly put off these our Tabernacles? Then slack your pace, and cool your selves; be not too eager in the prosecution of earthly designs. Oh! what bustling is here for the World, and for provisions for futurity, when as far less would serve the turn! We need not victual a Ship to cross the Channel to France, as if she were bound to the Indies. Most Mens Provisions, at least their Cares and Thoughts, are far beyond the preparations of their abode in this World. The folly of this, Christ discovers in that Parable, Luke 12. 19. and on this very account gives him the Title of a Fool, who provided for years, many years; when, poor Soul, he had not one night to enjoy those Provisions.

Oh the multitude of thoughts and cares this World needlesly devours! We keep our selves in such a continual hurry and crowd of cares, thoughts and employments about the concerns of the Body; that we can find little time to be alone, communing with our own hearts about our great Concernments in Eternity. It is with many of us in respect of our Souls, and their great Interests, as it is with a Man that is deep in thoughts about some Subject that wholly swallows him up, he seeth not what he seeth, nor heareth what he heareth of any other matter: His eyes seem to look upon this or that, but it's all one as if he did not. So it was with Archimedes, who was so intent in drawing his Mathematical Schemes, that tho' all the City was in an Alarm, the Enemy had taken it by storm, the Streets filled with dreadful cries, and dead Bodies, the Souldiers came into his particular House, nay, entred his very Study, and pluck'd him by the sleeve, before he took any notice of it: Even so many Mens hearts are so profoundly immersed and drowned in earthly Cares, Thoughts, Projects or Pleasures, that Death must come to their very Houses, yea, and pull them by the sleeve, and tell them its Errand, before they will begin to awake, and come to a serious Consideration of things more important.

Infer. V. If we must shortly put off these Tabernacles, then the groaning and mourning time of Believers is but short: how heavy soever their burden be, yet they shall carry it but a little way. It's said, 2 Cor. 5. 4. We that are in this Tabernacle do groan, being burthened. Good Souls in this state are every where groaning under heavy pressures. Their burdens are of two sorts, Sympathetical, whereby they grieve with, and on the account of others, and so every true Member of the Church of God ought to sympathize, both with God, Psal. 139. 21. Am not I grieved with them that rise up against thee? Psal. 42. 10. it is as with a Sword in their bones; and with the People of God, Zeph. 3. 18. sorrowful for the solemn Assembly, so 2 Cor. 11. 29. Who is offended, and I burn not? And indeed, it is an argument of rich, as well as true Grace, that we can, and do heartily mourn with, and for the Interest and People of God, tho' our own Lot in the World, as Nehemiah's, be never so comfortable. Or else our burdens are Idiopathetical, (i. e.) such as we bear upon our own proper account and score. And where is the Christian that hath not his own burden, yea, many burdens on him at once? Some groan under the burden of Sin, Rom. 7. 24. Scarce one day are the Tears off from some Eye-lids on this account. And who groans not under the burden of Affliction, either inward upon the Soul, Prov. 18. 14. Job 6. 1, 2, 3. or outward upon the Body, State, Relations, &c. These things make the people of God a burden to themselves, Job 7. 20, 21. Yea, under these burdens they would sink, did not the Lord sustain them, Psal. 55. 22.

But God will put a speedy and final end to all these things. When you put off this Tabernacle, you put off with it all those burdens, inward and outward. The Soul presently feels a great load off its shoulders; it shall never groan more, God shall thenceforth wipe away all tears from their eyes: For why are those burdens now permitted and imposed by the Lord upon you, but (1) To prevent Sin, Hosea 2. 6. They are your Clogs, to keep you from straying. (2) To purge out Sin, Isa. 27. 9. (3) To make you long more for Heaven, and the Rest to come. But all these ends are accomplished in that day you put off your Tabernacles, for then Sin is gone, and Rest is come.

Inf. VI. Must you shortly put off those Tabernacles? Then spare them not whilst you have them, but employ them for God with all diligence. Shortly they shall be useless to you, yea, Meat for Worms; now they may be serviceable, and their Service is their Honour: you received them not for such low ends as you employ them for. See, 1 Cor. 6. 20. Glorify God in your Souls and Bodies, which are his: You expect to have them glorious Bodies one day; Oh then let them be serviceable Bodies now. Be not fond of them to that degree many are, who chuse rather to have them eaten out with rust, than worn out with service. It is your present honour to be active, and will be your singular comfort another day. What greater comfort, when you come to put them off at death, than this, that you have employed them faithfully for God?

Ambrose said of Valentinian, No man was ever such a Servant to his Master, as Valentinian's Body was to his Soul.

Infer. VII. Look beyond this embodied state, and learn to live now as you hope to live shortly; begin to be what you expect to be. You know the time is at hand that you shall live above all bodily concernments and employments, the Soul shall be a drudge to the Body no more. You shall be as the Angels, Matt. 22. 30. not marrying, nor given in Marriage, which is Synechdochically put for all carnal Employments and Enjoyments; eat no more, drink no more, sleep no more, buy and sell no more. Now sute your selves as much as your state and the duties of Religion will suffer you, to that state beforehand. The sum of what I aim at is in, 1 Cor. 7. 29, 30. Be in all your Relations as if you had none. Look on those things as if already they were not, which shortly must be none of yours; and both acquaint and accustom your thoughts to the life of separation from the Body, which you must shortly live. Which brings me home to the next point, viz. The Condition of Humane Souls in a state of Separation.

HEB. XII. 23.

——τὰ πνεύματα δικαίων τετελειωμένων.

—— And to the Spirits of just Men made perfect.

THE particular scope of this Context falls in with the general design of the whole Gospel, which is to persuade Men to a life of of Holineſs. The Matter of the Exhortation is moſt weighty, and the Arguments enforcing it moſt powerful: He doth not talk, but diſpute; he doth not ſay, but prove, that greater and more powerful engagements unto Holineſs lie upon thoſe who live under the Goſpel, than upon the People who lived under the Law. And thus the Argument lies in this Context.

If God at the delivering of the Law upon Mount Sinai ſtrictly enjoined and required ſo great Purity and Holineſs in that People, ſignified by the Ceremonies of two days preparation, the waſhing of their cloaths, abſtinence from conjugal Society, &c. Ex. 19. 10. much more doth he require and expect it in Us, who are come under a much more excellent and heavenly Diſpenſation than theirs was.

To make good the Sequel, he compares the legal and the evangelical Diſpenſations in many particulars, ver. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. giving the Goſpel the preference throughout the whole Collation.

In ſum, the privileges of the New Teſtament-Believers are here ſtated both negatively and poſitively.

1. Negatively, by ſhewing what we are exempted from.

2. Poſitively, ſhewing what we are to come unto.

1. Negatively, What we are exempted or freed from; ver. 18, 19, 20, 21. We are not come unto the Mount that might be touched, &c. The ſum of all is this, that the promulgation of the Law was accompanied with amazing dread and terror. For, after Moſes by command from God had ſanctified the Mount, and ſet Pails about it, that neither Prieſt nor People, Man nor Beaſt, might touch the very Borders of it, leaſt they die; the Lord deſcended in fire upon the top of the Mountain the third day in the morning, with moſt terrible tokens of Divine Majeſty, ſc. with Thundrings, Lightnings, dark Clouds, and the noiſe of a Trumpet exceeding loud; the Mount was covered with ſmoke, as the ſmoke of a Furnace, and flames mounting up into the midſt of Heaven, the whole Mountain ſhaking and trembling exceedingly: Out of this horrid Tempeſt the awful Voice of God was heard, all the People in the Camp trembling, yea, and Moſes himſelf quaking for fear.

Crebris micat ignibus æther.

This was the manner of the Law's promulgation: but to ſuch a terrible Diſpenſation as this we are not come, which is the negative part of our privilege.

2. He opens the poſitive Privileges to which we are come.

(1.) Ye are come (ſaith he) to Mount Sion, not the Earthly, but the Spiritual Sion. Mount Sion was the place celebrated above all the World for the Worſhip of God, Pſal. 87. 7. All my ſprings (ſaith God) are in thee. There was the Temple, the Ark of the Covenant, the glory of the Lord dwelling between the Cherubims. The Prieſts that attended the ſervice of God, had their reſidence there, as the Angels have in Heaven. Thither the Tribes went up from all quarters of Juda, Pſal. 84. the Children of God now do to Heaven from all quarters of the World. Judea was the beſt Kingdom in the World; Jeruſalem the beſt City in that Kingdom; and Sion the moſt glorious place in that City. Here Chriſt taught his heavenly Doctrine; near to it he finiſhed his glorious work of Redemption. Hence the everlaſting Goſpel went forth into all the World: and on theſe conſiderations it's put to ſignifie the Goſpel-Church or State in this place, and is therefore called the heavenly Jeruſalem in the following words. We do not come to the literal Sion, nor to the earthly Jeruſalem; but to the Goſpel-Church, or State, which may be called a Heaven upon Earth, compared with that literal Jeruſalem.

(2.) Ye are come to an innumerable company of Angels.] Gr. to myriads of Angels*, a myriad is ten thouſand; but myriads in the plural number, and ſet down indefinitely too, may note many millions of Angels: And therefore we fitly render it, to an innumerable company of Angels.

* μυριάσιν ἀγγέλων, Helleniſtæ dicunt μυριάδας, ſine alio additamento, ad ſignificandam innumeram multitudinem. Grot.

They had the miniſtry of Angels as well as we, thouſands of them miniſtred to the Lord in the diſpenſation of the Law at Sinai, Pſal. 68. 17. But this notwithſtanding, we are come to a much clearer knowledg both of their preſent Miniſtry for us on Earth, Heb. 1. 14. and of our fellowſhip and equality with them in Heaven, Luke 20. 36.

(3.) Ye are come to the general Aſſembly and Church of the firſt-born, whoſe names are written (or enrolled) in Heaven] This alſo greatly commends and amplifies the Privileges of New Teſtament-Believers; the Church of God in former ages was circumſcribed and ſhut up within the narrow limits of one ſmall Kingdom, which was as a Garden incloſed out of a waſte Wilderneſs: but now by the calling in of the Gentiles the Church is extended far and wide, Eph. 3. 5, 6. It is become a great Aſſembly, comprizing the Believers of all Nations under Heaven; and ſo ſpeaking of them collectively, it is the general Convention or Aſſembly, which is alſo dignified and enobled by two illuſtrious Characters, viz. (1.) That it is the Church of the firſt-born, (i. e.) conſiſting of Members dignified and privileged above others, as the firſt-born among the Iſraelites did excel their younger Brethren. (2.) That their Names are written in Heaven, (i. e.) regiſtred or enrolled in God's Book as Children and Heirs of the heavenly Inheritance, as the firſt-born in Iſrael were regiſtred in order to the Prieſthood, Numb. 3. 40, 41.

Primogeniti Iſraelitarum ſcripti erant in matricula terreſtri, hi verò in albo cœliſti.

(4) Ye are come to God the judge of all.] But why to God the Judg? this ſeems to ſpoil the harmony, and jar with the other parts of the diſcourſe. No, no; they are come to God as a righteous Judg, who as ſuch will pardon them, 1 Joh. 1. 9. crown them, 2 Tim. 4. 8. and avenge them on all their oppreſſing and perſecuting Enemies, 1. Theſſ. 1. 5, 6, 7.

(5.) And to the ſpirits of juſt Men made perfect.] A moſt glorious privilege indeed, in which we are diſtinctly to conſider,

1. The quality of thoſe with whom we are associated or taken into fellowship.

2. The way and manner of our association with them.

1. The quality of those with whom we are associated, or to whom we are said to be come, and they are described by three Characters, viz.

(1.) Spirits of Men.

(2.) Spirits of just Men.

(3.) Spirits of just Men perfected or consummated.

(1.) They are called Spirits, that is, immaterial Substances, strictly opposed to Bodies, which are no way the objects of our exteriour Senses, neither visible to the eye, or sensible to the touch, which were called properly Souls whilst they animated Bodies in this lower World; but now being loosed and separated from them by death, and existing alone in the World above, they are properly and strictly stiled Spirits.

(2.) They are the Spirits of just Men.] Man may be termed just two ways, (1.) By a full discharge and acquittance from the guilt of all his Sins, and so Believers are just Men even whilst they live on Earth groaning under other imperfections, Acts 13. 39. Or, (2.) By a total freedom from the pollution of any Sin. And tho' in this sense there is not a just Man upon Earth that doth good, and sinneth not, Eccles. 7. 22. yet even in this sense Adam was just before the Fall, Eccles. 7. 29. according to his original Constitution; and all Believers are so, in their glorified condition, all Sin being perfectly purged out of them, and its existence utterly destroyed in them. On which account

(3.) They are called the Spirits of just Men made perfect,] or consummate. The word perfect is not here to be understood absolutely, but synecdochically; they are not perfect in every respect, for one part of these just Men lies rotten in the grave: but they are perfected, for so much as concerns their Spirit; tho' the Flesh perish and lie in dishonour, yet their Spirits being once loosed from the Body, and freed radically and perfectly from Sin, are presently admitted to the facial vision and fruition of God, which is the culminating point (as I may call it) higher than which the Spirit of Man aspires not, and attaining to this, it is for so much as concerns it self, made perfect. Even as the Body at last lodg'd in its centre, gravitates no more, but is at perfect Rest; so it is with the Spirit of Man come home to God in glory, 'tis now consummate, no more need to be done to make it as perfectly happy as it is capable to be made, which is the first thing to be considered, viz. the quality of those with whom we are associated.

2. The second follows, namely, the way and manner of our association with the blessed Spirits of just Men, noted in this expression, [we are come.] He saith not, we shall come hereafter, when the Resurrection hath restored our Bodies, or after the general Judgment; but, we are come to these Spirits of just Men. The meaning whereof we may take up in these three particulars.

(1.) We that live under the Gospel-light, are come to a clearer apprehension, sight and knowledge of the blessed and happy estate of the Souls of the Righteous after death, than ever they had, or ordinarily could have, who lived under the Types and Shadows of the Law, Ephes. 3. 4, 5. And so we are come to them, in respect of clearer apprehension.

(2.) We are come to those blessed Spirits in our Representative, Christ, who hath carried our Nature into the very midst of them, and whom they all behold with highest admiration and delight. By Christ who is entred into that holy place where these Spirits of just Men live, we are come into a near relation with them: For he being the common Head, both to them in Heaven, and to us on Earth, we and they consequently make but one Body or Society, Eph. 2. 19. Whereupon (notwithstanding the different and remote Countries they and we live in) we are said to sit together with them in heavenly places, Eph. 3. 15. & 2. 6.

(3.) We are come.] That is, we are as good as come, or we are upon the matter come; there remains nothing betwixt them and us but a puff of Breath, a little space of time, which shortens every moment: We are come to the very borders of their Country, and there is nothing to speak of betwixt them and us: and by this expression, We are come, he teacheth us to account and reckon those things as present, which so shortly will be present to us, and to look upon them as if they already were, which is the highest and most comfortable life of Faith we can live on Earth. Hence the Note is,

Doct. That righteous and holy Souls once separated from their Bodies by death, are immediately perfected in themselves, and associated with others alike perfect in the Kingdom of God.

That the Spirits of just men at the time of their separation from their Bodies do not utterly fail in their Beings, nor that they are so prejudic'd and wounded by death, that they cannot exert their own proper acts in the absence of the Body, hath been already cleared in the foregoing parts of this Treatise, and will be more fully cleared from this Text.

But the true level and aim of this Discourse is at a higher Mark, viz. the far more excellent free and noble Life the Souls of the Just begin to live immediately after their Bodies are dropt off them by death, at which time they begin to live like themselves, a pleasant, free and divine Life. So much at least is included in the Apostle's Epithet in my Text, Spirits of just Men made perfect; and suitable thereto are his words in 1 Cor. 13. 10, 12. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face: now I know in part, but then I shall know, even as I am known.

These two Adverbs, Now and Then, distinguish the two-fold state of gracious Souls, and shew what it is whilst they are confined in the Body, and what it shall be from the time of their emancipation and freedom from the clog of Mortality. Now we are imperfect, but then that which is perfect takes place, and that which is imperfect is done away, as the imperfect Twilight is done away by the opening of the perfect Day.

And it deserves a serious Animadversion That this perfect state doth not succeed the imperfect one after a long interval, (as long betw betwixt the Dissolution and Resurrection of the Body) but the imperfect state of the Soul is immediately done away by the coming of the perfect one. The Glass is laid by as useless, when we come to see face to face, and eye to eye.

The Waters will prove very deep here, too deep for any Line of mine to fathom; there is a cloud always over-shadowing the World to come, a gloom and haziness upon that state; fain we would, with our weak and feeble beam of imperfect Knowledge, penetrate this Cloud, and dispel this gloom and haziness, but cannot: We think seriously and close to this great and awful Subject, but our thoughts cannot pierce through it; we reinforce those thoughts by a sally or thick succession of fresh thoughts, and yet all will not do, our thoughts return to us either in confusion, or without the expected success. For, alas! how little is it that we know or can know of our own Souls now whilst they are embodied, much less of their unbodied state! The Apostle tells us, 1 Cor. 2. 9. That eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of Man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. And another Apostle adds, It doth not yet appear what we shall be, 1 John 3. 2.

Yet all this is no discouragement to the search and regular enquiry into the future state; for tho' Reason cannot penetrate these Mysteries, yet God hath revealed them to us (tho' not perfectly) by his Spirit. And tho' we know not (particularly and circumstantially) what we shall be, yet this we know, that we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And it is our privilege and happiness, that we are come to the Spirits of just Men made perfect, (i.e.) to a clearer knowledg of that state than was ordinarily attainable by Believers under former Dispensations.

These things premised, I will proceed to open my apprehensions of the separate state of the Spirits of just Men made perfect, in twelve Propositions; whereby, as by so many steps, we may orderly advance as far as safely and warrantably we may into the knowledge of this great Mystery, clearing what afterwards shall remain obscure in the solution of several Questions relating to this Subject, and then apply the whole in several Uses of this great Point: And the first Proposition is this:

Prop. I. There is a two-fold Separation of the Soul from the Body; viz. one Mental, the other Real: Or,

1. Intellectual, by the Mind only.
2. Physical, by the stroke of Death.

Separatio per intellectum fit, cum duo revera conjuncta, separatim concipimus. Conimbr. de Anima, p. 595.

1. Of intellectual or mental Separation, I am first to speak in this Proposition; and it is nothing else but an act of the Understanding or Mind, conceiving or considering the Soul and Body as separated and parted each from other, whilst yet they are united in a personal oneness by the Breath of Life. This mental Separation may and ought to be frequently and seriously made, before Death makes the real and actual Separation; and the more frequently and seriously we do it, the less horror and distraction will attend that real and fatal stroke whenever it shall be given. For hereby we learn to bear it gradually, and by gentle essays to acquaint our shoulders with the burden of it. Separation is a word that hath much of horror in the very sound, and useth to have much more in the sense and feeling of it, else it would not deserve that title, Job 8. 14. The King of Terrors, or the most terrible of all terribles; But acquaintance and familiarity abates that horror, and that two ways especially,

(1.) As it is preventive of much guilt.

(2.) As it gains a more inward knowledge of its Nature.

(1.) The serious and fixed thoughts of the parting hour is preventive of much guilt; and the greatest part of the horror of Death rises out of the guilt of sin; The sting of Death is sin, 1 Cor. 15. 56. Augustine saith, Nothing more recals a Man from sin, than the frequent meditation of death. I dare not say it is the strongest of all Curbs to keep us back from sin, but I am sure it is a very strong one.

Nihil sic revocat à peccato, quam frequens mortis meditatio. Aug.

Let a Soul but seriously meditate what a change Death will make shortly upon his person and condition; and the natural effects of such a Meditation, through the Blessing of God upon it, will be a flatting and quenching of its keen and raging Appetite after the ensnaring Vanities of this World (which draw Men into so much guilt) a conscientious fear of sin, and an awakened care of Duty. It was once demanded of a very holy Man (who spent much more than the ordinary allowance of time in Prayer, and searching his own heart) why he so macerated his own Body by such frequent and long-continued Duties? His Answer was, Oh! I must die, I must die. Nothing could separate him from Duty, who had already separated his Soul from his Body, and all this World by fixed and deep thoughts of Death.

Qui considerat qualis erit in morte, semper pavidus erit in operatione, atq; inde in oculis sui conditoris vivet. Nihil quod transit, appetit; & pene mortuum se considerat, quia se morituum non ignorat, Greg. Mor. 12.

(2.) Hereby we gain a more inward knowledge and acquaintance with the nature of Death: and the more we are acquainted with it, the less it terrifies us. A Lion is much more dreadful to him that never saw him, than he is to his Keeper who feedeth him every day. A pitch'd Battle is more frightful and scaring to a new-listed Soldier that never took his place in the Field before, nor saw the dreadful countenance of an Army ready to engage, nor heard the thundring noise of Cannon, and Volleys of Shot, the shouts of Armies, and groans of dying Men on every side, than it is to an old Soldier who hath been used to such things. The like we may observe in Seamen, who it may be trembled at first, and now can sing in a Storm.

Scarce any thing is more necessary for weak and timorous Believers to meditate on, than the time of their separation. Our hearts will be apt to start and boggle at the first view of Death; but it is good to do by them as Men use use to do by young Colts, ride them up to that which they fright at, and make them smell to it, which is the way to cure them. Look, as Bread (saith one) is more necessary than other Food, so the Meditation of Death is more necessary than many other Meditations. Every time we change our habitations, we should realize therein our great change. Our Souls must shortly leave this, and be lodged for a longer season in another Mansion. When we put off our cloaths at night, we have a fit occasion to consider, that we must strip nearer one of these days, and put off, not our cloaths only, but the Body that wears them too.

Sicut panis necessarius est præ cæteris elementis, ita intenta mortis meditatio necessaria est præ cæteris donis & exercitiis. Dionys.

Holy Job had by frequent thoughts familiarized Death and the Grave to himself, and could speak of them, as Men use to speak of their Houses and dearest Relations, Job 17. 14. I have said to Corruption, Thou art my Father; to the Worm, Thou art my Mother and Sister. But it needs much Grace to bring and hold the Heart to this Work; and therefore Moses begs it of God, Psal. 90. 12. So teach us to number our days, and David, Psal. 39. 4. Lord, make me know my end. Yea, the advantages of it have been acknowledged by Men whose Light was less, and Diversions more than ours. The Jews for this use and end had their Sepulchres built before-hand, and that in their Gardens of Pleasure too; that they might season the delights of Life with the frequent thoughts of Death, John 19. 41.

Philip of Macedon would be awakened by his Page every morning with this sentence, Memento te esse mortalem; Remember, oh King! thou art a mortal Man. A great Emperor of Constantinople not only at his Inauguration, but at his great Feasts, ordered a Mason to bring two Stones before him, and say, Chuse, oh Emperour! which of the two thou wilt for thy Tombstone. Reader, thou wilt find mental separation much easier than real separation: 'tis easier to think of Death, than it is to feel it; and the more we think of it, the less we are like to feel it.

Elige ab his saxis ex quo, invictissime Cæsar, tibi tumulum me fabricare velis.

Prop. II. Actual Separation may be considered either in fieri, in the Previous Pangs and foregoing Agonies of it; or in facto esse, in the last separating stroke which actually parts the Soul and Body asunder, lays the Body prostrate and dead at the feet of Death, and thrusts the Soul quite out of its ancient and beloved habitation.

1. Let it be considered in the previous Pangs and fore-running Agonies which commonly make way for this actual Dissolution: And to the People of God, this is the worst and bittereſt part of Death, (except those conflicts with Satan, which they sometimes grapple with on a Death-bed) which they encounter at that time. There is (saith one) no poniard in Death it self, like those in the way or prologue to it. I like not to die said another, but I care not if I were dead; the end is better than the way. The conflicts and struggles of Nature with Death are bitter and sharp, pains unknown to Men before, whatever pains they have endured: nor can it be expected to be otherwise, seeing the ties and ingagements betwixt the Soul and Body are so strong, as we shew'd before.

The Soul will not easily part with the Body, but disputes the passages with Death from Member to Member, (like resolute Soldiers in a stormed Garison) till at last it is forced to yield up the Fort Royal into the hands of victorious Death, and leave the dearly beloved Body a Captive to it.

This is the dark side of Death to all good Men; and tho' it be not worth naming in comparison with the dreadful consequents of death to all others, yet in it self it is terrible.

* Separation is not natural to the Soul, which was created with an inclination to the Body; 'tis natural indeed to clasp and embrace, to love and cherish its own Body; but to be divided from it, is grievous and preternatural.

* Cum separatio naturalis non sit, neq; etiam violenta; fit consequens, ut ex approbata Philosophorum approbatione, præternaturalis esse dicatur. Conimb.

The Agonies of Death are expressed in Scripture by a word which signifies the travelling pains of a Woman, yea, by the sharpest and acute pains they feel, even the birth-pangs, or bearing throes, Acts 2. 24.

Τὰς ὠδῖνας τοῦ θανάτου, partûs dolorem.

And yet all are not handled alike roughly by the hands of death; some are favoured with a desirable εὐθανασία, gentle and easy death.

'Tis the privilege of some Christians to have their Souls fetcht out of their Bodies as it were by a kiss from the mouth of God, as the Jewish Rabbins use to express the manner of Moses his death. Mr. Bolten felt no pain at his death, but the cold hand of his friend who asked him what pain he felt. Yea, holy Bayneham in the midst of the flames professed it was to him as a Bed of Roses.

Every Believer is equally freed from the sting and curse of Death; but every one is not equally favoured in the agonies and pains of Death.

2. Separation from the Body is to be considered in facto esse, (i. e.) in the result and issue of all these bitter pangs and agonies, which end in the actual dissolution of Soul and Body.

* Death, or actual separation, is nothing else but the dissolving of the tie, or loosing of the bond of Union betwixt the Soul and Body. † Some call it the privation of the second act of the Soul, that is, its act of informing or enlivening the Body. Others, according to Scripture-phrase, the departing of the Soul from the Body. So Peter stiles it, 2 Pet. 1. 15. μετὰ τὴν ἐμὴν ἔξοδον, after my departure i. e. after my death. Augustine ‖ calls it laying down of a heavy burden, provided there be not another burden for the Soul to bear afterwards, which will sink it unto Hell.

In

In respect of the Body which the Soul now forsakes, it is called the putting off this Tabernacle, 2 Pet. 1. 14. and the dissolving the earthly House or Tabernacle, 2 Cor. 5. 1.

In respect of the terminus à quo, the place from which the Soul removes at death, it is called our departure hence, Phil. 1. 23. or our weighing anchor, and loosing from this coast or shoar to sail to another.

In respect of the terminus ad quem, the place to which the Spirits of the Just go at death, it is called our going to, or being with the Lord, ibid. To conclude, in respect of that which doth most lively resemble and shadow it forth, it is called our falling asleep, Act 7. ult. our sleeping in Jesus, 1 Thess. 4. 14. This Metaphor of sleep must be stretched no farther than the Spirit of God designed in the choice of it, which was not to favour and countenance the fancy of a sleeping Soul after death; but to represent its state of placid rest in Jesus's bosom, if it refer at all to the Soul: for I think it most properly respects the Body; and thence the Sepulchers where the bodies of the Saints were laid, got the name of κοιμητηρια, Dormitories, or sleeping places.

Locus Sepulturæ consecratus, κοιμητηριον, hoc est, dormitorium appellatur.

This is its last farewel to this world, never to return to a low animal life more. Job 7. 9, 10. For as the cloud is consumed and vanished away, so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more; he shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more. The Soul is no more bound to a Body, nor a retainer to the Sun, Moon or Stars, to meat, drink and sleep, but is become a free, single, abstracted Being, a separate and pure Spirit, which the Latins call Lemures, Manes, Ghosts or Souls of the dead, and my Text Spirits made perfect, a being much like unto the Angels who are Πνεύματα ἀσωμάτους, bodiless Powers. An Angel, as one speaks, is a perfect Soul, a Soul is an imperfect Angel, I do not say that upon their separation they became Angels; for they will still remain a distinct Species of Spirits.

Semper à corporis compedibus, & nexibus liberi. Max. Tyr.

Angels have no inclination to Bodies, nor were ever fettered with clogs of flesh as Souls were. And by this you see what a difference there is betwixt these two considerations of death. How ghastly and affrighting is it in its previous pangs! how lovely and desirable in the issue and result of them! which is but the change of Earth for Heaven, Men for God, Sin and Misery for Perfection and Glory.

Prop III. The separation of the Soul and Body makes a great and wonderful change upon both, but especially upon the Soul.

There is a twofold change made upon Man by death, one upon his Body, another upon his Soul. The change upon the body is great, and visible to every eye. A living Body is changed into a dead Carcase; A beautiful and comely Body, into a loathsom spectacle: that which lately was the object of delight and love, is hereby made an abhorrence to all flesh; Bury my dead out of my sight, Gen. 23. 4. What the Sun is to the greater, that the Soul is to the lesser World. When the Sun shines comfortably, how vegete and chearful do all things look! how well do they thrive and prosper! The Birds sing merrily, the Beasts play wantonly, the whole Creation enjoyeth a day of light and joy: but when he departs, what a night of horror followeth! How are all things wrapt up in the sable Mantle of darkness! Or if it but abate its heat, as in Winter, the Creatures are as it were buried in the Winding-sheet of Winter's Frost and Snow: just so it is with the Body, when the Soul shineth pleasantly upon it, or departs from it.

That Body which was fed so assiduously, cared for so anxiously, loved so passionately, is now tumbled into a Pit, and left to the mercy of crawling Worms. The change which Judgment made upon that great and flourishing City Niniveh, is a fit Emblem to shadow forth that change which Death makes upon human Bodies: That great and renowned City was once full of People which thronged the streets thereof; there you might have seen Children playing upon the Thresholds, Beauties shewing themselves through the Windows, Melody sounding in its Palaces: but what an alteration was made upon it, the Prophet Zephaniah describes, Chap. 2. v. 14. Flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all the Beasts of the Nations; both the Cormorant and the Bittern shall lodge in the upper Lintels of it; their Voice shall sing in the Windows; Desolation shall be in the Thresholds, for he shall uncover the Cedar work

Thus it is with the Body when Death hath dislodged the Soul. Worms nestle in the holes where the beautiful Eyes were once placed; Corruption and desolation is upon all parts of that stately Structure. But this being a vulgar Theme, I shall leave the Body to the Dust from whence it came, and follow the Soul, which is my proper Subject, pointing at the changes which are made on it.

The Essence of the Soul is not destroyed or changed by the Body's Ruin; it is substantially the self-same Soul that it was when in the Body. The supposition of an essential change, would disorder the whole frame and model of God's eternal Design for the Redemption and Glorification of it, Rom. 8. 29. 30. But tho' it undergo no substantial change at Death, yet divers great and remarkable alterations are made upon it by sundering it from the Body. As,

1. It is not where it was. It was in a Body, immers'd in Matter, married unto Flesh and Blood; but now it is out of the Body, uncloathed, and stript naked out of its garments of flesh, like pure Gold melted out of the Ore with which it was commixed; or as a Bird let out of her Cage into the open Fields and Woods. This makes a great and wonderful change on it.

2. Being free from the Body, it is consequently discharged and freed from all those cares, studies, fears and sorrows to which it was here enthralled and subjected upon the Body's account. It puts off all those Passions and Burdens with it, never spends one thought more about Food and Raiment, Health and Sickness, Wives and Children, Riches or Poverty; but lives henceforth after the manner of Angels, Mat. 22. 30. It is now unrelated to, and therefore unconcerned about all these things.

3. In

3. In the unbodied ſtate it is perfectly freed from ſin, both in the Acts and Habits: a Mercy it never enjoyed ſince the firſt moment it dwelt in the Body. The cure of this diſeaſe was indeed begun in the Work of Sanctification, but it is not perfected till the day of the Soul's Glorification. 'Tis now, and not till now, a Spirit made perfect; that is, a Soul enjoying its perfect health and rectitude. No more groans, tears or lamentations upon the account of indwelling Sin.

4. The way and manner of its converſe with, and enjoyment of God is changed. There are two mediums, by which Souls converſe with God in the Body, viz.

(1.) One internal, ſc. Faith.

(2.) The other external, ſc. Ordinances.

(1.) If a Man walk with God on Earth, it muſt be in the uſe and exerciſe of Faith, 2 Cor. 5. 7. nor can there be any Communion carried on betwixt God and the Soul without it, Heb. 11. 6.

(2.) The external mediums are the Ordinances of God, or Duties of Religion, both publick and private, Pſal. 63. 2. Betwixt theſe two mediums of Communion with God, this remarkable difference is found: The Soul may ſee and enjoy God by Faith, in the want or abſence of Ordinances; but there is no ſeeing or converſing with God in the greateſt plenty and purity of Ordinances, without Faith, Heb. 4. 2.

But in the ſame moment the Soul is cut off from union with the Body, it is alſo cut off from both theſe ways of enjoying God, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Iſa. 38. 11. but yet the Soul is no loſer, nay, it is the greateſt gainer by this change. The Child is no loſer by ceaſing to derive its Nouriſhment by the Navel, when it comes to receive it by the Mouth; a more noble way, whereby it gets a new pleaſure in taſting the variety of all delectable food. Hezekiah bemoan'd the loſs of Ordinances upon his ſuppoſed death-bed, ſaying, I ſhall not ſee the Lord, even the Lord in the Land of the Living: q. d. Now farewel Temple and Ordinances; I ſhall never go any more into his Temple, where my Soul hath been ſo often cheared and refreſh'd with the diſplays of his grace and Goodneſs; I ſhall never more join with the Aſſembly of his People on Earth. And ſuppoſe he had not, ſure he would have loſt nothing, had he then exchanged the Temple at Jeruſalem, for the Temple in Heaven, and Communion with ſinful imperfect Saints on Earth, for fellowſhip with Angels, and the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect. By this change we loſe no more than he loſeth, who whilſt he ſtands delightfully contemplating the Image of his deareſt Friend in a glaſs, hath the glaſs ſnatch'd away by his Friend, whom he now ſeeth face to face.

Upon this change of the mediums of Communion, it will follow, that the Communion betwixt God and the ſeparate Soul, excels all the Communion it ever had with him on Earth, in

(1.) The Clearneſs.

(2.) The Sweetneſs,

(3.) The Conſtancy of it.

(1.) It's Viſions of God in the ſtate of Separation are more clear, diſtinct, and direct than they were on earth; Clouds and Shadows are now fled away. The Soul now ſeeth as it is ſeen, and knoweth as it is known; its apprehenſions of God there differ from thoſe it had here, as the crude and confuſed apprehenſions of a Child, do from thoſe we have in the manly ſtate.

(2.) They are alſo more ſweet and raviſhing. As our Viſions are, ſo are our Pleaſures: Perfect Viſions produce perfect Pleaſures. The faculties of the Soul now, and never till now, lie level to that rule, Mat. 22. 37. The Viſions of God command and call forth all the heart and ſoul, mind and ſtrength, into acts of love and delight. It was not ſo here, if the Spirit was willing, the Fleſh was weak; but there the clog is off from the foot of the Will.

(3.) More conſtant, fixed, and ſteddy. 'Tis one of the greateſt Difficulties in Religion, to fix the thoughts, and cure the wildneſs and rovings of the Fancy. The heart is not ſteddy with God, and hence are its ups and downs, heatings and coolings; which are things unknown in the perfect ſtate. By all which it appears, the change by Diſſolution is great and marvellous both upon Body and Soul, but upon the Soul more eſpecially.

Prop. VI. The Souls of the Righteous, at the inſtant of their Separation, are received by the bleſſed Angels, and by them transferred unto the place of Bleſſedneſs.

Tho' Angels are by nature a ſuperiour order of Spirits, differing from Men in dignity, as the Nobles and Barons in the Kingdoms of this World, differ from inferiour Subjects; yet are they made miniſtring Spirits, (i. e.) ſerviceable Creatures in the Kingdom of Providence to the meaneſt of the Saints, Heb. 1. 14. and herein the Lord puts a ſingular honour upon his People, in making ſuch excellent Creatures as Angels ſerviceable to them, Luther aſſigns to them a double office, ſc. to ſing the Praiſes of God on high, and to watch over his Saints here below. Their Miniſtry is diſtinguiſhed into three branches: Νουθετικὸν, for admonition or warning; Φυλακτικὸν, for protection and defence; Βοηθητικὸν, for ſuccour, help and comfort. This laſt office they perform more eſpecially at the Soul's departure. Like tender Nurſes, they keep us whilſt we live, and bring us home in their Arms to our Father's houſe when we die.

They are about our death-beds, waiting to receive their precious charge into their arms and boſoms. When Lazarus breathed out his Soul, the Text ſaith, it was carried by the Angels into Abraham's boſom, Luke 16. 22. And upon this account, Tertullian calls them Evocatores animarum, the Callers forth of Souls. At the Tranſlation of Elijah, they appeared in the form of Horſes and Chariots of fire, 2 Kings 11. Horſes and Chariots are not only deſigned for conveyance, but for conveyance in State; and truly it is no ſmall honour to have ſuch a noble Convoy and Guard to attend our Soul to Heaven.

Object. If it be demanded, What need is there of their help or company? Cannot God by his immediate hand and power gather home the Souls of his people to himſelf at death? He inſpired them into our Bodies without their help, and can receive them again when we expire them, without their aid.

Sol. True, he can do so; but it hath pleased him to appoint this method of our Translation, not out of meer necessity, but bounty. Souls ascend not to God in the virtue of the Angels wings or arms, but of Christ's Ascension. Had not he ascended as our Head and Representative, all the Angels in Heaven could not have brought our Souls thither. He ascended by his own Power, and we ascend by the virtue of his Ascension. 'Tis therefore rather for the State and Decorum, than any absolute necessity, that they attend us in our Ascension.

God will not only have his People brought home to him safely, but honourably. They shall come to their Father's House in a becoming Equipage, as the Children of a King. This puts honour upon our Ascension-day, that Day is adorned by the attendance of such illustrious Creatures upon us. 'Tis no small honour which God herein designs for us, that Creatures of greater dignity than our selves shall be sent from Heaven to attend and wait upon us thither.

Yea, that our Ascension-day should in this resemble Christ's Ascension, is an honour indeed. When he ascended, there were multitudes of these heavenly Creatures to wait upon him, Psal. 68. 17, 18. The Chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels; the Lord is among them as in Sinai, in the holy place. Thou hast ascended on high, &c. A Cloud was prepared as a Royal Chariot, to carry up the King of Glory to his Princely Pavilion, and then a Royal Guard of mighty Angels to wait upon his Chariot; if not for support, yet for the greater state and solemnity of their Lord's Ascension. And O what Jubilations of blessed Angels were heard that day in Heaven! How was the whole City of God moved at his coming! the Triumph is not ended to this day, no, nor never shall.

Now herein God greatly honours his People, that there shall be some resemblance and conformity betwixt their Ascension and Christ's; * Angels rejoice to attend those to Heaven, who must be their fellow-Citizens for ever in Heaven! It is convenient also, that those who had the charge of us all our life, should attend us to our Father's house at our death. In the one they finish their Ministry, in the other they begin their more intimate Society.

Moreover the Angels are they whom God will imploy to gather together his Elect from the four Winds of Heaven at the great day, Mat. 24. 31. And who more fit to attend their spirits to Heaven singly, than those who must collect them into one Body at last, and wait on that collective Body when they shall be brought to Christ? Psal. 45. 14.

Object. But the sight and presence of Angels is exceeding awful, and overwhelming to humane nature: will rather astonish and terrify, than refresh and cheer us, to find our selves, all on a sudden surrounded and beset with such Majestick Creatures. We see what effects the appearance of an Angel hath had on good Men in this World. We shall die, (saith Manoah*) for we have seen God,* Judg. 13. 22. Eliphaz, a Spirit passed before my face, the hair of my flesh stood up, Job 4. 15.

Sol. True, whilst our Souls inhabit these mortal and sinful Bodies, the appearance of Angels is terrible to them, and cannot be otherwise, partly upon a natural, and partly upon a moral account. The dread of Angels naturally falls upon our Animal Spirits: They shrink and tremble at the approach of Spirits; not only the Spirits of Men, but of Beasts, quail at it. A Dog or a Horse is terrified at it, as well as a Man, Numb. 22. 25. The dread of Spirits strikes the animal or natural Spirits primarily; and the Mind or rational Soul by consent. There is also another cause of fear in Man, upon the sight and presence of Angels, viz. a consciousness of guilt. Wherever there is guilt, there will be fear, especially upon any extraordinary appearance of God to us, tho' it be but mediately by an Angel.

But when the Soul is freed both from flesh and sin, and shall enjoy it self in a Nature like to these pure and holy Spirits, the dread of Angels is then vanished, and the Soul will take great content and satisfaction in their Company and Communion: The Soul then finds it self a fit Companion for them, looks upon them as its fellow-servants; for so they are, Rev. 19. 10. And the Angels look upon the Spirits of just Men, not as inferiors and Underlings, but with great respect, as Spirits in some sense nearer to Christ than themselves: So that henceforth no dread falls upon us from the presence of these excellent Creatures; but each enjoyeth singular delight in each others society. And thus we see in what honourable and pleasing company the Souls of the Just go hence to their Father's House and Bosom.

Prop. V. The Soul is not so maimed and prejudiced by its separation from the Body, but that it both can and doth live, and act without it; and performs the Acts of Cogitation and Volition, without the aid and Ministry of the Body.

I know it is objected by them that assert the Soul's sleeping till the Resurrection; that tho' it's Essence be not destroy'd by death, yet its Operations are obstructed by the want and absence of the Body, its Tool and Instrument: and thus they form their Objection.

Object. All that the Soul understands it understands by Species; that is, the Images of things which are first formed in the Phantasy: As when we would conceive the Nature of a House, a Ship, a Man, or a Beast; we first form the Image or Species thereof in our fancy, and then exercise our thoughts about it: But this depending upon bodily Organs and Instruments, the separated Soul can form no such Images. It hath no such innate Species of its own, but comes into the World an abrasa tabula, white paper; and being deprived by separation of the help of Senses and Phantasms, it consequently understands nothing.

Thus the Soul in its state of Separation is represented to us as wounded in its Powers and Operations, to that degree which seems to extinguish the very nature of it. But,

Sol. 1. We deny that the Soul knows nothing now but by Phantasms and Images; for it knows it self, its own Nature and Powers, of

* Quomodo inservierunt capiti, eo modo inserviunt etiam membris. Gaudent inservire illis in terris, quos aliquando socios habebunt in cœlis. Gerhard.

Conditiones intellectus sunt tres: (1) Objectum, ens verum & intelligibile. (2) Phantasma, vel species sensilis in Phantasia latens. (3) Species intelligibilis quæ est accidens spirituale, repræsentans idealiter intellectui rem materialem existentem extra intellectum.

Intellectus incorporea & immaterialia contemplatur, ut Deum & intelligentias; sed hæc nullo modo in which it cannot possibly feign or form any Image or Representation, whatForm, Shape or Figure, can the fancy of a Man cast his own Soul into, to help him to understand its Nature?

And what shall we say of its understanding during an Extasy, or Rapture? Doth the Soul know nothing at such a time: Doth a dull Torpor seize and benumb its intellectual Powers? No, no, the Understanding is never more bright, clear, apprehensive and perfect, than when the Body in an Extasy is laid aside as to any use or assistance of the mind. The Soul for that space uses not the Body's assistance, as the very words Extasy and Rapture convince us.

Si autem hoc non est ex natura animæ, sed per accidens hoc convenit ei, ex eo quod corpori alligatur, sicut Platonici posuerunt, de facili quæstio solvi potest. Nam remoto impedimento corporis, rediret anima ad suam naturam. Aquin. p. 1. Q. 8. Art. 1.

2. To understand by Species doth not agree to the Soul naturally and necessarily, but by accident, as it is now in union with the Body: Were it but once loosed from the Body, it would understand better without them than ever it did in the Body by them. A Man that is on horse-back, must move according to the motion of the Horse he rides; but if he were on foot, he then uses his own proper motion as he pleaseth; so here. But tho' we grant the Soul doth in many cases now make use of Phantasms, and that the agitation of the Spirits, which are in the Brain and Heart, are conjunct with its Acts of Cogitation and Intellection: Yet as a searching Scholar well observes, the Spirits are rather Subjects than Instruments of those Actions; and the whole essence of those Acts is antecedent to the motion of the Spirits, As when we use a Pen in writing, or a Knife in cutting, there is an operation of the Soul upon them, before there can be any operation by them *. They act as they are first acted, and so do these bodily Spirits. So that to speak properly, the Body is bettered, by the use the Soul makes of it in these its noble Actions; but the Soul is not advantaged by being tied to such a Body, it can do its own work without it, its Operations follow its Essence, not the Body to which it is for a time united.

* How's Blessedness, pag. 174 175.

In sum, 'Tis much more absonous and difficult to conceive a stupified, benumbed, and unactive Soul, whose very Nature is to be active, lively, and always in motion, than it is to conceive a Soul freed from the shackles and clogs of the Body, acting freely according to its own Nature. I wish the favourers of this Opinion may take heed, lest it carry them farther than they intend, even to a denial of its Existence and Immortality, and turn them into downright Sensatists or Atheists.

Prop. VI. That the separated Souls of the Just, having finished all their Work of Obedience on Earth, and the Spirit having finished all his Work of Sanctification upon them, they do ascend to God, with all the habits of Grace inherent in them; and all the comfortable Improvements of their Graces accompanying and following them.

This Proposition is to be opened and confirmed in these four Branches.

(1.) When a gracious Soul is separated from the Body, all its Work of Obedience in this World is finished. There Death is called the finishing of our course, Acts 20. 24. the night, when man works no more, John 9. 4. There is no working in the Grave, Eccles. 9. 10. for Death dissolves the Compositum, and removes the Soul immediately to another World, where it can act for it self only, but not for others, as it was wont to do on Earth. I shall see Man no more (saith Hezekiah) with the Inhabitants of the World, Isa. 38. 11. That which was said of David's death, is as true of every Christian, that having served his generation according to the will of God, he fell asleep, Acts 13. 36.

I do not say this lower World receives no benefit at all by them after their death; for tho' they can speak no more, write no more, pray for, and instruct the Inhabitants of this World no more, nor exhibit to them the beauty of Religion in any new Acts or Examples of theirs, (which is that I mean by saying they have finished all their Work of Obedience on Earth) yet the benefit of what they did whilst in the Body, still remains after they are gone; as the Apostle speaks of Abel, Heb. 11. 4. Who being dead, yet speaketh. This way indeed abundance of service will be done for the Souls of Men upon Earth, long after they are gone to Heaven. And this should greatly quicken us to leave as much as we can behind us, for the good of Posterity, that after our decease (as the Apostle speaks, 2 Pet. 1. 15.) they may have our Words and Examples in remembrance. But for any service to be done de novo, after death, it is not to be expected. We have accomplished as a Hireling our day, and have not a stroke more to do.

(2.) As all our Work of Obedience is then finished by us, so at death all the Work of God is finished by his Spirit upon us. The last hand is then put to all the preparatory Work for Glory, not a stroke more to be done upon it afterwards; which appears as well by the immediate succession of the Life of Glory, (whereof I shall speak in another Proposition) as by the cessation of all sanctifying Means and Instruments, which are totally laid aside as things of no more use after this stroke is given; Adepto fine, cessant media, Means are useless, when the End is attain'd. There is no work, saith Solomon, in the grave. How short soever the Soul's stay and abode in the Body was, tho' it were regenerated one day, and separated the next, yet all is wrought upon it, which God ever intended should be wrought in this World, and there is no Preparation work in the other World.

(3.) But tho' the Soul leave all the means of Grace behind it, yet it carries away with it to Heaven all those habits of Grace which were planted and improved in it in this World, by the Blessing of the Spirit upon those means. Tho' it leave the Ordinances, it loseth not the Effects and Fruits of them, tho' they cease, their Effects still live. The truth dwelleth in us and shall be in us for ever, 1 John 2. 17. The Seed of God remaineth in us, 1 John 3. 9.

Common Gifts fail at Death, but saving Grace sticks fast in the Soul, and ascends with it into Glory. Gracious habits are inseparable. Glory doth not destroy, but perfect them. They are the Soul's meetness for Heaven, Col. 1. 12. and therefore it shall not come into his presence presence, leaving its meetness behind it. In vain is all the Work of the Spirit upon us in this World, if we carry it not along with us into that World, seeing all his Works upon us in this Life have a respect and relation to the Life to come.

Look therefore as the same natural Faculties and Powers which the Soul had (tho' it could not use them) in its imperfect Body in the Womb, came with it into this World, where they freely exerted themselves in the most noble Actions of natural Life; so the habits of Grace which by Regeneration are here implanted in a weak and imperfect Soul, go with it to Glory, where they exert themselves in a more high and perfect way of acting than ever they did here below. The languishing spark of Love is there a vehement flame; the faint, remiss, and infrequent delight in God, is there at a constant, ravishing, and transporting height.

(4.) To conclude, As all implanted habits of Grace ascend with the sanctified Soul to Heaven; (for the Soul ascends not thither as a natural, but as a new Creature) so all the effects, result, and sweet improvements of those Graces, which we gathered as the pleasant fruits of them on Earth, these accompany and follow the Soul into the other World also; Their works follow them, Rev. 14. 13.) They go not before in the Notion of Merits to make way for them, but they follow or accompany them as Evidences, and comfortable Experiences. I doubt not, but the very remembrance of what pass'd betwixt God and the Soul here, betwixt the day of its Espousals to Christ, and its Divorce from the Body, will be one sweet Ingredient into their Blessedness and Joy, when they shall be singing in the upper Region the Song of Moses and of the Lamb. They were never given to be lost, or left behind us. And thus you see with what a rich Cargo the Soul sails to the other World, tho' if it had no other, it would never drop Anchor there.

Prop. VII. The Souls of the Just, when separated from their Bodies, do not wander up and down this World, nor hover about the Sepulchres where their Bodies lie; nor are they detain'd in any Purgatory, in order to their more perfect Purification; nor do they fall asleep in a benummed stupid state: but do forthwith pass into Glory, and are immediately with the Lord.

When once the mind of Man leaves the Scripture-guidance and direction, which is to what the Compass or Pole-star is to a Ship in e wide Ocean, whither will it not wander? what uncertainties will it not fluctuate? and on what Rocks and Quicksands must it inevibly be cast? Many have been the foolish and oundless Conceits and Fancies of Men about e Receptacles of departed Souls.

1. Some have assigned them a restless wanng Life, now here, now there, without any rtain dwelling-place any where. The only ound for this fancy, is the frequent Apparions of the Ghosts or Spirits of the dead, hereof many Instances are given; and who here that is a stranger to such Stories? Now, departed Souls were fixed any where, this orld would be quiet and free from such dirbances.

I make no doubt but very many of these Stories have been the industrious Fictions and Devices of wicked and superstitious Votaries to gain reputation to their way, speaking Lies in hypocrisie, to draw Disciples after them. And many others have been the Tricks and Impostures of Satan himself, to shake the Credit of the Saints Rest in Heaven, and the Imprisonment of ungodly Souls in Hell, as will more fully appear when I come to speak to that Question more particularly.

2. Others think, when they are loosed from the Body at death, they hover about the graves and solitary places where their Bodies lie, as willing, seeing they can dwell no longer in them, to abide as near them as they can; just as the surviving Turtle keeps near the place where his Mate died, and may be heard mourning for a long time about that part of the Wood. This Opinion seeks countenance and protection from that Law, Deut. 18. 10. 11. which prohibits Men to consult with the Dead; of which restraint there had been no need nor use, if it had not been practised; and such practices had not been continued, if departed Souls had not frequented those places, and given Answers to their Questions. But what I said before of Satan's Impostures, is enough for the present to return to this also.

3. The Papists send them immediately to Purgatory, in order to their more thorow Purification. This Purgatory Bellarmine thus describes: It is a certain place wherein, as in a Prison, Souls are purged after this life, that were not fully purged here, to the intent they may enter pure into Heaven; and tho' the Church (saith he) hath not defined the place, yet the Schoolmen say, it is in the bowels of the Earth, and upon the borders of Hell. And to countenance this profitable Fable, divers Scriptures are by them abused and misapplied, as 1 Cor. 3. 15. Matth. 5. 25, 26. 1 Pet. 3. 19. All which have been fully rescued out of their hands, and abundantly vindicated by our Divines, who have proved, God never kindled that fire to purifie Souls; but the Pope to warm his own Kitchen.

Bell. lib. 2. de Purg. cap. 6.

4. Another sort there are, who affirm, they neither wander about this World, nor go into Purgatory, but are cast by Death into a Swoon or Sleep; remaining in a kind of benummed condition, till the Resurrection of the Body. This was the Error of Beryllus; and Irenæus seems to border too near upon it, when he saith, ‖ The Souls of Disciples shall go to an invisible place appointed for them of God, and shall there tarry till the Resurrection, waiting for that time: and then receiving their Bodies, and perfectly, (i. e.) corporeally, rising again, as Christ did, they shall come to the sight of God.

‖ Discipulorum Animæ abibunt in invisibilem locum, definitam eis a Deo; & ibi usque ad Resurrectionem commorabuntur, sustinentes Resurrectionem: post, recipientes corpora, & perfecte resurgentes, (i. e.) corporaliter, quemadmodum & Dominus resurrexit, sic venient ad conspectum Dei. Iren. lib. 5.

All these mistakes will fall together by one stroke; for if it evidently appear (as I hope it will) that the Spirits of the Just are immediately taken to God, and do converse with, and enjoy him in Heaven; then all these Fancies vanish, without any more labour about them particularly. Now there are four Considerations which to me put the immediate Glorification of the departed Souls of Believers beyond all rational doubt.

1. Heaven is as ready and fit to receive them as ever it shall be.

2. They are as ready and fit for Heaven as ever they shall be.

3. The Scripture is plainly for it. And,

4. There is nothing in Reason against it.

1. Heaven is as fit and ready to receive them when they die, as ever it shall be. Heaven is prepared for Believers, (1.) By the purpose and decree of God, and so far it was prepared from the foundation of the World, Matth. 25. 34. (2.) By the Death of Christ whose Blood made the purchase of it for Believers, and so meritoriously opened the Gates thereof, which our Sins had barred up against us, Heb. 10. 19, 20. (3.) By the Ascension of Christ into that holy place, as our Representative and Forerunner, John 14. 2. This is all that is necessary to be done for the preparation of Heaven; and all this is done, as much as ever God design'd should be done to it, in order to its preparation for our Souls. So that no delay can be upon that account.

2. The departed Souls of Believers are as ready for Heaven as ever they shall be. For there is no Preparation-work to be done by them, or upon them after Death, John 9. 3. Eccles. 9. 10. Their Justification was complete before Death, and now their Sanctification is so too; Sin, which came in by the union, going out at the separation of their Souls and Bodies. They are Spirits made perfect.

3. The Scripture is plain and full for their immediate Glorification; Luke 23. 43. To day shalt thou be with me in Paradise. Luke 16. 22. The Beggar died, and was carried by the Angels into Abraham's bosom. Phil. 1. 21. I desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, which is far better. The Scripture speaks but of two ways by which Souls see and enjoy God, viz. Faith and Sight; the one imperfect suited to this Life, the other perfect, fitted for the Life to come; and this immediately succeeding that, for the imperfect is done away by the coming of that which is perfect, as the Twilight is done away by the advancing of the perfect Day.

4. To conclude, There is nothing in Reason lying in bar to it. It hath been proved before, that the Soul in its unbodied state, is capable to enjoy Blessedness, and can perform its acts of Intellection, Volition, &c. not only as well, but much better than it did when embodied. I conclude therefore, that seeing Heaven is already as much prepar'd for Believers, as it need be, or can be; and they as much prepar'd from the time of their Dissolution, as ever they shall be; the Scriptures also being so plain for it, and no bar in Reason against it: all the forementioned Opinions are but the Dreams and Fancies of Men, who have forsaken their Scripture-guide; and this remains an unshaken Truth, That the Spirits of the Just go immediately to Glory, from the time of their separation.

Prop. VIII. At the time of a gracious Soul's separation from the Body, it is instantly and perfectly freed from sin, which till that time dwelt in it from its beginning; but thenceforth shall do so no more.

Immediately upon their separation from the Body, they are Spirits made perfect, as my Text stiles them; and that Epithet Perfect could never suite them, if there were any remaining root or habit of Corruption in them.

Ideoque vocat consecratos, vel perfectos, quia carnis infirmitatibus non amplius sint obnoxii, depositâ ipsâ carne. Marl. in loc.

The time, yea, the set time is now come, to put an end to all the dolorous groans of gracious Souls upon the account of indwelling Sin. What the Angel said to Joshua, Zech. 3. 3, 4. the same doth God say of every upright Soul at the time of its separation, Take away the filthy Garments from him, and cloath him with change of Raiments, and set a fair Mitre upon his head. Thus the Garments spotted with the Flesh, are taken away with the Body of Flesh, and the pure unchangeable Robes of perfect Holiness cloathed upon the Soul, in which it appears without fault before the Throne of God, Rev. 14. 5.

There is a threefold burdensom Evil in Sin, under which all regenerated Souls groan in this Life, viz. (1.) The Guilt; (2.) The Filth; (3.) The Inherence of it in their Nature. And there is a threefold Remedy or Cure of these Evils. The Guilt of Sin is remedied by Justification: The Filth of Sin is inchoatively healed by Sanctification: The Inherence of Sin is totally eradicated by Glorification. For as it entred into our Persons by the Union of our Souls and Bodies, so it is perfectly cast out by their Disunion or Separation at Death. The last stroke is then given to the Work of Sanctification, and the last is evermore the perfecting stroke: Sin languished under imperfect Sanctification in the time of Life, but it gives up the Ghost under perfected Sanctification, from and after Death. Sanctification gave it its deadly wound, but Glorification its final abolition. For it is with our Sins after Regeneration as it was with that Beast mentioned Dan. 7. 12. which tho' it was wounded with a deadly wound, yet its Life was prolonged for a season: And this is the appointed season for its expiration. For if at their dissolution they are immediately received into Glory (as it hath been prov'd they are in our seventh Proposition) they must necessarily be freed perfectly from Sin, immediately upon their dissolution; because nothing that is unclean can enter into that pure and holy place: They must be, as the Text truly represents them, the Spirits of just Men made perfect.

For if so great holiness and purity be required in all that draw nigh to God upon Earth, as you read Psal. 93. 5. certainly those who are admitted immediately to his Throne must be without fault, according to Revel. 7. 14, 15, 16, 17.

When a compounded Being comes to be dissolved, each part returns to its own Principle; so it is here. The Spirit of Man, and all the Grace that is in it, came from God, and to him they return at death, and are perfected in him and by him: The Flesh returns to the Earth whence it came, and all that Body of Sin is destroyed with it; neither the one or other shall be a snare or clog to the Soul any more. A Christian in this World is but Gold in the Ore; at Death the pure Gold is melted out and separated, and the Dross cast away and consumed.

Hence

Hence three Consectaries offer themselves to us.

Consect. I. That a Believer's Life and Warfare end together. We lay not down our weapons of War till we lie down in the dust; 2 Tim. 4. 7. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course. The Course and Conflict you see are finished together. Tho' they commence from different terms, yet they always terminate together. Grace and Sin have each acted its part upon the Stage of Time, and the Victory hovered doubtfully, sometimes over Sin, and sometimes over Grace, but now the War is ended, and the Quarrel decided, Grace keeps its ground, and Sin is finally vanquished. Now, and never before, the gracious Soul stands triumphing like that noble Argive, no; an Enemy left to renew the Combat; the War is ended; and with it all the fears and sorrows of the Saints.

In vacua solus Sessor Plausorque Theatro:

Consect. II. Separated Souls become impeccable, or free from all the hazard of Sin, from the time of their separation. For, there being no root of sin now inherent in them, consequently no temptation to sin can fasten upon them: all temptations have their handles in the corruption of our Natures. Did not Satan find matter prepared within us, dry Tinder fitted to his hand, he might strike in temptations long enough before one of his hellish sparks could catch or fasten upon us. Temptations are grievous exercises to Believers; they are darts, Eph. 6. 16. they are thorns, 2 Cor. 12. 7. But the separate Soul is out of Gunshot: 'twere as good discharge an Arrow at the body of the Sun, as a temptation at a translated Soul.

Consect. III. Separated Souls are more lovely Companions, and their Converses more sweet and delightful than ever they were in this World. It was their corruption which spoil'd their Communion on Earth, and it is their spotless Holiness which makes it incomparably pleasant in Heaven. The best and loveliest Saints have something in them which is distastful; even sweet Briars, and holy Thistles, have their offensive Prickles: but when that which was so lovely on Earth is made perfect in Heaven, and nothing of that remains in Heaven, which was so offensive in them on Earth; Oh what blessed delightful Companions will they be! Oh blessed Society! Oh most desirable Companions! let my Soul for ever be united to their assembly. I love them under their Corruptions, but how shall my Soul be knit to them when it seeth them shining in their Perfections!

Prop. IX. The Pleasure and Delights of the separate Spirits of the Just, are incomparably greater and sweeter, than those they did, or at any time could experience in their bodily state.

With what a pleasant face would death smile upon Believers, what Roses would it raise in its pale cheeks, if this Proposition were but well settled in our hearts by faith! And if we will not be wanting to our selves, it may be firmly setled there, by these four Considerations, which demonstrate it.

Consideration I. Whatsoever Pleasure any man receives in this World, he receives it by means of his Soul. Even all corporeal and sensitive delights have no other relish and sweetness, but what the Soul gives them; which is demonstrable by this, that if a man be placed amidst all the pleasing Objects and Circumstances in the World, if he were in that Center where he might have the confluence of all the delights of this World; yet if the Spirit be wounded, there is no more relish or savour in them, than in the white of an Egg. What pleasure had Spira in his Liberty, Estate, Wife and Children; These things were indeed proposed and urged again and again to relieve him; but instead of pleasure, they became his horrour: let but the mind be wounded, and all the mirth is marr'd; one touch from God upon the Spirit, destroys all the joy of this World. Nay,

Let but the intention of the mind be strongly carried another way, and for that time, (though there be no guilt or wound upon the Soul) the most pleasant enjoyments lose their pleasure. What delight, think you, would bags of Gold, sumptuous Feasts, or exquisit Melody have afforded to Archimedes, when he was wholly intent upon his Mathematical lines? By this then it is evident, that the rise of all pleasure is in the mind, and the most agreeable and pleasing Objects and Enjoyments signify nothing without it: The mind must be sound in it self, and at leisure to attend them, or we can have no pleasure from them.

Consideration II. Of all Natural Pleasures in the World, Intellectual Pleasures are found to be most agreeable and connatural to the Soul of man.

The more refined and remote from sense any pleasure is, the more grateful it is to the Soul; those are certainly the sweetest Delights that spring out of the mind. A drop of intellectual pleasure is valued by a generous and well tempered Soul, above the whole Ocean of impure Joys, which come to it sophisticated and tang'd through the muddy Channels of sense.

No sensualists in the world can extract such pleasure out of Gold, Silver, Meat, and drink; as a searching and contemplating mind finds in the discovery of Truth. * Heinsius, that learned Library-keeper of Leyden, professed, that when he had shut up himself among so many illustrious Souls, he seemed to sit down there as in the very lap of Eternity, and heartily pitied the Rich and Covetous Worldlings that were strangers to his Delights.

And * Cardan tells us, that to know the secrets of Nature, and the order of the Universe, hath greater pleasure and sweetness in it, than the thoughts of Man can fathom, or any Mortal hope for. Yea, such Beauty, saith * Plutarch, there is in the Study of the Mathematicks, that it were unworthy to compare such Baubles and Bubbles as Riches with it. Yea, saith another †, it were a sweet thing to be extinguished in those Studies.

* Arcana cœli, naturæ secreta, ordinem Universi scire, majoris felicitatis & dulcedinis est, quam cogitatione quis assequi potest, aut mortalis sperare.

Julius

Julius Scaliger was so delighted with Poetry, that he protested he had rather be the Author of twelve Verses in Lucan, than Emperour of Germany. And to say truth, there is a kind of ||enchanting sweetness in those intellectual Pleasures and Feasts of the mind; such a delight as hardly suffers the mind to be pull'd away from it. These Pleasures have a finer edg, a higher gust, a more agreeable savour to the mind than sensitive ones; as approaching much nearer to the nature of the Soul, which is spiritual.

Consid. III. And as Intellectual pleasures do as far exceed all sensitive pleasures as those which are proper to a man, do those which we have in common with Beasts: so Divine Pleasures do again much more surmount Intellectual ones. For what compare is there betwixt those joys which surprize a Scholar in the discovery of the Secrets of Nature, and those that overwhelm and swallow up the Christian in the discovery of the Glorious Mysteries of Redemption by Christ, and his own personal interest therein!

To solve the Phenomena of Nature is pleasant, but to solve all the difficulties about our Title to Christ and his Covenant, that is ravishing. Archimedes his εὕρηκα, I have found it, was but the frisk or skip of a Boy, to that rapturous voice of the Spouse, My Beloved is mine, and I am his. These are Entertainments for Angels, 1 Pet. 1. 12. a short Salvation for the season it is felt and tasted, 1 Pet. 1. 8. after these delights all others are insipid and dry. And yet one step higher.

Consid. IV. All that divine Pleasure which ever the holiest and devoutest Soul enjoyed in the Body, is but a sip, or prelibation, compared with those full droughts it hath in the unbodied state.

Whilst it is embodied, it rejoiceth in the Earnests and Pledges of joy; but when it is unbodied, it receives the full sum; Psal. 16. 11. In thy Presence is fulness of Joy. This fulness of Joy is not to be expected, because not to be supported in this World. The Joy of Heaven would quickly make the hoops of Nature fly. When a good man had but a little more than ordinary of the Joy of the Lord poured into his Soul, he was heard to cry, Hold, Lord, hold, thy poor Creature is but a clay Vessel, and can hold no more. These Pleasures the Soul hath in the Body, are of the same kind indeed with those in Heaven, but are exceeding short of them in divers other respects.

1. The Spiritual Pleasures the Soul hath in the Body, are but by reflection; but those it enjoys out of the Body, are by immediate intuition, 1 Cor. 13. 12. now in a glass, then face to face.

2. The Pleasures it now hath, tho' they be of a Divine nature, yet they are relished by the vitiated Appetite of a sick and distempered Soul; the embodied Soul is diseased and sickly, it hath many Distempers hanging about it. Now we know the most pleasant things lose much of their pleasure to a sick man; the separate Soul is made perfect, throughly cured of all Diseases, restored to its perfect health; and consequently Divine Pleasures must needs have a higher gust and relish in Heaven than ever they had on earth.

3. The Pleasures of a gracious Soul on earth are but rare and seldom, meeting with many and long interruptions? and many of them occasioned by the Body, which often calls down the Soul to attend its Necessities, and converse with things of a far different nature: But from these, and all other ungrateful and prejudicial Avocations, the separated Soul is discharged and set free; so that its whole Eternity is spent in the highest Delights.

4. The highest Pleasures of a gracious Soul in the Body, are but the Pleasures of an uncentred Soul, which is still gravitating and striving forward, and consequently can be but low and very imperfect, in comparison with those it enjoys, when it is centred and fixed in its everlasting Rest. They differ as the shadow of the Labourer for an hour in the day, from his Rest in his Bed when his Work is ended.

5. To conclude, the Pleasures it hath here, are but the Pleasures of Hope and Expectation, which cannot bear any proportion to those of sight and full fruition. O see the advantages of an unbodied state!

Prop. X. That Gracious Souls separate from the Body, do attain to the perfection of knowledge with more ease than they attained any small degree of knowledge whilst they dwelt in the Body.

Great are the Inconveniences and Prejudices, under which Souls labour in their Pursuits after knowledg in this Life, Veritas in puteo, Truth lies deep. And it is hard, even with much labour, pains, and study, to pump up one clear Notion; for the Soul cannot now act as it would, but is fain to act as it can, according to the Limitations and Permissions of the Body, to which it is confined: by heedful Observations, and painful Searches, it is forced to deduce one thing from another, and is too often deceived and imposed upon by such tedious, and manifold Connections.

Beside, Truth now is forced in compliance with our weakness, and distance from the Fountain, to descend from Heaven under Vails, Shadows, and Umbrages, thereby to contract some kind of Affinity with our Fancies and exterior Senses first, that so it may with more advantage transmit it self on our Understanding. It must come under some vail or other to us, whilst we are vailed with Mortality, because the Soul cannot behold it in its native lustre, nor converse otherwise with it.

Lumen supremum nunquam descendit sine indumento; impossibile est aliter nobis lucere radium divinum, nisi varietate sacrorum velaminum circumvelatum. Dionys. Areop. de cælest. Hier. cap. 1.

And hence it was that Augustin made his rational Conjecture, Why Men use to be so much delighted with Metaphors, because they are so much proportioned to our Senses, with which our reason in this embodied state hath contracted such an Intimacy and Familiarity? But when the Soul lays aside its vail of Flesh, Truth also puts off her vail, and shews the Soul her naked, beautiful, and ravishing face. It henceforth beholds all truth in God the fountain of Truth. There are five ways by which men attain the knowledg of God, say the Schools, four of which the Soul makes use of in this World; but the fifth, which is the most perfect perfect, is reserved for the separate state. Men discern God here,

(1.) In vestigio, by his foot-steps in the Works of Creation. God hath impreſt the marks of his Wiſdom and Power upon the Creatures, by which impreſſions we do diſcern that God hath been there. Thus the very Heathen arrive to ſome knowledge of a God, Rom. 1. 20. Acts 17. 24. 27.

(2.) In Umbra, by his ſhadow: if you ſee the ſhadow of a Man, you gueſs at his Stature and Dimenſions thereby. Thus Chriſt made ſome diſcovery of himſelf to the World, in the Moſaical Ceremonies, and antient Types and Umbrages, Heb. 10. 1.

(3.) In Speculo, in a Glaſs: This gives us a much clearer repreſentation of a perſon than either his foot-ſteps or ſhadow could: This is an imperfect or darker Viſion of his face by way of reflection. And thus God is ſeen in his Word and Ordinances, wherein as in a glaſs we behold the glory of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. 18.

(4.) In Filio, in his own Son, who is the living Image and expreſs Character of his Father. Thus ſometimes we ſee a Child ſo lively repreſenting his Father in Speech, Gate, Geſture, and every Lineament of his face, that we may ſay, Sic Oculos, ſic ille Manus, ſic Ora ferebat: Juſt ſo his Father ſpake, ſo he went, and juſt ſuch a one he was.

Thus we know God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 6. who is the expreſs image of his Father, Heb. 1. 3. and John 14. 9. This is the higheſt way of attaining the knowledg of God in this Life. But then, in the unbodied ſtate we ſee him,

(5.) Face to Face, with a direct viſion. This is to ſee him as he is: The Believer is a Candidate for this degree now, but cannot be inveſted with it, till diveſted of this Body of Fleſh. Yet the Soul when unbodied and made perfect, attaineth, not to a comprehenſive knowledg of God, for it will ſtill remain a finite being, and ſo cannot comprehend that which is infinite. That queſtion, Job 11. 7. Canſt thou find out the Almighty to perfection: may be put to the higheſt Graduate in Heaven. And yet,

1. To ſee God, face to face, and know him as he is, will be a knowledg of the Divine Eſſence it ſelf. To ſee the Divine Eſſence, is to ſee God as he is, i. e. to ſee him ſo perfectly and fully, that the underſtanding can proceed no farther in point of knowledge concerning that great Queſtion, What is God? Thus no Man hath ſeen, or can ſee God in this World. Even Moſes himſelf could not ſee God, Exod. 33. 18, 19, 20. But the Spirits of the Juſt made perfect have ſatisfying apprehenſions, tho' no perfect comprehenſions of the Divine Eſſence.

2. In this light they clearly diſcern thoſe deep Myſteries which they here rack'd their thoughts upon, but could not penetrate in this Life. There they will know what is to be known of the Union of the two Natures in the wonderful Perſon of our Emmanuel; and the manner of the ſubſiſtence of each Perſon in the moſt glorious and undivided Godhead, John 14. 20. The ſeveral Attributes of God will then be unfolded to our Underſtandings; for his Eſſence and Attributes are not two things, Rev. 4. 8, 9, 10, 11. Oh! what a raviſhing ſight will this be!

The Myſteries of the Scriptures, and Providences of God, will be no Myſteries then: Curioſity it ſelf will be there ſatisfied.

3. This immediate knowledge and ſight of God face to face, will be infinitely more ſweet and raviſhingly pleaſant than any or all the views we had of him here by Faith ever were, or poſſibly could be. There is a joy unſpeakable in the Viſions of Faith, 1 Pet. 1. 8. but it comes far ſhort of the facial Viſion. Who can tell the full importance of that one Text, Rev. 22. 4. The Throne of the Lamb ſhall be in it, and they ſhall ſee his face? Oh for ſuch a Heaven (ſaid one) as but to look through the Key-hole, and get one glimpſe of that lovely Face! Earth cannot bear ſuch ſights. This Light overwhelms and confounds the inadequate Faculties of imperfect and embodied Souls. But there is lumen confortans, a chearing, ſtrengthening, pleaſant light, as the light of the Morning Star, Rev. 2. 28.

4. This ſight of God will be appropriative and applicative. We there ſee him as our own God and Portion. Without a clear Intereſt in him, the ſight of him could never be beatifical and ſatisfying. Sight without Intereſt is like the Light of a Glow-worm, Light without Heat. All Doubts and Objections are ſolv'd and anſwer'd in the firſt ſight of this bleſſed Face.

5. To conclude: This perfect and moſt comfortable Knowledge is attained without labour by the ſeparate Soul. Here every degree of knowledge was with the price of much pains. How many weary hours and aking heads did the acquiſition of a little knowledge ſtand us in! But then it flows in upon the Soul eaſily. It was the ſaying of a great Uſurer, I once took much pains to get a little, (meaning the firſt ſtock) but now I get much without any pains at all. Oh lovely ſtate of ſeparation! That Body which interpoſed, clogg'd and clouded the willing and capable Spirit, being drawn aſide (as a Curtain) by Death, the Light of Glory now ſhines upon it, and round about it, without any interception or lett.

Prop. XI. The ſeparated Souls of the Juſt do live in a more high and excellent way of Communion with God in his Temple-worſhip in Heaven, than ever they did in the ſweeteſt Goſpel Ordinances, and moſt ſpiritual Duties, in which they converſed with him here on Earth.

That Saints on Earth have real Communion with God, and that this Communion is the joy of their Hearts, the Life of their Life, and their relief under all preſſures and troubles in this Life, is a Truth ſo firmly ſealed upon their Hearts by experience, as well as clearly revealed in the Word, that there can remain no doubt about it among thoſe that have any ſaving acquaintance with the Life and Power of Religion.

This Communion with God is of that precious value with Believers, that it unſpeakably endears all thoſe Duties and Ordinances to them, which as means and inſtruments are uſeful to maintain it.

At death, the people of God part with all thoſe precious Ordinances and Duties, they being only deſigned for, and fitted to the preſent ſtate of Imperfection, Eph. 4. 12, 13. but not at all to their loſs, no more than it is to his that that loses the light of his Candle by the rising of the Sun. A Candle, a Star, is comfortable in the night; but useless when the Sun is up, and in its Meridian Glory. Christian, pray much, hear much, and drive as profitable a Trade as thou canst among the Ordinances of God, and Duties of Religion: For the time is at hand that you shall serve and wait on God no more this way.

But yet think not your Souls shall be discharged from all Worship and Service of God when you die: No, you will find Heaven to be a Temple built for Worship, and the Worship there to be much transcendent to all that in which you were here employ'd. The Sanctuary was a pattern of Heaven in this very respect, Heb. 9. 23. And on this very account it is called Sion in my Text, and the heavenly Jerusalem; as denoting a Church-state, and the spiritual Worship there performed by the Spirits of just Men made perfect.

Some help we may have to understand the nature thereof, by comparing it with that Worship and Service which we perform to God here in this state of Imperfection, and by considering the agreements and disagreements betwixt them. In this they agree, that the Worship above and below are both addressed and directed to one and the same Object, Father, Son and Spirit; all centers and terminates in God. They also agree in the general Quality, and common Nature; they are both spiritual Worship. But there are divers remarkable differences betwixt the one and the other, as will be manifest in the following Collation.

1. All our Worship on Earth is performed and transacted by Faith, as the instrument and mean thereof, Heb. 11. 6. He that cometh to God must believe, &c. In Heaven Faith ceaseth, and Sight takes place of it, 1 Cor. 5. 7. There we see what here we only believe. There are now before us Ordinances, Scriptures, Ministers, and the Assemblies of Saints in the places of Worship: but if we have any Communion with God, by or among these, we must set our selves to believe those we see not. By realizing and applying invisible things, we here get sometimes, and with no small pains, a taste of Heaven, and a transient glance of that Glory. In this service our faith is put hard to it, it must work and fight at once; resolutely act; whilst Sense and Reason stand by contradicting and quarrelling with it. And if with much ado, we get but one sensible touch of Heaven upon our Spirits, if we get a little spiritual warmth and melting of our Affections towards God, we call that day a good day, and it is so indeed.

But in Heaven all things are carried at a higher rate, the Joy of the Lord overflows us without any labour or pains of ours to procure it. We may say of it there, as the Prophet speaks of the dew and showers upon the grass, which tarrieth not for Man, nor waiteth for the Sons of Men, Mic. 5. 7.

2. No Grace is or can be acted here, without the clog of a contrary corruption upon its heel: Rom. 7. 21. When I would do good, evil is present with me. Every beam of Faith is presently darkened by a cloud of Unbelief, Mark 9. 24. Lord I believe, help thou my unbelief. We often Read in the Book of Experience (saith one) what an inconstant fickle thing the heart is in duties: Now it is with us, by and by it's fled away and gone; we know not where to find it: It is constant only in its inconstancy and lubricity. There is iniquity in our most holy things, which needs pardon, Exod. 28. 38. Our best Duties have enough in them to damn us, as well as our worst Sins: but in that perfect state above, Grace flows purely out of the Soul, as beams do from the Sun, or Chrystal streams from the purest Fountain. No impure, or imperfect acts proceed from Spirits made perfect.

3. Here the Graces of the Saints never, or very rarely acted in their highest and most intense degree. When they love God most fervently, there is some coldness in their love. Who comes up to the height of that rule, Mat. 22, 37. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy mind, and all thy strength? When we meditate on God, it is not in the depth of our thoughts, without some wanderings and extravagancies; 'tis very hard if not impossible for the Soul to stand long in its full bent to God.

But in Heaven it doth so, and will do so for ever, without any relaxation or remission of its fervour. Christ among the Saints and Angels in Heaven, is as a mighty Load-stone cast in among many Needles, which leap to him, and fix themselves inseparably upon him. They all act in glory as the fire doth here, to the utmost of their power and ability. There is no note lower, than Glory to God in the highest.

(4.) The most spiritual Souls on Earth, who live most with God, have and must have their daily and frequent intermissions. The necessities of the Body, as well as the defectiveness of their Graces; require and necessitate it to be so. Our hands with Moses will hang down and grow weary. Our Affections will cool and fall, do what we can.

But as the Spirits of just Men made perfect know no remissions in the degree, so neither any intermissions in the actings of their Grace: They shall serve him day and night in his Temple, Rev. 7. 15. You that would purchase the continuance of your spiritual Comforts but for a day, with all that you have in this World, will there enjoy them at full without any intermitting throughout eternity.

5. If the best hearts on earth be at any time more than ordinarily enlarged in spiritual comforts, they need presently some humbling providence to hide pride from their eyes. Even Paul himself must have a thorn in the flesh, a Messenger of Satan to buffet him. Bernard could never perform any duty with comfortable enlargement, but he seemed to hear his own heart whisper thus, Bene fecisti, Bernarde, O well done Bernard.

But in Heaven, the highest comforts are injoyed in the deepest humility, and the intire glory is ascribed to God without any unworthy defalcations. Rev. 4. 10. They put not the Crown upon their own heads, but Christ's; they cast down their own Crowns, and fall down at the feet of him that sitteth upon the Throne.

6. All

6. All Aſſemblies for Worſhip in this world are mixed: they conſiſt of regenerate and unregenerate, living and dead Souls; this ſpoils the harmony, and allays the comfort of mutual Communion. In a Congregation conſiſting of a thouſand perſons, Ah! how few comparatively are there that are heartily concerned in the Duty! But it is not ſo above. There are ten thouſand times ten thouſand, even thouſands of thouſands before the Throne, loving, adoring, praiſing, and triumphing together, and not a jarring ſtring in all their Harps.

7. Here the Worſhip of God is impured, mixed, and adulterated by the ſinful additions and inventions of Men. This gracious Souls groan under as a heavy burden, ſighing and praying for Reformation; as knowing they can expect no more of God's Preſence, than there is of his Order and Inſtitution in Worſhip. But above, all the Worſhip is pure, the leaſt pin in the heavenly Tabernacle is according to the perfect Pattern of the Divine Will.

8. We have here Duties of divers kinds and natures to perform. All our time is not to be ſpent in loving, praiſing, and delighting in God: but we muſt turn our ſelves alſo to ſearching, watching, and ſoul-humbling work. Sometimes we are called to get up our Hearts to the higheſt praiſe, and then to humble them to the duſt for ſin and judgments; one while to ſing his Praiſes, and another while to ſigh even to the breaking of our loins: but the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect, have but one kind of imployment, viz. praiſing, loving and delighting in God. There is no groaning, ſighing, ſearching or watching-work in that ſtate.

9. The moſt illuminated Believers on earth have but dark and crude apprehenſions of Chriſt's Interceſſion work in Heaven, or of the way and manner in which it is there performed by him. We know indeed that our High-Prieſt is for us enter'd within the Vail, Heb. 6. 20. That he appears in that moſt holy place for us, Heb. 9. 24. That he there repreſents his ſufferings for us to God, ſtanding before him as a Lamb that had been ſlain, Rev. 5. 6. That he offers up our Prayers with his Incenſe to God, Rev. 8. 3.

But the immediate intuition of the whole performance by the perſon of Chriſt in Heaven, the beholding of him in his work there, with the ſmiles and honours, the delight and ſatisfaction of the Father in his Perſon and Work; certainly this muſt be a far different thing, and what muſt make more deep and ſutable impreſſions upon our hearts than ever the moſt affecting view of them by Faith at this diſtance could do.

10. In ſuch raviſhing ſights, and joyful aſcriptions of Glory to him that ſitteth upon the Throne, and to the Lamb for evermore, all the ſeparated Spirits of the Juſt are imployed and wholly taken up in Heaven as they come in their ſeveral times thither; and will be ſo imployed in that Temple-ſervice unto the end of the world, when Chriſt ſhall deliver up the Kingdom to his Father, and thenceforth God ſhall be all in all.

The illuſtration and confirmation of this Aſſertion we have in theſe two or three particulars.

(1.) That all the Spirits of juſt men from the beginning of the World, until Chriſt's aſcenſion into Heaven, did enter into Heaven as a place of Reſt, as a City prepared for them of God, Heb. 11. 16. and did enjoy Bleſſedneſs and Glory there: but yet there ſeems to be an alteration even in Heaven it ſelf, ſince the Aſcenſion of Chriſt into it, and ſuch an alteration as advanceth the Glory thereof both to Angels and Saints. 'Heaven it ſelf (ſaith 'one who is now there) was 'not what it is, before the entrance of Chriſt into the Sanctuary for the adminiſtration of 'his Office. Neither the Saints departed, nor 'the Angels themſelves were participant of that 'Glory which now they are. Neither yet doth 'this argue any defect in Heaven, or the State 'thereof in its primitive conſtitution: For the 'perfection of any ſtate hath reſpect unto that 'order of things which it is originally ſuted 'unto. Take all things in the order of the firſt 'Creation, and with reſpect thereunto, Heaven 'was perfect in Glory from the beginning, &c. 'Whatever was their reſt, refreſh-'ment and bleſſedneſs; whatever 'were their enjoyments of the pre-'ſence of God; yet was there no Throne of 'Grace erected in Heaven, no high Prieſt ap-'pearing before it, no Lamb as it had been 'ſlain, no joint aſcription of Glory unto him 'that ſits upon the Throne, and to the Lamb 'for ever; God having ordained ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made perfect, Heb. 11. 40.

Dr. Owen's Chriſtologia, p. 158.

Priuſquam ad noſtra tempora perventum eſt.

Now both the Angels and Saints in Heaven do behold Chriſt in his Prieſtly Office within that Sanctuary, a ſight never ſeen in Heaven before.

(2.) This frame of heavenly Worſhip will continue as it is until the end of the World, and then another alteration will be made in the manner of his diſpenſatory Kingdom: For then he muſt deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; and then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be All in All, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 15. 24. 28. So that as the preſent ſtate of Heaven is not in all reſpects, what it was before Chriſt's Aſcenſion thither; ſo after the conſummation of the Mediatorial Kingdom, and the gathering all the Elect into Glory, it will not in all reſpects be what now it is.

Chriſt will never ceaſe to be the immediate Head of the whole glorified Creation. God having gathered all the Elect, both Angels and Men, unto a head in him, and he being the Knot or Center of that collective Body; the whole frame of the glorified Church would be diſſolved, ſhould he loſe his relation of a Head to it. Yea, I doubt not but he will for ever continue to be the medium of Communication betwixt God and his glorified Church: God will ſtill Communicate himſelf to us thro' Chriſt, and our adherence, love and delight, will ſtill be thro' Chriſt: In a word, whatever change ſhall be made, the Perſon of Chriſt, and therein his humane nature, ſhall ſtill continue to be the eternal Object of Divine Glory, Praiſe, and Worſhip, Rev. 22. 4.

But when he ſhall have gathered home all his Elect to Glory, he will reſign his Diſpensatory Kingdom, and become subject (as Man and as Head of that Body which he purchased) to his Father himself, that God may be All in All, as it is 1 Cor. 15. 28.

Nam si dispensativum hoc regnum nunquam traditurus esset, nunquam regni naturalis usum plenum esset recepturus. Junius.

(1) All in All, that is, All the Saints shall be filled and abundantly satisfied in and from God alone; there shall be no emptiness, no want, no complaint: For as there is water enough in one Sea to fill all Rivers, light enough in one Sun to illuminate all the World; so all Souls shall be eternally filled, satisfied, and blessed in one God. Surely there is enough in God for Millions of Souls; for if there be enough in God for all the Angels, Mat. 18. 10. yea enough in God for Jesus Christ, Col. 1. 19. there must be enough for all our Souls; the capacity of Angels is larger than ours; the capacity of Christ is larger than that of Angels: he that fills them, can and will therefore fill us, or be all in all to us.

(2.) All in All, that is, complete satisfaction to all the Saints in the absence of all other things, out of which they were wont to suck some comfort and delight in this World. He will now be instead of all; eminently all without them. We shall suck no more sweetness out of Food, Sleep, Relations, Ordinances, &c. there will be no more need or use of them, than there is of Candles in the Sunshine, Rev. 22. 5.

(3.) All in All, that is, God only shall be loved, praised, and admired by all the Saints, they shall love no Creature out of God, but all in God, or rather God in them all. This is that blessed state to which all things tend, for which the Angels and glorified Souls in Heaven long. Hence it is that there is joy in Heaven upon the conversion of any poor sinner on Earth; because thereby the Body of Christ mystical advanceth towards its fullness and completeness, Luke 15. 10. No sooner is a poor Soul struck by the word to the heart, and sent home crying, O sick! sick! sick of sin, and sick for Christ! but the news of it is quickly in Heaven, and is matter of great joy there because they wait as well as Christ, for the time of Consummation. To conclude, Those that went first to Heaven before Christ's Ascension, were fully at rest in God, and blessed in his enjoyment, and yet upon Christ's Ascension thither, their happiness was advanced: 'tis a new Heaven as it were to feed their eyes upon the Man Christ Jesus there. Those that now stand before the Throne, ravished with the Face of Christ, and ascribing Glory to him for ever, are also in a most blessed state, and are filled with the joy of the Lord. And yet, two things still remain to be farther done, before they are, as they shall be for ever, viz. the Restitution of their Bodies, which yet lie in the Dust, and the delivering up of the dispensatory Kingdom, upon the coming in of the fulness of all their fellow-Saints; and after that no more alteration for ever, but they shall be both in Soul and Body for ever with the Lord. What Tongue of Man or Angel can give us the complete Emphasis of that word, ever with the Lord? or that, of God's being All in All? O what hath God prepared for them that love him!

Prop. XII. It pleaseth God at some times, even in this life, to give some men the foresight and taste of that Blessedness, which holy separated Souls do now enjoy, and themselves shall shortly enjoy with God in Glory.

Specimens and Earnests of Heaven are no unknown things upon Earth. As the Grapes of Eshcol, so the joy of Heaven may be tasted before we come thither, and these Foresights and Prelibations of Heaven are either,

1. Extraordinary, or
2. Ordinary.

1. Extraordinary, for the way and manner; when the Soul is either, (1) Rapt from the Body for a short time, in an Extasy, when in a visional way heavenly things are presented to it: or, (2) When the bodily eye is elevated and strengthned above its natural vigor and ability, to behold the astonishing objects of the other World.

(1.) Of the first sort and rank was that famous Rapture of Paul, mentioned, 2 Cor. 12. 2, 3. I knew a Man in Christ fourteen years ago, (whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the Body I cannot tell, God knoweth) such an one caught up to the third Heaven, &c. * 'Tis questionable indeed, whether the Soul of the Apostle was really separated from his Body, whilst he suffered that Extasy, or whether his senses were only laid as it were asleep for that time; he himself could not determine the Question, much less can any other: but whether so or so, this seems evident, that his senses were for that time utterly useless to him. If his Body was not dead, it was all one as if it had been so, for any use his Soul then made of it. † In Extasies all the Senses and Powers are idle, except the Understanding: his Soul for that time seemed to be disjoined from his Body, much as a flame of fire, which you shall sometimes see to play and hover at a distance from the Wood, and then catching the Fewel again. Probably this was that Trance he fell into in the Temple, when he was praying, mentioned in Acts 22. 17.

* Non constat, an Anima Pauli fuerit tunc à corpore separata, cum ipse id se nescire fatetur. Unde quid illi circa abstractionem à sensibus reipsa acciderit, affirmare non possumus: videlicet num mortuo Corpore, per separationem animæ, extincti fuerint in eo sensus: vel non mortuo, consopiti duntaxat. Colleg. Conimbr. lib. 3. Art. 3. p. 512.

In this Rapture his Soul ascended above this World, it was caught up into Paradise, into the third Heaven, the place in which Christ's Soul was after his death: and there he heard those ἄρρητα ῥήματα, unspeakable words which it is not lawful for a Man to utter: For alas! poor Mortals cannot pronounce the Shibboleth of Heaven; the heavenly Inhabitants talk in no other Dialect; but the Language of Heaven is not properly spoken by any but the Inhabitants of Heaven. Now Paul was not admitted into their Society at that time, as he was at his death, but was only a Spectator, a stander-by, as the Angels are in the Assemblies of the Saints here on Earth. But O what a day was that day to his Soul! It was as one of the days of Heaven; no words could signify to another man what he felt, what he tasted in that hour. Such favours will not be indulged to many; he was a chosen Vessel, and appointed to extraordinary nary Sufferings for Christ, and it was necessary his Supports and Encouragements should be answerable.

Isaiah 6. 1, 2. Ezekiel 1 1. Dan. 10. 8, 9. Apoc 1. 17.

It was no less extraordinary and wonderful a Vision which Isaiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and John had: such Representations of God as overwhelmed them, and made Nature faint under them, and no wonder; for if the eyes of Creatures be so weak, that they cannot directly behold such a glorious Creature as the Sun; how much less can they bear the glorious Excellency and Majesty of God?

(2.) And sometimes without an Extasy, Representations of Christ and the Glory of Heaven have been made, and the very bodily eye fortified and elevated above its natural vigour and ability to behold them. Thus it was with Stephen at his Martyrdom, Acts 7, 55, 56. Who being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into Heaven, and saw the Glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. That this was not a sight of Faith, but an extraordinary sight by the bodily eye, is evident from its effect upon his outward Man, it made his face shine as the face of an Angel.

2. There are also beside this, ordinary and more common foretastes of Heaven, and the Glory to come, with which many Believers are favoured in this World. And such are those which come into the heart upon the steddy and more fixed views of the World to come by Faith, and the more raised spiritual actings of Grace in Duty. Believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable, and full of glory, 1 Pet. 1. 8. χαρᾷ ἀνεκλαλήτῳ καὶ δεδοξασμένῃ, with a glorified Joy, or a joy of the same kind and nature with the joy of glorified Spirits, tho' in an inferior and allayed degree.

And yet with the allowance of its Allay and Rebatement, it is like new Wine put into old and crazy Bottles, which is ready to make them fly; and would do so, should they be of any long continuance. Stay me (saith the Spouse) with Flaggons, comfort me with Apples, I am sick of love, Cant. 2. 5. The Sickness was not the sickness of Desire, or of Grief; of that she had complained before: but the sickness of Love. (i. e.) She was ready to faint under the insupportable weight of Christ's manifested and sealed Love, not able to bear what she felt, pained with the Love of Christ; and the desired Cure speaks this to be her Case, Stay me with Flaggons, comfort me with Apples. As if she had said, Lord, support and underprop my soul, for it reels, staggers, and fails under the pressure and weight of thy Love. Much like the case of a holy Man, who cried out, under the overwhelming sense of the Love of Christ shed abroad into his heart in prayer, Hold, Lord, hold, thy poor Creature is a Clay vessel, and can hold no more. Tho' these Joys bring not the Soul into a perfect Extasy, they certainly bring it as near as may be to it. Mr. Fox tells us of one Giles of Bruxels, a godly Martyr, who in Prison spent most of his time apart from the rest in secret Prayer; in which his Soul was so ardent and intent, that he often forgot himself and the time; and when he was called to Meat, he neither saw nor heard those that stood by him, till he was lifted up by the arms; and then he would gently speak to them, as one newly awaked out of a sweet sleep. These foretastes of Heaven may, from the manner of their conveyance, be distinguished into,

Acts and Mon. 811.

1. Mediate: And, 2. Immediate.

1. Mediate, in and by the previous use and exercise of Faith, heart examination, &c. the Spirit of God concurring with, and blessing of such Duties as these, helps the Soul by them to a sight of its interest in Christ, and the Glory to come; which being gained, Joy is no more under the Soul's command. I have with good assurance this account of a Minister, 'who being alone in a journey, and willing 'to make the best improvement he could of 'that day's Solitude, set himself to a close ex-'amination of the state of his Soul, and then of 'the Life to come, and the manner of its being 'and living in Heaven, in the views of all 'those things which are now pure Objects of 'Faith and Hope. After a while he perceived 'his thoughts begin to fix, and come closer 'to these great and astonishing things than was 'usual; and as his Mind settled upon them, 'his Affections began to rise with answerable 'livelines and vigour.

'He therefore (whilst he was yet master 'of his own thoughts) lifted up his heart to God 'in a short ejaculation that God would so or-'der it in his Providence, that he might meet 'with no interruption from Company, or any 'other Accident in that Journey, which was 'granted him: for in all that day's Journey, 'he neither met, overtook, or was overtaken 'by any. Thus going on his way, his thoughts 'began to swell and rise higher and higher 'like the waters in Ezekiel's Vision, till at last 'they became an overflowing flood. Such 'was the intention of his mind, such the ra-'vishing tastes of heavenly Joys, and such the 'full assurance of his interest therein, that he 'utterly lost a sight and sense of this World, 'and all the concerns thereof; and for some 'hours knew no more where he was, than if 'he had been in a deep sleep upon his Bed. At 'last he began to perceive himself very faint, 'and almost choked with blood; which run-'ning in abundance from his nose, had disco-'lour'd his Clothes and his Horse from the 'shoulder to the hoof. He found himself al-'most spent and Nature to faint under the 'pressure of Joy unspeakable and unsupporta-'ble; and at last perceiving a Spring of water 'in his way, he with some difficulty alighted 'to cleanse and cool his face and hands which 'were drenched in Blood, Tears and Sweat.

'By that Spring he sat down, and washed; 'earnestly desiring if it were the pleasure of 'God, that it might be his parting-place from 'this World: he said, Death had the most a-'miable face in his eye that ever he beheld, 'except the face of Jesus Christ which made 'it so; and that he could not remember (tho' 'he believed he should die there) that he had 'once thought of his dear Wife or Children 'or any other earthly Concernment.

'But having drank of that Spring, his Spi-'rits revived, the Blood stenched, and he 'mounted his Horse again; and on he went in 'the same frame of Spirit till he had finished 'a Journey of near thirty miles, and came at 'night to his Inn, Where being come, he great'ly admired how he came thither, that his 'Horse, without his direction, had brought 'him thither and that he fell not all that day; 'which past not without several Trances of 'considerable continuance.

'Being alighted, the Innkeeper came to 'him, with some astonishment, (being ac-'quainted with him formerly) O Sir, said he, 'what is the matter with you? You look 'like a dead Man. Friend, replied he, I was 'never better in my life. Shew me my Cham-'ber, cause my Cloak to be cleansed, burn 'me a little Wine, and that is all I desire of 'you for the present. Accordingly it was 'done, and a Supper sent up, which he could 'not touch; but requested of the people, 'they would not trouble or disturb him for 'that night. All this night passed without one 'wink of sleep, tho' he never had a sweeter 'nights rest in all his life. Still, still, the Joy 'of the Lord overflowed him, and he seem-'ed to be an Inhabitant of the other World. 'The next morning being come, he was ear-'ly on horseback again, fearing the Diver-'tisement in the Inn might bereave him of his 'Joy; for he said it was now with him, as 'with a Man that carries a rich Treasure a-'bout him, who suspects every Passenger to be 'a Thief: but within a few hours he was sen-'sible of the ebbing of the Tide; and before 'night, tho' there was a heavenly serenity 'and sweet peace upon his Spirit, which con-'tinued long with him, yet the Transports of 'Joy were over, and the fine edg of his delight 'blunted. He many years after called that 'day one of the days of Heaven, and profess'd 'he understood more of the Life of Heaven 'by it, than by all the Books he ever read, or 'Discourses he ever entertained about it. This was indeed an extraordinary foretaste of Hea-ven for degree, but it came in the ordinary way and method of Faith and Meditation.

2. There are also immediate Illapses of hea-venly Joy into the hearts of Believers at some times; of which we may speak as the Prophet doth of the Dew and Rain, that it tarrieth not for Man, nor waiteth for the Sons of Men, a sur-prizing Light and Joy, like that Cant. 6. 12. Or ever I was aware, my Soul made me like the Cha-riots of Aminadab.

There is a Witness of the Spirit distinct from that of Water and Blood, 1 John 5. 8. that is, a Witness, or Sealing, which comes not in an argumentative way, by reasoning from either Justification or Sanctification; but seems to come immediately from the Spirit. I know both sorts of Testimonies, how clear and sweet soever they are for the present, are liable afterwards to be called into question; but certainly, during the abode of them upon the Soul, they are no less than a short Salvation, a real participation of the Joy of the Lord. And that which makes them so ravishing and transporting, is,

(1.) The infinite weight with which the concerns of Eternity lie upon the hearts and thoughts of the People of God; nothing lies so near to their Spirits in all the World, as the matters of Salvation do, and have still done ever since God throughly awakened them in their first effectual Conviction. 'Tis said of Luther, There was such a strong im-pression of God upon his Spirit in his first Conviction, that there was neither Heat, nor Blood, nor Sense, nor Speech discernable in him. Tho' it rise to that height but in a few, yet it settles in a deep, serious, and most solemn sense and sollicitude in all. This heightens the Joy.

(2.) The restlesness of the Soul, whilst mat-ters of Salvation hang in a dubious suspence must needs proportionably overflow it with Joy when God shall clear it. It was the saying of one, and is the sense of many more, I have born (said she) seven Children, and they have all cost me dear; yet could I be well content to bear them all over again, for one glimpse of the Love of God to my Soul. This heigh-tens the Joy above expression.

And now, having explained the substance of the Doctrine in these twelve Propositions, it re-mains, that as a Mantissa, or Cast upon the whole, I farther clear what belongs to this Subject, in the solution of several Queries about the Soul in its unbodied and separate state: and tho' the Nature of some of these Queries may seem too cu-rious, yet I shall labour to speak according to the Rules of Sobriety, and contain my self within the line of Modesty, in what I shall speak about them: And the first is this,

Query 1. Whether any Notion or Conception can be formed of a separate Soul? And if so, How we may be assisted duly to form it, and conceive of it?

Sol. 1. It must be acknowledged not only very difficult, but an impossible task, for a Soul immersed in Matter, and so unacquain-ted with its own Nature and Powers, as it is in its embodied state, to gain a perfect, clear, and adequate Conception of what it shall be in the World to come. Expect not then a per-fect Image, much less any magnificent Draught of this excellent Creature: this would be the same thing as to go about to depaint the Sun in its Glory, Motions, and Influences, with a Pencil. I shall think I have done enough, if I can but give you any umbrage or faint repre-sentation of this sublime and spiritual Being, and the manner of its subsisting and acting out of the Body. For seeing it is by Nature in-visible, and in most of its Actions (whilst it is in the state of Composition) it makes the same use of the Body and natural Spirits, that a Scribe doth of his Pen and Ink, without which he can-not decipher the Characters which are formed in his fancy; it must needs be difficult to con-ceive how it subsists and acts in its separate state.

Sol. 2. But tho' we acknowledge it to be a great ficulty to trace it beyond the limits of this World, tho' we perceive nothing to depart from the Body at the instant of its expiration but a puff of breath, which vanishes like smoke into the Air; and tho' Atheistical Wits daringly pronounce an immaterial Substance to be a meer Jargon, a contradiction in terminis; which being joined together, destroy one another: Yet all this doth not make the Notion of a separate Soul impossible, much less under-mine its Existence in its unbodied and lonely state; the Scriptures having so abundantly ob-viated all these Atheistical Suggestions, by so many plain discoveries of the happiness of some an and misery of others after this Life. Yea, my Text answers us, that Death is so far from destroying or annihilating, that it perfects the Spirits of the Just.

Sol. 3. There can be no more difficulty in conceiving of a separate Soul, than there is in conceiving of an Angel. For it is certain that a separated Soul and an Angel are the liveliest and clearest Representations of each other, in the whole number of created Beings. Some make the difference betwixt them little more, than of a Sword in the Scabbard from one that is naked. A Soul is but a Genius in the Body, and a Genius (or Angel) is a Soul out of a Body. An Angel (saith another) is a complete and perfect Soul, a Soul an imperfect and incomplete Angel.

Dr. More's Immortality of the Soul, l. 2 c. 7. § 4, & 8. Bell. de Ascen. mentis.

The separate Soul doth not become an Angel by putting off the Body; they are, and still will be divers Species: but in this they agree, that in their common Nature they are both Spirits, that is, immaterial Substances, endued with Understanding, Will, and active Power. And I know not why the one should not be as intelligible as the other; or if there be any advantage, the Soul certainly must have it, seeing our acquaintance with Souls is much more intimate than with Angels. Angels indeed have larger Capacities, and have no natural inclination to be embodied as Souls have; but their common Nature, as they are Spirits, is the same: And if we can conceive of one, we may also of the other.

Sol. 4. But the difficulty seems to lie in this, how the Soul can subsist alone without a Body; and how the habits of Grace, which were infused into it in this Life by Sanctification, do inhere in it, or can be reduced into act by it, when it hath no bodily Organs to work by.

As to the first, there is no difficulty at all, if we once rightly apprehend what is meant when we call it a spiritual Substance; that is, a Being by it self, independent upon any other Creature as to its existence, as was opened before: the Soul depends not for its Life upon the Body, but the Body upon the Soul. It is the same Sword when it is drawn, as it was when sheathed in its Scabbard; the Soul is as much it self when separated from the Body, as it was when united with it; its Being is independent on it, it can live and act in a Body, and it can do so without it: for it is a distinct Being from its Body, a substantial Being by it self. And,

Sol. 5. As for the habits of Grace which accompany it to Heaven, it would much facilitate our apprehension of it, if we but compare acquired and infused habits with each other. 'Tis true, they are of different Natures and Originals, but the Soul is the subject of them both, and their inhesion and improvement is much after the same manner.

Take we then an acquired habit into consideration, which is nothing else but a permanent Quality rendring the subject of it prompt and ready to perform a work with ease; suppose that of Musick, or Writing, and we shall find these habits to be safely lodged in the Soul, as well when the Body is laid into the deepest sleep, which is the Image of Death, as when it is awake and most active; for they are both Artists when asleep, and need learn no new Rules to play or write when you awake them: which shews the habits to be permanently rooted in their minds.

Infused habits of Grace are as deeply rooted in the Soul, yea, deeper than any acquired habit can be: for when knowledge and tongues shall be done away, Love abideth, 1 Cor. 13. 8. viz. after Death, when the Body is asleep in the Grave.

Sol. 6. Add hereto, that these habits of Grace are inseparably rooted or lodged in a subject which is by nature a Spirit, that is to say, an intelligent active Being, able to use its Faculties of * Understanding, Will, and Affections, and consequently in their use to reduce these habits of Grace inherent in them into act, without the help of the Body: For to suppose otherwise, were to dispirit it, and destroy the very Nature of it.

* The Understanding and Will are the primary Faculties of the Soul, and are therefore called Inorganical, because not fixed to any Member of the Body, as the sensitive Appetite and locomotive powers are to their proper Organs. The Soul therefore hath the free use and exercise of them in its separate state.

Moreover, let this Spirit thus furnished with gracious habits be now considered in separation from the Body, in which state it enjoyeth and rejoiceth in a double Privilege it never had before, viz. Perfection both of it self, and of its Graces, and the nearest access it is capable of; 2 Cor. 5. 6. Absent from the Body, and present with the Lord. It hath now no Body to clog or cloud it, nor can it complain of distance from God as it did in this World. Oh! at what rate must we conceive the love and delight of a Soul under these great Advantages, to cast out their very Spirits, as I may say, in their glorious Activities and Exercises! Well then, here you find 'a Spirit naturally endued with Understanding, Will and Affections: in these Faculties 'and Affections the habits of Grace permanently rooted, which therefore accompany it in 'its ascension to Glory: an ability to use and 'exercise their Faculties and Graces, and that 'in a more excellent degree and manner, than 'it did or could in this World, the subject and 'habits inherent being now both made perfect: 'the clog of Flesh knock'd off, and all distance 'from God removed, by its coming home to 'him, even as near as the capacity of the Soul 'can admit. Conceive such a Spirit so qualified, 'now rank'd in its proper order among innu'merable other holy and blessed Spirits which 'surround the Throne of God, beholding his 'Face with infinite delectation, and acting all 'its Powers and Graces to the Highest in the 'worshipping, praising, loving, and admiring 'him that sitteth on the Throne, and the Lamb 'for evermore. And then you have a true, tho' imperfect Idea or Notion of the Spirit of a just Man made perfect.

I will not here make use of the other Glass to represent a damned Soul, separate for a time from its Body, and for ever from the Lord: That will be shewn you in its proper place.

Qu. 2. Whether there be any difference in the separation of gracious Souls from their Bodies? And if so, in what particulars doth the difference appear?

Sol. For the clear stating and satisfying this Question, I will lay down some things negatively, and some things positively about it. On the negative part I desire two things may be noted.

1. That

1. That there is no difference betwixt the separation of one gracious Soul and another, in point of safety. Every regenerate Soul is fully secured in and by Jesus Christ from the danger of perishing, and is out of hazard of the Wrath to come.

This must needs be so, because all that are in Christ are equally justified by the imputation of Christ's Righteousness, without difference, to them all; Rom. 3. 22. Even the Righteousness of God, which is by Faith of Jesus Christ unto all, and upon all them that believe, for there is no difference: By vertue whereof, they are all equally secured from Wrath to come, one as well as another. As all that sailed with Paul, so all that die in Christ come safe to the shoar of Glory, and not one of them is lost. The sting of Death smites none that are in Christ.

2. There is no difference betwixt the departing Souls of just Men, in respect of the supporting presence of God with them in that their hour of distress; that Promise belongs to them all, Psal. 91. 15. I will be with him in trouble; and so doth that, Heb. 13. 5. I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. Their God is certainly with them all, to order the circumstances of their death, and all the Occurrences of that day, to his Glory, and their Good. Supports I have (said a good Man in such an hour) tho' Suavities I want; and so they have also who meet with the hardest tug at death.

But notwithstanding their equality in these Privileges, there is a great difference betwixt the departing Souls of just Men. And this difference is manifest both in the

1. External } Circumstances of
2. Internal } their Death.

1. In the External Circumstances of their Death, all have not one and the same passage to Heaven in all respects; for,

(1.) Some go thither by the ordinary road of a natural death from their Beds, and the arms of lamenting Friends, to the arms and bosom of Jesus Christ: But others swim through the Red Sea to Canaan, from a Scaffold to the Throne, from a Gibbet or Stake to their Father's house, from insulting Enemies to their triumphant Brethren, the Palm-bearing multitude. This is a rough, but honourable way to Glory.

(2.) Some lie long under the hand of death, before it dispatch them, it approaches them by slow and lingring paces, they feel every step of death distinctly as it comes on towards them: But others are favoured with a quick dispatch, a short passage from hence to Glory. Hezekiah feared a pining sickness, Isa. 38. 10, 12. what he feared, many feel. O how many days, yea weeks and months, have many gracious Souls dwelt upon the brink of the Pit, crying, How long, Lord, how long!

(3.) The pains and throes of Death are more acute and sharp to some of God's people than to others: Death is bitter in the most mild and gentle form of it. Two such dear and intimate friends as the Soul and Body are, cannot part without some tears, groans, or sighs; and those more deep and emphatical than the groans and sighs of the living use to be: But yet (comparatively speaking) the death of one may be stiled sweet and easy to another's. Latimer and Ridley found it so, tho' burnt in the same flame.

In this respect all things come alike to all, and the same difference is found in the worst, as well as in the best Men: Some like Sheep are laid in the Grave, Psal. 49. 14. others die in the bitterness of their Soul, Job 21. 25. and by this no Man knows either love or hatred.

2. There are besides these, some remarkable Internal differences in the dissolution of good Men: the sum whereof is in this,

1*st*. That some gracious Souls have a very hard, strait, difficult entrance into Heaven: just as it is with Ships that sail by a very bare wind; all their art, care and pains, will but just weather some Head-land or Cape: they steer fast by some dangerous Rock or Sand, and with a thousand fears and dangers, win their Port at last. Saved they are, but yet (to use the Apostle's phrase) scarcely saved, or saved as by fire. And this difficulty ariseth to them from one or all these causes:

(1) It ordinarily ariseth from the weakness of their faith, which is in many Souls without either the light of evidence or strength of reliance; neither able to dissolve their doubts, nor steadily repose their hearts: and thus they die, much at the rate they lived, poor doubting and cloudy, tho' precious Souls. They can neither speak much of the comfort of past experiences, nor of the present foretastes of Heaven.

(2.) The violent assaults and batteries of Temptations make the passage exceeding difficult to some. O the sharp conflicts and dreadful combates many poor Souls endure upon a death-bed! O the charges of hypocrisy fortified by neglects of duty, formality, and by-ends in duty, falls into a sin after conviction and humiliation, &c. all which the Soul is apt to yield to, and admit the dreadful conclusion.

These are the last, and therefore oft-times the most violent conflicts. The malice of Satan will send them halting to Heaven, if he cannot bar them out of it.

(3.) To conclude: The hiding of God's face, puts terror into the face of death, and makes a dying day a dark and gloomy day. All darkness disposes to fear, but none like inward darkness. They must like a Ship in distress, venture into the Harbour in the dark, tho' they see not their Land-marks.

2*dly*. But others have the privilege of an εὐθανασία, easy death, a comfortable and sweet passage into Glory, through the broad gate of assurance, 2 Pet. 1. 11. even an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom. What a difference doth God make, not only betwixt those that have Grace, and those that have none, but betwixt gracious Souls themselves in this matter; The things which usually make an easy passage to Heaven are,

(1.) A Pardon clear'd, Isa. 33. 24. The sense of Pardon swallows up the sense of Pain.

(2.) A Heart weaned from this World, Heb. 11. 13, 9, 16. A Heart loosed from the World, is a foot out of the snare. Mortified limbs are cut off from the Body with little pain.

(3.) Fervent love to Christ, and longings to be with him, Phil. 1. 23. He that loves Christ fervently, must needs loath absence from Christ proportionably.

(4.) Purity and peace of Conscience make a death-bed soft and easy. The strains and wounds of Conscience in the time of life, are so so many Thorns in our bed or pillow in the time of death, 1 John 3. 21. But integrity gives boldness.

(5.) The work of obedience faithfully finished, or a steddy course of holiness throughout our Life, is that which usually yields much peace and joy in Death, Acts 20. 24.

(6.) But above all the presence of the Comforter with us in that cloudy and dark day, turns it into one of the days of Heaven, 1 Pet. 4. 14. And thus you see, tho' all dying Christians be equally safe, and all supported and carried through by the power of God; yet their farewels to the Body are not alike chearful. There are many external, and internal circumstantial differences in the deaths of good Men, as well as a substantial and essential difference betwixt all their deaths, and the death of a wicked Man.

Quest. III. Whether any Souls have notices, and forewarnings given them by Signs or Predictions in an extraordinary way, of their approaching Separation?

Terms opened. The terms of this Question need a little explanation. Let us therefore briefly consider what is meant by Signs, what by Predictions, and what by extraordinary Signs and Predictions.

Signum est quod aliud repræsentat quam quod cernitur.

A Sign is that which represents something else to us than that which is seen or heard. And a sign of death, is that which gives notice to our minds that our departure is at hand.

Prædicere est aliquem de re aliqua eventura præmonere.

A Prediction is a fore-warning of a person more plainly and expresly of any thing which is afterwards to fall out or come to pass: and a Prediction of Death is an express notice or message informing us of our own, or of another's Death, to the end the mind may be actually disposed to an expectation thereof.

Of Signs, some are ordinary, and natural; some extraordinary, and supernatural, or at least preternatural.

There are natural Symptoms and Prognosticks of Death which are common to most dying persons, and by which Physicians inform themselves and others of the state of the Sick. These are out of this Question, we have nothing to do with them here; but I am enquiring after extraordinary Signs and Predictions by words, or things forewarning us immediately, or by others, of our approaching Death. The Question is, Whether such intimations of Death be at any time truly given unto Men; or whether we are to take them for fabulous reports, and superstitious fancies?

For the Negative, the following grounds are laid.

Reasons for the Negative. Reason I. The sufficient ordinary provision God hath made in this case, renders all such extraordinary notices and intimations of our Death needless: and be sure the most wise God doth nothing in vain. We have three standing, ordinary, and sufficient means to premonish us of our departure hence, viz. the Scriptures, Reason, and daily Examples of Mortality before our Eyes. The Scriptures tell us our life is but a vapour, which appeareth for a little while, and then vanisheth away; James 4. 14. That our days are but as a hand breadth, and that every man in his best estate is vanity, Psal. 39. 5.

Reason tells us, so feeble a tie as our Breath is, can never secure our lives long. The living know that they must die, Eccles. 9. 5. The radical moisture which is daily consuming by the flame of life, must needs be spent e're long.

And all the Graves we see opened so frequently are sufficient warnings that we our selves must shortly follow. Therefore, as there was no need of Manna when Bread might be had in an ordinary way, so neither is there need of extraordinary signs when God hath abundantly furnished us with standing and ordinary means for this purpose.

Reason II. And as the Scriptures render such signs needless, so they seem to be directly against them. Christ commands us to watch, because we know not in what hour the Lord cometh. Yea, even Isaac himself, an extraordinary person, and endued with a Spirit of Prophecy, whereby he foretold the condition of his Sons after him, yet it's said, Gen. 27. 2. That he knew not the day of his death. And it is not reasonable to think that common persons should know that, which extraordinary and prophetick persons knew not.

Reason III. All Mankind belong either to God or the Devil. To such as belong to God, such extraordinary warnings are needless, for they have a watchful Principle within them, which continually prompts them to mind their change; and besides, death cannot endanger those that are in Christ, how suddenly or unexpectedly soever it should befal them.

And for wicked men, it cannot be thought God should favour and privilege them in this matter above his own Children; and as for Satan, he knows not the time of their death himself: and if he did, it would thwart his design and interest to discover it to them, Luke 11. 21. So that upon the whole, it should seem such Signs and Predictions are of no use, and the relations and reports of them fabulous.

E contra. But tho' these Reasons make the common and daily use of such Signs and Predictions needless, yet they destroy not the credibility of them in all cases, and at all times. For,

1. There are recorded instances in Scripture of premonition and predictions of the Death of persons. Thus the Death of Abijah was foretold to his Mother by the Prophet, and the precise hour thereof, which fell out answerably, 1 King. 14. 6. 12. And thus the Death of the King of Assyria was foretold exactly both as to kind and place, Isa. 37. 7, 37, 38.

2. These Predictions serve to other ends and uses sometimes, than the preparation of the persons warned, even to display the foreknowledge, power and justice of God in marking out his Enemies for ruin. And thus the Lord is known by the judgments that he executeth, Psa. 9. 16.

Thus Mr. Knox predicted the very place and manner of the death of the Laird of Grange. You have sometime seen the courage and constancy of the Laird of Grange in the cause of God, and now that unhappy Man is casting himself away. I pray you go to him from me (said Mr. Knox) and tell him that unless he forsakes that wicked course he is in, the Rock wherein he confideth, shall not defend him, nor the carnal Wisdom of that Man (meaning the young young Leshington) whom he counteth half a God, shall help him: but he shall be shamefully pull'd out of that Nest, and his Carcass hung before the Sun. And even so it fell out the following year, when the Castle was taken, and his Body hang'd out before the Sun. Thus God exactly fulfilled the Prediction of his Death.

The same Mr. Knox in the year 1566. being in the Pulpit at Edinburgh upon the Lord's day, a Paper was given up to him, among many others, wherein these words were scoffingly written concerning the Earl of Murray, who was slain the day before, Take up the Man whom ye accounted another God. At the end of the Sermon, Mr. Knox bewailed the loss of the Church and State by the Death of that vertuous Man; and then added, There is one in this company that makes this Murder the subject of his Mirth, for which all good men should be sorry; but I tell him he shall die where there should be none to lament him. The Man that wrote the Paper, was one Thomas Metellan, a young Gentleman, who shortly after, in his Travels, died in Italy, having none to assist, or lament him.

3. And others have had Premonitions and Signs of their own Deaths, which accordingly fell out. And these Premonitions have been given them, sometimes by strong irresistible Impressions upon their Minds, sometimes in Dreams, and sometimes by unusual Elevations of their Spirits in Duties of Communion with God.

(1) Some have had strong and irresistible impressions of their approaching change made upon their Minds. So had Sir Anthony Wingfield, who was slain at Brest, Anno 1594. At his undertaking of that Expedition, he was strongly persuaded it would be his death; and therefore so settled and disposed of his Estate, as one that never reckoned to return again. And the day before he died, he took order for payment of his debts, as one that strongly presaged the time was now at hand, which accordingly fell out the next day.

Sir John Norris his Expedition. pag 46.

Much of the same nature was that of the late Earl of Marlborough, who fell in the Holland War. He not only presaged his own fall in that Encounter, (which was exactly answered in the event) but left behind him that memorable and excellent Letter, which evidenced to all the World, what deep fixed apprehensions of Eternity it had left upon his Spirit. Many examples of this nature might be produced, of such as have in their perfect health foretold their own death; and others who have dropt such passages as were afterwards better understood by their sorrowful friends, than when they first dropt from their lips.

(2.) Others have been premonished of their death by Dreams, sometimes their own, and sometimes others. The learned and judicious Amyraldus gives us this well attested relation of Lewis of Bourbon, That a little before his journey from Dreux, he dreamed that he had fought three successful Battels, wherein his three great Enemies were slain, but that at last he himself wasmortally wounded; and that after they were laid one uponanother, he also was laid upon the dead Bodies. The event was remarkable; for Marescbal of St. Andree was killed at Dreux, the Duke of Guise at Orleans, the Constable of Montmorancy at St. Denis: and this was the Triumvirate which had sworn the ruin of those of the Reformed Religion, and the destruction of that Prince. At last he himself was slain at Basac, as if there had been a continuation of deaths and funerals.

Amyraldus of Divine Dreams, pag. 122, 123.

Suetonius in the life of Julius Cæsar, tells us that the night before he was slain, he had divers premonitions thereof, for that night all the doors and windows of his chamber flew open; his wife also dreamed that Cæsar was slain, and that she had him in her arms. The next day he was slain in Pompey's Court, having receiv'd 23 wounds in his Body.

Pamelius in the life of Cyprian tells us for a most certain and well attested truth, that upon his first entrance into Garubis (the place of his banishment) it was revealed to him in a dream, or vision, that upon that very day twelvemonth, he should be consummate: which accordingly fell out; for a little before the time prefixed, there came suddenly two Apparitors to bring him before the new Proconsul Galeius, by whom he was condemned, as having been a Standard-bearer of his Sect, and an Enemy of the Gods. Whereupon he was condemned to be beheaded, a multitude of Christians following him crying, Let us die together with him.

Pamelius in vita Cyprian.

And as remarkable is that recorded by the learned and ingenious Dr. Sterne, of Mr. Usher of Ireland, a man, saith he, of great integrity, dear to others by his merits, and my kinsman in blood: who upon the 28*th* day of July 1657. went from this to a better World. About four of the Clock the day before he died, a Matron, who died a little before, and whilst living was dear to Mr. Usher, appeared to him in his sleep, and invited him to sup with her the next night: he at first denied her, but she more vehemently pressing her request on him, at last he consented, and that very night he died.

Dr. Sterne's dissertatio de morte, p. 163.

I have also the fullest assurance that can be of the truth of this following Narrative. A Person yet living was greatly concerned about the welfare of his dear Father and Mother, who were both shut up in London in the time of the great Contagion in 1665. Many Letters he sent to them, and many hearty prayers to Heaven for them. But about a fortnight before they were infected, he fell about break of day into this dream, that he was in a great Inn which was full of company, and being very desirous to find a private room, where he might seek God for his parents life, he went from room to room, but found company in them all; at last casting his eye into a little chamber which was empty, he went into it, lockt the door, kneeled down by the outside of the bed, fixing his eyes upon the plaister'd wall within side the bed; and whilst he was vehemently begging of God the life of his Friends, there appeared upon the plaster of the wall before him the Sun and the Moon, shining in their full strength. The sight at first amaz'd and discomposed him so far, that he could not continue his Prayer, but kept his eye fixed upon the body of the Sun; at last a small line or ring of black, no bigger than that of a Text-pen, circled the Sun, which increasing sensibly, eclipsed in a little time the the whole Body of it, and turned it into a blackish colour; which done, the figure of the Sun was immediately changed into a perfect Death's head, and after a little while vanished quite away; the Moon still continued shining as before; but whilst he intently beheld it, it also darkned in like manner, and turned also into another Death's head and vanished. This made so great an impression upon the beholder's mind, that he immediately awaked in confusion and perplexity of thoughts about his dream; and awaking his Wife, related the particulars to her with much emotion and concernment; but how to apply it he could not presently tell, only he was satisfied that the dream was of an extraordinary nature. At last Joseph's dream came to his thoughts with the like Emblems, and their interpretation, which fully satisfied him that God had warned and prepared him thereby for a sudden parting with his dear Relations, which answerably fell out in the same order, his Father dying that day fortnight following, and his Mother just a month afterwards.

I know there is much vanity in dreams, and yet I am fully satisfied some are weighty, significant, and declarative of the purposes of God.

(3.) Lastly, An unusual and extraordinary elevation of the Soul to God, and enlargement in Communion with him, hath been a signifying forerunner of the death of some good men. For as the Body hath its levamen anteferale, lightning before death, and is more vegete and brisk a little before its dissolution; so it is sometimes with the Soul also. I have known some persons to arrive on a sudden to such heights of love to God, and vehement longings to be dissolved, that they might be with Christ, that I could not but look upon it, as Christ did upon the box of Ointment, as done against their death. And so indeed it hath proved in the event.

Thus it was with that renowned Saint, Mr. Brewen of Stapleford: as he excelled others in the holiness of his life, so he much excelled himself towards his death, his motions towards Heaven being then most vigorous and quick. The day before his last sickness, he had such extraordinary enlargements of heart in his Closet-Duty, that he seemed to forget all the concernments of his Body, and this lower World. And when his Wife told him, Sir, I fear you have done your self hurt with rising so early; he answered, 'If you had seen such glorious things as I saw this morning in private prayer with God, you would not have said so: for they were so wonderful and unspeakable, that whether I was in the Body, or out of the Body, with Paul, I cannot tell.'

And so it was with learned and holy Mr. Rivet, who seemed as a man in Heaven, just before he went thither. And so it hath been with thousands beside these. I confess it is not the fruit of every gracious Soul, (as was shew'd you in the last Question) nor doth it make any difference as to the safety of the Soul, whatever it makes as to comfort. Let all therefore labour to make sure their Union with Christ, and live in the daily Exercises of Grace in the duties of Religion: and then, tho' God should give them no such extraordinary warnings one way or another, they shall never be surprized to death to their loss, let it come never so unexpectedly upon them.

Quest. It may be also queried whether Satan by his Instruments may not foretel the death of some men? How else did the Witch of Endor foretel the death of Saul? And the Southsayers the death of Cæsar upon the Ides, (i. e.) the fifteenth day of March, which was the fatal day to him?

Sol. 4. Foreknowledge of things to come which appear not in their next causes, is certainly the Lord's Prerogative; Isa. 41. 23. Whatever therefore Satan doth in this matter, must be done either by conjecture, or commission. As to the case of Saul, 'tis not to be questioned but that Satan knowing the Kingdom was made to David by promise, and that the Lord was departed from Saul, and seeing how near the Armies were to a Battle, might strongly conjecture and conclude, and accordingly tell him To morrow thou shalt be with me, 1 Sam. 28. 19.

And so for the death of Cæsar, The Devil knew the Conspiracy was strong against him, and the Plot laid for that day; and so it was both easy to him to reveal it to the Southsayers, and his interest to do it, thereby to bring that cursed Art into reputation.

As for other signs and forwarnings of death, by the unusual resort of doleful Creatures, as Owls and Ravens, vulgarly accounted ominous: Wall watches, upon this account called Death watches; and the eating of wearing apparel by Rats: I look upon them generally as superstitious fancies not worthy to be regarded among Christians. God may, but I know not what ground we have to believe that he doth, commissionate such Creatures to bring us the message of death from him. To conclude therefore Let no man expect or depend upon any such extraordinary premonitions and warnings of his change, or neglect his daily work and duty of preparation for it. We have warnings in the Word, in the examples of Mortality frequently before us, in all the Diseases and decays we often feel in our own Bodies; and by the signs of the times, which threaten death and desolation. Be ye therefore always ready, for ye know not in what Watch of the night your Lord cometh.

Quest. IV. Whether separated Souls have any knowledge of, or commerce and intercourse with men in this life: and if not, What is to be thought of the Apparitions of the Dead?

1. By separated Souls, understand the departed Souls both of Godly and Ungodly indifferently, and not as it is restrained to one sort only in the Text; for of both it is pretended there are frequent Apparitions after death.

2. By the knowledge such Souls are supposed to have after death both of persons and things in this lower World, we understand not a general knowledge, which one sort of them have of the state and condition of the Church militant on earth; for this we think cannot be denied to the Spirits of the Just made perfect, seeing they are still fellow-Members with us of the same mystical Body of Christ, and do behold our High-Priest appearing before God, and offering up our prayers for us, and long for the consummation of the Body of Christ, as well as cry for vengeance against the persecutors thereof, Rev. 6. 10. Nor do I think those words, Isa. 63. 16. repugnant hereunto. Abraham is ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledgeth us not: for I look upon the import of those words only as a humble acknowledgment of their defection, which rendred them unworthy that their Forefathers should own or acknowledge them any more for their Children; and not as implying their utter ignorance or total oblivion of the Churches state on earth.

But I here understand such a particular knowledge of our personal states and conditions, as they once had when they dwelt amongst us in the Body; and this seems to be denied them by those Scriptures alledged against it in the margin.

Job 14 21. Eccles. 9.5,6. John 19. 25.

3. By commerce and intercourse; understand not their intercession with God for us, which the Papists affirm; but their concernments about our natural or civil interests in this World, so as to be useful to our Persons, by warning us of death, or dangers; or to our Estates, by disquieting such as wrong us in not fulfilling the Wills and Testaments they once made; or by giving us notice by words or signs of the death of our friends who died at a distance from us, or come to some violent and untimely end.

The sense of the Words being thus determined, and the Question so stated, I will for the resolution of it give you,

I. The strength of what I find offered for the Affirmative.

II. The general Concessions, or what may be granted.

III. My own Judgment about it, with the grounds thereof.

I. Some there are even among the learned and judicious who are for the Affirmative part of the Question, and do with much confidence assert, That departed Souls both know our particular concerns in this World, and intermeddle with them: confirming their assertion both by reasons to convince us that it may be so, and variety of instances that it is so. I will produce both the one and the other, and give them a due consideration and censure.

The substance of what is pleaded for the Affirmative, I find thus collected and improved by Dr. Sterne, a learned Physician in Ireland, in his Book entituled, A Dissertation concerning Death; where he offers us these four Arguments to convince that it is possible for departed Souls thus to appear, and perform such Offices for their Friends on Earth.

Dissertatio de mort. à p. 208 ad p. 214.

Argum. I. Angels by command from God are useful and helpful to Men; they are the Saints Guardians, and it is probable that each Christian hath his peculiar Angel: whence it will follow that separated Souls do mingle themselves with human affairs, and that because they are Angels, at least equal unto Angels, Luke 20. 36. Besides, they being Spirits that were once embodied, must needs be more fit for this employment than those who never had any Tie at all to a Body, unless we can imagine them to have lost the remembrance of all that ever they did and suffered in the Body, as also that they put off and buried all their Affections to us with their Bodies, which is hard to think. Even as Christ our High-Priest is qualified for that Office above all others in Heaven, because he once dwelt and suffered in a Body like ours here upon Earth; so separated Souls are qualified above all other Spirits who are unrelated to Bodies of Flesh.

Argum. II. The Church triumphant and militant are but one Body; and by how much better the triumphant are than the militant, by so much the more propense they are to succour and help the other that stand in need of it. This being the case, we cannot imagine but they are inclin'd to perform all good Offices for us; for else they should do less for us now they are in a state of the highest Perfection in Heaven, than they did, or were willing to do in their imperfect state on Earth.

Arg. III. A Will or Testament (as Ulpian defines it) is the just sentence or declaration of our minds concerning that which we would have done after our decease. These testaments have always, and among all Nations, been religiously observed, as the Apostle witnesseth, Gal. 3. 15. The reasons of this so religious observance are a presumption that those who made them when alive, continue in the same mind and will after death; that they take care for the fulfilling of them, and revenge the non-performance upon the unjust Executors. For otherwise there can be no reason why so great a stress should be laid upon the Will of the Dead, if they care not whether their Wills be performed or no. Why should we be so sollicitous and studious about it, and pay so great a reverence to it, but upon this account?

Arg. IV. The Scriptures forbid consultations with the dead, Deut. 18. 10, 11. This prohibition supposeth some did consult them, and received Answers from them; which must needs imply some commerce betwixt the living and the Souls that are departed. And considering he had before forbidden their consultation with the Devil, it appears that here we must needs understand the very Souls of the Dead, and not the Devil personating them only.

(4.) In sacris Scripturis consulere mortuos passim prohibetur, ut Deut. 8. 10, 11. Sed si homines à mortuis non suscitentur, legibus haud opus est; & si mortui rogati non aliquando responderent, ab hominibus haudquaquam consulerentur. Sterne de Mort. ubi sup.

These are the Arguments of this learned Author for the Affirmative, which he closes with two necessary Cautions: First, That this lays no foundation for religious Worship or Invocation of departed Souls; those that are helpful to us, are not therefore to be worshipped. Secondly, That we must acknowledge our selves to be under much darkness as to the way and manner of the converse of Spirits with us. The

Dr. More's Immortality of the Soul, l. 2. c. 16.

The most acute and learned * Dr. More I find of the same opinion. He affirms, that departed Souls are capable of a vital Union with an airy Vehicle (or Body) in which they can easily move from place to place, and appear to the living; and act in their Affairs as in detecting Murders, rebuking injurious Executors, visiting and counselling their Wives and Children, forewarning them of such and such courses, &c. To which we may add the profession of the Spirit thus appearing, of being the Soul of such a one; as also the similitude of the person: And all this ado is in things very just and serious, unfit for a Devil with that care and kindness to promote; and as unfit for a good Genius, it being below so Noble a Nature to tell a Lie. All these things put together, and rightly weighed, the violence of prejudice not pulling down the ballance; I dare appeal (saith he) to any, Whether it will not be certainly carried for the present Cause? and whether any indifferenc Judge ought not to conclude, if these Stories which are so frequent every where, and in all Ages, concerning the Ghosts of Men appearing, be but true, That it is true also that they are their Ghosts, &c?

These are the strongest Arguments I meet with, for the Affirmative, that the matter is possible, it may be so; and then adding the creditable Instances that it is so, the matter seems to be determin'd.

To this purpose Dr. Sterne alledges several instances out of Scripture, as that appearance of Samuel unto Saul, and the conference betwixt them, as also the Letters that were sent to Jehoram by Elijah, after that Elijah was translated to Heaven, as appears by comparing, 2 Chron. 21. 12. with, 2 Kings 3. 11. In which appears that in Jehosaphat's time who preceded this Jehoram, Elijah was dead, and yet in Jehoram's time who succeeded him, he is said to receive Letters from Elijah. The appearance and conference also betwixt Christ and Moses and Elias upon the Mount, in the presence of some of the Disciples, confirms it, Matth. 17. 3.

These are the principal Scripture-instances, others are almost innumerable. From among that vast heap I will select some few that are most material, and of cleareſt Credit.

† It is a thing (saith my Author) both known and frequent, that the Inhabitants of the Scotish Isles, when their Friends are dying, come to them, and request them that upon such or such a day after their Death, and in such a place, they would meet them; which the Dead accordingly do at the time and place agreed upon, and have sometimes discourse with them.

Infinite Examples of Murders (saith Dr. More) have been discovered by Dreams, the Souls of the Persons murdered seeming to appear to some or other asleep, and to make their complaints to them; giving us a notable Example out of Baronius of Marsilius Ficinus, who having made a solemn Vow with Michael Mercatus, (after they had been pretty warmly disputing of the Immortality of the Soul out of the Principles of their Master Plato) that whether of them two die first, he should appear to his Friend, and give him certain information of that Truth: It was Ficinus his fate to die first and that not long after this mutual Resolution. He was mindful of his Promise when he had left the Body; for Mercatus being very intent at his studies, betimes on a Morning heard a Horse riding with all speed, and observed that he stopt at his Window, and therewith heard the Voice of his Friend Ficinus, crying out aloud, O Michael, Michael vera, vera, sunt illa: That is, O Michael, Michael, those things are true, they are. Whereupon he suddenly opened his Window, and espying Marsilius upon a white Steed, called after him, but he vanished out of his sight. He sent therefore presently to Florence to know how Marsilius did, and understood that he died about that hour he called at his Window.

Much to the same purpose is that so famous and well attested story of the apparition of Major George Sydenham to Captain William Dyke, both of Somersetshire, attested by the worthy and learned Dr. Thomas Dyke a near Kinsman of the Captain's, and by Mr. Douch, to whom both the Major and Captain were intimately known. The sum is this, The Major and Captain had many disputes about the Being of a God, and the Immortality of the Soul, in which points they could never be resolved, tho' they much sought for and desired it; and therefore it was at last fully agreed betwixt them, that he that died first, should the third night after his Funeral, come betwixt the hours of twelve and one, to the little house in the Garden adjoining to Major Sydenham's House at Dulverton in Somersetshire. The Major died first, and the Captain happened to lie that very night which was appointed, in the same Chamber and Bed with Dr. Dyke; he acquainted the Doctor with the appointment, and his resolution to attend the place and hour that Night, for which purpose he got the Key of that Garden. The Doctor could by no means divert his purpose, but when the hour came he was upon the place, where he waited two hours and a half, neither seeing nor hearing any thing more than usual. About six weeks after the Captain and Doctor went to Eaton, and lay both in the same Inn, but not in the same Chamber, as before at Dulverton.

Sad. Trium. Part. 2. p. 183.

The morning before they went thence, the Captain staid longer than was usual in his Chamber, and at length came into the Doctor's Chamber, but in Visage and Form much differing from himself, with his Hair and Eyes staring, and his whole body shaking and trembling: Whereat the Doctor wondering, demanded what is the matter, Cousin Captain? The Captain replies, I have seen my Major: At which the Doctor seeming to smile, the Captain said, If ever I saw him in my life, I saw him but now; adding as followeth: This morning (said he) after it was light, some one came to my Bed-side, and suddenly drawing back the Curtains, calls, Cap, Cap, (which was the term of familiarity that the Major used to call the Captain by) to whom I replied, What, my Major: To which he returns, I could not come at the time appointed, but I am now come to tell you, That there is a God, and a very just and terrible one; and if you do not turn over a new leaf, you will find it so. This stuck so close to him, little Meat would go down with him at dinner, tho' a handsom Treat was provided; these words were sounding in his ears frequently, during the remainder of his life: he was never shy or scrupulous to relate it to any that asked him concerning it, or ever mentioned it but with horror and trepidation. They were both men of a brisk Humour and jolly Conversation, of very quick and keen parts, having been both University and Inns of Court Gentlemen.

The Apparition of the Ghost of Sir George Villiers, Father of the Duke of Buckingham, giving three solemn Warnings, by three several Apparitions to his Servant Mr. Parker, is a known and credible Story. But I will wade no farther into Particulars, they are almost innumerable; let these suffice for a taste.

II. In the next place therefore I will lay down some,

Concessions about this Matter: And the

First Concession is this: That the separated Souls or Spirits of Men are capable of performing and executing any Ministry or Service for God, (if he should please to commissionate them so to do) as well as Angels are, whom we know he frequently imploys about the Persons and Affairs of his People on Earth.

Tho' they become not Angels by their separation, as Maximus Tyrius calls them, but remain Spirits specifically distinct from them, yet are they spiritual Substances as the Angels are: This their Nature capacitates them either to live and act out of the Body, or to assume (as Angels do) an aerial Body for the time of their ministry: Nor do I know any thing in Scripture or Philosophy repugnant hereunto.

Concess. 2. It cannot be doubted but upon some special and extraordinary reasons and occasions, some departed Souls have returned to, and appeared in this World by order and commission from God.

This is too manifest to be doubted by any that understand and believe the Instances recorded in Scripture. Moses and Elias, long after their departure, appeared to, and talked with Christ upon the holy Mount, in the presence of some of his Apostles, Mat. 17. 3. nor is there any reason to question the reality of their Apparition, or to think it to be no more than a Phantasm, or imaginary resemblance of these Persons, but very Moses and Elias themselves: For they came to be Witnesses to Christ's Prophetical Office; and it was not fit so great a Point should be attested by imaginary Witnesses, or that they should be called Moses and Elias if they were not the very same Persons.

Non enim conveniebat ut veritas mendacio, vel imaginariis testibus probaretur. Maldon. Capellus in loc.

'Tis therefore most likely they both appeared in their own Bodies: for Moses's Body we know was hidden by the Lord, and Elias his Body immediately translated with his Soul to Heaven: when therefore the Lord would send them upon this solemn Errand, the Soul of Moses probably reassumed that Body which was never found by Man, and Elias was already embodied, and fit immediately for his Expedition.

Credibilius est verè coporibus suis apparuisse? Percus in loc.

In like manner we read, Mat. 27. 52, 53. that at the Resurrection of our Lord, many Bodies of the Saints arose, and appeared unto many: these were no Phantasms, but the very Souls of the departed Saints returned (having reassumed their own Bodies) unto this World, not only to confirm the truth of Christ's Resurrection, and adorn that great Day, but as a specimen or handsel of the Resurrection of all Saints in the virtue of his Resurrection at the great Day.

Nor will I deny, but upon some lesser (tho' never without weighty and solemn) Occasions and Reasons, God may sometimes send the Souls of the Dead back again into this World, as in the cases before recited, to evidence against the Atheism of Men, &c. Augustine relates a memorable Example which fell out at Millain, where a certain Citizen being dead, there came a Creditor to whom he had been indebted, and unjustly demanded the Money of his Son. The Son knew the Debt was satisfied by his Father; but having no Acquittance to shew, his Father appeared to him in his sleep, and shew'd him where the Acquittance lay: whether it were the very Soul of his Father, or rather an Angel, as Augustine thinks, is not certain, tho' the one as well as the other be possible. But tho' rarely, and upon some weighty and solemn Occasions some Souls have returned and appeared; yet I judge this is not frequently done upon slight and ordinary Errands: And therefore to give you my own thoughts, I judge, Aug. in lib. de cura pro mortuis agenda.

Concess. 3. That those Apparitions which seem to be, and are generally reputed and taken for the Souls of the Dead, are not indeed so, but other Spirits putting on the Shapes and Resemblances of the Dead, and (for the most part) tricks of the Devil to delude or disquiet Men.

In this I think the learned Dr. Brown delivered his Judgment more solidly and orthodoxly, than in some other Points, where he saith, 'I believe that the whole Frame of a 'Beast doth perish, and is left in the same state 'after death, as before it was materialled into 'life: that the Souls of Men know neither con'trary, nor corruption: that they subsist be'yond the Body, and continue by the Privilege 'of their proper Nature, and without a Mira'cle: that the Souls of the Faithful, as they 'leave Earth, take possession of Heaven, that 'those Apparitions and Ghosts of departed Per'sons, are not the wandring Souls of Men, but 'the unquiet Walks of Devils, prompting and 'suggesting us unto Mischief, Blood, and Villany. 'And with this Opinion I concur as to the or'dinary and common Apparitions of the Dead: And my Reasons are,

Religio Med. Sect 37. p. 82.

(1.) Because the Scriptures every where describe the state of departed Souls as a fixed state either in Heaven or in Hell; and assign the good or evil done in this World by Spirits, not to the departed Spirits of Men, but to Angels or Devils: and it is our duty to regulate our Conceits by Scripture, and not according to the vain Philosophy of the Heathens, or the superstitious Traditions and Opinions of Men.

As for the Souls of the godly, they are at rest with Christ, Rev. 14. 13. Isa. 57. 2. and as fixed as Pillars in the House of God, Rev. 3. 12.

And for the Wicked, their Spirits are confin'd and secured in Hell as in a Prison, 1 Pet. 3. 19. there is a fixed Gulph betwixt them and the living, Luke 16. 27 — 31.

What good Offices are to be done by Spirits for us, the Angels are God's Commission-Officers to do them, Heb. 1. 14. They are all ministring Spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be Heirs Heirs of Salvation: These are the Spirits sent forth to walk to and fro through the Earth, Zech. 1. 10. Their Ministry was emblematically represented in Jacob's Vision, where they were seen ascending and descending as upon a Ladder, betwixt Heaven and Earth, Gen. 28. 12. Yea, their very name Angel is a name of Office, signifying a Messenger, or one sent.

And for the mischief done by Spirits in this World, the Scriptures ascribe that to the Devils; those unquiet Spirits have their Walks in this World, they compass the whole Earth, and walk up and down in it, Job 1. 7. and 1 Pet. 5. 8. they can assume any shape; yea, I doubt not but he can act their Bodies when dead, as well as he did their Souls and Bodies when alive: How great his Power is this way, appears in what is so often done by him in the Bodies of Witches. They are not ordinarily therefore the Spirits of Men, but other Spirits that appear to us.

(2.) If God should ordinarily permit the Spirits of Men inhabiting the other World, a liberty so frequently to visit this, what a gap would it open for Satan to beguile and deceive the living! What might he not by this means impose upon weak and credulous Mortals? There hath been a great deal of Superstition and Idolatry already introduced under this pretence: he hath often personated Saints departed, and pretended himself to be the Ghost of some venerable person, whose love to the Souls of the people, and care for their Salvation drew him from Heaven to reveal some special Secret to them. Swarms of Errors, and superstitious and idolatrous Opinions and Practices are this way conveyed by the tricks and artifices of Satan among the Papists, which I will not blot my Paper withal; only I desire it may be considered, that if this were a thing so frequently permitted by God, as is pretended, upon what dangerous terms had he left his Church in this World, seeing he hath left no certain marks by which we may distinguish one Spirit from another, or a true Messenger from Heaven from a counterfeit and pretended one.

Quid enim idololatriam inter Ethnicos & Christianos magis propagavit? Hinc fluxerunt multæ peregrinationes, Monasteria, Deluba, Dies festi, & alia, Lav. in Job 33.

But God hath tied us to the sure and standing rule of his Word; forbidding us to give heed to any other voice or spirit leading us another way, Isa. 8. 19. 2 Thes. 2. 1, 2. Gal. 1. 8. It was therefore a discreet reply which one of the Antients made, when in a Prayer a Vision of Christ appeared to him, and told him, thy prayers are heard, for thou art worthy: the good man immediately clapt his hands upon his eyes, and said, Nolo hic videre Christum, &c. I will not see Christ here, it is enough for me that I shall behold him in Heaven.

To conclude. My Opinion upon the whole is this, that altho' it cannot be denied, but in some grand extraordinary cases, as at the Transfiguration and Resurrection of Christ, God did, and perhaps sometimes tho' rarely, may order or permit departed Souls to return into this World; yet for the most part I judge those Apparitions are not the Souls of the dead, but other Spirits, and for the most part evil ones.

Of this Judgment was St. Augustine, who when he had at full related the Story above of the Father's Ghost directing his Son to the Acquittance; yet will not allow it to be the very Soul of his Father, but an Angel: where he farther adds, If (saith he) the Souls of the dead might be present in our affairs, they would not forsake us in this sort; especially my Mother Monica, who in her life cou'd never be without me, surely she would not thus leave me being dead.

Lib. de cura pro mortuis.

Obj. 1. But it was pleaded before, that we allow the Apparitions of Angels; and departed Souls, if they be not Angels, at least are equal unto Angels, and in respect of their late relation to us, are more propense to help us, than Spirits of another sort can be supposed to be.

Sol. It seems too bold and imposing upon Soveraign Wisdom to tell him what Messengers are fittest for him to send and imploy in his service: who hath taught him, or been his Counsellor?

Obj. 2. But these Offices seem to pertain properly to them as they are not only fellow members, but the most excellent members of the mystical Body, to whom it belongs to assist the meanner and weaker.

Sol. If there be any force of reason in this Plea, it carries it rather for the Angels than for departed Souls: for Angels are gather'd under the same common head with the Saints; the Text tells us, we are come to an innumerable company of Angels: they and the Saints are fellow Citizens, and we know they are a more noble order of Spirits; and as for their love to the Elect, it is exceeding great, as great to be sure as the departed Souls of our dearest Relatives can be. For after death they sustain no more civil Relations to us: all that they do sustain is as fellow-members of the same body, or fellow-Citizens, which Angels also are as well as they.

Object. 3. But, saith the Doctor, the reason why all Nations pay so great honour and religious care to the Will of the Dead, is a supposition that they still continue in the same mind after death, and will avenge the Falsifications of Trusts upon injurious Executors, else no reason can be given why so great a stress should be laid upon the Will of the Dead.

Sol. This is gratis dictum, to say no worse, a cheap and unwary expression: Can no reason be given for the religious observance of the Testaments of the dead but this Supposition? I deny it: for tho' they that made them be dead, yet God, who is witness to all such acts and trusts, liveth: and tho' they cannot avenge the frauds, and injustice of men, he both can and will do it, 1 Thes. 4. 6. which I think is a weightier ground and reason to inforce duty upon men than the fear of Ghosts. Besides, this is a case wherein all the living are concerned, all that die must commit a trust to them that survive; and if frauds should be committed with impunity, who could safely repose confidence in another; Quod tangit omnes, tangi debet ab omnibus; that which is of general concernment, and becomes every man's interest, infers a general obligation upon all.

As for the Letters of Elijah, 'tis a vanity to think they came post from Heaven; no, no, they were doubtless left behind him out of due care to the Government, and produced in that fit occasion.

Object. 4. But what need of a Law to prohibit Necromancy or consultation with the dead, if it were not practicable!

Sol. I do not think the wicked Art there prohibited enabled them to recal departed Souls; but it was a conversing with the Devil who personated the dead, and therein a kind of homage was paid him to the dishonour of God; or he might possibly raise the Bodies of wicked men, and appear in them: but I think the Spirits of the dead return not, except as was before limited.

Object. 5. But the matters they discover are found to be true and the causes in which they concern themselves are just; real Murders are detected by them, and real Frauds and Injuries corrected and rectified: but the Devil being himself a Liar and Deceiver, would never do it; 'tis not his interest to discover or discourage such things.

Sol. Tho' it be not his interest meerly to discover it, yet it is certainly his interest to precipitate wicked men, and hasten their ruin by the hand of Justice; and he will speak the truth, and seem to own a righteous cause to bring about his great design of ruining the Souls and Bodies of men. I will shut up with three Cautions, Caution I. Strain not Conscience to enrich posterity: be true to the trusts committed to you by the Dead, or by the Living, remembring, that tho' they be dead and cannot avenge the wrong, yet the Lord lives, and will surely do it in a severer manner than they could, should they appear in the most terrible and frightful forms to you: Besides, your own Consciences will haunt you worse than a Ghost. Be just and true therefore in all your Promises and Trusts, for God is the Avenger.

Caution II. Finish your work for Eternity before you die: for as the Cloud is consumed, and vanished away, so he that goeth down to the Grave shall come up no more; he shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more, Job 7. 9, 10 Your Souls will be fixed in Eternity soon after they are loosed from your Bodies: when Death comes, away you must go, willing or unwilling, ready or unready; but no returning hither how willing soever.

Caution III. Keep your selves from that heathenish and accursed practice of consulting the Devil about your absent or dead Relations; a practice too common in Sea-port Towns, and of deep and heinous guilt before God: Isa. 8. 19. And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar Spirits, and unto Wizards that peep and mutter; should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead?

You need not call the Devil twice, that subtle and officious Spirit draws the living into his Net by such a bait as this: You meet your mortal Enemy under the disguise of your dead Friend.

Query 5. Whether the separated Souls of the Just in Heaven, have any converse or communication with each other? and how that can be, seeing all the Organs and Instruments of speech and hearing are laid aside with their Bodies?

It seems impossible that separated or unbodied Spirits should converse together, seeing the Instruments by which the thoughts are communicated from one to another, are perished in the Grave. Suppose the Tongue of a man to be cut out, his Eyes and Hands perished or made useless whilst the Soul remains in the Body; it may enjoy its own thoughts within it self, but it is impossible to signify them to another by words or signs.

Or suppose a Man in a deep sleep (wherein the Senses are only bound for a little time) he may indeed exercise his own fancy in a pleasant Dream, but another cannot understand how it is entertained; but in death the Senses are not bound but extinguished.

Beside, we must not think the felicity of the departed holy Souls to consist in mutual Converses one with another, but in their ineffable Visions of God, and Communion with him. To him who is Omniscient, and understands their most inward thoughts, they can freely communicate them, and receive his, as well as pour forth their own love; but to do it to their fellow Creatures, who see not as God doth, seems impossible.

Indeed it was never doubted, but after the Resurrection they shall both know and talk with one another in a more excellent and perfect manner than now they do; but till that time, the Reasons above seem to persuade us, that all the Converses above are only betwixt God and them, which indeed is enough to make them happy: and indeed, if this ability be allowed to separated Souls, it seems to render the Resurrection of their Bodies needless: for they are well enough without them. But certainly the Spirits of just Men are not Mutes: such an August Assembly of holy and excellent Spirits do not live together in their Father's House without mutual Converse and Fellowship with each other, as well as with God.

That acute and judicious Divine, Mr. Joseph Symonds, in the Epistle to his Book, entituled, Sight and Faith, expresseth himself about this matter thus. 'I often think (saith he) of the 'Communion of the Spirits of Men, which 'certainly is more than many are acquainted 'with: tho' we act one upon another in our 'present state, by the help of sense; yet we are 'wrought and designed to a more excellent 'way. Angels and the Spirits of Men made 'perfect, converse and trade in a mutual Communication, not without sense, but without such 'sense as ours. This, as eternal Life, begins 'here, and is found in some degrees in this mortal State, tho' not in so visible appearances as 'to lie open to much observation.

'Angels good and bad do act upon our Spirits, and our Spirits hold converse with them, 'and with the Father of Spirits, which may be 'discerned in secret Parlies and Discourses betwixt them and us; much of this appears in 'David's Psalms: and there passeth not only an 'inward speech, but there are invisible approaches, entertainments and touches, which 'Paul found when bound in the Spirit, and under the working of God, which wrought in 'him mightily, Col. 1. 29. it is also most certain 'that our Souls are not mute and shut out from 'all mutual Traffick with each other, except 'what they have by the mediation of Senses.

'Instances are found, that (as they of two 'Needles touch'd with the Load-stone) the Spirit of one at a distance hath found it self affected with the motion and state of another. 'And this we are sensible of, that there is a 'strong desire in us to Communion of Spirits; 'and that because the way most ready and convenient to our bodily state is by sense, we are 'carried with much inclination to maintain intercourse of our minds and Spirits by sense; 'but as being made to a better way, our Souls 'are not satisfied with this present way, as 'being both painful, and short. We cannot 'give an exact Copy of our Apprehensions, 'Desires, Delights, and other affections by these 'two great Mediators of Communion, the 'Eye, and the Ear: but because we are in so 'great a measure confin'd to this course, our Souls,

'Souls, as it were, ſtand in theſe two gates, to 'ſend and receive mutual Embaſſies each from 'other. Which way, as it is ſhort in it ſelf, ſo it 'is much ſhortned by diſtances, diſaffections, 'impotencies, and diſparities.

I cannot imagine that Men in the ſtate of Imperfection ſhould have ſo many ways to communicate their Minds, as by ſpeaking, writing, &c. yea, that the very Birds and Beaſts are by nature enabled to ſignify to each other their Inclinations; and that the Spirits of juſt Men (which are the beſt of all human Spirits, and that when made perfect too, which is the beſt and higheſt ſtate attainable by them) ſhould have none, but live at a greater diſadvantage in this reſpect, than they did, or the very Birds and Beaſts in this World do. The ſum of my thoughts about this matter, I will lay down in the following Sections.

Sect. 1. The ſtate of Heaven (as was at large open'd in our eleventh Propoſition) being an Aſſociation of Angels and bleſſed Souls for the glorifying and praiſing of God in his Temple there, and this Worſhip being carried on by joint conſent, as appears by their joint aſcriptions of Glory to God, Rev. 7. 9, 10, 11, 12. they muſt of neceſſity for the orderly carrying on of this Heavenly Worſhip, underſtand each others minds, and communicate their thoughts: for without this 'tis not imaginable how a joint or common Service, in which thouſands of thouſands are employed, can be decorouſly and orderly managed, except we conceive of them as ſo many Machines, or wind-Inſtruments that are managed by an intelligent Agent, tho' themſelves be ſenſleſs, and meerly paſſive: Certainly their conſent is a different thing from that of the Keys of a Harpſicord, or ſtrings of a Lute, they are intelligent Beings, who underſtand their own and each others mind: and beſides, without this ability, that Society in Heaven would be leſs comfortable, as to mutual refreſhing Fellowſhip, than the Society of the Saints is here. So that it is not to be doubted, but theſe noble and excellent Spirits can, and do communicate their thoughts to each other, and that in a moſt excellent way.

Sect. 2. But yet we cannot imagine theſe Communications betwixt them to be by words formed by ſuch Inſtruments and Organs of Speech as we now uſe, for they are bodileſs Beings: words and articular ſounds are fitted to the uſe and ſervice of embodied Spirits. It is therefore probable, that they convey and communicate their minds to one another, as the bleſſed Angels do, not with Tongues of fleſh, (tho' we read of the Tongues of Angels, 1 Cor. 13. 1.) but in a way ſomewhat analogous to this, tho' much more noble and excellent. For look, as the Scripture ſtiles the moſt excellent Food, Angels Food; ſo the moſt excellent Speech, or moſt eloquent Tongues Angels Tongues. The pureſt Rhetorick that ever flowed from the lips of the moſt charming Orator, is but babbling, to the Language of Angels, or of Spirits made perfect.

Conſtat Angelos linguas non habere; eſt autem in iis aliquid ἀνάλογον linguis, per quod conceptus ſibi mutuò tradunt. Lightf.

When Paul was wrapt into the third Heaven, where he was admitted to the ſight and hearing of this bleſſed Aſſembly, it's ſaid he heard ἄρρητα ῥήματα words unſpeakable, ſpiritual Language, ſuch as his Tongue neither could, or ought to utter, ſuch as none but heavenly Inhabitants can ſpeak: and Dan. 8. 13. I heard (ſaith Daniel) one Saint ſpeaking, and another Saint ſaid unto that certain Saint that ſpake, &c. He heard the enquiries of the Angels, deſiring to know the Myſtery from the mouth of Chriſt. A Language they have, but not like ours.

Sect. 3. The Communications of Angels and Souls in Heaven, is therefore conceived to be an ability in thoſe bleſſed Spirits ſilently and without ſound to inſtil and inſinuate their minds and thoughts to each other, by a meer act of their Wills: juſt as we now ſpeak to God or our ſelves in our hearts, when our lips do not move, or the leaſt outward ſign appears.

Dicimur nobis ipſis in animo loqui, cum aliquid actu cogitamus, & animo volvimus: cogitamus autem actu, ex voluntatis imperio, hoc eſt, cum volumus. Zanch.

There are two ways by which the Souls of Men ſpeak, one outwardly by the Inſtruments of Speech or ſenſible ſigns, the other inwardly, without ſound or ſign. This inward ſilent Speech is nothing elſe but an act of the will, calling forth ſuch things into our actual thoughts and meditations, which before lay hid and quiet in the Memory, or habit of Knowledge. Theſe thoughts, or actual revolvings of things in the mind, are in Scripture called דבר לבב, a Word of Speech in the Heart, Deut. 15. 9. Take heed to thy ſelf, that there be not a wicked word in thy Heart, we tranſlate it a wicked thought: thoughts are the words and voice of the Soul: And ſo, Matth. 9. 3. they ſpake within themſelves, i. e. their Souls ſpake, tho' their lips moved not. All Meditation is an inward Speech in the Soul, and therefore שיח indifferently ſignifies both to ſpeak, and to meditate. The Objects which we revolve in our thoughts, are ſo many Companions with whom we converſe: and thus a Man (like Heinſius) may be in the midſt of abundance of excellent Company when he is alone. And this is ſilent talk to our ſelves, without any ſound or noiſe.

שיח בפה שמאל, locutus eſt ore, aut corde cogitavit, meditatus eſt.

Obj. But you will ſay, Tho' the Spirit of a Man can thus talk to or with it ſelf; yet this can ſignify nothing to others: For what Man knoweth the things of a Man ſave the Spirit of a Man that is in him? 1 Cor. 2. 11. It is not therefore enough to open this internal door of the Will; for except we open alſo the external door of lips, no Man can know our minds or be admitted into the ſecrets of our Souls: ſhould we never ſo earneſtly deſire that another ſhould know our mind, except we pleaſe alſo to diſcover it by word or ſign, he cannot know it; and therefore an act of the Will is not ſufficient without ſome external ſignification ſuperadded. And theſe Souls being bodileſs, can give no ſuch outward ſignification.

Duo ſunt oſtia aliorum reſpectu, quorum niſi utrumque à te referetur, fieri non poteſt, ut quæ tu habes intellectu, & corde tuo occulta, ea alius habere, & cognoſcere queat. Unum ex parte animi eſt voluntas; niſi enim quæ occulta latent in corde tuo, ea velis aliis patefieri, quis ea percipiat? alterum eſt ipſum corpus carneum; ac proinde licèt, quaſi operto priori interiorique oſtio, velis, quæ in animo volvis, alicui patefacere, niſi tamen hoc etiam alterum externum reſeres, nullo modo ab aliis hominibus cognoſci poterunt. Zanch. de operibus Dei, lib. 3. cap. 19.

Sol. 'Tis indeed needful among Men in this World

World to unlock another door beside that of their Will, to communicate the Secrets of their hearts to others; but Angels, and the Spirits of Men having no Bodies, consequently have but one door, to wit, that of the Will to open; and the opening thereof (which is done by act or desire in a moment) is enough to discover so much of their minds, as they would have discovered to another Spirit. If they keep the door of their Will shut, no Angel or Spirit can know what is in their thoughts, without a Revelation from God; and if they but will or desire others should know, no words can so fully manifest one Man's mind to another, as such an act of the Will doth manifest theirs. And this, saith learned Zanchy, is the Tongue of Angels, and the same way the Spirits of Men have to make known their minds in the unbodied state. It is but the turning the Key of the Will, and their thoughts or desires are presently seen and known by others, to whom they will discover them, as a Man's face is seen in a glass, when he pleaseth to turn his face to it. Would one Spirit make known his mind to another? it is but to will he should know is, and it is immediately known.

Quoniam igitur Angeli iis carent crassis corporibus idcirco nihil impedit, quo minus quæ unus Angelus in sua versat mente, ea alter videat, nisi ejus voluntas: si enim ea nolit ab altero reciri, nunquam, nisi Deo revelante, rescientur. Zanch. ubi supra.

Sect. 4. This internal way of speaking and communication among Spirits, is much more noble, perfect, and excellent, than that which is in use among us by words and signs: And that in two respects, viz.

1. Of clearness.
2. Of dispatch and speed.

1. Spiritual Language is more clearly expressive of the mind and thoughts, than words, writings, or any other external signs can be. The greatest Masters of Language do often cloud their meaning for want of words fit and full enough to express it: Truth suffers by the poverty and ambiguity of words: many Controversies are but meer strifes about words, and scufflings in the dark, by the mistakes of each others sense and meaning: few have the ability of putting their own meanings into apt, proper and full expressions; and if they can, yet others to whom they speak, want an answerable ability of understanding, and clearness of apprehension to receive it. If we could discern the true and natural sense of things, just as it is in the mind of the Speaker or Writer, how many Controversies would be thereby quickly ended?

But Spirits unbodied so convey their sense and mind to one another, that there can be no mistakes, no darkning of Counsel by words without our knowledge; but one receives it just as it lies in the other's mind.

2. Spiritual Language is more easy, and of quicker dispatch. Some Men have voluble tongues, and are much more ready and presential than others, their tongues are as the Pen of a ready Scribe; and others, no less ready with their hands, which keep peace with, yea, outrun the Tongue of the Speaker, as Martial notes,

Currant verba licet, manus est velocior illis;
Nondum lingua suum dextra peregit opus.

Martial. Epig. lib. 14 Ep. 208.

Yet all this is but bungling work to the ready dispatch of Spirits, one act of the Will opens the Window to discern the mind of another clearly; so that the converse of Spirits must needs be more excellent in both respects, than any we are accustomed to, or acquainted with in this World. I will shut up this Question with

One COROLLARY.

Long to be associated with the Spirits of just Men made perfect. You that are going to join that blessed Assembly, will even in this respect gain an invaluable advantage. 'Tis true, there is much of comfort in the present converses of embodied, and imperfect Saints: 'tis sweet to fast and pray, to sigh and groan together; 'tis sweeter to rejoice and praise our God together. 'Tis sweet to talk of Heaven with our faces thitherward: but alas! what is this to the converses that are among the Spirits of just Men made perfect! With what melting hearts have we sometimes sate under the Doctrine of the Gospel! How have our ears been chain'd with delight to the Preacher's lips, whilst he hath been discoursing of those ravishing subjects, Christ and Heaven! But alas! how dry and dull a thing is the best of this, to the language of Heaven! Three things debase and spoil the communications of the Saints on earth, viz. the darkness, dulness, and frothiness thereof.

1. The darkness and ignorance of our Understandings. How crude, weak, and indigested are our highest and purest Notions of spiritual things! we speak of them but as Children, 1 Cor. 13. 11. For alas, the vail is yet upon our faces. The Body of sin, and the Body of flesh, cast a very dark shadow upon the World to come; but the apprehensions of separated Souls are most bright and clear. This darkness begets mistakes, mistakes beget so many quarrels and janglings, that our fellowship on Earth loseth at once both its profit and pleasure.

2. There is much dulness and deadness accompanying the Communion of Saints on earth, abundance of precious time is wasted among us in unprofitable silence; and when we engage in discourses of Heaven, that discourse is often little better than silence; our words freeze betwixt our lips, and we speak not with that concernedness and warmth of Spirit which sutes with such subjects.

It is not so among our Brethren above; their Affections are at the highest Peg, giving Glory to God in the highest.

3. To conclude; in the discourses of the best Men on Earth, there is too much froth and vanity. Many words, like water, run away at the waste spout; but there God is the Center in which all terminates. O therefore let us long to be among the unbodied people. This World will never sute us with Companions in all things agreeable to the desires of our hearts. The best Company are got together in the upper Room; an Hour there is better than an Age below. Whatever fellowship Saints leave on Earth, they shall be sure to find better in Heaven.

Query VI. Whether the separated Souls of the Just in Heaven, do incline to a reunion with their own Bodies? and how that reunion is at last effected?

That these blessed Souls have no such inclination or desire, these Reasons seem to perswade.

1. That their Bodies, whilst they lived in them, were no better than so many Prisons. Many were the prejudices, damages and miseries they sustained and suffered in them. It kept them at an uncomfortable distance from the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Their bemoaning cries spake their uneasy state. How often hath every gracious Soul thus lamented it self! Wo is me that I dwell in Mesheck. It inclosed their Souls within its mud walls, which intercepted the the Light and Joy of God's Face. Death therefore did a most friendly office when it set it at Liberty, and brought it forth into its own pure and pleasant Light and Liberty. These blessed Spirits now rejoyce as Prisoners do in their recovered Liberty: and can it be supposed, after all these Sufferings, Groans and Sighs to be dissolved they can be willing to be embodied again? Surely there is as little reason for Souls at liberty, to desire to be again embodied, as there is for a Bird got out of the Snare or Cage, to fly back again to its place of confinement and restraint. Yea, when we consider how loth holy Souls, when under the excruciating pains of sickness, and as yet in the sight of this alluring World, have been to hear of a return to it by the recovery of their health; we cannot think, but being quite out of the sight of this, and in the fruition of the other World, the thoughts of the Body must needs be more loathsome to them than ever.

We read, that when a good Man in time of his Sickness, was told by his Friends, that some hopeful Signs of his Recovery began now to appear; he answered, And must I then return to this Body? I was as a Sheep driven out of the Storm, almost to the Fold; and then driven back into the Storm again: Or as a weary Traveller near his home, who must go back again to fetch something he had neglected: Or as an Apprentice whose time was almost out, and then must begin a new Term. Of some others it hath been also noted, that the greatest Infirmities they discovered upon their Death-bed, have been their too passionate desires to be dissolved, and their unsubmissiveness to God's Will in their longer stay in the Body. Now, the Bodies of the Saints being so chearfully forsaken, and that only upon a foretaste of Heaven by Faith; how can it be thought they should find any Inclination to a reunion, when they are so abundantly satisfied with the Joys of his face in Heaven? Certainly the Body hath been no such pleasant habitation to the Soul, that it should cast an eye or thought that way, when it is once delivered out of it. If it were burthensome here, a thought of it would be loathsome there.

2. We have shew'd before, that the separate Soul wants not the help of the Body, but lives and acts at a more free and comfortable rate than ever before. 'Tis true, it is not now delighted with meat and drink, with smells and sounds as it was wont to be: But then it must be considered, that it is happiness and perfection not to need them. It is now become equal to the Angels in the way and manner of its living; and what it enjoyed by the ministry of the Body, it eminently and more perfectly enjoys without it. What perfections can the Soul receive from matter? What can a lump of flesh add to a spirit? And if it can add nothing to it, there is no reason why it should hanker after it, and incline to a re-union with it. It added nothing of happiness to it, but much of trouble, and therefore becomes justly undesirable to it.

Anima rationalis nihil perfectionis recipit à materia, quod extra illam non possit recipere; ergo cum separata fuerit, in illam propensa non dicetur. Conimb.

3. The supposition of such a propension and inclination, seems no way to suit with that state of perfect rest which the Souls of the Just enjoy in Heaven. The Scriptures tell us that at Death they enter into Rest, Isa. 57. 2. Heb. 4. 9. That they rest from their labours, Rev. 14. 13. But that which inclines and desires (especially when the desired enjoyment, as in this case, is suspended so long) must be as far from Rest, as it is from satisfaction in the enjoyment of the thing desired. We know what Solomon hath observed of such a life, (and his observation is experimentally true) that hope deferr'd makes the heart sick, Prov. 13. 12. Who finds not his own desires a very rack to him in such cases? If we be kept but a few days in earnest expectation and desire of an absent Friend, and he comes not, what an uneasy life do we live? But here we must suppose some have such an unsatisfied life for hundreds, and others for thousands of years already; and how much longer they may remain so, who can tell? We use to say, Lovers hours are full of Eternity. These reasons seem to carry it for the Negative.

But if the matter be weighed once more, with the following reasons in the counter-scale, and prejudice do not pull down the balance; we shall find the contrary Conclusion much more strong and rational. For, Argum. I. The Soul and Body are the two essential constitutive parts of Man; either of these being wanting, the Man is not complete and perfect. The good of the whole, is the good of the parts themselves; and every thing hath a natural desire and appetite to its own good and perfection. 'Tis confessed, the Soul, for as much as concerns it self singly, is made perfect, and enjoys blessedness in the absence of the Body; but this is only the perfection and blessedness of one part of Man; the other part, viz. the Body, lies in obscurity and corruption: and 'till both be blessed and blessed together in a state of composition and reunion, the whole Man is not made perfect. For this therefore the Soul must wait.

Anima separata ad unionem corporis propensa est, nam illa vult totius compositi actualem constitutionem; cum propter hanc tanquam finem illa sit, & in entium latitudine inveniatur. Atque hæc est illa perfectio quam anima obtinet ex illo appetitu: nam bonum totius compositi, est bonum ipsarum partium. Affirmandum itaq; est, animam separatam naturaliter desiderare resurrectionem. Alstedii Nat. Theol. pars prima, p. 214, 215.

Argum. II. Tho' Death hath dissolv'd the Union, yet it hath not destroyed the relation betwixt the Soul and Body; that dust is more to it than all the dust of the whole earth. Hence it is that the whole person of a Believer is sometimes denominated from that part of him, namely his Body, which remains captivated by death in the grave. Hence 2 Thes. 4. 15. dead Believers are called those that sleep, which must needs properly respect the Body, for the Soul sleeps not, and shews what a firm and dear relation still remains betwixt these absent Friends. Now we all know the mighty power of relation, if it be at least among Entities, yet surely it is one of the greatest things in the World in efficacy.

It is difficult to bear the absence of our dear Relatives, especially if we be in prosperity, and they in adversity: as the case here is betwixt the Spirit in Heaven, and its Body in the Grave; this associated with Angels, that prey'd upon by Worms. Joseph's case is the livelieft Emblem that occurs to my present thoughts to illustrate the point in hand. He was advanced to be Lord over all Egypt, living in the greatest pomp and splendor there: but his Father and Brethren were at the same time ready to perish in the land of Canaan. He had been many years separated from them, but neither the length of time, nor honours of the Court could alienate his affections from them. O see the mighty power of Relation! No sooner doth he see his Brethren, and understand their case, and the pining condition of Jacob his Father, but his bowels yerned, and his compassions rolled together for them. Yea, he could not forbear, nor stifle his own affections, though he knew how injurious his Brethren had been to him, and betrayed him, as the Body hath the Soul: Yet all this notwithstanding, he breaks forth into tears and outcries over them, which made the house ring again with the news that Joseph's Brethren were come. Nor could he be at rest in the lap of honour and plenty, untill he had gotten home his dear and antient Relations to him. Thus stands the case betwixt Soul and Body:

Gen. 43. 29, 30, 31.

Argum. III. The regret, reluctancy, and sorrows expressed by the Soul at parting, do strongly argue its inclination to a re-union with it, when it is actually separated from it. For why should we surmise that the Soul which mourn'd and groan'd so deeply at parting, which clasp'd and embraced it so dearly and affectionately, which fought, strugled and disputed the passage with Death every foot and inch of ground it got, and would not part with the Body 'till by plain force it was rent out of its arms, should not, when absent, desire to see and enjoy its old and endeared friend again? Hath it lost its affection, though it continue its relation? that's very improbable; Or doth its advancement in Heaven make it regardless of its Body, which lies in contempt and misery? that's an effect which Christ's personal Glory never produced in him towards us, nor a good man's preferment would produce in him to his poor and miserable friends in this World, as we see in the case of Joseph but now instanced in. It is therefore harsh and incongruous to suppose the Soul's love to the Body was extinguished in the parting hour, and that now, out of sight, out of mind

Object. But was it not urged before in opposition to this assertion, that the Souls of the righteous looked upon their Bodies as the Prisons, and sighed for deliverance by death, and greatly rejoiced in the hope and fore-sight of that Liberty death would restore them to? How doth this consist with such reluctancies at parting, and inclinations to re-union.

Sol. The Objection doth not suppose any Man to be totally free from all reluctancies and unwillingness to die. The holiest Souls that ever lived in Bodies of flesh will give an unwilling shrug when it comes to the parting point, 2 Cor. 5. 2. But this their willingness to be gone arises from two other grounds, which make it consistent enough with its reluctancies at parting, and inclination to a second meeting.

(1.) This willingness to die, doth not suppose the Soul's love to the Body to be utterly extinguished, but mastered and overpowered by another and stronger love. There is in every Christian a double love, one natural to the Body, and the things below; the other surpernatural, to Christ, and the things above; the latter doth not extinguish, tho' it conquer and subdue the other. Love to the Body pulls backward, love to Christ pulls forward, and finally prevails. This is so consistent with it that it supposes natural reluctation and unwillingness to part.

(2.) The willingness of God's people to be dissolved, must not be understood absolutely, but comparatively: In that sense the Apostle will be understood, 2 Cor. 5. 8. We are confident I say, and willing rather to be absent from the Body, and present with the Lord, (i. e.) Rather than to live always a life of sin, sorrow and absence from God, Death is not desirable in and for it self, but only as it is the Soul's outlet from sin, and its inlet to God.

So that the very best desire is but comparatively, and it is but few who find the love of this animal life subacted and overpowered by high raised acts of faith and love. The generality even of good Souls feel strong renitencies, and suffer sharp conflicts at their dissolution. All which discovers with what lothness and unwillingness the Soul unclasps its arms to let go its Body. Now as Divines argue the frame of Christ's heart in Heaven towards his people on earth, from all those endearing passages and demonstrations of love he gave them at parting; so we here argue the continued love and inclination of the Soul to its Body after it is in Heaven, from the manifold demonstrations it gave of its affection to it in this World, especially in the parting hour. No considerations in all the World, less than the more full fruition of God, and freedom from sin, could possibly have prevailed with it to quit the Body, tho' but for a time, and leave it in the dust. Which is our third Argument:

Argum. IV. And as the dolorous parting hour evidenceth it, so doth the Joy with which it receives it again at the Resurrection. If it part from it so heavily, and meet it again with joy unspeakable; sure then it still retaineth much love for it, and desires to be re-espoused to it, in the interval. Now, that its meeting in the Resurrection is a day of joy to the Soul, is evident, because it is called the time of Refreshment, Acts 3. 19. And they awake with singing out of the dust, Isa. 26. 19. If the direct and immediate scope of the Prophet point not (as some think it doth) at the Resurrection, yet it is allowed by all to be a very lively allusion to it; which is sufficient for my purpose. And indeed none that understands and believes the design and business of that day, can possibly doubt but there was reason enough to call it a time of refreshment, a singing morning; for the Souls of the righteous come from Heaven with Christ, and the whole Host of shouting Angels; not to be spectators only, but the subjects of that day's Triumph. They come to re-assume; and be re-espoused to their own Bodies, this being the appointed time for God to vindicate and rescue them from the tyrannical power of the Grave, to endow them with spiritual qualities at their second marriage to their Souls, that in both parts they may be completely happy. O the joyful claspings and dear embraces betwixt them, who but themselves can understand! And by the way, this removes the Objection fore-mentioned, of the miseries and prejudices the Soul suffered in this World, in and from the Body: For now it receives it a spiritual Body, (i. e.) so subdued to, and fitted for the use of the Spirit, as never to impede, clog, or obstruct its motions and inclinations any more,

1 Cor. 15.

1 Cor. 15. 44. In this hope it parted from it, and with this conſolation it now receives it again.

Argum. V. There are many Scriptures which very much favour, if they do not poſitively conclude the Soul's inclination to, and deſire to be re-united with its own Body, even whilſt it is in the ſtate of its ſingle glorification in Heaven. Certainly our Souls leave not our Bodies at death, as the Oſtrich doth her Egg in the ſand, without any farther regard to it, or concernment for it; but they are repreſented as crying to God to remember, avenge, and vindicate them, Rev. 6. 10, 11. How long, Lord, how long wilt thou not avenge our Blood? Our Blood, ſpeaks both the continued Relation and ſuitable Affection they have to their abſent Bodies.

And to the ſame ſenſe a judicious and learned Pen expounds that place, Job 14. 14. (which is commonly but I know not how fitly, accommodated to another purpoſe) All the days of my appointed time will I wait 'till my change come; which words, by a diligent comparing of the Context, appear to have this for their proper ſcope and ſenſe.

Mr. How's Bleſſedneſs of the Righteous, p. 170, 171.

'Job in the former Verſe had expreſſed his 'confidence by way of petition, that at a ſet 'and appointed time God would remember him, 'ſo as to recal him out of the Grave; and now 'minded to ſpeak out more fully, puts the Que'ſtion to himſelf, If a Man die, ſhall he live again? 'And thus anſwers it, All the days of my appointed 'time (that is, of the appointed time which he 'mentioned before, when God ſhould revive him 'out of the Duſt) will I wait till my change come; 'that is, that glorious change, when the corrup'tion of a loathſome Grave ſhould be exchang'd 'for immortal Glory: which he amplifies and 'utters more expreſly, ver. 15. Thou ſhalt call, and I 'will anſwer: thou ſhalt have a deſire to the work of 'thy hands; thou wilt not always forget to reſtore 'and perfect thine own Creature. And ſurely 'this waiting is not the act of his inanimate 'ſleeping Duſt, but of that part which ſhould be 'capable of ſuch an Action; q. d. I, in that part 'which ſhall be ſtill alive, ſhall patiently wait the 'appointed time of reviving me in that part alſo, 'which Death and the Grave ſhall inſult over in a 'temporary triumph in the mean time.'

Upon theſe grounds I think the inclination of the ſeparated Spirits of the Juſt to their own Bodies to be a juſtifiable Opinion. As for the Damned, we have no reaſon to think ſuch a re-union to be deſirable to them; for alas! it will be but the increaſe and aggravation of their Torments; which conſideration is ſufficient to over-power and ſtifle the inclination of Nature, and make the very thoughts of it horrid and dreadful. To what end (as the Prophet ſpeaks in another caſe) is it for them to deſire that day? It will be a day of darkneſs and gloomineſs to them; re-union being deſigned to complete the Happineſs of the one, and the miſery of the other.

But before I take off my hand, and diſmiſs this Queſtion, I muſt remember that I am Debtor to two Objections.

Object. 1. The Soul can both live and act ſeparate from the Body, it needs it not; and if it don't want, why ſhould it deſire it?

Sol. The life and actings of the glorified are conſiderable two ways, (1.) Singly and abſtractedly for the life and action of one part: and ſo we confeſs the Soul lives happily, and acts forth its own powers freely in the ſtate of ſeparation. (2.) Perſonally, or concretely, as it is the life and action of the whole Man, and ſo it doth both need and deſire the conjunction or re-union of the Body; for the Body is not only a part of Chriſt's Purchaſe as well as the Soul, and is to have its own Glory as well as it, but it is alſo a conſtitutive part of a complete glorified Perſon; and ſo conſidered, the Saints are not perfectly happy 'till this re-union be effected, which is the true ground and reaſon of this its deſire.

Object. 2. But this Hypotheſis ſeems to thwart the account given in Scripture of the reſt, and placid ſtate of ſeparate Souls: for look as Bodies which gravitate and propend do not reſt, ſo neither do Souls which incline and deſire.

Sol. There is a vaſt difference betwixt the tendencies and propenſions of Souls in the way to Glory, and in Glory: we that are abſent from the Lord, can find no reſt in the way; but thoſe that are with the Lord can reſt in Jeſus, and yet wait without anxiety, or ſelf-torturing impatience, for the Accompliſhment of the Promiſes to their abſent Bodies, Rev. 6. 10, 11.

Corollary. Let this provoke us all to get ſanctified Souls to rule and uſe theſe their Bodies now for God. This will abundantly ſweeten their parting at Death, and their meeting again at the Reſurrection of the Juſt: elſe their parting will be doleful, and their next meeting dreadful. And ſo much for the doctrine of Separation.

The Uſes of the Point.

OUR way is now open to the Improvement and Uſe of this excellent Subject and Doctrine of Separation; and certainly it affords as rich an entertainment for our Affections as for our Minds, in the following Uſes; of which the firſt will be for our Information in ſix practical Inferences.

Infer. I. If this be the life and ſtate of gracious Souls after their ſeparation from the Body, Then holy perſons ought not to entertain diſmal and terrifying thoughts of their own diſſolution.

The Apprehenſions and thoughts of Death ſhould have a peculiar pleaſantneſs in the minds of Believers. You have heard into what a bleſſed Preſence and Communion Death introduceth your Souls; how it leads you out of a Body of Sin, a World of Sorrows, the Society of imperfect Saints, to an innumerable company of Angels, and to the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect, to that lovely Mount Sion, to the heavenly Sanctuary, to the bleſſed Viſions of the Face of God. Oh! methinks there hath been enough ſaid, to make all the Souls in whom the well-grounded hopes of the life of Glory are found, to cry out with the Apoſtle, We are confident, I ſay, yea, and willing rather to be abſent from the Body, and preſent with the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 8.

When good Muſculus drew near his end, how ſweet and pleaſant was this Meditation to his Soul! Hear his Swan-like Song:

* Nil ſupereſt, vitæ frigus præcordia captat;
Sed, tu Chriſte, mihi vita perennis ades:
Quid trepidas anima, ad ſedes abitura quietis?
En tibi ductor adeſt Angelus ille tuus.
Linque domum hanc miſeram, nunc in ſua fata ruentem;
Quam tibi fida Dei dextera reſtituet.

* Melchior Adams, in vita Muſculi, p. 385.

Peccaſti? Scio, ſed Chriſtus credentibus in ſe,
Peccata expurgat ſanguine cuncta ſuo.
Horribilis mors eſt? Fateor, ſed proxima vita eſt,
Ad quam te Chriſti gratia certa vocat.
Præſto eſt de Satana, peccato & morte triumphans
Chriſtus; ad hunc igitur læta alacriſque migra.

Which may be thus tranſlated

Cold Death my heart invades, my life doth flie.
O Chriſt, my everlaſting life draw nigh.
Why quivereſt thou, my ſoul, within my Breaſt?
Thine Angel's come to lead thee to thy reſt.
Quit chearfully this drooping houſe of clay;
God will reſtore it in the appointed day.
Has't ſinn'd? I know it, let not that be urg'd;
For Chriſt thy ſins with his own Blood hath purg'd.
Is Death afrighting? True, but yet withal
Conſider Chriſt thro' Death to life doth call.
He triumphs over Satan, Sin, and Death;
Therefore with joy reſign thy dying breath.

Much in the ſame chearful frame was the heart of dying Bullinger, when his mournful Friends expreſſed their ſenſe of the loſs they ſhould ſuſtain by his removal. Why, ſaid he, if God will make any farther uſe of my Labours in the Miniſtry, he will renew my ſtrength, and I will gladly ſerve him: But if he pleaſe (as I deſire he would) to call me hence, I am ready to obey his Will; and nothing more pleaſant can befal me, than to leave this ſinful and miſerable World to go to my Saviour Chriſt. O that all who are out of the danger of death were thus got out of the dread of death too.

Si Deo viſum fuerit me a opera ulterius in Eccleſiæ miniſterio uti, ipſe vires ſuppeditabit, & libens illi parebo; ſin me voluerit (quod opto) ex hac vita evocare, paratus ſum illius voluntati obſequi; ac nihil eſt quod jucundius poſſit mihi contingere, quam ex hoc miſero & corruptiſſimo ſeculo ad Chriſtum ſervatorem meum migrare. Idem ibid.

Let them only tremble and be convuls'd at the thoughts and ſight of death, whoſe Souls muſt fall into the hands of a ſin-revenging God by the ſtroke of Death; who are to breathe out their laſt hope with their laſt breath. Death is yours, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 3. 22. your Friend, your Privilege, your Paſſage to Heaven; 'tis your ignorance of it which breeds your fears about it.

Infer. II. Gather from hence the abſolute indiſpenſable neceſſity of your Union with Chriſt, before your diſſolution by Death.

Woe to that Soul which ſhall be ſeparated from its Body before it be united with Chriſt: none but the Spirits of juſt Men are made perfect at Death. Righteous Souls are the only qualified Subjects of Bleſſedneſs.

'Tis true, every Soul hath a natural capacity of Happineſs, but gracious Souls only have an actual meetneſs for Glory. The Scriptures tell us in round and plain words, that without Holineſs no man ſhall ſee the Lord, Heb. 12. 14. that except we be regenerate and born again we cannot ſee the Kingdom of God, John 3. 3. You make the greateſt adventure that ever was made by man; indeed an adventure infinitely too great for any man to make, when you ſhoot the Gulph of vaſt Eternity upon terms of hazard and uncertainty.

What thinkeſt thou, Reader? dareſt thou adventure thy Soul and eternal Happineſs upon it, that the work of Regeneration and Sanctification, that very ſame work of Grace which the Spirit of God hangs all thy Hopes of Heaven upon in theſe Scriptures, is truly wrought by him in thy Soul? Conſider it well, pauſe upon it again and again before thou go forth. Should a miſtake be committed here, (and nothing is more eaſy or common all the World over than ſuch miſtakes) thou art irrecoverably gone. This venture can be made but once, and the miſcarriage is never to be retrieved afterwards; thou haſt not another Soul to adventure, nor a ſecond adventure to make of this. Well might the Apoſtle Peter call for all diligence to make our calling and our election ſure: That can never be made too ſure, which is ſo invaluable in its worth, and to be but once adventured.

Infer. III. How prejudicial is it to dying men to be then incumbred, diverted and diſtracted about earthly concernments, when the time of their departure is at hand!

The buſineſs and imployment of dying perſons is of ſo vaſt importance and weight, that every moment of their time, need to be carefully ſaved and applied to this their preſent and moſt important concern. How well ſoever you have improved the time of life, believe it you will find work enough upon your hands at death: dying hours will be found to be buſy and laborious hours, even to the moſt painful, ſerious and induſtrious Souls, whoſe life hath been moſtly ſpent in preparations for death. Leave not the proper buſineſs of other days to that day; for that day will have buſineſs enough of its own. Sufficient for that day are the labours thereof. Let a few Conſiderations be pondered to clear and confirm this Inference.

Conſid. 1. The buſineſs and imployment of dying Perſons is of the moſt ſerious, awful and ſolemn nature and importance; it is their laſt preparatory work on earth, to their immediate appearance before God their Judge, Heb. 9. 27. it is their ſhooting the Gulph into Eternity, and leaving this World, and all their acquaintance and intereſts therein for ever, Iſai. 28. 11. It is therefore a Work by it ſelf to die; a Work requiring the moſt intenſe, deep and undiſturbed exerciſes of all the Abilities and Graces of the inner man; and all little enough.

Conſid. 2. Time is exceeding precious with dying men; the laſt ſand is ready to fall, and therefore not to be waſted as it was wont to be. When we had a fair proſpect of many years before us, we made little account of an hour or day; but now one of thoſe hours which we ſo carelefly laviſhed away, is of more value than all this World to us, eſpecially if the whole weight of Eternity ſhould hang upon it, (as oftentimes it doth) then the loſs of that portion of time, is the loſs of Soul, Body, and Hope for evermore.

Conſid. 3. Much of that little precious time of departing Souls will be unavoidably taken up and imployed about the inexcuſable preſſing calls and neceſſities of diſtreſſed Nature; all that you can do for your Souls muſt then be done only by fits and ſnatches, in the midſt of many diſturbances and frequent interruptions: So that it is rarely found that a dying man can purſue a ſerious Meditation with calm and fixed thoughts; for beſides the pains and faintings of the Body, the Abilities of the mind uſually fail. Here alſo they fall into a ſad Dilemma; if they do not with the utmoſt intention of mind fix their hearts and thoughts on Chriſt, they loſe their comfort if godly, and their Souls if ungodly; and if they do, Friends and Phyſicians aſſure them they will deſtroy their Bodies. Theſe are the ſtraits of men bordering cloſe cloſe upon Eternity; they muſt haſtily catch a few moments in the intervals of pain, and then are put by all again.

Conſid. 4. There is no man living but hath ſomething to do for his own Soul in a dying Hour, and ſomething for others alſo.

Suppoſe the beſt that can be ſuppoſed, that the Soul be in real Union with Chriſt, and that Union be alſo clear; yet it is ſeldom found but there are ſome aſſaults of Satan; or if not, yet how many Relations and Friends need our Experiences and Counſels at ſuch a time? How many things ſhall we have to do after our great and main work is done? And others have a great deal more to do, though as ſafe as the former. O the Knots and Objections that are then to be diſſolv'd and anſwer'd! The unuſual Onſets and Aſſaults of Satan that are then to be reſiſted! And yet moſt dying perſons have much more upon their hands than either of the former. The whole work of Repentance and Faith is to do when time is even done.

Conſid. 5. Few, yea very few are found furniſhed with Wiſdom, Experience and Faithfulneſs to give dying Perſons any conſiderable Aſſiſtance in Soul Affairs: it may be there may be found among the Viſitants of the Sick, now and then a perſon who hath a word of Wiſdom in his heart; but then either he wants opportunity, or courage and faithfulneſs to do the part of a true ſpiritual Friend. Elihu deſcribes the perſon ſo qualified as he ought for this work, Job 33. 23, 24. and calls him one among a thouſand. Some are too cloſe and reſerved, others too trifling and impertinent: Some are willing, but want ability; others are able, but want faithfulneſs: ſome cut too deep by uncharitable cenſoriouſneſs, others skin over the wound too ſlightly, ſpeaking Peace where God and Conſcience ſpeak none. So that little help is to be expected.

Conſid 6. How much therefore doth it deſerve to be lamented, that where there is ſo much to do, ſo little time to do it, and ſo few to help in the beſt improvement of it, all ſhould be loſt as to their Souls by earthly incumbrances and worldly affairs, which might have been done ſooner and better in a more proper ſeaſon! O therefore let me perſwade all men to take heed of bringing the proper buſineſs of healthful days to their ſick beds.

Infer. IV. What an excellent Creature is the Soul of Man, which is capable, not only of ſuch preparations for God whilſt it is in the Body, but of ſuch ſights and enjoyments of God when it lives without a Body?

Here the Spirit of God works upon it in the way of Grace and Sanctification, Eph. 2. 10. The ſcope and deſign of this his Workmanſhip, is to qualify and make us meet for the Life of Heaven, 2 Cor. 5. 5. For this ſelf-ſame thing, or purpoſe, our Souls are wrought or moulded by Grace into quite another frame and temper than that which Nature gave them: and when he hath wrought out and finiſhed all that he intends to be wrought in the way of Sanctification, then ſhall it be called up to the higheſt Enjoyments and Imployments for ever that a Creature is ſuſceptible of.

Herein the Dignity of the Soul appears, that no other Creature in this World beſide it, hath a natural capacity, either to be ſanctified inherently in this World, or glorified everlaſtingly in that to come, to be transformed into the Image, and filled with the Joy of the Lord. There are Myriads of other Souls in this World beſides ours, but to none of them is the Spirit of Sanctification ſent, but only to ours; The Souls of Animals ſerve only to move the dull and ſluggiſh matter, and take in for a few days the ſenſitive Pleaſures of the Creation, and ſo expire, having no natural capacity of, or deſignation for any higher Imployment or Enjoyment.

And it deſerves a moſt ſerious animadverſion, that this vaſt capacity of the Soul for eternal Bleſſedneſs, muſt of neceſſity make it capable of ſo much the more miſery and ſelf-torment, if at laſt it fail of that Bleſſedneſs: For it is apparent they do not periſh becauſe they are uncapable, but becauſe they are unwilling; not becauſe their Souls wanted any natural Faculty that others have, but becauſe they would not open thoſe they have to receive Chriſt in the way of Faith and Obedience, as others did.

Think upon this you that live only to eat, and drink, and ſleep, and play, as the Birds and Beaſts of the Field do; what need was there of a reaſonable Soul for ſuch ſenſual Employments? Do not your noble Faculties ſpeak your deſignation for higher uſes? and will you not wiſh to exchange Souls with the moſt vile and deſpicable Animal in this World, if it were poſſible to be done? Certainly it were better for you to have no capacity of eternal Bleſſedneſs, (as they have not) if you do not enjoy it; and no capacity of torment beyond this life, (as they have not) if you muſt certainly endure it.

Infer. V. If our Souls and Bodies muſt be ſeparated ſhortly, how patiently ſhould we bear all leſſer Separations, that may or will be made betwixt us and any other Enjoyments in this World?

No Union is ſo intimate, ſtrict, and dear, as that betwixt your Souls and Bodies. All your Relations and Enjoyments in this World, hang looſer from your Souls than your Bodies do: and if it be your duty patiently and ſubmiſſively to ſuffer a painful parting pull from your Bodies; it is doubtleſs your duty to ſuffer meekly and patiently a ſeparation from other things, which are but a prelude to it, and a meer ſhadow of it. 'Tis good to put ſuch Caſes to our ſelves in the midſt of our pleaſant Injoyments.

I have now many comfortable Relatives in the World, Wife, Children, Kindred, and Friends; God hath made them pleaſant to me, but he may bereave me of all theſe. Doth not Providence ring ſuch changes all the World over! Are not all Kingdoms, Cities, and Towns, full of the ſighs and laments of Widows, Orphans, and Friends bereaved of their pleaſant and uſeful Relations? But if God will have it ſo, 'tis our duty to bound our Sorrows, remembring the time is ſhort, 1 Cor. 7. 29. In a few Days we muſt be ſtript much nearer, even out of our own Bodies by Death.

God may alſo ſeparate betwixt me and my health by ſickneſs, ſo that the pleaſure of this World ſhall be cut off from me; but ſickneſs is not death, though it be a prelude and ſtep towards it: I may well bear this with patience who muſt ſubmiſſively bear ſharper pains than theſe e'er long. Yea, and well may I bear this ſubmiſſively, conſidering that by ſuch imbittering and weaning Providences God is preparing me for a much eaſier Diſſolution, than if I ſhould live at eaſe in the Body all my Days, till Death come to make ſo great and ſudden a change upon me.

God may also separate betwixt me and my liberty by restraint. It hath been the lot of the best Men that ever were in the World; and if it should be ours also, we should not be much startled at it, considering these Bodies of ours must be shortly pent up in a straiter, darker, and more loathsome place of confinement, than any Prison in this World can be. The Grave is a darker place, Job 17. 13. and your abode there will be longer, Eccl. 11. 8.

These and all other our outward Enjoyments are separable things, and it's good thus to alleviate our loss of them.

Infer. VI. How heavenly should the tempers and frames of those Souls be who are Candidates for Heaven, and must be so shortly numbered with the Spirits of just Men made perfect!

'Tis reasonable that we all begin to be, that which we expect to be for ever; to learn that way of living and conversing, which we believe must be our everlasting Life and Business in the World to come. Let them that hope to live with Angels in Heaven, learn to live like Angels on Earth, in Holiness, Activity, and ready Obedience.

There is the greatest reason that our minds be there where our Souls are to be for ever. A spiritual mind will be found possible, congruous, sweet, and evidential of an Interest in that Glory, to all those holy Souls who are preparing and designed for it.

1. It is possible, notwithstanding the Clogs and Entanglements of the Body, to be heavenly minded. Others have attained it, Phil. 3. 20. Two things make a heavenly Conversation possible to Men, viz.

(1.) The natural Abilities,
(2.) The gracious Principles, } of the Mind.

(1.) The natural Abilities of the mind, that can in a minute's time dispatch a nimble Messenger to Heaven, and mount its thoughts from this to that world in a trice. The power of Cogitation is a rich Indowment of the Soul, such as no other creature on Earth is participant of. Tho' spiritual thoughs be not the natural growth of the Soul, yet thoughts capable of being spiritualized are. And without this ability of projecting thoughts, all intercourse must have been cut off.

(2.) The gracious Principles implanted in the Soul, do actually incline the mind, and mount its thoughts Heaven-ward. Yea, this will prove more than a possibility of a Conversation in Heaven; whilst Saints tabernacle on Earth in bodies of flesh, it will almost prove an impossibility that it should be otherwise, for these spiritual Principles setting the bent and tendency of the heart Heaven-ward, we must act against the very law of our new Nature, when we place our Affections elsewhere.

2. A mind in Heaven is most congruous, decorous and comely for those that are the enroll'd Inhabitants of that heavenly City. Where should a Christian's Love be, but where his Lord is? Our hearts and our homes do not use to be long asunder. It becomes you so to think, and so to speak now, as those who make account to be shortly singing Hallelujahs before the Throne.

3. 'Tis most sweet and delightful; no pleasure in all this World comparable to this pleasure; Rom. 8. 6. To be spiritually minded is life and peace. 'Tis a young Heaven born in the Soul in its way thither.

4. To conclude: it is evidential of your Interest in it: An agreeable frame is the surest title, Col. 3. 1, 2. Math. 6. 21. If Heaven attract your minds now, it will center them for ever.

Use II. This Doctrine of the separation of the Spirits of the Just from their Bodies, as it lies before you in this Discourse, affords a singular help to all the People of God, to entertain lovely and pleasant thoughts of that Day, to make Death not only an unregretted, but a most pleasant and desirable thing to their Souls.

I know there is a pure, simple, natural fear of Death, from which you must not expect to be perfectly freed by all the Arguments in the World. And there is a reverential awful fear of Death, which it would be your prejudice and loss to have destroyed. You will have a natural, and ought to have a reverential fear of Death: the one flows from your sensitive, the other from your sanctified nature.

But it is a third sort of fear which doth you all the mischief, a fear springing in gracious Souls out of the weakness of their Graces, and the strength of their unmortified Affections; a fear arising partly out of the darkness of our minds, and partly out of the sensuality and earthliness of our hearts; this fear is that which so convulseth our Souls when Death is near, and imbitters our lives, even whilst it is at a distance. He that hath been over-heated in his Affections to this World, and over-cooled by diversions and temptations, neglects and intermissions, to that World, cannot chuse but give an unwilling shrug, if not a frightful screech at the appearance of Death.

And this being the sad case of too many good and upright Souls for the main: and there being so few even amongst serious Christians that have attained to that courage and complacence in the thoughts of Death which the Apostle speaks of, 2 Cor. 5. 8. to be both confident and willing rather to be absent from the Body, and to be present with the Lord; I will from this Discourse furnish them with some special assistance therein. But withal, I must tell you upon what great disadvantages I am here to dispute with your fears: so strong is the current of natural and vicious fear, that except a special hand of God back and set on the Arguments that shall be urged, they will be as easily swept away before it, as so many straws by a rapid Torrent; nor will it be to any more purpose to oppose my breath to them, than to the Tides and Waves of the Sea.

Moreover, I am fully convinced by long and often experience, how unsteady and inconstant the frames and tempers of the best hearts are; and that if it be not full home, yet it is next to an impossibility to fix them in such a temper as this I aim at is. Where is that Man to be found, who after the revolutions of many years, and in those years various dispensations of providence without him, altering his condition, and greater variety of temptations within, can yet say, notwithstanding all these various Aspects and Positions, his heart hath still held one steddy and invariable tenour and course?

Alas, there be very few (if any) of such sound and athletick temper of mind, whose Pulse beats with an even stroke, through all inequalities of condition, alike free and willing at one time as another, to be uncloathed of the Body, and to be with Christ. This height of Faith, and depth of Mortification; this strength of love to Christ, and ardour of holy desire, are degrees of Grace to which very few attain.

The

The Caſe ſtanding thus, it is no more than needs, to urge all ſorts of Arguments upon our timorous and unſteady hearts; and it's like to prove a hard and difficult task to bring the heart but to a quiet and unregretting ſubmiſſion to the appointment of God herein, though ſubmiſſion be one of the loweſt ſteps of duty in this Caſe.

If it be hard to fix our thoughts but an hour on ſuch an unpleaſing ſubject as Death, how hard muſt it be to bring over the conſent of the will? If we cannot endure it at a diſtance in our thoughts, how ſhall we embrace and hug it in our boſoms? If our thoughts fly back with diſtaſte and impatience, no wonder if our will be obſtinate and refractary. We muſt firſt prevail with our thoughts to fix themſelves, and think cloſe to ſuch a ſubject, before it can be expected we chearfully reſign our ſelves into the hands of Death. We cannot be willing to go along with Death, 'till we have ſome acquaintance with it; and acquainted with it we cannot be, 'till we accuſtom our ſelves to think aſſiduouſly and calmly of it They that have dwelt many years at Death's door, both in reſpect of the condition of their Bodies, and diſpoſition of their Minds, yet find reluctancy enough when it comes to the point.

Object. But if ſeparation from the Body be (as it is) an enemy to nature, and there be no poſſibility to extinguiſh natural averſation: to what purpoſe is it to argue and perſuade, where there is no expectation of ſucceſs?

Sol. Death is conſiderable two ways by the people of God:

1. As an Enemy to Nature.
2. As a Medium to Glory.

If we conſider it ſimply in it ſelf, as an Enemy to Nature, there is nothing in it for which we ſhould deſire it; but if we conſider it as a Medium or Paſſage into Glory, yea, the only ordinary way through which all the Saints muſt paſs out of this into a better State; ſo it will appear not only tolerable, but deſirable to prepared Souls. Were there not a Shoar of Glory on the other Side of theſe black Waters of Death, for my own part I ſhould rather chuſe to live meanly than to die eaſily. If both Parts were to periſh at Death, there were no reaſon to perſuade one to be willing to deliver up the other. It were a Madneſs for the Soul to deſire to be diſſolv'd, if it were ſo far from being better out of the Body than in it, that it ſhould have no being at all. But, Chriſtians let me tell you, Death is ſo far from being a Bar, that it is a Bridge in your Way to Glory, and you are never like to come thither but by paſſing over it; except therefore you will look beyond it, you will never ſee any Deſirableneſs in it. I deſire to be diſſolv'd (ſaith Paul) and to be with Chriſt, which is far better. To be with Death is ſad, but to be with Chriſt is ſweet; to endure the Pains of Death is doleful, but to ſee the Face of Chriſt is joyful; to part with your pleaſant Habitations is irkſome, but to be lodged in the Heavenly Manſions is moſt delightful; parting Hour with dear Relations is cutting, but meeting Hour with Jeſus Chriſt is tranſporting; to be rid of your own Bodies is not pleaſing, but to be rid of Sin, and that for ever, what can be more pleaſing to a gracious Soul?

You ſee then in what ſenſe I preſent Death as a deſirable thing to the People of God: And therefore ſeeing Nature teacheth us (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) to put the more abundant Comelineſs upon the uncomely Parts; ſuffer me to dreſs up Death in its beſt Ornaments, and preſent it to you in the following Arguments, as a beautiful and comely Object of your conditional and well regulated Deſires. And, Argum. I. If upon a fair and juſt Account there ſhall appear to be more gain to Believers in Death, than there is in Life: Reaſon muſt needs vote Death to be better to them that are in Chriſt, than Life can be; and conſequently it ſhould be deſirable in their Eyes.

'Tis a clear Dictate of Reaſon in Caſe of Choice to chuſe that which is beſt for us. Who is there that freely exerciſes Reaſon and Choice together, that will not do ſo?

What Merchant will not part with a Hundred Pounds worth of Glaſs Beads and Pendents for a Tun of Gold? A few Tinſel Toys, for as many rich Diamonds? Mercatura eſt amittere, ut lucreris; that is true Merchandize, to part with Things of leſſer, for Things of greater Value.

Now, if you will be tried and determined by God's Book of Rates, then the Caſe is determined quickly, and the Advantage appears exceedingly upon Death's Side, Philip. 1. 21. To me to live, is Chriſt; and to die, is gain.

Object. True, it might be ſo to Paul, who was eminent in Grace, and ripe for Glory; but it may be Loſs to others, who have not attained the height of his Holineſs or Aſſurance.

Sol. The true and plain Senſe of the Objection is this, Whether Heaven and Chriſt be as much Gain to him that enjoys them, tho' behind others both in Grace and Obedience, as it is to them who are more eminent in Grace, and have done and ſuffered more for their Sake? And let it be determined by your ſelves. But if your Meaning be, that Paul was ready for Death, and ſo are not you; his Work and Courſe was almoſt comfortably finiſhed, and ſo is not yours; his Death therefore muſt needs be gain to him, but it may be Loſs to you, even the Loſs of all that you are worth for ever.

To this I ſay, The Wiſdom of God orders the Time of his Peoples Death, as well as all other Circumſtances about it: and in this, your Hearts may be at perfect reſt, That being in Chriſt, you can never die to your Loſs, die when you will. I know you will reply, That if your Union with Chriſt were clear, the Controverſie were ended; but then you muſt alſo conſider, they are as ſafe who die by an Act of Recumbency upon Chriſt, as thoſe that die in the fulleſt aſſurance of their Intereſt in him.

And beſide, your Reluctancies and Averſations to Death are none of your Way to aſſurance; but ſuch a ſtrong Averſation to Sin, and ſuch a vehement Deſire after, and Love to Chriſt, as can make you willing to quit all that is dear and deſirable to you in this World for his Sake, is the very next Door or Step to Aſſurance; and if the Lord bring your Hearts to this Frame, and fix them there, it is not like you will be long without it.

But to return; Paul had here valued Life, with a full Allowance of all the Benefits and Advantages of it; To me to live, is Chriſt; that is, If I live, I ſhall live in Communion with Chriſt, and ſervice for Chriſt, and in the Midſt of all thoſe Comforts which uſually reſult from both. Here's Life with the moſt weighty and deſirable Benefits of it laid in one Scale, and he lays Death, and probably a violent Death too, (for of that he ſpeaks afterwards, Ch. 2. 17.) in t'other Scale. Thus he fills the Scale, and the Balance breaks on Death's side; yea, it comes down with a πολλῷ μᾶλλον κρεῖσσον, a far far better.

Mr. How in Mrs. Margaret Baxter's Funeral Sermon.

But here falls in (as an * excellent Person observes) a rub in the way: there are in this Case two Judges, the Flesh and the Spirit, and they cannot agree upon the Values, but contradict each other. Nature saith, It's far far better to live than to die, and will not be beaten off from it. What then? I hope you will not put blind and partial Nature in Competition with God also, as you do Life with Death. But seeing Nature can plead so powerfully, as well as Grace, let us hear what those strong Reasons are, that are urged by the Flesh on Life's Side, and what the Soul hath to reply and plead on Death's Side, (for the Body can plead, and that charmingly too, tho' not by Words and Sounds) and then determine the Matter as we shall see Cause: but be sure Prejudice pull not down the Balance.

1. The Pleas of Nature for Life, and against Dissolution.

And here the doleful Voice of Nature, laments, pleads, and bemoans it self to the willing Soul.

'Oh my Soul! what dost thou mean 'by these thy Desires to be dissolved? 'Art thou in earnest, when thou 'saist thou art willing to leave thine own Body 'and be gone? Consider, and think again e'er 'thou bid me farewel, what thou art to me, and 'what I have been and am to thee; thou art my 'Soul, that is, my Prop, my Beauty, my Ho 'nour, my Life, and indeed all that is comfortable to me. If thou depart, what am I but a 'Spectacle of Pity, an abhorr'd Carcase in a 'few Moments? a Prey to the Worms, a Captive 'to Death? If thou depart, my Candle is put 'out, and I am left in the Horrors of Darkness.

'I am thy House, thy delightful Habitation, 'the House in which thou hast dwelt from the 'first moment of thy Creation, and never lodg-'edst one Night in any other: Every Room in me 'hath one way or other been a Banquetting-room 'for thy Entertainment, a Room of Pleasure; 'all my Senses have been Purveyors for thy De-'light; my Members have all of them been thine 'Instruments and Servants to execute thy Com-'mands and Pleasure. If thou and I part, it 'must be in a Showre: thou shalt feel such Pains, 'such travailling Throes, such deep emphatical 'Groans, such Sweats, such Agonies as thou never 'felt'st before. For Death hath somewhat of An-'guish peculiar to it self, and which is unknown, 'tho' guessed at by the Living. Besides, whenever 'thou leavest me, thou leavest all that is and 'hath been comfortable to thee in this World: 'thy House shall know thee no more, Job 7. 10. 'thy Lands, thy Money, thy Trade, which have 'cost thee so many careful Thoughts, and yield-'ed thee so many Refreshments, shall be thine 'no longer; Death will strip thee out of all these, 'and leave thee naked.

'Thou hast also, since thou becamest mine, 'contracted manifold Relations in the World, 'which I know are dear unto thee, I know it by 'costly Experience. How hast thou made me to 'wear and waste my self in Labours, Cares, and 'Watchings for them? But if thou wilt be gone, 'all these must be left exposed, God knows to 'what Wants, Abuses, and Miseries! for I can do 'nothing for them or my self, if once thou leave 'me. Thus it charms and pleads; thus it lay-eth, as it were, violent Hands upon the Soul, and saith, 'Oh my Soul! thou shalt not depart. It hangs about it much as the Wife and Children of good Galeacius Carracciolus did about him, when he was leaving Italy to go to Geneva (a lively Emblem of the Case before us.) It saith to the Soul, as Joab did to David, Thou hast shamed my Face this Day, in that thou lovest thine Enemy, Death, and hatest me thy Friend. 'Oh my Soul! my Life! my 'Darling! my dear and only One! let nothing 'but unavoidable Necessity part Thee and Me. All this the Flesh can plead, and a great deal more than this, and that a thousand times more powerfully and feelingly than any Words can plead the Case. And all its Arguments are back'd by Sense: Sight and Feeling attest what Nature speaks.

2. The Pleas of Faith in behalf of Death.

Let us in the next Place weigh the Pleas and Reasons, which, notwithstanding all this, do overpower and prevail with the believing Soul to be gone, and quit its own Body, and return no more to the Elementary World.

And thus the Power of Faith and Love enable it to reply:

'My dear Body, the Companion and Partner 'of my Comforts and Troubles in the Days of my 'Pilgrimage on Earth, great is my Love, and 'strong are the Bonds of my Affections to thee. 'Thou hast been tenderly, yea, excessively be-'loved by me; my Cares and Fears for thee, 'have been unexpressible, and nothing but the 'love of Jesus Christ is strong enough to gain my 'Consent to part with thee; thy Interest in my 'Affection is great; but as great as it is, and as 'much as I prize thee, I can shake thee off, and 'thrust thee aside to go to Christ.

'Nor may this seem absurd or unreasonable, 'considering that God never designed thee for a Mansion, but only a temporary Tabernacle to me: 'tis true, I have had some Comfort during my 'abode in thee; but I enjoyed those Comforts 'only in thee, not from thee; and many more I 'might have enjoyed, hadst thou not been a Snare 'and a Clog to me.

'Tis thou that hast eaten up my Time, and 'distracted my Thoughts, ensnared my Affections, and drawn me under much Sin and Sorrow. 'However, tho' we may weep over each other as 'Accessaries to the Sins and Miseries we have drawn 'upon our selves, yet in this is our joint Relief, 'that the Blood of Christ hath cleansed us both 'from all Sin.

'And therefore I can part the more easily and 'comfortably from thee, because I part in Hope 'to receive and enjoy thee in a far better Condi-'tion than I leave thee. It is for both our Interests to part for a time: For mine, because I 'shall thereby be freed and delivered from Sin 'and Sorrow, and immediately obtain Rest with 'God, and the Satisfaction of all my Desires in 'his Presence and Enjoyment, which there is no 'other way to obtain, but by Separation from 'thee: and why should I live a groaning, bur-'dened, restless Life always, to gratifie thy fond 'and irrational Desires? If thou lovedst me, thou 'wouldst rejoice, and not repine at my Happiness. 'Parents willingly part with their Children at the 'greatest distance for their Preferment, how 'dearly soever they love them; and dost thou 'envy or repine at mine? I lived many Months 'suffocating obscure Life with thee in the Womb, 'and neither thou nor I had ever tasted or expe-'rienced the Comforts of this World, and the various

'various Delights of Sense, if we had not cast 'the Secundine, and struggled hard for an Entrance 'into this World. And now we are here, alas! 'tho' thou art contented to abide, I live in thee, 'but as we both lived in the Womb, an obscure, 'uneasie, and unsutable Life. Thou canst feed 'upon material Bread, and delight thy self amidst 'the variety of sensitive Objects thou findest here: 'But what are all these things to me? I cannot 'subsist by them; that which is Food to thee, is 'but Chaff, Wind, and Vanity to me. If I stay 'with thee, I shall be still sinning, and still 'groaning: when I leave thee, I shall be imme-'diately freed from both, and arrive at the 'sum and perfection of all my Hopes, Desires, 'and whatsoever I have aimed at, and laboured 'for' in all the Duties of my Life. Let us there-'fore be content to part.

'Shrink not at the horror of a Grave: 'tis in-'deed a dark and solitary House, and the days of 'darkness may be many: but to thee, my dear 'Companion, it shall be a bed of rest; yea, a 'perfumed bed, where thy Lord Jesus lay before 'thee. And let the time of thy abode there be ne-'ver so long, thou shalt not measure it, nor find 'the least tediousness in it. A thousand years 'there shall seem no more in the morning of the 'Resurrection, than the sweetest Nap of an hour 'long seemed to be, when I was wont to lay thee 'upon thy bed to rest.

'The Worms in the Grave shall be nothing to 'thee, nor give thee the thousandth part of that 'trouble that a Flea was wont to do. And tho' I 'leave thee, Jesus Christ shall watch in the mean 'time over thy Dust, and not suffer a grain of it 'to be lost. And I will return assuredly to thee 'again at the time appointed: I take not an ever-'lasting farewel of thee, but depart for a time, 'that I may receive thee for ever. To conclude, 'there is an unavoidable necessity of our parting; 'whether willing or unwilling, we must be sepa-'rated: but the consent of my Will to part with 'thee for the enjoyment of Jesus Christ, will be 'highly acceptable to God, and as a lump of Su-'gar to sweeten the bitter Cup of Death to us 'both.

This, and much more, the gracious Soul hath to say for its separation from the Body, by which it is easie to discern where the gain and advantage of Death lies to all Believers; and consequently how much it must be every way their Interest to be unbodied.

Arg. II. To be weary of the Body upon the pure account and reason of our hatred to sin, and long-ing desires after Jesus Christ, argues strongly Grace in Truth and Grace in Strength: it is both the Test of our sincerity, and Measure of our attainment and maturity of Grace and upon both accounts highly covetable by all the People of God.

It is so great an evidence of the Truth of Grace, that the Scriptures have made it the descriptive Peri-phrasis of a Christian: So we find it in 2 Tim. 4. 8. the Crown of Life is there promised to all them that love the appearance of Christ; i. e. those that love to think of it, that delight to steep their thoughts in subjects belonging to the other World, and cast many a yearning look that way: and, 2 Pet. 3. 12. they are described to be such as are looking for, and hasting to the coming of the day of God. Their earnest expectations and longings do not only put them upon making all the haste they can to be with Christ, but it makes the interposing time seem so tedious and slow, that with their most vehement wishes and desires, they do what they can to accelerate and hasten it, as Rev. 22. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Lovers hours, saith the Proverb, are full of Eternity. 'Oh, said Mr. Rutherford, 'that Christ would make long strides! Oh that 'he would fold up the Heavens as an old Cloak, 'and shovel time and days out of the way! Such desires as these can spring from none but gracious and renewed Souls: for Nature is wholly disaffect-ed to a removal hence upon such motives and con-siderations as these. If others wish at any time for Death, 'tis but in a pet, a present passion provoked by some intolerable anguish, or great distress of Nature. But to look, and long, and hasten to the other World, out of a weariness of sin and a hear-ty willingness to be with Christ, supposes necessa-rily a deep-rooted hatred of sin, abhorring it more than Death it self, the greatest of natural evils; and a real sight of things invisible by the Eye of Faith, without which it is impossible any man's heart should be thus fram'd and temper'd.

And as it evidenceth the truth, so also the strength and maturity of Grace: For, alas! how many thousands of gracious Souls that love the Lord Jesus in sincerity, are to be found quite be-low this temper of mind! Oh! 'tis but here and there one among the Lord's own people that have reached this height and eminence of Faith and Love. It is with the Fruits of the Spirit just as it is with the Fruits of the Earth; some are green and raw, and others are ripe and mellow: the first stick fast on the Branches, you may sha ke and shake again, and not one will drop; or as those Fruits that grow in the Hedges, with their Coats and Integuments enwrapping them, as Nuts, &c. you may try your strength upon them, and sooner break your Nails than disclose and separate them, so fast and close do their husks stick to them: but when time and the influences of Heaven have ripen'd and brought them to their perfection, the Apples drop into your Hands without the least touch, and the Nut falls out of its Case of its own accord: So, much more so, doth the Soul part from its Body when ma-turated, and come to its Strength and Vigour.

Arg. III. It may greatly prevail upon the Will and Resolution of a Believer, to adventure boldly and chearfully upon Death, that our Bodies, of which we are bereaved and deprived by Death, shall be most certainly and advantageously re-stored to us by the Resurrection. The Resurre-ction of the Dead is the Encouragement and Con-solation of the Dying. The more our Faith is establish'd in the Doctrine of the Resurrection, the more we shall surmount the Fears of Dis-solution. If Paul urged it as an Argument to re-concile Philemon to his Servant Onesimus, v. 15. That he therefore departed for a Season, that Philemon might receive him for ever; the same Argument may reconcile every Believer to Death, and take off the prejudice of the Soul against it. You shall surely receive your Bodies again, and enjoy them for ever.

Now the Doctrine of the Resurrection is as sure in it self, as it is comfortable to us; the depth and strength of its Foundation fully answers to the height and sweetness of its Consolation. Be pleased to try the two Pillars thereof, and see which of them may be doubted or shaken, Matth. 22. 29. You err (saith Christ to the Sadducees, who de-nied this Doctrine) not knowing the Scriptures, and the the Power of God. This is the ground and root of their Error, not knowing the Scriptures, and the Power of God: q d. did you know and believe the Scriptures of God, and the Power of God, you would never question this Doctrine of the Resurrection, which is built upon them both. The Power of God convinceth all Men that know and believe it, that it may be so, and the Scriptures of God convince all that know and believe them, that it must be so. As for his Power, who can doubt it? At the Command and Fiat of God, the Earth brought forth every living Creature after his kind, Gen. 1. 24, 25. at his Command Lazarus came forth, John 11. 43. And was there not as much difficulty in either of these, as in our Resurrection? By this Power our Souls were quickened and raised from the Death of Sin and Guilt, to the Spiritual Life of Christ, Eph. 1. 19. And is it not as easie to raise a dead Body as a dead Soul? But what stand I arguing in so plain a Case, when we are assured this mighty Power is able to subdue all things to it self? Phil. 3. 21.

And then, for his Promise that it shall be so, what can be plainer? See 1 Thess. 4. 15, 16. This we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, &c. (i. e.) in the Name or Authority of the Lord, and by Commission and Warrant from him. He first opens his Commission, shews his Credentials, and then publishes the comfortable Doctrine of the Resurrection, and the Saints Preheminence to all others therein.

Well then, what remains in Death to fright and scare a Believer? Is it our parting with these Bodies? Why, it is not for ever that we part with them; as sure as the Power and Promises of God are true, firm, and sufficient to accomplish it, we shall see and enjoy them again. This comforted Job, chap. 19. 25, 26. over all his Diseases, when of all his Enjoyments that once he had, he could not say, My Friends, my Children, my Estate; yet then he could say, My Redeemer. When he looked upon a poor, wasted, withered, loathsom Body of his own, and saw nothing but a Skeleton, an Image of Death, yet then could he see it a glorious Body, by viewing it believingly in this Glass of the Resurrection. So then all the Damage we can receive by Death, is but the absence of our Bodies for a Time; during which Time the Covenant-relation betwixt God and them holds good and firm, Matth. 22. 32. He therefore will take care of them, and in due Time restore them with marvellous Improvements and Endowments to us again, divested of all their Infirmities, and cloathed with Heavenly Qualities and Perfections, 1 Cor. 15. 43, 44. And in the mean Time the Soul attains its Rest, and Happiness, and Satisfaction in the blessed God.

Arg. IV. The Consideration of what we part from, and what we go to, should make the Medium by which we pass from so much Evil to so great Good, lovely and desirable in our Eyes, how unpleasing or bitter soever it be in it self.

No Man desires Physick for it self. There is no Pleasure in bitter Pills and loathsom Potions, except what rises from the End, viz. the disburdening of Nature, and recovery of Health; and this gives it a value with the Sick and Pained. Under a like Consideration is Death desired by sick and pained Souls, who find it better to Die once, than Groan under Burdens continually.

Death certainly is the best Physician next and under Jesus Christ, that ever was employed about them; for it Cures radically and perfectly, so that the Soul never relapses more into any Distemper. Other Medicines are but Anodynes, or at best they relieve us but in Part, and for a Time; but this goes through the Work, and perfects the Cure at once. Methinks that Call of Christ which he gives his Spouse in Can. 4. 8. (Come with me from Lebanon, (my Spouse) with me from Lebanon: and look from the top of Amana, from the top of Shenir and Hermon, from the Lions Dens, from the Mountains of Leopards) scarce suites any Time so well as the Time of Death. Then it is that we depart from the Lions Dens, and the Mountains of Leopards, Places uncomfortable and unsafe. More particularly at Death the Saints depart,

1. From Defiling Corruptions		1. Perfect Purity.
2. From Heart-sinking Sorrows		2. Fulness of Joy.
3. From entangling Temptations	to	3. Everlasting Freedom
4. From distressing Persecutions		4. Full Rest.
5. From pinching Wants		5. Universal Supplies.
6. From distracting Fears		6. Highest Security.
7. From deluding Shadows		7. Substantial Good.

1. From defiling Corruptions into perfect Purity. No Sin hangs about the separated, tho' it do about the sanctified Soul. They come out of the Body suitable to that Character and Encomium, Cant. 4. 7. Thou art all fair, my Love, there is no spot in thee. It doth that for the Saints, which all their Graces and Duties, all their Mercies and Afflictions, could never do. Faith is a great Purifier, Communion with God a great Cleanser, sanctified Afflictions a Refiner's Fire and Fuller's Soap; these have all done their Parts, and been useful in their Places: But none of them, nor all together, perfected this Cure till Death come, and then the Work is done, and the Cure perfected.

All Weeping, all Praying, all Believing, all Hearing, all Sacraments, all the Means and Instruments in the World, cannot do what Death will do for thee. One dying Hour will do what Ten thousand praying Hours never did, nor could do. In this Hour the Design of all those Hours is accomplished; as he that is dead by Mortification is at present Freedom from Sin in respect of Imputation and Dominion, Rom. 6. 7. so he that is justified and mortified, when dead naturally, is immediately freed from the very indwelling and existence of Sin in him. We read of the washing of the Robes of the Saints, in Revel. 7. 14. The Blood of the Lamb cleanseth them from every Spot; but it doth it gradually. The last Spot of Guilt indeed was fetch'd out by one Act of Justification; but the last Spot of Faith is not fetched out till the Time of their Dissolution; when they are come out of the Agonies of Death (which the Scripture calls great Tribulation) then, and not till then, are they perfectly cleansed. Sin brought in Death, and Death carries out Sin.

Oh! what a pure, lovely, shining Creature, is the separated Spirit of a just Man! how clear is its Judgment, how ordinate its Will, how holy and altogether heavenly are all its Affections now! and never till now it feels it self perfectly well, and as it would be.

2. From Heart-sinking Sorrows into Fulness of Joy. The Life we now live is a groaning Life, 2 Cor. 5. 2. where is the Christian, that if his inside could be seen, and his Heart laid naked, would not be found Wounded from many Hands? from the Hand of God, of Enemies, of Friends, of Satan; but especially by the Hands of its own Corruptions? Christ our Head was stiled a Man of Sorrows, Sorrows, from the multitude of his Sorrows; and it is the Lot of all his to be in a State of Sorrow in the Body. In the World (saith he) you shall have Trouble. When I consider how oft the Candle of Sorrow is held to the Thread of Life, I justly wonder how it is protracted to such a length. What Friend, what Enjoyment had we ever in this World, from which no Sorrow, nay, many Sorrows have not sprung up to us? And if the best Comforts bring forth Sorrows, what do the worst Things we meet here bring forth? I suppose there are many Thousands of God's People this Day in the World, that have as much Reason to assume the same new Name that Naomi did, and say, Call me Marah. Look as Day and Night divide all Time betwixt them; so do our Comforts and our Sorrows, only with this Difference, that our Nights of Sorrow, like Winter-Nights, are long, cold, and dark; and our Days of Comfort short, and frequently over-cast.

But when we put off these Bodies, we put off our mourning Garments with them, and shall never Sorrow any more: Thenceforth God wipes away all Tears from his Peoples Eyes, Rev. 2. 4. And that is not all, but they enter into their Master's Joy, even Fulness of Joy and Pleasures for evermore. Groans are turned into Triumphs, and Sighs and Tears into joyful Acclamations and Songs of Praise. Oh that we were once made sensible throughly of the Advantages that come by this Exchange!

3. From entangling Temptations into everlasting Freedom. 'Tis this Body, and the Interests and Concerns of it, upon which Satan raises most of his Batteries against our Souls: 'Tis our Flesh that causeth our Souls to Sin; and whilst the Soul dwells in the Body, it is within Satan's reach to tempt, and defile, and trouble it. Oh what grievous Things do the best Souls endure and suffer on this Account!

Temptations are of two Sorts; ordinary and mediate, by Satan's exciting and managing our Corruptions, by presenting Objects to them; or extraordinary and immediate, like fiery Darts shot immediately out of Hell into the Soul, which puts it all into a Flame and Combustion: Of the former you read in Ja. 1. 14. the latter in Eph. 6. 16. and upon the account of the one and other, the People of God are weary of their Lives. Think what a Grief it must be to a Soul that loves God, to feel in it self such Things as militate against and wound the Name and Honour of God, which is, and ought to be dearer to it than its Life.

But by the Door of Death every gracious Soul makes its escape from the tempting Power of Satan: He can no more touch or affect the Soul with any Temptation, than we can batter the Body of the Sun with Snow-balls: For as Satan can have no access to that Place of Blessedness where the Souls of the Saints are; so if he could, he can find nothing in them to fasten a Temptation upon. The School-men give this as the Reason why the Saints in Heaven are impeccable, because all their Thoughts and Affections are everlastingly fixed in, and employed about the Blessed God, whose Face they continually behold in Glory.

4. From distressing Persecutions into full and perfect Rest. As Death sets us free from the Power of Satan, so from the reach of all Persecutors; There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary are at Rest, as it is in Job 3. 17. The price of one Ahab, who had sold himself to work Wickedness, was a Stock sufficient to purchase many Years trouble to all Israel, 1 Kings 18 17. Wicked Men are as the unquiet troubled Sea which cannot rest, Isa 57. 20. They cannot rest from troubling the Saints, till they cease to be wicked or to live: When God puts out the Candle of their Lives, they are silent in darkness, 1 Sam. 2. 9. And when God puts out the Candle of our Life, we are at rest, tho' they rage never so much in this World. Death is the Saints quietus est, their full and final Discharge from persecuting Enemies. When we are dying, we may say, as Psal. 9. 6. O thou Enemy, Destructions are come to a perpetual End.

God may put an end to these Persecutions before Death, and such a Time according to Promise is to be expected, when our Officers shall be Peace, and our Exactor Righteousness, Isa. 60. 17. but if the accomplishment of the Promise be reserved for Ages to come, and we must spend our Days under the Oppression of the Wicked; yet this is our Comfort, we know when we shall be far enough out of their reach.

5. From pinching Wants to universal Supplies. This is the Day in which the Lord abundantly satisfies the Desires, and supplies the Needs of all his People. There are two Sorts of Wants upon the People of God: Spiritual and Temporal.

Spiritual Wants are the just Complaints of all gracious Souls. You read, 1 Thess. 3. 10. of that which is lacking in the Faith of the Saints: There are none but find many Things lacking to the Perfection of every Grace. Our Knowledge of God wants Clearness and Efficacy; our Love to God Fervour and Constancy; our Faith wants Strength and Stability: Darkness mixes it self with our Knowledge, Deadness with our Love, Unbelief with the purest Acts of Faith. Go where you will, you shall find God's People every where complaining of their Spiritual Wants: one of a dark Head, another of a dead Heart, another of a treacherous Memory. Thus they are loading one another with their Complaints.

Temporal, outward Wants pinch hard also upon many of God's People: The greatest number of them consist of the Poor of this World, Jam. 2. 5. Those whose Souls are discharged and acquitted by God, whose Debts are paid by Jesus Christ, may yet be intangled in a brake of Cares and Troubles in the World, and know not which way to turn themselves in their Straits and Difficulties. But by Death the Saints pass from all their Wants inward and outward to a State of complete Satisfaction, where nothing is lacking: From that Day all their Spiritual Wants are Supplied; for they are now arrived to the Measure of the Stature of the Fulness of Christ, to a perfect Man, Eph. 4. 13. Now that which is perfect is come, and all that was in part is done away, 1 Cor. 13. 10.

And for outward Wants, they shall feel them no more: For putting off the Body, we must needs put off all Cares and Concerns about it. Meats for the Belly, and the Belly for Meats, God shall destroy both it and them, 1 Cor. 6. 13.

6. From distracting Fears into the highest Security and Rest of Thoughts for evermore. The Fears of God's People are either about their Souls, or about their Bodies; the Fears they have about their Souls are inexpressible. Two Things especially exercise their Fears about their Souls. (1.) Whether they be really united to Christ? (2.) Whether they shall be able to continue and persevere severe in the ways of Christ to the End? they are afraid of their Sincerity and of their stability: And these Fears accompany many of God's People from their Regeneration to their Dissolution. O what would they not give, what would they not do, yea, what would they not endure to get full Satisfaction in those Things! Every working of Corruption, every discovery made by Temptation, puts them into a fright, and makes them question all that ever was wrought in them.

And as their Fears are great about the inward, so also about the outward Man; especially when such bloody Preparations seem to be making by the Enemies that have acted such, and so many bloody Tragedies already in the World.

But at Death they enter into a perfect Peace and Security, Isa. 57. 2. No wind of fear shall ever ruffle and disturb their Souls, and put them into a Storm any more.

7. From deluding Shadows into substantial Good. This World is the World of Shadows, and delusive Appearances. Here we are imposed upon and baffled by empty and deceitful Vanities. All we have here, is little else but a Dream: At Death the Soul awakes out of its Dream, and finds it self in the World of Realities, where it feeds upon substantial good to Satisfaction, Psal. 17. 15.

Now the Advantages accruing to the Soul by Death, being so great, and many; tho' the Medium be harsh and ungrateful in it self, yet there is all the Reason in the World we should covet it for the Benefits that come by it.

Arg. V. The foretastes we have had of Heaven already in the Body, should make all the Saints long to be unbodied for the full and perfect Fruition of that Joy; seeing it cannot be fully and perfectly enjoyed by the Soul, till it hath put off the Body by Death.

That there are Prelibations, First-fruits, and Earnests of future Glory given at certain Seasons to Believers in this Life, is put beyond all Doubting, not only by Scripture-testimonies, but frequent Experiences of God's People. I speak not only with the Scriptures, but with the clear Experience of many Saints; when I say, here are to be felt and tasted, even here in the Body, the Earnests of our Inheritance, Eph. 1. 14. The First-fruits of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 23. The sealing of the Spirit, Eph. 1. 13. The very Joy of the Lord, 1 Pet. 1. 8. of the same kind, tho' in a remisser degree, with that of the Glorified.

That the fulness of this Joy cannot be in us whilst we Tabernacle in Bodies of Flesh, is as plain. When Moses desired a sight of that Face which the Spirits of just Men made perfect do continually behold and adore, the Answer was, No Man can see my Face and live, Exod. 33. 18, 19. 20. q. d. Moses, thou askest a great Thing, and understandest not how unable thou art to support that which thou desirest: Should I shew thee my Glory in this compounded State thou now art, it would confound thee, and swallow thee up. Nature, as now constituted, cannot support such a weight of Glory: A Ray, a glimpse of this Light overpowers Man, and breaks such a Clay Vessel to pieces; which is the Reason why the Resurrection must intervene betwixt this State, and that of the Body's Glorification.

And it is not to be doubted, but one main End and Reason why these foretastes of Heaven are given us in the Body, is to embolden the Soul to venture through Death it self for the full Enjoyment of those Delights and Pleasures. They are like the Grapes of Eshcol to the faint-hearted Israelites; or the sweet Wines of Italy to the Gauls, which once tasted, made them restless till they had conquer'd that good Country where they grow. Rom. 8. 23. We which have the First-fruits of the Spirit, even we our selves do groan within our selves, waiting for the Adoption, viz. the Redemption of our Bodies.

Well then, reflect seriously upon those sweet tastes that you have had of God and his Love in your sincere and secret Addresses to him, and Converses with him. What a holy forgetfulness of all Things in this World hath it wrought! How insipid and tasteless hath it rendered the sweetest Creature-enjoyments! What willingness to be dissolved for a more full Fruition of it! God this way brings Heaven nigh to your Souls, out of Design to overcome your Reluctancies at Death, through which you must pass to the Enjoyment of it. And after all those sights and tastes both of the Truth and Goodness of that State, shall we still reluctate and hang back, as if we had never tasted how good the Lord is! O you may justly question, whether you ever had a real taste of Jesus Christ, if that taste do not kindle Coals of Fire in your Bosoms, I mean ardent longings to be with him, and to be satiated with his Love.

If you have been privileged with a taste of that hidden Manna, with the sight of Things invisible, with Joys unspeakable and full of Glory, and yet are loth to be gone to the Fountain whence also this flows; certainly you herein both cross the Design of the Spirit in giving them, and cast a vile disgrace and reproach upon the blessed God, as thinking there is more bitterness in Death, than there is sweetness in his Presence. Yea, it argues the Strength of that Unbelief which still remains in your Hearts, that after so many tastes, and trials as you have had, you still remain doubtful and hesitating about the certainty and reality of Things invisible.

O what ado hath God with his froward and peevish Children! If he had only revealed the future State to us in his Word, as the pure Object of Faith, and required us to die upon the meer credit of his Promise, without such Pawns, Pledges, and Earnests as these are; were there not Reason enough for it? But after such, and so many wonderful and amazing Condescensions, wherein he doth as it were say, Soul, if yet thou doubtest, I will bring Heaven to thee, thou shall have it in thy own Hand, thy Eyes shall see it, thy Hands shall handle it, thy Mouth shall taste it; how inexcusable is our Reluctancy?

Arg. VI. It should greatly fortify the People of God against the Fears of Dissolution, to consider that Death can neither destroy the Being of their Souls by Annihilation, nor the Hopes and Expectations they have of Blessedness by disappointment and frustration, Prov. 14. 32. The Righteous hath hope in his Death. Tho' all Earthly Things fail at Death (upon which account dying is expressed by failing, Luke 16. 19.) yet neither the Soul, nor the well-grounded Hope can fail. The Anchor of a Believer's Hope is firm and sure, Heb. 6. 18. It will not come home in the greatest Storm that can beat upon the Soul. For (1.) God hath foreknown and chosen them to Salvation before the World was, 1 Pet. 1. 2. And this Foundation of God standeth sure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. His

His Decrees are as firm as Mountains of Brass, Zech. 6. 1. (2.) God hath justified their Persons, and therein destroyed the Power of Death over them, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56, 57 O Death where is thy Sting? O Grave where is thy Victory? The Sting of Death is Sin, the strength of Sin is the Law. If all the hurtful Power of Death lies in Sin, and all the destructive Power of Sin rises from the Law; then neither Death nor Sin have any Power to destroy the Believer, in whom the Righteousness of the Law is fulfilled, Rom 8. 4. namely, by the imputation of the Righteousness of Christ to them, in respect of which they are as righteous, as if in their own Persons they had perfectly obeyed all its Commands, or suffered all its Penalties. Thus Death loseth its Sting, its Curse, and killing Power over the Souls of all that are in Christ. (3.) God hath sanctified their Natures, which Sanctification is not only a sure Evidence of their Election and Justification, 2 Thess. 1. 5, 6. Rom 8. 1. but a sure Pledge of their Glorification also, 2 Cor. 5. 4, 5. Yea, (4.) He hath made a sure and an everlasting Covenant with Believers, and among other gracious Privileges thereby conferred upon them, Death is found in the Inventory, 1 Cor. 13. 21 Death is yours; to die is Gain to them: it destroys their Enemies, and the distance that is betwixt Christ and them. (5.) He hath sealed them to this Glory by the Holy Spirit, Eph. 4. 30. So that their Hopes are too firmly built to be destroyed by Death; and if it cannot destroy their Souls, nor overthrow their Hopes, they need not fear all that it can do besides.

Arg. VII: It may greatly encourage and embolden the People of God to die, considering that tho' at Death they take the last Sight and View of all that is dear to them on Earth; yet then they are admitted to the first immediate sight and blessed Vision of God, which will be their Happiness to all Eternity.

When Hezekiah was upon his supposed Death-bed, he complained, Isa. 38. 11. I shall see Man no more with the Inhabitants of the World. We shall see thenceforth these Corporeal People no more. We shall see our Habitations and Dwelling-Places no more. Job 7. 9, 10, 11. We shall see our Children and dear Relations no more, Job 14. 21. His Sons come to Honour, and he knoweth it not. These things make Death terrible to Men; but that which cures all this trouble is, that we shall neither need, nor desire them, being thenceforth admitted to the beatifical Vision of the blessed God himself.

It is the Expectation and Hope of this, which comforteth the Souls of the Righteous here, Psal. 17. 15. When I awake, I shall behold thy Face in Righteousness. Those weak and dim Representations made by Faith at a distance are the very joy and rejoicing of a Believer's Soul now, 1 Pet. 1. 7, 8. but how sweet and transporting soever these Visions of Faith be, they are not worthy to be named in comparison with the immediate and beatifical Vision, 1 Cor. 13. 12. This is the very sum of a Believer's Blessedness: And what it is we cannot comprehend in this imperfect State only in general, we may gather these Conclusions about it, from the account given of it in the Scriptures.

Lumen gloriæ est actualis illustratio, (i. e.) influxus Dei supernaturalis elevans intellectum ad visionem essentiæ divinæ. Smiffing Tract. 2. Dis. 6. N. 33.

1. That it will not be such a sight of God as we now have by the mediation of Faith, but a direct, immediate and intuitive Vision of God, 1 Joh. 3. 2. We shall see him as he is, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Then Face to Face. Which far transcends the Vision of Faith, in clearness and in comfort. This seems to import no less than the very sight of the Divine Essence, that which Moses desired on Earth to see, but could not, Ex. 33. 20. nor can be seen by any Man dwelling in a Body, 1 Tim. 6. 16. nor by unbodied Souls comprehensively, so God only sees himself: Our Eyes see the Sun, which they cannot comprehend, yet truly apprehend. God will then be known in his Essence, and in the glory of all his Attributes: This sight of the Attributes of God gives the Occasion and Matter of those Ascriptions of Praise and Glory to him, which is the proper Employment of glorified Souls, Rev. 4. 11. and 5. 12, 13. which is the proper Employment of Angels, Isa. 6. 3. Oh how different is this from what we now have through Faith, Duties, and Ordinances! See the difference betwixt Knowledge by Reports, and immediate Sight, in that Example of the Queen of the South, 1 Kings 10. 5. the former only excited her Desires, the latter transported and wrapt her very Soul.

Some may think such a Vision of God to exceed the Abilities of Nature, and Capacities of any Creature. But, as a learned Man rightly observes, if the Divine Nature be capable of Union with a Creature, as it's evident in the Person of Christ, it is also capable of being the Object of Vision to the Creature. Beside, we must know the light of Glory hath the same respect to this blessed Vision, that assisting Grace hath to the Acts of Faith and Obedience performed here on Earth. It is a comforting, Soul-strengthening Light, not to dazle and over-power, but comfort, strengthen and clear the Eye of the Creature's Understanding: Rev. 2. 28. I will give him the Morning Star, Lumen confortans; and Psal. 36. 9. In thy Light we shall see Light. Norton's Orthodox Evang. p. 329.

2. It will be a satisfying Sight, Ps. 17. 15. so perfectly quieting and giving rest to the Soul in all its Powers, that they neither can proceed, nor desire to proceed any farther. The Understanding can know no more, the Will can will no more; the Affections of Joy, Delight and Love are at full rest and quiet in their proper Centre. For all good is in the chiefest Good eminently; as all the light of the Candles in the World is in the Sun, and all the Rivers in the World in the Sea. That which makes the Understanding, Will, and Affections move farther, as being restless, and unsatisfied in all Discoveries and Enjoyments here, is the limited and imperfect Nature of Things we now converse with; as if you bring a great Ship that draws much Water into a narrow and shallow River, she can neither sail nor swim, but is presently aground: But let that Ship have Sea-room enough, then she can turn and sail before the Wind, because there is depth of Water, and room enough: So 'tis here; all that delighted, but could never satisfie you in the Creature, is eminently in God; and what was imperfectly in them, is perfectly to be enjoyed in Him, 1 Cor. 15. 28. God shall be all in all; the Comforts you had here were but drop by drop, inflaming, not satisfying the Appetite of the Soul: But then the Lamb which is in the midst of the Throne shall feed them, and lead them unto Fountains of living Water, Rev. 7. 17. The Object fills the Faculties.

3. It will be an appropriating Vision of God; you shall see him as your own God, and proper Portion;

tion; elſe it could never be a ſatisfying Viſion, Job 19. 27. Whom I ſhall ſee for my ſelf! Not look on him as another's God, but as my God and Portion for ever. Balaam ſaw Chriſt by a Spirit of Prophecy; but he had no Comfort, becauſe no Intereſt in him, Numb. 24. 17. The Wicked ſhall ſee him, but without Joy, yea, with weeping Eyes, and gnaſhing of Teeth, because they cannot ſee him as their Lord, Luke 13. 28. 'Tis but a poor Comfort to ſtarving Beggars to ſtand quivering and famiſhing in the Streets in a cold dark Night, and ſee the Lights in the Bridegroom's Houſe, the noble Diſhes ſerved in, and to hear the Muſick and Mirth of the Gueſts that feaſt within. Here it will be as clear that he is our God, as that he is God. Aſſurance is that which many Souls have deſired, prayed, and panted for, but cannot attain. There be many rubs and ſtumbling-blocks in the way to that ſweet Enjoyment; but here we find what we have been ſo long ſeeking: There be no doubts, ſcruples, objections, puzling Caſes, to exerciſe your own, or others Thoughts. But as theſe did ariſe from one of theſe Grounds, viz. the working of Corruption, the efficacy of Temptation, or divine withdrawments, and the hidings of God's Face: So all theſe being removed perfectly and for ever in that State, the Heavens muſt needs be clear, and not a cloud of Doubt or Fear to be ſeen for ever.

4. It will be a deeply affecting Sight; your Eyes will now ſo affect your Hearts, as they were never affected before. The firſt view of God will ſnatch away your Hearts to him, as a greater Flame doth the leſs. Love will not now diſtill from the Heart as Waters from a cold Still, but guſh out as from a Sluce or Flood-gate pulled up. The Soul will not move after God ſo deadly and ſlowly as it doth now, but be as the Chariots of Aminadab, Cant. 6. 12. We may ſay of the Frames of our Hearts there, compared with what they are here, as it is ſaid, Deut. 12. 8, 9. You ſhall not love, or delight in, God as you do this Day. If the perfection of that State would admit Shame or Sorrow, how ſhould we bluſh and mourn in Heaven to think how cold our Love, and how low our Delights in God were on Earth! 1 John 4. 16. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God. Look as Iron put into the Fire becomes all fiery, ſo the Soul dwelling in the God of Love, becomes all Love, all Delight, all Joy. Oh what Tranſports muſt that Soul feel, that abides under the Line of Love! feels the perpendicular Beams of electing, creating, redeeming, preſerving Love, beating powerfully upon it, and melting it into Love! See ſome of their Tranſports, Rev. 5. 13, 14.

5. It will be an everlaſting Viſion of God, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. So ſhall we be ever with the Lord, [ever with the Lord.] Who can find Words to open the deep Senſe of theſe few Words? Vacabimus & videbimus, videbimus & amabimus, amabimus & laudabimus in ſine ſine ſine, ſaith bleſſed Auſtin. This is the everlaſting Sabbath which hath no Night, Rev. 22. 4, 5. The eternal Happineſs purchaſed for the Saints by the invaluable Blood of Chriſt. If one Hour's enjoyment of God in the way of Faith be ſo ſweet, and no Price can be put upon it, nothing on Earth taken in exchange for it; what muſt a whole Eternity in the immediate, and full Viſions of that bleſſed Face in Heaven be!

Well then, if ſuch Sights as theſe immediately ſucceed the Sight you have on Earth, either by Senſe of Things natural, or by Reaſon of Things intellectual, or by Faith of Things ſpiritual, who that believes the Truth, and expects the fulfilling of ſuch Promiſes as theſe, would not be willing to have his Eyes cloſed by Death as ſoon as God ſhall pleaſe? I have read of a holy Man that had ſweet Communion with God in Prayer, who in the cloſe of his Duty cryed out, Claudimini oculi mei, claudimini, &c. Be ſhut, O my Eyes, be ſhut; you ſhall never ſee any Thing on Earth like that I have now ſeen. Ah! little do the Friends of dead Believers think what Viſions of God, what raviſhing Sights of Chriſt, the Souls of their Friends have, when they are cloſing their Eyes with Tears.

Arg. VIII. The Conſideration of the evil Days that are to come, ſhould make the People of God willing to accept of a hiding Place in the Grave, as a ſpecial Favour from God.

It is accounted an Act of Favour by God, Iſa. 57. 1, 2. to be taken away from the evil to come. There are two Kinds of Evils to come, the Evil of Sin, and the evil of Sufferings. Sins to come are terrible to gracious Hearts, when Temptations ſhall be at their Height and Strength. Oh what warping and ſhrinking, what diſſembling, yea, downright denying the known Truths and Ways of God, may you ſee every where? Many Conſciences will then be wounded and waſted. Many Scandals and Rocks of Offence will be rolled into the Way of Godlineſs. Chriſt will be expoſed and put to open Shame. Should we only be Spectators of ſuch Tragedies as theſe, it were enough to overwhelm a gracious and tender Heart: but what upright Heart is there without Fears and Jealouſies of being brought under the guilt of theſe Evils in it ſelf, as well as the Shame and Grief for them in others? Oh! it were a thouſand Times better for you to die in the Purity and Integrity of your Conſciences, than to protract a miſerable Life without them. Oh! think what a World it is that you are like to leave behind you in Reſpect of that to come!

And as there are many Evils of Sin to come, ſo there are many Evils of Sufferings coming on: The Days of Viſitation are come, the Days of Recompence are come, and Iſrael ſhall know it, Hoſ. 9. 7. All the Sufferings you have yet met with, have been in Books and Hiſtories; you never ſaw the Martyrdom of the Saints, but in the Pictures and Stories; but you will find it quite another Thing to be the Subjects of theſe Cruelties, than to be the meer Readers or Relaters of them. 'Tis one Thing to ſee the painted Lyon on a Sign-poſt, and another to meet the living Lion roaring upon you. Ah! little do we imagine how the Hearts of Men are convuls'd, what Fears, what Faintings invade their Spirits when they are to meet the King of Terrors, in the frightful Formalities of a violent Death.

The Conſideration of theſe Things will diſcover to you the Reaſon of that ſtrange Wiſh of Job, chap. 14. 13. Oh that thou wouldſt hide me in the Grave; that thou wouldſt keep me in ſecret till thy Wrath be paſt! And it deſerves a ſerious Thought, that when the Holy Ghoſt had, in Rev. 14. 9, 10, 11, 12. deſcribed the miſerable Plight of thoſe poor Souls, who being overcome by their own Fears, and the Love of this World, ſhould plunge themſelves firſt into a deep Guilt, by Compliance with with Antichrist, and receiving his Mark; then into a Hell upon Earth, the remorse and horror of their own Consciences, which gives them no rest day nor night; he immediately subjoins, ver. 13. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, from henceforth, saith the Spirit, &c. Oh! 'tis a special Blessing and favour to be hid out of the way of those temptations and torments in a seasonable and quiet grave.

Arg. IX. Your fixed aversation and unwillingness to die, will provoke God to imbitter your Lives with much more afflictions than you have yet felt, or would feel, if your hearts were more mortified and weaned in this point.

You cannot think of your own deaths with pleasure, no nor yet with patience. Well, take heed, lest this draw down such Trouble upon you, as shall make you at last to say with Job, chap. 10. 1. My soul is weary of my Life; an expression much like that, 2 Sam. 1. 9. Anguish is come upon me, because my life is whole in me. My Soul is hardned, or become cruel against my life, as the Chaldee renders it.

There is a twofold weariness of life; one from an excellency of Spirit, a noble Principle, the ardent love of Jesus Christ, Phil. 1. 23. I desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ. Another from the meer pressures of affliction and anguish of Spirit, under heavy and successive strokes from the hand of God and Men. Is it not more excellent and desirable to groan for Death under a pressure of love to Christ, than of afflictions from Christ?

I am convinced that very many of our afflictions come upon this score and account, to make us willing to die.

Is it not sad that God is forced to bring Death upon all our comfortable and desirable Things in this World, before he can gain our Consents to be gone? Why will you put God upon such Work as this? Why cannot he have your Hearts at a cheaper Rate? If you could die, many of your Comforts, for ought I know, might live. Had Joab come to Absalom when he sent for him the first or second Time, Absalom had never set his Field of Barley on Fire, 2 Sam. 14. 30. And were you more obedient to the Will of God in this Matter, 'tis likely he would not consume your Health, and Estates, and Relations, with such heavy Strokes, as he hath done, and will yet farther do, except your Wills be more compliant.

Alas! to cut off your comforts one after another, and make you live a groaning life, the Lord hath no pleasure in it; but he had rather you should lose these things, than that he should lose your Hearts on Earth, or Company in Heaven: Impatiens ægrotus crudelem facit Medicum.

Arg. X. The Decree of Death cannot be reversed, nor is there any other ordinary Passage for the Soul into Glory, but through the gates of Death. Heb. 9. 27. It is appointed for all men once to die, but after that the Judgment.

There is but one way to pass out of the obscure suffocating Life in the Womb, into the more free and nobler Life in the World, viz. through the throes and agonies of Birth: And there is ordinarily but one way to pass from this sinning, groaning Life we live in this World, to the enjoyment of God and the Glory above, viz. through the agonies of Death. You must cast, as it were, your Secundine once again, I mean this vile Body, before you can be happy. Heaven cannot come down to you, you cannot see God and live, Exod. 33. 20. It would certainly confound and break you to pieces like an earthen Pitcher, should God but ray forth his Glory upon you in the state you now are; and it is sure you cannot expect the ordinary favour of such a translation as Enoch had, Heb. 11. 5, or as those Believers shall have, that shall be found alive at Christ's coming, 1 Thess. 4. 17 You must go the common road that all the Saints go; but tho' you cannot avoid, you may sweeten it. God will not reverse his Decree, but you may, and ought to arm your selves against the fears of it. Ahasuerus would not recal the Proclamation he had emitted against the Jews, but he gave them full liberty to take up arms to defend themselves against their Enemies. 'Tis much so here, the Sentence cannot be revoked; but yet he gives you leave, yea, he commands you to arm your selves against Death, and defy it, and trample it under the feet of Faith.

Arg. XI. When you find your hearts reluctate at the thoughts of leaving the Body, and the comforts of this World, then consider how willingly and chearfully Jesus Christ left Heaven, and the Bosom of his Father, to come down to this World for your sakes, Prov. 8. 30, 31. Psal. 40. 7. Lo, I come, &c.

O compare the frames of your Hearts with his in this Point, and shame your selves out of so unbecoming a temper of Spirit.

(1.) He left Heaven, and all the Delights and Glory of it, to come down to this World to be abased and humbled to the lowest; you leave this World of sin and misery to ascend to Heaven, to be exalted to the highest. He came hither to be impoverished, you go thither to be enriched, 2 Cor. 8. 9 yet he came willingly, and we go grudgingly.

(2.) He came from Heaven to Earth, to be made sin for us, 2 Cor. 5. 21 we go from Earth to Heaven, to be fully and everlastingly delivered from sin; yet he came more willingly to bear our sins, than we go to be delivered from them.

(3.) He came to take a Body of Flesh, to suffer and die in, Heb. 2. 24. you leave your Bodies that you may never suffer in or by them any more.

(4.) As his Incarnation was a deep abasement, so his Death was the most bitter death that ever was tasted by any from the beginning, or ever shall be to the end of the World; and yet how obediently doth he submit to both at the Father's Call, Luke 12. 50. I have a Baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitned till it be accomplished! Ah Christian, your Death cannot have the Ten thousandth part of that bitterness in it that Christ's had! I remember one of the Martyrs being asked, why his Heart was so light at death? returned this Answer, Because Christ's Heart was so heavy at his death. O there is a vast difference betwixt one and the other; the Wrath of God, and Curse of the Law were in his death, Gal 3. 13. but there is neither Wrath nor Curse in their death who die in the Lord, Rom. 8 1.

God forsook him when he hanged upon the Tree in the Agonies of death, Matth. 27. 46. My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? But you shall not be forsaken; He will make all your Bed in sickness, Psal. 41. 3. He will never leave you nor forsake you, Heb. 13. 5.

Yet he regretted not, but went as a Sheep or Lamb, Isa. 53. 7. O reason your selves out of this Reluctancy at death, by this great Example and Pattern of Obedience.

Arg XII. Lastly, Let no Christian be affrighted at Death, considering that the death of Christ is the death, of Death, and hath utterly disarmed it of all its destructive Power.

If you tremble when you look upon Death, yet you cannot but triumph when you look believingly upon Christ.

For, (1.) Christ died (O Believer) for thy sins, Rom. 4. 25. his Death was an expiatory Sacrifice for all thy Guilt, Gal. 3. 13. so that thou shalt not die in thy Sins: The Pangs of Death may, and must be on thy outward Man, but the guilt of Sin, and the Condemnation of God shall not be upon thy inner Man.

(2.) The Death of Christ in thy room hath utterly destroyed the power of Death, which once was in the hand of Satan, Heb. 2. 14. Col. 2. 14, 15. his Power was not authoritative, but executive: Not as the power of a King, but of a Sheriff; which is none at all when a Pardon is produced.

(3.) Christ hath assured us, That his Victory over Death shall be compleat in our Persons. It is already a compleat personal Victory, in respect of himself, Rom. 6. 9. he dieth no more, Death hath no more dominion over him. It's an incompleat Victory already as to our Persons. It can dissolve the Union of our Souls and Bodies, but the Union betwixt Christ and our Souls it can never dissolve, Rom. 8. 38, 39. and as for the power it still retains over our Dust, that also shall be destroyed at the Resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 25,26. compared with ver. 54, 55, 56, 57. so that there is no cause for any Soul in Christ to tremble at the Thoughts of a separation from the Body, but rather to embrace it as a privilege; Death is ours.

O that these Arguments might prevail! O that they might at last win the Consent of our Hearts to go along with Death, which is the Messenger sent by God to bring us home to our Father's House!

But I doubt when all is said, we are where we were, all this suffices not to overcome the Regrets and Reluctances of Nature; still the matter sticks in our Minds, and we cannot conquer our disinclined Wills in this matter. What is the matter? Where lie the Rubs and Hindrances? O that God would remove them at last!

Obj. 1. This is a common Plea with many, I am not ready and fit to die; were I ready, I should be willing to be gone.

Sol. (1.) How long soever you live in the Body, there will be somewhat still out of order, something still to do: For you must be in a state of imperfection while you remain here, and according to this Plea, you will never be willing to die. (2.) Your willingness to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, is one special part of your fitness for Death: And till you attain it in some good measure, you are not so fit to die as you should be. (3.) If you be in Christ, you have a fundamental fitness for Death, tho' you may want some circumstantial preparatives. And as to all that is wanting in your Sanctification or Obedience now, it will be compleated in a moment upon your dissolution.

Obj 2. Others plead, the desire they have to live, is in order to God's farther Service by them in this world. Oh, say they, it was David's happiness to die, when he had served his generation according to the will of God, Acts 13. 36. If we had done so too, we should say with Simeon, Now lettest thou thy Servant depart in peace.

Sol. (1.) God needs not your hands to carry on his Service in the World: he can do it by other hands when you are gone. Many of greater gifts and graces than you are daily laid in the grave to teach you, God needs no man's help to carry on his Work.

(2.) If the Service of God be so dear to you there is higher and more excellent Service for you in Heaven, than any you ever were, or can be employ'd in here on Earth. Oh! why don't you long to be amidst the thick of Angels and Spirits made perfect in the Temple-Service in Heaven?

Obj. 3. O but my Relations in the world lie near my heart, what will become of them when I am gone?

Sol. (1.) 'Tis pity they should lie nearer your heart than Jesus Christ: If they do, you have little reason to desire Death indeed.

(2.) Who took care of you, when Death snatch'd your dear Relations from you, who possibly felt the same workings of heart that you now do? Did you not experience the truth of that word, Psal. 27. 10. When Father and Mother forsake me, then the Lord taketh me up? And if you be in the Covenant, God hath prevented this Plea with his Promise, Jer. 49. 11. Leave thy fatherless Children to me, I will keep them alive; and let their Widows trust in me.

Obj. 4. But I desire to live to see the felicity of Zion before I go hence, and the answer of the many Prayers I have sown for it; I am loath to leave the people of God in so sad a condition.

Sol. The publickness of thy Spirit, and love to Zion, is doubtless pleasing to God: But it is better for you to be in Heaven one day, than to live over again all the days you have lived on Earth in the best Times that ever the Church of God enjoyed in this World: The Promises shall be accomplished, tho' you may not live to see their Accomplishment; die you in the faith of it, as Joseph did, Gen. 50. 24.

But, alas! the matter doth not stick here: this is not the main Hindrance. I will tell you where I think it lies: (1.) In the hesitancy and staggering of our Faith about the certainty and reality of things invisible. (2.) In some special guilt upon the Conscience, which appals us. (3.) In a negligent and careless course of Life, which is not ordinarily blessed with much evidence or comfort. (4.) In the deep engagements of our Hearts to earthly things: they could not be so cold to Christ, if they were not over-heated with other things. Till these Distempers be cured, no Arguments can prosper that are spent to this end. The Lord dissolve all those Ties betwixt us and this World, which hinder our Consent and Willingness to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, which is far better.

And now we have had a glance and glimmering Light, a faint umbrage of the State of the separated Souls of the Just in Heaven: It remains that I shew you somewhat of the State and Case of the damned Souls in Hell. A dreadful Representation it is; but it is necessary we hear of Hell, that we may not feel it.

1 PET. iii. ver. 19.

Of which also he went and preached to the Spirits in Prison.

IN the former Discourse we have had a view of Heaven, and of the Spirits of Just Men made perfect, the Inhabitants of that blessed Region of Light and Glory.

In this Scripture we have the contrary Glass representing the unspeakable Misery of those Souls or Spirits which are separated by Death from their Bodies for a time, and by Sin from God for ever; arrested arrested by the Law, and secured in the Prison of Hell, unto the Judgment of the great day

A Sermon of Hell may keep some Souls out of Hell, and a Sermon of Heaven be the means to help others to Heaven. The desire of my heart is, that the Conversations of all those who shall read these Discourses of Heaven and Hell might look more like a diligent flight from the one, and pursuit of the other.

The scope of the Context is a persuasive to Patience, upon a Prospect of manifold Tribulations coming upon the Christian Churches, strongly enforced by Christ's Example, who both in his own Person, ver. 18. and by his Spirit in his Servants, ver. 19. exercised wonderful patience and long-suffering, as a pattern to his People.

This 19th Verse gives us an account of his Long-suffering towards that disobedient and immorigerous Generation of Sinners, on whom he waited an hundred and twenty Years in the Ministry of Noah.

There are difficulties in the Text. Estius reckons no less than ten Expositions of it, and saith it is a very difficult Scripture in the Judgment of almost all Interpreters. But yet I must say those Difficulties are rather brought to it, than found in it. It is a Text which hath been rack'd and tortur'd by Popish Expositors to make it speak Christ's local descent into Hell, and to confess their Doctrine of Purgatory; Things which it knew not.

Locus hic omnium pæne interpretum judicio difficillimus. Estius.

But if we will take its genuine Sense, it only relates the Sin and Misery of those contumacious Persons on whom the Spirit of God waited so long in the Ministry of Noah, giving an Account of,

1. Their Sin on Earth.
2. Their Punishment in Hell.

1. Their Sin on Earth, which is both specified and aggravated. (1.) Specified; namely, their disobedience: they were sometimes disobedient and unpersuadable; neither Precepts nor Examples could bring them to repentance. (2.) This their disobedience is aggravated by the expence of God's patience upon them for the space of a hundred and twenty Years, not only forbearing them so long, but striving with them, as Moses expresseth it; or waiting on them, as the Apostle here: but all to no purpose, they were obstinate, stubborn, and unpersuadable to the very last.

2. Behold therefore, in the next place, the dreadful, but most just and equal Punishment of these Sinners in Hell; they are called Spirits in Prison, i. e. the Souls now in Hell.

At that time when Peter wrote of them, they were not entire Men, but Spirits in the proper sense, i. e. separated Souls, bodiless and lonely Souls: whilst in the Body, it is properly a Soul; but when separated, a Spirit, according to Scripture-language, and the strict Notion of such a Being.

Psal. 31. 6. Eccles. 12. 7. Acts 7. 50.

These Spirits or Souls in the State of Separation are said to be in a Prison, that is, in Hell, as the word elsewhere notes, Rev. 20. 7. and Jude v. 6. comp. Heaven and Hell are the only Receptacles of departed or separated Souls.

Thus you have in a few words the natural and genuine sense of the place, and it is but a waste of time to repeat and refel the many false and forced Interpretations of this Text, which corrupt Minds and mercenary Pens have perplex'd and darkened it withal. That which I level at, is comprized in this plain Proposition.

Doct. That the Souls or Spirits of all men, who dy in a state of unbelief and disobedience, are immediately committed to the Prison of Hell, there to suffer the wrath of God due to their sins.

Hell is shadowed forth to us in Scripture by divers Metaphors; for we cannot conceive spiritual things, unless they be so cloathed and shadowed out unto us. Augustine gives this reason for the frequent use of Metaphors and Allegories in Scripture, because they are so much proportioned to our senses, with which our senses have contracted an Intimacy and familiarity, and therefore God, to accommodate his Truth to our capacity, doth as it were this way embody it in earthly expressions, according to that celebrated observation of the Cabbalists, Lumen supremum nunquam descendit sine indumento: The pure and supreme light never descends to us without a garment or covering. In the Old Testament the place and state of damned Souls is set forth by Metaphors taken from the most remarkable places and exemplary acts of vengeance upon Sinners in this World; as the overthrow of the Giants by the Flood, those prodigious Sinners that fought against Heaven, and were swept by the Flood into the place of Torments. To this Solomon is conceiv'd to allude in Prov. 21. 16. The man that wanders out of the way of understanding, shall remain in the congregation of the dead; in the Heb. it is, he shall remain with the Rephaims, or Giants. These Giants were the Men that more especially provoked God to bring the Flood upon the World; they are also noted as the first Inhabitants of Hell, therefore from them the place of Torments takes its name, and the Damned are said to remain in the place of Giants.

Spiritualia capere non possumus nisi adumbrata.

Hell called the place of Giants, and why.

Sometimes Hell is called Tophet, Isa. 30. 33. This Tophet was in the Valley of Hinnom, and was famous for divers things. There the children of Israel caused their children to pass through the fire to Moloch, or sacrificed them to the Devil, drowning their horrible shrieks and ejulations with the noise of Drums.

Hell called Tophet, and why.

In this Valley also was the memorable slaughter of eighteen hundred thousand of the Assyrian Camp, by an Angel, in one night.

There also the Babylonians murdered the people of Jerusalem at the taking of the City, Jer. 7. 31, 32. So that Tophet was a meer shambles, the publick chopping block on which the limbs both of young and old were quartered out by thousands; it was filled with dead bodies till there was no place for burial. By all which it appears that no spot of ground in the World was so famous for the fires kindled in it to destroy men, for the doleful cries that echo'd from it, or the innumerable multitudes that perished in it; for which reason it is made the Emblem of Hell. Sometimes it is called a Lake a fire burning with brimstone, Rev. 19. 20. denoting the most exquisite torment by an intense and durable flame.

Hell a lake of fire.

And in the Text it is called a Prison, where the Spirits of ungodly men are both detained and punished. This Notion of a Prison gives us a lively representation of the miserable state of damned Souls, and that especially in the following particulars.

A Prison.

First, Prisoners are arrested and seized by Authority of Law; 'tis the Law which sends them thither, thither, and keeps them there; the Mittimus of a Justice is but the Instrument of the Law, whereby they are deprived of liberty, and taken into custody. The Law of God which Sinners have both violated and despised, at death takes hold of them and arrests them. 'Tis the Law which claps up their Spirits in Prison, and in the Name and Authority of the great and terrible God commits them to Hell All that are out of Christ are under the curse and damning sentence of the Law, which now comes to be executed on them, Gal. 3 10

Secondly, Prisoners are carried or haled to Prison by force and constraint. Natural force backs legal Authority. The Law is executed by rough and resolute Bailiffs, who compel them to go, tho never so much against their will. This also is the case of the Wicked at death. Satan is God's Bailiff to hurry away the Law-condemned Souls to the infernal Prison. The Devil hath the power of Death, Heb. 2. 14. as the Executioner hath of the Body of a condemned Man.

Thirdly, Prisoners are chained and bolted in Prison to prevent their escape; so are damned Spirits secured by the Power of God, and chained by their own guilty and trembling consciences in Hell unto the time of Judgment and the fulness of misery; not that they have no torment in the mean time; alas! were there no more but that fearful expectation of wrath and fiery indignation, spoken of by the Apostle, Heb. 10. 27. it were an inexpressible torment; but there is a farther degree of torment to be awarded them at the Judgment of the great day, to which they are therefore kept as in Chains and Prisons.

Fourthly, Prisons are dark and noisom places, not built for pleasure, as other houses are, but for punishment, so is Hell, Jude v. 6. Reserved in everlasting Chains under darkness, as he there describes the place of torments, yea utter darkness, Matt. 8 12. extreme or perfect darkness Philosophers tell us of the darkness of this World, non dantur puræ tenebræ, that there is no pure or perfect darkness here without some mixture of light; but there is not a glade of light, not a spark of hope or comfort shining into that Prison.

Fifthly, Mournful sighs and groans are heard in Prisons, Psal. 97. 11. Let the sighing of the Prisoners come before thee, saith the Psalmist. But deeper sighs and emphatical groans are heard in Hell, There shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, Mat. 8. 12. Those that could not groan under the sense of sin on Earth, shall howl under anguish and desparation in Hell.

Sixthly, There is a time when Prisoners are brought out of the Prison to be judged, and then return in a worse condition than before to the place from whence they came. God also hath appointed a Day for the solemn condemnation of those Spirits in Prison. The Scriptures call it the Judgment of the great Day, Jude v. 6. from the great Business that is to be done therein, and the great and solemn Assembly that shall then appear before God.

But I will insist no longer upon the display of the Metaphor. My business is to give you a representation of the state and condition of damned Souls in Hell, and to assist your conceptions of them and of their state.

'Tis a dreadful sight I am to give you this day; but how much better is it to see than to feel that Wrath? the Treasures thereof shall shortly be broken up, and poured forth upon Spirits of Men.

You had in the former Discourse a faint umbrage of the Spirits of just men in Glory; in this you will have an imperfect representation of the Spirits of wicked men in Hell: and look as the former cannot be adequate and perfect, because that happiness passeth our knowledge; so neither can this be so, because the Misery of the Damned passeth our fear.

The case and state of a damned Spirit will be best opened in these following Propositions.

Prop. 1. That the guilt of all Sin gathers to and settles in the Conscience of every Christless Sinner and makes up a vast treasure of guilt in the course of his life in this World.

The high and awful power of Conscience belonging to the understanding Faculty in the Soul of Man, was spoken to before as to its general Nature, Pag. 19. And that Conscience certainly accompanies it, and is inseparable from it, was there shewed. I am here to consider it as the seat or center of guilt in all unregenerate and lost Souls. For look as the tides wash up, and leave the slime and filth upon the shore, even so all the corruption and sin that is in the other faculties of the Soul settle upon the Conscience. Their mind and conscience (saith the Apostle) is defiled, Tit. 1. 15. it is as it were the sink of a sinner's Soul into which all filth runs, and guilt settles.

The Conscience of every Believer is purged from its filthiness by the Blood of Christ, Heb. 9. 14. his Blood and his Spirit purify it and pacify it, whereby it becomes the region of Light and Peace; but all the guilt which hath been long contracting through the life of an Unbeliever, fixes it self deep and fast in his Conscience; It is written upon the Tables of their hearts as with a Pen of Iron, Jer 17. 1. (i. e.) Guilt is as a mark or character fashioned or engraven in the very substance of the Soul, as Letters are cut into Glass with a Diamond.

Conscience is not only the principal Engagée obliged unto God as a Judge, but the principal Director and Guide of the Soul in its courses and actions, and consequently the guilt of all sin falls upon it, and rests in it. The Soul is both the spring and fountain of all actions, that go outward from Man, and the term or receptacle of all actions inward; but in both sorts of actions going outward and coming inward, Conscience is the chief Counsellor, Guide and Director in all, and so the guilt which is contracted either way, must be upon its head. 'Tis the bridle of the Soul to restrain it from sin, the eye of the Soul to direct its course; and therefore is principally chargeable with all the evils of Life. Bodily members are but instruments, and the Will it self, as high and noble a faculty or power as it is, moveth not, until the Judgment cometh to a conclusion, and the debate be ended in the mind.

Now in the whole course and compass of a Sinner's Life in this World, what treasures of guilt must needs be lodged in his Conscience? What a Magazine of sin and filth must be laid up there? 'Tis said of a wicked Man, Job 20. 11. His bones are full of the sins of his youth; meaning his Spirit, Mind or Conscience is as full of Sin, as Bones are of Marrow; yea, the very sins of his youth are enough to fill them: and Rom. 2. 5. they are said to treasure up wrath against the day of wrath which is only done by treasuring up guilt; for Wrath and Guilt are treasured up together in proportion to each other. Every day of his life vast sums have been cast into this Treasury, and the patience of God waiteth till it be full, before he call the sinner to an account and reckoning, Gen 15. 16.

Prop 2. All the sin and guilt contracted upon the Souls and Consciences of impenitent Men in this World, accompanies and follows their departed Souls to Judgment, and there brings them under the dreadful condemnation nation of the great and terrible God which cuts off all their hop esand comforts for ever.

If you believe not that I am he, you shall die in your sins, John 8. 24. & Job 20. 11. His bones are full of the sins of his youth, which shall lie down with him in the dust. No Proposition lies clearer in Scripture, or should lie with greater weight on the hearts of sinners: nothing but pardon can remove guilt; but without Faith and Repentance there never was nor shall be a pardon, Acts 10. 43. Rom. 3. 24, 25. Luke 24. 46, 47. Look as the Graces of Believers, so the sins of Unbelievers follow the Soul whithersoever it goes. All their sins who die out of Christ, cry to them when they go hence, We are thy Works and we will follow thee. The acts of sin are transient, but the guilt and effects of it are permanent; and it is evident by this, that in the great Day their Consciences, which are the Books of Record, wherein all their sins are registred, will be opened, and they shall be judged by them, and out of them, Rev. 20. 12.

Now before that general Judgment, every Soul comes to its particular Judgment, and that immediately after death: of this I apprehend the Apostle to speak in Heb. 9. 27. It is appointed for all men once to die, but after that the Judgment. The Soul is presently stated by this Judgment in its everlasting and fixed condition. The Soul of a wicked Man appearing before God in all its sin and guilt, and by him sentenced, immediately it gives up all its hope, Prov. 11. 7. When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish; and the hope of unjust men perisheth. His strong hope perisheth, as some read it, (i. e.) his strong delusion: for, alas! he took his own shadow for a Bridge over the great Waters, and is unexpectedly plunged into the gulph of eternal misery, as Matt. 7. 22.

Etiam spes valentissima.

This perishing or cutting off of hope, is that which is called in Scripture the death of the Soul, for so long the Soul will live as it hath any hope. The deferring of hope makes it sick, but the final cutting off of hope strikes it quite dead, (i. e.) dead as to all joy, comfort, or expectation of any for ever, which is that death which an immortal Soul is capable to suffer: the Righteous hath hope in his death, but every unregenerate man in the World breathes out his last hope in a few moments after his last breath, which strikes terror into the very center of the Soul, and is a death-wound to it.

Prop. 3. The Souls of the damned are exceeding large and spacious subjects of wrath and torment; and in their separate state their capacity is greatly enlarged both by laying asleep all those Affections whose exercise is relieving, and throughly awakening all those Passions which are tormenting.

The Soul of Man being by nature a Spirit, an intelligent Spirit, and in its substantial faculties assimilated to God, whose Image it bears; it must for that reason be exquisitely sensible of all the impressions and touches of the wrath of God upon it. The Spirit of Man is a most tender, sensible and apprehensive Creature: the Eye of the Body is not so sensible of a touch, a Nerve of the Body is not so sensible when pricked, as the Spirit of Man is of the least touch of God's indignation upon it. A wounded Spirit who can bear? Prov. 18. 14. Other external wounds upon the Body, inflicted either by Man or God, are tolerable; but that which immediately touches the Spirit of Man is insufferable, who can bear or endure it?

And as the Spirit of Man hath the most delicate and exquisite sense of misery; so it hath a vast capacity to receive and let in the fulness of anguish and misery into it; it is a large Vessel, called, Rom. 9. 22. A Vessel of wrath fitted to destruction. The large capacity of the Soul is seen in this, that it is not in the power of all the Creatures in the World to satisfie and fill it: It can drink up (as one speaks) all the Rivers of created good, and its thirst not quenched by such a draught; but after all, it cries, Give, give. Nothing but an infinite God can quiet and satisfie its appetite and raging thirst.

And as it is capable and receptive of more good than is found in all the Creatures, so it is capable of more misery and anguish than all the Creatures can inflict upon it. Let all the Elements or Men on Earth, yea, all the Devils and damned in Hell, conspire and unite in a design to torment Man; yet when they have done all, his Spirit is capable of a farther degree of torment; a torment as much beyond it, as a Rack is beyond a hard Bed, or the Sword in his Bowels is beyond the scratch of a Pin. The Devils indeed are the Executioners and Tormentors of the damned; but if that were all they were capable to suffer, the torments of the damned would be comparatively mild and gentle to what they are. Oh the largeness of the Understanding of Man! what will it not take into its vast capacity!

But add to this, that damned Souls have all those Affections laid in a deep and everlasting sleep, the exercises whereof would be relieving, by emptying their Souls of any part of their misery; and all those Passions throughly and everlastingly awakened, which increase their torments.

The Affections of joy, delight and hope, are all benumbed in them, and laid fast asleep, never to be awakened into act any more. Their hope in Scripture is said to perish, (i. e.) it so perisheth, that after Death it shall never exert another Act to all Eternity. The activity of any of these Affections would be like a cooling gale or refreshing spring amidst their torments; but, as Adrian lamented himself, nunquam jocos dabis, thou shalt never be merry more.

And as these Affections are laid asleep, so their Passions are roused and throughly awakened to torment them; so awakened, as never to sleep any more. The Souls of Men are sometimes jogg'd and startl'd in this World, by the words or rods of God, but presently they sleep again, and forget all: but hereafter the Eyes of their Souls will be continually held waking to behold and consider their misery; their Understandings will be clear and most apprehensive; their thoughts fixed and determined; their consciences active and efficacious: and by all this their capacity to take in the fulness of their misery enlarged to the uttermost.

Prop. 4. The wrath, indignation, and revenge of God poured out as the just reward of sin upon the so capacious Souls of the damned, is the principal part of their misery in Hell.

In the third Proposition I shew'd you that the Souls of the damned can hold more misery than all the creatures can inflict upon them. When the Soul suffers from the hand of Man, its sufferings are but either by way of sympathy with the Body; or if immediately, yet it is but a light stroke the hand of a creature can give: But when it has to do with a sin-revenging God, and that immediately, this stroke cuts off the Spirit of Man, as 'tis express'd, Psal. 88. 16. The Body is the cloathing of the Soul. Moſt of the Arrows ſhot at the Soul in this World do but ſtick in the cloaths, (i. e.) reach the outward man: but in Hell, the Spirit of Man is the white at which God himſelf ſhoots. All his envenomed Arrows ſtrike the Soul, which is after death laid bare and naked to be wounded by his hand. At death, the Soul of every wicked man immediately falls into the hands of the living God, and it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 10. 31. Their puniſhment is from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power, 2 Theſ. 1. 9. They are not put over to their fellow Creatures to be puniſhed, but God will do it himſelf, and glorifie his Power as well as Juſtice in their puniſhment. The wrath of God lies immediately upon their Spirits, and this is the fiery indignation which devoureth the adverſarics, Heb. 10. 27. A fire that licks up the very Spirit of Man. Who knoweth the power of his anger? Pſal. 90. 11. How inſupportable it is you may a little gueſs by that expreſſion of the Prophet Nahum, ch. 1. 5, 6. The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burnt at his preſence, yea, the World and all that dwell therein. Who can ſtand before his indignation? and who can abide in the fierceneſs of his anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

And as if anger and wrath were not words of a ſufficient edge and ſharpneſs, it's called fiery indignation and vengeance words denoting the moſt intenſe degree of divine wrath. For indeed his power is to be glorified in the deſtruction of his enemies, and therefore now he will do it to purpoſe. He takes them now into his own hands. No creature can come at the Soul immediately, that is God's prerogative, and now he hath to do with it himſelf in fury and revenges poured out. Can thy hands be ſtrong, or thy heart endure when I ſhall deal with thee? Ezek. 22. 14. Alas, the ſpirit quails and dies under it. This is the Hell of Hells.

What doleful cries and laments have we heard from God's deareſt children, when but ſome few drops of his anger have been ſprinkled upon their Souls here in this World! alas, there is no compare betwixt the anger, or fatherly diſcipline of God over the Spirits of his children, and the indignation poured out from the beginning of revenges upon his enemies.

Prop. 5. The ſeparate Spirit of a damned Man becomes a tormentor to it ſelf by the various and efficacious actings of its own Conſcience, which are a ſpecial part of its torment in the other World.

Conſcience, which ſhould have been the ſinner's curb on Earth, becomes the Whip that muſt laſh his Soul in Hell. Neither is there any faculty or power belonging to the Soul of man ſo fit and able to do it as his own Conſcience. That which was the ſeat and center of all guilt, now becomes the ſeat and center of all torments. The ſuſpenſion of its tormenting power in this World is a myſtery and wonder to all that duly conſider it. For certainly ſhould the Lord let a ſinner's Conſcience fly upon him with rage in the midſt of his ſins and pleaſures, it would put him into a Hell upon Earth, as we ſee in the doleful inſtances of Judas, Spira, &c. but he keeps a hand of reſtraint upon them generally in this life, and ſuffers them to ſleep quietly by a grumbling or ſeared Conſcience, which couches by them as a ſleepy Lion, and lets them alone.

But no ſooner is the Chriſtleſs Soul turn'd out of the Body, and caſt for eternity at the Bar of God, but Conſcience is rouzed, and put into a rage never to be appeaſed any more. It now racks and tortures the miſerable Soul with its utmoſt efficacy and activity. The mere preſages and forebodings of wrath by the Conſciences of ſinners in this World, have made them lie with a ghaſtly paleneſs in their faces, an univerſal trembling in all their members, a cold ſweating horror upon their panting boſoms, like men already in Hell: but this, all this is but as the ſweating or giving of the ſtones before the great rain falls. The activities of Conſcience (eſpecially in Hell) are various, vigorous, and dreadful to conſider, ſuch are its recognitions, accuſations, condemnations, upbraidings, ſhamings, and fearful expectations.

1. The Conſciences of the Damned will recognize, and bring back the ſins committed in this World freſh to their mind: for what is Conſcience, but a Regiſter, or Book of Records wherein every ſin is rank'd in its proper place and order? This act of Conſcience is fundamental to all its other acts; for it cannot accuſe, condemn, upbraid, or ſhame us for that it hath loſt out of its memory, and hath no ſenſe of. Son remember, ſaid Abraham to Dives in the midſt of his torments. This remembrance of ſins paſt, mercies paſt, opportunities paſt, but eſpecially of hope paſt and gone with them, never to be recovered any more, is like that fire not blown (of which Zophar ſpeaks) which conſumes him, or the glittering Sword coming out of his Gall, Job 20. 24, &c.

2. It chargeth and accuſeth the damned Soul, and its charges are home, poſitive, and ſelf-evident charges: a thouſand legal and unexceptionable Witneſſes cannot confirm any point more than one Witneſs in a man's boſom can do, Rom. 2. 15. it convicts and ſtops their mouths, leaving them without any excuſe or Apology. Juſt and righteous are the Judgments of God upon thee, faithful Conſcience: in all this Ocean of miſery, there is not one drop of injury or wrong: the Judgment of God is according unto truth.

3. It condemns as well as chargeth and witneſſeth, and that with a dreadful Sentence; backing and approving the Sentence and Judgment of God, 1 John 3. 21. every ſelf-deſtroyer will be a ſelf-condemner: This is a prime part of their miſery.

——— Prima eſt hæc ultio, quod ſe
Judice nemo nocens abſolvitur, improba quamvis
Gratia fallacis Prætoris vicerit urnam. Juv. Sat. 13.

4. The upbraidings of Conſcience in Hell are terrible and inſufferable things: to be continually hit in the teeth and twitted with our madneſs, wilfulneſs, and obſtinacy, as the cauſe of all that eternal miſery which we have pull'd down upon our own heads, what is it but the rubbing of the wound with Salt and Vinegar? Of this torment holy Job was afraid, and therefore reſolv'd what in him lay to prevent it, when he ſaith Job 27. 6. My heart (i. e. Conſcience) ſhall not reproach me ſo long as I live. O the twits and taunts of Conſcience are cruel cuts and laſhes to the Soul!

5. The ſhamings of Conſcience are unſufferable torments. Shame ariſeth from the turpitude of diſcovered actions. If ſome mens ſecret filthineſſes were but publiſhed in this World, it would confound them; what then will it be, when all ſhall lie open, as it will after this life, and their own Conſciences ſhall caſt the ſhame of all upon them? They ſhall not only be derided by God, Prov. 1. 26. but by their own Conſciences alſo.

Laſtly

Lastly, The fearful expectations of Conscience still looking forward into more and more wrath to come, this is the very sum and complement of their misery. What makes a Prison so dreadful to a Malefactor, but the trembling expectations he there lives under of the approaching Assizes? Much after the same rate, or rather after the rate of condemned persons preparing for Execution, do these Spirits in Prison live in the other World. But alas no instance or similitude can reach home to their case.

Prop. 6. That which makes the torments and terrors of the damned Spirits so extreme and terrible, is, that they are unrelievable miseries, and torments for ever.

They are not capable either of,

1. A partial relief by any mitigation, or
2. A complete relief by a final cessation.

1. Not of a partial relief by any mitigation: could they but divert their thoughts from their misery, as they were wont to do in this world, drink and forget their sorrows; or had they but any hope of the abatement of their misery, it would be a relief to them: But both these are impossible. Their thoughts are fixed and determined: to remove them (tho' but for a moment) from their misery, is as impossible as to remove a Mountain: their sin and misery is ever before them. As the Blessed in Heaven are bono confirmati, so fixed and settled in blessedness, that they are not diverted one moment from beholding the blessed face of God, for they are ever with the Lord: so the Damned in Hell are malo obfirmati, so settled and fixed in the midst of all evil, that their thoughts and miseries are inseparable for ever.

2. Much less can their undone state admit the least hope of relief by a final cessation of their misery. All hope perisheth from them, and the perishing of their hope is the plainest proof that can be given of the eternity of their misery. For were there but the remotest possibility of deliverance at last, hope would hang upon that possibility: and whilst hope lives, the Soul is not quite dead; the death of hope is the death of a man's Spirit: the cutting off of the Soul from God, and the last act of hope to see or enjoy him for ever, is that death which an immortal Soul is capable of suffering. Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, is that sentence which strikes Hope and Soul dead for ever. In these six Propositions you have the true and terrible representation of the Spirits in Prison, or the state of damned Souls. I have not mentioned their association with Devils, or the dismal place of their confinement, which tho' they complete their misery, yet are not the principal parts of it, but rather Accessories to it, or Rivers running into the Ocean of their misery. The sum of their misery lies in what was opened before, and the improvement of it is in that which followeth.

Infer. I. Is this the state of ungodly Souls after death? Then it follows, that neither Death nor Annihilation are the worst of evils incident to Man. Aristotle calls Death the most terrible of all terribles, and the Schoolmen affirm Annihilation to be a greater evil than the most miserable Being: But it is neither so nor so; the wrath of God, the worm of Conscience, are much more bitter than Death: The pains of Death are natural and bodily pains: the wrath of God and anguish of Conscience are spiritual and inward: that is but the pain of a few hours or days, these are the unrelieved torments of Eternity.

And as for Annihilation, what a favour would the damned account it! Indeed if we respect the Glory of God's Justice, which is exemplified and illustrated in the ruin of these miserable Souls, it is better they should abide as the eternal Monuments thereof, than not to be at all; but with respect to themselves we may say, as Christ doth of the Son of Perdition, Mat. 26. 24. Good had it been for them if they had never been born. For a Man's Soul to be of no other use than a Vessel of Wrath, to receive the indignation, and be filled with the fury of God; surely an untimely Birth, that never was animated with a reasonable Soul, is better than they: for alas! they seek for Death, but it flies from them. The Immortality of their Souls, which was their dignity and privilege above other Creatures, is now their misery, and that which continually feeds and perpetuates their flame. Here is a Being without the comfort of it, a Being only to howl and tremble under Divine Wrath; a Being therefore which they would gladly exchange with the contemptiblest Fly, or most loathsom Toad, but it cannot be exchanged or annihilated.

Infer. II. Hence it follows, that the Pleasures of Sin are dear bought and costly Pleasures. There is a greater disproportion betwixt that Pleasure and this Wrath, than betwixt a drop of Honey and a Sea of Gall. Could a man distil all the imaginary pleasure of sin, and drink nothing else but the highest and most refined delights of it all his life, tho' his life should be protracted to the term of Methuselah's; yet one day, or night under the Wrath of God would make it a dear bargain. But,

1. 'Tis certain Sin hath no such Pleasures to give you: they are embitter'd either by adverse strokes of Providence from without, or painful and dreadful gripes and twinges of Conscience, within; Job 20. 14. His meat in his Bowels is turned it is the gall of Asps within him.

2. Tis as certain, the time of a sinner is near its period when he is at the height of his pleasure in sin: for look, as high delights in God speak the maturity of a Soul for Heaven, and it will not be long before such be in Heaven; so the heights of delight in sin, answerably speak the maturity of such a Soul for Hell, and it will not be long e'er it be there. Sin is now a big Embryo, and speedily the Soul travails with Death.

3. According to the measure of delights Men have had in sin, will be the degrees and measures of their Torments in Hell, Rev. 18. 7. so much torment and sorrow as there was delight and pleasure in Sin.

4. To conclude, The Pleasures of Sin are but for a season, as you read, Heb. 11. 25. but the Wrath of God in Hell is for ever and ever. There is a time when the pleasures of sin cannot be called Pleasures to come, but the Wrath of God that will still be Wrath to come. Oh! consider for what a trifle you sell your Souls. When Lysimachus parted with his Kingdom for a draught of Water, he said when he had drank it, For how short a pleasure have I sold a Kingdom! And Jonathan lamented, 1 Sam. 14. 43. I tasted but a little Honey, and I must die. Satan would not charm so powerfully as he doth with the pleasures of Sin, if this point were well believed and heartily applied.

Infer. III. What a matchless madness is it to cast the Soul into God's Prison, to save the Body out of Man's Prison!

Men have their Prisons, and God hath his: but because the one is an Object of Sense, and the other other an Object of Faith, that only is feared, and this ſlighted all over this unbelieving World; except by a very ſmall Number of Men who tremble at the Word of God. Now this I ſay is the Height of Madneſs, and will appear to be ſo in a juſt Collation of both in a few Particulars. (1.) Man's Priſon reſtrains the Body only, God's Priſon Soul and Body, Mat. 10. 28. The Spirits of Men (as my Text ſpeaks) are the Priſoners there. Oh what a vaſt Odds doth this ſingle Difference make! A thouſand Times more than the captivating and binding of the greateſt King or Emperour differs from the Impriſonment of a poor Mechanick or vagrant Beggar. (2.) In Man's Priſon there are many Comforts and unſpeakable Refreſhments from Heaven, but in God's Priſon none, but the direct contrary. You read of the Apoſtles, Acts 16. 25. how they ſang in the Priſon: the Spirit of God made them a Banquet of heavenly Joys, and they could not but ſing at it: tho' their Feet were in the Stocks, their Spirits were never more at Liberty. Algerius dated his Letters from the delectable Orchard of the Leonine Priſon; where, ſaith he, flows the ſweeteſt Nectar. Another tells us, Chriſt was always kind to him; but ſince he became a Priſoner for him, he even overcame himſelf in Kindneſs. I verily think (ſaith he) the Chains of my Lord are all overlaid with pure Gold; and his Croſs perfumed. But the worſt Terrors of the Priſoners in Hell come from the Preſence of the Lord, 2 Theſ. 1. 9. God is a Terror to them. (3.) The Cauſe for which a Man is caſt into Priſon by Men, may be his Duty, and ſo his Conſcience muſt be at leaſt quiet, if not joyful in ſuch Sufferings. So was it with Paul, Acts 28. 20. For the Hope of Iſrael am I bound with this Chain: This diffuſes Joy and Peace through the Conſcience into the whole Man. But the Cauſe for which Men are caſt into God's Priſon, is their Sin and Guilt, which arms their own Conſciences againſt them, and makes them, as you heard before, Self-tormentors, terrors to themſelves. What odds is here! (4.) In Man's Priſon the moſt excellent Company and ſweet Society may be found. Paul and Silas were fellow-priſoners. In Queen Mary's Days the moſt excellent Company to be found in England was in the Priſons: Priſons were turned into Churches. But in God's Priſon no better Society is to be found than that of Devils and damned Reprobates, Mat. 25. 41. (5.) In Man's Priſon there is Hope of a comfortable Deliverance; but in God's Priſon none: Mat. 5. 26. Thou ſhalt not come out thence, till thou haſt paid the laſt Mite. 'Tis an everlaſting Priſon.

Compare theſe few obvious Particulars, and judge then what is to be thought of that Man, who ſtands readier to caſt himſelf into any Guilt, than into the leaſt Suffering. What is it but as if a Man ſhould offer his Neck to the Sword, to ſave his Hand? The Lord convince us what trifles our Eſtates, Liberties, and Lives are to our Souls, or to the Peace and Purity of our Conſciences.

Infer. IV. What an invaluable Mercy is the Pardon of Sin, which ſets the Soul out of Danger of going into this Priſon! When the Debt is ſatisfied, a Man may walk as boldly before the Priſon-door as he doth before his own: they that owe nothing, fear no Bailiffs. 'Tis the Law (as I ſaid before) that commits Men to Priſon, a Mittimus is but an Inſtrument of Law; but the Righteouſneſs of the Law is fulfilled in them that believe, Rom. 8. 4. Yea, they are made the Righteouſneſs of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21. There can be no Proceſs of Law againſt them. For who ſhall condemn when it is God that juſtifieth? Rom. 8. 33, 34. And that Divine Juſtice might be no Bar to our Faith and Comfort, he adds, It is Chriſt that died; and yet farther, to aſſure us that his Death had made plenary Satisfaction to God for all our Sins and Debts, it is added, yea, rather, that is riſen again: q. d. If the Debts of Believers to God were not fully paid and ſatisfied for by the Blood of Chriſt, how comes it to paſs that our Surety is diſcharged, as by his Reſurrection he appears to be? Oh Believer! thy Bonds are cancell'd, the Hand-writing that was againſt thee is nailed to the Croſs, the Blood of Chriſt hath done that for thee that all the Gold and Silver in the world could not do, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. It is a Counterprice fully anſwering to thy Debts, Mat. 20. 28. And hence, to the eternal Joy of thy Heart, reſult three Properties of thy Pardon, which are able to make thine Eyes guſh out with Tears of Joy whilſt thou art reading of it.

Ἀντίλυτρον eſt pretium ex adverſo reſpondens.

1. It is a free Pardon to thy Soul; tho' it coſt Chriſt dear, it coſts Thee nothing. We have Redemption, even the Remiſſion of Sins, according to the Riches of his Grace, Eph. 1. 7. The Project of it was God's, not thine; the Price for it was Chriſt's Blood, not thine; the Glory and Riches of free Grace are illuſtriouſly diſplayed in thy Forgiveneſs.

2. It is as full as it is free; a compleat and perfect Cauſe produceth a complete and perfect Effect, Acts 13. 39 Juſtified from all Things. Whatever thy Sins be for Nature, Number, or Circumſtances of Aggravations they cannot exceed the Value of the meritorious Cauſe of Remiſſion. The Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin.

3. It muſt be as firm as it is free and full, even an irrevocable Pardon for evermore. Chriſt did not ſhed his Blood at a Hazard; the Way of Juſtification by Faith, makes the Promiſe ſure, Rom. 4. 16. The Juſtified ſhall never come again under Condemnation. Oh the unſpeakable Joy that flows from this Spring! Oh the Triumphs of Faith upon this Foundation!

Is it not raviſhing, melting, overwhelming, and amazing, to think thus with thy ſelf? Here ſit I with a joyful Plenary free Pardon of Sin in my Hand, whilſt many who never ſinned to that Height and Degree I have, lie groaning, howling, ſweating, and trembling under the Indignation of God, poured out like Fire upon their Souls in Hell. A greater Sinner ſaved, and leſſer damned. Oh how unſpeakably ſweet is that Reſt into which my terrified and diſquieted Soul is come by Faith! Rom. 5. 1. Heb. 4. 3. We which have believed, do enter into Reſt. Oh bleſſed Calm after a dreadful Tempeſt! This poor Breaſt of mine was lately panting, ſweating, trembling under the Horrors of Wrath to come, terrified with the Viſions of Hell. No other Sound was in mine Ears, but that of fiery Indignation to devour the Adverſaries. Oh what Price can be put upon my quietus eſt! What Value upon a Pardon, delivered as it were at the Ladders foot! Oh precious Hand of Faith that receives it! But oh the moſt precious Blood of Chriſt which purchaſed it! If Satan now come with his Accuſations, the Law with its Comminations, Death with its dreadful Summons, I have in a Readineſs to anſwer them all.

Here is the Law, the Wrath of God, and everlaſting Burnings, the juſt Demerit of Sin upon one Side, and a poor ſinful Creature on the other: but but the Covenant of Grace hath solv'd all. An Act of Oblivion is past in Heaven, I will forgive their Iniquities, and their Sins and Transgressions will I remember no more. In this Act of Grace my Soul is included; I am in Christ, and there is no Condemnation. Die I must, but damned I shall not be: My Debts are paid, my Bonds are cancelled, my Conscience is quieted; let Death do its worst, it shall do me no Harm; that Blood which satisfies God, may well satisfy me.

Infer. V. How amazingly sad and deplorable is the Security and Stilness of the Consciences of Sinners under all their own Guilts, and the immediate Danger of God's Everlasting Wrath.

Philosophers observe that before an Earth-quake the Wind lies, and the Weather is exceeding calm and still, not a Breath of Wind going. So it is in the Consciences of many just before the Tempest and Storm of God's Wrath pours down upon them. What a golden Morning open'd upon Sodom, and began that fatal Day! Little did they imagine Showers of Fire had been ready to fall from so pleasant and serene a Sky as they saw over their Heads. How secure, still, and unconcerned are those to Day, who it may be shall rage, roar, and tremble in Hell to Morrow! Cæsar hearing of a Citizen of Rome who was deep in Debt, and yet slept soundly, would needs have his Pillow, as supposing there was some strange charming Virtue in it.

It is wonderful to consider what Shift Men make to keep their Consciences in that Stilness and quiet they do, under such Loads of Guilt and Threatnings of Wrath ready to be executed upon them. It must be some strong Opium that so stupifies and benumbs their Consciences; and upon Inquiry into the Matter we shall find it to be the Effect of,

1. A strong Delusion of Satan.
2. A spiritual judicial Stroke of God.

1. This Stilness of Conscience upon the Brink of Damnation proceeds from the strong Delusions of Satan; blinding their Eyes: and feeding their false Hopes: he removes the evil Day at many Years imaginay Distance from them, and interposeth many a fair Day betwixt them and it, and in that interposed Season, Time enough to prepare for it; without such an Artifice as this, his House would be in an Uproar, but this keeps all in Peace, Luke 11. 21. By presuming he feeds their Hopes, and by their Hopes destroys their Souls. Some he diverts from all serious Thoughts of this Day, by the Pleasures, and others by the Cares of this Life: and so that Day cometh upon them unawares, L. 21. 34.

Præsumendo sperant, & sperando pereunt.

2. This Stilness of Conscience in so miserable and dangerous a State, is the Effect of a spiritual, judicial Stroke of God upon the Children of Wrath. That's a dreadful Word, Isa. 6. 10. Make the Heart of this People fat, and make their Ears heavy, and shut their Eyes: The Eye and Ear are the two principal Doors or Inlets to the Heart; when these are shut, the Heart must needs be insensible, as the Fat of the Body is. There is a Spirit of a deep Sleep poured out judicially upon some Men, Isa. 29. 10. such as that upon Adam when God took a Rib from his Side, and he felt it not: but this is upon the Soul, and is the same as to give up a Man to a reprobate Sense.

Pinguedo non refractaria solum facit animalia, sed omnis expers sensus est, contentientius Physicis. Glass.

Inf. IV. The Case of distressed Consciences upon Earth, is exceeding sad, and calls upon all for the tenderest Pity, and utmost Help from Men.

You see the Labourings of Conscience under the Sense of Guilt and Wrath, is a special Part of the Torments of Hell; of which there is not a livelier Emblem or Picture, than the Distresses of Conscience in this World.

It must be thankfully confessed there are two great Differences betwixt the Terrors of Conscience here, and there: One in the Degrees of Anguish, the other in the Reliefs of that Anguish. The ordinary Distresses of Conscience here, compared with those of the Damned, are as the Flame of a Candle to a fiery Oven, a mild and gentle Fire; or as the Sparks that fly out of the Top of a Chimney, to the dreadful Eruptions of Vesuvius, or Mount Ætna. Besides, these are capable of Relief, but those are unrelievable: their Hearts die, because their Hope is perished from the Lord.

But yet of all the Miseries and Distresses incident to Men in this World, none like those of distressed Consciences; the Terrors of God set themselves in Array, or are drawn up in Battalia against the Soul, Job 6. 4. Whilst I suffer thy Terrors (saith Heman) I am distracted, Psal. 88. 15. Yea, they not only distract, but cut off the Spirit, as he adds, ver. 16. They lick up the very Spirit of a Man, and none can bear them, Prov. 18. 14. for now a Man hath to do immediately with God; yea, with the Wrath of the great and dreadful God: and this Wrath which is the most acute and sharp of all Torments, falls upon the most tender and sensible Part, the Spirit and Mind, which now lies open and naked before him to be wounded by it. No Creature can administer the least Relief, by the Application of any temporal Comfort or Refreshment to it. Gold and Silver, Wife and Children, Meat and Melody, signify no more than the drawing off a silk Stocking to cure the Paroxysms of the Gout.

All that can be done for their Relief, is by seasonable, judicious and tender Applications of spiritual Remedies; and what can be done, ought to be done for them. What Heart can hear a Voice like that of Job, Have Pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my Friends; for the Hand of God hath touched me; and not melt into Compassions over them? Is there a Word of Wisdom in thy Heart? let thy Tongue apply it to the Relief of thy distressed Brother: whilst his Heart meditates Terrour, let thine meditate his Succour. It is not impossible but thou who lendest a friendly Hand to another, mayest e'er long need one thy self; and he that hath ever felt the Terrours of the Almighty upon his Soul, hath Motive enough to draw forth the Bowels of his Pity to another in the like Case.

Alas for poor distressed Souls, who have either none about them that understand, and are able and willing to speak a Word in Season to their weary Souls, or too many about them to exasperate their Sorrows, and persecute them whom God hath smitten. You that have both Ability and Opportunity for it, are under the strongest Engagements in the World to endeavour their Relief with all Faithfulness, Seriousness, Compassion and Constancy. Did Christ shed his Blood for the saving of Souls, and wilt not thou spend thy Breath for them? Shall any Man that hath found Mercy from God, shew none to his Brother? God forbid. A Soul in Hell is out of of your reach, but these that are in the Suburbs of Hell are not: the Candle of intense sorrow is put to the Thread of their miserable life; and should they be suffered to drop into Hell whilst you stand by as unconcerned? Spectators of such a Tragedy will have little peace. Your unmercifulness to their Souls will be a wound to your own.

Infer. VII. Be hence informed of the evil that is in sin, be convinced of the evil that is in it by the eternal misery that follows it.

If Hell be out of measure dreadful, then Sin must be out of measure sinful: The Torments of Hell do not exceed the demerit of Sin, tho' they exceed the Understandings of Men to conceive them. God will lay upon no man more than is right. Sin is the Founder of Hell: all the Miseries and Torments there are but the Treasures of Wrath which Sinners in all Ages have been treasuring up; and how dreadful soever it be, it is but the Ἀπωλία, the Recompence which is meet, Rom. 6. ult. The Wages of sin is Death.

We have slight thoughts of sin; Fools make a mock of sin: but if the Lord by the convictions of mens Consciences did but lead them through the Chambers of Death, and give them a sight of the Wrath to come; could we but see the Piles that are made in Hell (as the Prophet calls them, Isa. 30. 33.) to maintain the flames of Vengeance to Eternity; could we but understand in what Dialect the damned speak of sin, who see the Treasures of Wrath broken up to avenge it, surely it would alter our apprehensions of sin, and strike cold to the very heart of sinners.

Cannot the Extremity and Eternity of Hell torments exceed the evil that is in Sin? What words then can express the evil of it? Hell flames have the nature of a Punishment, but not of an atonement.

Oh think on this, you that look upon Sin as the veriest trifle, that will sin for the value of a Penny, that look upon all the humiliations, broken-hearted confessions, and bitter moans of the Saints under Sin, as frenzy or melancholy, slighting them as a company of half-witted hypochondriack persons! Thou that never hadst one sick night or sad day in all thy life upon the account of sin, let me tell thee, that breast of thine must be the seat of sorrow; that frothy airy Spirit of thine must be acquainted with emphatical sobs and groans. God grant it may be on this side Hell by effectual Repentance, else it must be there in the extremity and eternity of Sorrows.

Inf. VIII. What Enemies are they to the Souls of Men, who are Satan's Instruments to draw them into sin, or who suffer sin to lie upon them!

When there were but two persons in the World, one drew the other into Sin; and among the millions of Men and Women now in the World, where are there two to be found that have in no case been snares to draw some into sin? Some tempt designedly, taking the Devil's work out of his hands; others virtually and consequentially, by Examples, which have a compelling power to draw others with them into sin. The first sort are among the worst of Sinners, Prov. 1. 10. the latter are among the best of Saints; see Gal. 2. 14. Whose Conversations is so much in Heaven, that nothing falls out in the course thereof, which may not farther some or other in their way to Hell?

Among wicked Men there are five sorts eminently accessory to the guilt and ruin of other Men's Souls. (1.) Loose Professors, whose lives give their lips the lye; whose Conversations make their Professions blush. (2.) Scandalous Apostates, whose Fall is more prejudicial than their Profession was ever beneficial to others. (3.) Cruel Persecutors, who make the Lives, Liberties, and Estates of Men the occasion of the ruin of their Consciences. (4.) Ignorant and faithless Ministers, who strengthen the hands of the wicked, that they should not return from their wickedness. (5.) Wicked Relations, who quench and damp every hopeful beginning of conviction and affection in their friends. Of all which I shall distinctly speak in the next Discourse to which therefore I remit it at present.

And many there are who suffer sin to lie upon others, without a wise and seasonable reproof to recover them.

Oh what cruelty to Souls is here! The day is coming in which they will curse the time that ever they knew you: 'tis possible you may repent, but then it may be those whose Souls you have help'd to ruin are gone, and quite out of your reach. The Lord make you sensible what you have done in season, lest your repentance come too late for your selves and them also.

Infer. IX. How poor a comfort is it to him that carries all his Sins out of this World with him, to leave much earthly Treasure (especially if gotten by Sin) behind him?

It is a poor consolation to be praised where thou art not, and tormented where thou art; to purchase a life of pleasure to others on earth, at the price of thy own everlasting misery in Hell. All the consolation sensual, voluptuous and oppressing Worldlings have, is but this, that they were coached to Hell in Pomp and State, and have left the same Chariot to bring their graceless Children after them in the same Equipage to the place of Torments. There be five Considerations provoking pity to them that are thus past into a miserable Eternity, and caution to all that are following after in the same path.

Quid prodest esse quod esse non prodest? Tertul.

First, that fatal mistake in the practical understanding and judgment of Man deserves a compassionate lamentation, as the cause and reason of their eternal miscarriage and ruin. They looked upon trifles as things of greatest necessity, and the most necessary things as meer trifles; putting the greatest weight and value upon that which little concerned them, and none at all upon their greatest Concernment in the whole World, Luke 12. 21.

Secondly, The perpetual diversions that the trifles of this World gave them from the main use and end of their time. O what a hurry and thick succession of earthly business and encumbrances filled up their days! So that they could find no time to go alone, and think of the awful and weighty concernments of the World to come, James 5. 5.

Thirdly, The total waste and expence of the only season of Salvation about these vanished, impertinent trifles, which is never more to be recovered, Eccles. 9. 10.

Fourthly, that these deluding shadows, the pleasures of a moment, is all that they had in exchange for their Souls, a goodly price it was valued at, Mat. 16. 26.

Fifthly, That by such a life they have not only ruined their own Souls, but put their posterity, by their education of them in the same course of life, into the same path of destruction, in which they they went to Hell before them: Psal. 49. 13. Their posterity approve their saying.

Infer. X. How rational and commendable is the courage and resolution of those Christians who chuse to bear all sufferings in this World from the hands of Men, rather than to defile and wound their Consciences with sin, and thereby expose their Souls to the wrath of God for ever!

That which men now call Pride, Humour, Fancy, and Stubbornness, will one day appear to be their great Wisdom, and the Excellency of their Spirits. It is the tenderness of their Consciences, not the pride and stoutness of their stomachs, which makes them inflexible to sin; they know the terrors of a wounded Conscience, and had rather endure any other trouble from the hands of Men than fall by known sin into the hands of an angry God. Try them in other matters wherein the glory of God and peace or purity of their Consciences are not concerned, and see if you can charge them with stubbornness and singularity. It was the excellency of the Spirits of the Primitive Christians, that they durst tell the Emperor to his face, when he threatned them with torments; Pardon us, O Emperor, thou threatnest us with a Prison, but God with Hell. Do we call that ingenuity and good nature, which makes the mind soft and tractable to temptations, and will rather venture upon guilt than be esteemed singular?

Ignosce, Imperator, tu carcerem minaris, Deus Gehennam.

Salvian tells us of some in his time, who were compelled to be evil, lest they should be accounted vile: and was that their excellency? May I not fitly apply the words of Salvian here: O in what honour and repute is Christ among Christians, when Religion shall make them base and ignoble! He that understands what the Punishment of sin will be in Hell, should endure all things rather than yield to sin on Earth. Indeed, if you threaten, and tempt others to violate their Consciences, could you bear the Wrath of God for them in Hell, it were somewhat; but we know there is no suffering by a Proxy there, they tremble at the Word of God, and have felt the burden of guilt, and dare not yield to sin, tho' they yield their Estates and Bodies to prevent it.

Mali esse cogentur, ne viles habeantur.

Infer. XI. How patiently should we bear the Afflictions of this life, by which sin is prevented and purged?

The discipline of our Spirits belongs to God the Father of Spirits; he corrects us here, that we may not be punished hereafter, 1 Cor. 11. 32. We are chastened of the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the World. It is better for us to groan under Afflictions on Earth, than to roar under revenging Wrath in Hell. Parents who are wise as well as tender, had rather hear their Children sob and cry under the Rod, than stand with Halters about their Necks on the Ladder, bewailing the destructive indulgence of their Parents.

Your Chastisements when sanctified are preventive of all the misery opened before. It is therefore as unreasonable to murmur against God, because you smart under his Rod, as it would be to accuse your dearest Friend of cruelty, because he strain'd your Arm to snatch you from the fall of a House or Wall which he saw ready to crush and overwhelm you in its ruins.

If we had less Affliction, we should have more Guilt. We see how apt we are to break over the hedge, and go astray from God, with all the clogs of Afflictions designed for our restraint; what should we do if we had no clog at all? It is better for you to be whipt to Heaven with all the Rods of Affliction, than coached to Hell with all the Pleasures of the World.

Christian, thy God sees, if thou do not, that all these troubles are few enough to save thee from Sin and Hell. Thy corruptions require all these Rods, and all little enough. If need be, ye are in heaviness, 1 Pet. 1. 6. If there be need for it, thy dearest comforts on Earth shall die, that thy Soul may live; but if thy mortification to them render thy removal needless, thou and they shall live together. 'Tis better be preserved in Brine, than rot in Honey. Sanctified Afflictions working under the efficacy of the Blood of Christ, are the safest way to our Souls.

Infer. XII. How doleful a change doth the death of wicked Men make upon them! from palaces on Earth, to the Prison of Hell.

No sooner is the Soul of a wicked Man stept out of his own door at death, but the Serjeants of Hell are immediately upon it, serving the dreadful Summons on the Law-condemned Wretch. This Arrest terrifies it more than the Hand-writing upon the plaister of the Wall did him, Dan. 5. 5. How are all a Man's apprehensions changed in a moment! Out of what a deep sleep are most, and out of what a pleasant dream of Heaven are some awaked and startled at death, by the dreadful Arrest and Summons of God to Condemnation.

How quickly would all a Sinner's mirth be dampt and turned into howlings in this World, if Conscience were but thoroughly awakned! It is but for God to change our Apprehensions now, and it would be done in a moment: but the eyes of most mens Souls are not opened, till death hath shut their bodily eyes; and then how sudden, and how sad a change is made in one day!

O think what it is to pass from all the pleasures and delights of this world into the torments and miseries of that World; from a pleasant Habitation, into an infernal Prison; from the depth of Security, to the extremity of Desperation; from the Arms and Bosoms of dearest Friends and Relations, to the Society of damned Spirits! Lord, what a Change is here! Had a gracious Change been made upon their Hearts by Grace, no such doleful Change could have been made upon their state by Death: Little do their surviving Friends think what they feel, or what is their estate in the other World, whilst they are honouring their Bodies with splendid and pompous Funerals. None on Earth have so much reason to fear Death, to make much of Life, and use all means to continue it, as those who will and must be so great losers by the exchange.

Infer. XIII. See here the certainty and inevitableness of the Judgment.

This Prison which is continually filling with the Spirits of wicked Men, is an undeniable evidence of it: for why is Hell called a Prison, and why are the Spirits of Men confined and chained there, but with respect to the Judgment of the great Day? As there is a necessary connection betwixt Sin and Punishment, so betwixt punishing and trying the Offender; there are millions of Souls in custody, a world of Spirits in Prison; these must be brought forth to their Trial, for God will lay upon no man more than is right; the legality of their Mittimus to Hell, will be evidenced ced in their solemn Day of Trial. God hath therefore appointed a Day in which he will judge the World in Righteousness, by that Man whom he hath ordained, Acts 17. 21.

Here Sinners run in Arrears, and contract vast Debts; in Hell they are seiz'd and committed, at Judgment tried and cast for the same. This will be a dreadful Day, those that have spent so prodigally upon the Patience of God, must now come to a severe Account for all; they have past their particular Judgment immediately after Death, Eccles. 12. 7. Heb. 9. 27. By this they know how they shall speed in the general Judgment, and how it shall be with them for ever, but tho' this private Judgment secures their Damnation sufficiently, yet it clears not the Justice of God before Angels and Men sufficiently, and therefore they must appear once more before his Bar, 2 Cor. 5. 10. In the fearful Expectation of this Day, those trembling Spirits now lie in Prison, and that fearful Expectation is a principal Part of their present Misery and Torment. You that refuse to come to the Throne of Grace, see if you can refuse to make your Appearance at the Bar of Justice; you that brav'd and brow-beat your Ministers that warn'd you of it, see if you can outbrave your Judge too as you did them. Nothing more sure or awful than such a Day as this.

Infer. XIV. How much are Ministers, Parents, and all to whom the Charge of Souls is committed, bound to do all that in them lies, to prevent their everlasting Misery in the World to come!

The great Apostle of the Gentiles found the Consideration of the Terror of the Lord as a Spur urging and enforcing him to a ministerial Faithfulness and Diligence; 2 Cor. 5. 11. Knowing therefore the Terror of the Lord, we persuade Men. And the same he presseth upon Timothy, 2 Tim. 4. 1, 2. I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his Kingdom; preach the Word; be instant in Season and out of Season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and Doctrine. Oh that those to whom so great a Trust as the Souls of Men is committed, would labour to acquit themselves with all Faithfulness therein, as Paul did, warning every one Night and Day with Tears, that if we cannot prevent their Ruin, which is most desirable; yet at least we may be able to take God to witness, as he did, that we are pure from the Blood of all Men.

Oh! consider, my Brethren, if your faithful Plainness and unweary'd Diligence to save Mens Souls produce no other Fruit but the Hatred of you now; yet it is much easier for you to bear that, than that they and you too should bear the Wrath of God for ever.

We have all of us personal Guilt enough upon us, let us not add other Mens Guilt to our Account: to be guilty of the Blood of the meanest Man upon Earth, is a Sin which will cry in your Consciences; but to be guilty of the Blood of Souls, Lord, who can bear it! Christ thought them worth his Heart-blood, and are they not worth the Expence of our Breath? Did He sweat Blood to save them, and will not we move our Lips to save them? 'Tis certainly a sore Judgment to the Souls of Men, when such Ministers are set over them as never understood the Value of their Peoples Souls, or were never heartily concerned about the Salvation of their own Souls.

MATTH. XVI. 26.

For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his Soul?

Difficult Duties need to be enforced with powerful Arguments. In the 24th Verse of this Chapter our Lord presseth upon his Disciples the deepest and hardest Duties of Self-denial, acquaints them upon what Terms they must be admitted into his Service: If any Man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his Cross and follow me.

This hard and difficult Duty he enforceth upon them by a double Argument, viz. From,

1. The Vanity of all sinful Shifts from it, v. 25.
2. The Value of their Souls, which is imported in it, v. 26.

They may shift off their Duty to the Loss of their Souls, or save their Souls by the Loss of such Trifles. If they esteem their Souls above the World, and can be content to put all other Things to the Hazard for their Salvation, making Account to save nothing but them by Christianity; then they come up to Christs' Terms, and may warrantably and boldly call him their Lord and Master; and to sweeten this Choice to them, he doth in my Text balance the Soul and all the World, weighing them one against the other, and shews them the infinite Odds and Disproportion betwixt them: What is a Man profited, if he shall gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? or what shall a Man give in exchange for his Soul?

What is a Man profited?] There is a plain Meiosis in the Phrase; and the meaning is, how inestimably and irreparably is a Man damnified! what a Soul-ruining Bargain would a Man make!

If he should gain the whole World.] There is a plain Hyperbole in this Phrase; for it never was, nor will be the Lot of any Man to be the sole Owner and Possessor of the whole World *. But suppose all the Power, Pleasure, Wealth, and Honour of the whole World were bid and offer'd in exchange for a Man's Soul: What a dear Purchase would it be at such a Rate! What were this, † says one, but to win Venice, and then be hang'd at the Gate of it? As that Man acts like a mad Man, that goes about to purchase a Treasure of Gold with the loss of his Life; for Life being lost, what is all the Gold in the World to him? he can have no Enjoyment of it, or Comfort in it: So here, what is all the World, or as many Worlds as there are Creatures in it, when the Soul is lost, if he gain this?

* Hypothetica hâc hyperbole amissionis salutis æternæ atrocitas summa notatur. S. Glassius.

† Non magis juvabitur quam qui acquirit Venetias, ipse verò suspendatur ad portam. Pareus in loc.

And lose his own Soul.] The Comparison lies here betwixt one single Soul and the whole World. The whole World is no Price for the poorest, meanest, and most despised Soul that lives in it.

By losing the Soul, we are not to understand the Destruction of its Being, but of its Happiness and Comfort, the cutting it off from God, and all the Hopes of his Favour and Enjoyment for ever. This is the Loss here intended, a Loss never to be repaired repaired. The whole World can be no Recompence for a Loss to the Soul, if it be but the Loss of its Purity or Peace for a Time; much less can it Recompence the Loss of the Soul in the Loss of all its Happiness for ever. When a Man's chief Happiness is finally lost, then is his Soul lost: For what Benefit can it be, nay, how great a Misery must it be, to have a Being perpetuated in Torments for ever? This is the Fine or Mulct which is set upon Sin, as some render the Word. What shall a Man gain by such Pleasures, for which God will mulct or fine him at the Rate or Price of his own Soul? that is, of all the Happiness, Joy, and Comfort of it to all Eternity.

Animâ verò suâ mulctetur. Bez. Maldon.

Or what shall a Man give in exchange for his Soul? The Question aggravates the Sense, and amplifies the Loss and Damage of the Man that sells his Soul for the whole World. There is no Recompence in all the World for the Hazard or Danger of the Soul one Hour; nor would a Man that understands what Soul and Eternity are, put it into Danger for ten Thousand Worlds, much less for a Penny, yea, for nothing, as many do: but to barter or exchange it for the World, to take any thing in lieu of it; this is the Height of Madness. The Way of Buying in former Times was not by Money, but by the Exchange of one Commodity for another; and to this Custom Brugensis thinks this Phrase is alusive. Now what Commodity is found in all the World; or who that is not blinded by the God of this World, can think that the whole World it self, if all the Rocks in it were Rocks of Diamonds, and the Seas and Rivers were liquid Gold, is a Commodity of equivalent worth to his own Soul? Hence two Notes rise naturally.

Interrogatio exaggerans.

Ἀντάλλαγμα vocat id quo dato, redimitur aliquid; juxta priscorum commercia quæ non monetâ, sed rerum permutatione constabant. Brugens.

Doct. I. That one Soul is of more Value than the whole World.

Doct. II. How precious and invaluable soever the Soul of Man is, it may be lost and cast away for ever.

I begin with the First.

Doct. I. That one Soul is of more Value than the whole World.

I need not spend much time in the Proof of it, when you have consider'd, that he who bought them hath here weighed and valued them; and that the Point before us is the Result and Conclusion of one that hath the best Reason to know the true worth of them. That which I have to do, is to gather out of Scriptures the Particulars; which put together, make up the full Demonstration of the Point. And,

1. The invaluable Worth of Souls appears from the Manner of their Creation. They were created immediately by God, as hath been proved, and that not without the Deliberation of the whole Trinity; Gen. 1. 26. Let us make Man. For the Production of other Creatures, it was enough to give out the Word of his Command. Let there be Light, let the Earth and the Waters bring forth; but when he comes to Man, then you have no Fiat, let there be, but he puts his own Hand immediately to it, as to the Master-piece of the whole Creation: Yea, a Council is call'd about it; Let us, implying the just Consultation and Deliberation of all the Persons in the Godhead about it, that our Hearts might be raised to the Expectation of some extraordinary Work to follow; great Counsels and wise Debates being both the Forerunners and Foundations of great Actions and Events to ensue thereupon. Thus Elihu in Job 35. 10. None saith, Where is God my Makers? And David in Psal. 149. 2. Let Israel rejoice in his Makers: In both Places the Word is plural. The Consultation here is only amongst the Divine Persons, no Angels are called to this Council-Table, the whole Matter was to be conducted by the Wisdom, and effected by the Power of God; and therefore there was no need to consult with any but himself, the Wisdom of Angels being from him: But this great Council shews what an excellent Creature was now to be produced, and the Excellency of that Creature Man was principally in his Soul; for the Bodies of other Creatures, which were made by the Word of his Command, are as beautiful, elegant, and neat as the Body of Man; yea, and in some Respects more excellent. The Soul then was that rare Piece which God in so condescending an Expression tells us was created with the Deliberation of the Godhead; those great and excellent Persons laid their Heads, as it were, together to project its Being.

And by the Way, this may smartly check the Pride and Arrogance of Souls, who dare take it upon them to teach God, as we interpretatively do in our Censures of his Works, and Murmurs at his Disposals of us. Shall that Soul, which is the Product of his Wisdom and Counsel, dare to instruct or counsel its Maker? But that by the bye. You see there is a transcendent Dignity and Worth in the Soul of Man above all other Beings in the World, by the peculiar way of its Production into the Number of created Beings: No wise Man deliberates long, or calls a Council about ordinary Matters, much less the All-wise God.

2. The Soul hath in it self an intrinsick Worth and Excellency worthy of that Divine Original whence it sprang: View it in its noble Faculties and admirable Powers, and it will appear to be a creature upon which God hath laid out the Riches of his Wisdom and Power.

There you shall find a Mind susceptive of all Light, both natural and spiritual, shining as the Candle of God in the inner Man, closing with Truth as the Iron doth with the attractive Loadstone, a Shop in which all Arts and Sciences are laboured and formed: What are all the famous Libraries and Monuments of Learning, but so many Systems of Thoughts laboured and perfected in the active inquisitive Minds of Men? Truth is its natural and delectable Object, it pursues eagerly after it, and even spends it self and the Body too in the Chase and Prosecution of Truth; when it lies deep, as a subterranean Treasure, the Mind sends out innumerable Thoughts, re-inforcing each other in thick Successions, to dig for, and compass that invaluable Treasure; if it be disguised by Misrepresentations and vulgar Prejudice, and trampled in the Dirt under that Disguise, there is an Ability in the Mind to discern it by some Lines and Features, which are well known to it, and both own, honour and vindicate it under all that Dirt and Obloquy, with more Respect than a Man will take up a Piece of Gold, or a sparkling Diamond out of the Gutter; it searches after it by many painful Deductions of Reason, and Triumphs more in the Discovery of it, than in all earthly Treasures;

Veritas in puteo.

εὑρηκα, εὑρηκα. Archim.

no Gratification of Senſe like that of the Mind, when it graſps its Prey for which it hunted.

The Mind paſſes through all the Works of Creation, it views the ſeveral Creatures on Earth, conſiders the Fabrick, Uſe, and Beauty of Animals, the Signatures of Plants, penetrating thereby into their Nature and Virtues: it views the vaſt Ocean, and the large Train of Cauſes laid together in all theſe Things, for the Good of Man, by God, whoſe Name it reads in the moſt diminutive Creature it beholds on Earth.

It can in a Moment mount it ſelf from Earth to Heaven, view the Face thereof, deſcribe the Motions of the Sun in the Ecliptick, calculate Tables for the Motions of the Planets and fixed Stars, invent convenient Cycles for the Computations of Time, foretell at a great Diſtance the Diſmal Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon, to the very Digit, and the portentous Conjunctions of the Planets, to the very Minute of their Ingreſs: theſe are the pleaſant Imployments of the Underſtanding.

But there is a higher Game at which this Eagle plays, it reckons it ſelf all this while imploy'd as much beneath its Capacity, as Domitian in catching Flies; tho' theſe be lawful and pleaſant Exerciſes, when it hath Leiſure for them, yet it is fitted for a much nobler Exerciſe, even to penetrate the glorious Myſteries of Redemption, to trace redeeming Love through all the aſtoniſhing Methods, and manifold Diſcoveries of it; and yet higher than all this, it is capable of an immediate Sight or facial Viſion of the bleſſed God, ſhort of which it receives no Pleaſure that is fully agreeable to its noble Powers and infinite Appetite.

View its Will, and you ſhall find it like a Queen upon the Throne of the Soul, ſwaying the Scepter of Liberty in her hand, (as one expreſſeth it) with all the affections waiting and attending upon her. No Tyrant can force it, no Torment can wreſt the golden Scepter of Liberty out of its Hand, the Keys of all the Chambers of the Soul hang at its Girdle, theſe it delivers to Chriſt in the Day of his Power; victorious Grace ſweetly determines it by gaining its Conſent, but commits no Rape upon it by unnatural Coaction. God accepts its Offering, tho' full of Imperfections; but no Service is accepted without it, how excellent ſoever the Matter of it. Culverwell.

View the Conſcience and Thoughts with their ſelf-reflective abilities, wherein the Soul retires into it ſelf, and ſits concealed from all Eyes but his that made it, judging its own Actions, and cenſuring its Eſtate; viewing its Face in its own Glaſs, and correcting the Indecencies it diſcovers there: Things of greateſt Moment and Importance are ſilently tranſacted in this Council-chamber betwixt the Soul and God; ſo remote from the Knowledge of all Creatures, that neither Angels, Devils, or Men can know what it is doing there, but by uncertain Gueſs, or Revelation from God: here it impleads, condemns, and acquits it ſelf as at a privy Seſſion, with Reſpect of the Judgment of the great Day; here it meets with the beſt of Comforts, and with the worſt of Terrors. 1 Cor. 2. 11. Rom. 2. 15. 2 Cor. 1. 12.

Take a ſurvey of its Paſſions and Affections, and you will find them admirable: ſee how they are placed by Divine Wiſdom in the Soul, ſome for Defence and Safety, others for Delight and Pleaſure. Anger actuates the Spirit, and rouzeth its Courage, enabling it to break through Difficulties: Fear keeps Centinel, watching upon all Dangers that approach us: Hope foreſtals the good, and anticipates the Joys of the next Life, and thereby ſupports and ſtrengthens the Soul under all the Diſcouragements and Preſſures of the preſent Life: Love unites us to the chiefeſt Good; he that dwelleth in Love, dwells in God, and God in him: Zeal is the Dagger which Love draws in God's Cauſe and Quarrel, to ſecure it ſelf from Sin, and teſtify its Reſentments of God's Diſhonour.

O what a Divine Spark is the Soul of Man! well might Chriſt prefer it in Dignity to the whole World.

3. The Worth of a Soul may be gathered and diſcerned from its ſubjective Capacity and Hability both of Grace and Glory. It is capable of all the Graces of the Spirit, of being fill'd with the Fulneſs of God, Eph. 3. 19. to live to God here, and with God for ever. What excellent Graces do adorn ſome Souls! How are all the Rooms richly hanged with Divine and Coſtly Hangings, that God may dwell in them! This makes it like the carved Works of the Temple, overlaid with pure Gold; here is Glory upon Glory, a new Creation upon the old; in the innermoſt Parts of ſome Souls is a ſpiritual Altar erected with this Inſcription, Holineſs to the Lord: Here the Soul offers up it ſelf to God in the ſacred Flames of Love, and here it ſacrifices its vile Affections, devoting them to Deſtruction to the Glory of its God: here God walks with Delight, even a Delight beyond what he takes in all the ſtately Structures and magnificent adorned Temples in the whole World, Iſa. 66. 1, 2.

No other Soul beſides Man's is marriageable to Chriſt, or capable of Eſpouſals to the King of Glory; they were not deſigned, and therefore not endued with a Capacity for ſuch an Honour as his: but ſuch a Capacity hath every Soul, even the meaneſt on Earth, and ſuch Honour have all his Saints; others may, but they are betrothed to Chriſt in this World, and ſhall be preſented without Spot before him in the World to come. 2 Cor. 11. Eph. 5. 27.

It is now a lovely and excellent Creature in its naked natural State, much more beautiful and excellent in its ſanctified and gracious State; but what ſhall we ſay, or how ſhall we conceive of it, when all Spots of Sin are perfectly waſhed off its beautiful Face in Heaven, and the Glory of the Lord is riſen upon it! When its filthy Garments are taken away, and the pure Robes of perfect Holineſs, as well as Righteouſneſs, ſuperinduced upon this excellent Creature! If the imperfect Beauty of it, begun in Sanctification, enamoured its Saviour, and made him ſay, Thou haſt raviſhed my Heart with one of thine Eyes, with one of the Chains of thy Neck; what will its Beauty and his Delight in it be in the Seaſon of perfect Glorification! As we imagine the Circles in the Heavens to be vaſtly greater than thoſe we view upon the Globe, ſo muſt we imagine in the Caſe before us.

4. The Preparations God makes for Souls in Heaven, ſpeak their great Worth and Value. When you lift up your Eyes to Heaven, and behold that beſpangled Azure Canopy beſet and inlaid with ſo many golden Studs, and ſparkling Gems, you ſee but the Floor or Pavement of that Place which God hath prepared for ſome Souls. He furniſhes this World for us before he puts us into it, but as delightful and beautiful as it is, it is no more to be compared with the Father's House in Heaven, than the smallest ruined Chapel your Eyes ever beheld, is to be compar'd with Solomon's Temple when it stood in all its shining Glory.

When you see a stately and magnificent Structure built, richest Hangings and Furniture prepared to adorn it, you conclude some great Persons are to come thither; such Preparations speak the Quality of the Guests.

Now Heaven, yea the Heaven of Heavens, the Palace of the great King, the Presence-chamber of the Godhead, is prepared, not only by God's Decree and Christ's Death, but by his Ascension thither in our Names, and as our Forerunner, for all renewed and redeemed Souls: Joh. 14. 2. In my Father's House are many Mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you: I go to prepare a Place for you.

And where is the Place prepared for them, but in his Father's House? the same Place, the very same House where the Father, Son and Spirit themselves do dwell: such is the Love of Christ to Souls, that he will not dwell in one House, and they in another; but as he speaks, Joh. 12. 26. Where I am, there shall my Servant also be. There is Room enough in the Father's House for Christ and all the Souls he redeemed to live and dwell together for evermore. His Ascension thither was in the Capacity of a common or publick Person, to take Livery and Seisin of those many Mansions for them, which are to be filled with their Inhabitants, as they come thither in their respective Times and Orders.

5. The great Price with which they were redeemed and purchased, speaks their Dignity and Value. No wise Man will purchase a Trifle at a great Price, much less the most wise God. Now the Redemption of every Soul stood in no less than the most precious Blood of the Lord Jesus Christ: 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. You know (saith the Apostle there) that we were not redeemed with corruptible Things, as Silver and Gold, ——— but with the precious Blood of Christ, as a Lamb without Blemish or Spot. All the Gold and Silver in the World was no Ransome for one Soul; nay, all the Blood of the Creatures, had it been shed as a Sacrifice to the Glory of Justice, or even the Blood which is most dear to us, as being derived from our own, I mean the Blood of our dear Children, even of our first-born, the Beginning of our Strength, which usually have the Strength of Affection: I say, none of this could purchase a Pardon for the smallest Sin that ever any Soul committed, much less was it able to purchase the Soul it self. Micah 6. 6, 7. thousands of Rams, and ten thousand Rivers of Oil, or our First-born are no Ransom to God for the Sin of the Soul. It is only the precious Blood of Christ that is a just Ransom or Counterprice, as it's called, Mat. 20. 28.

Now who can compute the Value of that Blood? such was the Worth of the Blood of Christ, which by the Communication of Properties is truly stiled the Blood of God, that one Drop of it is above the Estimations of Men and Angels; and yet before the Soul of the meanest Man or Woman in the World could be redeemed, every Drop of his Blood must be shed; for no less than his Death could be a Price for our Souls. Hence then we evidently discern an invaluable worth in Souls. A whole Kingdom is taxed when a King is to be ransomed; the Delight and Darling of God's Soul must die when our Souls are to be redeemed. O the worth of Souls!

6. This evidences the transcendent Dignity and Worth of Souls, that Eternity is stampt upon their Actions, and theirs only of all the Beings in this World: The Acts of Souls are immortal, as their Nature is, whereas the Actions of other Animals having neither moral Goodness nor moral Evil in them, pass away as their Beings do.

The Apostle therefore in Gal. 6. 7. compares the Actions of Men in this World to Seed sown, and tells us of everlasting Fruits we shall reap from them in the next Life: they have the same Respect to a future Account that Seed hath to the Harvest; he that soweth Iniquity shall reap Vanity, (i. e.) everlasting Disappointment and Misery, Prov. 22. 8. and they that now sow in Tears, shall then reap in Joy, Psal. 126. 5. Every gracious Action is the Seed of Joy, and every sinful Action the Seed of Sorrow; and this makes the great Difference betwixt the Actions of a rational Soul, and those done by Beasts: and if it were not so, Man would then be wholly sway'd by Sense and present Things, as the Beasts are, and all Religion would vanish with this Distinction of Actions.

Our Actions are considerable two Ways, physically and morally; in the first Sense they are transient, in the last permanent: a Word is past as soon as spoken, but yet it must and will be recalled and brought into the Judgment of the great Day, Mat. 12. 36. Whatever therefore a Man shall speak, think or do, once spoken, thought, or done, it becomes eternal, and abides for ever. Now, what is it that puts so great a Difference betwixt humane and brutal Actions; but the excellent Nature of the reasonable Soul? 'Tis this which stamps Immortality upon humane Actions, and is at once a clear Proof both of the Immortality and Dignity of the Soul of Man above all other Creatures in this World.

7. The Contentions of both Worlds, the Strife of Heaven and Hell about the Soul of Man, speaks it a most precious and invaluable Treasure.

The Soul of Man is the Prize about which Heaven and Hell contend: the great Design of Heaven is to save it, and all the Plots of Hell to ruin it. Man is a Borderer betwixt both Kingdoms, he lives here upon the Confines of the spiritual and material World; and therefore Scaliger fitly calls him, Utriusque mundi nexus, one in whom both Worlds meet: his Body is of the Earth, earthly; his Soul the Off-spring of a Deity, heavenly. It is then no wonder to find such tugging and pulling this Way and that Way, upward and downward, such Sallies from Heaven to rescue and save it, such Excursions from Hell to captivate and ruin it.

The infinite Wisdom of God hath laid the Plot and Design for its Salvation by Christ in so great Depth of Counsel, that the Angels of Heaven are astonished at it, and desire to pry into it. Christ, in Pursuance of this eternal Project, came from Heaven professedly to seek and to save lost Souls, Luke 19. 10. He compares himself to a good Shepherd, who leaveth the ninety nine to seek one lost Sheep, and having found it, brings it Home upon his Shoulders, rejoycing that he hath found it, Luke 15. 5.

Hell imploys all its Skill and Policy, sets a-work all Whiles and Stratagems to destroy and ruin it: 1 Pet. 5. 8. Your Adversary the Devil go-

eth

eth about as a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour. The strong Man armed gets the first Possession of the Soul, and with all his forces and policies labours to secure it as his property, Luke 11. 21. Christ raises all the spiritual Militia, the very posse Cœli, the Powers of Heaven to rescue it, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. And do Heaven and Earth thus contend, think you, de lana caprina, for a thing of nought? No, no, if there were not some singular and peculiar excellency and worth in Man's Soul, both worlds would never tug and pull at this rate which should win that Prize. It was a great argument of the worth and excellency of Homer, that incomparable Poet, that seven Cities contended for the honour of his Nativity.

Ἑπτὰ πόλεις διεζήτουν περὶ εἶζαν Ὁμήρου.
Σμύρνα Ῥόδος, Κολοφών, Σαλαμίς, Χίος, Ἄργος, Ἀθῆναι.

Smyrna, Rhodes, Colophon, Salamis, Chius, Argos, and Athens were all at strife about one poor Man, who should crown themselves with the honour of his Birth: but when Heaven and Hell shall contend about a Soul, certainly it much more speaks the dignity of it, than the contention of seven Cities for one Homer.

What are all the wooings, expostulations, and passionate beseechings of Christ's Ministers? what are all the convictions of Conscience, and strong impressions made upon the Affections? what are all strokes from Heaven upon Men in the way of Sin? I say, what are all these but the tuggings of Heaven to draw Souls out of the Snares of Hell?

And what are the hellish Temptations that Men feel in their Hearts, the alluring Objects presented to their Eyes, the ensnaring Examples that are set round about them, but the tuggings of Satan, if possible, to draw the Souls of Men into the same condemnation and misery with himself?

Would Heaven and Hell be up in arms, as it were, and strive at this rate for nothing? Thy Soul, O Man, how vilely soever thou depreciatest and slightest it, is of high esteem, a rich Purchase, a Creature of nobler rank than thou art aware of. The wise Merchant knows the value of Gold and Diamonds, tho' ignorant Indians would part with them for Glass Beads and Tinsel Toys. And this leads us to

8. The eighth Evidence of the invaluable worth of Souls, which is the joy in Heaven, and the rage in Hell for the gain and loss of the Soul of Man.

Christ who came from Heaven, and well knew the frame and disposition of the Inhabitants of that City tells us, That there is joy in the presence of the Angels of God over one Sinner that repenteth, Luke 16. 7, 10. No sooner is the heart of a Sinner darted with conviction, broken with sorrow for Sin, and begins to cry, Men and Brethren what shall I do? but the News is quickly in Heaven, and sets all the City of God a rejoicing at it, as is in the chief City of a Kingdom when a young Prince is born.

Quoties bene agimus, gaudent Angeli, & tristantur Dæmones; quoties à bono devíamus, Diabolum lætificamus, & Angelos suo gaudio defraudamus. August.

We never read that Christ laughed in all his time on Earth; but we read that he once rejoiced in Spirit, Luke 10. 21. And what was the occasion of that his Joy, but the success of the Gospel in the Salvation of the Souls of Men? Now certainly it must be some great Good that so affects Christ and all his Angels in Heaven at the sight of it: the degree of a wise Man's Joy is according to the value of the Object thereof: no Man that is wise will rejoice, and feel his heart leap within him for gladness at a small or common thing.

And as there is joy in Heaven for the saving, so certainly there is grief and rage in Hell for the loss of a Soul. No sooner had God by Paul's Ministry converted one poor Lydia, at Philippi, whither he was call'd by an immediate Express from Heaven for that service, but the Devil put all the City into an uproar, as if an Enemy had landed on their Coast; and raised a violent Persecution, which quickly drave him thence, Acts 16. 9, 14, 22.

And indeed what are all the fierce and cruel Persecutions of God's faithful Ministers, but so many efforts of the rage and malice of Hell against them for plucking Souls as so many Captives and Preys out of his Paws? For this he owes them a spight, and will be sure to pay them, if ever he get them at an Advantage. But all this Joy and Grief demonstrates the high and great value of the Prize which is won by Heaven, and lost by Hell.

9. The Institution of Gospel-Ordinances, and the appointment of so many Gospel-Officers purposely for the saving of Souls, is no small evidence of their value and esteem.

No Man would light and maintain a Lamp fed with golden Oil, and keep it burning from Age to Age, if the work to be done by the light of it were not of a very precious and important nature; what else are the Dispensations of the Gospel, but Lamps burning with golden Oil to Light Souls to Heaven? Zech. 4. 2, 3. 4. & 12. compared: a magnificent Vision is there presented to the Prophet, viz. a Candlestick of Gold with a Bowl or Cistern upon the top of it, and seven Shafts with seven Lamps at the ends thereof, all lighted: and that these Lamps might have a constant supply of Oil, without any accessory humane help, there are presented (as growing by the Candlestick) two fresh and green Olive-trees on each side thereof, ver. 3. which do empty out of themselves golden Oil, ver. 12. naturally dropping and distilling it into that Bowl, and the two Pipes thereof to feed the Lamps continually. Under this stately Emblem you have a lively representation of the spiritual Gifts and Graces distilled by the Spirit into the Ministers of the Gospel, for the use and benefit of the Church, as you find not only by the Angel's Exposition of it here, but by the Spirit's allusion to it, and accommodation of it in Rev. 11. 3, 4. See herein what price God puts upon the Salvation of Souls: Gospel-Lamps are maintain'd for their sakes, not with the sweat of Ministers brows, or the expence and waste of their Spirits, but by the precious Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit continually dropping into them for the use and service of Souls. These ministerial Gifts and Graces are Christ's Ascension-gifts, Eph. 4. 8. When he ascended up on high, he gave gifts unto Men; and what were the Royal Gifts of that triumphant day? why, he gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ. It is an allusion to the Roman Triumphs, wherein the Conqueror did spargere missilia, scatter abroad his treasures among the People. It is reported of the Palm-tree, saith one, that when it was first planted in Italy, they water'd its roots with Wine, to make it take the better with the Soil; but God waters our Souls with what is infinitely more costly than Wine, he waters them with the Heart-blood of Christ, and the precious Gifts and Graces of the Spirit, which certainly he would never do, if they were not of great worth in his Eyes. O how many excellent Ministers who were, as is said of John, burning and shining Lights in their places and generations, have spent themselves, and how many are there who are willing to spend and be spent, as Paul was, for the Salvation of Souls! God is at great expences for them, and therefore puts a very high value upon them.

Now all this respects the Soul of Man, that is the object of all ministerial labours. The Soul is the terminus actionum ad intra, the subject on which God works, and upon which he spends all those invaluable treasures. 'Tis the Soul which he aims at, and principally designs and levels all to, and reckons it not too dear a rate to save them at.

No Man will dig for common Stones with golden Mattocks, the instruments that would be worn out being of far greater value than the thing. This may convince us of what worth our Souls are, and at what rates they are set in God's Book, that such instruments are sent abroad into the World, and such precious Gifts and Graces like golden Oil spent continually for their Salvation: whether Paul or Apollo, or Cephas, all are yours, 1 Cor. 3. 22. (i. e.) all set apart for the service and salvation of your Souls.

10. The great Encouragements and Rewards God propounds, and promiseth to them that win Souls, speaks their worth, and God's great esteem of them.

There cannot be a more acceptable Service done to God, than for a Man to set himself heartily and diligently to the Conversion of Souls: so many Souls as a Man instrumently saves, so many Diadems will God Crown him withal in the great Day. St. Paul calls his converted Philippians his Joy and his Crown, Phil. 4. 1. and tells the converted Thessalonians, they were his Crown of rejoicing in the presence of Jesus Christ at his coming, 1 Thess. 2. 19. There is a full reward assured by promise to those that labour in this great Service, Dan. 12. 3. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to Righteousness, as the Stars for ever and ever. The Wisdom here spoken of, I conceive not to be only that whereby a Man is made wise to the salvation of his own Soul, but whereby he is also furnished with skill for the saving of other Mens Souls, according to that, Prov. 11. 30. He that winneth Souls is wise, and so the latter Phrase is exegetical of it, meaning one and the same thing by being wise, and turning many unto Righteousness: and to put Men upon the study of this Wisdom, he puts a very honourable title upon them, calling them מצדיקי רבים, the Justifiers of many, as in 1 Thes. 4. 16. they are said to save others. Here is singular honour put upon the very Instruments imploy'd in this honourable Service, and that is not all, but their Reward is great hereafter, as well as their Honour great at present: they shall shine as the Brightness of the Firmament, and the Stars for ever and ever. The Firmament shines like a Sapphire in it self, and the Stars and Planets more gloriously again; but those that faithfully labour in this work of saving Souls, shall shine in Glory for ever and ever, when the Firmament shall be parched up as a scrowl. O what Rewards and Honours are here to provoke Men to the study of saving Souls! God will richly recompense all our pains in this work: if we did but only sow the seed in our days, and another enter into our Labour, and water what we sowed, so that neither the first hath the comfort of finishing the Work, nor the last the honour of beginning it; but one did somewhat towards it in the work of Conviction, and the other carried it on to greater maturity and perfection, and so neither the one or other began and finished the Work singly; yet both shall rejoice in Heaven together, John 4. 36.

You see what Honours God puts upon the very Instruments imploy'd in this work, even the honour to be Saviours under God of Mens Souls, James 5. 20. and what a full reward of Glory, Joy and Comfort they shall have in Heaven: all which speaks the great value of the Soul with God. Such Encouragements and such Rewards would never have been propounded and promised, if God had not a singular estimation of them.

And the more to quicken his Instruments to all diligence in this great work, he works upon their fears as well as hopes: threatens them with Hell, as well as incourages them with the hopes of Heaven; tells them he will require the blood of all those Souls that perish by their negligence; Their blood, saith he, will I require at the Watchman's hands, Ezek. 33. 6. which are rather Thunder-bolts than Words, saith Chrysostom. By all which you see what weight God lays upon the saving or losing of Souls, such severe charges, great encouragements, and terrible threats had never been proposed in Scripture, if the Souls of men had not been invaluably precious.

11. It is no small Evidence of the precious and invaluable worth of Souls, that God manifests so great and tender Care over them, and is so much concern'd about the evil that befals them.

Among many others, there are two things in which the tender care of God for the good of Souls is manifested.

(1.) In his tenderness over them in times of distress and danger: as a tender Father will not leave his sick Child in other hands, but sits up and watches by him himself, and administers the Cordials with his own hands; even so the great God expresseth his care and tenderness, Isa. 57. 15. I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble Spirit, to revive the Spirit of the humble, and to revive the Heart of the contrite ones. Behold the condescending tenderness of the highest Majesty! Is a Soul ready to faint and fail, Oh, how soon is God with it, with a reviving Cordial in his hand, lest the Spirit should fail before him, and the Soul which he hath made? as it is vers. 16 yea, he put it into Christ's Commission to preach good tydings to the meek, and to bind up the broken hearted, Isa. 61. 1. and not only inserts it in Christ's Commission, but gives the same in solemn charge to all his inferior messengers whom he imploys about them, Isa. 35. 3. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees; say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not.

(2.) His special regard to Souls is evidenced in his severe prohibitions to all others to do nothing that may be an occasion of ruin to them. He charges it upon all, That no man put a stumbling-block, or an occasion to fall in his brother's way, Rom. 14. 13. that by the abuse of our own liberty, we destroy not him for whom Christ died, Rom. 14. 15. And what doth all this signify, but the precious and invaluable worth of Souls?

12. Lastly,

12. Lastly, It is not the least evidence of the dignity of mens Souls, that God hath appointed the whole Host of Angels to be their Guardians and Attendants.

Are they not all ministring Spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of Salvation? Heb. 1. 14.

Are they not?] It is no doubtful question, but the strongest way of affirmation; nothing is surer than that they are.

All] Not one of that heavenly Company excepted. The highest Angel thinks it no disparagement to serve a Soul for whom Christ died. Well may they all stoop to serve them, when they see Christ their Lord hath stooped even to death to save them. They are all of them

Ministring Spirits] Λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα, publick Officers to whom their Tutelage is committed: to them it belongs to attend, serve, protect, and relieve them. The greatest Peers and Barons in the Kingdom think it not below them to wait upon the Heir apparent to the Crown in his minority; and no less dignity is here stampt by God upon the Souls of Men, whom he calls Heirs of Salvation.] And in some respect nearer to Christ than themselves are; on this Account it is that the Angels delight to serve them. Christ's little Ones upon Earth have their Angels, which always behold the Face of God in Heaven, Mat. 18. 10. and therefore saith our Lord there, Take heed you despise not One of these little Ones; they are greater Persons than you are aware of. Nor is it enough that one Angel is appointed to wait upon all or many of them, but many Angels, even a whole Host of them are sent sometimes to attend upon one of them. As Jacob was going on his way, the Angels of God met him; and when he saw them, he said, This is God's Host, Gen. 32. 1, 2.

The same two Offices which belong to a Nurse, to whom the Father commits his Child, belong also to the Angels of Heaven, with respect to the Children of God, viz. to keep them tenderly while they are abroad, and bring them Home to their Father's House at last. And how clearly doth all this evince and demonstrate the great Dignity and value of Souls? Was it an Argument of the Grandeur and Magnificence of King Solomon, that he had two hundred Men with Targets, and three hundred Men with Shields of beaten Gold for his ordinary Guard every Day? And is it not a Mark of far greater Dignity than ever Solomon had in all his Glory, to have Hosts of Angels attending us? In comparison with one of this Guard Solomon himself was but a Worm in all his Magnificence.

And now lay all these Arguments together, and see what they will amount to. You have before you no ordinary Creature? for, (1.) It was not produced as other Creatures were, by a meer Word of Command, but by the Deliberation of the great Council of Heaven: and, (2.) Such are the high and noble Faculties and Powers found in it, as render it agreable to, and becoming such a Divine Original. Yea, (3.) by reason of these its admirable Powers it becomes a capable Subject both of Grace here, and Glory hereafter. (4.) Nor is this its Capacity in vain; for God hath made glorious Preparations for some of them in Heaven. (5.) And purchased them for Heaven, and Heaven for them at an invaluable Price, even the precious Blood of Christ. (6.) And stampt Immortality upon their Actions as well as Natures. (7.) Both Worlds contend and strive for the Soul as a Prize of greatest Value. (8.) Their Conversion to Christ is the Triumph of Heaven, and Rage of Hell. (9.) The Lamps of Gospel-Ordinances are maintained over all the reformed Christian World to light them in their Passage to Heaven. (10.) Great Rewards are propounded to all that shall heartily endeavour the Salvation of them. (11.) The Care of Heaven is exceeding great and tender over them. And (12.) the heavenly Host of Angels have the Charge of them, and reckon it their Honour to serve them. These Things duly weighed, bring home the Conclusion with demonstrative Clearness to every Man's Understanding, That one Soul is of more Value than the whole World, which was the Thing to be proved. What remains is the Improvement of this excellent Subject in these following Inferences.

Infer. I. The Soul of Man appearing to be a Creature of such transcendent Dignity and Excellency, this Truth appears of equal Clearness with it, That 'twas not made for the Body, but the Body for it; and therefore it is a vile Abuse of the noble and high-born Soul, to subject it to the Lusts, and enslave it to the Drudgery of the inferiour and moreignble Part.

The very Law of Nature assigns the most honourable Places and Imployments to the most noble and excellent Creatures, and the baser and inferiour to Things of the lowest Rank and Quality. The Sun, Moon, and Stars are placed by this Law in the Heavens; but the Ignis fatuus and the Glow-worm in the Fens and Ditches. Princes are set upon Thrones of Glory, the Beggars lodg'd in Barns and Stables: And if at any Time this Order of Nature be inverted, and the baser suppress and perk over the more noble and honourable Beings, it is looked upon as a kind of Prodigy in the Civil World: and so Solomon represents it, Eccles. 10. 7. I have seen Servants upon Horses, and Princes walking as Servants upon the Earth, (i. e.) I have seen Men that are worthy of no better Imployments than to rub Horses Heels, in the Saddle with their Trappings; and Men who deserve to bear rule, and to govern Kingdoms, Men who for their great Ability and Integrity deserved to sit at Helm, and moderate the Affairs of Kingdoms, these have I seen walking as Servants upon the Earth; and this he calls an Evil under the Sun, tha tis an Ataxy, Confusion or Disorder in the Course of Nature.

Now there can never be that Difference and vast Odds betwixt one Man and another, as there is betwixt the Soul and Body of every Man. A King upon the Throne is not so much above a Beggar that cries at our Doors for a Crust, as the Soul is above a Body; for the Soul of a Beggar is of the same Species, Original, and Capacity of Happiness with the Soul of the most illustrious Prince; and sometimes greater Excellencies of Mind are found in the lowest Rank and Order of Men: Better is a poor and wise Child than an old and foolish King, Eccles. 4. 13. but the Soul of the meanest Person in the World is better than all the Bodies in it; and therefore to make the noble and high-born Soul a slave, a meer drudge to the vile body, as the Apostle calls it, Phil. 3. 21. The Body of this Vileness; what is it but to set the Beggar on Horse-back, and make the King lacquey after him on foot?

It

Major sum, & ad majora natus, quam ut corporis mei sim mancipium. Sen.

It was a generous Resentment that a Heathen had of the Dignity of his own Soul, and a very just Abhorrence of so vile an Abuse of it, when he said, I am greater, and born to greater things, than that I should be a slave to my body.

I know there is a debt of duty the Soul owes to its own Body, and few Souls are to be found too careless or dilatory in the discharge thereof: where one Soul needs the Spur in this case, thousands need the Curb. Most Souls are over-heated with Zeal for the concerns of the flesh, worn out and spent in its constant drudgery: their whole life is but a serving of divers lusts and pleasures, as the Apostle speaks, Tit. 3. 3. Imperious Lusts are cruel Task-Masters, they give the Soul no rest; the more provision the Soul brings in to satisfy them, the more they rage, like fire by the addition of more fuel. What a sad sight is it to see a noble immortal Soul enslaved, as the Apostle's word is, Tit. 1. 7. to Wine? to filthy lucre, to a thousand sorts of Vassalage; like a Tapster in a common Inn, now running up stairs, and then down, at every ones knock and call:

Μὴ οἴνῳ πολλῷ δεδικλωμένας.

O what perpetual hurry and noise do thousands of Souls live in! so that they have no time to retire into themselves, and think for what end and use they were created, and sent into this World: all their thoughts, all their cares, all their studies and labours are taken up about that perishing, clogging, ensnaring Body, which must shortly fall a prey to the worms. How many millions of poor Creatures are there that labour and toil all their life long for a poor, bare maintenance of their Bodies, and never think they have any other business to do in this World?

And how many of a higher rank are charm'd by a thick succession of fleshly delights and pleasures into a deep oblivion of their eternal concerns? so that their whole life is but one intire diversion from the great business and proper end of it: Jam. 5. 5. Ye have lived in pleasures on earth, living in them as the Fish doth in the water, its proper Element, or the Eel in the mud. Sometimes it falls out at the very close of a vain voluptuous Life, when they see all their delights shrinking away at the approaches and appearance of Death, that they begin to be a little startled at the change which is about to be made upon them, and to cry, Oh, what shall we do now! Ah poor Souls! is that a time to think what you shall do, when you are just stepping into the awful state of Eternity? Oh, that this had been thought on in season! but you could find no leisure for one such thought. Now you begin to wish time had been rescued out of the hands of the cares and pleasures of this life for better purposes; but it's gone, and never more to be recalled.

Infer. II. Is the Soul so invaluably precious? then the Salvation of the Soul is to be the great care and business of every man in this life.

Where one thought is spent about this question, What shall I eat, drink, and put on? a thousand shou'd be spent about that question, What shall I do to be saved? If a Treasure of ten or twenty thousand pounds were committed to your trust and charge, and for which (in case of loss) you must be responsible, would not your thoughts, cares, and fears be working night and day about it, 'till you be satisfied it is safe and out of danger? and then your mind would be at rest, but not before. Thy Soul, Oh man, is more worth than the Crowns and Treasures of all the Princes in the World! if all their Exchequers were drained, and all their Crown-Jewels sold to their full value, they could never make up half a ransom for the Soul of the poorest and meanest man. This invaluable Treasure is committed to your Charge; if it be lost, you are lost for ever. That which St. Matthew calls the losing of the Soul in my Text, St. Luke calls losing himself: if the Soul be lost, the Man is lost: the Body is but as a Boat fastened to the stern of a stately Ship, if the Ship sink, the Boat follows it.

Oh, therefore what thoughts, what fears, what cares should exercise the minds of men day and night, 'till their precious Souls be out of all danger! Methinks the sound of this Text should ring a perpetual Alarm in the ears of careless sinners, and make them hasten to the Ensurance-Office, as Merchants do, who have great Adventures in danger at Sea. It was Counsel given once to a King, and worthy to be prest upon all, from the King to the Beggar, to ruminate these Words of Christ one quarter of an hour every day, What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own Soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his Soul? Certainly it would make men slack their pace, and cool themselves in their hot and earnest pursuit of the trifles of this World, and convince them, that they have somewhat else to do of far greater importance.

It was not without great and weighty reason therefore, that the Apostle Peter exhorts to all diligence to make our calling and election sure, 2 Pet. 1. 10. There are two words in this Text of extraordinary weight, Give all diligence, the word is study; the utmost intention of the mind, pondering and comparing things in the thoughts, valuing reasons for, and objections against the point before us, this is study; and such as calls for all diligence where the subject matter is (as to be sure, here it is) of the greatest importance: And what is the subject matter of all this study and diligence? Why, it is the most solemn of all works that ever came under the hand of man, to make our calling and election sure, firm, stable, or fixed, as a Building raised upon a square and strong Foundation; or as a Conclusion is sure, when regularly drawn from certain and indubitable premisses; there can never be too much care, too much study or pains, about that which can never be too well secured.

Many Souls never spent one solemn Hour in a close and serious debate about this matter; others have taken a great deal of pains about it, they have broken many nights sleep, poured out many prayers, made many a deep search into their own hearts, walked with much conscientious watchfulness and tenderness, proposed many a serious case of Conscience to the most judicious and skilful Ministers and Christians; and after all, the security is not such as fully satisfies: and probably one reason of it may be the great weight wherewith the matters of this Salvation lie upon their Spirits. Oh, that these Soul-concerns did bear upon all, as they do upon some: it requires more time, more thoughts, more prayers to make these things sure, than most are aware of.

Infer. III. If the Soul be so precious, then certainly it is the special care of Heaven, that which God looks more particularly after, than any other Creature on Earth.

There is an active vigilant Providence that superintends every Creature upon Earth: there is not the most despicable diminutive Creature that lives in the World, left without the line of Providence. God is therefore said to give them all their meat in due season, and for that end they all wait upon him, Psal. 104. 27. as a great and provident House-keeper orders daily convenient provisions for all his Family, even to the least and lowest among them: the smallest Insects and Gnats which swarm so thick in the Air, and of the usefulness of whose Being it is hard to give an account; yet, as the incomparably learned Dr. Moore well observes, these all find nourishment in the World, which would be lost if they did not, and are again convenient nourishment themselves to others that prey upon them. Antid. p. 82.

But man is the peculiar, special care of God, and the Soul of man much more than the Body. Hence Christ fortifies the Faith of Christians against all distrusts of Divine Providence, even from their Excellency above other Creatures; Matth. 10. 31. Ye are of more value than many Sparrows: and Matth. 6. 26. your heavenly Father feeds the Fowls of the Air, and are ye not much better than they? and vers. 30 he cloathes the grass of the field, and shall he not much more cloathe you? And so the Apostle, 1 Cor. 9. 9. Doth God take care for Oxen? or saith he it altogether for our Sakes? For our Sakes no doubt this is written. In all which Places the Dignity of Man above all Animals and Vegetables, in Respect of the natural Excellency of his reasonable Soul, but especially the gracious Endowments of it, which endear it far more to its Maker; this is the very Hinge of the Argument, and a firm Ground for the Believer's Faith of God's tender Care over both Parts, but especially the Soul. The Body of a Believer is God's Creature as well as his Soul; but that being of less Value, hath not such a Degree of Care and Tenderness expressed towards it, as the Soul hath: the Father's Care is not so much for the Child's Clothes, as it is for the Child himself. Besides, the immediate Wants and Troubles of the Soul, which are Idiopathetical, are far more sharp and pinching than those it suffers upon the Body's Account, which are but Sympathetical; and therefore when-ever such an excellent Creature, as a sanctified Soul, which is in Christ, or a Soul designed to be sanctified, which is moving towards Christ, falls under those heavy Pressures and Distresses (as it often does) and is ready to fail; let it be assured its merciful Creator will not fail to relieve, support, revive, and deliver it as often as it shall fall into those deep Distresses.

Hear how his compassionate Tenderness is expressed towards distressed Souls, Isa. 49. 15. Can a Woman forget her sucking Child, that she should not have Compassion on the Son of her Womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

Sooner shall a Woman, the more tender Sex, forget (not the Nurse-child that only sucks her Breast, but) the Child, yea the Son of her Womb, and that now when grown and placed abroad, but whilst it hangs upon her Breast, and draws Love from her Heart, as well as Milk from her Breast: then God will forget a Soul that fears him. Let gracious Souls fortify their Faith therefore in the Divine Care, by considering with what peculiar Eye of Estimation and Care God looks upon them above all other Creatures in the World: only beware you so eye not the natural or spiritual Excellencies of your Souls, as to expect Mercy for the Sake thereof, as if your Souls were worthy for whose Sake God should do this: no, no, Sin hath nonsuited that Plea, all is of free Grace, not of Debt: but he minds us to what Reputation the new Creation brings the Soul with its God.

Infer. IV. If the Soul of Man be so precious, how precious and dear to all Believers should the Redeemer and Saviour of their precious Souls be?

Unto you therefore that believe, he is precious, saith the Apostle, 1 Pet. 2. 7. tho he be yet out of our Sight, he should never be one whole Hour together out of your Hearts and Thoughts: 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not seen ye love; whom tho' now you see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory. The very Name of Christ, saith Bernard, is Honey in the Mouth, Melody in the Ear, and a very Jubilee in the Heart. The blessed Martyr Mr. Lambert made this his Motto, None but Christ, None but Christ. Molinus was seldom observ'd to mention his Name without dropping Eyes. Julius Palmer, in the midst of the Flames moved his scorched Lips, and was heard to say, Sweet Jesus, and fell asleep. Paul fastens upon his Name as a Bee upon a sweet Flower, and mentions it no less than ten Times in the Compass of ten Verses, 1 Cor. 1. as if he knew not how to leave it.

Mel in ore, melos in aure, jubilum in corde. Bern.

There is a twofold Preciousness of Christ, one in Respect of his essential Excellency and Glory; in this Respect he is glorious as the only begotten Son of God, the Brightness of his Father's Glory, and the express Image or Character of his Person, Heb. 1. the other in Respect of his relative Usefulness and Sutableness to all the Needs and Wants of poor Sinners; as he is the Lord our Righteousness, made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption: none discern this Preciousness of Christ, but those that have been convinced of Sin, and have apprehended the Wrath to come, the just Demerit of Sin, and fled for Refuge to the Hope set before them: and to them he is precious indeed. Consider him as a Saviour from Wrath to come, and he will appear the most lovely and desirable in all the World to your Souls: he that understands the Value of his own Soul, the dreadful Nature of the Wrath of God, the near Approaches of Wrath to his own Soul, and the astonishing Love of Christ in delivering him from it, by bearing that Wrath in his Place and Room in his own Person, cannot chuse but estimate Christ above ten thousand Worlds.

Infer. V. How great a Trust and Charge lieth upon them to whom the Care of Souls is committed, and from whom an Account for other Mens, as well as their own Souls shall certainly be required?

Ministers are appointed of God to watch for the Souls of their People, and that as Men that must give an Account, Heb. 13. 17. The Word here translated watch, signifies such Watchfulness as that of Shepherds who keep their Flocks by Night in Places infested by Wolves, and watch whole Nights together for their Safety. If a Man were a Keeper only of Sheep or Swine, it were no great Matter if the Wolf now and then carried away one whilst he slept; but Ministers have Charge of Souls, on of which, as Christ assures us in the Text, is more worth than the whole World. Hear what one speaks upon this Point.

'Αγρυπνεῖν est noctes in somnis agere, quod solent viri βυλήφοροι, pernox solliciudo.

Gildas Salvian, p. 260.

'God purchased the Church with his own 'Blood: Oh what an Argument is here to quicken 'the negligent? and what an Argument to con-'demn those that will not be quickned up to their 'Duty by it? O, saith one of the antient Doctors, 'if Christ had but committed to my Keeping one 'Spoonful of his Blood in a fragil Glass, how cu-'riously should I preserve it, and how tender 'should I be of that Glass! If then he have com-'mitted to me the Purchase of that Blood, should 'I not carefully look to my Charge?

'What, Sirs, shall we despise the Blood of 'Christ? shall we think it was shed for them 'that are not worthy of our Care? O then let us 'hear those Arguments of Christ whenever we 'feel our Selves grow dull and careless. Did I 'die for them, and wilt thou not look after them! 'Were they worth my Blood, and are they not 'worth thy Labour? Did I come down from 'Heaven to Earth, to seek and to save that which 'is lost, and wilt not thou go to the next Door, 'or Street, or Village, to seek them? How small 'is thy Labour or Condescension to mine? I de-'based my Self to this, but it is thy Honour to 'be so imployed.

Let not that Man think to be saved by the Blood of Christ himself, that makes light of Precious Souls, who are the Purchase of that Blood.

And no less Charge lieth upon Parents, to whom God hath committed the Care of their Childrens Souls; and Masters that have the Guardianship of the Souls as well as Bodies of their Families: the Command is laid immediately upon you, that they sanctify God's Sabbaths, Exod. 20. 10, to command your Houshold in the Way of the Lord Gen. 18. 19.

O Parents, consider with your selves what strong Engagements lie upon you to do all you are capable of doing for the Salvation of the precious Souls of your dear Children. Remember, their Souls are infinitely of more Value than their Bodies; that they came into the World under Sin and Condemnation; that you were the Instruments of propagating that Sin to them, and bringing them into that Misery; that you know their Dispositions, and how to sute them better than others can, that the Bonds of Nature give you singular Advantages to prevail, and be successful in your Exhortations beyond what any others have; that you are always with them, aad can chuse Opportunities, which others cannot; that you and they must shortly part, and never meet again, till you meet at the Judgment-seat of Christ; that it will be an unconceivably dreadful Day to see them stand at Christ's Left Hand among the cursed and condemned, there cursing the Day that ever they were born of such ignorant and negligent, such careless and cruel Parents as took no Care to instruct, reprove, or exhort them. O who can think without Horror of the Cries and Curses of his own Child in Hell, cast away by the very Instrument of its Being?

Is this the Love you bear them, to betray them to eternal Misery? Was there no other Provision to be made, but for their Bodies? Did you think you had fully acquitted your Duty, when you had got an Estate for them? O that God would effectually touch your Hearts with a becoming Sense of the Value and Danger of their Souls, and your own too, in the Neglect of that great and solemn Trust committed to you with respect to them. And you, Masters, consider, tho' God hath set you above, and your Servants below, yet are their Souls equally precious with yours: they have another Master that expects Service from them, as well as you: do not only allow them Time, but give them your Exhortations and Commands, not to neglect their own Souls, whilst they attend your Business: think not your Business will prosper the less, because it is in the Hand of a praying Servant; their Souls are of greater Concernment than any Business of yours can be.

Infer. VI. Are Souls so precious? then certainly the Means and Instruments of their Salvation must be exceeding precious too, and the Removal of them a sore Judgment.

The Dignity of the Subject gives Value to the Instruments imploy'd about it. It is no ordinary Mercy for Souls to come into such a Part of the World, and in such a Time as furnisheth them with the best Helps for Salvation. Ordinances and Ministers receive their Value not only from their Author, but their Object: they have a Dignity stampt upon them by their Usefulness to the Souls of Men, Acts 20. 32. it is the seed of Life, 1 Pet. 1. 23: the regenerating Instrument. It is the bread of Life and Job 23. 12. more than our necessary Food. The Word is a Light shining in the dark World to direct our Souls through all the Snares laid for them, unto Glory. It is the Soul's Cordial in all the fainting Fits, Psal. 119. 50. What shall I say of the Word and Ordinances of God, the Sun that shines in Heaven to give us Light? the Fountains, Springs and Rivers that stream for our Refreshment, the Corn and Cattle on the Earth, yea the very Air we breathe in, is not so useful, so necessary, so precious to our Bodies, as the World is to our Souls.

It cannot therefore but be a sore Judgment, and a dreadful Token of God's Indignation and Wrath to Hell, a Restraint or Scarcity of the Means of Salvation among us; but should there be (which God in Mercy prevent) a removal and total Loss of these Things, Wrath would then come upon us to the uttermost. What will the Condition of precious Souls be, when the Means of Salvation are cut off from them? When that Famine, worse than of Bread and Water, is come upon them? Amos 8. 11. When the Ark of God (the Symbol of his Presence) was taken, it is said, 1 Sam. 4. 13. That all the City cried out. When Paul took his Leave of Antioch, and told them they should see his Face no more, how did the poor Christians lament and mourn, as cut at the Heart by that killing Word? Acts 20. 37, 38. It made Christ's Bowels to yern and roll within him, when he saw the Multitude scatter'd as Sheep having no Shepherd, Mat. 9. 36.

Matthew Paris tells us in the Year 1072 when Preaching was suppreſt at Rome, Letters were framed as coming from Hell wherein the Devil gave them Thanks for the Multitude of Souls sent to him that Year: but we need no Letters from Hell, we have a sad Account from Heaven in what a sad State those Souls are left from whom the Means of Salvation are cut off: Where no Vision is, the People perish, Prov. 29. 18. and Hosea

Hosea 4. 6. My People are destroyed for Lack of Knowledge.

'Tis sad when those Stars that guide Souls to Christ (as that which the wise men saw did) are set, and wandring Stars shall shine in their places. O if God remove the Golden Candle-stick out of its place, what but the desolation and ruin of millions of Souls must follow?

We account it insufferable cruelty for a Man to undertake the piloting of a Ship full of Passengers, who never learnt his Compass; or an ignorant Empirick to get his living by killing Mens Bodies; but much more lamentable will the state of Souls be, if ever they fall, (which God in Mercy prevent) into the Hands of Popish Guides, or blind Leaders of the blind.

Infer. VII. If the Soul be of so precious a nature it can never live upon such base and vile food as earthly things are.

The Apostle, Phil. 3. 8, 9. calls the things of this World Dogs meat, and judge if that be proper food for such noble and high-born Creatures as our Souls are. An immaterial Being, can never live upon material things; they are no bread for Souls, as the Prophet speaks, Isa. 55. 2. Why do ye spend Money (i. e. time and pains, thought and cares,) for that which is not bread? Your Souls can no more live upon carnal, that your Bodies on spiritual things. Earthly things have a double defect in them, by reason whereof they are called things of nought: Amos 6. 13. of no worth or value: they are neither suitable nor durable, and therefore in the Soul's eye not valuable.

Σκύβαλον, quasi κυνίβαλον; id quod à nobis rejectum projicitur canibus.

1. They are not suitable. What are Corn and Wine, Gold and Silver, Pleasures and Honours to the Soul? The body and bodily senses can find somewhat of Refreshment in them; but not the Spirit: that which is bread to the Body, affords no more nourishment to the Soul than Wind or Ashes, Isa. 44. 20. He feedeth of Ashes. Ashes are that light and dry matter into which fuel is reduced by the fire: the fuel before it was burnt, had nothing in it fit for nourishment; or if the sap or juice that was in it might in any respect be useful that way, yet all that is devoured and lickt up by the Fire, and not the least nutriment left in the Ashes? and such are all earthly things to the Soul of Man: I am the Bread of Life, saith Christ. A Soul can feed and feast it self upon Christ and the Promises, these are things full of marrow and fatness, substantial and proper Soul-nutriment.

Cinis est crassior illa materia in quam combustum redigitur.

2. As earthly things are no way suitable to the Soul, so neither are they durable. The Apostle reduceth all earthly things to three heads, the lust of the Eye, the lust of the Flesh, and the pride of Life, 1 Joh. 2. 16. he calls them all by the name of that which gives the lustre and beauty to them, and pronounceth them all fading, transitory Vanities, they all pass away; as time, so these things that are measured by time, are in fluxu continuo, always going, and at last will be all gone. Now the Soul being of an immortal nature, and these things of a perishing nature; it must necessarily and unavoidably follow, that the Soul must overlive them all: and if it will do so, what a dismal case are those Souls in, for whom no other provision is made, but that on which it cannot subsist whilst it hath them, no more than the Body can upon Ashes or Wind? and if it could, yet they will shortly fail it, and pass away for ever. So then it is beyond debate, that there lies a plain necessity upon every Man to make provision in time of things more suitable and durable than earthly Treasures are, or the Soul must perish as to its comfort to all eternity.

Hence is that weighty counsel of him that came to save them, Luke 12. 23. Provide your selves bags that wax not old, a treasure in Heaven that faileth not, (i. e.) a happiness which will last as long as your Souls last. Certainly the moth-eaten things of this World are no provision for immortal Spirits, and yet multitudes think of no other provision for them, but live as if they had nothing to do in this World but to get an Estate.

Alas! what are all these things to the Soul? They signify somewhat indeed to the Body, and that but for a little time; for after the Resurrection the Bodies of the Saints become spiritual in their qualities, and no more need these material things than the Angels do: 'Tis madness therefore to be so intent upon cares for the Body, as to neglect the Soul; but to ruin the Soul and drown it in perdition for the sake of these provisions for the flesh, is the height of madness.

Infer. VIII. If the Soul be so invaluably precious, then it is a rational and well advised resolution and practice to expose all other things to hazard, yea, to certain loss, for the preservation of the more precious Soul.

'Tis better our Bodies and all their comforts should perish, than our Souls should perish for their Sakes. Nature teaches us to offer a hand or arm to the stroke of a sword, to save a blow from the head, or put by a thrust at the heart. It is recorded to the praise of those three Worthies, Dan. 3. 28. That they yielded their Bodies that they might not serve nor worship any God, except their own God. By this rule all the Martyrs of Christ governed themselves, still slighting and exposing to ruin their Bodies and Estates to preserve their Souls, reckoning to save nothing by religion but their Souls, and that they had lost nothing, if they could save them; They loved not their lives unto the death, Re. 12. 11.

Then do we live like Christians, when the care of our Bodies is swallowed up and subdued by that of our Souls, and all Creature-loves by the love of Christ. Those blessed Souls hated their own Bodies, and counted them their enemies, when they would draw them from Christ and his Truths, and plunge their Souls into guilt and danger. This was the result of all their debates with the flesh in the hour of temptation; cannot we live but to the dishonour of Christ, and the ruin of our own Souls by sinful compliance against our Consciences; then welcome the worst of Deaths rather than such a Life.

Look into the stories of the Martyrs, and you shall find this was the rule they still governed themselves by; a Dungeon, a Stake, a Gibbet, any thing rather than guilt upon the inner Man: Death was welcome even in its most dreadful form, to escape ruin to their precious and immortal Souls. One kissed the Apparitor that brought him the tidings of death. Another being advised, when he came to the critical point, on which his life depended, to have a care of himself: So I will, said he, I will be as careful as I can of my best self, my Soul. These Men understood the value and precious worth of their own Souls; certainly we shall never prove courageous and constant in Sufferings, till we understand the worth of our Souls, Souls as they did. Consider and compare these Sufferings in a few obvious particulars, and then determine the matter in thine own breast.

(1.) How much easier it is to endure the torments of Men in our own Bodies, than to feel the terrors of God in our Consciences. Can the Creature strike with an Arm like God? O think what it is for the Wrath of God to come into a Man's bowels like water, and like oil into his bones, as the expression is, Psal. 109. 18. Sure there is no compare betwixt the strokes of God and Men.

(2.) The sufferings of the Body are but for a moment. When the Proconsul told Polycarp that he would tame him with Fire: he replied, Your Fire shall burn but for the space an hour, and then it shall be extinguished; but the Fire that shall devour the Wicked will never be quenched: The sufferings of a moment are nothing to eternal sufferings.

(3.) Sufferings for Christ are usually sweetned and made easy by the consolations of the Spirit; but Hell-torments have no relief, they admit of no ease.

(4.) The life you shall live in that body, for whose sake you have damned your Souls, will not be worth the having; it will be a life without comfort, light or joy; and what is there in life separate from the joy and comfort of life?

(5.) In a word, if you sacrifice your Bodies for God and your Souls, freely offer them up in love to Christ and his Truth, your Souls will joyfully receive and meet them again at the Resurrection of the Just; but if your poor Souls be now ensnared and destroyed by their fond indulgence to their Bodies, you will leave them at Death despairing, and meet them at the Resurrection howling.

Infer. IX. To conclude, If the Soul be so invaluably precious, how great and irreparable a loss must the loss of a Soul to all Eternity be!

There is a double loss of the Soul of Man, the one in Adam, which loss is recoverable by Christ; the other by final impenitence and unbelief, cutting it off from Christ, in this it is irreparable and irrecoverable. Souls lost by Adam's sin are within the reach of the Arms of Christ; but in the shipwrack of personal infidelity there is no plank to save the Soul so cast away; of all losses this is the most lamentable, yet what more common? O what a shriek doth the unregenerate Soul make, when it sees whereto it must go, and that there is no remedy! Three Cries are dreadful to hear on Earth, yet all three are drown'd by a more terrible Cry in the other World. The cry of a condemn'd Prisoner at the Bar, the cry of drowning Seamen and Passengers in a shipwrack, the cries of conquer'd Soldiers in the Field; all these are fearful Cries, yet nothing to that of a Soul cast away to all Eternity, and lost in the depth of Hell.

If a Man, as Chrysostom well observes, lose an Eye, an Arm, a Hand, or Leg, it is a great loss; but yet if one be lost, there is another to help him: for omnia Deus dedit duplicia, God hath given us all those members double; Animam verò unam, but we have but one Soul, and if that be damned, there is not another to be saved.

And it is no small Aggravation to this loss, that it was a wilful loss. We had the offers and means of Salvation pentifully afforded us: we were warn'd of this danger over and over: we were intreated and beseech'd upon the knee of importunity, not to throw away our Souls by an obstinate rejection of Christ and Grace; we saw the diligence and care of others for the salvation of their Souls; some rejoicing in the comfortable assurance of it, and others giving all diligence to make their Calling and Election sure; we knew that our Souls were as capable of blessedness as any of those that are enjoying God in Heaven, or panting after that enjoyment on Earth: yea, some Souls that are now irrecoverably gone, and many others who are going after them, once were, and now are not far from the Kingdom of God: they had convictions of Sin, a sense of their lost and miserable state; they began to treat with Christ in Prayer, to converse with his Ministers and People about their condition: and after all this, even when they seemed to have clean escaped the snares of Satan, to be again intangled and overcome; when even come to Harbours mouth, to be driven back again, and cast away upon the Rocks: O what a loss will this be!

O thou that createdst Souls with a capacity to know, love, and enjoy thee for ever; who out of thine unsearchable Grace sentest thine own Son out of thy bosom to seek and save that which was lost, pity those poor Souls that cannot pity themselves: let Mercy yet interpose it self betwixt them and eternal ruin; awaken them out of their pleasant slumber, tho' it be at the brink of damnation, lest they perish, and there be none to deliver them.

Doct. II. How precious and invaluable soever the Soul of Man is, it may be lost and cast away for ever.

This Proposition is supposed and implied in our Saviour's words in the Text, and plainly expressed in Mat. 7. 13. Wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. The way to Hell is throng'd with Passengers, 'tis a beaten road, one draws another along with him, and scoffs at them that are afraid to follow, 1 Pet. 4. 4. Facilis descensus Averni; 'tis pleasant sailing with Wind and Tide. Some derive the word Hell from a Verb which signifies to carry or thrust in: millions go in, but none return thence: millions are gone down already, and millions more are coming after as fast as Satan and their own lusts can hurry them onward. You read not only of single persons, but whole nations drown'd in this Gulph, Psal. 9. 17. The Wicked shall be turned into Hell, and all the nations that forget God. How rare is the conversion of a Soul in the dark places of the Earth, where the sound of the Gospel is not heard? the Devil drives them along in huge droves to destruction, scarce a Man reluctating or hanging back.

Infernus ab inferendo dicitur, quia ita inferuntur & præcipitantur, ut nunquam ascensuri sint.

And tho' some Nations enjoy the inestimable privilege of the Gospel of Salvation; yet multitudes of precious Souls perish notwithstanding, sinking into Hell daily as it were betwixt the merciful Arms of a Saviour stretched out to save them. The light of Salvation is risen upon us, but Satan draws the thick curtains of ignorance and prejudice about the multitude, that not a beam of saving light can shine into their hearts: 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: In whom the God of this World hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.

If our Gospel.] Ours, not by way of institution, as the Authors, but by way of dispensation, as the Ministers and Preachers of it: and certainly it was never preached with that clearness, authority, ty, and efficacy by any meer Man, as it was by Paul and the rest of the Apostles; and yet the Gospel so powerfully preached, is by him here supposed to

Be hid.] If not as to the general light and superficial knowledge of it, yet as to its saving influence and converting efficacy upon their hearts; this never reacheth home to the Souls and Spirits of multitudes that hear it; but it is never finally so hidden, except

To them that are lost.] So that all those to whom the converting and saving power of the Gospel never comes, whatever other knowledge they have, whatever duties they perform, whatever names and reputations they may have among Men, yet this Text looks upon them all as a lost generation; they may have as many amiable homiletical Vertues, as sweet and lovely Natures, as clear and piercing Eyes in all other things as any others; but they are such however

Whose eyes the God of this World hath blinded.] Satan is here called the God of this World, not properly, but by a Mimesis, because he challenges to himself the honour of a God, and hath a world of Subjects that obey him; and to secure their obedience he blinds them, that they may never see a better way or state than that he hath drawn them into. Therefore he is called the Ruler of the darkness of this World, who rules in the Hearts of the Children of disobedience. The eye of the Soul is the Mind, that thinking, considering and reasoning power of the Soul; this is, as the Philosophers truly call it, the τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν, the leading faculty to all the rest, the Guide to all the other faculties, which in the order of nature follow this their Leader: if this be blinded, the Will which is cæca potentia, a blind power in it self, and all the Affections blindly following the Blind, all must needs fall into the ditch. And this is the case of the far greater part of even the professing World. Let us suppose a number of blind Men upon an Island, where there are many smooth paths, all leading to the top of a perpendicular Cliff; and these blind Men going on continually, some in one path, and some in another, but all in some one of those many paths which lead to the brink of their ruin, which they see not, it must needs follow, if they all move forward, the whole number will in a short time be cast away, the Island clear'd, and its Inhabitants dead and lost in the bottom of the Sea. This is the Case of the unregenerate World: they are now upon this habitable spot of Earth, environed with the vast Ocean of Eternity; there are multitudes of paths leading to eternal misery; one Man takes this way, and another that: as it is, Isa. 53. 6. We have turned every one to his own way; one to the way of Pride, another to the way of Covetousness, a 3d to the way of Persecution, a 4th to the way of Civility and Morality; and so on they go, not once making a stand, or questioning to what end it will bring them, till at last over they go at death, and we hear no more of them in this World; and thus one generation of sinners follows another, and they that come after applaud and approve those miserable wretches that went before them, Psal. 49. 13. and so Hell fills, and the World empties its Inhabitants daily into it. Now I will make it my work, out of a dear regard to the precious Souls of Men, and in hope to prevent (which the Lord in mercy grant) the loss and ruin of some under whose eyes this Discourse shall fall, to note some of the principal ways in which precious Souls are lost, and to put such bars into them as I am capable to put; and, among many more, I will set a mark upon these following twelve paths, wherein millions of Souls have been lost, and millions more are confidently and securely following after, among which 'tis likely some are within one step, one day or hour to their eternal downfal and destruction. There is but one way in all the world to save and preserve the precious Souls of Men, but there are many ways to lose and destroy them: it is as it is in our natural Birth and Death, but one way into the World, but a multitude out of it. And first,

The first way to Hell discovered.

1. And to begin where indeed the ruin of very many doth begin, it will be found that an ill Education is the high way to destruction; Vice need not be planted; if the Gardener neglect to dress, sow, and manure his Garden, he need not give the Weeds a greater advantage; but if he also scatter the seed of Hemlock, Docks, and Nettles into it, he spoils it, and makes it fit for nothing. Many Parents, and those godly too, are guilty of too many neglects through carelessness, worldly incumbrances, or fond indulgence; and whilst they neglect the season of sowing better seed, the Devil takes hold of it; if they will not improve it, he will; if they teach them not to pray, he will teach them to curse, swear and lye; if they put not the Bible or Catechism in their hands, he will put obscene Ballads into them: and thus the off-spring of many godly Parents turn into degenerate Plants, and prove a generation that know not the God of their Fathers. This debauch'd Age can furnish us with too many sad instances hereof. Thus they are spoiled in the bud; simple ignorance in youth becomes affected and wilful ignorance in age; blushing sins in children become impudent sins in age: and all this for want of a timely and prudent preventing care. Others there are of the rude and ignorant multitude, who are bred themselves much like the Beasts they daily converse withal; and so they are fitly described, Job 30. 6, 7. Go into their houses, and you may sooner find in the window, or upon the shelf, a pack of Cards than a Bible or a Catechism; their Beds and Tables differ little or not at all from the Stalls and Cribs where Beasts lie down and feed, in respect of any Worship of God among them; or if for fashion-sake a few words be huddl'd over in the evening when their Bodies are tir'd, the Man saith something, he scarce knows what, the Wife is asleep in one corner, the Children in another, and the Servants in a third. This is the Education multitudes of Parents give their Children all the week; and when the Sabbath comes, the most they learn to know at Church is where their own seat stands, and that it is necessary to speak with such a neighbour after Prayers, about such or such a bargain or business for the next week.

And others there are who breed their Children as profanely as these do sottishly, teaching them by their examples the newest Oaths that were last minted in Hell, and to revile and scoff all serious Godliness and the sincere Professors of it, smiling to hear with what an Emphasis they can talk in the Dialect of Devils, and how wittily they can droll upon godly Ministers and Christians.

Such Families are Nurseries for Hell; and tho' God by an extraordinary hand of Providence now and then snatch a Soul by conversion from among them, as a brand out of the fire, yet generally they they die as they live, going to the generation of their Fathers, where they shall never see light, Psal. 49. 19. I know Education and Regeneration are two things; but I also know one is frequently made the Instrument of the other, and that the savour of what first seasons our youth (generally) abides to old age, Prov. 22. 6. We may observe all the World over, how tenacious Men are of that which is παλαιμαθὲς, delivered to them by their Parents. Oh! what a cut must it be to the heart of that Father, whose Son's life shall tell his conscience what a prophane Son's lips once told his Father to his Face: If I have done evil, I have learnt it of you! Had they felt more of your prudent correction, it might have prevented their destruction: Prov. 23. 14. Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell. That this is a common beaten path to Hell, is beyond all question; but how to bar it up, and stop the multitudes that are engaged in it to their own ruin, this is the labour, this is the work. I cannot be large, but I will offer a few weighty Considerations.

Quo semel est imbuta recens, &c.

Si male feci à te didici.

The first way to Hell barr'd.

1. Let all Parents consider what a fearful thing it is to be the Instruments of ruining for ever those that received their Beings instrumentally from them; and to seek whose Good they stand obliged by all the Laws of God and Nature.

In vain are all your cares and studies for their Bodies, whilst their Souls perish for want of knowledge. You rejoiced at their Birth, but they will have cause to curse the day they were born of you, and say, Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which I was conceived. You were sollicitous for their Bodies, but careless of their Souls; earnest to see them rich, but indifferent whether they were gracious; you neglected to teach them the way of salvation; but the Devil did not neglect to teach them the way of sin. You will one day wish you had never been Parents, when the doleful cries of your damned children shall ring such notes as these in your ears: Oh cursed Father! Oh cruel merciless Mother! whose Examples have drawn me after you into all this misery. You had time enough, and motives enough to have warned me of this place and misery whilst my heart was tender, and my affections pliable: Had it not been as easie to have put a Bible as a Play-book before me? To have chastised me when I provoked God by sin, as when I provoked you about a trifle? One word spoken in season might have saved my Soul; one reproof wisely given, and set on by your example, might have preserved me. Had it not been the same pains to have asked me, Child, what wilt thou do to be saved? As, what wilt thou do to live in the World? Or had I but observed any serious Religion in you, had I but found or heard my Father or Mother upon their knees in Prayer, it might have awakened me to a consideration of my condition. In my youth I was shame-fac'd, fearful, credulous, and apt to imitate; had you had but Wisdom, as other Parents have, to have taken hold of any of these handles in time, you had rescued my Soul from Hell. Nay, so cruel have you been to your own Child, that you allowed me no time (if I had had a disposition) for any exercise of Religion; yea, you have quenched and stifled the sparks of convictions and better inclinations that sometimes were in my heart. Oh! happy had it been, if I had never been born of you, or seen your Faces. This must be the result and issue of your negligence, except God by some other hand (which is no thanks to you) rescue them from their impending ruin.

2. Let all Children, whose unhappy Lot it is to be born of and educated by carnal and irreligious Parents, consider God hath endued them with Reason, and a Conscience of their own, to enable them to make a better choice than their Parents did, and that there is no taking Sanctuary from the Wrath of God in their Parents examples. We read in 1 Kings 14. 13. of a good Abijah, in whom was found some good thing towards the Lord God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam. Here was a Child that would not follow his wicked Father to Hell, tho' he had both the Authority of a Father and of a King over him. You must honour your Parents, but still you must prefer your God before them. God will never lay it to your account as your sin, but place it to the account of your duty and comfort, that you refused to follow them in the paths of sin and destruction. No awe of God, no tie of Nature binds you to obey their commands, or tread in their steps, farther than they command in God's Authority and Name, and walk in his Ways. Your temptations indeed are strong, and disadvantages great, but the greater will the mercy of your deliverance be. It will be no Plea for you at the Judgment-seat to say, Lord, my Father or Mother did so and so before me, and I thought I might safely follow them; or thus and thus they commanded me, and I thought I was bound by thy command to obey them: therefore look to your own Souls, if they be so desperate to cast away their own. If some Children had not minded their own Salvation more than their Parents minded it, they had never been saved.

Amandus genitor, sed præponendus Creator.

3. Let this consideration work upon the hearts and bowels of all serious Christians to pity and help those that are like to perish under this temptation; and if their Parents be so ignorant that they cannot, or so negligent that they do not instruct and warn their own Children, you that at any time have an opportunity to help them, have compassion on them, and do it. 'Tis true, they are none of your Children by Nature: but would it not be a singular honour and comfort to you, if God should make them so by Grace? Thousands of Children (and it may be some of you) are more indebted to meer strangers upon this account, than to their neareſt Relations; you know not how much good an occasional word may do them: all have not ability to be so publickly useful this way, as a late worthy Minister of our own Nation hath been, who in compassion to the dark and barbarous corners in Wales, where Ignorance and Poverty shut up the way of Salvation to them, at a vast expence procured the Translation and Printing of the Bible in their own Tongue, and freely sent it among them. Oh you that have the Bowels of Christians in you, pity and help them! What is it, for the saving of a precious Soul, to drop a serious Exhortation, as you have opportunity, upon them, to bestow a Bible or suitable Book upon them? Believe it, these little number of shillings and pence so bestow'd, will stand for more in the Audit-day than all the hundreds and thousands other ways expended.

The second way to Hell discovered.

II. A second way to Hell, in which multitudes are found hastning to their own Damnation, is the way of affected Ignorance. The generality of People, even in a Land enlightned with the Gospel, are found grosly ignorant of Christ, the true and only way to Heaven, and of Repentance and Faith,

Faith, the only way to Christ; and thus the People perish for want of knowledge, Hos. 4. 6. If the Tree of knowledge had been hedg'd in from the common People, as it is in Popish Countries, and it had been criminal to find a Bible in our houses, there might have been some cloke and pretence for our ignorance; but to be stupidly ignorant of the most obvious, plain and necessary Truths, and yet bred up among Bibles and Ministers. Oh! how ominous a darkness is this, foreboding the blackness of darkness for ever! For if the hiding of the Gospel from the hearts of Men be a token to them that they are lost Souls, how much notional light soever they may have; much more must they be lost to all intents, from whose hearts and heads too it is judicially hidden. They that know not God, are in the catalogue of the Damned, 2 Thess. 1. 8. And if this be life eternal, to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent; then this must be death eternal, to be grosly and affectedly ignorant both of God the End, and Christ the Way, by the Rule of true Opposition, Joh. 17. 3.

Look over the several Countries in the professing World, go into the Families of Country-farmers, Day-labourers, and poor People, and except here and there a Family or Person into whose heart God hath graciously shined, what barbarous brutish ignorance overspreads them! They converse from morning to night with Beasts, tho' they have Souls which are fit Companions for Angels, and capable of sweet converse with God. The Earth hath open'd her Mouth, and swallowed up all their time, strength, thoughts, and Souls, as it did the bodies of Corah and his Company. They know the value of a Horse or Cow, but know not the worth of Christ, Pardon, or their own Souls. They mind daily what work they have to do with their hands, but forget all they have to do upon their knees. Their whole care is to pay their Fine or Rent to their Landlord, but not a thought who shall pay their debts to God. They are so far from putting unnecessary business aside to make way for the service of God, that God's service is put aside as an unnecessary business, to make way for the World: the World holds them fast till they are asleep, and will be sure to visit them assoon as their Eyes are open, that there may be no vacancy or door of opportunity left open for a thought of their Souls, or another life to slip in. Or if at any time they think or speak of these Matters, then the World, like Pharaoh when Israel spake of Sacrificing, is sure to speak of more work.

And thus they live and die without knowledge: there is no key of knowledge (as it is fitly called, Luke 11. 52.) to open the door of the Soul to Christ, he and his Ministers therefore must stand without; pity they may, but help they cannot till knowledge open the Door, Satan is Ruler of the darkness of this World, Eph. 6. 12. that is, of all blind and ignorant Souls. Ignorance is the chain with which he binds them fast to himself; and till that Chain be knockt off by Divine Illumination, they cannot be emancipated and made free of Christ's Kingdom; Acts 26. 18. To turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God. Ignorance indeed incapacitates a man to commit the unpardonable sin; but what the near, whilst it disposes him to all other sins which damn as well as that? By Ignorance it is that all the Essays of the Gospel for Mens Salvation are frustrated; that naked Assent is put in the place of saving Faith, Morality mistaken for Regeneration, a few dead Duties laid in the room of Christ and his Righteousness. Indeed it would fill a greater Book than this is to shew the mischievous effects of Ignorance, and how many ways it destroys the precious Souls of men; but seeing I can speak but little in this place to it, let me bar up this way to Hell, if it be possible, by a few serious Considerations.

The second way to Hell shut up.

1. Let the Ignorant consider, God hath created their Souls with a capacity of knowing him and enjoying him, as well as others that are fam'd in the world for Knowledge and Wisdom. There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding. The faculty is in Man, but the Wisdom and Knowledge that enlightens it, from God; as the Dial shews the hour of the day, when the Sun beams fall upon it. If therefore God be sought unto in the use of such helps and means as you have, even the weakest and dullest Soul hath a capacity of being made wise unto Salvation, Psal. 19. 7. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

Augustine tells us of a Man so weak and simple, that he was commonly reputed a Fool in all the Neighbourhood; and yet saith, I believe the grace and fear of God was in him: for when he heard any swear, or take the Name of God in vain, he would throw stones at them, and shew his indignation against sin, by all the signs he could make.

2. You that are so grosly ignorant in the matters of your Salvation, are many of you very knowing, prudent, and subtle Persons in the Affairs of the World, Luke 16. 8. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. Had those parts, which you have, been improved and heightned by study and observation about spirituals, as they have been about earthly things, you had neither been so ignorant or dead-hearted as you are; you might have been as well vers'd in your Bibles, as you are in the Almanacks you yearly buy and study; you might have understood the proper seasons of Salvation, as well as of Husbandry. The great and necessary points on which your Salvation depends are not so many, or so abstruse and intricate, but your plain and inartificial heads might have understood them, and that with less pains than you have been at for your Bodies. What tho' you cannot comprehend the subtilties of School-men, you may apprehend the Essentials of Christianity. If you cannot strictly and scholastically define Faith; what hinders, if your hearts were set upon Christ and Salvation, but you may feel it? which is more than many learned men do that can define and dispute about it. You cannot put an Argument in Mood and Figure; no matter, if you can by comparing your Bibles and Hearts together draw savingly and experimentally this Conclusion, I am in Christ, and my sins are pardoned. You cannot determine whether Faith goes before Repentance, or Repentance before Faith; but for all that you might feel both the one and the other upon your own Souls, which is infinitely better. 'Tis not therefore your incapacity, but negligence and worldliness that is your ruin.

3. How many are there of your own rank order, and education, all whose external advantages and helps you have, and all your incumbrances and discouragements they had, who yet have attain'd to an excellent degree of saving knowledge and heavenly wisdom? How often have I heard such spiritual, savoury, experimental Truths in Conference and Prayer from plain Rusticks, sticks, such spiritual Reasonings about the great Concerns of Salvation, such judicious and satisfying resolutions of Cases depending upon the sensible and experimental part of Religion, as have humbled, convinced, and shamed me, and made me say, Surgunt indocti, &c. these are the men that will take Heaven from the proud and scornful Ingenioſi of the World; not many wise, not many learned and acute? Many knowing and learned Heads are in Hell, and many illiterate and weak ones gone to Heaven; and others in the way thither, who never had better Education, stronger Parts, or more Leisure than your selves: so that you are without excuse.

4. To conclude, Would you heartily seek it of God, and would the Spirit (which he hath promised to give them that ask him) become your Teacher, How soon would the Light of the saving Knowledge of God, in the face of Christ, shine into your Hearts! No matter how ignorant, dull, and weak the Scholar be, if God once become the Teacher. You are not able to purchase, or want time to read many Books; but if once you were sanctified Persons, the Anointing you would receive from the Father, would teach you all things, 1 Joh. 2. 27. Your own Hearts would serve you for a Commentary upon a great part of the Bible; it would make you of a quick Understanding in the Fear of the Lord: One Drop of your Knowledge would be more worth than all learned Arts and Sciences in the World to you. And is God so far from you, and his illuminating Spirit at such a Distance, that there is no Hope for you to find him? Is there never a private Corner about your Houses or Barns, or in the Fields, where you can turn aside, if it be but a quarter of an hour at a time, to pour out your Souls to God, and beg the Spirit of him? Miserable Wretch! Is thy whole Life such a cumber and clutter of Cares and Puzzles about the World, that thou hast no leisure to mind God, Soul, or Eternity? Oh, doleful State! The Lord in mercy pity and awaken thee. Wilt thou not once strive and struggle to save thy Soul? What, perish as it were by consent! How great then is thy Blindness!

The third way to Hell discovered.

Quam frigida & jejuna sit eorum defensio qui exemplo, &c. potentiorum se tutos putant? Jun. Paral. l. 2. Argumentum turpissimum est turba. Sen.

III. A vast multitude of precious Souls are lost for ever, by following the Examples, and being carried away with the course of this World. 'Tis indeed a poor Excuse, a silly Argument, That the Multitude do as we do; yet, as Junius rightly observes, Mens Consciences take Sanctuary here, and they think themselves safe in it; for thus they reason, If I do as the generality do, I shall speed no worse than they speed; and certainly God is more merciful than to suffer the greatest part of Mankind to perish. They resolve to follow the beaten Road, let it lead whither it will.

Thus the Ephesians in their unregenerate State walked according to the course of this world, Eph. 2. 2. and the Corinthians were carried away unto dumb Idols, even as they were led, 1 Cor. 12. 2. just as a drop of Water is carried and moved according to the course and current of the Tide; for look as every drop of Water in the Sea is of one and the same common Nature, so are all carnal and unsanctified persons; and as these Waters being collected into one vast body in the Ocean, unite their strength, and make a strong current this way or that; so doth the whole collective body of the unregenerate World, all the particular drops move as the Tide moveth. Hence they are said to have received the spirit of the world, 1 Cor. 2. 12. one common Spirit or Principle acts and rules them all, and therefore they must needs be carried away in the same course. And there are two special Considerations that seem to determine them, by a kind of necessity to do as the multitude do; the one is, that they find it the easiest and most commodious way to the Flesh, here they meet with quietness and safety; hereby they are exempt from reproaches, losses, persecutions, and distresses for Conscience-sake: Rest is sweet, and here only they think to find it. The other is the prejudice of singularity and manifold tribulations they see that little handful that walk counter to the course of the World involved in; this startles them from their company, and fixes them where they are. Against such sensible Arguments it is to no purpose to oppose spiritual Considerations, Motives drawn from the safety of the Soul, or importance of Eternity, than it is for a Man to turn the Tide or Course of a River with his weak Breath.

Add to this, That as one sinner confirms and fixes another, wedging in each other, as Men in a Crowd, who must move as it moves; so they make it their business to render all that differ from them odious and ridiculous. So the Apostle notes their practice, and Satan's policy in it, 1 Pet. 4. 4. wherein they think it strange, that ye run not with them into the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you; ξενίζονται, they gaze strangely at them, as the Hen that hath hatched Patridge-eggs, looks strangely after them when she seeth them take the wing, and soar aloft, not knowing that they are of a higher kind than her own Chickens. And that is not all; they not only gaze at them as a strange generation, making them signs and wonders in Israel, as the Prophet speaks; but they defame, revile, and speak evil of them, representing them as a pack of Hypocrites, as turbulent, factious, seditious persons, the very Pests of the times and places they live in; and all this, not for doing any evil against them, but only for not doing evil with them, because they run not with them into the same excess of riot. Thus the world smiles upon its own, and derides those that are afraid to follow them to Hell, by which it sweeps away the multitude with it in the same course.

Nemo errat sibi ipsi, sed dementiam spargit in proximos. Sen.

The third way to Hell shut up.

But oh! if the Spirit of God would please to set on and follow home the following Considerations to your hearts, you would certainly resolve to take a persecuted path to Heaven, tho' few accompany you therein, rather than swim like dead Fishes with the stream into the dead Sea of eternal misery.

1. Tho' you go with the consent and current of the World, yet you go against the express Law and prohibition of God. He hath laid his Command upon you, not to be conformed to the world, Rom. 12. 2. That you live not the rest of your time to the lusts of men, but to the will of God, 1 Pet. 4. 2. That you follow not a multitude to do evil, Exod. 23. 2. That you go not in the way of evil men, Prov. 4. 14. That you have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. All these, and many more, are commands flowing from the highest Sovereign Authority, obliging your Consciences to obedience under the greatest penalties; by them your state must be cast to all eternity in the day of Judgment: You may make a pish of the Precept, but see if you can do so of the Penalty.

2. Other men in all ages of the world, that were as much concerned in the world as you, and valued their lives, liberties, and estates as well as you, have yet got out of the crowd, disengaged themselves from the way of the multitude, and taken a more solitary and suffering path, out of a due regard to the safety of their Souls: And why should not you love them as well, and care for them as much as ever any that went before you did? Noah walked with God all alone, when all flesh had corrupted their ways. Elijah was zealous for the Lord, when he knew of none to stand by him, but thought he had been left alone. Job was upright with God in the Land of Uz. Lot stood by himself a godly Nonconformist in a vile debauched Sodom. David was as a wonder to many; so was Jeremiah and those few with him for signs and wonders in Israel. I demand of your consciences, what discouragements have you that these men had not? or what encouragements had they that you have not? Why should not the Salvation of your Souls be as precious in your eyes, as theirs was in theirs? Shall you be impoverished and persecuted, if you embrace the way of Holiness? so were they. Shall you be reproached, scorned, and reviled? so were they. All your discouragements were theirs, and all their motives and encouragements are yours.

3. Is not the way which you have chosen marked out by Christ as the way to Destruction? and that which you dare not chuse and embrace, as the way to life? See the marks he has given you of both in that one Text, Mat. 7 13, 14 Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. And where now is your encouragement and hope, that God will be more merciful than to damn so great a part of the World? If you will do as the Many do, dream not of speeding as well as that little flock, separated by Sanctification from the Multitude, shall speed. You have your choice, to be damned with many or saved with few; to take the broad smooth-beaten road to Hell, or the difficult, suffering, self-denying path to Heaven. Oh then make a seasonable necessary stand, and pause a while; consider your ways, and turn your feet to God's Testimonies: 'tis a great and special part of your Salvation to save your selves from this untoward generation.

The Fourth way of losing the Soul opened.

IV. Multitudes of Souls are daily lost by rooted habits, and long-continued Custom in sin. When Men have been long settled in an evil way, they are difficultly reclaimed. Physicians find it hard to cure a Cachexy, or ill habit of body; but it's far more difficult to cure an ill custom and habit in sin. Jer. 13. 23. Can the Leopard change his spots, or the Æthiopian his skin? then may ye also do good, that have been accustomed to do evil. The spots of a Leopard, and the hue of an Æthiopian, are not by way of external accidental adhesion; if so, washing would fetch them off: but they are innate and contemper'd, belonging to the Constitution, and not to be alter'd; so are sinful habits and customs in the minds of sinners: by this means it becomes a second Nature as it were, and strongly determines the mind to sin. A teneris assuescere multum est, It's a great matter to be accustomed to this way or that, saith Seneca; yea, Caput rei est, hoc vel illo modo hominem assuefieri, 'Tis the very head or root of the matter to be so or so accustomed, saith Aristotle. Very much of the strength of sin rises from customary sinning. A brand that hath been once in the fire easily catches the second time. Every repeated act of sin lesseneth fear, and strengtheneth inclination. A horse that took an ill stroke at first breaking, and hath continued many years in it, is very difficultly, if ever, to be brought to a better way. What men have been accustomed to from their childhood, they are tenacious of in their old age. Hence it is, so few are converted to Christ in their old age. It was recorded for a wonder in the primitive times, that Marcus Caius Victorius became a Christian in his old age. Time and usage fix the roots of sin deep in the Soul. Old Trees will not bow as tender Plants do. Hence all essays and attempts to draw men from the course they have walked in from their youth, are frustraneous and successless. The Drunkard, the Adulterer, yea, the self-righteous Moralist, are by long-continued usage so fixed in their course, and all this while Conscience so stupified by often repeated acts of sin, that it is naturally as impossible to remove a Mountain, as a Sinner's Will thus confirmed in his Wickedness. However, let trial be made, and the success left to him to whom no length of time, or difficulty, must be objected or opposed.

The fourth way to Hell shut up, by two Considerations.

1. Let it be considered, the longer any man hath been engaged in, and accustomed to the way of sin, the more reason and need he hath speedily and without delay to repent, and reform his course; there is yet a possibility of Mercy, a season of Salvation left; how far soever a Soul be gone on towards Hell, none can say it is yet too late. When Mr. Bilney the Martyr heard a minister preaching thus: Oh thou old sinner, thou hast gone on in a course of sin these fifty or sixty years, dost thou think that Christ will accept thee now, or take the Devil's leavings? Good God! said he, what preaching of Christ is here! had such Doctrine been preached to me in the day of my troubles, it had been enough utterly to have discouraged me from Repentance and Faith. No, no, Sinner, it is not yet too late, if at last thy Heart be touched with a real sense of thy sin and danger. The Word is plain, Isa. 55. 7. Let the Wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

An abundant pardon thou needest; thy sins by long-continued custom and frequent repetitions have been abundantly aggravated; and an abundant pardon is with God for poor sinners: he will abundantly pardon, but then thou must come up to his terms; thou must not expect pardon or mercy when thy sins have forsaken thee, but upon thy forsaking them, yea, such a forsaking as includes a resolution or decree in thy Will to return to them no more, Hos. 14. 8. there must be a change of thy way, and that not from Prophaneness to Civility only, which is but to change one false way to Heaven for another, or the dirty road to Hell for a cleanlier path on the other side the hedge; but a total and final forsaking of every way of sin, as to the love and habitual practice of it; yea, and thy thoughts too, as well as thy ways: there must be an internal, as well as an external change upon thee; yea, a positive, as well as a negative change; a turning to the Lord, as well as a turning from sin: and then how long soever thou hast walked in the road towards Hell, there will be time enough, and mercy enough to secure thy returning Soul safe to Heaven.

2. Canst

2. Canst thou not forbear thy customary sin upon lesser motives than the salvation of thy Soul? and if thou canst, wilt thou not much more do it for the saving of thy precious immortal Soul? Suppose there were but a pecuniary mulct of a hundred pounds to be certainly levied upon thy Estate for every Oath thou swearest, or every time thou art drunk, wouldst thou not rather chuse reformation than beggary? And is not the loss of thy Soul a penalty infinitely heavier than a little money? But as the wise Heathen observed, Ea sola emi putamus, pro quibus pecuniam solvimus; ea gratuita vocamus, pro quibus nos ipsos impendimus: We reckon those things only to be bought which we part with money for; and that we have those things gratis, for which we pay our selves. Is nothing cheap in our eyes but our selves, our Souls? Do we call that gratis, that will cost us so dear? Darius threw away his Massy Crown when he fled before Alexander, that it might not hinder him in his flight. Sure your Souls are more worth than your money; and all the enjoyments you have in this World. It had been an ancient custom among the Citizens of Antioch to wash themselves in the Baths; but the King forbidding it, they all presently forbore, for fear of his displeasure: whereupon Chrysostom convinced them of the Vanity of that plea for customary sinning. You see, saith he, how soon fear can break off an old custom; and shall not the fear of God be as powerful to over-master it in us, as the fear of man? O friends, believe it, it is better for you to cut off a right hand, or pluck out a right eye, than having two hands or eyes, to be cast into Hell; where their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched.

Senec. Ep. 42. Gratuita nobis videntur quæ charissimè constant; quæ emere nollemus, si domus nobis nostra pro illis esset danda, &c.

Ὁρᾷς ὅτι ἔστι φόβῳ ἐυκόλως λυθῆναι συνήθεια, &c. Hom. 14.

The fifth way of losing the Soul opened.

V. The fifth way by which a vast multitude of Souls are eternally lost, is by the baits of sensual and sinful Pleasures.

Some customary sins have little or no pleasure in them, as swearing, malice, &c. but others allure and entice the Soul by the sensual delight that is in them. This is the bait with which multitudes are enticed, ensnared, and ruined to all eternity. It is a true and grave observation of the Philosopher, that we are impelled as it were to that which is evil, by the alluring blandishments of pleasure. This was the first bait by which Satan caught the Souls of our first Parents in Innocency, Gen. 3. 6. The tree was pleasant to the eye. Pleasure quickens the principles of sin in us, and inflames the desires of the heart after it. Every pleasant sin hath a world of customers, and cost what will, they resolve to have it. I have read of a certain Fruit which the Spaniards found in the Indies, which was exceeding pleasant to the taste; but Nature had so fenced it, and double-guarded it with sharp and dangerous thorns, that it was very difficult to come at it: They tore their clothes, nay, their flesh to get it; and therefore called the Fruit, Comfits in Hell. Such are all the pleasures of Sin, Comfits in Hell. Damnation is the price of them; and yet the sensitive appetive is so outragious and mad after them, that at the price of their Souls they will have them. Thus the Wicked are described, Job 21. 13. They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave: that is, their whole stock of time is spent in cares and labours to get wealth; and when they have gotten it, the rest of their life is spent in those sensual Pleasures that wealth brings in, or in making provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts of it. The rich Man, in the Parable, that fared deliciously every day, Luke 16. where his voluptuous life is described, and in that description the occasion of his damnation is insinuated: in a pampered and indulged Body is usually found a neglected, starved Soul. But how shall the ruin of Souls this way be prevented.

Voluptatum blanditiis deditiis, ad ea ferenda omnia quæ prasentia sunt impellimur. Epist. l. 2. ep. 3.

The fifth way to Hell shut up by three Considerations.

1. Consider how the Morality of Heathens hath bridled their sensual lusts and appetites, and caused them with a generous disdain to repel those brutish Pleasures as things below a Man. What more foolish, what more base, saith Seneca, than to patch up the good of a reasonable Soul out of things unreasonable? That is the Pleasure worthy of a Man, not to glut his Body, not to irritate those Lusts, in whose quietness is our safety. This is the constant Doctrine of all the Stoicks.

Quid stultius turpiusve quàm bonum rationalis animi, ex irrationalibus nectere? Sen. Epist. 92.

Oh, what a shame is it to hear Heathenism outbrave Christianity, and Principles of meer Morality enable men to live more soberly, temperately, and abstemiously than those who enjoy the greatest Pattern and highest Motives in the Christian Religion are found to do? Thou embracest Pleasures, saith the Heathen, but I bridle it; thou enjoyest it, I only use it; thou thinkest it thy chief good, I esteem it not so much as good; thou dost all things for pleasure sake, but I nothing at all on that account. These therefore shall be your Judges.

Illa est voluptas & homine & viro digna, non implere corpus, & faginare, nec cupiditates irritare quarum tristissima est quies. De Benef. l. 7. c. 11.

2. Always remember sensual Pleasures are but the baits with which Satan angles for the precious Soul; there is a fatal Hook under them. O if Men were but aware of this, they would never purchase pleasure at so dear a rate: Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant; but he knoweth not that the dead are there; and that her guests are in the depth of Hell, Prov. 9. 17, 18. Pliny tells us, That the Mermaids have most enchanting, charming Voices, and frequent pleasant green Meadows, but heaps of dead mens Bones are always found where they haunt: that which tickles the Fancy stabs the Soul. If the pain (as Anacreon well observes) were before the Pleasure, no Man would be tempted by it, but the Pleasure being first and sensible, and the Torment coming after, and as yet invisible, this allures so many to distruction. At last it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder, Prov. 23. 32. If Sin did sting and bite at first, none would touch it; but it tickles first, and wounds afterward. O what Man, that is in his wits, would purchase eternal Torments for the sensual, brutish pleasures of a moment! But the Pleasures of Sin bewitch the Affections, blind the Judgment, stupify the Heart, so that sober and impartial thoughts find no place. The Heart is enticed, the Lusts are enraged; cost what it will, sinners will gratify their Lusts.

Breve est quod delectat, æternum quod cruciat.

3. If you are for pleasure, certainly you are out of the way to it, who seek it in the fulfilling of your Lusts. If your Hearts were once sanctified, and brought under the government of the Spirit, you would quickly find a far more excellent Pleasure in the crucifying of your lusts, than now you seek in the gratification and fulfilling of them: Rom 8. 13. If ye through the spirit mortifie the deeds of the Body, ye shall live; i. e. ye shall live the most joyful, peaceful, and comfortable life of all Persons in the world, a life of highest delight and true pleasure: for so far as your lusts are mortified, the vigorous healthful frame and due temper of your Souls is restored, and your Evidences for Heaven cleared, both which are the springs of all spiritual delight and pleasure Can any Creature-enjoyment, or any beastly Lust, afford a pleasure like this? Don't you find the Life you live in sinful Pleasures quite beneath the dignity of a Man? and are they not followed with bitter after-reckonings, gripes, and flashes of Conscience? Even in the midst of laughter the heart is sad, and the end of that mirth is heaviness. Oh! ponder seriously what a trifle you sell your precious Souls for. Is it not a goodly Price you value them at? the fugitive, empty, beastly Pleasures of a Moment for the Torments of Eternity!

The sixth Way of losing the Soul opened.

VI. There are also innumerable Souls lost for ever by the distracting Cares of this World, which eat up all their Time, Thoughts, and Studies, so that there is no Room for Christ, or one serious Hour about Salvation. It is too true an Observation that Sir Walter Rawleigh made on the common Mechanicks and poor Labourers, their Bodies are the Anvils of Pain, and their Souls the Hives of unnumbred Cares and Sorrows, whilst the voluptuous and rich spend their time and studies in purveying for new pleasures, and filling their Heads with projects of that Nature. The poorer sort have their heads and hearts filled day and night with anxious thoughts and cares how to get bread, pay their Rent or Debts and struggle thro' the miserable Necessities that pinch them on every side; many Children it may be to provide for, and little or nothing out of which to make it; here is brick to be made, and no straw to make it of; he borrows here to pay there; Debts increase, and Abilities decrease; he toils his Body all the Day, and when his tir'd Carcase calls for rest to enable him for new work to morrow, the cares of the World invade him upon his bed, and keep him sighing or musing there when (poor Man!) he had Load enough before for one.

And now what room is there left for Salvation-work? or how can any spiritual seed that is cast into such a brake of Thorns prosper? The Cares of this Life (saith Christ) spring up and choak it, Mark 4. 19. Tell not them of Heaven and Christ, they must have Bread, talk not to them of the Necessity or comfort of a pardon, they must pay their Debts to Men. Oh the confused buz and clutter that these thoughts and cares make in their Heads! so that no other Voice can be heard. And thus multitudes spend their whole Life in a miserable Servitude in this World, and by that are cast upon a more miserable and restless state for ever in the World to come; one Hell here, and another hereafter. And what shall be done for them? is there no way for their Deliverance? Oh that God would direct and bless the following Considerations to them, if it may be expected they may at any time get through the Brake in which they are involved, and find them at Leisure to bethink themselves!

The sixth way to Hell shut up by five Considerations.

1. Bethink thy self, poor Soul! as much as thou art involved and plunged in the Necessities and distracting Cares of this Life; others, many others, as poor, as necessitous, and every way as much embroil'd in the Cares of the world as you are, have minded their Souls, and taken all Care and Pains for their Salvation notwithstanding: yea, tho' millions of your rank and order are destroyed by these snares of the Devil, yet God hath a very great number, indeed the greatest of any rank of Men, among those that are low, poor, and necessitous in the World. The Church is called the Congregation of the poor, Psal. 74. 20 because it consisteth mostly of Men and Women of the lowest and most despicable Condition in this World. They are all poor in Spirit, and most of them poor in Purse. Hearken, my beloved Brethren, (saith James) hath not God chosen the poor of this World, rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom? Jam. 2. 5.

Now if others, many others, as much entangl'd in the necessities, cares, and troubles of the World as you, have yet struggl'd through all those Difficulties and Discouragements to Heaven, why should not you strive for Christ and Salvation as well as they? Your Souls are as valuable as theirs, and their Discouragements and Hindrances as great and as many as yours.

2. Consider, your poor and necessitous condition in the World hath something in it of motive and advantage to excite and quicken you to a greater Diligence for Salvation, than is found in a more full, easie, and prosperous State: for God hath hereby imbitter'd this World to you, and made you drink deeper of the troubles of it than other Men: they have the honey, and you the gall; they have the flour, and you the bran. But then, as you have not the Pleasures, so you have not the Snares of a prosperous condition; and your daily Troubles, Cares, and Labours in it, do even prompt you to seek rest in Heaven, which you cannot find on Earth. Can you think you were made for a worse Condition than the Beasts? What, to have two Hells, one here, and another hereafter? Surely as low, miserable, and despicable as you are, you are capable of as much Happiness as any of the Nobles of the World, and in your low and afflicted condition stand nearer to the door of hope than they do. Ah! methinks these thoughts do even put themselves upon you, when your Spirits are overloaded with the cares, and your Bodies tir'd with the labours of this Life. Is this the life of troubles I must expect on earth? hath God denied me the Pleasures of this World? Oh then let it be my care, my study, my business to make sure of Christ, to win Heaven, that I may not be miserable in both Worlds. How can you avoid such Thoughts, or put by such meditations, which your very station and condition even forceth upon you?

3. Consider how all your troubles in this World would be sweetned, and all your burdens lightned, if once your Souls were in Christ, and in Covenant with God. Oh what hearts-ease would Faith give you! what sweet relief would you find in Prayer! These Things, like the opening of a vein, or Tumor when ripe, would suddenly cool, relieve, and ease your Spirits. Could you but go to God as a Father, and pour out your Hearts before him, and roll all your cares and burdens, wants and sorrows upon him, you would find a speedy out-let to your troubles troubles, and an in-let to all peace, all comforts, and all refreshments, such as all the riches, honours and fulness of this World cannot give: you would then find Providence engage it self for your supply, and issue all your troubles to your advantage; you would suck the Breasts of those Promises in the Margin, and say, all the dainties in the World cannot make you such another feast; you would then see your bread, your cloaths, and all provisions for you and yours in God's Promises, when you are brought to an exigence, and would certainly find performances as well as promises all along the course of your life.

Heb. 13. 5. Isa. 41. 17. Psal. 34. 9, 10. Psal. 91. 15. Rom. 8. 28.

4. Say not you have no Time to mind another World; God hath not put any of you under such an unhappy necessity; you have one whole Day every Week allow'd you by God and Man for your Souls; you have some spare time every day, which you know you spend worse than in heavenly thoughts and exercises; yea, most Callings are such as will admit of spiritual exercises of thoughts, even when your hands are exercised in the affairs of this Life. Besides, there are none of you but have, and must have daily some relaxations and rest from business; and if your hearts were spiritual, and set upon Heaven, you would find more time than you think on, without prejudice to your Callings, yea, to the great furtherance of them, to spend with God. I can tell you when and where I have found poor Servants hard at work for Salvation, labouring for Christ, some in the Fields, others in Barns and Stables, where they could find any privacy, to pour out their Souls to God in Prayer. As Lovers will make hard shifts to converse together, so will the Soul that is devoted to God, and in earnest for Heaven. And tho' your opportunities be not so large, they may be as sweet, as successful, and to be sure sincere, as those whose condition affords them more time, and greater external Conveniences than you enjoy. More business is sometimes dispatch'd in a quarter of an hour in Prayer, yea, let me say in a few hearty Ejaculations of Soul to God in a few Minutes, than in many long and elaborate Duties. If thou cast in thy two Mites of Time into the Treasury of Prayer, having no more, thou maist, as Christ said of the poor Widow, give more than those that cast in of their great Abundance of Time and Talents.

5. Lastly, Consider, Jesus Christ is no respecter of Persons; the poorest and vilest on Earth are as welcome to him as the greatest. He chose a poor and mean Condition in this World himself, conversed mostly among the poor, never refused any because of his poverty: God accepteth not the Persons of Princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor; for they are all the work of his hands, Job 34. 19. and that both in respect of their natural Constitution, as Men, and their civil Conditions, as rich or poor Men. Riches and Poverty make a great Difference in the Respects of Men, but none at all with God. If thou be one of God's Poor, he will accept, love, and honour thee above the greatest (if graceless) person in the World. Poverty is no Bar to Christ or Heaven, tho' it be to the respects of Men and pleasures of this Life. Away then with all vain pretences against a Life of Godliness from the meanness of your outward Condition. Heaven was not made for the rich, and Hell only for the poor. No, no; how hard soever you find the way thither, I am sure Christ saith, it's hard for a rich Man to enter into that Kingdom.

The seventh way of losing the Soul discovered.

VII. The seventh beaten path to Destruction is by groundless presumption; præsumendo sperant, & sperando pereunt; by presumption they have hope, and by that hope they perish.

There are divers objects of Presumption, amongst which these three are most usual, and most fatal, viz. that they have,

1. That Grace which they have not.
2. That Mercy in God they will not find.
3. That time before them which will fail 'em.

1. Many presume they have that Grace in them, which God knoweth they have not: So did Laodicea, Rev. 3. 17. Thou sayest; I am rich, and have need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, poor, blind, and naked. Here is a dangerous Conspiracy betwixt a cunning Devil, and an ignorant proud Heart, to ruin the Soul for ever: they stamp their common Grace for special: they put the old Creature, by a general profession, into the new Creature's habit, and lay a confident Claim to all the Privileges of the Children of God.

2. They presume upon such Mercy in God, as they will never find: they expect pardoning and saving Mercy out of Christ, in an unregenerate State, when there is not one drop of Mercy dispensed in any other Way. The whole œconomy of Grace is managed by the Mediator, Jude ver. 21. all saving Mercies come thro' him, upon all that are in him, and upon no others. God is indeed a merciful God, and yet presumptuous sinners will find Judgment without Mercy, because they are not found in the proper Way and Method of Mercy. Thousands and ten thousands carve out and dispose the Mercy of God at their own Pleasure, write their own Pardons in what Terms they think fit; and if they had God's Seal to confirm and ratifie them, it were all well: but alas! it is but a night-vision, a dream of their own brain.

3. But especially, Men presume upon time enough for repentance hereafter: they question not but there be as fit and as fair Opportunities of Salvation to come, as are already past; and in this Snare of the Devil thousands are taken in the very prime and vigour of their youth: That Age is voluptuous, and loves not to be interrupted with severe and serious thoughts and courses; and here is a Salvo fitted exactly to suite their Inclination, and quiet them in their way, that they may pursue their Lusts without Interruption.

I cannot follow the Sin of Presumption at present in all these its courses and ways, and will therefore apply my self to the case last mentioned, which is so common to the World.

The 7th way to Destruction shut up by five weighty Considerations.

1. I would beg all those young voluptuous sinners, whose feet are fast held in the snare of this Temptation, seriously to bethink themselves, Whether they are not old enough to be damned, whilst they judge themselves too young to be seriously godly. There are Multitudes in Hell of your Age and size: you may find Graves in the Church-yard of your own Length, and Skulls of your own Size. Men will not spare a Nest of young Snakes because they are little. If you die Christless and unregenerate, 'tis the same thing whether you be old or young; there is abundance of young Spray as well as old Loggs burning in the flames of hell.

Pœnitet me, Domine, quod sero te amavi, Aug.

2. If you knew the Weight and Difficulty of Salvation Work, you would never think you could begin too soon. Religion is a Business will take up all your time: many have repented they began so late, none that they began too soon. Say not, the penitent Thief found mercy at the last hour; for his Conversion was extraordinary, and we must not hope for Miracles. Besides, he could never encourage himself in Sin with the Hope and Expectation of such a miraculous Conversion. He was the only Example of a Sinner that was ever so recovered in Scripture, and this was recorded not to nourish Presumption, but to prevent Despair. If ten thousand Persons died of the Plague, and one only of the whole Number infected with it escaped, it's no great Encouragement that you shall make the second. Oh! think, and think again, how many thousands now on Earth have been tugging and striving 40 or 50 Years together to make their Calling and Election sure, and yet to this Day it is not so sure as they would have it: they are afraid, after all, time will fail them for finishing, and you think 'tis too early for beginning so great a Work.

3. Others have begun sooner than you, and finished the great and main work before you have done one stroak. Abijah was very young, scarce got out of his childhood, when the grace of God was found in him, 1 Kings 14. 13. The fear of God was in Obadiah when but a Youth, 1 Kings 18. 12. Timothy was not only a Christian, but a Preacher of the Gospel, in the morning of his life, 2 Tim. 3. 15. What have you to plead for yourselves, which they had not? or what Arguments and Motives to Godliness had they that you have not? You shall be judged per pares, by those of your own Age and Size; their Seriousness shall condemn your Vanity.

4. The Morning of your Life is the Flower of your Time, the freshest and fittest of all your Life for your great Work: now your Hearts are tender and impressive, your Affections flowing and tractable, your Heads clear of distracting Cares and Hurries of Business, which come on afterwards in thick Successions: Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, whilst the evil days come not, Eccles. 12. 1, 2. If a Man have an important Business to do, he will take the Morning for it, knowing if that be slipt, a Croud and Hurry of Business will come on afterwards to distract and hinder him. I presume if all the Converts in the World were examined in this Point, it would be found that at least ten to one were wrought upon in their Youth: that is the moulding Age.

5. And if this proper hopeful Season be elapsed, it is very unlikely that ever you be wrought upon afterwards. How thin and rare in the World are the Instances and Examples of Conversion in old Age! Long-continu'd Customs in sin harden the Heart, fix the Will, and root the Habits of Vice so deep in the Soul, that there is no altering of them; your Ears then are so accustomed to the Sounds of the Word, that Christ and Sin, Heaven and Hell, Soul and Eternity, have lost their awful Sound and Efficacy with you. But it is a Question only to be decided by the Event, Whether ever you shall attain to the Years of your Fathers? It is not the sprightly Vigour of your Youth that can secure you from Death. What a Madness then is it to put your Souls and eternal Happiness upon such a blind Adventure? What if your Presumption of so many fair and proper Opportunities hereafter fail you, as it hath failed many Millions, who had as rational and hopeful a Prospect of them as you can have; where are you then? And if you should have more Time and Means than you do presume upon, are you sure your Hearts will be as flexible and impressive, as now they are? Oh! beware of this sin of vain Presumption, to which the Generality of the Damned owe their everlasting Ruin.

The eighth way of losing the Soul opened.

VIII. The eighth way of ruining the precious Soul, is by drinking in the Principles of Atheism, and living without God in the World.

Atheism stabs the Soul to Death at one Stroak, and puts it quite out of the way of Salvation. Other sinners are worse than Beasts, but Atheists are worse than Devils, for they believe and tremble: these banish God out of their Thoughts, and what they can out of the World, living as without God in the world, Eph. 2. 12. It is a sin that quencheth all Religion in the Soul. He that knows not his Landlord, cannot pay his Rent: He that assents not to the Being of a God, destroys the Foundation of all religious Worship; he cannot fear, love, or obey him, whose Being he believes not. This sin strikes at the Life of God, and destroys the Life of the Soul.

Some are Atheists in Opinion, but Multitudes are so in Practice: The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God, Psal. 14. 1. Tho' he hath engraven his Name upon every Creature, and written it upon the Table of their own Hearts, yet they will not read it: or if they have a slight fluctuating Notion, or a secret Suspicion of a Deity, yet they neither acknowledge his Presence nor his Providence: Fingunt Deum talem qui nec videt, nec punit: They say, How doth God know? can he judge through the dark Clouds? thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not, Job 22. 14.

Others profess to believe his Being, but their Lives daily give their Lips the Lye; for they give no Evidence in Practice of his Fear, Love, or Dependance on him. If they believe his Being they plainly shew they value not his Favour, delight not in his Presence, love not his Ways or People; but lie down and rise, eat and drink, live and die without the worship or acknowledgment of him, except so much as the Law of the Country, or Custom of the place extorts from them. These Dregs of time produce abundance of Atheists of both sorts: many ridicule and hiss Religion out of all Companies into which they come; and others live down all Sense of Religion: they customarily attend indeed on the external Duties of it, hear the Word; but when the greatest and most important Duties are urged upon them, their inward Thought is, this is the Preacher's Calling, and the Man must say something to fill up his Hour, and get his Living. If they dare not put their Thoughts into Words, and call the Gospel Fabula Christi, the Fable of Christ, as a wicked Pope once did; or say of Hell and the dreadful Sufferings of the Damned, as Galderinus the Jesuit did, tunc credam cum illuc venero, I will believe it when I see it: yet their Hearts and Lives are of the same Complexion with these Mens Words. They do not heartily assent to the Truth of the Gospel which they hear; and tho' bare Assent would not save them, yet their Assent or Non-assent will certainly damn them, except the Lord heal their Understandings and Hearts by by the Light and Life of Religion. To this last sort I shall offer a few Things.

The 8th way to Hell shut up by six weighty Considerations.

1. You that attend upon the Ordinances, but believe them no more than so many devised Fables, not heartily assent to the Truth of what you hear; know assuredly, that the Word shall never do your Souls good, it can never come to your Hearts and Affections in its regenerating and sanctifying Efficacy, whilst it is stopt and obstructed in your Understandings in the Act of Assent. And thus you may sit under the best Ordinances all your Lives, and be no more the better for them, than the Rocks are for all the Showers of Rain that fall upon them: Heb. 4. 2. The Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. This is Satan's chief Strength and Fastness, wherein he trusteth: he fears no Argument, whilst he can maintain this Post: the Devil hath no surer Prisoner than the Atheist; there's no escaping out of his Possession and Power, whilst this Blot of Unbelief is shut home in the Mind or Understanding. An unbelieved Truth never converted or saved one Soul from the beginning of the World, nor never shall to the end of it. Those Bodies that have the Boulema, or Dog appetite, whatever they eat, it affords them no nourishment or satisfaction, they thrive not with the best Fare: just so it is with your Souls, no Duties, no Ordinances can possibly do them good: as in Argumentation no Conclusion, be it never so regularly drawn, and strongly inferred, is of any force to him that denies Principles.

2. If you assent not to the Truth of the Gospel, you not only make God speak to your Souls in vain, which is fatal to them; but you also make God a Liar, which is the greatest Affront a Creature can put upon his Maker: 1 John 5. 10. He that believeth not God, hath made him a Liar. Vile Dust, darest thou rise up against the God that made thee, and give him the Lye! An Affront which they Fellow-Creature cannot put up, or bear at thy Hands. Darest thou at once stab his Honour, and thy own Soul? Are not the things that thou lookest on as Romances and golden Dreams, meer Artifice neatly contrived to cheat and awe the World; are they not all built upon the Veracity of God? which is the firmest Foundation and greatest Security in the World. Hath he not intermingled for our Satisfaction, not only frequent Assertions, but his Asseverations and Oath to put all beyond Doubt? And yet dare any of you lift up your ignorant blind Understandings against all this, and give him the Lye? Surely the Wrath of God shall smoke against every Soul of Man that doth so, and his own bitter, lamentable, doleful Experience shall be his Conviction shortly, except he repent.

3. Dare any of you give the Thoughts of your Hearts as certain Conclusions under your Hand, and stand by them to the last, and venture all upon them?

Wretched Atheist! bethink thy self, pause a while, examine thine own Breast; whatever thy vile Atheistical Thoughts sometimes are, is there not at other times a Fear of the contrary? A Jealousy that all these Things which thou deridest and sportest thy wicked Fancy with, may and will prove true at last; when thou readest, or heares that Text, John 3. 18. He that believeth not, is condemned already; His Mittimus is already made for Hell: Doth not thy Conscience give thee a secret Gird, like a Stich in thy Side? Dare you venture all upon this Issue, that if those things you find in the World be true, you will stand to the hazard of them? If that be a truth, Mark 16. 16. He that believeth not, shall be damned, you will be content to be damned? Or if, Rom 8. 13. be a Truth, That they which live after the flesh shall die, you will run the hazard, and bear the Penalty of eternal death? If Heb 12. 14. prove true, That without holiness no man shall see God, you will be content to be banished from his Presence for evermore? Speak your Hearts in this Matter, and tell us, Don't you live betwixt Atheistical Surmises, that all these are but cunning Artifices, and Fears that at last they will prove the greatest Verities?

4. Hath not God given you all the Satisfaction you can reasonably desire of the undoubted Truth and Certainty of his Word? What would you have, which you have not already? Would you have a Voice from Heaven? the Scriptures you read or hear are a more sure Word than such a Voice would be, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Or would you have a Messenger from Hell? He that believeth not the written Word, neither would believe if one should rise from the dead, Luke 16. 31. View the innate Characters of the Scripture, is it not altogether Pure and Holy, full of Divine Wisdom and Awful Majesty, and in every respect such as evidenceth its Author to be the Wise, Holy, and Just God, who searcheth the Hearts and Reins? Look upon the Seals and Confirmations of it; hath not God confirmed it by divers Miracles from Heaven, a Seal which neither Men or Devils could counterfeit? And don't you see the Blessing and Power of God accompanying it in the Conversion and wondreful change of Men's Hearts and Lives, which can be done by no other Hand than God's? Say not, the Miracles which confirm the Gospel are but uncertain Traditions, and except you your selves see them wrought you cannot believe them. There are a thousand Things which you do believe, tho' you never saw them; and what you require for your Satisfaction, every Man may require the same for his; and so Christ must live in all parts of this World, and repeat his Miracles over and over in all Ages to satisfy the unreasonable Incredulity of those that question their Truth, after the fullest Confirmation and Seal hath been given that is capable to be given, or the Heart of Man can desire should be given; and if all this should be done, you might be as far from believing, as now you are; for many of those that saw and heard the Things wrought by Christ, contradicted and blasphemed, and so might you.

5. Satan, who undermines your Assent to these Things, is forced to give his own: he that tempts you to look on them as Fables, himself knows and is convinced that they are Realities; The Devils also believe and tremble, Jam. 2. 19. they know and feel the Truth of these Things, tho' it be their great Design and Interest to shake your Assent to them: they know Christ is the Son of God, and that there will be a Day in which he will judge the World in Righteousness, and that there are Torments prepared for themselves, and all whom they seduce from God, Matt. 8. 29. If you ungod God, you must unman your selves; yea, not only make your selves less than Men, but worse than Devils.

6. In a word, let thy own Heart, O Atheist, be Judge, whether these be real Doubts still sticking ing in your Minds, after you have done all that becomes Men to do for Satisfaction in such important Cases? Or whether they be not such Principles as you willingly foment and nourish in your Hearts, as a Protection to your sensual Lusts, whose Pleasures you would fain have without Interruptions and Over-awings by the Fears of a Judgment to come, and a righteous Retribution from a just and terrible God! Examine your Hearts in that Point, and you will soon find the Cheat to be in that I here point you to: you have not studied the World impartially, nor brought your Doubts and Scruples with a humble, unbiassed, teachable Spirit to those that are wise and able to resolve them, much less prayed for the Spirit of Illumination; but willingly entertained whatever Atheistical Wits invent, or the Devil suggests, as a Defensative against the Checks of Conscience, and Fears of Hell in the way of Sin. You are loath those things should be true, which the Scriptures speak, and are glad of any colourable Argument or Pretence to still your own Consciences. Is not this the Case? The Lord stop your desperate Course; your Paths lead to Hell.

The ninth way of losing the precious Soul opened.

IX. Precious Souls are daily plunged into the Gulph of Perdition by Profaneness and Debauchery. How many every where lie wallowing in this Puddle? glorying in their Shame, and running into all excess of Riot? The Hypocrite steals to Hell in a private close way of concealed sin; but the Prophane gallop along the publick Road at Noon-day: They declare their sin as Sodom, and hide it not; Isa. 3. 9. The shew of their countenance testifieth against them. The Hypocrite hath Devotion in his Countenance, and Heaven in his Mouth; you know not by his Words and Countenance, whither he is going; but the Prophane hide it not, they are past Shame, and above blushing at the horrid'st Impieties. Look as God hath some Servants more eminent, forward, and couragious in the ways of Godliness than others, Men that will not hide their Principles, or be ashamed of the Ways of Godliness in the Face of Danger; so the Devil hath some Servants as eminent for Wickedness, who scorn to sneak to Hell by Concealment of their Wickedness, but avow and own it without Fear or Shame in the open Sight of Heaven and Earth. Wherever they come, they defile the Air they breathe in with horrid Blasphemies and obscene Discourses not to be named, and leave a strong Scent of Hell behind them.

This Age hath brought forth Multitudes of these Monsters, the Reproach and Shame of the Nation that bred them. I have little Hope to stop one of them in the career and full speed to Hell. They have lost the Sense of Sin, the Restraints of Shame and Fear; and then what is left to check them in their Course? I cannot hope that such a Discourse as this shall ever come into their Hands, except it be to sacrifice it to the Flames; yet not knowing the Ways of Providence which are unsearchable, and what Use God may make upon one Occasion or another of these following Considerations, I will adventure to drop a few Words upon these forlorn Sinners, as far as they seem to be gone beyond Recovery; beseeching the Lord to make way for these Things to their Hands and Hearts, and make them the Instruments of pulling some of them as Brands out of the Burning.

The ninth way to Hell by Profaneness stopt.

1. And first, let it be laid to Heart, that tho' the Case and State of many thousand Souls be doubtful and uncertain, so that neither themselves, nor any other know what they are, or to whom they belong; yet their Condition is without Controversy miserable and forlorn; all Men know whose they are, and whither they are going. The Apostle appeals in this Case to the Bar of every Man's Reason and Conscience, as a thing allowed and yielded by all, Eph. 5. 5. For this ye know (saith he) that no Whoremonger, nor unclean Person, nor covetous Man, who is an Idolater, hath any inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God. This is a clear Case, there is no Controversy about it. Many there be in a doubtful Case, but no doubt of these, they are fast and sure in the Power of Satan; and as sure as God is a God of Truth, they that die in this Condition shall never see his Face. And to the same purpose again, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inhereit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners shall inherit the Kingdom of God. Know ye not? saith he, q. d. Sure you cannot be so ignorant and blind to think that there is any room in Heaven for such Wretches as these. If the Righteous be scarcely saved, where shall the Sinner and the Ungodly appear? If all Strictness, Holiness, Self-denial, Diligence, be all little enough to win Heaven, what Hope can there be of those that not only cast off all Duties of Religion, but also cast themselves into all the opposite Ways and Courses which directly lead to Damnation? He that refuseth his Food endangers his Life; but he that drinks Poison, certainly and speedily destroys it.

2. As far as you are gone in a Course of Profaneness, you are not yet gone beyond the reach of Mercy and all hopes of Salvation, if now at last, after all your Debaucheries and Profaneness, the Lord touch your Hearts with the Sense of your sinful and miserable Estate, and turn your Feet to his Testimonies. When the Apostle in 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. had told us the Doom of such Men, upon the Supposition of their Perseverance in that Course; yet presently he adds, as a Motive to their Repentance, an Example of Mercy upon such Wretches as these: And such were some of you, but ye are washed, v. 11. The golden Scepter of free Grace hath been held forth to many as prophane and notorious Sinners as you, to a blaspheming Saul, to a Mary Magdalen, to a Manasseh. 'Tis not the Greatness of the Sin, but the Impenitence and Infidelity of the Sinner, that ruins him. Well then, there is a Certainty of Damnation if you go, and yet a possibility of Forgiveness and Mercy before you, a Mercy invaluable.

3. Nay, this is not all; but in some respect there is more Probability and Hope of your Return and Repentance, than there is of many others who have led a more sober, smooth, and civil Life than you have done. Your Profaneness hath more dishonoured God, but the Morality and Civility of some Men secures them faster in the Snare of the Devil: they have many Things in themselves to build up their presumptuous Hopes upon, but you have nothing. It is hard for Conviction to reach that Man's Conscience that hath a Righteousness of his own to trust in: but methinks it should have an easier Access to yours, whose notorious Courses lay your Consciences naked and bare before the Word to be wounded by it. Christ's Ministry

Ministry had little Success among the Pharisees who were Righteous in their own Eyes, but it wrought effectually upon Publicans and Sinners. Hence Christ told them, Mat. 21. 31. That Publicans and Harlots go into the Kingdom of God before them. Publicans were esteemed the worst of Men, and Harlots the worst of Women; yet the one and other, as vile as they were, stood fairer for Conviction, and consequently for Salvation, than those that thought they needed no Repentance. All this is Matter of Hope, and runs into a powerful Motive and loud Call to Repentance. He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear.

The tenth way leading to Destruction marked.

X. Deep and fixed Prejudices against Godliness and the sincere Professors thereof, precipitate thousands of Souls into their own Ruin and Damnation.

It was not without a weighty Reason that Christ denounced that Woe upon the World, Mat. 18. 7. Wo unto the world because of offences. The poor World will be ruin'd by Scandals and Prejudices; they will take such Offences at the Ways of Godliness, that they will never have good Thoughts of them any more. This Sect is every where spoken against, Acts 28. 22. and so Christians are condemned, διὰ τὸ φήμην, because of the common Reproach, as Justin Martyr complain'd. All the Scandals which fall out in the Church, are so many Swords and Daggers put into the Hands of the wicked World to murder their own Souls withal. Some have sucked in such Opinions of the Ways of Godliness, as make them irreconcilable Enemies to them, and fierce Opposers of them. And from hence are most of the Persecutions that befal the People of God. When you see Showers of Slanders and Reproaches going before, expect Storms of Persecutions coming after. Slanders beget Prejudices, and these prepare for Persecutions. Oh! how keen and fierce are the Minds of many against the upright and innocent Servants of God, whom they have first represented to themselves in such an odious Dress and Character as the Devil hath drawn them in, upon their Fancies and Imaginations! So the primitive Christians were represented to the Heathens as Monsters, and their Conventions in the Night, occasioned by the Fury of Persecutors, were reported to be for lascivious and barbarous ends, to deflower Virgins, and murder innocent Children: and by this Artifice the Heathens were secured against Conversion to Christ. This hath been the Policy of Hell from the beginning, and it hath prospered so much in the World, that Satan hath no Reason to change his Hand. But how may this Plot of Hell be defeated, and the Ruin of Souls prevented?

The tenth way of destroying Souls shut up by two Counsels.

1. It will be impossible to prevent the Ruin of a great part of the World by Prejudices against the ways of Godliness, except those that profess them, walk more holily and conformably to the Rule and Pattern of Christ, whose Name is called upon them. I shall therefore first address my Discourse to the Professors of Religion, beseeching them in the Bowels of Christ to take Pity upon the Multitudes of Souls which are daily ruined and destroyed by their Scandals and Miscarriages. Did you live according to the Rules you profess, your well-doing would put to silence the Ignorance of foolish Men, 1 Pet. 2. 15. and consequently the Ruin of many might be prevented. I remember Bernard, speaking of the lewd and loose Life of the Priests of his time, sighs out this just and bitter Complaint to God about it; Misera eorum conversatio plebis tuæ miserabilis subversio est: Oh Lord, saith he, their miserable Conversation is the miserable Subversion of thy People. Oh! of how many who glory in the Title of Sons of the Church, may Christ say, as Jacob did of his two lewd Sons Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the Inhabitants of the Land! Gen. 34. 30.

Bern. in Conversf. Pauli, Ser. 1.

And how many Professors, who pretend to more than ordinary Reformation and Holiness, do shed Soul-blood by their scandalous Conversations? Salvian brings in the Wicked of his Age upbraiding the Looseness of Christians in this manner, Behold, those men who boast themselves redeemed from the tyranny of Satan, and profess themselves dead to the world, yet are conquer'd by the Lusts of it. And Cyprian long before his Day, brings in the Heathens thus insulting over looser Christians: Where is that Catholick Law which they believe? Where are the Examples of Piety and Chastity which they should learn? They read the Gospel, yet are immodest: they hear the Apostles, yet are drunk. Oh Professors! where are your Bowels to the poor Souls of Sinners? If your Neighbour's Ox or Ass fall into the Pit, you are bound to deliver him if you can; and will you not do as much for a precious Soul as you would do for a Beast? nay, you dig Pits by your scandalous Lives to destroy them. If you sin, there are Instruments enough to spread it, and Multitudes of Souls ready prepar'd to take the Infection. Say not, If they do, the Fault is theirs; for tho' they are Principals in the Murder of their own Souls by taking the Scandal, yet you are Accessories in giving it: He is a mad Man that will kill himself with a Sword, and he no better that will put it into his Hand.

Ecce qui jactant se redemptos à tyrannide Satanæ, qui prædicant se mortuos mundo, nihilominus à cupiditatibus suis vincuntur, Salvian. Ubi est catholica lex quam credunt? ubi pietatis & castitatis exempla quæ discant? Evangelia legunt, & impudici sunt; Apostolos audiunt, & inebriantur. Cypr.

Oh therefore, if you have any Regard to the precious Souls of Men, live up to the Rules of your Profession. Oh! be blameless and harmless, the Sons of God without Rebuke in the midst of a perverse and froward Generation: let the Heavenliness of your Conversation stop those Mouths that accuse you as Men of a worldly Spirit: let them see by your Moderation in seeking it, your Patience in losing it, your Readiness in distributing it, that it is a groundless Calumny under which your Names suffer. Let them see by your Apparel, Company, and Discourses, you are not such proud lofty Spirits as you are represented to be. Convince them by your Flexibleness to all Things that are lawful and expedient, by manifesting as much as in you lieth, that it is the pure Bond and Tie of Conscience which keeps you from Compliance in all other Things, and by your Meekness in suffering for such Noncompliance, that you are not such turbulent, factious Incendiaries, as the Wicked World slanderously reports you to be. Convince the World by your exact Righteousness in all your civil Dealings, and by the Lip of Truth in all your Promises' and Engagements, that you have the Fear of God in your Hearts, as well as the Livery of Christianity upon your Backs. In a word, so live that none may have just ground to believe the impudent Slanders the Devil raises in the World against you. Let your Light so shine before Men, that they may glorify your Father which is in Heaven. Without your care and circumspection, the shedding of a world of precious Soul-blood can never be prevented.

2. Let me advise and beseech all Men to be so just to others, and merciful to their own Souls, as not to cast them away for ever, by receiving prejudices against Godliness from the miscarriages of some that make more than a common profession of it. If others stumble before you, and break their shins, don't you stumble at them, and break your necks. To prevent this fatal effect of scandal and prejudice at Religion, I desire a few Particulars may be impartially weighed.

First, Very many of those Scandals bandied up and down the World against the Professors of Godliness, are devised and forged in Hell, as so many traps and snares to catch and destroy Mens Souls, to beget an irreconcileable aversion and enmity in men to the ways of God. They devise deceitful matters (saith the Psalmist) against them that are quiet in the land, Psal. 35. 20. So Jer. 18. 18. Come, say they, let us devise devices against Jeremiah, and smite him with the tongue. And there is as little equity in the credulous receiver, as there is honesty in the wicked forger of these slanders. With one arrow of censure you wound no less than three, viz. the honour of God, your innocent Brother, and your own Souls. As to the two former wounds, they will in due time be healed. God will vindicate his own Name fully, and the reputation of his innocent Servants shall be cleared and repaired abundantly; but mean time your Souls may perish by the wounds prejudices have given, so that you may never be reconciled to Godliness and its Professors whilst you live, but turn Scoffers and Persecutors of them.

Secondly, Examine whether the matters that are charged upon them as their Crimes, be not their Duties. Sometimes it falls out to be so, and if so, you fight more immediately and directly against God than Men. This was David's case Psal. 69. 10. When I wept, and chastned my Soul, that was to my reproach; my pity was turned to reproach. They called his tears Crocodile's tears, and his fastings hypocritical shadows of devotion and humility. Thus the very matter of his duty was turned into scorn and reproach. And so it was with the primitive Christians, their very owning of themselves to be Christians, was crime enough to condemn them.

Thirdly, if Professors of Religion do in some things act unbecoming their holy Profession, yet every slip and failing in their lives is no sufficient Warrant for you to censure their Persons as hypocrites, much less to fall upon Religion it self, and condemn it for the faults of them that profess it. There's many an upright heart overtaken by temptation. You see their Miscarriages, but you see not their Humiliations and Self-condemnations before God for them. "Foul and fearful (saith a "grave Divine) was the scandal "of David; and what was the "issue? presently the Enemies of "God and Godliness began to lift their heads, and "fall foul upon David's Religion, 2 Sam. 12. they "blasphemed the Name of God. O this is he that "was so grand a Zealot, that the Zeal of God's "House did eat him up. This is the Man, that "out of his transcendant Zeal, danced before the "Ark. This is he that prayed thrice a Day, at "morning, noon, and night. This is he that "was so precise and strict in his Family, that a "wicked person should not dwell in his House. "This your great precise Zealot hath defiled the "Wife, and murdered the Husband. Now you "see what his Religion is, now you see what comes "of this profession of so much Holiness and God-"liness.

Jer. Dyke, of Scandal, p. 33.

O that Men would seriously consider their Evil in such censures as these! What is all this to Religion? Doth Religion any way countenance or patronize such Practices? Nay, doth it not impartially and severely condemn them? It is the glory of the Christian Religion, that it is pure and undefiled, Jam. 1. 27. These Practices flow from no Principle of Religion, nor are chargeable upon it, for it teacheth men the very contrary, Tit. 2. 11, 12. If I see a Papist sin boldly or an Arminian slight Grace, I justly condemn their Principles in and with their Practices, because Popery sets Pardons to sale, and Arminianism exalts nature into the place of Grace: but doth the Doctrine of the Gospel lead to any Immoralities? Charge it, if you can.

Fourthly, and as senseless a thing it is to condemn all for the miscarriages and faults of some, which yet is the common practice of the World. Are all that profess Godliness loose and careless? No, no; many are an ornament to their holy Profession, and the glory of Christianity. And why must the innocent be condemned for the guilty? What is your reason and ground for that? Why might not the Enemies of Christianity have condemned the eleven Apostles upon the fall of Judas? had they not as good warrant for it, as you have for this?

Lastly, You little know what a snare of the Devil is laid for your Souls in all those prejudices and offences you take at the ways and Professors of Godliness; and what a Woe you bring upon your own Souls by them. You speak Evil of persons and things you know not, and prejudice is like still to keep you in ignorance of them. Woe to the World (saith Christ) because of Offences; and blessed is he that is not offended at me.

The eleventh way of ruining the precious Soul opened.

XI. The eleventh way wherein abundance of precious Souls perish in the christianized and professing World, is the way of formal Hypocrisie in Religion, and Zeal about the Externals of Worship. Such a Generation of Men have in all Ages mingled themselves with the sincere Worshippers of God; and the inducement to it is obvious, the form of Godliness is an honour, but the power of it a burden. By the former, earthly Interests are accommodated, by the latter they are frequently exposed and hazarded.

We find in the Jewish Church abundance of such Chaff intermixed with the Wheat, which the Doctrine of Christ discovered and purged out of the flour, Mat. 3. 9, 12. Such were the Pharisees, who were exceeding zealous for Traditions, and the external Rites and Ceremonies of the Law, but inwardly full of all filthiness, Mat. 15. 7, 8, 9. Men that honoured the dead, and persecuted the living Saints; that reverenced the material Temple, and destroyed the living Temples; that strain'd at Gnats of Ceremonies, and swallowed down the grossest Immoralities.

And well had it been if this generation had ended with that state and time of the Church: but we find a Prophecy of the increase of these Men in the latter days, 2 Tim. 3. 5. which is every where sadly verified. Religion runs into stalk and blade, into leaves and suckers, which should be concocted into into pith and fruit. Yea, it is of sad consideration, that amongst many high pretenders to Reformation, their Zeal, which should nourish the vitals of Religion, and maintain their daily work of Mortification and Communion with God, spends it self in some by-opinion, whilst practical Godliness visibly languisheth in their Conversations. How many are there that hate doctrinal Errors, who yet perish by practical ones: who hate a false doctrine, but mean time perish by a false Heart! 'Tis very difficult to reclaim this sort of Men from the error of their way, and thereby save their Souls from Hell; however, let the means be used, and the success left with God.

The eleventh way to Hell by Formality barred up.

1. No sin entangles the Souls of Men faster, or damns them with more certainty and aggravation, than the sin of formal Hypocrisie. It holds the Soul fastest on Earth, and sinks it deepest into Hell. There was no sort of Men upon whom the Doctrine of Christ and the Apostles had so little success and effect, as the Scribes and Pharisees; they derided him, when Publicans and Sinners trembled and believed, Luke 16. 14, 15. The form of Godliness wards off all Convictions: their zeal for the Externals of Religion secures them against the fears of Damnation, whilst in the mean while their Hypocrisie plunges them deeper into Hell, than others that never made such shews of Sanctimony and Devotion: He shall appoint him his portion with Hypocrites, Mat. 24. 51. that is, he shall be punished in Hell as Hypocrites are punished, viz. with the greatest and sorest punishment. Hypocrisie is a double iniquity, and will be punished with double destruction: their ungrounded hopes of Heaven serve but to pully up their wretched Souls to a greater height of vain confidence, which gives them the more dreadful jerk in their lamentable and eternal disappointment.

2 Blind superstitious Zeal, which spends it self only about the Externals of Religion, usually prepares and engageth Men in a more violent Persecution of those that are really godly and conscientious. The Lord opened a great door of opportunity at Antioch to Paul; the whole City came together to attend the discoveries of Christ in the first publication of the Gospel, and the poor Gentiles began to taste the sweetness of the Gospel; but the Devil perceiving his Kingdom begin to totter, immediately stirred up his Instruments to persecute the Apostles, and drive them out of the Countrey; and who more fit for that work than the devout and honourable Women? Acts 13. 15. these stirred up their Husbands, and all they had influence upon, under a fair pretence of zeal for the Law, to obstruct the Progress of the Gospel. No Bird (saith one) like the living Bird to draw others into the Net. Men of greatest names and pretensions to Religion, if graceless, are the most dangerous Instruments the Devil can employ to the ruin and extirpation of true Godliness. Such a Zealot was Paul in his unregenerate state.

Satan per costam, tanquam per scalam, ad cor ascendit. Gregor.

3. Nothing is more common than to find men hot and zealous against false Worship, whilst their hearts are as cold as a stone in the Vitals and Essentials of true Religion. Many can dispute warmly against Adoration of Images, Praying to Angels and Saints departed, who all the while are like those dead Images which others Worship. Jehu was a Zealot against Idolatry, and yet the vital power of true Godliness was a stranger to his Soul, 2 Kings 10. 15, 16. The Pharisees spared no pains to make a Proselyte, and yet all the while were the Children of the Devil themselves, Mat. 23. 15.

This is a sad case, yet what more common? The Lord open the eyes of these men, and convince them in season that their Zeal runs in the wrong Channel, and spends it self upon things which shall never profit them. Oh! if they were but as much concerned to promote the love of God, and life of Godliness in themselves and others, as they are about some external Accidents and Appendages of Religion, what Blessings would they be to the World, and what evidence would they have of their own sincerity?

The twelfth way to Hell opened.

XII. The twelfth way to Hell, in which many Souls are carried on smoothly and securely to their own Destruction, is the way of meer Civility and moral Honesty, wherein men rest as in a safe state, never doubting but a civil life will produce an issue in a happy death. Moral Honesty is a lovely thing, and greatly tends to the peace and order of the World; but it is not saving Grace, nor gives any Man a good title to Christ and Salvation. Indeed there can be no Grace in that Soul in which Civility and moral Honesty is not found; but this may be found in thousands that have no Grace.

That which ruins Mens Souls, is not the exercise of moral Vertues, but their reliance upon 'em: they use their morality as a shield to secure their Consciences from the convictions of the Word, which would shew them their sinful and miserable state by Nature. Thus the Pharisees, Luke 18. 11, 12. God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican; he blesseth himself in the conceits of his own safety and happiness. Let debauch'd and prophane persons look to it, I am well enough; tho' alas, poor man! his being less evil at best could but procure him a cooler Hell, or a milder Flame. This was the case of the young Man, Mat. 19. 20. and like a young Man indeed he reasons. He sums up all the stock of his civil Life, and thinks it strange if that be not enough to make a purchase of eternal Life. What lack I yet? Alas, poor Soul! every thing necessary to Salvation: the very first stone was not laid when he thought the building was finished. And this is the case of multitudes, both young and old: and that which greatly confirms and settles them in this their dangerous security, is the general, indistinct Doctrine of some, who pretend to be Guides to the Souls of others; the scope of whose ministry aims at no higher mark than to civilize the people, and press moral Duties upon them, as if this were all that were necessary to Salvation: nay, 'tis well if some do not industriously pull down the pale of distinction betwixt Morality and Regeneration, and tell the world in plain English, That there is no reason to put a difference betwixt such as are baptized and live morally honest, and those that have saving Grace; and they that do so, are only a few who are highly conceited of themselves, and censorious of all others, whom they please to vote formal and moral.

This indeed is the way to fix them where they are: if Christ had not taken another method with Nicodemus, and his Ministers had not pressed the necessity of Regeneration, and the insufficiency of moral honesty to Salvation, how thin had the number of true Converts been, tho' at most they are but a handful in comparison of the Unregenerate!

Oh! that God would bleſs what follows, to undeceive and ſave ſome poor Soul out of this dangerous ſnare of the Devil!

The twelfth way to Damnation barred by three Conſiderations.

1. Blind not your ſelves with the luſtre of your own moral Vertues, a life ſmoothly drawn with Civility through the World: for though it muſt be acknowledged there is a lovelineſs and attracting ſweetneſs in Morality and Civility, yet theſe things rather reſpect Earth than Heaven, and are deſigned for the conſervation of the Order and Peace of this World, not for your Salvation and Title to the World to come. Without Juſtice and Truth, Kingdoms and Common-wealths would become Mountains of prey and Dens of robbery. Where there is no Truſt, there can be no Traffick; and where there is no Truth, there can be no Truſt. Civility is the very Baſis of humane Society, a world of good accrues to men by it, and abundance of miſchief is prevented by it; but it never gave any man an Intereſt in Chriſt, or a Title to Salvation. The Romans and Lacedemonians, who periſhed in the darkneſs of Heatheniſm, excelled in Morality; there is nothing of Chriſt or Regeneration in theſe things, how much of excellency ſoever be aſcribed to them. Paul the Phariſee was a blameleſs perſon touching the Law, and yet at the ſame time not only utterly ignorant of Chriſt, but a bitter Enemy to him and all that were his. 'Till you can find another way to Heaven than by Regeneration, Repentance, and Faith, never lean upon ſuch a deceitful and rotten prop as meer Civility is.

2. Civilized Nature is unſanctified Nature ſtill; and without Sanctification there is no Salvation, Heb. 12. 14. Civility adorneth Nature, but doth not change it. Moral Vertues are ſo many ſweet flowers ſtrewed over a dead Corps, which hide the loathſomeneſs of it, but inſpire not life into it. Morality hides and covers, but never mortifies nor cures the Corruptions of Nature; and mortified they muſt be, or you cannot be ſaved. Take the beſt Nature in the World, and let it be adorned with all the Ornaments of Morality (which they call Homoletical Vertues) and add to theſe all the common gifts of the Spirit, which are for aſſiſtance and miniſtry; yet all this cannot ſecure that Soul from Hell, or be the ground-work for a juſt claim to any promiſe of Salvation: all this is but nature improved, not regenerated. Morality is neither produc'd as ſaving Grace is, nor works ſuch effects as Grace does. There are no pangs of Repentance introducing it, it may coſt many an aking head, but no aking heart for Sin; no ſuch diſtreſſed outcries as that, Acts 2. 37. Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? Nor doth it produce ſuch humility, ſelf-abaſement, heavenly tempers, and tendencies of Soul, as Grace doth. Cheat not you ſelves then in ſo important a concern as Salvation is, with an empty ſhadow.

Abſcondit, non abſcindit vitia. Lactant.

3. Civility is not only found in multitudes that are out of Chriſt, but may be the cauſe and reaſon why they are Chriſtleſs. Miſtake not, I am not pleading the cauſe of Prophaneneſs, nor diſputing Civility out of the World; I heartily wiſh there were more of it to be found in every place, it would exceedingly promote the Peace, Order, and Tranquility of the World: but yet it is certain, that the Eyes of thouſands are ſo dazled with the luſtre of their own Morality, that they ſee no need of Chriſt, nor feel any want of his Righteouſneſs, and this is the ruine of their Souls. Thus Chriſt brings in the Phariſee with his proud boaſt, that he is no Extortioner, Adulterer, nor unjuſt, or ſuch an one as that Publican, Luke 18. 11. Oh, what a Saint doth he vote himſelf, when he compar'd his life with the other's! Well then, beware you be not deceiv'd by thinking you are ſafe becauſe you are got out of the dirty road to Hell, when all the while you are only ſtept over the hedge into a cleaner path to Damnation. You have had a ſhort account of ſome few of thoſe many ways in which the precious Souls of Men are eternally loſt: let us briefly apply it in the following Inferences.

Infer. I. If there be ſo many ways of loſing the Soul, and ſuch multitudes of Souls loſt in every one of them, then the number of ſaved Souls muſt needs be exceeding ſmall.

The number of the Saved may be conſidered either abſolutely or comparatively. In the firſt conſideration they appear great and many, even a great multitude which no man can number, Rev. 7. 9: but if compared with thoſe that are loſt, they make but a ſmall remnant, Iſa. 1. 9. a little flock, Mat. 12. 32. For when we conſider how vaſtly the Kingdom of Satan is extended, who is called the God of this World, from the world of people who are in ſubjection to him; how ſmall a part of this earthly Globe is enlightened with the Beams of Goſpel-light, and that Satan is acknowledged Ruler of all the reſt, Eph. 6. 12. But when 'tis farther conſidered, that out of this ſpot on which the light of the Goſpel is riſen, the far greateſt part are loſt alſo: Oh, what a poor handful remains left to Jeſus Chriſt, as the purchaſe of his Blood!

'Tis of trembling conſideration, how many thouſands of Families amongſt us are meer Nurſeries for Hell, Parents bringing forth and breeding up Children for the Devil; not one word of God (except it be in the way of Blaſphemy or Prophaneneſs) to be heard among them. How naturally their ignorant and wicked Education puts them in the courſe and tide of the world, which carries them away irreſiſtibly to Hell; how one ſinner confirms and animates another in the ſame ſinful courſe, 'till they be all paſt hope or remedy; how the Rich are taken with the baits of ſenſual pleaſures, and the Poor loſt in the brake of diſtracting worldly cares, except here and there a Soul pluck'd out of the ſnare of the Devil by the wonderful power and arm of God. On the one ſide, you may ſee multitudes drown'd in open Prophaneneſs and Debauchery; and on the other ſide, many thouſands ſecurely ſleeping in the ſtate of Civility and Morality. Some Key-cold, and without the leaſt ſenſe of Religion; others Hell-hot with blind zeal and ſuperſtitious madneſs againſt true Godlineſs and the ſincere Practitioners of it. Some living all their days under the Ordinances of God, and never touch'd with any conviction of their Sin or miſery; others convinc'd, and making ſome faint offers at Religion, but their convictions (like bloſſoms nipt with a froſty morning) fall off, and no fruit follows. And as Rubies, Sapphires, and Diamonds are very few in compariſon of the Pebbles and common ſtones of the Earth; ſo are true Chriſtians in compariſon of multitudes that periſh in the Snares of Satan.

Infer. II. How little reaſon have the unregenerate to glory and boaſt themſelves in their earthly acquiſitions and ſucceſſes, whilſt mean time their Souls are loſt! they have gotten other things, but loſt their Souls. 'Tis ſtrange to ſee how ſome men by rolling a ſmall Fortune up and down the World (as Boys do a ſnow-ball) ball) have increaſed the heap, and raiſed a great Eſtate; they have attained their deſign and aim in the World, and hug themſelves in the pleaſed thoughts of their happineſs: but, alas! among all the thoughts of their gains there is not one thought of what they have loſt. Oh! if ſuch a thought as this could find room in their Hearts: I have gotten an Eſtate, but I have loſt my Soul; I have much of the World, but nothing of Chriſt; Gold and Silver I have, but Grace, Peace, and Pardon I have not; my Body is well provided for, but my Soul is naked, empty, and deſtitute. Such a thought, like the Sentence written on the Wall, would make their hearts quail within them. What a rapture and tranſport of joy did the ſight of a full Barn caſt that worldling into! Luke 12. 19, 20. Soul, take thine eaſe, eat, drink, and be merry; little dreaming that death was juſt then at the door to take away the Cloth, Gueſt, and all together; that the next hour his Friends would be ſcrambling for his Eſtate, the Worms for his Body, and the Devils for his Soul.

Oh! how many have not only loſt their Souls whilſt they have been drudging for the World, but have ſold their Souls to purchaſe a little of the World; parted by conſent with their beſt treaſure for a very trifle, and yet think they have a great bargain of it! Surely, if poor Sinners did but apprehend what they have loſt, as well as what they have gained, their gains would yield them as little comfort as Judas's Money did, for which he ſold both his Soul and Saviour. Inſtead of thoſe pleaſing frolicks of wanton worldlings, what a cold ſhiver would run through all their bones and bowels, did they but underſtand what it is to loſe a gracious God and a precious Soul, and both eternally and irrecoverably!

The juſt God remains ſtill to avenge and puniſh the ſinner: but the Favour of God, that friendly look, is gone; the Peace of God, that Heaven upon Earth, is gone; the Eſſence of the Soul remains ſtill, but its purity, peace, joy, hope, and happineſs, theſe are gone: and theſe being gone, what can remain, but a tormenting piercing ſight of thoſe things for which you have ſold them?

Infer. III. Hence let us eſtimate the evil of ſin, and ſee what a dreadful thing that is which men commonly ſport themſelves with, and make ſo light of: it is not only a wrong and injury to the Soul, but the loſs and utter ruin of the Soul for ever.

It is ſaid, Prov. 8. 36. He that ſinneth againſt me, wrongeth his own Soul. And if this were all the miſchief ſin did us, it were bad enough; a wrong to the Soul is a greater evil than the ruine of the body or eſtate, and all the outward enjoyments of this life can be: but to loſe the precious Soul, and deſtroy it to all eternity, Oh, who can eſtimate ſuch a loſs! Now the reſult and laſt effect of ſin is death, the death of the precious Soul, Rom. 6. 21. The end of thoſe things is death. So Ezek. 18. 4. The Soul that ſinneth ſhall die.

Sin doth not deſtroy the being of the Soul by annihilation, but it doth that which the Damned ſhall find and acknowledge to be much worſe; it cuts off the Soul from God, and deprives it of all its felicity, joy, and pleaſure, which conſiſts in the enjoyment of him. Such is the dolefulneſs and fearfulneſs of this reſult and iſſue of ſin, that when God himſelf ſpeaks of it, he puts on a paſſion, and ſpeaks of it with the moſt feeling concernment; Ezek. 33. 11. As I live, ſaith the Lord, I have no pleaſure in the death of the wicked: Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die, O houſe of Iſrael? q. d. Why will ye wilfully caſt away your own Souls? Why will ye chuſe the pleaſures of ſin for a ſeaſon at the price of my wrath and fury poured out for ever? O think of this, you that make ſo light a matter of committing ſin! We pity thoſe who in the depth of Melancholy or Deſperation lay violent hands upon themſelves, and in a deſperate mood cut their own Throats: but certainly for a Man to murder his own Soul, is an act of Wickedneſs as much beyond it as the value of the Soul is above the Body.

Infer. IV. What an invaluable Mercy is Jeſus Chriſt to the World, who came on purpoſe to ſeek and to ſave ſuch as were loſt?

In Adam all were ſhipwreck'd and caſt away, Chriſt is the Plank of Mercy let down from Heaven to ſave ſome. The loſs of Souls by the Fall had been as irrecoverable as the loſs of the fallen Angels, had not God in a way above all humane Thoughts and Counſels contrived the method of their Redemption. 'Tis aſtoniſhing to conſider the admirable harmony and glorious triumph of all the Divine Attributes in this great Project of Heaven for the recovery of loſt Souls. 'Tis the wonder of Angels, 1 Pet. 1. 12. The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 3. 16. the matter and burden of the triumphant Song of redeemed Saints, Rev. 1. 5. And well it may, when we conſider a more noble Species of Creatures finally loſt, and no mediator of Reconciliation appointed betwixt God and them: this is to ſave an earthen Pitcher, whilſt the Veſſel of Gold is let fall, and no hand is ſtretched out to ſave it.

But what is moſt aſtoniſhing is, that ſo great a Perſon as the Son of God ſhould come himſelf from the Father's Boſom, to ſave us by putting himſelf into our room and ſtead, being made a Curſe for us, Gal. 3. 13. he leaves the Boſom of his Father, and all the ineffable delights of Heaven, diſrobes himſelf of his Glory, and is found in faſhion as a Man, yea, becomes as a Worm and no Man, ſubmits to the loweſt ſtep and degree of Abaſement, to ſave loſt Sinners. What a low ſtoop doth Chriſt make in his Humiliation to catch the Souls of poor Sinners out of Hell! Herein was Love, that God ſent his own Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins, 1 Joh. 4. 10. and ſo God loved the World, Joh. 3. 16. at this rate he was content to ſave loſt Sinners.

How ſeaſonable was this work of Mercy, both in its general Exhibition to the World in the Incarnation of Chriſt, and in its particular Application to the Soul of every loſt Sinner by the Spirit! When he was firſt exhibited to the World, he found them all as loſt Sheep gone aſtray, every one turning to his own way, Iſa. 53. 6. he ſpeaks of our loſt Eſtate by Nature, both collectively or in general. We all went aſtray, and diſtributively or in particular, Every one turned to his own way; and then in the fulneſs of time a Saviour appeared.

And how ſeaſonable was it in its particular Application? How ſecurely were we wandering onwards in the paths of Deſtruction, fearing no danger, when he graciouſly opened our Eyes by conviction and pulled us back by heart-turning Grace! No Mercy like this: it's an aſtoniſhing act of Grace that ſtands alone.

Infer. V. If there be ſo many ways to Hell, and ſo few that eſcape it, how are all concerned to ſtrive to the utmoſt for their own Salvation.

In Luke 13. 23. a certain Perſon propoſed a curious queſtion to Chriſt, Lord, are there few that be ſaved?

saved? He saw a multitude flocking to Christ, and thronging with great zeal to hear him, and he could not conceive but Heaven must fill proportionably to the numbers he saw in the way thither: but Christ's answer. ver. 24. at once rebukes the curiosity of the Questionist, fully solves the question propounded, and sets home his own duty and greatest concernments upon him. It rebukes his curiosity, and is as if he should say, Be the number of the Saved more or less, what is that to thee? strive thou to be one of them. It fully solves the question propounded, by distinguishing those that attend upon the means of Salvation into Seekers and Strivers. In the first respect there are many who by a cheap and easy profession seek Heaven; but take them under the notion of Strivers, i. e persons heartily ingaged in Religion, and who make it their business, and so they will shrink up into a small number; and it presseth home his great business and concern upon him, Strive to enter in at the strait Gate.

By Gate understand whatsoever is introductive to Blessedness and Salvation. By the Epithet strait, understand the difficulties and severities attending Religion, all that suffering and self-denial which those that are bound for Heaven must count and cast upon. And by striving, understand the diligent and constant use of all those means and duties, how hard, irksom, and costly soever they be. The word ἀγωνίζεσθε hath a deep Sense and Emphasis, and imports striving even to an Agony: and this duty is enforced two ways upon him, and every Man else; first by the indisputable Soveraignty of Christ, from whom the command comes; and also from the deep interest and concern every Soul hath in the commanded Duty. It is not only a simple compliance with the Will of God, but what also involves our own Salvation and eternal Happiness in it: our great duty and our great interest are twisted together in this command; your eternal Happiness depends upon the success of it. A man is not crowned, except he strive lawfully, i. e. successfully and prevalently. O therefore so run, so strive, that ye may obtain. If you have any value for your Souls, if you would not be miserable to Eternity, strive, strive. Believe it, you will find that the assurance of Salvation drops not down from Heaven in a night-dream, as the Turks fable their Alcoran to have done in that lailato hanzili, Night of Demission, as they call it; no, no, the Righteous themselves are scarcely saved: many seek, but few find; strive therefore as Men and Women that are heartily concerned for their own Salvation. Sit not with folded arms like so many heaps of stupidity and sloth; whilst the door of hope is yet open, and such a sweet Voice from Heaven calls to you, saying, strive, Souls, strive; if ever you expect to be partakers of the Blessedness that is here to be enjoyed, strive to the uttermost of your abilities and opportunities. Such a Heaven is worth striving to obtain; such a Hell is worth striving to escape; such an invaluable Soul is worth striving to save.

I confess Heaven is not the purchase or reward of your striving! No Soul shall boastingly say there, Is not this the Glory which my duties and diligence purchased for me? And yet on the other side it is as true, that without striving you shall never set foot there. Say not, it depends upon the pleasure of God, and not upon your Diligence; for it is his declared will and pleasure to bring men to Glory in the way, tho' not for the sake of their own striving. As in the works of your civil Calling, you know all the care, toil, and sweat of the Husbandman avails nothing of it self, except the Sun and Rain quicken and ripen the Fruits of the Earth; and yet no wise man will neglect plowing and harrowing, sowing and weeding, because these Labours avail not without the Influences of Heaven, but waits for them in the way of his duty and diligence; rational hope sets all the world awork. Do they plow in hope, and sow in hope, and will not you pray in hope, and hear in hope? You that know your Souls to be hitherto strangers to Christ, and the regenerating Work of the Spirit; how is it, that you take them not aside sometimes out of the distracting noise and hurries of the World, and thus bemoan them?

O my poor, graceless, Christless, miserable Soul, how sad a case art thou in! others have, but thou never feltest the burden of Sin; thousands in the World are striving and labouring, searching and praying to make their Calling and Election sure, whilst thou sittest still with folded hands in a supine regardlessness of the misery that is hastening upon thee. Canst thou endure the devouring Wrath of God! Canst thou dwell with everlasting burnings? Hast thou fansied a tolerable Hell? Or is it easy to perish? Why dost thou not cast thy self at the Feet of Christ, and cry as long as breath will last, Lord, pity a sinful, miserable, undone, and self-condemning Soul? Lord, smite this rocky heart, subdue this stubborn Will, heal and save an undone Soul ready to perish. The characters of Death are upon it, it must be changed or condemned, and that in a little time. Bowels of pity, hear the cry of a Soul distressed, and ready to perish.

And you that do not understand the case and state your Souls are in, have you never a Bible near you? O turn to those places, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. where you will presently find the more obvious marks and characters God hath set upon the Children of Perdition; and if you find not your self in that Catalogue among the Unrighteous, Fornicators, Idolaters, Adulterers, Effeminate, Thieves, Covetous, Drunkards, Revilers, Extortioners, &c. then turn to John 3. 3. and solemnly ask thy own Soul this question, Am I born again? Am I a new Creature? or still in the same Condition I was born in? What solid evidence of the new birth have I to rely upon, if I were now within a few gasps of Death? Am not I the Man or Woman who live in the very same sins which the Word of God makes the Symptoms and Characters of Damnation? And doth not my Conscience witness against me, that I am utterly void and destitute of all that saving Grace, and a meer stranger to the regenerating work of the Spirit, without which there can be no well bottom'd hope of Salvation? and if so, are not the tokens of Death upon me? Am not I a person markt out for misery? And shall I sit still in a state of so much danger, and not once strive to make an escape from the Wrath to come? Is this vile Body worth so much toil and labour to support and preserve it? And is not my Soul worth as much care and diligence to secure it from the everlasting wrath of the great, just, and terrible God? O that the consideration of the Wrath to come, the multitudes all the World over preparing as fuel for it, and the door of Opportunity yet held open to Souls by the hand of Grace to escape that Wrath, might prevail with thy heart, Reader, to strive, and that to the uttermoſt, to ſecure thy precious Soul from the impending ruin.

and

EPHES. 5. 16.

.....Redeeming the time (or opportunity) becauſe the days are evil.

TIME is deſervedly reckoned among the moſt precious Mercies of this Life; and that which makes it ſo valuable are the commodious ſeaſons and opportunities for Salvation which are vouchſafed to us therein, Opportunity is the golden ſpot of Time, the ſweet and beautiful flower growing upon the ſtalk of Time. If Time be a Ring of Gold, Opportunity is the rich Diamond that gives it both its value and glory. The Apoſtle well knew the Value of Time; and ſeeing how prodigally it was waſted by the moſt, doth therefore in this place earneſtly preſs all men to redeem, ſave and improve it with the utmoſt Diligence. In this and the former Five, we have,

Καιρὸς ἀνθ' χρόνου.

1*ſt*. The Duty injoyned, Walk circumſpectly.
2*ly*. The Injunction explained;
1. More generally, Not as fools, but as wiſe.
2. More particularly, Redeeming the Time.
3. The Exhortation ſtrongly inforced with a powerful Motive, Becauſe the days are evil.

Among theſe particulars, my Diſcourſe is principally concerned about the Redemption of Time or Opportunities, which in this life are graciouſly vouchſafed us in order to that which is to come: and here it will be needful to inquire,

1. What the Apoſtle means by Time.
2. What by the Redemption of Time.

1. Time is taken more largely or ſtrictly according to the double acceptation of the Hebrew Word עת which ſignifies ſometimes Time, and ſometimes Occaſion, Seaſon, or Opportunity, and accordingly is expreſt by χρόνος and καιρὸς, Tempus and Tempeſtivitas: the latter is the word here uſed, and denotes the commodiouſneſs and fitneſs of ſome parts of Time above others for the ſucceſsful and proſperous management and accompliſhment of our main and great Buſineſs here, which is to ſecure our intereſt in Chriſt, and glorify God in a courſe of fruitful Obedience. For theſe great and weighty Purpoſes our Time is graciouſly lengthened out, and many fit Opportunities preſented us in the Revolutions thereof.

2. By the Redemption of Time we muſt underſtand the ſtudy, care, and diligence of Chriſtians at the rate of all poſſible pains, at the expence of all earthly pleaſures, eaſe, and gratifications of the Fleſh, to reſcue their precious Seaſons both of Salvation and Service out of the hands of Temptations, which ſo commonly rob unwary Souls of them. Satan trucks with us for our time, as we did at firſt with the ſilly Indians for their Gold and Diamonds, who were content to exchange them for Glaſs-Beads and Tinſel-Toys. Many fair ſeaſons are forced or cheated out of our hands by the Importunity of earthly cares, or deceitfulneſs of ſenſual pleaſures; at the expence and loſs of theſe we muſt redeem and reſcue our time for higher and better uſes and purpoſes. We muſt ſpend thoſe hours in prayer, meditation, ſearching our hearts, mortifying our luſts: which others do, and our fleſh fain would ſpend in ſenſual pleaſures, and gratifications of the fleſhly appetite. If ever we expect to win the Port of Glory, we muſt be as diligent and careful as Sea-men are to take every gale that blows directly or obliquely, to ſet them forward in their Voyage. The note from hence is this:

Ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρὸν.

Doct. That the wiſdom of a Chriſtian is eminently diſcovered in ſaving and improving all Opportunities in this World, for that World which is to come.

God hangs the great things of Eternity upon the ſmall wiers of times and ſeaſons in this world: that may be done or neglected in a day, which may be the ground-work of joy or ſorrow to all Eternity. There is a nick of opportunity which gives both ſucceſs and facility to the great and weighty affairs of the Soul, as well as Body; to come before it, is to ſeek the Bird before it be hatcht; and to come after it, is to ſeek it when it is fled. There is a twofold ſeaſon or opportunity of Salvation.

1. One was Chriſt's ſeaſon for the Purchaſe of it.
2. The other is ours for the Application of it.

1. Chriſt had a ſeaſon aſſigned him for the impetration and purchaſe of our Salvation; ſo you hear his Father beſpeaking him, Iſa. 49. 8. Thus ſaith the Lord, In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of Salvation have I helped thee, בערת רצוי, in tempore opportuno voluntatis, vel placito. It was Chriſt's wiſdom to ſet in with the Father's time, to comply with his ſeaſon; and it became a day of Salvation, becauſe it was the acceptable time which Chriſt took for it.

2. Men have their ſeaſons and opportunities for the application of Chriſt, and his Benefits to their own Souls: 2 Cor. 6. 1, 2. We then as workers together with God, beſeech you alſo, that you receive not the Grace of God in vain; for he ſaith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of Salvation have I ſuccoured thee. Behold now, is the accepted time now is the day of Salvation. He exhorts the Corinthians not to dally or trifle any longer in the great Concerns of their Salvation; for now, ſaith he, is your day. Chriſt had his Day to purchaſe it, and he procured a Day alſo for you to apply it, and this is that day; you enjoy it, you live under it: that golden day is now running: Oh! ſee that you fruſtrate not the deſign thereof, by receiving the Goſpel-grace in vain:

Now two things concur to make a fit ſeaſon of Salvation:

1. The external Means and Inſtruments.
2. The agency of the Spirit internally by or with thoſe external Means.

1. Men have a ſeaſon of Salvation, when God ſends the Means and Inſtruments of Salvation among them. When the Goſpel is powerfully preached among a people, there is a door opened to them; 2 Cor. 2. 12. When I came to Troas to preach the Goſpel, a door was opened to me of the Lord. God as it were unlocks the door of Heaven by the preaching of the Goſpel: Souls have then an opportunity to ſtep in and be ſaved.

2. But yet 'tis not a wide and effectual door, (as the Apoſtle phraſes it, 1 Cor. 16. 9) till the Spirit of God joins with, and works on the heart by thoſe external means and inſtruments; as the waters of the Pool of Bethesda had no inherent ſanative virtue in themſelves, till the Angel deſcended and troubled them: but both together make a bleſſed ſeaſon for the ſouls of men. Then he ſtands at the door, and knocks by convictions and and Persuasions, Rev. 3. 20. strives with Men, as he did with the old World by the Ministry of Noah, Gen. 6. 3. Now the Door of Opportunity is indeed opened; but this will not always last; there is a time when the Spirit ceases to strive, and when the door is shut, Luke 13. 25.

There is a Season when by the fresh Impression of some Ordinance or Providence, Mens Hearts are awakened, and their Affections stirred. It is now with Souls as with Fruit Trees in the Spring when they put forth Blossoms: if they knit and set, Fruit follows; if they be nipt and blasted, no Fruit can be expected. For all Convictions and Motions of the Affections are to Grace, much the same as Blossoms are to Fruit, which are but the Rudiment thereof, fructus imperfectus & ordinabilis, somewhat in order to it; and look as that is a critical and hazardous Season to Trees, so is this to Souls. I do not say it is in the Power of any Soul to make the Work of the Spirit effectual and abiding, by adding his Endeavours to the Spirit's Motions; for then Conversion would not be the free and arbitrary Act of the Spirit, as in Joh. 3. 8. neither would Souls be born of God, but of the Will of Man, contrary to Joh. 1. 13. And yet it is not to be thought or said, that Mens Endeavours and Strivings are altogether vain, needless, and insignificant; because, tho' they cannot make God's Grace effectual, his Grace can make them effectual; they are our Duty, and God can bless them to our great Advantage. Now there are, among others, five remarkable Essays, Efforts, or Strivings of a Soul under the Impression and Hand of the Spirit, that greatly tend to the fixing, setling, and securing of that great Work on the Soul: and it is seldom known any Soul miscarries in whom these Things are found.

1 Deep, serious, and fixed Consideration, which lets Conviction deep into the Soul, and settles it, and roots it fast in the Heart, Psal. 119. 59. I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy Testimonies. There are close and anxious Debates in those Souls in whom Convictions prosper to full Conversion: they sit alone, and think close to their great and eternal Concerns: they carry their Thoughts back to the Evils of their Life past, then smite on the Thigh, and cry, What have I done? They run their Thoughts forward into Eternity, and that to a great depth, and then cry, What shall I do to be saved? They deliberate and weigh in their most advised Thoughts what is to be done, and that speedily, for escaping Wrath to come: thus they fix those tender, weak, and hazardous Motions, that die away in many Souls; and in the Loss of them their Seasons of Salvation are lost.

2 The first Stirrings and Motions of the Spirit upon Mens Hearts do become a Season of Salvation to them, when they are accompanied with spiritual, fervent, and frequent Prayer: so it was with Paul, Acts 9 11. Behold, he prayeth. It's a good sign when Souls get alone, and affect Privacy and Retirement, to pour out their Fears, Sorrows, and Requests unto God. It is in the Espousals of a Soul to Christ, as it is in other Marriages; a third Person may make the Motion, and bring the Parties together, but they only betwixt themselves must conclude and agree the Matter. Prayer is the first Breath which the new Creature draws in, and the last (ordinarily) it breaths out in this World. This nourishes and maturates those weak and tender first Motions after God, and brings them to some Consistence and Fixedness in the Soul.

3. Then do those Motions of the Spirit on Mens Hearts make a Season of Salvation to them, when they remain and settle in the Heart, and are in them per modum quietis, by way of Rest and Abode, following the Man from Place to Place, from Day to Day; so that whatever unpleasing Diversions the Necessities and Incumbrances of this World at any time give, yet still they return again upon the Heart, and will not vanish, or suffer any long Suspension: but in others, who lose their blessed Advantage and Season, it's quite contrary; James 1. 23, 24. They are as one that seeth his natural face in a glass, and goeth away and forgetteth what manner of man he was: He sees some Spot on his Face, or disorder in his Band, which he purposeth to correct; but one Occurrence or another chops in, and he forgets what he saw in the Glass, and so goes all the Day with his Spot upon him. This was an evanid light purpose, which came to nothing for want of a present Execution; just so it is with many in reference to their great Concerns: but if the Impression abide in its strength, if it return, and follow the Soul, and will not let it be quiet, it's like then to prosper and prove the time of Mercy indeed to such Souls.

4. An anxious Sollicitude and Inquisitiveness about the Means and Ways of Salvation, speaks an effectual door of Salvation to be set open to the Souls of Men, Acts 2. 37. & 16. 30. Sirs, what must I do to be saved? Men and Brethren, what shall we do? q. d. we are in a miserable Condition; oh you the Ministers of Christ, instruct, counsel, and shew us what Course to take: is there no Balm in Gilead? no Door of Hope in this Valley of Achor? Alas! we are not able to dwell with our own Fears, Terrors, and Presages of Wrath to come. Oh for a Messenger, one among a thousand, to teach us the way of Salvation. Thus the Lord rivets and fixes those Motions in some Souls, that vanish like a Morning Mist or Dew in others.

5. Lastly, That which secures and completes this Work, is the Execution of those Purposes and Convictions, by falling strait to the Work of Faith and Repentance in good earnest, dallying no more with so great a Concern, standing no longer at shall I? shall I? when mean while time flies away, and Opportunities may be lost; but bring their Thoughts and Debates to a peremptory Resolution as the Lepers at Samaria did; and seeing themselves shut up to one only Door of Hope, there they resolve to take their Station, lying at the Feet of Jesus Christ, and cast their poor burdened Souls upon him, whatever be the Issue. When the Spirit of God ripens his first Motions to this, and carries them thro' that critical Season thus far, there is an effectual Door of Opportunity opened indeed; this is an acceptable time, a Day of Salvation: but oh! how many thousands miscarry in this Season, and, like Trees removed from one Soil to another, die in the Removal!

But certainly, it is the most solemn and important concern of every Soul to watch upon all these Seasons of Salvation, when God comes nigh to them by Convictions and Motions of his Spirit; and to put the same Value on these Things that they do upon their Souls, and the Salvation of them. This is the Door of Hope set open, a fresh Gale to carry you home to your Port of Glory. Salvation is now come nigh to your Souls; there is but a little betwixt you and Blessedness. Wise and happy is that Soul which knows and improves its Season. To persuade and press Men to discern and improve such such Seasons as these, is the principal Work of the Preachers of the Gospel, and that special Work to which I now address my self in the following Motives and Arguments

Arg. I. And first, who that hath the free Exercise of Reason, and the Sense of a future eternal Estate, would carelesly neglect any Season of Salvation, whilst he seeth all the rational World so carefully attending and watching all Opportunities to promote and secure their lower Concerns and Designs for the present Life?

Is not the saving of a Man's Soul as weighty a Concern as the getting of an Estate? You cannot but observe how careful Merchants are to nick the Opportunity which promiseth them a good turn; how yare poor Seamen look out for a Wind to waft them to their Port, and industriously shift their Sails to improve every Flaw that may set them on their Voyage; how many Miles Tradesmen will travel to be in Season at a Fair, to put off or purchase Goods to their Advantage: no Entertainments, Recreations, or Importunities of Friends can prevail with any of these to lose a Day on which their Business depends; all Things must give way to their Business; they all understand their Salvation, and will not be diverted. But, alas! what childish Toys are all these compared their Seasons! What is the Loss of a little Money, to the Loss of a Man's Soul? If a Man's Life depended upon his being at such a Place by such a precise Hour, sure he would not over-sleep his time that Morning; and had he but the least Fear of coming too late, every Stroke of the Clock would strike to his Heart; and yet Remissness and Carelessness in such a Case as this, is infinitely more excusable than in the Matter of Salvation. Certainly the Sollicitude and Care of all the World for the Interests thereof, yea, your own Diligence and Circumspection in Temporal Things, will be an uncontrolable and confounding Self-conviction to you in the Day of your Account, and leave you without Plea or Apology for your supine Neglects of the Seasons of Salvation.

Arg. II. The Consideration of the Uncertainty and slippery Nature of these Spiritual Seasons must awaken in us all Care and Diligence to secure and improve them. This nick of Opportunity is tempus labile, a slippery Season; it is but short in it self, and very uncertain; To day, whilst it is said to day (saith the Apostle) if ye will hear his voice, Heb. 3. 13. q. d. you have now a short, uncertain, but most precious and valuable Season for your Souls, lay hold on it whilst it is called to day: for if this Season be let slip, the time to come is called by another Name, that is, not to day, but to morrow. Your time is the present time; take heed of protracting and putting it off till that which is called to day (which is your only season) be past and gone. This precious Inch of Time, tho' it be more worth than all the other greater Parts and Portions of your Time, yet it is as much in flaxu, in hasty Motion and Expence as other Parts of Time are: and being once lost, is never more to be recalled or recovered. Few Men know or understand it whilst it is current: other Seasons for natural or civil Actions are known and stated, but the time of Grace is not so easily discerned, and therefore commonly mistaken and lost: and this comes to pass partly through,

1. Presumptuous Hopes.
2. Discouraging Fears.

1. Presumptuous Hopes, which put it too far forth, and perswade us this Season is yet to come: that we have before us, and that to morrow shall be as to day. Thus through Presumption Men hope and by their presumptuous hopes they perish. This is the Ruin of most Souls that perish. Præsumendo sperant, & sperando periunt.

2 Discouraging Fears put it too far back, and represent it as long since past and gone, whilst yet in being, and in our Hands. By such Pangs of Desperation Satan cuts the Nerves of Industry and Diligence, and causes Souls to yield themselves as by consent for lost and hopeless, even whilst the Gospel is opening their Eyes to see their Sin and Misery, which is a part of the Work for their Recovery. Thus thousands are blinded, that they cannot discern the Season of Mercy, and so it slides from them, as if it had never been.

God came near them in the Means of their Conversion, yea, and nearer in the Motions of his Spirit upon their Consciences and Affections; but they knew not the time of their Visitation, and now the Things of their Peace are hid from their Eyes. Had those Convictions been obeyed, and those Purposes that were begotten in their Hearts been followed by answerable Executions of them, happy had they been to all Eternity: but their careless Neglects have quenched them, and the Door is shut, and who knows whether it may be opened any more? Oh! dally not with the Spirit of God, resist not his Calls; his Motions on the Soul are tender Things; they may soon be quenched, and never recovered.

Arg. III. Neglect not the Seasons of Mercy, the Day of Grace, because Opportunity facilitates the great Work of your Salvation: it is much easier to be done in such a Season than it can be afterwards: an Impression is easily made on Wax when melted; but stay till it be hardened, and if you lay the greatest Weight on the Seal, it leaves not its Impress upon it. Much so it is with the Heart; there is a Season when God makes it soft and yielding, when the Affections are thawed and melted under the Word. Conscience is full of Sense and Activity, the Will pliable: now is the time to set in with the motions of the Spirit: there is now a Gale from Heaven, if you will take it; and if not, it tarries not for Man, nor waits for the Sons of Men. Neglect of the Season is the Loss of the Soul. The Heart, like melted Wax, will naturally harden again; and then to how little purpose are your own feeble Essays? Heb. 3. 15: 'tis both easie and successful striving, when the Spirit of God strives in you, and with you; you are now Workers together with God, and such Work goes on smoothly and sweetly: that which is in motion is easily mov'd; but if once the Heart be set, you may tug to little purpose.

Arg. IV. The infinite Importance and Weight of Salvation is alone instead of all Motives and Arguments to make Men prize and improve every proper season for it. It is no ordinary concern, it is your Life, yea, it is your eternal Life; the solemnity and Awfulness of such a Business as this, is enough to swallow up the Spirit of Man. Oh what an awful sound have such words as these, Ever with the Lord! Suppose you saw the Glory of Heaven, the full Reward of all the Labours and Sufferings of the Saints, the blessed Harvest of all their Prayers, Tears, Diligence, and Self-denial in this World; or suppose you had a true Representation of the Torments of Hell, and could but hear the Wailings of the Damned for the Neglect of the Season of Mercy, and their passionate, but vain Wishes for one of those Days which they have lost: would you think any Care, any Pains, any Self-denial too much to save and redeem one of these Opportunities? Surely you would have a far higher Estimation of them than ever you had in your Lives.

A Trial for a Man's whole Estate is accounted a solemn Business among Men; the Cast of a Dye for a Man's Life is a weighty Action, and seldom done without Anxiety of the Mind, and trembling of the Hand: yet both these are but Childrens Play compared with Salvation-work.

Three Things put an unspeakable Solemnity upon this Matter: it is the precious Soul, which is above all Valuation, that lies at Stake, and is to be saved or lost. The saving or losing of it is not for a time, but for ever; and this is the only Season in which it will be eternally saved, or cast away: all hangs upon a little Inch of time, which being over-slipt and lost, is never more to be recalled or recovered. Lord! with what serious Spirits, deep and weighty Consideration, Fears and Tremblings of Heart, should Men and Women attend the Seasons of their Salvation!

Believe it, Reader, since thy Soul projected its first thought, there never was a more weighty and concerning subject than this presented to thy thoughts. Oh, therefore let not thy thoughts trifle about it, and slide from it as they use to do in other things of common concernment.

Argum. 5. If we value the true pleasure of life, or solid comfort of our Souls at death, let us by no means neglect the special seasons and opportunities of Salvation we now enjoy.

These two things, the pleasure of life, and comfort in death, should be priz'd by every man more than his two eyes: certainly no being at all is more desirable than a Being without these: take away the true spiritual pleasure of Life, and you level the Life of Man with the Beast that perisheth; and take away the hope and comfort of the Soul in Death, and you sink him infinitely below the Beast, and make him a Being only capable of misery for ever.

Now there can be no true spiritual pleasure found in that Soul that has neglected and lost his only season of Salvation: all the solid delight and comfort of life results from the settlement and security of a Man's great concern in the proper season thereof. The true Mirth of the converted Prodigal bears date from the time of his return and reconciliation to his Father, Luke 15. 24. Two things are absolutely pre-requisite to the comfort of life, viz. a change of the state by Justification, and a change of the frame and temper of the heart by Sanctification. To be in a pardoned state is matter of all joy, Mat. 9. 2. and to be spiritually-minded is Life and Peace, Rom. 8. 6. No good News comes to any man before this, and no bad News can sink a Man's heart after this.

And for hope and comfort in death, let none be so fond to expect it, 'till he have first complied with, and obeyed God's call in the time thereof: a careless life never did, nor never will produce a comfortable Death. What is more common among all that die not stupid and senseless, as well as unregenerate and Christless, than the bitter dolorous complaints of their mis-spent time, and losing their season of Mercy? Reader, if thou wouldst not feel that anguish thou hast seen and heard others to be in on this account, know the time of thy Visitation, and finish thy great work whilst it is day.

Argum. 6. Neglect no season of Salvation which is graciously afforded you, because your time is short; Death and Eternity are at the door. You know that you must shortly put off these Tabernacles, 2 Pet. 1. 13, 14. that when a few years are come, you shall go the way whence you shall not return, Job 16. 22. All the living are listed soldiers, and must conflict hand to hand with that dreadful Enemy Death, and there is no discharge in that War, Eccles. 8. 8. It will be vain to say, you are not willing to die; for willing or unwilling, away you must go when Death calls for you. It will be as vain to say, you are not ready; for ready or unready, you must be gone when Death comes: your readiness to die would indeed be a Cordial to your hearts in death; but then you must improve and ply the time of life, and husband your opportunities diligently; carelessness of Life, and readiness for Death, are inconsistent, and exclusive of each other. The Bed is sweeter to none than the hard Labourer, and the Grave comfortable to none but the laborious Christian. You knew nothing can be done by you after Death; the Compositum is then dissolved; you cease to be what you were, to enjoy the means you had, and to work as you did. Oh, therefore slip not the only season you have both of attaining the end of Life, and escaping the danger and hour of Death.

The USE.

I shall close all with a word of Exhortation, I perswading (if possible) the careless and unthinking Neglecters of their precious Time and Soul, to awake out of that deep and dangerous security in which they lie fast asleep on the very brink of Eternity; and to day, whilst it is yet called to day, to hear God's voice calling them to Repentance and Faith, and thereby to Christ and everlasting Blessedness. Behold, he yet stands at the door, and knocks, Rev. 3. 20. The door of Hope is not yet finally shut, there are yet some stirrings at certain times in mens Consciences; God comes near them in his Word, and in some rouzing acts of Providence, the death of a near Relation, the seizure of a dangerous Disease, the blasting and disappointment of a man's great design and project for this World, a fall into some notorious Sin; these and such-like methods of Providence, as well as the convincing voice of the Word, have the efficacy of an awakening voice to Mens drowzy Consciences; and if careless Sinners would but attend to them, and follow home those motions they make upon their hearts, who knows to what these weak beginnings might arise and prosper? The Souls of Men are as it were embarked in the Calls of God, your Life is bound up in them; if these be lost, your Souls are lost; if these abide upon you, and grow up to sound Conversion, you are saved by them. More particularly consider,

1. What a mercy it is to have your lot providentially cast under the Gospel; to be born under and bred up with the Means and Instruments of Conversion and Salvation. We have lived from our youth up under the Calls of God, and within the joyful sound of the Gospel: God hath not dealt so with other Nations, Psal 147. 20. Tho' others should seek the means of Life, they cannot find them; and tho' you seek them not, you can hardly miss them.

2. How great a mercy is it to have your lives lengthened out hitherto by God's patience under the Gospel! that neither that golden lamp nor the lamp of your life (both which are liable to be extinguish-tinguished every moment) are yet put out. Thousands and ten thousands, your contemporaries, are gone out of the hearing of the voice of the Gospel, they shall never hear another Call, the Treaty of God is ended with them, the Master of the house is risen up, and the doors are shut. Your neglects and provocations have not been inferiour to theirs, but God's patience and goodness has exceeded and abounded to you beyond whatever it did to them.

3. Bethink your selves what an aggravation of your misery it will be, to sink into Hell with the Calls of God sounding in your ears! to sink into eternal misery betwixt the tender out-stretched arms of Mercy! this is the Hell of Hell, the Emphasis of Damnation, the racking Engine on which the Consciences of the Damned are tortured. And thou Capernaum, which art exalted to Heaven, shalt be brought down to Hell, Mat. 11. 23. Such a fall, after so high an exaltation, is the very Strappado which will torment your Consciences. Hell will prove a cooler and milder place to the Heathens that never enjoyed your Light, Means, and Mercies in this World, than it will to you. None sink so deep into Misery in the World to come, as they that fall from the fairest Opportunities of Salvation in this World.

4. Let no man expect that God will hear his cries and intreaties in time of Misery, who neglects and slights the Calls of God in time of Mercy. God calls, but Men will not hear; the day is coming when they shall cry, but God will not hear, Prov. 1. 24, 25. Will God hear his cry, when trouble cometh upon him? Job 27. 9. No, no, he will not: and this is but a just retribution from the righteous God, whose Calls and Counsels Men have set at naught. But, whatever men now think of it, it is certainly the greatest Misery incident to man in all the World; for as no words can make another fully sensible what a privilege it is to have the ear, favour, pity, and help of God in a day of straits: so it is impossible for any words to express the doleful state and case of that Soul whom God casts off in Trouble, and whose cries he shuts out.

5. Beware of neglecting any Call of God, because that Call you are now tempted to neglect, may be the last Call God ever intends to give your Soul. Sure I am, there is a Call which will be the last Call of God to rebellious Sinners, and after that no more Calls, but an eternal deep silence; his Spirit shall not always strive with man; and the more Motions and Calls you have already slighted, the more probable it is that this may be the last Voice of God in a way of Mercy to thy Soul: and what if, after this, God should seal up thy Heart, and judicially harden it; make thy Will utterly inflexible, and thine Ears deaf, as he threatens, Isa. 6. 10. what an undone miserable Man or Woman art thou then! Oh! beware of provoking the dreadest of all Judgments, by persisting any longer in a course of Rebellion against Light and Mercy.

6. Whilst your hearts put off and neglect God's Calls, you can by no means arrive to the evidence and assurance of your Election; for your Election is only secured by your effectual calling, 2 Pet. 1. 10. there is no way for Men to discern their Names written in the Book of Life, but by reading the Work of Sanctification in their Hearts, Rom. 10. 8. Desire no miraculous Voice from Heaven, no extraordinary signs, or unscriptural notices and intimations in this matter: Lord, let me but find my heart complying with thy Calls, my will obediently submitting to thy Commands; Sin my burden, and Christ my desire: I never crave a fairer or surer evidence of thy electing love to my Soul; and if I had an Oracle from Heaven, an extraordinary Messenger from the other World, to tell me thou lovest me, I have no reason to credit such a voice, whilst I find my heart wholly sensual, averse to God, and indisposed to all that is spiritual.

7. What reason have you why you should not presently embrace the Call of God, and thankfully lay hold on the first Opportunity and season of Salvation? Have you any greater matters in hand than the Salvation of your precious Souls? Is there any thing in the World that more concerns you? If the Affairs of this Life be so indispensibly necessary, and those of the World to come so indifferent; if you think Meat and Drink, Trade and Business, Wife and Children, be so great Things, and Christ, Soul, and Eternity, so little Things; or tho' you think Salvation of the greatest necessity, yet it may safely enough be put off to an uncertain time, I may assure you, you will not long be of this mind. How soon are all the mistakes of men in these matters rectified in a few moments after Death! Rectified I say, but not remedied; your Opinion will be changed, but not your Condition.

8. Do you not every day easily and readily obey the Calls of Satan and your Lusts, whilst God and Conscience are suffered to call and strive in vain? If Satan or your Lusts call you to the Tavern, to the World, and sinful Pleasures, you speedily comply with their Call, and yield a ready obedience: if Pride, Covetousness, or Passion and Revenge call, they need not call twice; and shall God and Conscience call only in vain? Lord, what a Creature is Man become! If a vain Companion call, you have no power to deny him; if God call, you have no ear to hear him.

9. You cannot but observe the obedience and diligence of many others, how seriously, painfully, and assiduously they ply and follow the work of their own Salvation, and yet are no more concerned in the Events and Consequences of these things than you are. Doth it not trouble you when you compare your selves with them? Do not such thoughts as these sometimes arise upon such Observations? Lord, what a difference is there like to be betwixt their end and mine, when there is so apparent a difference in our course and conversation? Doth not God distinguish persons in this World by the frames of their hearts, and tenour of their lives, in order to the great distinction he will make betwixt one and another in the day of Judgment? Have not I as precious a Soul to save or lose as any of them? What is the matter that I sit with folded arms, whilst they are working out their Salvation with fear and trembling? Why should any Man or Woman in the World be more careful for their Souls, than I for mine? Surely its capacity and excellency is equal with theirs, tho' my care and diligence be so unequal.

10. To conclude, God will shortly give you an irresistible call to the Grave, and after that his Voice shall call to you in your Graves, Arise ye dead, and come to Judgment: But woe be to you, woe and alas that ever you were born, if you should hear the Call of God to die, before you have heard and obeyed his Call to Christ! Will your death-bed be easie to you? Can you with any hope or comfort shoot the Gulph of Eternity, before you have done one act for the security of your Souls from the Wrath to come? 'Tis a dreadful thing for a poor Christless Soul to sit quivering upon the Lips of a dying Sinner, not able to ſtay, nor yet to endure a parting pull from the Body in ſuch a caſe as it is.

In a word; If that God that made, and will ſhortly judge you; if the Redeemer that ſhed his invaluable Blood, and now offers you the purchaſes and benefits of it; if you have any love to, or care of your own Souls, which are more worth than the whole World; if you have any value for Heaven, or dread of Hell, then for God's ſake, for Chriſt's ſake, for your precious Soul's ſake, trifle with Heaven and Hell no longer, but be in earneſt to work out your own Salvation with fear and trembling. Could I think of any other Means or Motives to ſecure your Souls from danger, I would ſurely uſe them. Could I reach your Hearts effectually, I would deeply impreſs this great Concern upon them; but I can neither do God's part nor yours; it is ſome eaſe to me, I have in ſincerity (tho' with much imperfection and feebleneſs) done part of my own: the Lord proſper it by the Bleſſing of his Spirit on the Hearts of them that read it. Amen.

A Practical Treatiſe of FEAR.

Wherein the various Kinds, Uſes, Cauſes, Effects, and Remedies thereof are diſtinctly opened and preſcribed, for the Relief and Encouragement of all thoſe that fear God in theſe doubtful and diſtracting Times.

To the Right Worſhipful Sir JOHN HARTOP, Knight and Baronet.

SIR,

AMong all the Creatures God hath made (Devils only excepted) Man is the moſt apt and able to be his own Tormenter; and of all the ſcourges with which he laſheth and afflicteth both his Mind and Body, none is found ſo cruel and intolerable as his own Fears. The worſe the times are like to be, the more need the Mind hath of ſuccour and encouragement, to confirm and fortifie it for hard encounters; but from the worſt proſpect, Fear inflicts the deepeſt and moſt dangerous Wounds upon the Mind of Man, cutting the very Nerves of its paſſive Fortitude and bearing Ability.

The Grief we ſuffer from Evil felt, would be light and eaſy, were it not incenſed by Fear; Reaſon would do much, and Religion more, to demulce and lenifie our Sorrows, did not Fear betray the ſuccours of both. And it is from things to come that this proſpecting Creature raiſeth up to himſelf vaſt Hopes and Fears; If he have a fair and encouraging proſpect of ſerene and proſperous days from the Scheme and Poſition of ſecond Cauſes, Hope immediately fills his heart with chearineſs, and diſplays the Signals of it in his very Face, anſwerable to that fair benign Aſpect of things: but if the face of things to come be threatning and inauſpicious, Fear gains the Aſcendant over the Mind, an unmanly and unchriſtian faintneſs perſuades it, and among the many other Miſchiefs it inflicts, this is not the leaſt, that it brings the Evil of to morrow upon to day, and ſo makes the Duties of to day wholly unſerviceable to the Evils of to morrow; which is as much as if a man having an intricate and difficult buſineſs cut out for the next day, which requires the utmoſt intentions both of his Mind and Body, and (haply) might be proſperouſly managed if both were duly prepared, ſhould lie all the night reſtleſs and diſquieted about the Event, torturing and ſpending himſelf with his own preſaging Fears, ſo that when the day is come, and the buſineſs calls for him, his ſtrength is no way equal to the burden of it, but he faints and fails under it.

There is indeed an excellent uſe that God makes of our Fears to ſtimulate our ſlothful hearts to greater vigilance and preparation for evils; and there is a miſchievous uſe Satan makes of our Fears, to caſt us under Deſpondency and unbecoming Puſillanimity; and I reckon it one of the greateſt Difficulties of Religion to cut by a thred here, and ſo to manage our ſelves under threatning or doubtful Providences, as to be touched with ſo much ſenſe of thoſe approaching evils, as may prepare us to bear them; and yet to enjoy that conſtancy and firmneſs of mind in the worſt times, that may anſwer the excellent Principles we are profeſſedly governed by.

Theſe laſt times are certainly the moſt perilous times; great things are yet to be acted upon the Stage of this World before it be taken down, and the Scena antepenultima, latter-end, I ſay not the laſt, will be a Tragedy. There is an ultima clades adhuc metuenda, a diſmal ſlaughter of the Witneſſes of Chriſt, yet to be expected: the laſt bite of the cruel Beaſt will be deadly, and if we flatter not our ſelves, all things ſeem to be diſpoſing themſelves in the courſe of Providence towards it.

But, Sir, If our Union with Chriſt be ſure in it ſelf, and ſure to us alſo; if Faith give us the daily viſions and Prælibations of the World to come, what well-compoſed Spectators ſhall we be of theſe Tragedies! Let things be toſſed, ſuſque, deque, and the Mountains caſt into the midſt of the Sea, yet then the aſſured Chriſtian may ſing his Song upon Alamoth, A Song compoſed for God's hidden ones. This ſo poiſeth and ſteddies the mind, that we may enjoy the comfort and tranquility of a reſigned will, when others are at their wits end. Pſal. 46.

With deſign to promote this bleſſed frame in my own and others hearts in theſe frightful times, I meditated, and now publiſh this ſmall Tract, to which a dear Friend (from whom I have often had the fair Idea and Character of your excellent Spirit) hath occaſioned the prefixing of your worthy Name; I beg pardon for ſuch an unuſual Preſumption, as alſo your Charity in cenſuring the Faults that will appear in it, when it ſhall come under ſo exact and judicious an eye; it may be uſeful, tho' it be not elegant; its ſeaſonableneſs is its beſt commendation, and its aim better than its performance. As for you, Sir, I hope Faith hath really placed your Soul in that ſerene and happy ſtation where Seneca fanſied Moral Vertue to have placed a good Man, Fatendum eſt, cacumine Olympi conſtitutus, ſupra ventos & procellas, & omnes res humanas. Above the Storms and Tempeſts of this unquiet and diſtracting World. But there are many gracious perſons at this day labouring under their own Fears, and whoſe hearts are ready to fail with looking for thoſe things that are coming to try them that dwell upon the Earth; and poſſibly ſomewhat of relief may be adminiſtred to many ſuch by this Diſcourſe; ſome bivious and ſtaggering Souls may be eſtabliſhed; ſoul-diſcouraged and fainting Spirits may be revived; ſome doubts may be diſſolved that have long perplexed gracious hearts. Whatever uſe it may be of to any, I humbly call in the aid of your Prayers to my own for a ſpecial Bleſſing upon it, and remain, Sir, Yours to honour, love, and ſerve you,

John Flavell.

CHAP. I.

Wherein the Text and Context are opened, the Doctrines propounded, and the general Method stated.

THere is not more diversity found in the outward features, than in the inward tempers and dispositions of men: some are as timorous as Hares, and start at every sound, or yelp of a dog; others are bold as Lyons, and can face dangers without trembling. Some fear more than they ought, and some before they ought, and others when they ought not at all. The carnal person fears man, not God; the strong Christian fears God, not man; the weak Christian fears man too much, and God too little.

There is a Fear which is the effect of sin, springing from guilt, and hurrying the Soul into more guilt; and there is a fear which is the effect of grace, springing from our love to God and his interest, and driving the Soul to God in the way of duty. The less fear any man hath, the more happiness, except it be of that fear which is our happiness and our excellency.

It cannot be said of any man as it is said of Leviathan, Job 41. 33. that he is made without fear; those that have most fortitude, are not without some fears: And when the Church is in the storms of Persecution, and almost covered with the waves, the stoutest Passengers in it may suffer as much this boisterous passion within, as from the storm without; and all for want of throughly believing, or not seasonably remembring, that the Lord High Admiral of all the Ocean, and Commander of all the Winds is on board the Ship, to steer and to preserve it in the storm.

A pregnant instance hereof is furnished to our hands in this Context, where you find the best men trembling in expectation of the worst events both on the Church in general, and themselves in particular. Their hearts were moved like the trees of the wood shaken with the wind, ch. 7. v. 2.

And indeed if their dangers were to be measured by sense only, their fears were not above the value of the cause, yea, their dangers seemed to exceed their fears; for it was the invasion of a foreign and cruel enemy, even the Assyrian, who were to break in upon them like a breach of the Sea, and overflow the land of Immanuel, v. 7. The Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river strong and many; even the King of Assyria and all his glory, and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks. And as the 7 ver. resembles the enemy to waters which quickly drown the country into which they break, so the 8 ver. tells you, how far they should prevail, and how near it should come to a general and total ruine. He shall pass through Judah, he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck, and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel. All the body should be under water, except the capital City, which remained above water.

Having thus described the power and success of the invading enemy, in the 9 and 10 verses he derides their plots and combinations, assuring them that altho' God for just and holy ends would permit them for a time to afflict his people, yet in the issue of all their Councils and Cruelties should recoil upon themselves, and end in their own ruine and confusion.

And thereupon Isaiah is commanded to encourage the feeble and trembling hearts of such as feared God in those distracted and frightful times, v. 11, 12, 13. The Lord spake unto me with a strong hand, and instructed me that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying, Say ye not a confederacy, &c.

God speaking to the Prophet by a strong hand, imports the strong and mighty impression that was made upon his heart by the Spirit of Prophecy: wherein the Lord did as it were lay his hand upon him, as a man doth upon one to whom he is about to impart some special secret in a familiar way, q. d. Come hither Isaiah (drawing him to him at the same instant with a friendly hand) take deep notice of what I am now to give thee in charge, both with respect to thy self, and my elect people that follow thee; Say not you a confederacy to all them to whom this people shall say a confederacy, (i. e.) let not these frightful tidings work upon you, as they do upon Ahaz, and the common multitude with him, who are so terrified and scared with the approaching dangers, that all their councils, thoughts and studies are taken up in preventing it, by making a confederacy or league with the Assyrian; or if that cannot be, then with some foreign power that may secure them against the Assyrian: but their eyes are not at all to me for protection and deliverance: they expect more from Egypt than from Heaven, from a broken reed than from the rock of ages. Fear not you their fear; their fear drives them from God to the Creature; it first distracts them, and then ensnares them. Hos. 5. 13.

But on the contrary, see that thou, and all the faithful in the land with thee, do sanctifie me in your hearts, and make me your fear and your dread, (i. e.) rely upon me by faith in this day of trouble, and see that you give me the glory of my Wisdom, Power, and Faithfulness; by relying intirely upon those my Attributes engaged for you in so many tried promises: and do not betake your selves to such sinful and vain shifts as those do that have no interest in me, nor experience of me. This is the general scope and design of the Text; wherein more particularly you have,

1. An evil practice prohibited.
2. An effectual remedy prescribed.
3. A singular encouragement to apply that remedy.

1. An

1. An evil Practice prohibited, Fear not their fear, neither be afraid. This is that sinful principle, which was but too apt to incline them to do as others did, scil. to say a confederacy. Sinful fears are apt to drive the best men into sinful compliances, and indirect Shifts to help themselves.

Their fear may be understood two ways;

1. Subjectively.
2. Effectively.

1. Subjectively, for the self same fear wherewith the carnal and unbelieving Jews feared: a fear that enslaved them in bondage of Spirit; a fear that is the fruit of sin, a sin in its own Nature, the cause of much Sin to them, and a just punishment of God upon them for their other sins.

2. Effectively, Let not your fear produce in you such mischievous Effects as their fear doth; to make you forget God, magnifie the creature, prefer your own wits and policies to the Almighty power, and unspotted faithfulness of God; if you say, but how shall we help it;

2. Why in the next place you have, An effectual Remedy prescribed, But sanctifie the Lord of hosts himself, and let him be your fear and your dread. The fear of God will swallow up the fear of Man, a reverential awe and dread of God will extinguish the slavish fear of the creature; as the Sun-shine puts out fire; or as one Fire fetches out another: so will this fear fetch out that.

By sanctifying the Lord of Hosts himself, is meant a due ascription of the Glory of his Sovereign power, wisdom and faithfulness, not only in verbal and professed acknowledgments thereof, but especially in those internal acts of affiance, resignation, and intire dependence on him, which as they are the choicest respects of the creature towards its God, and give him the greatest glory, so they are certainly the most beneficial and comfortable acts we can perform for our own peace and safety in times of danger.

If a man do really look to God in a day of trouble and fear, as to the Lord of Hosts, (i. e.) one that governs all the creatures, and all their actions; at whose beck and command all the Armies of Heaven and Earth are, and then can rely upon the care and love of this God, as a child in danger of trouble reposes on, and commits himself with greatest Confidence to the care and protection of his Father: O what peace, what rest must necessarily follow upon this! Who would be afraid to pass through the midst of armed Troops and Regiments, whilst he knows that the General of that Army is his own Father? The more power this filial fear of God obtains in our Hearts, the less will you dread the power of the Creature. When the Dictator ruled at Rome, then all other Officers ceased; and so in a great measure will all other fears where the fear of God is Dictator in the heart. This is the Remedy.

3. And to enable us to apply this remedy in the worst and most difficult times, we have a singular encouragement proposed. If we will thus sanctifie the Lord of Hosts himself, by such an acknowledgment of, and child-like dependence on him in times of danger, then he will be to us for a Sanctuary (i. e.) he will surely protect, defend and provide for us in the worst times and cases, then will the Lord Create upon every dwelling-place of mount Zion and upon her Assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence, and there shall be a Tabernacle for a shadow in the day-time from the heat, and for a place of refuge and for a covert from the storm, and from rain. Let the winds roar, the rain beat, the lightnings flash, you are in safety, and have a good roof over your heads. Hence these two Points of Doctrine offer themselves.

Asili loco.

Præstabit vos inaccessos, & inviolabiles ab his regibus.

Doct. I. That the best men are too apt to be overcome with slavish fears in times of imminent distress and danger.

Doct. II. That the fear of God is the most effectual means to extinguish the sinful fear of man, and to secure us from danger.

These two Points take in the Substance and Scope of the Text, but because I design to treat in the following Chapters, of the Kinds, Nature, Uses, Causes, Effects, and Remedies of Fear, I shall not distinctly prosecute them, but proceed in this order in the following Chapters.

CHAP. II.

Wherein the kinds and nature of Fear are opened, and particularly the distracting slavish Fear of Creatures.

Sect. I. THERE is a threefold Fear found in Men, viz.

1. Natural
2. Sinful
3. Religious

} Fear.

Natural Fear, of which all are Partakers that partake of the common nature, not one excepted.

Natural Fear is the trouble or perturbation of mind from the apprehension of approaching evil, or impending danger.

The Greek word φόβος comes from a Verb that signifies Flight; this is not always sinful, but it is always the Fruit and Consequent of sin. Since sin entered into our Nature there is no shaking off Fear, no sooner had Adam trangressed, but he feared and fled, hiding himself among the Trees of the Garden, Gen. 3. 8. when he had trangressed the Covenant, he presently feared the Execution of the Curse. First he eats, then he hides. And his afflictive Passion is from him transmitted and derived to all his Children.

φέβομαι fugio, perfect. med. πέφοβα, inde φόβος timor, fuga.

To this natural Fear it pleased our Lord Jesus Christ to subject himself in the Days of his Flesh, he was afraid, yea, he was sore amazed, Mark 14. 33. For though his humane Nature was absolutely free from sin, yet he came in the likeness of sinful flesh, Rom. 8. 3.

This Fear creates great Trouble and Perturbation in the Mind, 1 John 4. 18. Fear hath torment; in proportion to the Danger is the Fear, and in proportion to the fear, the Trouble and Distraction of the Mind, if the Fear be exceeding great, Reason is displaced, and can conduct us no farther, as the Psalmist speaks of Mariners in a Storm. they are at their wits end, Psal. 107. 27. or as it is varied in the Margin, all Wisdom is swallowed up, and this is the meaning of Deut. 28 25. that they should go out against their Enemies one way, and flee before them seven ways, (i. e.) so great shall be the Fright and Distraction that they shall attempt now one way, then another, striving every way, but liking none; for Fear so far betrays betrays the Succours of Reason, that their Counsels are always in Uncertainty and at a Loss, and the usual Voice of a Man in this Condition is, I know not what to do, I know not which way to turn.

Evil is the Object of Fear, and the greater the Evil is, the stronger the Fear must needs be, and therefore the terrors of an awakened and terrified conscience must be allowed to be the greatest of Terrors, because in that Case a Man hath to do with a great and terrible God, and is scared with Apprehensions of his infinite and eternal Wrath, than which no Evil is or can be greater. You see at what height Christ's Conflict with it wrought, when it made him sweat as it were great Clots of Blood. Of all temporal Evils Death is the greatest, and therefore Job calls it the King of Terrors, Job 18. 14. or the most Terrible of Terribles. Thuanus relates two strange Instances of the Fear of Death: One of a certain Captain who was so terrified with the Fear of Death, that he poured out a kind of bloody Sweat from all Parts of his Body. Another is of a young Man condemned for a small Matter by Sixtus Quintus, who was so vehemently terrified with the Fears of Death, that he shed a kind of bloody Tears. These are strange and terrible Effects of Fear, but vastly short of what Christ felt and suffered, who grapled with a far greater Evil than the Terrors of Death, even the Wrath of an incensed God poured out to the full, and that immediately upon him.

Dux quidam indigno mortis metu, adeo concussus fuit, ut sanguineum sudorem toto corpore fudit. Hist. lib. 11.

Juvenis ob levem causam à Sixto V. damnatus, præ doloris vehementia fertur lacrymas cruentes fudisse, lib. 80.

But yet Evil, as Evil is rather the Object of Hatred than of Fear, it must be an imminent or near approaching Evil, which we see not how to escape or put by, that provokes Fear, and rowzes this Lion. And therefore the Saints in Glory are perfectly freed from Fear, because they are out of the Reach of all Danger: Nor do we that are here in the midst of Evils fear them till we see them approaching us, and we see not how to avoid them. To hear of Fire, Plague, or the Sword in the Indies, doth not affright us, because the Evil is so remote from us; its far enough off, we are in no danger of it; but when it is in the Town, much more when within our own Dwellings, we tremble. Evil hurts us not by a simple Apprehension of its nature, but of its union; and all Propinquity is a Degree of Union, as a learned Divine speaks.

Dr. Reynolds.

And it's worth Observation, that all carnal Security is maintained by putting Evils at a great distance from us; as it is noted of those secure Sensualists, Amos 6. 3. They put far from them the evil day. The Meaning is not that they did, or could put the Evil one minute farther from them in Reality, but only by Imagination and Fancy; they shut their own Eyes, and would not see it, lest it should give an unpleasing Interruption to their Mirth; and this is the Reason why Death puts the Living into no more Fear, because it is apprehended as remote, and at an undetermined distance, whereas if the precise time of Death were known, especially if that time were near, it would greatly scare and terrifie.

This is the Nature of natural Fear, the Infelicity of Nature, which we all groan under the Effects of: It is in all the Creatures in some degree, but among them all none suffer more by it than Man, for hereby he becomes his own Tormentor; nor is any Torment greater than this when it prevails in a high degree upon us. Indeed all Constitutions and Tempers admit not the same degrees of fear; some are naturally courageous and stout, like the Lion for Magnanimity and Fortitude; others exceeding timorous and faint-hearted, like the Hare or Hart, one little Dog will make a hundred of them fear and flee before him. Luther was a Man of great Courage and Presence of Mind in dangers, Melancthon very timorous and subject to Despondency. Thus the Difference betwixt them is expressed in one of Luther's Letters to him:

Epist. ad Melanc. Ann. 1549.

'I am well-nigh a secure Spectator 'of Things, and esteem not any thing these fierce 'threatning Papists. I much dislike those anxious 'Cares which as thou writest do almost consume 'thee. There might be as great a Stock of Grace in one as in the other, but Melancthon's Grace had not the Advantage of so stout and courageous a Temper of Body and Mind as Luther's had. Thus briefly of natural Fear.

Sect. II. There is a Fear which is formally and intrinsically sinful, not only our Infelicity, but our Fault, not our simple Affliction and Burden, but our great Evil and Provocation; and such is the Fear here dissuaded, called their fear (i. e.) the Fear wherewith carnal and unbelieving Men do fear, when Dangers threaten them; and the sinfulness of it lies in five Things.

1. In the Spring and Cause of it, which is Unbelief, and an unworthy Distrust of God, when we dare not rely upon the Security of a Divine Promise, nor trust to God's Protection in the way of our Duty. This was the very Case of that People, Isa. 30. 15. This saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in returning and rest shall ye be saved, in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength; and ye would not, but ye said no, for we will flee upon horses; therefore shall ye flee: and we will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue you be swift, one thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one, &c.

Thus stood the Case, Sennacherib with a mighty Host was ready to invade them; this puts them into a Fright; in this Distress God assures them by the Mouth of the Prophet, that in returning and rest they should be saved, in quietness and confidence should be their strength. The meaning is, never perplex your selves with various Counsels and Projects to secure your selves under the Wings of Egypt or any other Protector, but with a composed, quiet, and calm Temper of Mind rest upon my Power by Faith, take my Promises for your Security, this shall be your Salvation and your strength, more effectual to your Preservation than Armies, Garisons, or any Creature-defence in the World; one act of Faith shall do you better Service than Pharaoh and all his Forces can do.

But ye said no, q. d. we dare not trust to that, a good horse will do us more Service at such a time than a good Promise; Egypt is a better Security in their Eye than Heaven. This is the Fruit of gross Infidelity. And as wicked Men do thus forsake God, and cleave to the Creature in time of Trouble, so there is found a Spice of this distrustfulness of God producing Fear and Trouble in the best Men. It was in the Disciples themselves, Mat. 8. 26. Why are you fearful, O ye of little Faith? A Storm had befallen them at Sea, and danger began to threaten them, and presently you find a Storm within, their fears were more boisterous than the Winds, and had more need of calming than the Sea;

Sea; and it was all from their unbelief, as Christ tells them; the less their Faith the greater their Fear. If a man can but rely upon God in a promise, so far as he is enabled to believe, so far he will reckon himself well secured. Illyricus in his Catalogue of the witnesses relates this remarkable passage of one Andreas Proles, a godly aged Divine who lived somewhat before Luther, and taught many Points soundly, according to his light then, he was called to a Synod at Millain, and afterwards in the Lateran, where opposing a proposition of the Pope about burdening the Church with a new Holiday, he was brought into much danger, and escaping very narrowly from Rome, he bought him a Bow and Weapons, but as he was riding, he began to bethink himself, That the cause was not his but God's, and not to be maintained with sword and bow, and if it were, yet what could such a decrepit old man do with weapons? Upon which he threw away his weapons, committed himself, his cause, and his journey to God, relied upon his promises more than sword or bow, and came home safe, and afterward died quietly in his bed.

Illyr. Cat. Test. lib. 19.

2. The sinfulness of Fear lies in the excess and immoderacy of it, when we fear more than we ought? for it may be truly said of our fears as the Philosopher speaks of waters, difficile suis terminis continentur, 'tis hard to keep them within bounds, every bush is a Bear, every petty trouble puts us into a fright, our fear exceeds the value and merit of the cause. 'Tis a great sin to love or fear any creature above the rate of a creature, as if they were masters of all our temporal and eternal comforts. Thus when the men of Israel heard of the confederacy and conjunction of their enemies against them, the Text saith, their hearts were moved, as the Trees of the wood are moved with the wind, Isai. 7. 1. or as we use to say proverbially, like an Aspine leaf: 'tis a sad sight to behold men shaking and quivering as the trees do on a windy day, yet thus did the house of David, partly through the remembrance of past calamities, but especially through incredulity in God's protecting care in their present and future dangers? yea, this is too often the fault of good men in creature fear, as well as in creature love, to transgress the due bounds of moderation. 'Tis noted of Jacob though a man of much Faith, and one that had the sweetest encouragements to strengthen it from former experiences, and God's gracious promises to be with him; yet when Esau was come nigh, he was greatly afraid and distressed, Gen. 32. 7. It was but a little before that God had graciously appeared to him, and sent a Royal Guard of Angels to attend him, even two hosts or armies of Angels, v. 1, 2. and yet as soon as Esau approached him, he was afraid, greatly afraid, yea, greatly afraid and distressed, notwithstanding such an encouraging vision as this was.

3. The sinfulness of our Fears lies in the inordinacy of them; to fear it more than we ought is bad enough, but to magnifie its power above the power of a creature; to exalt the power of any creature by our fears, and give it such an ascendant over us, as if it had an Arbitrary and absolute dominion over us, or over our comforts, to do with them what it pleased; this is to put the creature out of its own Class and Rank, into the place of God, and is therefore a very sinful and evil fear.

To trust in any creature as if it had the power of a God to help us, or to fear any creature, as if it had the power of a God to hurt us, is exceeding sinful, and highly provoking to God. This inordinate trust is taxed and condemned in Isai. 31. 3. They would needs go down to Egypt for help, and trust in their horses and horsemen, because they were strong (i. e.) in their opinion they were able to secure them against all those dangers the Prophet from the Lord's own mouth had threatened them with; but to take them off from this sinful and inordinate dependance on the creature, he tells them, v. 3. Now the Egyptians are men and not God, and their horses flesh, and not spirit, when the Lord shall stretch forth his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down; and they shall fail together, q. d. 'Tis a sinful and dangerous mistake for one creature, to give that trust and dependance to another creature which is due only to God, to look upon men as if they were Gods, and horses as if they were Spirits: All creatures, even the strongest, are but as the Hop, the Vine, or the Ivy, if they clasp about the pole, the wall, or the oak; they may be supported, as you also may by leaning upon God, but if they depend, and intangle themselves one upon another, as you and the Egyptians do, you shall fail, and fall all together.

And as one creature is apt inordinately and sinfully thus to trust and lean upon another; so there is as great a proneness in the creatures inordinately to fear and dread each other, as if the creature feared were rather a God, than a Man, rather a Spirit than Flesh; and thus our fear magnifies and exalts the creature, and puts it as it were into the room and place of God. This was the Sin which God rebuked in his own people, Isai. 51. 12, 13. I even I am he that comforteth thee, who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the Son of Man which shall be made as grass, and forgettest the Lord thy maker, &c. See how fear exalts man, and depresseth God, it thinks upon the noxious power of men so much, that it forgets the saving power of God, as if that stood for nothing; thus a mortal worm that shall perish as the grass, eclipses the glory of the great God, that stretched forth the Heavens, and laid the Foundations of the Earth.

And this was the evil against which Christ cautioned his own Disciples in Matth. 10. 28. Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. q. d. Have a care you never fear any man, be he armed with never so much power, and rage; as if the power of making or marring you for ever were in his hands, as if you lay at the feet of his will and pleasure to be saved or ruined for ever. Fear not him that can only touch your bodies as if he would damn your Souls, invest not any creature with the sovereign and incommunicable power of God.

4. The sinfulness of Fear consists in the distracting influence it hath upon the hearts of men, whereby it discomposeth and unfits them for the discharge of their duties.

Fear sometimes puts men into such an hurry, and their thoughts into such disorder, that for the present they have scarce any succour or relief from their graces, or from their reason; for under an extraordinary fear both grace and reason like the wheels of a watch wound above its due height, stand still, and have no motion at all. It is rare to find a man of that largeness and constancy of heart and mind in a day of fear, that was found in Jehoshaphat, 2 Chro. 20. 2, 3. Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, there cometh a great multitude multitude against thee from beyond the sea, on this side Syria, and behold they be in Hazazon-Tamar which is Engedi, and Jehoshaphat feared, and set himself to seek the Lord. He set himself (i. e.) he composed and fixed his heart for Prayer in the time of so great a fright, and terrible an alarm: But it is rare to find such constancy and evenness of mind as this; in like cases it is with most in great frights, as the Prophet describes the condition of the Jews, Isaiah 22. 2, 3. when the City of Jerusalem was besieged and the Enemy came under the walls of it; that which a little before was the joyous City, or as some read the revelling City, is now in such a panick fear, that it is full of stirs and tumults, some run up to the tops of the houses either to hide or bewail themselves, or take a view of the dreadful Enemy without; others prevent the sword of the Enemy, and die by fear before hand, their own apprehensions of misery killed them before the sword of any other Enemy once touched them, but you read of none that ran into their closets to seek the Lord; the City was full of stirs, but not of Prayers; alas, Fear made them cry to the Mountains, rather than to God, ver. 5. The best Men find it hard to keep their thoughts from wandering and their minds from distraction in the greatest calm of peace, but a thousand times harder in the hurries and tumults of Fear.

5. The sinfulness of Fear consists in the power it hath to dispose and incline men to the use of sinful means to put by their danger, and to cast them into the hands and power of temptation. The fear of man bringeth a snare, Prov. 29. 25. or puts and lays a snare before him; Satan spreads the net, and Fear like the stalking horse drives men right into it. It was Fear which drew Abraham that great Believer into the snare of Dissimulation, to the great Disparagement of Religion, for it was somewhat an odd sight to see Abimilech an Heathen so schooling an Abraham for it, as he did Gen. 20. 9. And for the same evil you find God chiding his People, in Isaiah 57. 11. And of whom hast thou been afraid, or feared that thou hast lyed and hast not remembred me? There is a double lye occasioned by Fear, one in words, another in deeds: Hypocrisie is a lye done, a practical lye, and our Church History abounds with sad Examples of Dissimulation thro' Fear: 'tis Satan's great engine to make his Temptations victorious and successful with Men.

6. There is an holy and laudable Fear, a Fear which is our treasure, not our torment, the chief ornament of the Soul, its beauty and perfection, not its infelicity or sin, viz. the awful filial Fear of God; natural Fear is a pure or simple passion of the Soul; sinful Fear is the disordered and corrupt passion of the Soul; but this is the natural passion sanctified, and thereby changed and baptized into the Name and Nature of a Spiritual Grace. This Fear is also mentioned in my Text, and prescribed as an Antidote against sinful Fears; it devours carnal Fears as Moses Serpent did those of the Enchanters. It's one of the forest Judgments to be in the Fear of man day and night, Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67. and one of the sweetest Mercies to be in the Fear of God all the day long, Prov. 23. 17. The Fear of men shortens our days, Isaiah 22. 34. but the fear of the Lord prolongeth our days, Prov. 10. 27. The fear of the Lord is a Fountain of Life, Prov. 14. 27 But the Fear of Man a Fountain of Mischiefs and Miseries. By the Fear of the Lord men depart from evil, Prov. 16. 6. but by the Fear of Men, Men run themselves into evil Prov. 29. 25.

This Fear is a gracious habit or principle planted by God in the Soul, whereby the Soul is kept under an holy awe of the Eye of God, and from thence is inclined to perform and do what pleaseth him, and to shun and avoid whatsoever he forbids and hates.

1. It is planted in the Soul as a permanent and fixed habit, it is not of the natural growth and production of man's heart, but of supernatural infusion and implantation. Jer. 32. 40. I will put my fear into their inward parts. To fear man is natural, but to fear God is wholly supernatural

2. This gracious Fear puts the Soul under the awe of God's eye, Psal 119. 161. My heart standeth in awe of thy word. 'Tis the reproach of the servants of men to be eye-servants, but it is the praise and honour of God's Servants to be so.

3. This respect to the eye of God inclines them to perform and do whatsoever pleaseth him, and is commanded by him; hence fearing God, and working righteousness are connected and linked together, Acts 10. 35. if we truly fear God, we dare not but do the things he commands, and if his fear be exalted in our hearts to an high degree, it will enable us to obey him in duties accompanied with deepest self-denial, Gen. 22. 12. Now I know thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

4. This Fear engageth, and in some degree inableth the Soul, in which it is, to shun and avoid whatsoever is displeasing to God, and forbidden by him; in this Job discovered himself a true fearer of God, he would not touch what God had forbidden, and therefore was honoured with this excellent Character, He was one that feared God, and eschewed evil, Job 1. 3.

And thus of the several Kinds of Fear.

CHAP. III.

Shewing the various Uses of Fear, both Natural, Sinful, and Religious, in the Government of the world by Providence.

HAving taken a brief View of the several kinds and sorts of Fear that are found among men, our next work will be to open the Uses of them in the Government of this World, for one way or other they all subserve the most wise and holy purposes of God therein. And we will first enquire into

1. The Use of natural Fear.

Which if we well consider, it will be found exceeding necessary and useful to make man a governable creature by Law, and consequently the order, comfort and tranquility of the world necessarily depends upon it. How immorigerous and intractable would the corruptions of man's nature make him, and uncapable of any moral restraint from the most flagitious and barbarous crimes, had not God planted such a passion as this is his nature, which like a bridle curbs in the corrupt propensions thereof. If fear did not clap its manacles and fetters upon the wild and boisterous lusts of men, they would certainly bear down all milder motives and break loose from all ingenuous bands of restraint, the world would inevitably be filled with disorders,

Est timor instar freni quo equus regitur, hic metus si toleretur, omnia conciderent. Lavat. in Pro. 29. v. 25.

tumults, rapines, theft, murders, and all manner of rumblenness, and unrighteousness, nec Pisces ab hospite tutus, Men would become like the Fishes of the Sea as the Prophet complains, Habak. 1. 14. where the greater swallow up a multitude of the smaller Fry alive at one gulp; Propriety could not be maintained in the World, no Man's Person could be safe or inviolate; power and opportunity to do mischief would measure out to Men their Lot and Inheritance, and consequently all Societies must disband and break up. We say, and the Observation is sure, He that fears not his own, may easily be master of another man's life. 'Tis Law, and fear of Punishment that keeps the World in order; Men are afraid to do evil, because they are afraid to suffer it; they see the Law hath inseparably link'd penal and moral Evils together; if they will presume upon the one, they must necessarily pull the other upon them too: and this keeps them in some Order and Decorum; there would be no Order or Security without Laws: but if Laws had no annexed Penalties to enforce them, and give them their Sanction, as good there were no Laws; they would have no more Power to restrain the Corruptions of Mens Hearts, than the new Cords or green Withs had to bind Sampson. And yet, if the severest Penalties in the World were annexed to, or appointed by the Law, they could signifie nothing to the Ends of Government without Fears. This is that tender sensible Power or Passion on which Threatnings work, and so brings Men under moral Government and Restraint, Rom. 13, 3, 4. Magistrates are a terror to evil works; wilt thou not then be afraid of the power? but if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain. And by this means a world of Evil is restrained and prevented in the World.

Intellectualis creatura eo ipso quod creatura est, superiorem habet, cujus providentiæ & ordinationi subjacet; & qua intellectualis est capax est gubernationis moralis, qua dirigatur ad bonum, & arceatur à malo; & talis lex est illi simpliciter necessaria, ut convenienter suæ naturæ vivere possit. Suarez de leg. pt. 1. c. 3.

It was the Custom and Policy of the Persians (I cannot say laudable) at the Death of their Kings to give every Man Liberty for the space of five Days to do what he would; and such Mischiefs were done every where by the unbridled Lusts of Men in those Days, that it made the People long and pray for the Instalment of their next King, it exceedingly endeared Government to them: Blessed be God for Law and Government, for curbing by this Means the raging Lusts of the Hearts of Men, and procuring Rest and Comfort for us in the World this way.

2. The Use of sinful Fear.

This is formally evil and sinful in its own nature, as well as the fruit of sin, and off-spring of sinful nature, yet the Lord knows how to overrule it in his providential Government of the world to his own wise and holy purposes; and he doth so,

First, by making it his scourge to punish his Enemies. If men will not fear God, they shall fear Men, yea, they shall be made a terror to themselves. And indeed it is a dreadful punishment for God to deliver a Man up into the hands of his own fears. I think there is scarce a greater torment to be found in the World, than for a Man to be his own Tormentor, and his mind made a Rack, an Engine of Torture to his Body. We read in 2 Kings 17. 25. that God sent Lions among the People, but certainly that is not so bad as for God to let loose our own Fears upon us. No Lion is so cruel as this Passion, and therefore David esteemed it so great a Deliverance to be delivered from all his Fears, Psal. 34. 4. It is a dreadful threatning which is recorded in Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67. against the disobedient and rebellious, Thou shalt find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest, but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind; and thy life shall hang in doubt before thee, and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have no assurance of thy life; in the morning thou shalt say, would God it were even, and at even thou shalt say, would God it were morning, for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. When Fear hath once seized the Heart, you may see deaths colours displayed in the Face. What a dismal Life do they live, who have neither any Peace by Day, nor Rest by Night, but wearisome Days and Nights are appointed them! The Days of such Men are tiresome Days; they wish for the Night, hoping it may give them a little rest; but their Fears go to Bed with them, their Hearts pant, and meditate Terror; and then, Oh that it were Day again!

Calamitosus est animus futuri anxius, & ante miserias miser. Sen.

2. By Fear God punisheth his Enemies in Hell: it is that flagellum Dei, terrible Scourge of God, by which a great part of the Torment of the Damned is inflicted on them. Divines use to make this tripartite distinction of Hell Torments, and tell us God punishes the Wicked there partly by remembrance what is past, viz. the Mercies and Means they once had, but are there irrecoverably lost, partly by the Sense of Things present, even the Wrath of God overlaying Soul and Body, and partly by the Fear of what is to come; and sure this is not the least part of the Misery of those wretched Cast-aways. Oh that fearful Expectation of fiery Indignation! more and more of God's Wrath still coming on as the Waves of the Seas, thrusting forward one another; yea, this is that which makes the Devils tremble, Jam. 2. 19. φρίσσουσι; the Word signifies such a Noise as the Roar of the Sea, or the Roaring of the Waves when they break themselves against the Rocks, and this is occasioned by the Fears which are continually held as a Whip over them.

3. Providence makes use of the slavish Fears and Terrors of wicked Men to dissipate and scatter them when they are combined and confederated against the People of God; by these have they been routed and put to flight when there hath been no other visible Power to do it: It's said, Psal. 78. 55. God cast out the Heathen before his People Israel; and by what means were those mighty Nations subdued? not by the Strength or Multitudes of the Israelites, but by their own fears; for it is said, Josh. 24. 11, 12. The Lord sent the hornet before them, which drave them out. These Hornets were the Fears and Terrors of their own guilty and presaging Minds, which buzzed and swarmed in their own Breasts, and stung them to the Heart worse than the Swords of the Israelites could could do. Theodoret relates a memorable Story of Sapores King of Persia, who had besieged many Christians in the City Nisibis, and put them to great straits, so that little hopes of Safety were left them; but in the depth of their Distress God sent an Army of Hornets and Gnats among their Enemies, which got into the Trunks of their Elephants and Ears and Nostrils of their Horses, which so enraged them, that they brake their Harness, cast their Riders, and put all to the Rout, by which Providence the Christians escaped. These Hornets were terrible to them; but Fears, which are Hornets in a Figure, are ten thousand times more terrible: they will quell and sink the very Hearts of the stoutest Men; yea, they will quickly make those that in their Pride and Haughtiness took themselves rather to be Gods and Almighty Powers, to know themselves to be but Men, as it is Psal. 9. 20. Put them in fear, O Lord, that they may know themselves to be but men: One Fright will scare them out of a thousand fond Conceits and idle Dreams.

Sapores Rex Persarum cum urbem Nisibin qua erant Christiani, obsedisset, eamque affligeret, magna vis Crabronum, & Culicum repente venit, & in Promuscides cavas Elephantorum consedit, complevitq; aures Equorum, ita ut sessores excusserint, & turbatos ordines in fugam converterint. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 20.

3. The Use of religious Fear.

If God can make such Fruit to grow upon such a Bramble as the sinful slavish Fear of Man is, what may we expect from religious Fear, a choice Root of his own Spirits planting? The Uses and Benefits hereof are innumerable and inestimable; but I must contract, and will only instance in three special Uses of it.

1. By this Fear the People of God are excited to, and confirmed in the way of their Duty, Eccles. 12. 13. Fear God, and keep his Commandments. It is Custos utriusque Tabulæ, the Keeper of both Tables, because the Duties of both Tables are influenced by it. 'Tis this Fear of God that makes us have a due Respect to all his Commands, and it is as powerful to confirm us in, as it is to excite us to our Duties, Jer. 32. 40. I will put my fear into their inwards, and they shall not depart from me. Look, as he that soweth doth not regard the Winds, but goes on in his Labour whatever Weather the Face of Heaven threatens; so he that fears God will be found in the way of his Duty, let the Aspect of the Times be never so lowring and discouraging; and truly, this is no small Advantage in times of Frights and Distractions. Slavish Fear sets a Man upon the Devil's Ground, Religious Fear upon God's Ground: and how vast an odds is there in the Choice of our Ground, when we are to endure a great Fight of Affliction!

2. Another excellent use of this Fear, is to preserve the Purity and Peace of our Consciences, by preventing Grief and Guilt therein, Prov. 16. 6. The fear of the Lord is to depart from evil. See how it kept Joseph, Gen. 39. 9 and Nehemiah, ch. 5. 15. And this Benefit is invaluable, especially in a Day of outward Calamity and Distress. Look in what Degree the Fear of God prevails in our Hearts, answerable thereunto will the Serenity, Peace and Quietness of our Consciences be; and proportionable unto that will our Strength and Comfort be in the evil Day, and our Courage and Confidence to look Dangers in the Face.

3. To conclude, A principal Use of this Fear of God is to awaken us to make timely Provisions for future Distresses, that whensoever they come, they may not come by way of Surprize upon us. Thus Noah, being moved with Fear, prepared an Ark, Heb. 11. 7. It was the Instrument of his and his Families Salvation. Some Men owe their Death to their Fears; but good Men in a sense owe their Lives to their Fears; sinful Fears have slain some, and godly Fears have saved others. A wise man feareth, and departeth from evil, (saith Solomon) but a fool rageth and is confident. His Fears give him a timely Alarm before the Enemy fall into his Quarters and beat them up, by this means he hath time to get into his Chambers of Security and Rest, before the Storm fall; but the Fool rageth and is confident, he never fears till he begin to feel; yea. most times he is past all Hope before he begin to have any Fears.

These are some of the Uses God makes of the several kinds of Fear.

CHAP. IV.

Wherein the Springs and Causes of sinful Fear are searched out, and the Evils of such Fears thence discovered.

Sect. I. HAving shewn before the Kinds and Uses of Fear, it remains that next we search out the Springs from which these Waters of Marah are derived, and fed. And,

1 Cause. First, we shall find the sinful Fears of most good Men to spring out of their Ignorance, and the Darkness of their own Minds. All Darkness disposes to Fear, but none like intellectual Darkness. You read, Cant. 3. 8. how Solomon's Life-guard had every Man his Sword upon his Thigh, because of fear in the night. The Night is the frightful Season, in the Dark every Bush is a Bear; we sometimes smile by Day, to see what silly Things those were that scared us in the Night: So it is here; were our Judgment but duly informed, how soon would our Hearts be quieted?

Now there is a five-fold Ignorance out of which our Fears are generated.

1. Ignorance of God. Either we know not, or at least duly consider not his Almighty Power, vigilant Care, unspotted Faithfulness, and how they are all engaged by Covenant for his People. This Ignorance and Inconsiderateness lay at the Root of their Fears, Isa. 40. 27, 28. My way (saith Sion) is hid from the Lord, and my judgment passed over from God: Words imparting a suspicion that God had left her out of the Account of his Providence, and the Catalogue of those whom he would look after, and take Care for.

But were it once throughly understood and believed what Power there is in God's Hand to defend us, what Tenderness in his Bowels to commiserate us, what Faithfulness in all the Promises in which they are made over to us, Oh how quiet and calm would our Hearts be! Our Courage would quickly up, and our Fears down.

2. Our Ignorance of Men generates our Fears of Men; we fear them because we do not know them; if we understood them better, we would fear them less; we over-value them, and then fright at them: They say the Lion is painted more fierce than he is; I am sure our Fancy paints out Man more dreadful than indeed he is; If wicked

Men, especially if Multitudes of wicked Men, be confederated against us, our Hearts quail, and presently apprehend inevitable Ruine. The floods of the ungodly made me afraid, saith David, (i. e.) the Multitudes of them, which he thought, like a Flood, or mighty Torrent of Water, must needs sweep away such a Straw, such a Feather as he was before them; but mean time we know or consider not that they have no Power against us, but what is given them from above, and that it's usual with God to cramp their Hands, and clap on the Bands of Restraint upon them, when their Hearts are fully set in them to do mischief: did we see and consider them as they are in the Hand of our God, we should not tremble at them as we do.

3. Ignorance of our selves, and the Relations we have to God, creates slavish Fears in our Hearts. For did Believers but throughly understand how dear they are to God, what Relations they sustain to him, of what Account and Value they are in his Eyes, and how well they are secured by his faithful Promises and gracious Presence, they would not start and tremble at every Noise, and Appearance of danger as they do. God reckon'd it enough to cure all Abraham's sinful Fears, when he told him how his God stood engaged for his Defence, Gen. 15. 1. Fear not, Abraham, I am thy shield. Isaiah 51. 12.

And noble Nehemiah valu'd himself in times of Danger and Fear by his Interest in God, as his Words import, Neh. 6. 11. The Conspiracy against him was strong, the Danger he and the faithful with him at that time were in, was extraordinary; some therefore advised to flee to the Temple, and barracado themselves there against the enemy: but Nehemiah understood himself better; Should such a man as I flee? and who being as I am, would flee? saith he; q. d. a Man so called of God to this Service, a Man under such Promises, a Man of such manifold and manifest Experiences, should such a Man flee? Let others who have no such Encouragements flee if they will; for my part I will not flee. I remember it was an Argument used by Tertullian to quiet the Fears, and stay the flight of Christians in those bloody Times; Art thou afraid of a Man, oh Christian! when Devils are afraid of thee as a Prisoner is of his Judge, and whom the World ought to fear, as being one that shall judge the World. Oh that we could without Pride and Vanity but value our selves duly, according to our Christian Dignities and Privileges, which if ever it be necessary to count over and value, it is in such times of danger and fear when the Heart is so prone to dejection and sinking fears.

Tertul. de fuga. Times hominem, Christiane, quem timeri oportet ab Angelis, siquidem Angelos judicaturus es: quem timeri oportet à Dæmoniis, siquidem & in Dæmoniis accepisti potestatem: quem timeri oportet ab universo mundo, siquidem & in te mundus judicatur.

4. Ignorance of our dangers and troubles causes our frights and terrors; we mistake them, and therefore are frighted at them; we are ignorant of two things in our troubles among others, viz.

1. The Comforts that are in them.
2. The Outlets and Escapes from them.

There is a vast odds betwixt the outward Appearance and Face of Trouble and the Inside of it; 'tis a Lion to the Eye at a distance, but open it, and there is Honey in its Belly. Paul and Silas met that in a Prison that made them sing at midnight, and so have many more since their Day.

And as we are ignorant of the Comforts that are sometimes found in our Troubles, so of the outlets and doors of escape God can, and often doth open out of trouble; To God the Lord belong the issues from death, Psal. 68. 20. He knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, 2 Pet. 2. 9. he can with every temptation make a way to escape, 1 Cor. 10. 13. the Poor captive Exile cast upon nothing but dying in the Pit, making their Graves in the Land of their Captivity, Isa. 51. 14. for they could think upon none but the usual Methods of Deliverance, Power or Price, and they had neither; little did they dream of such immediate Influences of God upon the King's Heart, to make him dismiss them freely, contrary to all Rules of State-Policy, Isa. 45. 13.

5. But especially the fears of good men arise out of their ignorance and inconsiderateness of the Covenant of Grace. If we were better acquainted with the nature, extent, and stability of the Covenant, our Hearts would be much freed thereby from these tormenting Passions; this Covenant would be a Panacea, an universal Remedy against all our fears upon spiritual or temporal accounts, as will be made evident hereafter in this discourse.

Caus. 2. Another cause and fountain of sinful fear is guilt upon the Conscience. A Servant of sin cannot but first or last be a slave of fear; and they that have done Evil cannot chuse but expect evil. No sooner had Adam defiled and wounded his Conscience with guilt, but he presently trembles and hides himself: so it is with his children; God calls to him not in a threatning, but gentle dialect; not in a tempest, but in the cool of the day: yet it terrifies him, there being in himself mens conscia facti, a guilty and condemning Conscience, Gen. 3. 8. 'Tis Seneca's Observation, that a guilty Conscience is a terrible Whip and Torment to the sinner, perpetually lashing him with sollicitous thoughts and fears, that he knows not where to be secure, nor dare he trust to any Promises of Protection, but distrusts all, doubts and jealouseth all. Of such it is said, Job 15. 21. That a dreadful sound is in their ears; noting not only the effects of real, but also of imaginary dangers: his own presaging mind and troubled fancy scares him where no real danger is, suitable to that Prov. 28. 1. The wicked fleeth when none pursues, but the righteous is bold as a lion. Just as they say of Sheep, that they are affrighted by the clattering of their own feet when once they are set a running, so is the guilty Sinner with the Noise of his own Conscience, which sounds nothing in his ears but misery, wrath and hell. We may say of all wicked Men in their frights as Tacitus doth of Tyrants, That if it were possible to open their inside, their mind, and conscience many terrible stripes and wounds would be found there; and it's said Isa. 33. 14. the sinners in Sion are afraid, trembling taketh hold of the hypocrite. Fear and trembling as naturally ariseth out of guilt, as the sparks do out of a fiery charcoal. Histories abundantly furnish us with sad Examples of the Truth of this Observation. Catiline, that Monster of Wickedness, would start at any sudden Noise, being haunted with the Furies of his own evil Conscience. Charles IX. after his bloody and barbarous Massacre of the Protestants, could nei-

Male facinorum conscientia flagellari, & plurimum illi tormentorum esse eo quod perpetuo illam sollicitudo urget, ac verberat quod sponsoribus securitatis suæ non potest credere. Sen. Epist. 97.

neither ſleep nor wake without Muſick to divert his thoughts. And our Richard III. after the murder of his two innocent Nephews, ſaw divers images or ſhapes like Devils in his ſleep, pulling and hauling him. Mr. Ward tells of a Jeſuit in Lancaſhire, who being followed by one that had found his glove, out of no other deſign but to reſtore it to him, but being purſued by his own guilty Conſcience alſo, he leap'd over the next hedge, and was drown'd. And remarkable is that which Mr. Fox relates of Cardinal Creſcentius, who fanſied the Devil was walking in his Chamber, and ſometimes couching under his Table, as he was writing Letters to Rome againſt the Proteſtants. Impius tantum metuit, quantum nocuit: ſo much miſchief as Conſcience tells them they have done, ſo much it bids them expect. Wolfius tells us of one John Hofmeſter who fell ſick with the very terrors of his own Conſcience in his Inn, as he was travelling towards Auſpurge in Germany, and was frighted by his own Conſcience to that degree, that they were fain to bind him in his bed with chains; and all that they could get from him was, I am caſt away for ever, I have grievouſly wounded my own Conſcience.

To this wounded and trembling Conſcience is oppoſed the Spirit of a ſound mind, mentioned 2 Tim. 1. 7. God hath not given us the ſpirit of fear, but of power, of love, and of a ſound mind; A ſound mind is in this place the ſame thing with a pure and peaceable Conſcience, a mind or conſcience not infirmed or wounded with guilt, as we ſay a ſound or hail body which hath no diſeaſe to infirm it, ſuch a mind is oppoſed to the Spirit of Fear; it will make a man bold as a Lion; Nil conſcire tibi, nullâ palleſcere culpâ, hic murus aheneus eſto ——

An evil and guilty Conſcience foments Fears and Terrours three ways.

1, By aggravating ſmall matters and blowing them up to the height of the moſt fatal and deſtructive evils; ſo it was with Cain, Gen. 4. 14. Every one that meets me will ſlay me. Now every Child was a Giant in his eye, and any body he met, his over-match. A guilty Conſcience gives a man no ſight of his Enemy, but thro' a magnifying or multiplying Glaſs.

2. It begets Fears, by interpreting all doubtful caſes in the worſt ſenſe that can be faſtened upon them; Peſſimus in dubiis Augur timor. If the Swallows do but chatter in the chimney, Beſſus interprets it to be a diſcovery of his crime, that they are telling tales of him, and ſaying, Beſſus killed a Man. Nay,

3. If a guilty Conſcience have nothing to aggravate, and magnifie, nor any doubtful matter to interpret in a frightful ſenſe, it can and often doth create fears and terrors out of nothing at all: the rules of Fear are not like the rules in Arithmetick where many nothings make nothing, but fear can make ſomething out of nothing, yea, many things and great things out of nothing at all, Pſal. 53. 5. there were they in great fear where no fear was; here was a great fear raiſed or created out of nothing at all; had their fear been examined, and hunted home to its original, it would have been found a pure creature of fancy, a Chimæra having no fundamentum in re, no other Foundation but a troubled fancy, and a guilty conſcience; thus it was with Paſhur, he was a very wicked man, and a bitter enemy to the Prophet Jeremy, and if there be none to fright and terrifie from abroad rather than he ſhall want it, he ſhall be a terror to himſelf, Jer. 20. 3, 4. he was his own bugbear, afraid of his own ſhadow; and truly this is a great plague and miſery: he that is a terror to himſelf, can no more flee from terrors than he can flee from himſelf. Oh, the efficacy of Conſcience! how doth it arreſt the ſtouteſt ſinners and make them tremble when there is no viſible external cauſe of fear! Nemo, ſe judice, nocens abſolvitur.

In metu & periculo plura & majora videntur metuentibus, cum creduntur facilius, tum finguntur impunius. Cicero.

1 Object. But may not a good man whoſe ſins are pardoned be affrighted with his own fancies, and ſcared with his own imaginations?

Sol. No doubt he may, for there is a twofold fountain of Fears, one in the body, another in the ſoul, one in the conſtitution, another in the conſcience; it is the affliction and infelicity of many pardoned and gracious ſouls to be united and married to ſuch diſtempered and ill habited bodies as ſhall afflict them without any real cauſe from within, and wound them by their own diſeaſes and diſtempers, and theſe wounds can no more be prevented or cured by their reaſon or religion, than any other bodily diſeaſe, ſuppoſe an Ague or a Fever, can be ſo cured. Thus Phyſicians tell us when aduſt choler or melancholy overflows and abounds in the body, as in the Hypochondriacal diſtempers, &c. what ſad effects it hath upon the mind as well as upon the body, there is not only a ſad and fearful aſpect or countenance without, but ſorrow, fear, and afflicting thoughts within; this is a ſore affliction to many good men whoſe Conſciences are ſprinkled with the blood of Chriſt from guilt, but yet God ſees good to clog them with ſuch afflictions as this for their humiliation, and for the prevention of worſe evils.

Fernel. Pathiol. lib. 2. cap. 16. Corporis habitus ſiccus & macilentus, aſpectus inconſtans, horridus ac mœſtus, in morbis animæ metus & mœſtitia, taciturnitas, ſolicitudo, inanis rerum commentatio, ſomnus turbulentus, horrendis inſomniis fluctuans, & agitatus ſpectris rerum nigrarum, &c.

2. Object. But many bold and daring ſinners are found, who notwithſtanding all the guilt with which their conſciences are loaded, can look dangers in the face without trembling, yea, they can look Death it ſelf the King of terrors in the face, with leſs fear than better men.

Sol. True, but the reaſon of that is from a ſpiritual judgment of God upon their hearts and conſciences, whereby they are hardened, and ſeared as with an hot Iron, 2 Tim. 4. 2. and ſo Conſcience is diſabled for the preſent, to do its office, it cannot put forth its efficacy and activity now, when it might be uſeful to their Salvation, but it will do it to purpoſe hereafter when their caſe ſhall be remedileſs.

3. Cauſe. We ſee what a forge of Fears a guilty Conſcience is, and no leſs is the ſin of Unbelief, the real and proper cauſe of moſt diſtracting and afflictive Fears; ſo much as our Souls are empty of Faith, they are in times of trouble filled with Fear. We read of ſome that have died by no other hand but their own Fears; but we never read of any that died by Fear, who were once brought to live by Faith: If men would but dig to the root of their Fears, they ſhould certainly find unbelief there, Mat. 8. 26. Why are ye fearful, O ye of little Faith? The leſs faith ſtill the more fear: Fear is generated by unbelief, and unbelief ſtrenghtened by fear, as in nature there is an obſervable κυκλογένεσις circular generation, vapours beget ſhowers, and ſhowers new vapours; ſo it is in things moral, and therefore all the skill in the world can never cure us of the diſeaſe of fear, till God firſt cure us of our unbelief; Chriſt therefore took the right method, to rid the diſciples of their fear, by rebuking their unbelief. The remains of this ſin in God's own people is the cauſe and fountain of their fears, and more particularly to ſhew how fear is generated by unbelief, let a few particulars be heedfully adverted.

1. Unbelief weakens and ſtumbles the aſſenting act of Faith, and thereby cuts off from the Soul in a great meaſure its principal relief againſt dangers and troubles. It is the uſe and office of Faith to reallize to the Soul the inviſible things of the world to come, and thereby encourage it againſt the fears and dangers of the preſent World: Thus Moſes forſook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the King, for he endured, as ſeeing him that is inviſible, Heb. 11. 27 If this aſſenting act of Faith be weakened or ſtaggered in the ſoul, if once inviſibles ſeem uncertainties, and viſibles the only realities, no wonder we are ſo ſcared and frighted when theſe viſible and ſenſible comforts are expoſed and endangered, as they often are and will be in this mutable world. That man muſt needs be afraid to ſtand his ground, that is not throughly perſuaded the ground he ſtands on is firm and good; 'tis not to be wondered that men ſhould tremble, who ſeem to feel the ground ſhake and reel under them.

Multa fidem promiſſa levant.

2. Unbelief ſhuts up the refugees of the Soul in the divine promiſes, and by leaving it without thoſe refugees, muſt needs leave it in the hands of fears and terrors. That which fortifies and emboldens a Chriſtian in evil times, is his dependance upon God for a protection, Pſal. 143. 9. I fly unto thee to hide me. The cutting off of this retreat (which nothing but unbelief can do) deprives the Soul of all thoſe ſuccours and ſupports which the promiſes afford, and conſequently fills the heart with anxiety and fear.

3. Unbelief makes men negligent and careleſs in providing for troubles before they come, and ſo brings them by way of ſurprize upon them; and the more ſurprizing any evil is, the more frightful it is always found to be: we cannot think that Noah was ſo affrighted at the Flood when it began to ſwell above all the hills and mountains, as all the reſt of the world was; nor was there any reaſon that he ſhould, having foreſeen it by Faith, and made proviſion for it, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God, prepared an Ark. Auguſtine relates a very pertinent and memorable ſtory of Paulinus Biſhop of Nola, who was a very rich man both in Goods and Grace; he had much of the World in his hands, but little of it in his heart; and it was well there was not, for the Goths, a barbarous people, breaking into that City, like ſo many Devils, fell upon the prey; thoſe that truſted to the Treaſures which they had, were deceived and ruined by them, for the rich were put to tortures to confeſs where they had hid their Moneys: This good Biſhop fell into their hands, and loſt all he had, but was ſcarce moved at the loſs, as appears by his Prayer, which my Author relates thus: Lord, let me not be troubled for my gold and ſilver; thou knoweſt it is not my Treaſure, that I have laid up in Heaven, according to thy command. I was warned of this Judgment before it came, and provided for it; and where all my intereſt lies, Lord, thou knoweſt.

Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 1. c. 10.

Thus Mr. Bradford, when the Keeper's Wife came running into his chamber ſuddenly, with words able to have put the moſt men in the world into a trembling poſture: Oh Mr. Bradford! I bring you heavy tidings; to morrow you muſt be burned, and your chain is now buying: he put off his hat, and ſaid, Lord, I thank thee, I have looked for this a great while, it is not terrible to me; God make me worthy of ſuch a Mercy. See the benefit of proſpect of, and preparation for ſufferings!

4. Unbelief leaves our deareſt intereſts and concerns in our own hands, it commits nothing to God, and conſequently muſt needs fill the heart with diſtracting fears when imminent dangers threaten us. Reader, if this be thy caſe, thou wilt be a Magor meſſabib, ſurrounded with terrors, whenſoever thou ſhalt be ſurrounded with dangers and troubles. Believers, in this as well as in many other things have the advantage of thee, that they have committed all that is precious and valuable to them into the hands of God, by faith; to him they have committed the keeping of their Souls, 1 Pet. 4. 19. and all their eternal concernments, 2 Tim. 1. 16. And theſe being put into ſafe hands, they are not diſtracted with fears about other matters of leſs value, but can truſt them where they have intruſted the greater, and enjoy the quietneſs and peace of a reſigned Soul to God, Prov. 16. 3. but as for thee, thy life, thy liberty, yea, which is infinitely more than all theſe things, thy Soul will lie upon thy hands in the day of trouble, and thou wilt not know what to do with them, nor which way to diſpoſe of them. Oh! theſe be the dreadful ſtraits and frights that unbelief leaves men in; 'tis a fountain of fears and diſtractions. And indeed it cannot but diſtract and confound carnal men, in whom it reigns, and is in its full ſtrength, when ſad experience ſhews us what fears and tremblings the very remains and reliques of this ſin begets in the beſt men, who are not fully freed from it. If the unpurged reliques of unbelief in them can thus darken and cloud their evidences, thus greaten and multiply their dangers; if it can draw ſuch ſad and frightful concluſions in their hearts, notwithſtanding all the contrary experiences of their lives, as we ſee in that ſad inſtance, 1 Sam. 27. 1. What panick fears, and unrelieved terrors muſt it put thoſe men under, where it is in its full ſtrength and dominion.

4. Cauſe. Moreover, we ſhall find many of our Fears raiſed and provoked in us by the Promiſcuous adminiſtrations of Providence in this World, when we read in Scripture, that there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked, and all things come alike to all, Eccleſ. 9. 2. that when the Sword is drawn, God ſuffers it to cut off the righteous and the wicked, Ezek. 21. 3. The Sword makes no difference, where God hath made ſo great a difference by grace, it neither diſtinguiſhes faces, nor breaſts, but is as ſoon ſheath'd in the bowels of the beſt as the worſt of men. When we read how the ſame fire of God's indignation devours the green tree and the dry tree, Ezek. 20. 47. how the basket of good Figs (the Emblem of the beſt men of thoſe times) were carried into Babylon as well as the bad, Jer. 24. 5. how the fleſh of God's Saints hath been given for meat to the Fowls of Heaven, and to the Beaſts of the Field; Pſal. 97. 12. and how the wicked have devoured the man that is more righteous than himſelf, as it is Hab. 1. 13. I ſay, when we obſerve ſuch things in Scripture, and find our obſervations confirmed by the Accounts and Hiſtories of former and latter Ages;

Ages; when we reflect upon the unspeakable miseries and butcheries of those plain-hearted and precious Servants of Christ the Albingenses and Waldenses, how they fell as a prey to their cruel Adversaries, notwithstanding the convincing simplicity and holiness of their lives, and all their fervent cries and appeals to God; how the very flower of the reformed Protestant Interest in France was cut off with more than barbarous inhumanity, so that the streets were washed, and the canals of Paris ran with their precious blood.

What horrid and unparallell'd torture the servants of God felt in that cruel Massacre in Ireland, a History too tragical for a tender hearted Reader to stay long upon; and how in our own land the most eminent Ministers and Christians were sent to Heaven in a fiery Chariot in those doleful Marian Days: I say, when we read and consider such things as these, it rouzes our fears, and puts us into frights, when we see our selves threatned with the same enemies and dangers; when the feet of them that carried out the dear servants of God in bloody winding-sheets to their graves stand at the door to carry us forth next, if Providence loose their chain, and give them a permission so to do; and our fears on this account are heightened by considering and revolving these four things in our thoughts, which we are always more inclined to do, than the things that should fortifie our Faith, and heighten our Christian Courage; as,

1. We are very apt to consider, that as the same race and kind of men that committed these outrages upon our brethren are still in being, and that their rage and malice is not abated in the least degree, but is as fierce and cruel as ever it was, Gal. 4. 29. As then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now. So it was then, and just so it is still, the old enmity is entailed upon all wicked men from generation to generation; Multi adhuc sunt qui clavum sanguine Abelis rubentem adhuc circumferunt. Cain's Club is to this day carried up and down the World stained with the blood of Abel, as Bucholtzer speaks. 'Tis a rooted antipathy, and it runs in a blood, and will run as long as there are wicked men, from whom and to whom it shall be propagated, and a Devil in Hell, by whom it will not fail to be exasperated and irritated.

2. We know also that nothing hinders the execution of their wicked purposes against us, but the restraints of Providence; should God loose the chain, and give them leave to act forth the malice and rage that is in their hearts, no pity would be shewn by them, or could be rationally expected from them, Psal. 124. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. We live among Lions, and them that are set on fire of Hell, Psal. 57. 4. The only reason of our safety is this, that he who is the Keeper of the Lions is also the Shepherd of the Sheep.

3. We find that God hath many times let loose these Lions upon his people, and given them leave to tear his Lambs in pieces, and suck the blood of his Saints: how well soever he loves them, yet hath he often delivered them into the hands of his enemies, and suffered them to perpetuate and act the greatest cruelties upon them; the best men have suffered the worst things, and the histories of all ages have delivered down unto us the most tragical relations of their barbarous usage.

4. We are also conscious to our selves how far short we come in holiness, innocency, and spiritual excellency of those excellent persons who have suffered these things, and therefore have no ground to expect more favour from Providence than they found; we know also there is no promise in the Scriptures to which they had not as good a claim and title as our selves: with us are found as great, yea, greater sins than in them, and therefore have no reason to please our selves with the fond imaginations of extraordinary exemptions. If we think these evils shall not come in our days, 'tis like many of them thought so too; and yet they did, and we may find it quite otherwise; Lam. 4. 12. Who would have thought that the enemy should have entred in at the gates of Jerusalem? The revolving of these and such-like considerations in our thoughts, and mixing our own unbelief with them, creates a world of fears even in good men, 'till by resignation of all to God, and acting Faith upon the promises that assure us of the Sanctification of all our troubles, as that Rom. 8. 28. God's presence with us in our troubles, as that Psal. 91. 15. his moderation of our troubles to that measure and degree in which they are supportable, Isa. 27. 8. and the safe and comfortable outlet and final deliverance from them all at last, according to that in Rev. 7. 17. We do at last recover our hearts out of the hands of our fears again, and compose them to a quiet and sweet satisfaction in the wise and holy pleasure of our God.

5. Cause. Our immoderate love of life, and the comforts and conveniences thereof, may be assigned as a proper and real ground and cause of our sinful fears, when the dangers of the times threaten the one or other: did we love our lives less, we should fear and tremble less than we do. It is said of those renowned Saints, Rev. 12. 11. They overcame by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto the death.

They overcame not only the fury of their enemies without them, but their sinful fears within them; and this victory was atchieved by their mortification, to the inordinate and immoderate love of life. Certainly, their own fears had overcome them, if they had not first overcome the love of life: it was not therefore without very great reason that our Lord enjoined it upon all his disciples and followers, to hate their own lives, Luke 14. 26. not absolutely, but in comparison and competition with him, (i. e.) to love it in so remiss a degree, as to slight and undervalue it as a poor low thing in such a comparison; he foresaw what sharp trials and sufferings were coming upon them, and he knew if the fond and immoderate love of life were not overcome and mortified in them, it would make them warp and bend under such temptations.

This was it that freed Paul from slavish fears, and made him so magnanimous and undaunted. Indeed he had less fear upon his spirit, tho' he was to suffer those hard and sharp things in his own person, than his Friends had who only sympathized with him, and were not farther concerned than by their own love and pity: he spake like a man who was rather a spectator than a sufferer, Acts 20. 24, 25. none of these things move me, saith he. Great Soul! not moved with Bonds and Afflictions! how did he attain so great courage and constancy of mind in such deep and dreadful sufferings! It was enough to have moved the stoutest man in the world, yea, and to have removed the resolutions of any that had not loved Christ better than his own life: but life was a trifle to him in comparison with Jesus Christ, for so he tells us in the next words, I count not my life dear unto me, q. d. 'Tis a low-priz'd commodity in my eyes, not worth the saving or regarding regarding on such sinful terms. Oh! how many have parted with Christ, Peace, and eternal Life, for fear of losing that which Paul regarded not. And if we bring our thoughts closer to the matter, we shall soon find that this is a fountain of fears in times of danger, and that from this excessive love of life we are rack'd and tortur'd with ten thousand terrors. For,

1. Life is the greatest and nearest interest men naturally have in this world, and that which wraps up all other inferiour interests in it self, Job 2. 4. Skin for skin, and all that a man hath, will he give for his life. It is a real truth, though it came from the mouth of the Father of lyes; afflictions never touch the quick till they touch the life; liberty, estates, and other accommodations in this world receive their value and estimation from hence, if life be cut off these accidents perish, and are of no account, Gen. 25. 32. Behold, I am at the point to die, (said Esau) and what profit shall this birthright do to me?

2. Life being naturally the deareſt interest of men in this World, the richest treasure, and most beloved thing on earth to a natural man; that which strikes at, and endangers life, must in his eyes be the greatest evil that can befall him; on this account death becomes terrible to men; yea, as Job calls it, the King of Terrors, Job 18. 14. The black prince or the prince of clouds and darkness, as some translate those words: Yea, so terrible is death upon this account, that the very fear of it hath sometimes precipitated men into the hands of it, as we sometimes observe in times of pestilence, the excessive fear of Plague hath induced it.

Nonnullos ob timorem morte subitanea periisse refert Galenus. Quod igitur homo, timore mortis quæ est terribilissima, ex sententia Aristotelis aliorumque pené omnium moriatur, mirandum non est. Fugi mali, ipsum interdum accersit, quod liquet exemplis eorum, quorum metus mortem à judice ipsis designatam prævenit. Stern. de virt. p. 167.

3. Though death be terrible in any shape, in the mildest form it can appear in; yet a violent and bloody death by the hands of cruel and mercileſs Men, is the most terrible form that death can appear in; 'tis now the King of terrors indeed, in the most ghastly representation and frighful form, in its scarlet Robes, and terrifying formalities, in a violent death all the barbarous cruelty that the wit of our enemies can invent, or their malice inflict, is mingled together; in a violent death are many deaths contrived into one, and it oftentimes approaches men by such slow and deliberated paces, that they feel every tread of its foot as it advanceth towards them. Moriatur, ut sentiat se mori, Let him so die, (said the Tyrant) that he may feel himself to die, yea, and how he dies by inch-meal or slow and lingring degrees; this is exceeding frightful, especially to those that are of a more soft and tender nature and temper, who must needs be struck thro' with the terrors of death, except the Lord arm them against it with the assurance of a better life, and sweeten these bitter apprehensions by the foretasts of it. This is enough to put even sanctified nature into a consternation, and make a very gracious heart to sink, unless it be so upheld by Divine strength and comfort: And hence come many, very many of our fears, and terrors, especially when the same enemies that have been accustomed to this bloody work, shall be found confederating and designing again to break in upon us, and act over again asmuch cruelty as ever they have done upon our brethren in times past.

6. Cause. To conclude, many of our sinful fears and consternations flow from the influences of Satan upon our phantasies. They say winds, and storms are oft times raised by Satan both by sea and land, and I never doubted but the Prince of the power of the air by God's Permission can, and often doth put the world into great frights and disturbances by such tempests, Job 1. 19. He can raise the loftiest winds, pour down roaring showers, rattle in the air with fearful claps of thunder, and scare the lower world with terrible flashes of lightning. And I doubt not but he hath by the same permission a great deal of influence and power upon the fancies and passions of men. And can raise more terrible storms and tempests within us, than ever we heard or felt without us; he can by leave from God approach our Phantasies, disturb and trouble them exceedingly by forming frightful Idea's there; for Satan not only works upon men mediately by the ministry of their external senses, but by reason of his Spiritual angelical nature, he can have immediate access to the internal sense also, as appears by diabolical dreams, and by practising upon that power of the Soul, he influences the passions of it, and puts it under very dreadful apprehensions and consternations: Now if Satan can provoke and exasperate the fury and rage of wicked men, as it is evident he can do, Rev. 2. 10. and so disturb our fancies and influence our passions, as there is no reason to doubt but by leave from God he can do, as well as he can go to the magazines and store-houses of thunder, lightnings, and storm. O what inward storms of fear can he shake our hearts withal, and if God give him but a permission how ready will he be to do it; seeing it is so conducible to his design: for by putting men into such frights he at once weakens their hands in duty as is plain from his attempt this way upon Nehemiah, Chap. 6. 13. and if he prevail there, he drives them into the snares, and trains of his temptations, as the fisherman and fowler do the birds and fishes into their nets, when once they have flusht and frighted them out of their coverts. And thus you have some account of the principal and true causes of our Sinful Fears.

CHAP. V.

Laying open the sinful and lamentable effects of slavish and inordinate Fear both in carnal and regenerate Persons.

Sect. 1. HAving taken a view in the former Chapters of the Kinds and Causes of Fear, and seen what lies at the root of Slavish Fear and both breeds and feeds it, what fruit can we expect from such a cursed Plant, but Gall and Wormwood, fruit as bitter as death it self? Let us then in the next place examine and well consider these following and deplorable effects of fear to excite us to apply our selves the more concernedly to those directions that follow in the close of this Treatise for the cure of it. And

1 Effect. The first Effect of this sinful and exorbitant passion, is distraction of mind and thoughts in duty; both Cicero and Quintilian will have the word tumultus, a tumult to come from timor multus, much fear, 'tis a compound of those two words;

much fear raises great Uproars and Tumults in the Soul, and puts all into Hurries and Distractions, so that we cannot attend upon any Service of God, with profit or comfort. It was therefore a very necessary Mercy that was requested of God, Luke 1. 74. That we being delivered out of the Hands of our enemies, might serve him without fear. For it is impossible to serve God without Distractions, till we can serve him without the slavish fear of enemies. The reverential fear of God is the greatest spur to duty, and choicest Help in it, but the distracting Fears of Men will either wholly divert us from our Duty, or destroy the comfort and benefit of our Duties; 'tis a deadly Snare of the Devil, to hinder all comfortable Intercourse with God.

It is very remarkable, that when the Apostle was giving his Advice to the Corinthians, about marriage in those times of Persecution and Difficulty, he commends to them a single Life as most eligible: where it may be without sinful Inconveniencies, and that principally for this reason, That they might attend upon the Lord without distractions, 1 Cor. 7. 35. He foresaw what Streights, Cares, and Fears must unavoidably distract them in such times that were most clogged and incumbred with families, and relations; when a Man should be thinking, O what shall I do now to get my Doubts and Fears resolved about my Interest in Christ? How may I so behave my self in my sufferings as to credit Religion, and not become a Scandal and Stumbling-stone to others? His Thoughts are taken up with other Cares and Fears! O what will become of my Wife and poor little ones! what shall I do with them, and for them, to secure them from Danger?

I doubt not but it is a great design of the Devil to keep us in continual alarms and frights, and to puzzle our Heads and Hearts with a thousand difficulties which possibly may never befall us, or if they do, shall never prove so fatal to us as we fansie them, and all this is to unfit us for our present duties, and destroy our comfort therein; for if by frights and terrors of mind he can but once distract our thoughts, he gains three great points, upon us, to our unspeakable loss.

1. Hereby he will cut off the freedom and sweetness of our communion with God in duties, and what an empty shell will the best duties be, when this kernel is wormed out by such a subtle artifice? Prayer as Damascen aptly expresses it, is Ἀνάβασις τοῦ νοῦ, the ascension of the mind or soul to God; but Distraction clips its wings; he can never offer up his soul and thoughts to God, that hath not the possession of them himself: and he that is under distracting fears possesseth not himself. The life of all communion with God in Prayer, consists in the harmony that is betwixt our hearts and words, and both with the will of God, this harmony is spoiled by distractions, aud so Satan gains that point.

2. But this is not all he gains, and we lose by distracting fears; for as they cut off the freedom and sweetness of our Intercourse with God in prayer, so they cut off the Soul from the succours and reliefs it might otherwise draw from the promises. We find when the Israelites were in great bondage, wherein their minds were distracted with fears and sorrows, they regarded not the supporting promises of Deliverance sent them by Moses, Exod. 6. 3. David had an express and particular Promise of the Kingdom from the mouth of God, which must needs include his Deliverance out of the Hand of Saul, and all his Stratagems to destroy him; but yet when imminent Hazards were before his Eyes, he was afraid, and that Fear betrayed the Succours from the Promise, so that it drew a quite contrary Conclusion, 1 Sam. 27. 1. I shall one day perish by the hand of Saul: All men are liars, not excepting Samuel himself who had assured him of the Kingdom. This is always the Property and Nature of Fear (as I shewed before) to make Men distrust the best security when they are in imminent Peril: But Oh! what a Mischief is this to make us suspicious of the Promises which are our chief Relief and Support in Times of Trouble: Our Fears will unfit us for Prayer, they will also shake the credit of the Promises with us, and so great is the Damage we receive both ways, that it were better for us to lose our two Eyes, than two such Advantages in Trouble. But,

3. This is not all, by our present Fears we lose the Benefit and Comfort of all our past Experiences, and the singular Relief we might have from all that Faithfulness and Goodness of God which our Eyes have seen in former Streights and Dangers, the present fear clouds them all, Isai. 51. 12, 13. Men and Dangers are so much minded, that God is forgotten, even the God that hath hitherto preserved us, though our former Fears told us, the Enemy was daily ready to devour us. All these sweet Reliefs are cut off from us by our distracting Fears, and that at a time when we have most need of them.

Effect 2. Dissimulation and Hypocrisie is the Fruit of slavish Fear; Distraction you see is bad enough, but Dissimulation is worse than Distraction, and yet as bad as it is, Fear hath driven good Men into this Snare; it will make even an upright Soul warp and bend from the Rules of that Integrity and Candor which should be inseparable at all times from a Christian: Of whom (saith God to his Israel) hast thou been afraid, that thou hast lyed, and hast not remembred me? God finds Falshood, and charges it upon Fear, q. d. I know it was against the Resolutions of my Peoples Hearts thus to dissemble, this certainly is the Effect of a Fright; Who is he that hath scared you into this Evil? It was Abraham's Fear that made him dissemble to the Reproach of his Religion, Gen. 20. 2, 11. And indeed it was but an odd sight to see an Heathen so schooling and reproving great Abraham about it as he there doth.

It was nothing but Fear that drew his Son Isaac into the like Snare, Gen. 26. 7. And it was Fear that overcame Peter against his Promise as well as Principle to say concerning his dear Saviour, I know not the man, Matth. 26. 69. Had Abraham at that time remember'd and acted his Faith freely upon what the Lord said to him, Gen. 17. 1. Fear not, Abraham, I am thy shield, he had escaped both the sin and shame into which he fell, but even that great Believer was foil'd by his own Fears; and certainly this is a great Evil, a complicated Mischief. For,

1. By these Falls and Scandals, Religion is made vile and contemptible in the Eyes of the World, it reflects with much Reproach upon God and his Promises, as if his Word were not sufficient Security for us to rely upon in Times of Trouble, as if it were safer trusting to our Wit, yea, to sin, than to the Promises.

2. It greatly weakens the Hands of others, and proves a sore Discouragement to 'em in their Trials, to see their Brethren faint for Fear, and ashamed to own their Principles; sometimes it hath this mischievous Effect, but it is always improved by Satan and wicked Men to this Purpose. And,

3. It will be a terrible Blow and Wound to our own Consciences, for such flaws in our Integrity we may be kept waking and sighing many a Night; O see the Mischiefs of a timorous and faint Spirit!

Effect 3. Slavish Fears of the Creature exceedingly strengthen our temptations in times of Danger, and make them very efficacious and prevalent upon us, Prov. 29. 25. The fear of man brings a snare. Satan spreads the Net, but we are not within its Reach, till our own Fears drive us into it; the recoiling of our Spirits from some imminent Danger, may cause the Pulse of a true Christian to intermit and faulter, how regular soever it beats at other times; this will cause great Trepidation and Timidity in Men that are sincere and upright, and that is it that brings the Snare over their Souls. Aaron was a good Man, and Idolatry he knew to be a great sin, yet Fear prevailed with that good Man to give too much way to that great Evil, Exod. 32. 22. Thou knowest the people that they are set upon mischief, saith he in his own Excuse in the Matter of the golden Calf, q d. Lord, I durst do no otherwise at that time, the People were violently and passionately set upon it; had I resisted them, it might have cost me dear.

It was fear that prevailed with Origen to yield so far as he did in offering Incense to the Idol, the consideration of which fact brake his heart to pieces. It was nothing but fear that made David play the fool, and act so dishonourably as he did, 1 Sam. 21. 12. Fear is a Snare in which Satan hath caught as many Souls as in any other of his stratagems and toils whatsoever. It were easie to give instances, so many and so sad, as would enlarge this head even to tediousness, but I chuse rather to come to the Particulars wherein the danger of this snare of the Devil consists. And,

1. Herein lies the ensnaring danger of sinful fear, that it drives men out of their proper station, out of their place and duty, beside which there is none to be found but what is Satan's ground. The subtle enemy of our Salvation is aware that we are out of gun-shot, beyond his reach, whilst we abide with God in the way of our duty, that the Lord is with us, whilst we are with him, and there is no attempting our Ruin under the wings of his protection. If ever therefore he meaneth to do any thing upon us, he must get us off that ground, and from under those wings; and there is nothing like fear to do this; then we are as the Birds that are wandring from their Nests, Prov. 27. 8. or like Shimei out of his limits.

2. Fear is usually the first passion in the Soul that beats a parley with the enemy, and treats with the tempter about terms of rendition: and as the French Proverb is, The Castle that parleys is half won. 'Tis Fear that consults with flesh and blood, whilst Faith is engaged with God for the supply of strength to endure the siege. We have a sad and doleful instance of this in Spira; he tells us how his own fears betrayed him, by parlying with the tempter; for thus Mr. Bacon in the History of his Life records the occasion of his fall: 'Whilst Spira was tossing upon the restless waves 'of doubts, without Guide to trust to, or Haven 'to flee to for succour, on the sudden, God's spi'rit assisting, he felt a calm, and began to dis'course with himself in this manner: Why wanderest 'thou thus in Uncertainties? Unhappy man! cast away 'fear, put on thy shield of faith; where is thy wonted cou'rage, thy goodness, thy constancy? Remember that 'Christ's glory lies at the stake, suffer then without 'fear, and he will defend thee, he will tell thee what 'thou shalt answer; he can beat down all danger, bring 'thee out of Prison, raise thee from the dead; consider 'Peter in the dungeon, the Martyrs in the fire, &c.

'Now was Spira in reasonable quiet, being re'solved to yield to those weighty reasons; yet 'holding it Wisdom to examine all things, he con'sults also with flesh and blood; thus the battle 'renews, and the flesh begins in this manner: Be 'well advis'd, fond man, consider reasons on both sides, 'and then judge: how canst thou thus overween thine 'own sufficiency, as thou neither regardest the exam'ples of thy progenitors, nor the judgment of the whole 'Church? Dost thou not consider what misery this days 'rashness will bring thee unto? Thou shalt lose all thy 'substance gotten with so much care and travail, thou 'shalt undergo the most exquisite torments that malice 'it self can devise, thou shalt be counted an Heretick of 'all, and to close up all, thou shalt die shamefully. 'What thinkest thou of the loathsom stinking dungeon, 'the bloody ax, the burning faggot? Are they delight'ful, &c. Thus thro' fear he first parly'd with the 'tempter, consulted with flesh and blood, and 'at last fainted and yielded.

3. 'Tis fear that makes men impatient of waiting God's time and method of deliverance, and so precipitates the Soul and drives it into the snare of the next temptation, Isa. 51. 14. The captive exile hasteth to be delivered out of the pit. Any way or means of escape that comes next to hand, saith Fear, is better than to lie here in the pit; and when the Soul is thus prepared by its own fears, it becomes an easie Prey to the next temptation; by all which you see the mischief that comes by fear in times of danger.

Effect 4. Fear naturally produceth pusillanimity and cowardliness in men, a poor low spirit, that presently faints and yields upon every slight assault; it extinguisheth all Christian Courage and Magnanimity where-ever it prevails, and therefore you find it joined frequently in the Scriptures with discouragement, Deut. 1. 21. Fear not, neither be discouraged with fainting and trembling, Deut. 20. 3. Let not your hearts faint, fear not, and do not tremble; with dismayedness, Deut. 31. 6. and faint-heartedness, Isa. 7. 4. these are the effects and consequents of sinful fear: And how dangerous a thing it is to have our Courage extinguish'd, and faintness of heart prevail upon us in a time when we have the greatest need and use of courage, and our perseverance, peace, and eternal happiness rely and depend so much upon it, let all serious Christians judge. 'Tis sad to us, and dishonourable to Religion, to have the hearts of Women, as it's said of Egypt, Isa. 19. 16. when we should play the men, as the Apostle exhorts us, 1 Cor. 16. 13. We find in all ages those that have manifested most Courage for Christ in time of trial, have been those whose Faith hath surmounted Fear, and whose Hearts were above all Discouragements from this World.

Such a Man was Basil, as appears by his Answer to Valens the Emperor, who tempting him with Offers of Preferment, received this Answer, Offer these Things, said he, to children; and when he threatned him with grievous Sufferings, he replied, Threaten these Things to your purple Gallants, lants, that give themselves to pleasure, and are afraid to die.

And this was the Spirit of Courage and Magnanimity with which the Generality of the primitive Christians were animated, they feared not the Faces of Tyrants, they shrunk not from the most cruel Torments; and it redounded not a little to the Credit of Christianity, when one of Julian's Nobles, present at the tormenting of Marcus, Bishop of Arethusa, told the Apostate to his Face, We are ashamed, Oh Emperor, the Christians laugh at your Cruelty and grow more resolute by it. So Lactantius also testifies of them, Our Women and Children, saith he, not to speak of Men, overcome their Torments, and the Fire cannot fetch so much as a sigh from them. If carnal Fear once get the Ascendant over us, all our Courage and Resolution will flag, and melt away, we may suffer out of unavoidable Necessity, but shall never honour Christ and Religion by our Sufferings.

Effect 5. Carnal Fear is the very Root of Apostacy, it hath made thousands of Professors to faint and fall away in the Hour of Temptation; it is not so much from the Fury of our Enemies without, as from our Fears within, that Temptations become victorious over us; from the beginning of Fears Christ dates the beginning of Apostacy, Mat. 24. 9, 10. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you, and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake, and then shall many be offended. When Troubles and Dangers come to an height, then Fears begin to work at an height too, and then is the critical Hour; Fears are high, and Faith is low; Temptation strong, and Resistance weak. Satan knocks at the Door, and Fear opens it, and yields up the Soul to him, except special Aid and Assistance come in seasonably from Heaven; so long as we can profess Religion without any great hazard of Life, Liberty, or Estates, we shew much Zeal and Forwardness in the Ways of Godliness: but when it comes to the Sharps, to resisting unto blood, few will be found to own and assert it openly in the Face of such Dangers. The first Retreat is usually made from a free and open to a close and concealed Practice of Religion; not opening our Windows, as Daniel did, to shew we care not who knows we dare worship our God, and are not ashamed of our Duties, but hiding our Principles and Practices with all the Art and Care imaginable, reckoning it well if we can escape Danger by letting fall our Profession which might expose us to it: but if the Inquest go on, and we cannot be secured any longer under this Refuge, we must comply with false Worship, and give some open Signal that we do so, or else be marked out for Ruin; then saith Fear, Give a little more ground, and retreat to the next Security, which is to comply seemingly with that which we do not allow, hoping God will be merciful to us, and accept us, if we keep our Hearts for him, tho' we are forced thus to dissemble and hide our Principles. Eamus ad communem errorem, said Calderinus, when going to the Mass, Let us go to the common Error; and, as Seneca adviseth about worshipping the Roman Gods, In animi religione non habebat, sed in actibus fingat; let us make a semblance and shew of worshipping them, tho' our Hearts give no religious Respect to them. But if still the Temptation hunt us farther, and we come to be more narrowly sifted, and put to a severer Test, by subscribing contrary Articles, or renouncing our former avowed Principles, and that upon penalty of Death, and Loss of all that is dear to us in this World; now nothing in all the World hazards our eternal Salvation as our own Fears will do; this is like to be the Rock on which we shall split all, and make an horrible Shipwreck both of Truth and Peace. This was the Case of Cranmer, whose Fears caused him to subscribe against the Dictates of his own Conscience, and cowardly to betray the known Truth; and indeed there is no Temptation in the World that hath overthrown so many, as that which hath been back'd and edg'd with Fear; the Love of Preferments and Honours hath slain its thousands, but fear of Sufferings its ten thousands.

Effect. 6. Sinful Fear puts Men under great Bondage of Spirit, and makes Death a thousand times more terrible and intolerable than it would otherwise be to us. You read of some, Heb. 2. 15. who thro' the fear of death were all their life-time subject to bondage, (i. e.) it kept them in a miserable anxiety and perplexity of mind, like slaves that tremble at the Whip which is held over them: thus many thousands live under the lash; so terrible is the Name of Death, especially a violent Death, that they are not able with Patience to hear it mentioned; which gave the ground of that Saying, Præstat semel, quam semper mori; It's better to die once, than to be dying always. And surely there is not a more miserable Life any poor Creature can live, than such a trembling Life as this is. For,

1. Such a Bondage as this destroys all the Comfort and Pleasure of Life; no Pleasure can grow or thrive under the Shadow of this cursed Plant. Nil ei beatum cui semper aliquis terror impendeat, saith Cicero; all the Comforts we possess in this World are imbitter'd by it. 'Tis storied of Democles, a flatterer of Dionysius the Tyrant, that he told him he was the happiest Man in the World, having Wealth, Power, Majesty, and abundance of all Things: Dionysius sets the Flatter in all his own Pomp at a Table furnished with all Dainties, and attended upon as a King, but with an heavy sharp Sword hanging by a single Horse-hair right over his Head; this made him quake and tremble, so that he could neither eat nor drink, but desired to be freed from that Estate. The Design was to convince him how miserable a Life they live who live under the continual Terrors of impending Death and Ruin. It was a sore Judgment which God threatned against them in Jer. 5. 6. A Lion out of the forrest shall slay them, and a Wolf of the Evening shall spoil them; a Leopard shall watch over their Cities, every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces. What a miserable Life must those People live, who could not stir out of the City, but they presently were seized by Lions, Wolves and Leopards, that watch'd over them, and lurk'd in all the Avenues to make them a Prey! and yet this is more tolerable than for a Man's own fear to watch continually over him. Cicer. Tusc. Q. 15.

2. And yet I could wish this were the worst of it, and that our fears destroyed no better comforts than the natural Comforts of this life: but, alas! they also destroy our spiritual comforts, which we might have from God's Promises and our own and others Experiences, which are incomparably the sweetest Pleasures Men have in this World: But as no Creature-comfort is pleasant, so no Promise relishes like it self to him that lives in this Bondage of Fear; when the Terrors of Death are great, the Consolations of the Almighty are small.

In the written Word are found all sorts of refreshing, strengthning, and heart-reviving Promises, prepared by the Wisdom and Care of God for our Relief in the Days of Darkneſs and Trouble; promiſes of Support under the heavieſt Burdens and Preſſures, Iſa. 41. 10. Fear not, for I am with thee; be not diſmayed, for I am thy God; I will ſtrengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteouſneſs. A promiſe able to make the moſt timorous and trembling Soul to ſhout with the joy of men in harveſt, or as they that divide the ſpoil.

There are found the encouraging promiſes of defence and protection, Iſa. 27. 2, 3. and Iſa. 33. 2. promiſes that lead us into the Almighty power of God, and put us under the wings of his care in time of danger.

Promiſes of moderation and mitigation in the day of ſharp affliction that we may be able to bear it, Iſa. 27. 8. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Promiſes of deliverance out of troubles, if the malice of man bring us into trouble, the mercy of God will aſſuredly bring us out, Pſal. 91. 14, 15. and Pſal. 125. 3. And, which is moſt comfortable of all the reſt, Promiſes to ſanctifie and bleſs our troubles to our good, ſo that they ſhall not only ceaſe to be hurtful, but by vertue of the promiſe become exceeding beneficial to us, Iſa. 27. 9. Rom. 8. 28.

All theſe promiſes are provided by our tender Father for us againſt a day of ſtraits and fears; and becauſe he knew our weakneſs, and how apt our fears would be to make us ſuſpect our ſecurity by them, he hath for the performance of them engaged his Wiſdom, Power, Care, Faithfulneſs, and Unchangeableneſs, 2 Pet. 2. 9. Iſa. 27. 2, 3. 2 Chron. 16. 9. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Iſaiah 43. 1, 2. In the midſt of ſuch promiſes ſo ſealed, how chearful and magnanimous ſhould we be in the worſt times! And ſay as David, Pſal. 49. 5. Why ſhould I fear in the day of evil? Let thoſe that have no God to flee to, no promiſe to rely upon, let them fear in the day of evil, I have no cauſe to do ſo. But even from theſe moſt comfortable refuges in the promiſes our own fears beat us; we are ſo ſcared that we mind them not, ſo as to draw Encouragement, Reſolution, and Courage from them. Thus the Shields of the mighty are vilely caſt away.

So for all the choice Records of the Saints experiences in all former troubles and diſtreſſes, God hath by a ſingular Providence (aiming at our relief in future diſtreſſes) preſerv'd them for us; if danger threaten us, we may turn to the recorded experiences his people have left us of the ſtrange and mighty influence of his Providence upon the hearts of their enemies, to ſhew them favour, Gen. 31. 29. Pſal. 106 46. Jer. 15. 11.

There are alſo found the ancient Rolls and Records of the admirable methods of his peoples deliverance, contriv'd by his infinite and unſearchable Wiſdom for them, when all their own thoughts have been at a loſs, and their underſtandings poſed and ſtaggered, Exod. 15. 6. 2 Chron. 20. 12, 15. 2 Kings 19. 3, 7.

There are the recorded experiences of God's unſpotted faithfulneſs, which never failed any Soul that durſt truſt himſelf in its arms, Mica. 6. 4, 5. Joſh. 7. 9.

There are alſo to be found the Records of his tender and moſt fatherly care for his children, who have been to him as a peculiar treaſure in times of danger, Pſal. 40. 17. Deut. 32. 10, 11, 12. Iſa. 49. 16. Job 36. 7. 2 Chron. 16. 9.

All theſe and many more ſupports and cordials are made ready to our hand, and provided for a day of trouble: but alas! to what purpoſe, if our own fears ſo tranſport us, that we can neither apply them, nor ſo much as calmly ponder and conſider them.

3. To conclude, by theſe Fears we are depriv'd of thoſe manifold Advantages we might gain by the calm and compoſed meditations of our own death, and the change it will make upon us; could we ſit down in peace, and meditate in a familiar way upon death: could we look with a compoſed and well ſettled mind into our own graves, and not be ſcared and frighted with the thoughts of death, and ſtartle whenever we take it (though but in our thoughts) by the cold hand: to what ſeriouſneſs would thoſe meditations frame us: and what abundance of evils would they prevent in our converſations? The ſprinkling of duſt upon new writing prevents many a blot and blur in our Books or Letters: and could we thus ſprinkle the duſt of the grave upon our minds, it would prevent many a ſin and miſcarriage in our words and actions. But there is no profit or advantage redounding to us either from promiſes, experiences, or death it ſelf, when the Soul is diſcompoſed and put into confuſion by its own fears. And thus you ſee ſome of thoſe many miſchievous effects of your own fears.

CHAP. VI.

Preſcribing the Rules to cure our ſinful Fears, and prevent theſe ſad and woful effects of them.

Sect. I. WE are now come to the moſt difficult part of the work, viz. the Cure of the ſinful and ſlaviſh fear of creatures in times of danger, which if it might thro' the bleſſing of God be effected, we might live at hearts eaſe in the midſt of all our enemies and troubles, and, like the Sun in the Heavens, keep on our ſteddy courſe in the darkeſt and gloomieſt day. But before I come to the particular Rules, it will be neceſſary, for the prevention of miſtakes to lay down three uſeful Cautions about this matter.

1 Caution. Underſtand that none but thoſe that are in Chriſt are capable to improve the following Rules to their advantage. The ſecurity of our Souls is the great Argument uſed by Chriſt to extinguiſh our fears of them that kill the body, Mat. 10. 28. But if the Soul muſt unavoidably periſh when the Body doth, if it muſt drop into Hell before the Body be laid in the Grave, if he that kills the Body doth by the ſame ſtroak cut off the Soul from all the means and poſſibilities of Mercy and Happineſs for ever, what can be offered in ſuch a caſe, to relieve a man againſt fear and trembling?

2 Caution. Expect not a perfect cure of your fears in this life; whilſt there are enemies and dangers, there will be ſome fears working in the beſt hearts: if our Faith could be perfected, our Fears would be perfectly cured; but whilſt there is ſo much weakneſs in our Faith, there will be too much ſtrength in our Fears. And for thoſe who are naturally timorous, who have more of this paſſion in their conſtitution than other men have, and thoſe in whom Melancholy is a rooted and chronical diſeaſe, it will be hard for them totally to rid themſelves of fears and dejections, tho' in the uſe of ſuch helps and means as follow they may be greatly relieved againſt the tyranny of them, and enabled to poſſeſs their Souls in much more tranquility and comfort.

3 Caution. Whoſoever expects the benefit of the following Preſcriptions and Rules, muſt not think the reading or bare remembring them will do the work, but but he must work them into his heart by believing and fixed meditation, and live in the daily practice of them. It is not our opening of our case to a Physician, nor his Prescriptions and written Directions, that will cure a man, but he must resolve to take the bitter and nauseous Potion, how much soever he loath it; to abstain from hurtful diet, how well soever he loves it, if ever he expect to be a sound and healthful man. So it is in this case also. These things premised, the

1 Rule. The first Rule to relieve us against our Slavish Fears, Is seriously to consider, and more throughly to study the Covenant of Grace, within the blessed Clasp and Bond whereof all Believers are. I think the clear understanding of the Nature, Extent, and Stability of the Covenant, and of our interest therein, would go a great way in the cure of our sinful and slavish Fears.

A Covenant is more than a naked promise; in the Covenant, God hath graciously consulted our weakness, fears, and doubts, and therefore proceeds with us in the highest way of solemnity, confirming his Promises by Oaths, Heb. 6 13, 17. and by Seals, Rom. 4. 11. Putting himself under the most solemn ties and engagements that can be, to his people, that from so firm a ratification of the Covenant with us, we might have strong consolation, Heb. 6. 18. He hath so ordered it, that it might afford strong supports, and the most reviving cordials to our faint and timorous Spirits, in all the plunges of trouble both from within, and from without. In the Covenant God makes over himself to his people, to be unto them a God, Jer. 31. 33. Heb. 8. 10. Wherein the Lord bestows himself in all his glorious Essential Properties upon us, to the end that whatsoever his Almighty Power, Infinite Wisdom, and Incomprehensible Mercy can afford for our Protection, Support, Deliverance, Direction, Pardon, or Refreshment; we might be assured shall be faithfully performed to us in all the Straits, Fears, and Exigencies of our Lives. This God expects we should improve by Faith, as the most sovereign antidote against all our Fears in this World. Isaiah 43. 1, 2. Thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel; fear not, for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine; when thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee, &c. Isaiah 41. 10. Fear not, for I am with thee, be not dismaied for I am thy God.

And if thou, Reader, be within the bond of this Covenant, thou mayest surely find enough there to quiet thy heart, whatever the matter or ground of thy Fears be: If God be thy Covenant God, he will be with thee in all thy streights, wants, and troubles, he will never leave, nor forsake thee. From the Covenant it was that David encouraged himself against all his troubles. 2 Sam. 23. 5. Although my house be not so with God, yet hath he made with me an everlasting Covenant, well ordered in all things and sure; and this is all my Salvation, and all my desire, though he make it not to grow. He could fetch all reliefs, all comforts, all Salvations out of it, and why cannot we? He desired no more for the support of his heart; this is all my desire; and sure if we understood and believed it as he did, we could desire no more to quiet and comfort our hearts than what this Covenant affords us. For,

1. Are we afraid what our enemies will do? We know we are in the midst of Potent, Politick, and enraged enemies; we have heard what they have done, and see what they are preparing to do again? we tremble to think what bloody Tragedies are like to be acted over again in the World by their cruel hands: But O what heroick and noble acts of Faith should the Covenant of thy God enable thee to exert amidst all these Fears? if God be thy God, then thou hast an Almighty God on thy side, and that is enough to extinguish all these Fears, Psal. 118. The Lord is on my side, I will not fear what man can do unto me. Your fears come in the name of man, but your help in the name of the Lord: Let them plot, threaten, yea, and smite too; God is a shield to all that fear him, and if God be for us, who can be against us?

2. Are we afraid what God will do? fear it not, your God will do nothing against your good; think not that he may forget you, it cannot be; sooner, may a tender mother forget her sucking-child, Isaiah 49. 15. no, no, He withdraweth not his eye from the Righteous, Job 36. 7. His eyes are continually upon all the dangers and wants of our Souls and Bodies there is not a danger or a enemy stirring against you, but his eye is upon it, 2 Chron. 16. 9.

Are you afraid he will forsake and cast you off? 'Tis true, your sins have deserved he should do so, but he hath secured you fully against that fear in his Covenant, Jer. 32. 40. I will not turn away from them to do them good. All your fears of God's forgetting or forsaking you, spring out of your ignorance of the Covenant.

3. Are you afraid what you shall do? 'Tis usual for the people of God to propose difficult cases to themselves, and put startling questions to their own hearts; and there may be an excellent use of them, to rouze them out of security, put them upon the search and tryal of their conditions and estates, and make preparation for the worst; but Satan usually improves it to a quite contrary end, to deject, affright, and discourage them. O if fiery trials should come, if my liberty and life come once to be toucht in earnest, I fear I shall never have strength to go on a step farther in the way of Religion: I am afraid I shall faint in the first encounter, I shall deny the words of the holy one, make shipwrack of Faith and a good Conscience in the first gust of temptation. I can hear, and pray, and profess; but I doubt I cannot burn, or bleed, or lie in a dungeon for Christ. If I can scarce run with footmen in the land of peace, how do I think to contend with Horses in these swellings of Jordan?

But yet all these are but groundless fears, either forged in thy own misgiving heart, or secretly shuffled by Satan into it; for God hath abundantly secured thee against fear in this very particular, by that most sweet supporting and blessed promise, annexed to the former, in the same Text, Jer. 32. 40. I will put my fear into their hearts, and that they shall not depart from me. Here is another kind of Fear, than that which so startles thee, promised to be put into thy heart, not a fear to shake and undermine thy assurance as this doth, but to guard and maintain it. And this is the fear that shall be enabled to vanquish and expel all thy other fears.

4. Or are you afraid what the Church shall do? And what will become of the Ark of God? Do you see a storm gathering, winds begin to roar, the waves to swell; and are you afraid what will become of that Vessel the Church, in which you have so great an interest?

It is an Argument of the publickness and excellency of thy Spirit, to be thus touched with the feeling feeling sense of the Churches sufferings, and dangers. Most Men seek their own things, and not the things that are of Christ, Phil. 2 21. But yet it is your sin so to fear as to sink and faint under a spirit of despondency, and discouragement, which yet many good men are but too apt to do. I remember an excellent passage in a Letter of Luther's to Melancthon upon this very account. In private troubles, saith he, I am weaker, and thou art stronger; thou despisest thy own life, but feares the publick Cause: but for the publick I am at rest, being assured that the Cause is just and true, yea, that it is Christ's and God's Cause. I am well-nigh a secure spectator of things, and esteem not any thing these fierce and threatning Papists. I beseech thee by Christ neglect not so Divine Promises and Consolations, where the Scripture saith, Cast thy Care upon the Lord, wait upon the Lord, be strong, and he shall comfort thy heart. And in another Epistle: I much dislike, those anxious cares, which as thou writest do almost consume thee. 'Tis not the greatness of the danger, but the greatness of thy unbelief. John Huss and others were under greater danger than we; and if it be great, he is great that orders it. Why do you afflict your self? if the cause be bad, let us renounce it; if it be good why do we make him a liar who bids us be still? as if you were able to do any good by such unprofitable cares. I beseech thee, thou that in other things art valiant, fight against thy self, thine own greatest Enemy, that puts Weapons into Satan's hand.

Ep. ad Melanct. Anno 1549.

Anno 1530.

You see how good men may be even overwhelmed with publick fears; but certainly if we did well consider the bond of the Covenant that is betwixt God and his people, we should be more quiet and composed. For by reason thereof it is, 1. That God is in the midst of them, Psal. 46. 1, 2, 3, 4. When any great danger threatned the reformed Church in its tender beginnings in Luther's time, he would say, Come, let us sing the 46 Psalm; and indeed it is a lovely Song for such times; it bears the title of A Song upon Alamoth, or a Song for the hidden ones, God is with them to cover them under his wings. 2. And it is plain matter of fact, evident to all the World, that no people under the Heavens have been so long and so wonderfully preserved as the Church hath been; it hath overlived many bloody Massacres, terrible Persecutions, subtle and cruel Enemies; still God hath preserved and delivered it, for his Promises oblige him to it, amongst which those two are signal and eminent ones, Jer. 30. 11. Isa. 27. 2. 3. And it is obvious to all that will consider things, that there are the self-same motives in God, and the self-same grounds and reasons before him, to take care of his Church and People, that ever were in him, or did ever lie before him from the beginning of the world. For (1) The Relation is still the same. What tho' Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, those renowned Believers, be in their graves, and those that succeed be far inferiour to them in Grace and spiritual Excellency; yet saith the Church, Doubtless thou art our Father. There is the same tie and bond betwixt the Father and the youngest weakest child in the family, as the eldest and strongest. (2) His pity and mercy is still the same, for that endures for ever: his bowels yern as tenderly over his people in their present, as ever they did in any past afflictions or streights. (3) The rage and malice of his and his peoples enemies is still the same, they will reflect as blasphemously and dishonourably upon God now, should he give up his people, as ever they did. Moses's Argument is as good now as ever it was, What will the Egyptians say? and so is Joshua's too, What wilt thou do unto thy great name? Oh! if these things were more throughly studied and believed, they would appease many Fears.

2. Rule. Work upon your hearts the consideration of the many mischiefs and miseries men draw upon themselves and others, both in this world and that to come, by their own sinful fears.

1. The miseries and calamities that sinful fear brings upon men in this world are unspeakable: this is it that hath plunged the Consciences of so many poor wretches into such deep distresses; this it is that hath put them upon the Rack, and made them roar like men in Hell among the Damned. Some have been recovered, and others have perished in these deeps of horror and despair. In the year 1550 there was at Ferrara in Italy one Faninus, who by reading good Books was by the grace of God converted to the knowledge of the truth, wherein he found such sweetness, that by constant reading, meditation and prayer he grew so expert in the Scriptures, that he was able to instruct others; and tho' he durst not go out of the bounds of his Calling to preach openly, yet by conference and private exhortations he did good to many. This coming to the knowledge of the Pope's Clients, they apprehended and committed him to Prison, where he renounced the Truth, and was thereupon released: But it was not long before the Lord met with him for it; so as falling into horrible torments of Conscience, he was near unto utter despair; nor could he be freed from those terrors, before he had fully resolved to venture his life more faithfully in the service of Christ.

Clark's examp. p. 27.

Dreadful was that voice which poor Spira seemed to hear in his own Conscience, as soon as ever his sinful fears had prevailed upon him to renounce the truth. Thou wicked wretch, thou hast denied me, thou hast renounced the Covenant of thine obedience, thou hast broken thy vow; hence, Apostate, bear with thee the sentence of thine eternal Damnation. Presently he falls into a swoon, quaking and trembling and still affirmed to his Death, that from that time he never found any ease or peace in his mind; but professed, that he was captivated under the revenging hand of the Almighty God; and that he continually heard the sentence of Christ, the just Judge, against him; and that he knew he was utterly undone, and could neither hope for Grace, or that Christ should intercede for him to the Father.

In our dreadful Marian days, Sir John Cheek, who had been Tutor to King Edward VI. was cast into the Tower, and kept close Prisoner, and there put to this miserable choice, either to forgo his life, or that which was more precious, his liberty of Conscience; neither could his liberty be procured by his great friends at any lower rate than to recant his Religion: This he was very unwilling to accept of, 'till his hard Imprisonment, joined with threats of much worse in case of his refusal, at last wrought so upon him whilst he consulted with flesh and blood, as drew from him an Abrenunciation of that Truth which he had so long professed, and still believed: Upon this he was restor'd to his liberty, but never to his comfort; for the sense of his own Apostacy, and the daily sight of the cruel butcheries exercised upon others for their constant adherence to the Truth, made such impressions upon his broken Spirit, as brought him to a speedy end of his life, yet not without some comfortable hopes at last.

Our own Histories abound with multitudes of such doleful Examples.

Some

Some have been in such horror of Conscience, that they have chosen strangling rather than life; they have felt that anguish of Conscience that hath put them upon desperate resolutions and attempts against their own lives to rid themselves of it. This was the case of Peter Moon, who being driven by his own fears to deny the Truth, presently fell into such horror of Conscience, that seeing a sword hanging in his Parlor, would have sheathed it in his own bowels. So Spira before-mention'd when he was near his end, saw a knife on the table, and running to it, would have mischiefed himself, had not his Friends prevented him; thereupon he said, Oh! that I were above God, for I know that he will have no mercy on me. He lay about eight weeks (saith the Historian) in a continual burning, neither desiring or receiving any thing but by force, and that without digestion, till he became as an Anatomy; vehemently raging for Drink, yet fearful to live long; dreadful of Hell, yet coveting Death; in a continual torment, yet his own Tormentor; and thus consuming himself with grief and horror, impatience and despair, like a living Man in Hell, he represented an extraordinary example of God's Justice and Power, and so ended his miserable Life.

Surely it were good to fright our selves by such dreadful Examples out of our sinful Fears; is any misery we can fear from the hands of man like this? Oh, Reader! believe it, it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an angry God. Hadst thou ever felt the rage and efficacy of a wounded and distressed Conscience, as these poor wretches felt it, no fears or threats of Men should drive thee into such an Hell upon Earth as this is.

2. And yet, tho' this be a doleful case, it is not the worst case your own sinful fears will cast you into, except the Lord overcome and extinguish them in you by the fear of his Name, they will not only bring you into a kind of Hell upon Earth, but into Hell it self for evermore: for so the righteous God hath said in his word of truth, Rev. 21. 8. But the fearful and unbelieving, &c. shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. Behold here the Martial Law of Heaven executed upon Cowards and Renegadoes, whose fears make them revolt from Christ in the time of danger. Think upon this, you timorous and faint-hearted Professors: you cannot bear the thoughts of lying in a nasty Dungeon, how will you lie then in the lake of fire and brimstone? You are afraid of the face and frowns of a man that shall die, but how will you live among Devils? Is the wrath of man like the fury of God poured out? Is not the little finger of God heavier than the loins of all the Tyrants in the World? Remember what Christ hath said, Mat. 10. 33. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my father which is in Heaven. Reader, the time is coming when he that spake these words shall break out of Heaven with a shout, accompanied with Myriads of Angels, and ten thousands of his Saints, the Heavens and the Earth shall be in dreadful conflagrations round about him; the last Trump shall sound, the Graves shall open, the Earth and Sea shall give up the dead that are in them. Thine Eyes shall see him ascend the awful Throne of Judgment, his faithful ones that feared not to own and appear for him in the face of all enemies and dangers, sitting on the Bench as Assessors with him; and then to be disclaimed and renounced for ever by Jesus Christ in the face of that great Assembly, and proclaimed a Delinquent, a Traitor to him, that deniedst his Name and Truths because of the frowns of a fellow-creature long since withered as the grass. O how wilt thou be able to endure this! Now put both these together in thy serious consideration, think on the terrors of Conscience here, and the desperate horror of it in Hell; this as a parboiling, that as a roasting in the flames of God's insufferable wrath: these as some scalding drops sprinkled before-hand upon thy Conscience, that tender and sensible part of man; that as the lake burning for ever with fire and brimstone. Oh! who would suffer himself to be driven into all this misery, by the fears of those sufferings which can but touch the flesh; and for their duration, they are but for a moment!

Think, and think again upon those words of Christ, Mark 8. 35. He that will save his life, shall lose it. It may be a prolonging of a miserable life, a life worse than death, even in thine own account; a life without the comfort or joy of life; a life ending in the second death; and all this for fear of a trifle compared with what thou shalt afterwards feel in thine own Conscience, and less than a trifle. nothing, compared with what thou must suffer from God for ever.

3. Rule. He that will overcome his fears of sufferings, must foresee and provide before-hand for them.

The fear of Caution is a good cure to the fear of Distraction; the more of that, the less of this; this fear will cure that, as one fire draws forth another. Heb. 11. 7. Noah being moved with fear, prepared an Ark. In which he provided as much for the rest and quiet of his mind, as he did for the safety of his person and family. That which makes evils so frightful as they are, is their coming by way of surprize upon us. Those troubles that find us secure do leave us distracted and desperate. Presumption of continued tranquility proves one of the greatest aggravations of misery. Trouble will lie heavy enough when it comes by way of expectation, but it is intolerable when it comes quite contrary to expectation. It will be the lot of Babylon to suffer the unexpected Vials of God's wrath, and I wish none but she and her children may be so surprized. Rev 18. 7. Oh! it were well for us, if in the midst of our pleasant enjoyments we would be putting the difficultest Cases to our selves, and mingle a few such thoughts as these with all our earthly enjoyments and comforts.

I am now at ease in the midst of my habitation, but the time may be at hand when my habitation shall be in a Prison. I see no faces at present but those of friends, full of smiles and honours; I may see none shortly but the faces of enemies, full of frowns and terrors. I have now an Estate to supply my wants, and provide for my family; but this may shortly fall as a prey to the enemy, they may sweep away all that I have gathered, reap the Fruits of all my labours. —— impius has segetes. I have yet my life given me for a prey; but, oh! how soon may it fall into cruel and blood-thirsty hands! I have no better security for these things than the Martyrs had, who suffered the loss of all these things for Christ's sake. A double Advantage would result to us upon such meditations as these, viz. the Advantage,

1. Of acquaintance with
2. Of preparation for } Troubles.

1. Hereby our thoughts would be better acquainted with these evils; and the more they are acquainted, the less they will start and fright at them. We should not think it strange concerning the fiery trial, as it is 1 Pet. 4. 12. It is with our thoughts Thoughts as it is with young Colts, and so they start at every new thing they meet; but we cure them of it, by bringing them home to that they start at, and making them smell to it; better Acquaintance cures this startling Humour at them. The Newness of Evil, saith a late grave and learned Divine, is the Cause of fear, when the Mind it self hath had no preceding Encounter with it, whereby to judge of its Strength, nor Example of another Man's prosperous Issue, to confirm its Hopes in the like Success: For, as I noted before out of the Philosophers, Experience is instead of Armour, and is a kind of Fortitude, enabling both to judge, and to bear Troubles; for there are some Things which are μορμολύκεια καὶ περίαπτα, Scarecrows and Vizors which Children fear, only out of Ignorance; assoon as they are known they cease to be terrible.

Dr. Edw. Reynolds.

Epictet.

I know our Minds naturally reluctate, and decline such harsh and unpleasant Subjects: 'Tis hard to bring our Thoughts to them in good earnest, and harder to dwell so long as is necessary to this end upon them. We had rather take a pleasant Prospect of future Felicity and Prosperity in this World; of multiplying our Days as the Sand, and at last dying quietly in our Nest, as Job speaks. Our Thoughts run nimbly upon such pleasant Fancies like oyled Wheels, and have need of trigging, but when they come into the deep and dirty ways of suffering, there they drive heavily like Pharaoh's Chariots, dismounted from their Wheels. But that which is most pleasant, is not always most useful and necessary; our Lord was well acquainted with Griefs, though our Thoughts be such great Strangers to them, he often thought and spake of his Sufferings, and of the bloody Baptism, with which he was to be baptized, Luke 12. 50. and he not only minded his own Sufferings before-hand, but when he perceived the fond Imaginations, and vain Fancies of some that followed and professed him, deluding them with Expectations of earthly Prosperity and Rest; he gave their Thoughts a Turn to this less pleasing, but more needful Subject, the Things they were to suffer for his Name; instead of answering a foolish and groundless question, of sitting on his Right and Left-hand, like earthly Grandees, he rebukes the Folly of the Questionist, and asks a less pleasing Question, Matt. 20. 22. But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask, are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of? And to be baptized with the baptism that I shall be baptized with? q. d. You do but abuse your selves with such fond and idle Dreams, there is other Imployment cut out for you in the purposes of God; Instead of sitting upon Thrones and Tribunals, it would become you to think of being brought before them as Prisoners to receive your Doom and Sentence to die for my Sake, these Thoughts would do you a great deal more Service.

2. As such Meditations would acquaint us better, so they would prepare us better to encounter Troubles and difficult Things when they come. Readiness and Preparation would subdue and banish our Fears; we are never much scared with that for which our Minds are prepared. There is the same Difference in this Case, as there is betwixt a Soldier in compleat Armour, and ready at every point for his Enemy; and one that is alarm'd in his Bed, who hath laid his Cloaths in one Place, and his Arms in another, when his Enemy is breaking open his Chamber Door upon him. It was not therefore without the most weighty Reason, that the Apostle presses us so earnestly, Eph. 6. 13, 14. Take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand therefore, having your loyns girt about with truth, and having on the breast-plate of Righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace. We see the Benefit of such Provisions and Previsions for suffering in that great Example of Courage and Constancy, Acts 12. 13. I am ready (saith Paul) not only to be bound, but to die at Jerusalem. And the same Courage and Constancy remained in him, when he was entering the very Lists, and going to lay his very Neck upon the Block, 2 Tim. 4. 6. I am ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand. The word σπένδομαι properly signifies a Libation or drink-offering, wherein some conceive he alluded to the very kind of his own Death, viz. by the Sword: His Heart was brought to that frame, that he could with as much Willingness pour out his Blood for Christ, as the Priests used to pour out the drink-offering to the Lord. 'Tis true, all the Meditations and Preparations in the World made by us, are not sufficient in themselves to carry us through such difficult Services, 'tis one thing to see Death as our Fancy limns it out at a distance and another thing to look Death it self in the Face. We can behold the painted Lion without fear, but the living Lyon makes us tremble; but yet tho' our suffering-strength comes not from our own Preparations, or Forethoughts of Death, but from God's gracious Assistance, yet usually that assistance of his is communicated to us, in and by the conscionable and humble use of these means; let us therefore be found waiting upon God for Strength, Patience, and Resolutions to suffer as it becomes Christians, in the daily serious use of those means whereby he is pleased to communicate to his People.

Rule 4. If ever you will subdue your own slavish fears, Commit your selves, and all that is yours into the hands of God by Faith.

This Rule is fully confirmed by that Scripture, Prov. 16. 3. Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established. The greatest part of our Trouble and Burden in times of Danger, arises from the Unsetledness and Distraction of our own Thoughts, and the way to calm and quiet our Thoughts is to commit all to God. This Rule is to be applied for this End and Purpose when we are going to meet Death it self, and that in all its terrible Formalities, and most frightful appearances, 1 Pet. 4 9. Let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator. And if this committing Act of Faith be so useful at such a time, when the Thoughts must be supposed to be in the greatest hurry, and fears in their full Strength; much more will it establish the Heart, and calm its Passions in lesser Troubles, you know what Ease and Relief it would be to you, if you had a Trial depending in Law for your Estates, and your Hearts were overloaded and distracted with Cares and Fears about the Issue of it: If one whom you know to be very skilful and faithful, should say to you at such a time, trouble not your self any farther about this Business, never break an hour's sleep more for this Matter; be you as an unconcerned Spectator, commit it to me, me, and trust me with the Management of it; I will make it my own Concernment, and save you harmless. O what a Burden, what an heavy Load would you feel your selves eased of, assoon as you had thus transferred, and committed it to such a hand! then you would be able to eat with pleasure, and sleep in quietness: Much more ease and quietness doth your committing the Matter of your fears to God give, even so much more, as his power, wisdom, and faithfulness is greater than what is to be found in Men. But to make this Rule practicable, and improvable to peace, quietness of heart in an evil day, it will be necessary that you well understand,

1. What the committing act of Faith is.
2. What grounds and encouragements Believers have for it.

1. Study well the nature of this committing act of Faith, and what it supposes or implies in it; for all Men cannot commit themselves to God, 'tis his own People only that can do it; nor is it every thing they can commit to God, they cannot commit themselves to his care and protection in any way but only in his own ways. Know more particularly,

1. That he who will commit himself to God, must commit himself to him in well doing, as the Apostle limits it in 1 Pet. 4. 19. and in things agreeable to his will; else we would make God a Patron and Protector of our sins, Let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing. We cannot commit our Sins, but our Duties, to God's Protection: God is so great a Friend to Truth and Righteousness, that in such a Case he will not take your part, how dear soever you be to him, if Truth be found on your Enemies part, and the Mistake on yours. Think not to entitle God to your errors and failings, much less to any sinful designs: you may commit a doubtful Case to him to be decided, but not a sinful Case to be protected. It is in vain to shelter any Cause of your own under his Wings, except you can write upon it as David did, Ps. 74. 22. Thine own cause, O Lord, thine own as well as mine; Lord, plead thine own cause.

2. He that commits his All to God, supposes and firmly believes that all Events and Issues of Things are in God's Hands; that he only can direct, over-rule, and order them all as he pleaseth. Upon this Supposition the committing acts of Faith in all ours fears and distresses are built: I trusted in thee, O Lord, I said thou art my God, my times are in thy hand, deliver me from the hands of my enemies, and from them that persecute me. His firm Assent to this great Truth, that his times were in God's hands, was the Reason why he committed himself into that hand. If our Times, our Lives, or Comforts were in our Enemies hands, it were to little purpose for us to commit our selves into God's Hands. And here the contrary Senses and Methods of Faith and Unbelief are as conspicuous as in any one thing whatsoever: Unbelief persuades Men that their Lives and all that is dear to them is in the Hands of their Enemies, and therefore persuades them the best way they can take to secure themselves, is by compliance with the Will of their Enemies, and pleasing them: But Faith determines quite contrary, it tells us, We and all that is ours is in God's hand, and no enemy can touch us or ours till He give them a permission; and therefore it is our duty and interest to please him, and commit all to him.

3. The committing of our selves to God implies the Resignation of our Wills to the Will of God, to be disposed of as seems good in his Eyes: So David commits to God the Event of that sad and doubtful Providence which made him fly for his Life from a strong Conspiracy, 2 Sam. 15. 25. And the king said unto Zadok, Carry back the Ark of God into the city; if I shall find favour in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again, and shew me both it and his habitation: but if he thus say, I have no delight in thee, behold here am I, let him do to me as seemeth good to him; q. d. Lord, the Conspiracy against my Life is strong, the Danger great, the Issue exceeding doubtful: but I commit it all into thy Hand; if David may yet be used in any farther Service for his God, I shall see this City and thy lovely Temple again: but if not, I lie at thy Foot to be disposed either for Life or Death, for the earthly or the heavenly Jerusalem, as seemeth best in thine Eyes. This Submission to divine Pleasure is included in the committing act of Faith. Christian, what saist thou to it? Is thy will content to go back, that the will of God may come on, and take place of it? It may be thou canst refer a difficult Case to God, provided that he will determine and issue it according to thy Desires; but in Truth that is no Submission or Resignation at all, but a sinful limiting of, and prescribing to God. It was an excellent Reply that a choice Christian once made to another; when a beloved and only Child lay in a dangerous Sickness at the point of Death, a Friend asked the Mother, What would you now desire of God in reference to your Child? Would you beg of him its Life or Death in this Extremity it is now in? The Mother answered, I refer that to the Will of God. But, said her Friend, if God would refer it to you, what would you chuse then? Why truly said she, if God would refer it to me, I would even refer it to God again. This is the true committing of our selves and our troublesome Concerns to the Lord.

4. The committing Act of Faith implies our renouncing and disclaiming all Confidence and Trust in the Arm of Flesh, and an Expectation of Relief from God only. If we commit our selves to God, we must cease from Man, Isa. 2. 22. To trust God in part, and the Creature in part, is to set one foot upon a Rock and the other in a Quicksand. Those Acts of Faith that give the intire Glory to God, give real Relief and Comfort to us.

2. Let us see what Grounds and Encouragements the People of God have to commit themselves and all the Matters of their fear to God, and so to enjoy the Peace and Comfort of a resigned Will; and there are two Sorts of Encouragements before you, let the Case be as difficult and frightful as it will; you may find sufficient Encouragements in God, and somewhat from your selves, viz. your Relation to him, and Experiences of him.

1. In God there is all that your Hearts can desire to encourage you to trust him over all, and commit all into his Hands. For,

1. He is able to help and relieve you; let the Case be never so bad, yet let Israel hope in the Lord, for with the Lord is plenteous redemption, Psal. 130. 7, 8. Plenteous Redemption (i. e.) all the Stores of Power, choice of Methods, Plenty of Means, abundance of ways to save his People, when they can see no way out of their Troubles: therefore hope Israel in Jehovah.

2. As his Power is Almighty, so his Wisdom is Infinite and unsearchable; He is a God of Judg- ment, bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. 30. 18. When the Apoſtle Peter had related the wonderful Preſervations of Noah in the Deluge, and of Lot in Sodom, one in a general Deſtruction of the World by Water, and the other in the Overthrow of thoſe Cities by Fire; he concludes, and ſo ſhould we, The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, 2 Pet. 2. 9. Some Men have much Power, but little Wiſdom to manage it, others are wiſe and prudent, but want Ability; in God there is an infinite fulneſs of both.

3. His Love to, and Tenderneſs over his People, is tranſcendent and unparallell'd; and this ſets his Wiſdom and Power both a work for their good; hence it is that his Eyes of Providence run continually throughout the whole Earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the Behalf of them whoſe Hearts are perfect, (i. e.) upright towards him, 2 Chron. 16. 9. Thus you ſee how he is every way fitted as a proper Object of your Truſt.

2. Conſider your ſelves, and you ſhall find Encouragements to commit all to God. For,

1. You are his Children, and to whom ſhould Children commit themſelves in Dangers and Fears but to their own father? Doubtleſs thou art our father, ſaith thy diſtreſſed Church, Iſa. 63. 15, 16. Yea, Chriſtian, Thy maker is thy husband, Iſa. 54. 5. Is not that a ſufficient ground to caſt thy ſelf upon him? What! a Child not truſt its own Father? a Wife not commit her ſelf to her own Husband?

2. You have truſted him with a far greater Concern already than your Eſtates, Liberties, or Lives; you have committed your Souls to him, and your eternal Intereſts, 2 Tim. 1. 12. Shall we commit the Jewel, and diſpute the Cabinet? truſt him for Heaven, and doubt him for Earth?

3. You have ever found him faithful in all that you truſted him with, all your Experiences are ſo many good grounds of Confidence, Pſal. 9. 10 Well then, reſolve to truſt God over all, and quietly leave the Diſpoſe of every thing to him; he hath been with you in all former Straights, Wants and Fears, hitherto he hath helped you, and cannot he do ſo again, except you tell him how? Oh! truſt in his Wiſdom, Power and Love, and lean not to your own Underſtandings. The fruit of Reſignation will be Peace.

Rule 5. If ever you will get rid of your fears and diſtractions, get your affections mortified to the world, and to the inordinate and immoderate love of every enjoyment in the world.

The more you are mortified, the leſs you will be terrified; 'tis not the dead, but the living World, that puts our Hearts into ſuch fears and tremblings; if our Hearts were once crucified, they wou'd ſoon be quieted. 'Tis the Strength of our affections that puts ſo much Strength into our afflictions. It was not therefore without great Reaſon that the Apoſtle compares the Life of a Chriſtian to the Life of a Soldier, who if he mean to follow the Camp, and acquit himſelf bravely in fight, muſt not intangle himſelf with the affairs of this life, 2 Tim. 2. 4. Sure there is no following Chriſt's Camp, but with a diſintangled Heart from the World, for proportionable to the Heat of our Love will be the ſtrength and height of our fears about theſe things; more particularly, if ever you will rid your ſelves of your uncomfortable and uncomely fears, uſe all God's Means to mortifie your Affections to the exorbitant Eſteem and Love of,

1. Your Eſtates. 2. Your Liberty. 3. Your Lives.

1. Get mortified and cooled Hearts to your Poſſeſſions and Eſtates in the World. The pooreſt Age afforded the richeſt Chriſtians and nobleſt Martyrs. Ships deepeſt laden are not beſt for Encounters. The believing Hebrews took joyfully the ſpoiling of their goods, knowing in themſelves that they had in heaven a better and enduring ſubſtance, Heb. 10. 34. They carried it rather like unconcerned ſpectators than the true proprietors; they rejoiced when rude Soldiers carried out their Goods, as if ſo many Friends had been bringing them in. And whence was this, but from an Heart fixed upon Heaven, and mortified to Things upon Earth? Doubtleſs they eſteemed and valued their Eſtates as the good Providences of God for their more comfortable Accommodation in this World; but it ſeems they did, and oh that we could look upon them as Mercies of the loweſt and meaneſt Rank and Nature. The Subſtance laid up in Heaven was a better Subſtance, and as long as that was ſafe, the Loſs of this did not afflict them.

They could bleſs God for theſe Things which for a little time did miniſter Refreſhment to them, but they knew them to be tranſitory Enjoyments, things that would make to themſelves Wings and flee away, if their Enemies had not touch'd them; but the Subſtance laid up for them in Heaven, that was an enduring ſubſtance. So far as thoſe earthly Things might further them towards Heavenly things, ſo far they prized and valued them, but if Satan would turn them into ſnares and temptations to deprive them of their better Subſtance in Heaven, they could eaſily ſlight them, and take the Spoiling of them joyfully. In a ſtreſs of Weather, when the Ship is ready to ſink and founder in a Storm, all Hands are readily employed to throw the richeſt Goods over-board; no Man ſaith it's pity to caſt them away, but reaſon dictates to a Man in that Caſe, Better theſe periſh, than I periſh with and for them. Theſe be the Wares that ſome will not caſt over-board, and therefore they are ſaid to drown Men in Perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Demas would rather periſh than part with theſe things, 2 Tim. 4. 10. But, Reader, conſider ſeriouſly what Comfort they can yield thee, when thou muſt look upon them as the price for which thou haſt ſold Heaven, and all the Hopes of Glory; even as much as the price of Blood yielded Judas; and ſo they will enſnare thee, if thy unmortified Heart be over-heated with the Love of them as his was.

2. Be mortified to your Liberty, and take heed of placing too great an Eſteem upon it, or Neceſſity in it. Liberty is a deſirable thing to the very Birds of the Air, accommodate them the beſt you can in your Cages, feed them with the richeſt Fare, they had rather be cold and hungry with their Liberty in the Woods, than fat and warm in your Houſes. But yet, as ſweet as it is, there may be more Comfort and Sweetneſs in parting with it, than in keeping it, as the Caſe may ſtand. The Doors of a Priſon can lock you in, but they cannot lock the Comforter out. Paul and Silas loſt their Liberty for Chriſt, but not their Comfort with it; they never were ſo truly at Liberty, as when their Feet were made faſt in the Stocks, they never far'd ſo deliciouſly as when they fed upon Priſoners Fare. God ſpread a Table for them in the Priſon, ſent them in a rich Feaſt, yea, and they had Muſick at their Feaſt too, and that at midnight, Acts 16. 25.

Patmos

Patmos was a barren Island, and a Place designed for banish'd Persons; it lay in the Ægean Sea, not far from the Coast of the lesser Asia: it was inhabited by none, because of the exceeding Barrenness of it, but such who were appointed to it for their Punishment; so that here John could meet with no more earthly Refreshment than what the barren Rocks, or wild and desperate Persons condemned to live upon it, could afford. Ay, but there, there it was that Christ appeared to him in unexpressible Glory; there it was that he had those ravishing Visions, and saw the whole Scheme of Providence in the Government of this World; there he saw the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of Heaven, as a Bride prepared for her Husband. This made a Patmos become a Paradise; never did any Place afford him such Comfort as this did. So that Christians may not think there is so strict and necessary a Connexion betwixt Liberty and Comfort, that he that takes away the first, must needs deprive them of the other.

Rev. 1, 9. 10.

Again, Suppose we should be so fond of our Liberty as to exchange Truth and a good Conscience for it: cannot God so imbitter it to you, yea, hath he not so imbitter'd it to many, that they were quickly weary of it, and glad of an Opportunity to exchange it for a Prison. Our own Martyrology furnishes us with many sad Examples of it. Oh! what will you do with your bitter dear-bought Liberty, when your Peace is taken away from the inward Man? when God shall clap up your Souls in Prison, and put your Consciences into his Bonds and Fetters, then you will say as the Martyr did, I am in Prison till I be in Prison.

3. Be mortified to the inordinate and fond Love of Life, as ever you expect Relief against the Fears of Death. Reason thy self into a lower value of thy Life. Methinks you have Arguments enough to cure your Fondness in this point. Have you found it such a pleasant Life to you, for so much of it as is past? You know how the Apostle represents it, 2 Cor. 5. 4. We that are in this tabernacle do groan being burthened. And is a burthen'd and a groaning Life so desirable? You know also as he speaks in the next Verse, that whilst you are at home in the body, you are absent from the Lord. And is a state of Absence from Jesus Christ so desirable to a Soul that loves him? Can you find much pleasure so far from home? You may fansie what you will, but upon serious Recollection you will be able to tell your selves, that till you be dead you will never be out of the reach of Satan's temptations, never freed from your own indwelling Corruptions, these Conflicts cannot have an end till Life be ended. You also stand convinc'd that till you be dead your Souls cannot be satisfied, nor your Desires be at rest; have what Comforts soever from God in the way of Faith and Course of Duties, your Hearts are still off the Center, and will still gravitate and gasp heavenward. You also know that die you must, and the time of your Departure is at hand; and of all Deaths, if you might have your Choice, none is more honourable to God, or like to be so evidential and comfortable to you, as a violent Death for Christ; therein you come to him by Consent and Choice, not by Necessity and Constraint; therein you give a publick Testimony for Christ, which is the highest use that ever our Blood can be put to, or honoured by; and for the Pain and Torment, as the Martyr said, He that takes away from my torment, takes away from my reward. But even in that point God can make it easier to you than a natural death would be; he will be with you in your Extremity, and administer such reviving Cordials as other Men must not look to taste, at least not ordinarily, they being prepared and reserved for such, against such an Hour.

Oh then work out the inordinate Love of Life by working in such mortifying Considerations upon your own Hearts; and if once you gain but this point, you will quickly find all your Pains and Prayers richly answered in the Ease and Rest of your Hearts, in the most scaring and frightful times.

Rule 6. Eye the encouraging Examples of those that have trod the path of sufferings before you, and strive to imitate such worthy patterns.

Behold the Cloud of Witnesses encompassing you round about; a Cloud like that over the Israelites to direct you; yea, a Cloud for multitude of excellent Persons to animate and encourage you, Heb. 12. 1. Oh take them for an ensample in suffering affliction and patience, Ja. 5. 10. Examples of excellent Persons that have broken the Ice, and beaten the Path before us, are of excellent use to suppress our Fears, and rouze our Courage in our own Encounters.

The first Sufferers had the hardest task; they that first entred the Lists for Christ, wanted those Helps to suppress fear which they have left unto us. Strange and untried Torments are most terrible, for magnitudinem rerum consuetudo subducit, trial and Acquaintance abates the formidable greatness of Evils; they knew not the strength of that Enemy they were to engage, but we fight with an Enemy that hath been often beaten and triumph'd over by our Brethren that went before us. Certainly we that live in the last times have the best Helps that ever any had to subdue their Fears; we have heard of the Courage and Constancy of our Brethren, in as sharp Trials of their Courage as ever we can be called to; we have read with what Christian Gallantry they have triumphed over all sorts of sufferings and torments, how they have been strengthened with all Might in the inner Man unto all Patience and Long-suffering, with Joyfulness, 1 Col. 11. how they have gone away from the Courts that censured and punished them, rejoycing that they were honoured to be dishonoured for Christ, as the strict reading of that Text is, Acts 5. 41. counting the Reproaches of Christ greater than the Treasures of Egypt, Heb. 11. 26. which at that time was the Magazine of the World for Riches: You read what trials they have had of cruel mockings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments; how they were stoned, sawn asunder, tempted slain with the sword, wandered about in Sheeps Skins, and Goats Skins, destitute, afflicted, tormented, Heb. 11. 36, 37. In all which they obtained a good Report; they came out of the Field with triumphant Faith and Patience; and this was not the Effect of an overheated Zeal at the first Outset, but the same Spirit of Courage was found among Christians in after Ages, who have put off their Persecutors with a kind of pleasant Scorn and Contempt of Torments.

ὅτι κατηξιώθησαν ἐπιμαθεῖναι.

So did Basil, truly sirnamed the Great, when Valens the Emperor in a great Rage threatned him with Banishment, and Tortures, as to the first, said he, I little regard it, for the Earth is the Lord's, and the Fulness thereof; and as for Tortures what can they do upon such a poor thin Body as mine, nothing but Skin and Bone? And at another time when Eusebius Governour of Pontus told him in a great Rage, he would tear his very Liver out of his Bowels: Truly said Basil, you shall do me a very good turn in it, to take out my naughty Liver; which inflames and diseaseth my whole Body. Their Enemies have professed the Christians put them to shame, by smiling at their Cruelties and Threatnings. Ignatius his Love to Christ had so perfectly overcome all Fears of Sufferings, that when he was going to be thrown for a Prey among the Lyons and Leopards, he professed he longed to be among them, and, said he, if they will not dispatch me the sooner, I will provoke them, that I may be with my sweet Jesus. And if we come down to later Ages, we shall find as stout Champions for Christ. The Courage and Undauntedness of Luther is trumpeted abroad throughout the Christian World, it would swell this small Tract too much, but to note the most eminent Instances of his Courage for Christ: The last he gave was by his Sorrow in his last Sickness, that he must carry his Blood to the Grave. The like Heroick Spirit appeared in divers Persons of Honour and Eminency, who zealously espoused the same Cause of Reformation with him. Remarkable to this purpose is that famous Epistle written by Ulricus ab Hutten, a German Knight, in Defence of Luther's Cause against the Cardinals and Bishops assembled at Worms. I will go through (said he) with what I have undertaken against you, and will stir up men to seek their freedom: Such as yield not to me at first, I will overcome with importunity; I neither care nor fear what may befal me, being prepared for either event; either to ruin you, to the great benefit of my Country, or my self to fall with a good Conscience; therefore that you may see with what Confidence I contemn your Threats, I do profess my self to be your irreconcilable enemy, whilst ye persecute Luther and such as he is. No power of yours, no injury of fortune shall alter this mind in me; though you take away my life, yet this well deserving of mine towards my countries liberty shall not die. I know that my endeavour to remove such as you are, and to place worthy Ministers in your room, is acceptable to God; and in the last judgment, I trust it will be safer for me to have offended you, than to have had your favour.

Socrates. Hist. l. 4. c. 26.

It was also a brave Heroick Spirit by which John Duke of Saxony was acted to defend the Reformation, who despising all the Favours and Offers of the Court, and of Rome, and the Terrors of Death it self; appeared as my Author speaks in its behalf against all the Devils, and the Pope, in three publick Imperial Assemblies, saying openly to their Faces, I must serve God, or the World; and which of these two do ye think is the better? And as soon as Luther's Sermons were forbidden, he hasted away, saying, I will not stay there where I cannot have my Liberty to serve God:

Spangenberg. ad An. 1531.

And now, Reader, thou hast a little taste of the Courage and Zeal of those Worthies who are gone before thee in Defence of that Cause for which thou feareſt to suffer. Most Men, saith Chrysostom, that read or hear such Examples, are like the Spectators of the Roman Gladiators, who stood by and praised their Courage, but durst not enter the Lists, to undertake what they did. If ever thou wilt get like Courage for Christ, thus improve such famous Examples.

1. Make use of them to obviate the Prejudice of singularity; you see you have store of good Company, the same things you are like to suffer for Christ, have been accomplished in the rest of your Brethren in the World, 1 Pet. 5. 9.

2. Improve them against the Prejudice of all that shame that attends Sufferings, here you may see the most excellent Persons in the World reckoning it their Glory to suffer the vilest things for Jesus Christ, Acts 5. 31. Heb. 11. 26.

3. Improve them against the Conceit of the insupportableness of Sufferings. Lo here, poor weak Creatures which have been carried honourably and comfortably through the cruellest and difficulteſt Sufferings for Christ. Our Women and Children, not to speak of Men (saith Tertullian) overcome their Tormentors, and the Fire cannot fetch so much as a sigh from them.

4. Improve them against thine own Unbelief, and Staggerings at the Faithfulness of God in that Promise, Isa. 43. 2. When thou passest through the fire, I will be with thee, &c. Lo here you have the recorded and faithful Testimonies of such as have tried it, with one Voice witnessing for God, Thy word is truth, thy word is truth.

5. Improve them against the sensible weakness of your own Graces, are you afraid your Faith, Love, and Patience are too weak to carry you through great Trials? Why, doubtless so were many of them too, they were Men of like Fears, troubled with a bad Heart, and a busie Devil as well as you, they also had their Clouds and Damps as you have; yet the Almighty Power of God supported them; and out of weakness they were made strong: Despond not therefore but get a Judgment satisfied, Psal. 44. 22. A Conscience sprinkled, 2 Tim. 1. 7. And a Call cleared, Dan. 6. 10. Exercise Faith also with respect to Divine Assistances, and everlasting Rewards as they did: and doubt not but the same God that enabled them to finish their Course with Joy, will be as good to you as he was to them. Consider, Christ hath done as much for you as he did for any of them, and deserves as much from you as from any of them; and hath prepared the same Glory for you, that he prepared for them: O that such Considerations might provoke you to shew as much Courage and Love to Christ, as any of them ever did.

Rule 7. If ever you will get above the power of your own fears in a suffering day, make haste to clear your interest in Christ, and your pardon in his blood before that evil day come.

The clearer this is, the bolder you will be; an assured Christian was never known to be a Coward in Sufferings: It is impossible to be clear of Fears, till you are cleared of the Doubts about Interest in, and pardon by Christ. Nothing is found more strengthning to our Fears, than that which clouds our Evidences; and nothing more to quiet and cure our Fears than that which clears our Evidences. The shedding abroad of God's Love in our Hearts, will quickly fill them with a Spirit of glorying in Tribulations, Rom. 5. 5. When the believing Hebrews once came to know in themselves that they had an enduring Substance in Heaven, they quickly found in themselves an unconcerned Heart for the Loss of their Comforts on Earth, Heb. 10. 34. and so should we too. For,

1. Assu-

1. Assurance satisfies a man that his treasure and true happiness is secured to him, and laid out of the reach of all his enemies; and so long as that is safe, he hath all the reason in the world to be quiet, and chearful, I know (saith Paul) whom I have believed, and am perswaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day, 2 Tim. 1. 12. And he gives this as the reason why he was not ashamed of Christ's sufferings.

2. The assured Christian knows that if death it self come, (which is the worst men can inflict) he shall be no loser by the exchange; nay he shall make the best bargain that ever he made since he first parted with all in his afflictions, to follow Christ. There are two rich bargains a Christian makes; one is when he exchanges the world for Christ in his first choice at his conversion, in point of love and estimation: the other is when he actually parts with the world for Christ at his dissolution: both these are rich bargains, and upon this ground it was the Apostle said, To me to live is Christ, and to die is gain, Phil. 1. 21. The death of a believer in Christ, is gain unspeakable, but if a man would make the utmost gain by dying, he shall find it in dying for Christ as well as in Christ: And to shew you wherein the gain of such a death lies, let a few particulars be weighed, wherein the gain will be cast up in both; he that is assured he dies in Christ, knows,

1. That his living time is his labouring time, but his dying time is his harvest time, whilst we live we are plowing and sowing in all the duties of Religion, but when we die, then we reap the fruit and comfort of all our Labours and Duties, Gal. 6. 8, 9. As much therefore as the reaping time is better than the sowing and plowing time, so much better is the Death than the Life of a Believer.

2. A Believers living time is his fighting time, but his dying time is his conquering and triumphing time, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. The conflict is sharp, but the triumph is sweet; and as much as victory and triumph is better than fighting, so much is Death better than Life, to him that dieth in Jesus.

3. A Believers living time is his tiresom and weary time, but his dying time is his resting and sleeping time. Isa. 57. 2. Here we spend and faint, there we rest in our beds, and as much as refreshing rest in sleep is better than tiring and fainting, so much is a Believers death better than his life.

4. A Believers living time is his waiting and longing time, but his time of dying is the time of enjoying what he hath long wished and waited for, Phil. 1. 23. Here we groan and sigh for Christ, there we behold and enjoy Christ, and so much as vision and fruition is better and sweeter than hoping and waiting for it; so much is a Believers death better than his life.

2. As the advantage a Believer makes of death is great to him by dying only in Christ; so it is much greater, and the richest improvement that can be made of death to die for Christ as well as in Christ: For compare them in a few particulars and you shall find;

1. That though a natural death hath less horrour, yet a violent death for Christ hath more honour in it. To him that dies united with Christ the grave is a bed of rest; but to him that dies as a Martyr for Christ, the grave is a bed of honour. To you (saith the Apostle) it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe, but also to suffer for his sake, 1 Phil. 29. To you it is granted as a great honour and favour to suffer for Christ; all that live in Christ have not the honour to lay down their lives for Christ. It was the great trouble of Ludovicus Marsacus a Knight of France, to be exempted because of his dignity, from wearing his chain for Christ, as the other Prisoners did; and he resented it, as a great injury, Give me (saith he to his Keeper) my chain as well as they, and create me a Knight of that noble Order.

Cur me non quoque torque donas, & illustris illius ordinis militem non creas?

2. By a natural death we only submit our selves to the unavoidable consequence of sin, but in dying a violent death for Christ, we give our testimony against the evil of sin, and for the precious truths of Jesus Christ. The first is the payment of a debt of justice due by the fall of Adam; the second is the payment of a debt of thankfulness and obedience due to Christ, who redeemed us with his own Blood. Thus we become witnesses for God, as well as sufferers upon the account of sin: In the first, sin witnesseth against us, in this we witness against it; and indeed it is a great testimony against the evil of sin: We declare to all the world that there is not so much evil in a Dungeon, in a bloody Ax, or consuming flames; as there is in sin: That it is far better to lose our carnal friends, estates, liberties, and lives, than part with Christ's truths and a good Conscience, as Zuinglius said, What sort of death should not a Christian chuse, what punishment should he not rather undergo; yea, into what vault of hell should he not rather chuse to be cast than to witness against truth and Conscience.

Quas non oportet mortes præeligere, quod non supplicium potius ferre, imo in quam profundam inferni Abyssum non intrare, quam contra conscientiam attestari?

3. A natural death in Christ may be as safe to our selves, but a violent death for Christ, will be more beneficial to others; by the former we shall come to heaven our selves, but by the latter we may bring many Souls thither. The blood of the Martyrs is truly called the seed of the Church. Many waxed confident by Paul's bonds, his sufferings fell out to the furtherance of the Gospel, and so may ours: In this case a Christian, like Sampson, doth greater service against Satan and his cause, by his death, than by his life.

If we only die a natural death in our beds we die in possession of the truths of Christ our selves; but if we die Martyrs for Christ, we secure that precious inheritance to the generations to come, and those that are yet unborn shall bless God, not only for his truths, but for our courage, zeal, and constancy by which it was preserved for them, and transmitted to them.

By all this you see that death to a Believer is great gain, it's great gain if he only die in Christ, it's all that, and a great deal more added, if he also die for Christ: and he that is assured of such advantages by death either way, must needs feel his fears of death shrink away before such assurances; yea, he will rather have life in patience, and death in desire; he will not only submit quietly, but rejoyce exceedingly to be used by God in such honourable imployment. Assurance will call a bloody death a safe passage to Canaan thro' the Red Sea. It will call Satan that instigates these his instruments, and all that are imployed in such bloody work by him, so many Balaams brought to curse, curse, but they do indeed bless the people of God, and not curse them. The assured Christian, looks upon his death as his wedding day, Rev. 19. 7. And therefore it doth not much differ whether the horse sent to fetch him to Christ be pale, or red, so he may be with Christ his love as Ignatius call'd him.

He looks upon death as his day of enlargement out of Prison, 2 Cor. 5. 8. and it is not much odds what hand opens the door, or whether a friend or enemy close his eyes, so he have his liberty, and may be with Christ.

O then, give the Lord no rest till your hearts be at rest by the assurance of his love, and the pardon of your sins; when you can boldly say the Lord is your help, you will quickly say what immediately follows, I will not fear what man shall do unto me, Heb 13. 6. And why, if thy heart be upright, mayst thou not attain it? Full assurance is possible, else it had not been put into the command. 2 Pet. 1. 10. The sealing graces are in you, the sealing spirit is ready to do it for you, the sealing promises belong to you; but we give not all diligence, and therefore go without the comfort of it. Would we pray more, and strive more, would we keep our hearts with a stricter watch, mortifie sin more throughly, and walk before God more accurately; how soon may we attain this blessed assurance, and in it an excellent cure for our distracting and slavish Fears.

8. Rule. Let him that designs to free himself of distracting fears, be careful to maintain the purity of his conscience, and integrity of his ways, in the whole course of his conversation in this world.

Uprightness will give us boldness, and Purity will yield us peace. Isa. 32. The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. Look as fear follows guilt and guile, so peace and quietness follow righteousness and sincerity, Prov. 28. 1. The wicked flee when none pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion. His confidence is great, because his conscience is quiet, the peace of God guards his heart and mind. There are three remarkable steps by which Christians rise to the height of courage in tribulations, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. First they are justified and acquitted from guilt by Faith, v. 1. Then they are brought into a state of favour and acceptation with God, v. 2. Thence they rise one step higher, even to a view of Heaven, and the glory to come, v. 3. and from thence they take an easie step to glorying in tribulations, v. 4.

I say, 'tis an easie step; for let a Man once obtain the pardon of sin, the favour of God, and a believing view and prospect of the glory to come; and it is so easie to triumph in tribulation, in such a station as that is, that it will be as hard to hinder it, as to hinder a man from laughing when he is tickl'd.

Christians have always found it a spring of courage and comfort, 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our rejoicing, even the testimony of our consciences, that in all sincerity and godly simplicity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in this world. Their hearts did not reproach them with by-ends in Religion; their consciences witnessed that they made not Religion a cloak to cover any fleshly design, but were sincere in what they professed; and this enabl'd them to rejoice in the midst of sufferings. An earthen vessel set empty to the fire will crack and fly in pieces; and so will an hypocritical, formal, and meer nominal Christian: but he that hath such substantial and real Principles of courage as these within him, will endure the trial, and be never the worse for the fire.

The very Heathens discovered the Advantage of moral integrity, and the peace it yielded to their natural consciences in times of trouble. Nil conscire tibi, nullâ pallescere culpa, Hic murus aheneus esto,—— It was to them as a wall of brass. Much more will godly simplicity, and the sprinkling of the blood of Christ upon our consciences, secure and encourage our hearts. This Atheistical Age laughs conscience and purity to scorn; but let them laugh, this it is will make thee laugh when they shall cry. Paul exercised himself, or made it his business, To have always a conscience void of offence, both towards God and towards Man, Acts 24. 16. And it was richly worth his labour, it repayed him ten thousand fold in the peace, courage, and comfort it gave him in all the troubles of his life, which were great and many.

ἀσκῶ meditor, operam do.

Conscience must be the bearing shoulder on which the burden must lie; beware therefore it be not gauled with guilt, or put out of joint by any fall into sin, 'tis sad bearing on such a shoulder; instead of bearing your burdens, you will not be able to bear its pain and anguish. To prevent this, carefully observe these Rules.

1. Over-awe your hearts every day and in every place with the eye of God. This walking as before God will keep you upright, Gen. 17. 1. If you so speak and live as those that know God sees you, such will be your uprightness, that you will not care if all the world see you too. An artist came to Drusius, and offered to build him an house so contrived, that he might do what he would within doors, and no man see him: Nay, said Drusius, so build it that every one may see.

2. Do no action, undertake no design that you dare not preface with Prayer; this is your Rule, Phil. 4. 6. Touch not that you dare not pray for a blessing upon; if you dare not pray, dare not engage; if you cannot send your Prayers before, be confident shame and guilt will follow after.

3. Be more afraid of grieving God, or wounding Conscience, than of displeasing or losing all the friends you have in the world besides; look upon every adventure upon sin to escape danger, to be the same thing as if you should sink the Ship to avoid one that you take to be a Pirate; or as the fatal mistake of two Vials wherein there is Poyson and Physick.

4. What counsel you would give another, that give your selves when the case shall be your own; your judgment is most clear, when Intereſt is least felt. David's judgment was very upright, when he judged himself in a remote Parable.

5. Be willing to bear the faithful reproofs of your faults from Men, as the reproving voice of God; for they are no less when duly administred. This will be a good help to keep you upright, Psal. 135. 23, 24. Let the righteous smite me, &c. It is said of Sir Anthony Cope, that he sham'd none so much as himself in his Family Prayers, and desir'd the Ministers of his Acquaintance not to favour his faults; but tell me, said he, and spare not.

6. Be mindful daily of your dying day, and your great Audit-day, and do all with respect to them. Thus keep your integrity and peace, and that will keep out your fears and terrors.

9. Rule

9. Rule. Carefully record the experiences of God's care over you, and faithfulness to you in all your past dangers and distresses, and apply them to the cure of your present fears and despondencies.

Recorded experiences are excellent remedies, Exod. 17. 14. Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua. There were two things in that Record; the Victory obtained over Amalek, and the way of obtaining it by incessant Prayer: and there were two things to be done to secure this Mercy for their use and benefit in future fears, it must be recorded and rehearsed, preserved from oblivion, and seasonably produced for relief.

There are two special assistances given us against fear by experience.

1. It abates the terror of sufferings.
2. It assists Faith in the promises.

1. Experience greatly abates the terror of sufferings, and makes them less formidable and scaring than otherwise they would be. Fear saith, They are deep waters, and will drown us; Experience saith, They are much shallower than we think, and are safely fordable; others have, and we may pass through that Red-Sea, and not be overwhelmed. Fear saith, The pains of death are unconceivable, sharp, and bitter, the living little know what the dying feel; and to lie in a stinking Prison in continual expectations of a cruel death, is an insupportable evil: Experience contradicts all these false reports which make our hearts faint, as the second Spies did the daunting stories of the first; and assures us, Prisons and death are not, when we come home to them for Christ, what they seem and appear to be at a distance. O what a good report have those faithful men given, who have searched and tried these things! who have gone down themselves into the valley of the shadow of death, and seen what there is in a Prison, and in Death it self, so long as they were in sight and hearing able by words or signs to contradict our false Notions of it. Oh what a sweet account did Pomponius Algerius give of his stinking Prison at Lions in France! dating all his Letters whilst he was there, From the delectable Orchard of the Leonine Prison: and when carried to Venice, in a Letter from the Prison there, he writes thus to his Christian friends: I shall utter that which scarce any will believe, I have found a nest of Honey in the entrails of a Lion, a Paradise of Pleasure in a deep dark dungeon, in a place of Sorrow and Death tranquility of Hope and Life. Oh! here it is that the Spirit of God and of Glory rests upon us.

So blessed Mr. Philpot, our own Martyr, in one of his sweet encouraging Letters: O how my heart leaps (saith he) that I am so near to eternal bliss! God forgive me my unthankfulness and unworthiness of so great glory. I have so much joy of the Reward prepared for me, the most wretched Sinner, that tho' I be in the place of darkness and mourning, yet I cannot lament, but am night and day so joyful as tho' I were under no cross at all; in all the days of my life I was never so joyful, the name of the Lord be praised.

Others have given the signals agreed upon betwixt them and their friends in the midst of the flames, thereby to the last confirming this truth, That God makes the inside of sufferings quite another thing to what the appearance and outside of them is to sense. Thus the experience of others abates the terrors of sufferings to you; and all this is fully confirmed by the personal experience you your selves have had of the supports and comforts of God, whereinsoever you have conscientiously suffered for his sake.

2. And this cannot but be a singular assistance to your Faith; your own and others experiences, just like Aaron and Hur, stay up the hands of Faith on the one side and the other, that they hang not down, whilst your fears, like those Amalekites, fall before you. For what is experience, but the bringing down of the Divine Promises to the test of sense and feeling? It is our duty to believe the Promises without trial and experiments, but it is easier to do it after so many trials; so that your own and others experiences, carefully recorded and seasonably applied, would be food to your Faith, and a cure to many of your fears in a suffering day.

10. Rule. You can never free your self from sinful fears, 'till you throughly believe and consider Christ's providential Kingdom over all the creatures and affairs in this lower world.

Poor timorous Soul! is there not a King, a supreme Lord under whom Devils and Men are? hath not Christ the reins of government in his hands? Mat. 28. 18 Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11, 12. John 17. 2. Were this dominion of Christ, and dependence of all creatures on him, well studied and believed, it would cut off both our trust in men, and our fear of men; we should soon discern they have no power either to help us or to hurt us, but what they receive from above. Our enemies are apt to over-rate their own power in their pride, and we are as apt to over-rate it too in our fears. Knowest thou not (saith Pilate to Christ) that I have power to crucifie thee, and I have power to release thee? q. d. Refusest thou to answer me? dost thou not know who and what I am? Yes, yes, saith Christ, I know thee well enough to be a poor impotent creature, who hast no power at all but what is given thee from above; I know thee, and therefore do not fear thee. But we are apt to take their own boasts for truth, and believe their power to be such as they vainly vogue it to be; whereas in truth all your enemies are sustained by Christ, Col. 1. 17. they are bounded and limited by Christ, Rev. 2. 10. Providence hath its influences upon their hearts and wills immediately, Jer. 15. 11. Psal. 106. 46. So that they cannot do whatever they would do, but their wills as well as their hands are ordered by God. Jacob was in Laban's and in Esau's hands; both hated him, but neither could hurt him. David was in Saul's hand, who hunted for him as a prey, yet is forced to dismiss him quietly, blessing instead of slaying him. Melancthon and Pomeren both fell into the hands of Charles V. than whom Christendom had not a more prudent Prince, nor the Church of Christ a fiercer enemy; yet he treats these great and active Reformers gently, dismisseth them freely, not once forbidding them to preach or print the Doctrine which he so much opposed and hated.

Oh Christian! if ever thou wilt get above thy fears, settle these things upon thy heart by faith.

1. That the reins of Government are in Christ's hands; enemies, like wild horses, may prance and tramp up and down the world, as tho' they would tread down all that are in their way; but the bridle of providence is in their mouths, and upon their proud necks, 2 Kings 19. 28. and that bridle hath a strong curb.

2. The care of the Saints properly pertains to Christ; he is the head of the body, Eph. 1. 22, 23. our consulting head; and it were a reproach and dishonour to Christ, to fill our own heads with distracting cares and fears, when we have so wise an head to consult and contrive for us.

3. You

3. You have lived all your days upon the care of Christ hitherto; no truth is more manifest than this, that there hath been a Wisdom beyond your own, that hath guided your ways, Jer. 10. 23. a Power above your own, that hath supported your burdens, Psal. 73. 26. a spring of relief out of your selves that hath supplied all your wants, Luke 22. 35. He hath performed all things for you.

4. Jesus Christ hath secured his people by many promises to take care of them, how dangerous soever the times shall be, Eccles. 8. 12. Psal. 76. 10 Amos 9. 8, 9. Rom. 8. 28. Oh! if these things were throughly believed and well improved, fears could no more distract or afflict our hearts, than storms or clouds could trouble the upper Region: but we forget his Providences and Promises, and so are justly left in the hands of our own fears to be afflicted for it.

11. Rule. Subject your carnal reasonings to Faith, and keep your thoughts more under the government of Faith, if ever you expect a composed and quiet heart in distracting evil times.

He that layeth aside the Rules of Faith, and measures all things by the rule of his own shallow reason will be his own bugbear; if reason may be permitted to judge all things, and to make its own inferences and conclusions from the aspects and appearances of second causes, your hearts shall have no rest day nor night; this alone will keep you in continual Alarms.

And yet how apt are the best men to measure things by this rule, and to judge of all God's designs and mysterious providences by it! In other things it is the Judge and Arbiter, and therefore we would make it so here too; and what it concludes and dictates we are prone to believe, because its dictates are back'd and befriended by sense, whence it gathers its intelligence and information. O quam sapiens argumentatrix sibi videtur ratio humana? How wise and strong do its Arguments and Conclusions seem to us! saith Luther. This carnal reason is the thing that puts us into such confusions of mind and thoughts. 'Tis this that,

1. Quarrels with the promises, shakes their credit, and our confidence in them, Ex. 5. 22, 23.

2. 'Tis this that boldly limits the Divine Power, and assigns it boundaries of its own fixing, Psal. 78. 20, 41.

3. 'Tis carnal reason that draws desperate conclusions from providential appearances and aspects, 1 Sam. 27. 1. and prognosticates our ruin from them.

4. 'Tis this carnal reason that puts us upon sinful shifts and indirect courses to deliver and save our selves from danger, which do but the more perplex and entangle us, Isa. 30. 15, 16.

5. It is mostly from our arrogant reasonings that our thoughts are discomposed and divided; from this fountain it is that they flow into our hearts in multitudes when dangers are near, Psal. 94. 19. Psal. 42. 1.

All these mischiefs owe themselves to the exorbitant actings and intrusions of our carnal reasons; but these things ought not to be so, this is beside Rule. For,

1. Tho' there be nothing in the matters of Faith or Providence contrary to right Reason, yet there are many things in both, quite above the reach, and beyond the ken of reason, Isa. 55. 8. And,

2. The confident dictates of reason are frequently confuted by experience all the world over; 'tis every day made a liar, and the frights it puts us into, proved to be vain and groundless, Isa. 51. 13.

Nothing then can be better for us, than to resign up our reason to Faith, to see all things thro' the promises, and trust God over all events.

12. Rule. To conclude, exalt the fear of God in your hearts, and let it gain the ascendant over all your other fears:

This is the prescription in my Text for the cure of all our slavish fears, and indeed all the forementioned Rules for the cure of sinful fears run into this, and are reducible to it. For,

1. Doth the knowledge and application of the Covenant of Grace cure our Fears? The fear of God is both a part of that Covenant, and an Evidence of our interest in it, Jer. 32. 40.

2. Doth sinful fear plunge men into such distresses of Conscience? Why, the fear of God will preserve your ways clean and pure, Psal. 19. 9. and so those mischiefs will be prevented.

3. Doth fore-sight and provision for evil days prevent distracting Fears when they come? Nothing like the Fear of God enables us to such a prevision and provision for them, Heb. 11. 7.

4. Do we relieve our selves against fear by committing all to God? Surely it is the fear of God that drives us to him as our only Asylum and sure refuge, Mal. 3. 16. They feared God, and thought upon his Name, (i. e.) they meditated his Name, which was their refuge, his Attributes their chambers of rest.

5. Must our affections to the world be mortified before our fears can be subdued? This is the instrument of mortification, Neh. 5. 15.

6. Do the worthy examples of those that are gonebefore us, tend to the cure of our cowardice and fears? Why, the fear of God will provoke in you an holy self-jealousie, lest you fail of the grace they manifested, and come short of those excellent patterns, Heb. 12. 15.

7. Is the assurance of interest in God, and the pardon of sin, such an excellent Antidote against slavish fear? Why, he that walks in the fear of God, shall walk in the comforts of the Holy Ghost also, Acts 9. 31.

8. Is integrity of heart and way such a fountain of courage in evil times? Know, Reader, no grace promotes this integrity and uprightness more than the fear of God doth, Prov. 16. 6. Prov. 23. 17.

9. Do the reviving of past experiences suppress sinful fears? No doubt this was the subject which the fear of God put them upon, for mutual encouragement, Mal. 3. 16.

10. Are the Providences of God in this world such cordials against fear? The fear of God is the very character and mark of those Persons over whom his Providence shall watch in the difficultest times, Eccles. 8. 12.

11. Doth our trusting in our own reason, and making it our rule and measure, breed so many fears? Why, the fear of God will take men off from such self-confidence, and bring them to trust the faithful God with all doubtful issues and events, as the very scope of my Text fully manifests. Fear not their fear; their fear moving by the direction of carnal reason, drove them not to God, but to the Assyrian for help. Follow not you their example in this. But how shall they help it? Why, sanctify the Lord of Hosts, and make him your Fear.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Answering the most material Pleas for slavish Fears, and dissolving the common Objections against Courage and Constancy of Mind in times of Danger.

THE Pleas and Excuses for our cowardly Faintness in the Day of Trouble are endless, and so would his Task be that should undertake particularly to answer them all. 'Tis but the cutting off an Hydra's Head, when one is gone, ten more start up; what is most material I will here take into Consideration. When good Men (for with such I am dealing in this Chapter) see a formidable Face and Appearance of sharp and bloody times approaching them, they begin to tremble, their Hearts faint, and their Hands hang down with unbecoming Despondency, and Pusillanimity; their Thoughts are so distracted, their Reason and Faith so clouded by their Fears, that their Temptations are thereby exceedingly strengthened upon them, and their Principles and Professions brought under the Derision and Contempts of their Enemies; and if their Brethren to whom God hath given more Courage and Constancy, and who discern the Mischief like to ensue from their uncomely Carriage, admonish and advise them of it: They have abundance of Pleas and Defences for their Fears, yea, when they reason the point of suffering in their own Thoughts, and the Matter is debated (as in such times it's common) betwixt Faith and Fear, O what endless Work do their Fears put upon their Faith to solve all the Buts and Ifs which their Fears will object or suppose.

Some of the principal of them I think it worth while here to consider, and endeavour to satisfie, that if possible I may prevail with all gracious Persons to be more magnanimous. And first of all,

1 Plea. Sufferings for Christ are strange things to the Christians of this Age, we have had the happy Lot to fall into milder times than the Primitive Christians did, or those that strugled in our own Land in the beginning of Reformation; and therefore we may be excused for our Fears, by reason of our own unacquaintedness with Sufferings in our times.

Answer. 1. One fault is but a bad Excuse for another, why are Sufferings such Strangers to you? Why did you not cast upon them in the Days of Peace, and reckon that such Days must come? Did you not covenant with Christ to follow him whithersoever he should go, to take up your Cross and follow him? And did not the World plainly tell you, that All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution, 2 Tim. 3. 12. And that we must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God, Acts 14. 22. Did we fall asleep in quiet and prosperous Days, and dream of Halcyon Days all our time on Earth? that the Mountain of our Prosperity stood strong, and we should never be moved? That we should die in our Nest, and multiply our Days as the Sand; Babylon's Children indeed dream so, Rev. 18. 7. but the Children of Sion should be better instructed. Alas! how soon may the brightest Day be overcast? The Weather is not so variable, as the State of the Church in this World is; now a Calm, Acts 9. 31. and then a Storm, Acts 12. 1, 2. You could not but know what contingent and variable Things on Earth are; why then did you delude your selves with such fond Dreams? But as a learned Man rightly observes, Mundus senescens patitur Phantasias, The older the World grows, the more drowzie and doting it still grows, and these are the Days in which the wise as well as the foolish Virgins slumber. Sure 'tis but a bad Plea, after so many Warnings from the Word, and from the Rod to say, I did not think of such times, I dreamed not of them. Gerson.

2. Or if you say, though you have conversed with Death and Sufferings by Speculation, yet you lived not in such times wherein you might see (as other Sufferers did) the encouraging Faith, Patience and Zeal of others set before your Eyes in a lively Pattern and Example. Sufferings were not only familiarized to them by frequency, but facilitated also by the daily Examples of those that went before them.

But think you indeed that nothing but Encouragement and Advantage to Followers, arose from the Trials of those that went before? Alas, there were sometimes the greatest Damps and Discouragements imaginable; the Zeal of those that followed hath often been inflamed by the Faintings of those that were tried before them. In the Seventh Persecution under Decius, there were standing before the Tribunal, certain of the Warriours or Knights, viz. Ammon, Zenon, Ptolomeus, Ingenuus, and a certain aged Man called Theophilus, who all standing by as Spectators when a certain Christian was examined, and there seeing him for fear, ready to decline, and fall away, did almost burst for Sorrow within themselves: they made signs to him with their Hands, and all Gestures of the Body to be constant; this being noted by all the Standers by, they were ready to lay hold upon them; but they preventing the Matter, pressed up of their own accord, before the Bench of the Judge, professing themselves to be Christians, insomuch that both the President and the Benchers were all astonished, and the Christians which were judged, the more encouraged. Such damping Spectacles the Christians of former Ages had frequently set them before them. Anno 250.

And it was no small Trial to some of them, to hear the Faintings and Abnegation of those that went before them, pleaded against their Constancy; as in the time of Valens it was urged by the Persecutors: Those that came to their Trial before you, have acknowledged their Errors, begged our Pardon, and returned to us; and why will you stand it out so obstinately? But the Christians answered, Nos hac potissimum ratione viriliter stabimus, For this very reason we will stand to it the more manfully, to repair their scandal, by our greater courage for Christ. These were the helps and advantages they often had in those days, therefore lay not so much stress upon that; their courage undoubtedly flowed from an higher spring and better principle, than the company they suffered with.

3. And if presidents and experiences of others to break the Ice before you, be so great an advantage, surely we that live in these latter times have the most and best helps of that nature that ever any people in the world had. You have all their examples recorded for your encouragement, and therefore Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial, as though some strange thing had happened to you, as the Apostle speaks, 1 Pet. 4. 12. This Plea is weighed, and no great weight found in it.

2 Plea. But my Nature is soft and tender, my constitution more weak and subject to the Impressions of Fear than others; some that have robust Bodies and hardy stout Minds, may better grapple with such Difficulties than I can, who by Constitution and Education am altogether unfit to grapple with those Torments that I have not Patience enough to hear related; my Heart faints and dies within me, if I do but read or hear of the barbarous Usages of the Martyrs, and therefore I may well be excused for my Fears and Faint-heartedness when the Case is like to be my own.

Answer. 1. 'Tis a great Mistake to think that the meer Strength of natural constitution can carry any one thro' such sufferings for Christ, or that natural tenderness and weakness divinely assisted, cannot bear the heaviest burden that ever God laid upon the Shoulders of any sufferer for Christ. Our suffering and bearing abilities are not from Nature, but from Grace We find men of strong bodies, and resolute daring minds, have fainted in the time of trial. Dr. Pendleton in our own story was a Man of a robust and massy body, and a resolute daring mind; yet when he came to the trial, he utterly fainted and fell off. On the other side, what poor feeble bodies have sustained the greatest torments, and out of weakness been made strong! Heb. 11. 34. The Virgin Eulalia of Emerita in Portugal was young and tender, for twelve years old, and with much indulgence and tenderness brought up in an honourable Family, being a Person of considerable Quality; yet how courageously did she sustain the most cruel torments for Christ! When the Judge fawn'd upon her with this tempting Language, Why wilt thou kill thy self, so young a flower, and so near those honourable Marriages and great Dowries thou mightiest enjoy? Instead of returning a retracting or doubtful Answer, Eulalia threw down the Idol, and spurn'd abroad with her feet the heap of Incense prepared for the censers; and when the Executioner came to her, she entertain'd him with this language: Go to, thou Hangman, burn, cut, mangle thou these earthly members; it is an easier matter to break a brittle substance, but the inward mind thou shalt not hurt. And when one Joint was pull'd from another, she said, Behold what a pleasure it is for them, oh Christ! that remember thy triumphant victories, to attain unto these high Dignities. So that our constitutional strength is not to be made the measure of our passive fortitude: God can make the feeblest and tendrest person stand, when strong bodies and blustering, resolute daring minds faint and fall.

Acts and Mon. V. 1. p. 120.

2. Are our bodies so weak, and hearts so tender, that we can bear no sufferings for Christ? Then we are no way fit to be his followers. Christianity is a Warfare, and Christians must endure hardship, 2 Tim. 2. 3. Delicacy and Tenderness is as odd a sight in a Christian as it is in a Soldier; and we cannot be Christ's Disciples except we deliberate the terms, and having considered well what it is like to cost us, do resolve in the strength of God to run the hazard of all with him and for him. 'Tis in vain to talk of a Religion that we think not worthy the suffering and enduring any great matter for.

3. And if indeed, Reader, thy constitution be so delicate and tender, that thou art not able to bear the thoughts of torments for Christ, how is it thou art not more terrified with the torments of Hell, which all they that deny Christ on earth must feel and bear eternally? Oh what is the wrath of Man in comparison with the wrath of God! but as the bite of a flea to the rendings of a Lion. This is the consideration propounded by Christ in Mat. 10. 28. Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. The infinite and insupportable wrath of the great and terrible God should make our Souls shrink and shake at the thoughts of it, rather than the Sufferings of the flesh, which are but for a moment.

4. Know that the wisdom and tenderness of thy father will proportion the burden thou must bear to thy back that must bear it; he will rebate in measure, and not overload thy feeble Shoulders: Thou shalt find those things easie in trial, that now seem insupportable in the terrible prospect; a way of escape or support will certainly be opened, that thou maist be able to bear it.

3 Plea. But others plead the sad experience they have had of their own feebleness and weakness in former trials and exercises of an inferior nature, in which their Faith and Patience hath failed them: and how can they imagine they shall ever be able to stand in the fiercest and most fiery trial? If we have run with the footmen, and they have wearied us in the land of peace, how shall we then contend with horses in the swellings of Jordan? Jer. 12. 5.

Answer. 1. We are strong or weak in all our trials, be they great or small, according to the assisting grace we receive from above; if he leave us in a common and light trial to our own strength, it will be our over-match, and if he assist us in great and extraordinary trials we shall be more than Conquerors. At one time Abraham could offer up his only Son to God with his own hand; at another time he is so afraid of his life, that he acts very unsuitable to the Character of a Believer, and was shamefully rebuk'd for it by Abimelech. At one time David could say, Tho' an host encamp against me I will not fear; at another time he feigns himself mad, and acted beneath himself, both as a Man, and as a Man enriched with so much faith and experience. At one time Peter is afraid to be interrogated by a Maid; at another time he could boldly confront the whole Council, and own Christ and his Truths to their Faces. In extraordinary trials we may warrantably expect extraordinary assistances, and by them we shall be carried through the greatest, how often soever we have failed in smaller trials.

2. The design and end of God in giving us experience of our own weakness in lesser troubles, is not to discourage and daunt us against we come to greater (which is the use Satan here makes of it) but to take us off from self-confidence and self-dependence; to make us see our own weakness, that we may more heartily and humbly betake our selves to him in the way of faith and fervent supplication.

4. Plea. But some will object that they cannot help their fears and tremblings when any danger appears; because fear is the disease, at least the sad effect and symptom of a disease, with which God hath wounded them; a deep and fixed melancholy hath so far prevailed, that the least trouble overcomes them: If any sad afflictive providence befal, or but threaten them; their fears presently rise, and their hearts sink, sleep departs, thoughts tumultumultuate, the blood boils, and the whole frame of nature is put into disorder. If therefore the Lord should permit such great and dreadful trials to befal them, they can think of nothing less than dying by the hand of their own fears, before the hand of any enemy touch them; or which is a thousand times worse, be driven by their fears into the Net of temptation, even to deny the Lord that bought them.

Answer. This I know is the sad Case of many gracious persons, and I have reason to pity those that are thus exercised; O 'tis an heavy stroke, a dismal state, a deep wound indeed: But yet the wisdom of God hath ordered this affliction upon his people for gracious ends and uses; hereby they are made the more tender and watchful, circumspect and careful in their ways, that they may shun and escape as many occasions of trouble as they can, being so unable to grapple with them: I say not but there are higher and nobler motives that make 'em circumspect and tender, but yet the preservation of our own quietness is useful in its place, and 'tis a mercy if that or any thing else be sanctified to prevent sin, and promote care of duty. This is your clog to keep you from straying.

2. And when you shall be called forth to greater trials, that which you now call your snare, may be your advantage, and that in divers respects.

1. These very distempers of body and mind serve to imbitter the comforts and pleasures of this world to you, and make life it self less desirable to you than it is to others, they much wean your hearts from, and make life more burdensom to you than it is to others, who enjoy more of the pleasure and sweetness of it than you can do. I have often thought this to be one design and end of Providence in permitting such distempers to seize so many gracious persons as labour under it, and providence knows how to make use of this effect to singular purpose and advantage to you, when a call to suffering shall come; this may have its place and use under higher and more spiritual considerations to facilitate death, and make your separation from this world the more easie to you; for though it be a more noble and raised act of faith and self-denial to offer up to God our lives, when they are made most pleasant and desirable to us upon natural accounts, yet it is not so easie to part with them as it is when God hath first imbittered them to us. Your lives are of little value to you now, because of this burdensome clog you must draw after you, but if you should increase your burden by so horrid an addition of guilt, as the denying of Christ, or his known truths would do, you would not know what to do with such a life; it would certainly lie upon your hands as a burthen. God knows how to use these things in the way of his providence to your great advantage.

It was common with the Martyrs to sweeten death to themselves, by reckoning what infirmities it would cure them of, one of his blindness, another of his lameness, &c.

2. Art thou a poor melancholy and timorous person? Certainly if thou be gracious as well as timorous this will drive thee nearer to God; and the greater thy dangers are, the more frequent and fervent will thy addresses to him be: Thou feelest the need of everlasting arms underneath to bear thee up under, and to carry thee thro' smaller troubles, that other persons make nothing of, much more in such deep trials, that put the strongest Christians to the utmost of their faith and patience.

And 3dly. What if the Lord will make an advantage out of your weakness, to display more evidently his own power in your report? you know what the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 12. 9, 10. And he said unto me, my grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness: most gladly therefore will I glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me ——. for when I am weak then am I strong. If his Infirmities might serve as a foil to set off the grace of God with a more bright and sparkling lustre, he would rejoice in his Infirmities, and so should you: Well then, let not this discourage you, the infirmity of nature you complain of may make death the less terrible: it served to that purpose to blessed Basil (as you heard before) when his enemy threaten'd to tear out his Liver, he thought it a kindness to have that Liver torn out that had given him so much trouble. It may drive thee nearer to God, and minister a fit opportunity for the display of his grace in the time of need.

5 Plea. But what if God should hide his face from my soul in the day of my streights and troubles, and not only so, but permit Satan to buffet me with his horrid temptations and injections, and so I should sail like the Ship in which Paul sailed, betwixt these two boisterous Seas; what can I suspect less than a shipwrack of my soul, body, and all the comforts of both, in this world, and in that to come?

Answer. 1. So far as the fears of such a misery awaken you to prayer for the prevention of it, it may be serviceable to your souls, but when it only works distraction and despondency of mind, it is your sin, and Satan's snare. The Prophet Jeremy made a good use of such a supposed evil by way of deprecation, Jer. 17. 17. Be not a terror unto me, thou art my hope in the day of evil. q. d. In the evil day I have no place of retreat or refuge, but thy love and favour; Lord, that is all I have to depend on, and relieve my self by: I comfort my self against trouble with this confidence, that if men be cruel, yet thou wilt be kind; if they frown, thou wilt smile; if the world cast me out, thou wilt take me in; but if thou shouldest be a terror to me instead of a comforter, if they afflict my body, and thou affright my soul with thy frowns too; what a deplorable condition shall I be in then! improve it to such an end as he did, to secure the favour of God, and it will do you no harm.

2. It is not usual with God to estrange himself from his people in trouble, nor to frown upon them when Men do. The common experience of Believers stands ready to attest and seal this truth, that Christians never find more kindness from God, than when they feel most cruelty from Men for his sake: consult the whole cloud of witnesses, and you will find they have still found the undoubted verity of that tried word in 1 Pet. 4. 14. That the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon sufferers. The expression seems to allude to the Dove that Noah sent forth out of the Ark, which flew over the watry world, but could not rest her self any where till she returned to the Ark. So the Spirit of God, called here the Spirit of Glory, from his effects and fruits, viz. his chearing, sealing and reviving influences which make Men glory and triumph in the most afflicted state. This Spirit of God seems like that Dove to hover up and down, to flee hither and thither, over this person and that, but resteth not so long upon any, as those that suffer for righteousness sake, there he commonly takes up his abode and residence.

3. And what if it ſhould fall out in ſome reſpect according to your fears, that Heaven and Earth ſhould be both clouded together? yet it will not be long before the pleaſant light will ſpring up to you again, Pſal. 112. 4. Unto the upright there ariſeth light in the darkneſs. You ſhall have his ſupporting preſence 'till the comforter do come. When Mr. Glover came within ſight of the ſtake, he ſuddenly cries out, Oh Auſtin! he is come! he is come!

6. Plea. Oh! but what if my trial ſhould be long, and the ſiege of Temptations tedious? then I am perſwaded I am loſt; I am no way able to continue long in a Priſon, or in tortures for Chriſt, I have no ſtrength to endure a long ſiege, my patience is too ſhort to hold out from month to month, and from year to year, as many have done. Oh! I dread the thoughts of long-continued trials, I tremble to think what muſt be the iſſue.

Anſwer. 1. Cannot you diſtruſt your own ſtrength, and ability, but you muſt alſo limit God's? What if you have but a ſmall ſtock of patience? cannot the Lord ſtrengthen you with all might in the inner-man unto all patience and long-ſuffering with joyfulneſs, according to his glorious power, 1 Col. 11? And is it not his promiſe to confirm you to the end, 1 Cor. 1. 8? You neither know how much, nor how long you can bear and ſuffer. It is not inherent, but aſſiſting Grace, by which your ſuffering abilities are to be meaſured. God can make that little ſtock of patience you have to hold out as the poor Widow's Cruiſe of Oyl did, 'till deliverance come; he can enable your patience unto its perfect work, (i. e.) to work as extenſively to all the kinds and ſorts of trials, as intenſively to the higheſt degree of trial, and as protenſively to the longeſt duration and continuance of your trials, as he would have it: If this be a marvellous thing in your eyes, muſt it be ſo in God's eyes alſo?

2. The Lord knows the proper ſeaſon to come in to the relief of your ſliding and fainting patience, and will aſſuredly come in accordingly in that ſeaſon; for ſo run the promiſes, The Lord ſhall judge his people, and repent himſelf for his ſervants when he ſeeth that their power is gone, and that there is none ſhut up or left, Deut. 32. 36. Cum duplicantur lateres venit Moſes; In the Mount of difficulties and extremities it ſhall be ſeen. The rod of the wicked ſhall not reſt upon the lot of the righteous, leſt the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity, Pſal. 125. 3. Ubi deſinit humanum, ibi incipit divinum auxilium; God's power watches the opportunity of your weakneſs.

7. Plea. But what if I ſhould be put to cruel and exquiſite tortures, ſuppoſe to the rack, to the fire, or ſuch moſt dreadful ſufferings as other Chriſtians have been? What ſhall I do? do I think I am able to bear it? is my ſtrength the ſtrength of ſtone, or are my bones braſs, that ever I ſhould endure ſuch barbarous cruelties? Alas! Death in the mildeſt form is terrible to me: how terrible then muſt ſuch a Death be?

Anſwer. Who enabled thoſe Chriſtians you mention to endure theſe things? They loved their lives, and ſenſed their pains as well as you, they had the ſame thoughts and fears, many of them, that you now have; yet God carried them through all, and ſo he can you. Did not he make the devouring Flames a bed of Roſes to ſome of them? was he not within the fires? did he not abate the extremity of the torment, and enable weak and tender perſons to endure them patiently and chearfully? ſome ſinging in the midſt of flames, others clapping their hands triumphantly, and to the laſt ſight that could be had of them in this world nothing appeared but ſigns and demonſtrations of joy unſpeakable. Ah Friends! we judge of ſufferings by the out-ſide and appearance, which is terrible; but we know not the in-ſide of ſufferings, which is exceeding comfortable. Oh! when ſhall we have done with our unbelieving ifs and buts, our queſtionings and doubtings of the Power, Wiſdom, and tender care of our God over us, and learn to truſt him over all. Now the Juſt ſhall live by Faith; and he that lives by Faith ſhall never die by Fear. The more you truſt God, the leſs you will torment your ſelves. I have done; the Lord ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh, and ſettle the trembling and feeble hearts of his people, by what hath been ſo ſeaſonably offered for their relief by a weak hand. Amen.

That the days are evil, is a Truth preached to us by the convincing Voice of Senſe; and that they are like to be worſe, few can doubt that look into the moral Cauſes of evil Times, the impudent height of ſin, or into the Prophecies relating to theſe latter days; for whom the ſharpeſt Sufferings are appointed, to make way for the ſweeteſt Mercies. A faithful Watchman of our own hath given us freſh and late warning in theſe words of Truth: Hath God ſaid nothing? Doth Faith ſee nothing of a flood coming upon us? Is there ſuch a Deluge of ſin among us, and doth not that propheſie to us a Deluge of Wrath? Lift up your eyes, Chriſtians, ſtand, and look through the Land, Eaſtward and Weſtward, Northward and Southward, and tell me what you ſee? Behold, a Flood cometh, a Flood of ſin is already broken forth upon us, the Fountains of the great Deeps are broken up, and the Windows of Hell

Isa. xxvi. v. 20. Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thy self as it were for a little moment 'till the indignation be over-past.

CHAP. I.

Wherein the literal and real importance of the Text are considered, the Doctrine propounded, and the method of the following Discourse stated.

Sect. I. MAN being a prudent and prospecting creature, can never be satisfied with present safety, except he may also see himself well secured against future dangers. Upon all appearances of trouble, 'tis natural to him to seek a refuge, that he may be able to shun what he is loath to suffer, and survive those calamities which will ruin the defenceless and exposed multitude. Natural Men seek refuge in natural things. The rich man's wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit, Prov. 18. 11. Hypocrites make lies their refuge, and under falshood do they hide themselves, Isa. 28. 15. not doubting but they shall stand dry and safe, when the over-flowing flood lays all others under water. But,

Godly men make God himself their hiding-place, to him they have still betaken themselves in all ages, as often as calamities have befallen the world, Psal. 46. 1. God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. As chickens run under the wings of the hen for safety when the kite hovers over them, so do they fly to their God for sanctuary, Psal. 56. 3. At what time I am afraid, I will trust in thee; q. d. Lord, if a Storm of Trouble at any time overtake me, I will make bold to come under thy roof for shelter; and indeed not so bold as welcome; 'tis no presumption in them after so gracious an invitation from their God, Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers.

My Friends, a sound of trouble is in our ears; the clouds gather and blacken upon us more and more: Distress of Nations with perplexity seems to be near, our day hastens to an end and the shadows of the night are stretching forth upon us. What greater service therefore can I do for your Souls, than by the light of this scripture (as with a candle in my hand) to lead you to your Chambers, and shew you your Lodgings in the Attributes and Promises of God, before I take my leave of you, and bid you good night.

O with what satisfaction should I part with you, were I but sure to leave you under Christ's wings! It was Christ's lamentation over Jerusalem, that they would not be gathered under his wings, when the Roman Eagle was ready to hover over that City; and you know how dear they paid for their obstinacy and infidelity. Be warned by that dreadful example, and among the rest of your mercies bless God heartily for this, That so sweet a voice sounds from Heaven in your ears this day, this day of frights and troubles; Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, &c.

This Chapter contains a lovely song fitted for the lips of God's Israel, notwithstanding their sad captivity; for their God was with them in Babylon, and heard their hearts there with many promises of deliverance, and in the mystical sense, it relates to the New Testament Churches, of whose troubles, protections, and deliverances, the Jews in Babylon were a Type.

This Chapter, tho' full of excellent and seasonable truths, will be too long to Analize; it shall suffice to search back only to the 17. verse, where you find the poor captived Church under despondency of mind, comparing her condition to that of a woman in travail, who hath many sharp pains, and bitter throes, yet cannot be delivered, much like that in 2 Kings 19. 3. The children are come to the birth and there is no strength to bring forth.

Against this discouragement a double relief is applyed in the following verses, the one is a Promise of full deliverance at last; the other an Invitation into a sure sanctuary and place of defence for the present, untill the time of their full deliverance came. The promise we have in verse 19. Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise; awake and sing ye that dwell in the dust, &c. Their captivity was a civil death, and Babylon as a grave to them. So it is elsewhere described, Ezek. 37. v. 1, 2, 14. I will open your graves and cause you to come up out of your graves and bring you into the land of Israel. And therefore their deliverance is carried under the notion of a resurrection in that promise.

Object. Yea, (might they reply) the hopes of deliverance at last is some comfort, but alas, that may be far off; How shall we subsist till then?

Sol. Well enough, for as you have in that promise a sure ground of deliverance at last, so in the interim here is a gracious invitation into a place of security for the present, Come, my people, enter thou into thy Chambers. In which invitation Four things call for our close attention.

1. The Form of the invitation, including in it the qualified subject, Come, my people. God's own peculiar people, who have chosen God for their portion; and resigned up themselves sincerely to him in the the Covenant, are the persons here invited, the same which he before called the righteous nation that kept the truth, verse 2. he means those that remained faithful to God (as many of them did in Babylon, witness their sorrow for Sion, Psal 137. per totum; and their solemn appeal to God that their hearts were not turned back, nor had their steps declined though they were sore broken in the place of Dragons, and covered with the shadow of death, Psal. 44. 18, 19, 20. These are the people invited to the chambers of security. And the form of invitation is full of tender compassion; Come, my people; like a tender father that sees a storm coming upon his children in the fields, and takes them by the hand, saying, Come away my dear children, hasten home with me lest the storm overtake you, or as the Lord said to Noah before the Deluge, Come thou and all thy house into the Ark, and God shut him in, Gen. 7. 1, 16. This is the form of the invitation, Come, my people.

2. The privilege invited to; Enter thou into thy Chambers. There is some variety, and indeed variety rather than contrariety in the exposition of these words.

2. In this all are agreed, that by their Chambers, is not meant the Chambers of their own Houses; for alas, their Houses were left unto them desolate; and if not, yet they could be no security to them now, when neither their own houses nor their fortified city was able to defend them before. Ezek. 21. 13.

Grotius expounds it of the Grave, and makes these Chambers the same with the Chambers of death. Ite in cubicula, i. e. sepulchra vestra. The grave indeed is a place of security where God sometimes hides some of his people in troublesome times, as is plain in Isa. 57. 1, 2. but I cannot allow this to be the sense of this Text; God doth not comfort his captives with a natural against a civil death, but with protection in their troubles upon earth, as is evident from the scope of the whole Chapter. Grot. in loc.

By Chambers therefore, others understand the Chambers of Divine Providence, where the Saints are hid in evil days. So our Annotators on the place, and no doubt but this is in part the special intendment of the Text.

Others understand the Attributes and Promises of God to be here meant, as well as his providences. And I conceive all three make the sense of the Text full, (i. e.) the Divine Attributes engaged in the promise and exercised or actuated in the providences of God; these are the sanctuaries and refuges of God's people in days of trouble.

Calvin understands it of the quiet repose of the Believers mind in God, but that is rather the effect of his security, than the place of it. It's God's Attributes or his Name (which is the same thing) to which the righteous fly and are safe, Prov. 18. 10.

Object. But you will say, why are they called their Chambers? Those Attributes are not theirs, but God's.

Sol. The answer is easie, though they be God's Properties, yet they are his Peoples Privileges, and Benefits; for when God makes over himself to them in Covenant to be their God, he doth as it were deliver to them the Keys of all his Attributes for their benefit and security; and is as if he should say, my wisdom is yours, to contrive for your good; my power is yours, to protect your persons; my mercy yours, to forgive your sins: my all-sufficiency yours to supply your wants? all that I am, and all that I have, is for your benefit and comfort. These are the Chambers provided for the Saints lodgings, and into these they are invited to enter. Enter thou into thy Chambers. By entering into them understand their actual faith exercised in acts of affiance, and resignation to God in all their dangers. So Psal. 56. 3. At what time I am afraid (saith David) I will trust in thee: q. d. Lord, if a Storm come I will make bold to shelter my self from it under thy wings by faith; look as unbelief shuts the doors of all God's Attributes and promises against us; so faith opens them all to the Soul, and so much of the privilege invited to, which is the second thing.

3. We have here a needful caution for the securing of this privilege to our selves in evil times, shut thy doors about thee. Or as the Syriack renders דערך behind or after thee, i. e. saith Calvin, Diligenter cavendum ne ulla rimula diabolo ad nos pateat. Care must be taken that no passage be left open to the Devil to creep in after us and drive us out of our refuge; for so it falls out too often with God's people, when they are at rest in God's name or promises, Satan creeps in by unbelieving doubts and puzling objections, and beats them out of their refuge back again into trouble; it is therefore of great concernment in such times especially, not to give place to the Devil, as the phrase is, Eph. 4. 17. but cleave to God by a resolved reliance.

4. Lastly, we are to note with what Arguments or motives they are prest to betake themselves to this refuge. There are two found in the Text, the one working upon their fear, the other upon their hope.

1. That which works upon their fear, is a supposition of a storm coming, the indignation of God will fall like a tempest; this is supposed in the Text, and plainly expressed in the Words following, For the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the Inhabitants of the earth, ver. 21.

2. The other is fitted to work upon their hope, though his Indignation fall like a storm, yet it will not continue long; it shall be but for a moment, better days and more comfortable dispensations will follow. From all which the general Observation is this.

Doct. That the Attributes, Promises, and Providences of God are the Chambers of rest and security, in which his people are to hide themselves, when they foresee the storms of his indignation coming upon the World.

The name of the Lord (saith Solomon) is a strong Tower; the righteous run into it, and are safe, Prov. 18. 10. And his Attributes are his name, Exod. 34. 5. For by them he is known as a man is known by his name, and this his name is a strong Tower for his peoples security; now what is the use and end of a Tower in a City, but to receive and secure the Inhabitants when the outworks are beaten to the ground, the walls scaled, and the houses left desolate?

And as it is here resembled to a Tower, so in Isa. 33. 16. Its shadowed out unto us by a munition of rocks, His place of defence shall be a munition of rocks. How secure is that person that is invironed with rocks on every side? Yea you will say, but yet a rock is but a cold and barren refuge, though other enemies cannot, yet hunger and thirst can invade and kill him there. No, in this rock is a store-house of provision, as well as a magazine for defence; so it follows Bread shall be given him and his water shall be sure.

And sometimes it is resembled to us by the wings of a fowl, spread with much tenderness over her young for their defence, Psal. 57. 1. Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge until these calamities be overpast. So Psal. 17. 8. Keep me as the apple of of thine eye, hide me under the ſhadow of thy wings. No part of the body hath more guards upon it, than the apple of the eye. God is as careful to preſerve his people, as men are to preſerve their eyes; and he that toucheth them, toucheth the apple of his eyes. But we need not go from one Metaphor to another, to ſhew you where the Saints refuge is in time of danger, you have a whole bundle of them lying together in that one Scripture, Pſal. 18. 2. The Lord is my rock and my fortreſs, and my deliverer, my God, my ſtrength in whom I will truſt, my buckler, and the horn of my ſalvation, and my high tower. Where you find all kinds of defence, whether natural, or artificial, under a pleaſant variety of apt Metaphors, aſcribed to God for the ſecurity of his people.

Now for the caſting of this great point into as eaſy and profitable a Method as I can; I ſhall reſolve this general Truth into theſe following Propoſitions, which are implied or expreſſed in the Text and Doctrine thence deduced; and the firſt is this.

1 Prop. That there are times and ſeaſons appointed by God for the pouring out of his indignation upon the world.

2 Prop. That God's own people are concerned in, and ought to be affected with thoſe Judgments.

3 Prop. That God hath a ſpecial and particular care of his people in the days of his Indignation.

4 Prop. That God uſually premoniſhes the world, eſpecially his own people, of his Judgments before they befall them.

5 Prop. That God's Attributes, Promiſes, and Providences are prepared for the ſecurity of his people, in the greateſt diſtreſſes that befall them in the world.

6 Prop. That none but God's people are taken into thoſe chambers of ſecurity, or can expect his ſpecial protection in evil times.

And then I ſhall apply the whole in the proper ſes of it.

CHAP. II.

emonſtrating the firſt Propoſition, That there are times and ſeaſons appointed by God for the pouring out of his indignation upon the world.

ect. I. THis is plainly implyed in the Text, that there are times of indignation appointed to befal the world; yea, and more than is; not only that ſuch times ſhall come, but the uration and continuance is alſo under an appointlent. Hide thy ſelf for a little moment, until the indigtion be over-paſt. The Prophet tells us in Zeph. 2. 2. at theſe ſtormy times are under a decree, and at decree is there compared to a pregnant Woan which is to go out her appointed months, and len to travail and bring forth: Even ſo it is in the dgments God brings upon the world. We ſee em not in the days of provocation, ſed adhuc fœtus utero latet, but all this while it is in the womb of e decree, and at the appointed ſeaſon they ſhall beme viſible to the world. As there are in Nature ir Halcyon days, and cloudy, overcaſt, and ſtory: So 'tis in providences, Eccleſ. 7. 14. God hath one over againſt the other. Yea, one is the occaſi- of the other; for look as the Sun in a hot day hales abundance of vapours from the Earth and a, theſe occaſion ſhowers, thunder and tempeſts, d thoſe again clear the Air, and diſpoſe it to fair ather again. So it is here, Proſperity is the occan of abundance of ſin, this brings on adverſity m the juſtice of God to correct it; adverſity be- ſanctified, humbles, reforms, and purges the ople of God, and this again by mercy procures their proſperity: So you find the Account ſtated in Pſal. 107. 17. Fools becauſe of their iniquities are afflicted, then they cry to the Lord in their troubles, and he ſaveth them out of their diſtreſſes.

And this appointment of times of diſtreſs is both profitable and neceſſary for the world, eſpecially God's own people in it.

In general, hereby the Being and Righteouſneſs of God is cleared and vindicated againſt the Atheiſm and Infidelity of the world, Pſal. 9. 16. The Lord is known by the Judgments that he executeth. Impunity is the occaſion of many Atheiſtical Thoughts in the world. Jer. 48. 11. Moab hath been at eaſe from his youth, and he hath ſetled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from veſſel to veſſel, neither hath he gone into captivity; therefore his taſte remaineth in him, and his ſcent is not changed. So Pſal. 55. 19. Becauſe they have no changes therefore they fear not God. Kingdoms, Families, and particular perſons, like ſtanding waters and ponds, are apt to corrupt by-long continued peace and proſperity; the Lord therefore ſees it neceſſary to purge the world by his judgments; When thy judgments are in the Earth, the Inhabitants of the world will learn righteouſneſs. Thoſe Sermons that God preaches from Heaven by the terrible voice of his judgments, ſtartle and rouze the ſecure world, more than all the warnings and exhortations of his Miniſters could ever do. Thoſe that ſlept ſecurely under our Miniſtry, will fear and tremble under his rods; thoſe that are without faith are not without ſenſe and feeling, their own eyes will affect their hearts, though our words could make no impreſſion on them.

Sect. II. But of what uſe ſoever theſe National Judgments are to others, to be ſure they ſhall be beneficial to God's own people; when others die by fear, they ſhall live by faith, If they be baneful poiſon to the wicked, they ſhall be healthful Phyſick to the Godly. For,

1. By theſe Calamities God will mortifie and purge their corruptions; this winter weather ſhall be uſeful to deſtroy and rot thoſe rank weeds, which the Summer of proſperity bred, Iſa. 27. 9. By this therefore ſhall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged. Phyſick in its own nature is griping and unpleaſant; but very uſeful and neceſſary to purge the body from noxious and malignant humours, which retained may put life it ſelf in hazard: and it is with the body Politick, as with the body Natural.

2. National Judgments drive the people of God nearer to him, and one to another; they drive the people of God to their knees, and make them pray more frequently, more fervently, and more feelingly than they were wont to do; in this poſture you find them in ver. 8, 9. of this Chapter. Yea, in the way of thy Judgments, O Lord, have we waited for thee, the deſire of our ſoul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee. With my ſoul have I deſired thee in the night, yea, with my ſpirit within me will I ſeek thee early.

3. In a word, by theſe diſtractions and diſtreſſes of Nations, the people of God are more weaned from the world, and made to long vehemently after heaven; being now convinced by experience that this is not their reſt. When all things are tranquil and proſperous, God's own people are but too apt to fall aſleep and dream of pleaſure and reſt on earth, to ſay as Job in his proſperity, I ſhall die in my neſt, I ſhall multiply my days as the ſand. And then are their heads and hearts filled with many projects and deſigns, to promote their comforts, and make proviſion for their accommodations on earth: The multiplicity tiplicity of earthly cares and comforts take up their time and thoughts, too much, and make them that they mind death and eternity too little. But saith God, this must not be so, things must not go on at this rate, the prosperous world must not thus enchant my people; I must imbitter the earth that I may thereby sweeten heaven the more to them; when they find no rest below, they will surely seek it above.

These and such like are the gracious designs and ends of God in shaking the world by his terrible judgments, but yet, though national troubles must necessarily come, the wisest of men cannot positively determine the precise time of those judgments; we may indeed by the signs of the times discern their near approach; yet our judgment can be but probable and conjectural, seeing there are tacite conditions in the dreadfullest threatnings, Jer. 18. 7, 8. Jonah 3. 9, 10. And such is the merciful nature of God, that he oft times turns away his anger from his people. when it seems ready to pour down upon them, Psal. 78. 38. The consideration whereof no way indulges security, but encourages to repentance, and greater fervency in Prayer.

CHAP. III.

Opening and confirming the second Proposition, viz. That God's own people are much concerned in, and ought to be suitably affected with, those Judgments that befal the Nation wherein they live.

Sect. I. IF God's people have no concernment in these things, why are they called upon in this Text, to turn into their chambers, hide themselves, and shut their doors, till the indignation be overpast? Certainly though God hath better provided for them than others, yet they are two ways concerned in these cases as much as others: Viz.

1. Upon a Political
2. Upon a Religious } Account.

1. Upon a Political account, as they are members of the community, and so are equally concerned in the good or evil that befal the Nation in which they live, their Cabbins must follow the fate of the Ship in which they Sail, their Lives, Liberties, Estates, and Interest sink and swim with the publick. The good figs were carried away with the bad, Jer. 24. 5. In these outward respects it often times bears as hard upon the righteous as upon the wicked. Ezek. 21. 3. I will draw forth my Sword out of his Sheath and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked. In these outward respects as it is with the good, so with the sinner, Eccles. 9. 2. The same fire that burns the dry tree, oftentimes burns the green tree too. Ezek. 20. 47. Grace is above all hazards, but creature enjoyments and comforts are not. The sins of the Sodomites involve not only their own houses and estates, but Lot's also, in the ruin and overthrow; wicked men often fare the better for the company of the godly, and the godly often fare the worse for the company of the wicked

And it is not to be wondered at, if we consider that even the Saints themselves have an hand in the provocation of these judgments, as well as others, Deut. 32. 19. And when the Lord saw it he abhorred them because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters. We have contributed to the common heap of guilt, and therefore must justifie God if we partake with others in the common calamity.

2. They are greatly concerned in such judgments upon a religious and christian account, for it is usual for the flood of God's judgments not only to sweep away our civil and natural, but our spiritual and best enjoyments and comforts. Thus the Ordinances of God ceased in Babylon, and there the faithful bewailed their misery upon that account, Psal. 137. per totum; we wept when we remembred thee, O Zion. Not only Israel flies, but the Ark is taken Prisoner by the Enemy, 1 Sam. 4. 11. And you find the people of God more deeply concerned upon this account, than for all their outward losses and other sufferings, Zeph. 3. 18. I will gather them of thee that are sorrowful for the Solemn Assemblies, to whom the reproach of it was a Burthen. For by how much our souls are more excellent than our bodies, and the concerns of Eternity over-balance those of time; by so much more are we concerned in the loss of our spiritual, more than of our temporal mercies and enjoyments.

Grace indeed cannot be lost, but the means and instruments by which it is begotten may; the golden candlestick is one of the moveables in God's house, Rev. 2. 5.

Thus you see a twofold concernment that the People of God have in the Effects of National Judgments.

Sect. II. This being So, how should all that fear God be affected with the appearances and signs of his indignation? So was David, Psal. 119. 120. My flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments. He that feared not a Bear, a Lyon, a Goliah, yet trembleth at God's judgments. So did Habakkuk, chap. 3. v. 16. When I heard, my belly trembled, my lips quivered at the voice, rottenness entred into my bones. Expressions denoting the deepest seizures of fear and greatest Consternations; not that I would perswade you to such slavish fear, or unchristian dejection, as is not only sinful in it self, but the cause and inlet of many other sins: But to a due Sense both of the evils of misery that will befal the Nation when God's Indignation comes upon it; and the evils of Sin that have incensed it; and to such a fear of both as may seasonably awaken us to the use of all preventing remedies. And first,

1. O that all would lay to heart the National miseries that God's indignation threatens upon us. It is said, Psal. 107. 34. A fruitful land is turned into barrenness for the wickedness of them that dwell therein. It was long since told England by one of its faithful Watchmen. * * The Nation and ' Church in which we are, is the com- Mr. Strong.
' mon Ship in which we are all em' barked, and if this in judgment be cast away
' whether dashed against the rocks of any Foreign ' power, or swallowed up in the quicksands of do-
' mestick divisions, it must needs hazard all the ' Passengers: Or if you were sure, that for your
' parts you might be safe: would it not be a bitter
' thing, to stand upon the shore, and see such a ' glorious vessel as this Nation is, to be cast away
' To see this glorious Land defaced, the blessed
' Gospel polluted, the golden candlestick remov' ed, it cannot but affect men that have any bowels
' Or if this move you not, yet to see a strange ' to Lord it in thy habitation, and thy dwelling ' place to cast thee out; for your delightsome dwel' lings, your fruitful pleasant and well tilled fields
' to be made a prey; for you to sow, and another

'to reap Impias has ſegetes; for the delicate woman 'upon whom the wind muſt not blow, to be ex-'poſed to the luſt and cruelty of an enemy, and 'be glad to fly away naked to prolong a miſerable 'life, which they would be glad to part with for 'death, were it not for fear of the exchange. 'For the tender mother to look upon the Child of 'her womb; and conſider, muſt this child in 'whom I have placed the hope of my age; for,

Omnis in Aſcanio ſtat chari cura parentis;

'He that hath been ſo tenderly bred up, muſt he 'fall into the rough hands of a bloody Soldier, 'skilful to deſtroy? It had been well for me if 'God had given me dry breaſts, or a miſcarrying 'womb, rather than to bring forth children unto 'murtherers; or if you might be ſafe, how could 'you endure to ſee the miſeries that ſhould come 'upon your people, and the deſtruction of your 'Kindred'. Thus far he. But alas! What ſecurity have any of us as to our earthly comforts from the common calamity? We may pleaſe our ſelves as Baruch did, Jer. 45. 4, 5. and dream of exemption, but by ſo much the greater will our diſtreſs be, when it ſhall ſurprize us.

2. You that are the people of God ought to be deeply affected with the ſpiritual miſeries that threaten us in the day of God's indignation: do you conſider what the removing the Candleſtick out of its place is? A departing Goſpel, the going down of the Sun upon the Prophets, the loſs of your ſweet Sabbaths, and Goſpel Feaſts, and the groſs darkneſs of Popery to fill the earth: O it is hard parting with theſe things, it's ſaid, 1 Sam. 7. 2. when the Ark was removed, that all the houſe of Iſrael lamented after the Lord. Pity your own Souls, and be deeply affected with the miſery of others, the poor Chriſtleſs world, who are like to periſh for want of Viſion, Prov. 29. 18. In the Year 1072, ſaith Matthew Paris, Preaching was ſuppreſſed at Rome, and then Letters were framed by ſome as coming from Hell; in which the Devil gives them thanks for the multitude of Souls ſent to him that Year.

3. But eſpecially labour to affect your hearts with the ſins that have incenſed God's indignation: So did the Saints in Jeruſalem, Ezek. 9. 4. they ſighed and mourned for all the abominations committed in it. So did Lot, 2 Pet. 2. 7. He vexed his righteous ſoul from day to day: So did David, Pſal. 119. 136. Rivers of water run down mine eyes, becauſe Men kept not thy law. O who that loves God can refrain tears, to ſee the God of pity, the God of tender mercies, a father full of bowels of compaſſion, ſo incenſed and provoked to indiguation! Oh, it is an heart-melting conſideration where there is any ingenuity. If our afflictions grieve God to the heart as it doth Judg. 10. 16. our Souls ſhould be grieved for his diſhonour.

4. To conclude, get upon your hearts ſuch a ſenſe of God's indignation as may quicken you to the uſe of preventing duties. So Amos 4. 12. Becauſe I will do this prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael. So the Prophet, Zeph. 2. 1, 2. Gather your ſelves together before the decree bring forth. It was Moſes his honour to ſtand in the breach, Pſal. 106. 23. And Abraham's to plead ſo with God, tho' he did not prevail.

CHAP. IV.

Confirming the third Propoſition. viz. That God hath a ſpecial and peculiar care of his own in the days of his indignation.

Sect. I. PRopriety and Relation engages Care and Sollicitude in times of Danger; we ſee God hath put ſuch a Storge, and inclination into the very creatures, that they will expoſe themſelves to preſerve their young; and it cannot be imagined that the fountain of Pity which dropt this tenderneſs into the bowels of the creatures, ſhould not abound with it himſelf; is there ſuch ſtrong inclination in the very birds of the air, that they will hazard their own lives to ſave their young; much more is God ſolicitous for his people. Iſa. 31. 5. As birds flying, &c. to their neſts when their young are in danger: So will the Lord of Hoſts defend Jeruſalem. No mother is more ſolicitous for her deareſt Child in danger and diſtreſs, than the Lord is for his people. Iſa. 40. 15. Can a Woman forget her ſucking Child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion on the ſon of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. A woman [the more affectionate ſex] forget her child, a piece of her ſelf, her ſucking child, which together with Milk from the Breaſt, draws Love from the Heart! This may rather be ſuppoſed, than that the Lord ſhould forget his people.

Two things muſt here be cleared. 1. That it is ſo. 2. Why it is ſo.

1. That it is ſo, will appear from,
   1. Scripture Emblems.
   2. Scripture Promiſes.
   3. Scripture Inſtances.

1. Scripture Emblems; and among many, I will upon this occaſion ſingle out two or three principal ones. In Ezek. 5. 1, 2, 3. And thou Son of man take thee a ſharp knife, take thee a barbers razor, and cauſe it to paſs upon thine head and upon thy beard, then take the balances to weigh and divide the hair; thou ſhalt burn with fire a third part in the midſt of the City, when the days of the ſiege are fulfilled; and thou ſhalt take a third part, and ſmite about it with a knife; and a third part thou ſhalt ſcatter in the wind, and I will draw out a ſword after them: Thou ſhalt alſo take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy skirts. You find this truth ſhadowed out in this excellent Emblem: Jeruſalem the capital City is the Head, the numerous Inhabitants are the Hair, the King of Babylon the Razor, the weighing it in balances is the exactneſs of God's procedure in Judgment with them; the fire, knife, and wind, are the various Judgments to which the people were appointed; the hiding of a few in the Prophet's skirt, is the care of God for the preſervation of his own remnant in the common Calamity. This is one Emblem clearing this point. And then in Ezek. 9. 3, 4. the ſame truth is preſented to us in another Emblem, as lively and ſignificant as the former. And behold, ſix men came from the way of the higher gate, which lieth toward the North, and every man a ſlaughter-weapon in his hand, and one among them was cloathed in linen, with a writers inkhorn by his ſide, and they went in and ſtood before the brazen Altar; and the glory of the God of Iſrael was gone up from the Cherub, whereupon he was, to the threſhold of his houſe, and he called to the man cloathed in linen, which had the writers inkhorn by his ſide; and the Lord ſaid unto him, Go through the midſt of the City, through the midſt of Jeruſalem, and ſet a mark upon the foreheads of the men that ſigh, and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midſt thereof. The Men that had charge over the City are the Angels appointed for that ſervice; ſome with ſlaughter-weapons, whoſe work it was to deſtroy; but one among them had a writer's inkhorn by his ſide, and he was employ'd to take the names, and mark the perſons of God's faithful ones among them, whom the Lord intended to preſerve and hide in that common overthrow and deſolation of the City, and theſe were to be all marked Man by Man before the deſtroying Angel was to begin his bloody work. Oh! ſee the tender care of God over his upright mourning ſervants! Once more, the ſame Truth is repreſented in a third Emblem, Mal. 3. 17. And they ſhall be mine, ſaith the Lord, in the day that I make up my jewels, and I will ſpare them as a man ſpareth his own ſon that ſerveth him: Where the World is compared to an houſe on fire, God to the Maſter and Father of the Family, the Wicked to the uſeleſs Lumber therein, the Saints to the Children and Jewels in the Houſe; about theſe his firſt and principal care of preſervation is exerciſed, theſe he will be ſure to ſave, whatever become of the reſt. Thus you have the choſen Emblems that illuſtrate this comfortable truth.

2. As theſe Scripture Emblems illuſtrate it, ſo there are many excellent Scripture Promiſes to confirm it, Iſa. 32. 2. A man ſhall be for an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempeſt: as rivers of water in a dry place. This Man is the Man Chriſt Jeſus, the tempeſt ſpoken of, are the miſeries and calamities of War, which make the land on which it falls, an hot, dry, and weary land; in the midſt and rage whereof, Chriſt ſhall be to his faithful ones a covert for protection, a river of water for ſupply, and a ſhadow for refreſhment; that is to ſay, whatſoever ſhall be neceſſary either for their ſafety or comfort. Chriſt is not only a ſhadow to his people from the wrath of God, but alſo from the rage of Men. Again, Zech. 2. 5. I will be a wall of fire round about; alluding to Travellers in the Deſert, who to prevent danger from wild Beaſts in the night, uſe to make a circular fire round about the place where they lie down to reſt, and this fire was as a wall to ſecure them. You have the like gracious promiſe made to the poor captivated Church in Ezek. 11. 16. Although I have caſt them far off among the heathen, and ſcattered them among the countrys, yet will I be to them as a little ſanctuary in the countrys where they ſhall come.

A little ſanctuary. The word is variouſly render'd and expounded; ſome Adverbially, and render it pauliſper, a Sanctuary for a little while, viz. during their danger, at the ſhortneſs of which this Adverb points. So Junius. Others Adjectively, as we tranſlate it, Templum paucorum, as Vatablus. There was but a handful of them, and God would be as a Sanctuary to ſecure and protect that remnant.

מְעַט

3. And all theſe Promiſes have in all ages been faithfully fulfilled to the Saints. You have an excellent Scripture for this, 2 Pet. 2. 4, 5, 6. when the flood was brought upon the old World, there was one Noah a righteous Man in it, and for him God provided an Ark. When Sodom was overthrown, there was one Lot in it, a juſt Man, and God ſecur'd him out of danger; upon which that comfortable concluſion is built, ver. 9. The Lord knows how to deliver the godly. When Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, a Pella was provided as a refuge for the godly there. Remarkable is that place to this purpoſe, Iſai. 25. 4. Thou haſt been a ſtrength to the poor, a ſtrength to the needy in his diſtreſs, a refuge from the ſtorm, a ſhadow from the heat, when the blaſt of the terrible one is as a ſtorm againſt the wall. And this hath God been not only once or twice, but in all Ages, Pſal. 90. 1. Lord, thou haſt been our dwelling-place in all generations; or as the Hebrew, in generations and generations. What he hath been in former generations to his diſtreſſed people, that he is, and will be without alteration in all generations.

Sect. II. Yet we muſt remember, that all who are preſerved in common calamities are not the people of God; nor are all that are indeed his people preſerved: he hath people enough to divide into two ranks, as the Husbandman his Corn, ſome for the Mill, and ſome to reſerve for Seed. There be Stars enough in the Heaven to ſhine in both Hemiſpheres, and there are Saints enough in the World, ſome to ſhine in Heaven, and ſome to preſerve the Church on Earth.

1. All that are preſerv'd are not the people of God. In the Ark a wicked Cham was preſerv'd, and thoſe that were preſerv'd in Egypt, many of them were afterwards deſtroy'd for their unbelief, Jud. 5. So in Ezekiel's viſion, a part even of thoſe hairs which were ſpared were afterwards caſt into the fire, Ezek. 5. 4. Preſervation from the dominion of ſin, and the wrath to come, is peculiar to God's own people; but as for temporal deliverances we cannot infer that concluſion.

2. Nor yet can we ſay that all God's people ſhall be preſerved; that Promiſe, Zeph. 2. 3. leaves it upon a may be; many a precious Chriſtian hath fallen in the common calamity; they have been preſerved in, but not from trouble.

But it is uſual with God to preſerve ſome in the foreſt Judgments: And the grounds of it are,

1. Becauſe ſome muſt be left as a ſeed to propagate and preſerve the Church, which is perpetual, and can never fail; he never ſo overthrows Nations as Sodom was overthrown, Iſa. 1. 9. This was the ground of that promiſe, Jer. 30. 11. For I am with thee, ſaith the Lord, to ſave thee, though I make a full end of all nations whither I have ſcattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee. And of that Plea, Amos 7. 2. O Lord God, forgive I beſeech thee; by whom ſhall Jacob riſe? for he is ſmall. Except the Lord had left a ſmall remnant, we had been as Sodom. Remarkable to this purpoſe, is that Scripture, Iſa. 6. 13. But yet in it ſhall be a tenth, and it ſhall return, and ſhall be eaten: as a Teyl-tree, and as an Oak, whoſe ſubſtance is in them when they caſt their leaves; ſo the holy ſeed ſhall be the ſubſtance thereof. This preſerved remnant is the holy ſeed, by which the Church is propagated and continued, Pſal. 102. 28.

2. Becauſe God will even in this world own and reward the fears and ſorrows of his people for the ſins of the times, and ſufferings of the Church, with the joy and comfort of better times, and a participation of Sion's conſolation; ſo Iſa. 66. 10. Rejoice ye with Jeruſalem, ye that have mourned for her. They that have ſown in tears, do ſometimes live to reap in joy, Pſal. 125. 6. They ſhall ſay as Iſa. 25. 9. Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he is come to ſave us. And thoſe that live not to reap down in this world the harveſt of their own prayers and tears, ſhall be no loſers: a full and better reward ſhall be given them in Heaven, Iſa. 57. 22.

3. Becauſe the preſerved remnant of Saints are they that muſt actually give unto God the glory of all his providential adminiſtrations in the world, both of judgments and mercies upon others, and towards towards themſelves. They that go down to the pit do not celebrate his praiſe the living the living, they praiſe him, Iſa. 38. 18, 19. Thus when God turned back Sion's captivity, the remnant of Saints that were preſerved, were they that recorded his praiſe, Pſal. 126. 1, 2. Then was our mouth filled with laughter. And fully to this ſenſe is that Scripture, Pſal. 102. 19, 20, 21. He delivers thoſe that are appointed to death, i. e. that Men had doomed to death, that they may declare the name of the Lord in Sion, and his praiſe in Jeruſalem.

4. The hiding of the Saints in evil days, is the greateſt diſcovery of the hand of God in the world; when he hides them, he ſhews himſelf, and that both to the Saints and to their enemies.

It is one of the moſt glorious Myſteries of Providence that ever the world beheld, viz. the ſtrange and wonderful protection of poor helpleſs Chriſtians from the rage and fury of their mighty and malicious enemies; though they walk viſibly among them, yet they are as it were hid from their hands, but not from their eyes. So Jer. 1. 18. You find God made that Prophet among the envious Princes, and againſt an enraged and mighty King, as a defenced City, and as an iron pillar, and as a brazen wall. And indeed it was eaſier to them to conquer and take in the ſtrongeſt Fort or Garriſon, than that ſingle perſon, who yet walked day by day naked and open among them. So Luther, a poor Monk was made invincible, all the Papal Power could not touch him, for God hid him. All the World againſt one Athanaſius, and yet not able to deſtroy him, for God hid him. This is the diſplay of the glorious Power of God in the world, and he hath much honour by it.

Well then, if there be a God that takes care of his own in evil days; do not you be diſtractingly careful what ſhall become of you in ſuch times; you cannot ſee how it's poſſible for you to eſcape, but 2 Pet. 2, 4, 5, 6. the Lord knows how to deliver when you do not. Little did Lot know the way and manner of his preſervation, till God opened it to him, nor Noah till God contrived it for him: there was no way to be contrived by them for eſcape. He that knew how to deliver them, can deliver you alſo.

Leave your ſelves to God's diſpoſe, it ſhall certainly be to your advantage; the Church is his peculiar care, Iſa. 27. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it every moment, leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

The more you commit your ſelves to his Care, the more you engage it, Iſa. 26. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtaid on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee. He will certainly find a place of Safety for his people under or in Heaven.

Neither be too much dejected when the number of viſible Profeſſors ſeems but ſmall; think not the Church will periſh when it is brought ſo low. This was Elijah's caſe, he thought he had been left alone, that Religion had been preſerved in his ſingle perſon, as the Phenix of the world: but ſee 1 Kings 19. 18. God hath enough left, if we were in our graves, to continue Religion in the World; it concerns Him more than You to look to that.

CHAP. V.

Evincing the fourth Propoſition, viz That God uſually premoniſheth the World, eſpecially his own, of his Judgments, before they befall them.

Sect. I. GOD firſt warns, and then ſmites, he delights not to ſurprize Men; when Indignation was coming, he tells his people of it in the Text, and admoniſheth them to hide themſelves. Surely the Lord will do nothing but he revealeth his ſecrets to his ſervants the Prophets, Amos 3. 7. Thus when the flood was to come upon the old World, he gave them 120 years warning of it, Gen. 6. 3. compared with 1 Pet. 3. 19. So when Sodom was to be deſtroyed, God would not hide it from Abraham; Gen. 18. 17. Shall I hide from Abraham the thing that I do? The like diſcovery was made unto Lot, Gen. 19. 12, 13, 14. So when the Captivity was at hand, Ezekiel was commanded to give the Jews ſolemn warning of it from God, Ezek. 3. 17. Hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me.

And when their City and Temple was to be deſtroyed by the Romans, how plainly did Chriſt foretel them of it by his own mouth! Luke 19. 43, 44. Thine enemies ſhall caſt a trench about thee, and compaſs thee round, and keep thee in on every ſide, and ſhall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee, and they ſhall not leave thee one ſtone upon another, becauſe thou kneweſt not the time of thy viſitation. Joſephus alſo tells us that a little before the execution of this Judgment upon them, a Voice was heard in the Temple, Migremus hinc, Let us go hence; which voice Tacitus alſo in his Annals, mentions, Audita major humana vox, excedere Deos, ſimul ingens motus excedentium. It was more than an humane voice, telling them God was departing from them, and withal there was heard the ruſhing noiſe as of ſome that were going out of the Temple.

Joſeph. de bel. Jud. l. 7. c. 2. Tac. lib. 21.

And as there were extraordinary premonitions of approaching judgments by revelation to the Prophets of old, and ſigns from heaven; ſo there ſtill are ſtanding and ordinary rules by which the world may be admoniſhed of God's judgments before they come upon them.

And the general rule, by which men may diſcern the indignation of God before it comes, is this.

☞ When the ſame provocations, and evils are found in one Nation, which have brought down the wrath of God upon another nation; this is an evident ſign of God's Judgment at the door. For God is unchangeably holy and juſt, and will not favour that in one people, which he hath puniſhed in another; nor bleſs that in one age, which he hath curſed in another. And therefore that which hath been a ſign of Judgment to one, muſt be ſo to all.

Here it is that the carcaſes of thoſe ſinners whoſe ſins had caſt them away, are as it were caſt up upon the Scripture ſhore, for a warning to all others that they ſteer not the ſame ill courſe they did. 1 Cor. 10. 6. Now theſe things were our examples. The Iſraelites are made examples to us, plainly intimating that if we tread the ſame path, we muſt expect the ſame puniſhment. Let us therefore conſider what were the evils that provoked God's judgments againſt his ancient people, whom he was ſo loth to give up, Hoſ. 11. 8. and ſo long ere he did give up, Jer. 15. 6. and we ſhall find by the concurrent accounts that the Prophets give.

1. That God's worſhip among them was generally mixed and corrupted with their own inventions, for ſo it is ſaid, Pſal. 106. 40, 41. They went a whoring with their own inventions. And this ſo inflamed the wrath of God, who is a jealous God, and tender over his own honour, that he abhorred his own inheritance; yea, he expreſſes himſelf as a man doth whoſe heart is broken by the unfaithfulneſs of his wife, Ezek. 6. 9. Upon this account his profeſſing people became the generation of his wrath, Jer. 7. 29, 30.

2. Incorrigible obſtinacy under gentler correction, Amos 4. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. Scarcity, Mildews, Peſtilence, and Sword had been upon them; and ſtill thoſe that remained, though ſaved as a brand out of the fire, in which their fellow ſinners periſhed, would not return to God; and this haſtened on the general ruin, ver. 12. This preſages the ruine of Nations indeed.

3. Stupidity and ſenſleſneſs of God's hand was a ſad Omen, and cauſe of that peoples ruin; ſo Iſa. 26. 10, 11. Lord, when thy hand is lifted up, they will not ſee. No nor yet when his hand is laid on, Iſa. 42. 24, 25. It is not ſome ſmall drop of God's anger that paſſes without obſervation, but the fury of his anger; not ſome light skirmiſh of his judgments with them, but the ſtrength of battle: Not in a corner upon ſome particular perſon, or family, but that which ſet him on fire round about: yet all this could not awaken them. He hath poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the ſtrength of battel, and it hath ſet him on fire round about, yet he knew it not, and it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart. Prodigious ſtupidity! to be in the midſt of flames, yea, to be ſeized by them, and deſtroyed ſooner than awakened. So you find again in Hoſ. 7. 9. Gray hairs were here and there upon Ephraim, yet he knew it not. Youth and Age are eaſily diſtinguiſhed, and gray hairs do plainly diſtinguiſh them, being the plain tokens of a declining State, yet they took no notice of them. Such ſtupidity is ever more the fore-runner of miſery.

4. Perſecution of God's faithful Miniſters and People, was another forerunning ſign of their ruine, 2 Chron. 36. 16. They mocked the meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his words, and miſuſed his Prophets until the wrath of the Lord aroſe againſt his people, till there was no remedy. There were alſo a number of upright Souls among them, that deſired to worſhip God according to his own preſcription, but a ſnare was laid for them in Mizpah, and a net ſpread upon Tabor; and therefore was judgment towards that people; Hoſ. 5. 1. Mizpah, and Tabor were places in the way lying betwixt Samaria and Jeruſalem, where the true worſhip of God was, and there were Informers or Spies ſet by the Prieſts to intercept ſuch as would venture to ſerve God at Jeruſalem according to his own preſcription, this alſo foreboded the judgments of God upon that nation.

5. The decay of the life and power of Godlineſs among them plainly foreſhewed their ruin at hand, Hoſ. 4. 18. Their drink is ſour, where under the Metaphor of dead and ſour drink, which hath loſt its ſpirit and is become flat; their formal, heartleſs, and perfunctory duties are ſeverely taxed and condemned.

6. To conclude, the mutual animoſities, and feuds among that profeſſing people, evidently ſhewed judgment to be at the door. Hoſ. 9. 7. The days of viſitation are come, the days of recompence are come, Iſrael ſhall know it: the Prophet is a fool, the ſpiritual man is made for the multitude of thine iniquity; and the great hatred. This great hatred was one of the greateſt ſins, and ſaddeſt ſigns upon them. This Spirit of enmity ſowed by the Devil among them haſtened their calamity. If Ephraim will envy Judah, and Judah vex Ephraim the common enemy ſhall part the fray: when the whole Nation was under water, and the Roman Armies under the very walls of Jeruſalem their own Hiſtorians tell us, what bitter contentions and ſharp conflicts continued among them to the very laſt. Theſe things muſt be looked upon by all wiſe and conſiderate Men, no otherwiſe than we look upon glaring Meteors, and blazing Comets, portending judgment and ruine at the door. We have had indeed terrible Signs in Heaven, a dreadful rod of God ſhaken over us of late, which all Men ought to behold with trembling; yet I muſt ſay thoſe moral Signs of judgments forementioned, are much more terrible and portentous. According therefore to the evidence of theſe ſigns among us; let all upright hearts be affected and awakened with expectations of God's righteous judgments. It is indeed below faith to expect evil days with deſpondency and diſtraction; but ſurely it is a noble exerciſe of faith, ſo to expect them, as to make due preparation for them.

Sect. II. And if we enquire for what End God gives ſuch warnings to the world, and premoniſhes them from Heaven of the judgments that are coming on the earth, know that he doth it upon a threefold account.

1. To prevent their Execution.
2. To leave the Careleſs inexcuſable.
3. To make them more tolerable and eaſie to his own people.

1. Warning is given with deſign to prevent the execution of judgments; this is plain from Amos 4. 12. Therefore will I do this unto thee; there is warning given; and becauſe I will do this, prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael: There is the gracious deſign of preventing it, by bringing them ſeaſonably upon their knees at the foot of an angry God: You ſee the Lord expects it from all his Children, that they fall at his feet in deep humiliation, and fervent interceſſion whenever he goes forth in the way of judgment. What elſe was the deſign of God in ſending Jonah to Nineveh with that dreadful meſſage, but to excite them to repentance, and prevent their ruine? This Jonah gueſſed at, and therefore declined the meſſage to ſecure his credit, well knowing, that if they took warning and repented, the gracious nature of God would ſoon melt into compaſſion over them: Free grace would make him appear as a liar among the people; for to that ſenſe his own words ſound, Jonah 4. 2. Was not this my ſaying when I was yet in my Country, Therefore I fled before unto Tarſhiſh, for I knew that thou art a gracious God, q. d. I thought before hand it would come to this; I knew how willing thou art to be prevented by repentance; therefore to ſecure my credit, I fled to Tarſhiſh.

2. He forewarns of judgments to leave the Incorrigible wholly inexcuſable, that thoſe who have neither ſenſe of Sin, nor fear of Judgment before, might have no cloak for their folly, nor plea for themſelves afterward; What wilt thou ſay when he ſhall puniſh thee? Jer. 13. 21, 22. q. d. What Plea or Apology is left thee after ſo many fair warnings? You cannot ſay you were ſurprized, before you were admoniſhed, or ruined before you were warned.

3. God warns of Judgments before they come to make them the more eaſie to his people when they come indeed; thus in John 16. 4. Chriſt foretold his Diſciples of their approaching ſufferings, that when they came, they ſhould not be found amazed at them, or unprovided for them; for unexpected miſeries are aſtoniſhing to the beſt men, and deſtructive to wicked men, Luke 17. 26, 27, 28.

Well

Well then if it be ſo, let all that are wiſe in heart conſider the Signs of the times, and ſeaſonably hearken to God's warnings. The Lord's voice crieth to the City, and the man of wiſdom ſhall ſeek thy name; hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it, Micah 6. 9. 'Tis our wiſdom to way-lay our troubles, and provide for the worſt eſtate, whilſt we enjoy the beſt: happy is he that is at once believing and praying for good days, and preparing for the worſt. Noah's example is our advantage, Heb. 11. 7. Who by faith being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark. Preventing mercies are the moſt raviſhing mercies, Pſal. 59. 10. And preventing calamities are the ſoreſt calamities, Amos 9. 10.

And let us heartily bewail the ſupineneſs and careleſsneſs of the world in which we live, who take no notice of God's warnings, but put the evil day far from them, Amos 6. 3. who will admit no fear, till they are paſt all hope; they ſee God houſing his Saints apace, yet will not ſee the evil to come from which God takes them, Iſa. 57. 1, 2. The righteous periſheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none conſidering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come? he ſhall enter into peace, they ſhall reſt in their beds, each one walking in his uprightneſs. They hear the cry of ſin which is gone up to heaven, but cry not for the abominations that are committed, nor tremble at the judgments that they will procure.

O careleſs Sinners drowned in Stupidity, and ſleeping like Jonah under the Hatches, when others are upon their knees and at their wits end! do Saints tremble, and are you ſecure? Have not you more reaſon to be afraid than they; If Judgments come, the greateſt harm it can do them, is but to haſten them to Heaven; but as for you, it may hurry you away to Hell: They only fear tribulation in the way; but you will not fear damnation in the end. Believe it Reader, in days of common calamity both Heaven and Hell will fill apace.

CHAP. VI.

Demonſtrating the fifth Propoſition, viz. That God's Attributes, Promiſes, and Providences, are prepared for the ſecurity of his people in the greateſt diſtreſſes that befal them in the World.

Sect. I. HAving more briefly diſpatched the foregoing preliminary Propoſitions it remains that we now more fully open this fifth Propoſition, which contains the main ſubject matter of this Diſcourſe; here therefore our meditations muſt fix and abide, and truly ſuch is the diliciouſneſs of the ſubject to ſpiritual hearts, that I judge it wholly needleſs to offer any other motive beſides it ſelf to engage your affections. Let us therefore view our Chambers, and ſee how well God hath provided for his Children in all their diſtreſſes that befal them in this world; it is our Fathers voice that calls to us, Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers. And the

1. Cham. which comes to be opened as a Refuge to diſtreſſed Believers in a ſtormy day, is that moſt ſecure and ſafe Attribute of Divine Power: into this let us firſt enter by ſerious and believing meditation, and ſee how ſafe they are whom God hides under the protection thereof in the worſt and moſt dangerous days. In opening this Attribute we ſhall conſider it,

1. In its own Nature and Property.
2. With reſpect to the Promiſes.
3. As it is actuated by Providence on the behalf of diſtreſſed Saints.

And then give you a comfortable proſpect of their ſafe and happy condition, who take up their lodgings by Faith in this Attribute of God.

1. Let us conſider the Power of God in it ſelf, and we ſhall find it repreſented to us in the Scriptures in theſe three lovely Properties, viz.

1. Omnipotent
2. Supreme
3. Everlaſting

} Power.

1. As an Omnipotent and All-ſufficient Power; which hath no bounds or limits, but the pleaſure and will of God, Dan. 4 34, 35. He doth according to his will in the armies of Heaven; and among the Inhabitants of the earth, and none can ſtay his hand, or ſay unto him, What doſt thou? So Pſalm 135. 6. Whatſoever the Lord pleaſed that did he, in Heaven, and in Earth, in the Seas, and all deep places. You ſee Divine pleaſure is the only rule according to which Divine Power exerts it ſelf in the world; we are not therefore to limit and reſtrain it in our narrow and ſhallow thoughts, and to think in this or in that the Power of God may help or ſecure us; but to believe that he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think. Thus theſe Worthies, Dan. 3. 17. by Faith exalted the power of God above the order and common rule of ſecond cauſes. Our God whom we ſerve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O King. Their faith reſting it ſelf upon the Omnipotent power of God, expected deliverance from it in an extraordinary way; 'tis true, this is no ſtanding rule for our faith ordinarily to work by; nor have we ground to expect ſuch miraculous Salvations, but yet when extraordinary difficulties preſs us, and the common ways and means of deliverance are ſhut up, we ought by faith to exalt the Omnipotency of God, by aſcribing the glory thereof to him, and leave our ſelves to his good pleaſure, without ſtraitning or narrowing his Almighty power, according to the mold of our poor low thoughts and apprehenſions of it: For ſo the Lord himſelf directeth our faith in difficult caſes, Iſa. 55. 8, 9. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, ſaith the Lord; for as the Heavens are higher than the earth; ſo are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. He ſpeaks there of his pardoning mercy which he will not have his people to contract, and limit according to the model and platform of their own deſponding, miſgiving and unbelieving thoughts; but to exalt and glorifie it, according to its unbounded fulneſs; as it is in the thoughts of God, the fountain of that Mercy; ſo it ought to be with reſpect to his power, about which his thoughts and ours do vaſtly differ; the power of God as we caſt it in the mold of our thoughts, is as vaſtly different and diſproportionate from what it is in the thoughts of God the fountain thereof; as the earth is to the heavens, which is but a ſmall inconſiderate point compared with them.

2. The power of God is a Supreme and Sovereign power, from which all creature power is derived, and by which it is over ruled, reſtrained, and limited at his pleaſure. Nebuchadnezzar was a great Monarch, he ruled over other Kings, yet he held his Kingdom from God; it was God that placed not only the Crown upon his head, but his head upon his ſhoulders, Dan. 2. 37. Thou, O King, art a King of Kings; for the God of Heaven hath given thee a Kingdom, power, and ſtrength, and glory. Hence it follows, that no creature can move tongue or hand againſt any of God's people, but by vertue of a Commiſſion or permiſſion from their God, albeit they think not ſo. Knoweſt thou not, ſaith Pilate unto Chriſt, that I have power to crucifie thee, and power to releaſe thee? Proud worm! what an ignorant, and inſolent boaſt was this of his own power! and how doth Chriſt ſpoil and ſhame it in his anſwer? John 19. 10. Thou couldeſt have no power at all againſt me, except it were given thee from above.

Wicked Men like wild horſes would run over and trample under foot all the people of God in the world, were it not that the bridle of divine providence had a ſtrong curb to reſtrain them: Ezek. 22. 6. The Princes of Iſrael every one were in thee, to their power to ſhed blood. And it was well for God's Iſrael that their power was not as large as their wills were; this world is a raging and boiſterous Sea, which ſorely toſſes the Paſſengers for Heaven that ſail upon it, but this is their comfort and ſecurity: The Lord ſtilleth the noiſe of the Sea, the noiſe of the waves, and the tumult of the people, Pſal. 65. 7. Moral as well as natural waves, are checked and bounded by Divine Power. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, and the remainder of wrath thou ſhalt reſtrain, Pſal. 76. 10. As a man turns ſo much water into the channel as will drive the mill, and turns away the reſt into another ſluce.

Yea, not only the power of man, but the power of Devils alſo is under the reſtraint and limitation of this power, Rev. 3. 10. Satan ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, and ye ſhall have tribulation ten days. He would have caſt them into their graves, yea, into hell if he could, but it muſt be only into a Priſon: He would have kept them in priſon, 'till they had died and rotted there, but it muſt be only for ten days. Oh glorious Sovereign power! which thus keeps the reins of Government in its own hand!

3. The power of God is an everlaſting power; time doth not weaken or diminiſh it, as it doth all creature powers, Iſa. 40. 28. The Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not, neither is weary, Iſa. 59. 1. The Lord's hand is not ſhortned (i. e.) He hath as much power now as ever he had, and can do for his people as much as ever he did; time will decay the power of the ſtrongeſt creature, and make him faint and feeble; but the Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not. Thou (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) abideſt for ever, thy years flee not, Pſal. 102. 27. In God's working there is no expence of his ſtrength, he is able to do as much as ever he did, to all over again all the glorious deliverances that ever he wrought for his people from the beginning of the World; to do as much for his Church now as he did at the Red Sea; and upon this ground the Church builds its Plea, Iſa. 51. 9, 10. Awake, awake, put on ſtrength, O arm of the Lord, awake as in the ancient days in the generations of old, art thou not it that haſt cut Rahab, and wounded the Dragon? q. d. Lord why ſhould not thy people at this day expect as glorious productions of thy power as any of them found in former ages?

Sect. II. Let us view the power of God in the vaſt extent of its operation, and then you will find it working beyond the line,

1. Of Creature Power.
2. Of Creature Expectation.
3. Of Humane Probability.

1. Beyond the line of all created power, even upon the hearts, thoughts and minds of men, where no creature hath any Juriſdiction. So Gen. 31. 29. God bound up the Spirit of Laban, and becalmed it towards Jacob. So Pſal. 106. 46. He made them alſo to be pitied of all them that carried them captives. Thus the Lord promiſed Jeremy, Jer. 15. 11. I will cauſe the enemies to entreat thee well, in the time of evil. This power of God ſoftens the hearts of the moſt fierce and cruel enemies, and ſweetens the ſpirits of the moſt bitter and enraged foes of his people.

2. Beyond the line of all Creature Expectations, Eph. 3. 20. God is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think. He doth ſo in Spirituals; as appears by thoſe two famous Parables, Luke 15. 19, 22. And am no more worthy to be called thy Son; make me as one of thy hired ſervants. But the Father ſaid to his ſervants, bring forth the beſt robe, and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand, and ſhoes on his feet. The Prodigal deſired to be but as an hired ſervant, and lo, the fatted Calf is killed for him, and muſick to his meat, and the gold ring upon his finger. And in Matth. 18. 26, 27. The debtor did but deſire patience and the creditor forgave the Debt. Oh, thinks a poor humbled Sinner, If I might have but the leaſt glimpſe of hope, how ſweet would it be! But God brings him to more than he expects, even the clear ſhining of aſſurance. It is ſo in Temporals, the Church confeſſes the Lord did things they looked not for, Iſa. 64. 3. And in both Spirituals and Temporals this power moves in an higher Orb than our thoughts, Iſa. 55. 8, 9. My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor my ways your ways; but as far as the heavens are above the earth, ſo are my thoughts above your thoughts. The earth is but a punctum to the heavens; all its talleſt Cedars, Mountains, and Pyramids cannot reach it: He ſpeaks, as was ſaid before, of God's pitying, pardoning, and merciful thoughts, and ſhews that no Creature can think of God, as he doth of the creature under ſin, or under miſery. Our thoughts are not his; either Firſt, by way of ſimple cogitation we cannot think ſuch thoughts towards others in miſery, by way of pity; or under ſin againſt us by way of pardon, as God doth: Nor ſecondly, are our thoughts as God's in reſpect of reflexive comprehenſion; i. e. We cannot conceive or comprehend what thoſe thoughts of God towards us are; when we fall into ſin or miſery, juſt as he thinks them, they are altered, debaſed, and ſtraitned as ſoon as ever they come into our thoughts. See an excellent inſtance in Gen. 48. 11. I had not thought to ſee thy face, and lo, God hath ſhewed me all thy ſeed. A ſurprizing providence; and thus the Divine Power works in a Sphere above all the thoughts, prayers, and expectations of men.

3. It works beyond all probabilities, and rational conjectures of men; this Almighty power hath created deliverances for the people of God, when things have been brought to the loweſt ebb, and all the means of ſalvation have been hid from their eyes. We have diverſe famous inſtances of this in Scripture, wherein we may obſerve a remarkable gradation in the working of this almighty power: It is ſaid in the 2 Kings 15. 26, 27. The Lord ſaw the affliction of Iſrael, that it was very bitter, for there was not any ſhut up, nor any left; nor any helper for Iſrael. A deplorable ſtate: how inevitable was their ruine to the eye of ſenſe? Well might it be called a bitter affliction; yet from this immediate power aroſe for them a ſweet and unexpected Salvation; and if we look into 2 Cor. 1. 9, 10. we ſhall find the Apoſtles and choiceſt Chriſtians of thoſe times, giving up themſelves themſelves as loſt men, all ways of eſcape being quite out of ſight; for ſo much thoſe words ſignifie We had the ſentence of death in our ſelves; i. e. We yielded our ſelves for dead men. But though they were ſentenced to death, yea, though they ſentenced themſelves, this power which wrought above all their thoughts, and rational conjectures, reprieved them. And yet one ſtep-farther in Ezek. 37. 4, 5, 6, 7. The people of God are there repreſented as actually dead, yea, as in their graves, yea as rotted in their graves, and their very bones dry, like thoſe that are dead of old; ſo utterly improbable was their recovery: Yet by the working of this almighty power which ſubdueth all things to it ſelf, their graves in Babylon were opened, the breath of life came into them, bone came to bone, and there ſtood up a very great Army; it was the working of this power above the thoughts of man's heart, which gave the ground of that famous Proverb, Gen. 22. 14. In the Mount of the Lord it ſhall be ſeen. And the ground of that famous Promiſe, Zech. 14. 7. At evening time it ſhall be light; i. e. Light ſhall unexpectedly ſpring up, when all Men according to the courſe and order of Nature, expect nothing but encreaſing darkneſs. How extenſive is the power of God in its glorious operations!

Sect. III. Let us view the power of God in its relation to the promiſes, for ſo it becomes our Sanctuary in the day of trouble; if the Power of God be the Chamber, 'tis the Promiſe of God which is that Golden Key that opens it. And if we well conſult the Scriptures in this matter, we ſhall find the Almighty power of God made over to his people by promiſe, for many excellent ends and uſes in the day of their trouble. As,

1. To uphold and ſupport them, when their own ſtrength fails, Iſa. 41. 10. Fear thou not, for I am with thee, be not diſmayed for I am thy God: I will ſtrengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteouſneſs. And which of the Saints have not ſenſibly felt theſe everlaſting arms, underneath their ſpirits, when afflictions have preſſed them above their own ſtrength? So runs the promiſe to Paul in 2 Cor. 12. 9. My grace is ſufficient for thee, for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs; i. e. It is made known in thy weakneſs. Our weakneſs adds nothing to God's power, it doth not make his power perfect, but it hath the better advantage of its diſcovery, and puts forth it ſelf more ſignally and conſpicuouſly in our weakneſs; as the ſtars which never ſhine ſo gloriouſly, as in the darkeſt night.

2. To preſerve them in all their dangers, to which they lie expoſed in Soul and Body. 1 Pet. 1. 5. You are kept (ſaith the Apoſtle) by the mighty power of God. Kept as in a Garriſon; this is their arm every morning, as it is Iſa. 33. 2. O Lord be gracious unto us, we have waited for thee, be thou their arm every morning, our ſalvation alſo in the time of trouble. The Arm is that member which is fitted for the defence of the body, and for that end ſo placed by the God of Nature, that it may guard every part above and below it; but as good they were bound behind our backs, for any help they can give us in ſome caſes: It is God's Arm that defends us, and not our own. This inviſible power of God makes the Saints the world's wonder. Pſal. 71. 7. I am as a wonder to many, but thou art my ſtrong refuge. To ſee poor defenceleſs Creatures preſerved, in the midſt of furious enemies, that is juſt matter of wonder; but God being their inviſible refuge, that ſolves the wonder; to this end the power of God is by promiſe engaged to his people, Iſa. 27. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it every moment, leſt any hurt it; I will keep it night and day. And thus they ſubſiſt in the midſt of dangers and troubles; as the burning Buſh (the Emblem of the Church) did amidſt the devouring flames, Exod. 3. 3.

3. To deliver them out of their diſtreſſes, ſo runs the promiſe, Pſal. 91. 14, 15. Becauſe he hath ſet his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him; I will ſet him on high, becauſe he hath known my name; he ſhall call upon me, and I will anſwer him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him, and honour him. And Jer. 30. 7. Alas, for that day is great, ſo that none is like it: It is even the time of Jacob's trouble, but ye ſhall be ſaved out of it. And ſurely there can be no diſtreſs ſo great, no caſe of Believers ſo forlorn; but,

1. It's eaſie with God to ſave them out of it. Are they to the eye of Senſe loſt, as hopeleſs as men in the grave? Yet ſee Ezek. 37. 12. O my people, I will open your graves, and cauſe you to come out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Iſrael. And he doth whatever he doth eaſily, with a word, Pſal. 44. 4. Thou art my King, O God, command deliverances for Jacob. And it requireth no more violent motion to do it, than he that ſwimmeth in the water uſes, Iſa. 25. 11. A gentle eaſie motion of the hand doth it.

2. And as the power of God can deliver them eaſily, ſo ſpeedily. Their deliverance is often wrought by way of ſurprizal. Iſa. 17. 14. Behold, at evening tide trouble, and in the morning he is not. So the Church prays, in Pſal. 126. 4. turn again our captivity, as the ſtreams in the South. The Southern Countries are dry, the ſtreams there come not in a gentle and flow current, but being occaſioned by violent ſudden ſpouts of Rain, they preſently overflow the Country, and as ſoon retire: So ſpeedily can the power of God free his people from their dangers and fears.

3. Yea, ſuch is the excellency of his delivering power, that he can ſave alone without any contribution of creature aids. So Iſa. 59. 16. He wondered that there was no interceſſour; therefore his haad brought ſalvation unto him, and his righteouſneſs ſuſtained him. We read indeed Judg. 5. 23. Of helping the Lord, but that is not to expreſs his need, but their duty; we have continual need of God, but he hath no need of us; he uſes inſtruments, but not out of neceſſity, his arm alone can ſave us, be the danger never ſo great, or the viſible means of deliverance never ſo remote.

4. Once more, let us view this Chamber of Divine power, as it is continually opened by the hand of providence, to receive and ſecure the people of God in all their dangers. 'Tis ſaid, 2 Chro. 16. 9. The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in behalf of them, whoſe heart is perfect towards him. Where you have an excellent account of the immediacy, univerſality, and efficacy of Divine Providence, as it uſes and applies this Divine Power for the guard and defence of that people, who are its charge; he doth not only ſet Angels to watch for them, but his own eyes keep Sentinel, even thoſe ſeven eyes of Providence mentioned Zech. 3. 9. which never ſleep nor ſlumber; for they are ſaid to run continually to and fro, and that not in this or that particular place only, for the ſervice of ſome more eminent and excellent perſons; but thro' the whole earth. 'Tis an encompaſſing and ſurrounding providence which hath its eye upon all, whoſe hearts are upright; all the Saints are within the line of its care and protection; the eye of Providence diſcovereth all their dangers, and its arm defends them, for he ſhews himſelf ſtrong in their behalf.

The

The ſecret, but Almighty efficacy of Providence is alſo excellently deſcribed to us in Ezek. 1. 8. where the Angels are ſaid to have their hands under their wings, working ſecretly and undiſcernibly, but very effectually for the Saints committed to their charge. Like unto which is that in Hab. 3. 4. Where it is ſaid of God, that He had horns coming out of his hands, and there was the hiding of his power. The hand is the inſtrument of action, denoting God's active power, and the horns coming out of them are the glorious raies and beams of that power ſhining forth in the ſalvation of his people: O that we could ſun our ſelves in thoſe chearful and reviving beams of Divine Power, by conſidering how glorioufly they have broken forth, and ſhone out for the ſalvation of his people in all Ages. So it did for Iſrael at the red Sea, Exod. 15. 6. So for Jehoſhaphat in that great ſtreight, 2 Chron. 20. 12, 15. And ſo in the time of Hezekiah, 2 Kings 19. 3. 7. Yea in all ages from the beginning of the World the Saints have been ſheltered under theſe wings of Divine Power, Iſa. 51. 9, 10. Thus Providence hath hanged and adorned this Chamber of Divine Power with the delightful Hiſtories of the Churches manifold preſervations by it.

Sect. IV. Having taken a ſhort view of this glorious Chamber of God's Power abſolutely in it ſelf, and alſo in relation to his promiſes and providences, it remains now, that I preſs and perſwade all the people of God under their fears and dangers according to God's gracious invitation to enter into it ſhut their doors, and to behold with delight this glorious Attribute working for them in all their exigencies and diſtreſſes.

1. Enter into this Chamber of Divine Power, all ye that fear the Lord, and hide your ſelves there in theſe dangerous and diſtreſsful days; let me ſay to you as the Prophet did to the poor diſtreſſed Jews, Zech. 9. 12. Turn ye to your ſtrong hold, ye priſoners of hope. Strong holds might they ſay; Why, where are they? The walls of Jeruſalem are in the duſt, the Temple burnt with fire, Sion an heap, what meaneſt thou then in telling us of our ſtrong holds? Why, admit all this, yet there is Satis præſidii in uno Deo, Refuge enough for you in God alone, as Calvin excellently notes upon that place. Chriſtian, art not thou able to fetch a good ſubſiſtence for thy Son by Faith, out of the Almighty power of God? The renowned Saints of old did ſo. Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob met with as many difficulties and plunges of trouble in their time, as ever you did or ſhall meet with; yet by the exerciſe of their faith upon this Attribute, they lived comfortably, and why cannot you? Exod. 6. 3. I appeared (ſaith God) unto Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, by the name of God Almighty. They kept houſe and feaſted by Faith upon this name of mine; O that we could do as Abraham did, Rom. 4. 21. We have the ſame Attribute, but alas, we have not ſuch a Faith as his was to improve it. It is eaſie to believe the Almighty power of God in a calm, but not ſo eaſie to reſign our ſelves to it, and ſecurely reſt upon it in a ſtorm of adverſity; But oh what peace and reſt would our Faith procure us by the free uſe and exerciſe of it this way, to aſſiſt your faith in this difficulty wherein we find the faith of a Moſes ſometimes ſtaggered. Let me briefly offer you theſe four following encouragements.

1. Conſider how your gracious God hath engaged this his Almighty Power by Promiſe and Covenant for the ſecurity of his people, God pawned it as it were to Abraham in that famous promiſe, Gen. 17. 1. I am the Almighty God, walk thou before me, and be perfect. And Gen. 15. 1. Fear not, Abraham, I am thy ſhield. Say not, this was Abraham's peculiar privilege, for if you conſult Hoſ. 12. 4. and Heb. 13. 5, 6. you will find that Believers in theſe days, have as good a title to the promiſes made in thoſe days, as thoſe worthies had to whom they were immediately made.

2. If you be Believers, your relation to God ſtrongly engageth his power for you, as well as his own promiſes, Surely (ſaith God) they are my people, children that will not lye; ſo he became their Saviour, Iſa. 63. 8. We ſay Relations have the leaſt of Entity, but the greateſt of efficacy; you find it ſo in your own experience, let a wife, child, or friend be in imminent danger, and it ſhall engage all the power you have to ſuccour and deliver them.

3. This glorious power of God is engaged for you by the very malice and wickedneſs of your enemies, who will be apt to impute the ruine of the Saints to the defect of power in their God; from whence thoſe excellent arguments are drawn, Numb. 14. 15, 16. Now if you ſhall kill all his people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee, will ſpeak, ſaying, becauſe the Lord was not able to bring this people into the land, which he ſware unto them, therefore he hath ſlain them in the wilderneſs. And again, Deut. 32. 26, 27. you ſhall find the Lord improving this argument for them himſelf; if they do not plead it for themſelves, he will. I would ſcatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to ceaſe from among men, were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, leſt their adverſaries ſhould behave themſelves ſtrangely, and leſt they ſhould ſay, our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this. O ſee how much you are beholding to the very rage of your enemies for your deliverances from them!

4. To conclude, the very reliance of your Souls by faith upon the power of God, your very leaning upon his arm engages it for your protection Iſa. 26. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee. Puzzle not your ſelves therefore any longer about qualifications; but know that the very acting of your faith on God, the recumbency of your Souls upon him, is that which will engage him for your defence, how weak and defective ſoever thou art in other reſpects.

2. Having thus entered by Faith into this Chamber of Divine Power, the next counſel the Text gives you is, to ſhut the door behind you, i. e. after the acting of your faith, and the quiet repoſe of your Souls upon God's Almighty Power, then take heed leſt unbelieving fears and jealouſies creep in again and diſturb the reſt of your Souls in God, you find a ſad inſtance of this in Moſes, Numb. 11. 21. 23. After ſo many glorious acts and triumphs of his Faith, how were his heels tripped up by diffidence which crept in afterwards! Good men may be poſed with difficult Providences, and made to ſtagger. The Iſraelites had lived upon miracles many years, yet Pſal. 78. 20. Can he give bread alſo? Good Martha objects difficulty to Chriſt, Joh. 11. 39. By this time he ſtinketh. Oh! tis a glorious thing to give God the glory of his Almighty Power in difficult caſes that we cannot comprehend. See Zech. 8. 6. If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in theſe days, ſhould it be alſo marvellous in mine eyes? ſaith the Lord of hoſts. Difficulties are for Men, but not for God: becauſe it is marvellous in your eyes, muſt it be ſo in Gods? Various Objections will be apt to ariſe in your hearts to drive you out of this your refuge. As,

1 Object. Oh! but the long continuance of our troubles and diſtreſſes will ſink our very hearts, Iſa. 40. 27.

40. 27. Why ſayeſt thou, O Jacob, and ſpeakeſt, O Iſrael, my way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is paſſed over from my God?

Sol. But, oh! wait upon God without fainting, Heb. 2. 3. The viſion is yet for an appointed time, but at the end of it ſhall ſpeak and not lye: though it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come, it will not tarry.

2. Object. Oh but our former hopes and expectations of deliverance are fruſtrated, Jer. 8. 15. We looked for peace, but no good came: and for a time of health, and behold trouble.

Sol. Oh, but yet be not diſcouraged; ſee how the Pſalmiſt begins the 69th Pſalm with trembling, and ends it with triumph; the husbandman waiteth, and ſo muſt you.

3. Object. But there is no ſign or appearance of our deliverance.

Sol. What then, this is no new thing, Pſal. 74. 9. We ſee not our ſigns, there is no more any Prophet, neither is there any among us that knoweth how long.

4. Object. But all things work contrary to our hope.

Sol. Why, ſo did things with Abraham; yet ſee, Rom. 4. 18. againſt hope, he believed in hope.

3. Obſerve further with delight the outgoings and glorious workings of Divine Power for you, and for the Church in times of trouble; this is ſweet entertainment for your Souls, 'tis food for faith, Pſal. 74. 14. Thou brakeſt the heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderneſs. And here I beſeech you behold and admire,

1. Its myſterious and admirable protection of the Saints in all their dangers. They feed as Sheep in the midſt of Wolves, Luke 10. 3. They lie among them that are ſet on fire, Pſal. 57. 4. Their habitation is in the midſt of deceit. Jer. 9. 6. Yet they are kept in ſafety by the mighty Power of God.

2. Behold and admire it in caſting the bonds of reſtraint upon your enemies, that tho' they would, yet they cannot hurt you; our dangers are viſible, and our fears great, but our ſecurity and ſafety admirable, Iſa. 51. 13. Thou haſt feared continually every day, becauſe of the fury of the oppreſſor, as if he were ready to deſtroy; and where is the fury of the oppreſſor?

3. Behold its opening unexpected and unlikely refuges and ſecurities for the Saints in their diſtreſſes; Iſa. 16. 4. Let mine outcaſts dwell with thee, Moab, be thou a covert to them from the face of the Spoiler; for the Extortioner is at an end, the Spoiler ceaſeth, the Oppreſſors are conſumed out of the Land. Rev. 12. 16. The earth helped the Woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and ſwallowed up the flood which the Dragon caſt out of his mouth.

4. Behold it fruſtating all the deſigns of our enemies againſt us, Iſa. 54. 17. No weapon that is formed againſt thee ſhall proſper, and every tongue that ſhall riſe againſt thee in judgment thou ſhalt condemn. Behold, I have created the Smith, Iſa. 54. 16. q. d. He that created the Smith, can order as he pleaſeth the Weapon made by him; hence our enemies are not maſters of their own deſigns.

Oh then depend upon this Power of God, for it is your ſecurity; there is a twofold dependance, the one natural and neceſſary, the other elective.

1. Natural dependance, ſo all do and muſt depend upon him.

2. Elective and voluntary, and ſo we all ought to depend upon him; and for your encouragement take this Scripture, Pſal. 9. 9, 10. The Lord alſo will be a refuge for the oppreſſed, a refuge in times of trouble, and they that know thy name will put their truſt in thee, for thou, Lord, haſt not forſaken them that ſeek thee. And thus of the firſt Attribute of God, prepared for the ſafety of his people in times of trouble.

CHAP. VII.

Opening that glorious Attribute of Divine Wiſdom as a ſecond Chamber of Security to the Saints in difficult Times.

Sect. I. THE next Chamber of Divine Protection into which I ſhall lead you, is the Infinite Wiſdom of God; I call it the next, becauſe I ſo find it placed in Scripture, Job 36. 5. He is mighty in power and wiſdom. Dan. 2. 20. Wiſdom and might are his.

This Attribute may be fitly called the Council-Chamber of Heaven, where all things are contrived in deepeſt wiſdom, which are afterwards wrought in the world by power, Eph. 1. 11. He worketh all things after the counſel of his own will. Counſel in the Creature implies weakneſs and defect; we are not able at one thought to fathom the depth of a buſineſs, and therefore muſt deliberate and ſpend many thoughts about it, and when we have ſpent all our own thoughts we are oft times at a loſs, and muſt borrow help, and ask counſel of others; but in God it notes the perfection of his underſtanding, for as thoſe acts of the creature which are the reſults of deliberation and counſel, are the height and top of all rational contrivement; ſo in its accommodation to God, it notes the excellent reſults of his infinite and moſt perfect underſtanding.

Now this wiſdom of God is to be conſidered either, Abſolutely, or, Relatively.

1. Abſolutely in it ſelf, and ſo it is, That, whereby he moſt perfectly and exactly knows himſelf, and all things without himſelf, ordering and diſpoſing them in the moſt convenient manner to the glory of his own name.

Wiſdom comprehends two things, 1. Knowledge of the natures of things, which in the creature is called Science. 2. Knowledge how to govern, order and diſpoſe them, which in the Creature is called Prudence; theſe things in Man are but faint ſhadows of that which is in God in the moſt abſolute perfection; he fully knows himſelf, for his Underſtanding is infinite, Pſal. 147. 5. and the thoughts he thinks towards us, Jer. 29. 11. And as he perfectly underſtands himſelf, ſo likewiſe all things that are without himſelf. Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world. Together with all the ſecret deſigns, thoughts, and purpoſes which lie hid from all others in the inmoſt receſſes of mens hearts, Pſal. 139. 2.

And as he perfectly knows all things, ſo he fully underſtands how to govern and direct them to the beſt end, even the exalting of his own praiſe, Pſal. 104. 24. Rom. 11. 36. for of him, and through him, and to him are all things: of him, as the efficient cauſe; thro' him, as the conſerving cauſe: and to him, as the final cauſe. And in this wiſe diſpoſition of all things, he hath a gracious reſpect to the good of his choſen, Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for good to them that love God. More particularly, the Wiſdom of God is to be conſidered by us in its excellent Properties, amongſt which theſe four following are eminently conſpicuous, as it is the

1. Original,
2. Eſſential,
3. Perfect, and
4. Only Wiſdom.

1. The Wiſdom of God is the Original Wiſdom, from which all the Wiſdom found in Angels or Men is derived, and unto that Fountain we are directed to go, go, for ſupplies of Wiſdom, Ja. 1. 5. If any man lack wiſdom, let him ask it of God. There is indeed a Spirit in Man, but it is the inſpiration of the Almighty that giveth underſtanding, Job 32. 8. The natural faculty is ours, but the Illumination thereof is God's, the underſtanding of the Creature is as the Dial, which ſignifies nothing till the Sun ſhine upon it.

2. God's Wiſdom is Eſſential Wiſdom. Wiſdom in the Creature is but a quality ſeparable from the ſubject; but in God it is his Nature, his very Eſſence, he can as ſoon ceaſe to be God, as to be moſt wiſe.

3. The Wiſdom of God is perfect Wiſdom, full of it ſelf, and excluſive of its contrary; the wiſeſt of men are not wiſe at all times; the greateſt Wits are not without ſome mixture of madneſs; it is an high attainment in human Wiſdom to underſtand our own weakneſs and folly; the deepeſt heads are but ſhallows, but the wiſdom of God is an unſearchable depth, Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches, both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his ways paſt finding out?

4. To conclude, The Wiſdom of God is the only Wiſdom; there is no Wiſdom without him, none againſt him, he is the only wiſe God, Jude v. 25.

2. The Wiſdom of God muſt be conſidered Relatively, and that in a double Reſpect:

1. To his Promiſes. 2. To his Providences.

Sect. II. Let us view it in its relation to the Promiſes, where you ſhall find it made over by God to his people for divers excellent uſes and purpoſes in times of diſtreſs and danger. As,

1. It is made over to them in Promiſes for their direction and guidance when they know not what to do, or which way to take. So Pſal. 25. 9. The meek will he guide in judgment, and the meek will he teach his way; and Iſa. 58. 11. 8. The Lord ſhall guide thee continually; and Pſal. 32. 8. I will guide thee with mine eye. And with this the Pſalmiſt encourages himſelf, Pſal. 73. 24. Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel, and afterwards receive me to glory. O what an invaluable Mercy is this! we ſhould make ſhipwreck both of our temporal and eternal Mercies quickly, were it not for the guidance of Divine Wiſdom.

2. To extricate them when involved in difficulties. So 2 Pet. 2. 9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation. They know not how, but their God doth; they are often at a loſs, but He is never. So 1 Cor. 10. 13. There hath no temptation taken you, but ſuch as is common to man, but God is faithful, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation alſo make a way to eſcape, that ye may be able to bear it.

3. To over-rule and order all their troubles to their good, and real advantage. So runs that moſt comprehenſive promiſe, Rom. 18. 28. All things ſhall work together for good to them that love God. In the Faith whereof Paul concludes, Phil. 1. 19. Even this ſhall work for his Salvation. Thus the people of God were ſent into captivity for their good, Jer. 24. 8. and Joſeph into Egypt, Gen. 50. 20. Ye thought evil againſt me, but God meant it unto good, to bring to paſs as it is this day, to ſave much people alive.

2. Let us view the Wiſdom of God in its relation to his Providences, for there it ſhines forth eminently, Ezek. 1 18. The wheels were full of eyes i. e. the motions and providential revolutions in this lower World are very judicious and adviſed motions; Non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ; It hath a fetch and deſign which no man underſtands till it open it ſelf in the event.

The enemies of the Church are oft-times men of the fineſt brains, and deepeſt policies: Herod a Fox for ſubtilty, Luke 13. 32. Julian and Ahitophel, with many others, who have digged as deep as Hell in their Counſels, and laid their deſigns ſo ſure, that they doubted not to be maſters of it; yet their hands could not perform their enterprize.

The Wiſdom of Providence hath ſtill befooled them, and baffled the cunningeſt headpieces that ever undertook any deſign againſt the Church, as faſt as ever they aroſe; and here the Wiſdom of Providence is remarkable in three things eſpecially.

1. In revealing and diſcovering the ſecret conſpiracies and counſels of the Churches enemies, and thereby fruſtrating their deſigns, Gen. 27. 41, 42. Providence (as one calls it) is the Bird of the Air that carries tidings, and whiſtles deeds of darkneſs: Job 12. 22. He diſcovereth deep things out of darkneſs, and bringeth out to light the ſhadow of death. And this God hath done both immediately and mediately. 1. Immediately, 2 Kings 6. 11. What counſel ſoever the King of Syria took in his Bedchamber was ſtill diſcovered by the Lord to the Prophet. So true is that Job 44. 22. There is no darkneſs nor ſhadow of death where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves. Thus the Deſign of Herod is revealed to Joſeph in a Dream.

But commonly he doth it by means; as,

1. By giving knowledge of it to ſome that are under obligations of duty or affection to reveal it to thoſe that are concerned in the danger. So Paul's Siſter's Son, Acts 23. 16. revealed the Conſpiracy againſt his life, and ſo the Plot miſcarried by revealing it before it was ripe for execution.

2. By the failure of ſome circumſtance, the whole is brought to light; there be many fine threds upon which the deſigns of Politicians hang; if one break, the whole deſign is unravell'd. Thus the Wiſdom of God ſometimes prevents his peoples ruin, by taking away the ſpeech of the truſty from him, and making their own tongues to fall upon themſelves.

3. By their own confeſſion, ſo Pſal. 64. 5, 6, 7, 8. where you have the Plot laid, ver. 5. They encourage themſelves in an evil matter, they commune of laying ſnares privily, they ſay, who ſhall ſee them? The deep Contrivance of it, ver. 6. They ſearch out iniquity, they accompliſh a diligent ſearch, both the inward thoughts of every one of them, and the heart is deep. Their Plot deſtroy'd, v. 7. But God ſhall ſhoot at them with an arrow, ſuddenly ſhall they be wounded. The method or way of Providence in deſtroying it, v. 8. So they ſhall make their own tongue to fall upon themſelves, all that ſee them ſhall flee away. Thus hath the wiſdom of our God wrought for us this day beyond all the thoughts of our hearts; and oh that it might make ſuch Impreſſions upon all our Hearts, as follow in the 9, and 10 verſes, All men ſhall fear, and ſhall declare the work of God, for they ſhall wiſely conſider his doing. The righteous ſhall be glad in the Lord, and ſhall truſt in him, and all the upright in heart ſhall glory.

2. The wiſdom of God diſcovers it ſelf in behalf of that people who are his own, in diverting the danger from them, and putting by the deadly thruſts their enemies make at them; thus it ſpoils their game by an unforeſeen rub in the green, and that eſpecially three ways.

1. By making their counſels to jar among themſelves, in which jars is the ſweeteſt harmony of providence; thus the counſel of Ahithophel jars with the counſel of Hushai, 2 Sam. 17. 5, 7. by which means David eſcaped: the Phariſees claſhed with the the Sadducees, Acts 23. 7. and by that means Paul escaped.

2. By cutting out other work, and starting some new design which like a fresh scent puts the dogs to a loss. Thus the people of God in Jerusalem were delivered by a diversion, 2 Kings 19. 7. Behold, I will send a blast upon him. and he shall hear a rumour and shall return to his own land, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land, so Rabshakeh returned. By this means also was David delivered from the hand of Saul, 1 Sam. 23. 27. And in this method of Providence, that Scripture is often fulfilled, Prov. 21. 18. The wicked shall be a ransom for the Righteous, and the transgressour for the upright.

3. By cutting off the capital enemies of his Church, by whose seasonable destruction they are delivered. Thus fell Julian, that bitter enemy of the Christians, when he was preparing to put his last and most bloody design against them in Execution. And thus fell Haman, Nero, and many more in the very height and heat of their designs against the Church.

3. The Wisdom of God gloriously displays it self in causing the designs of the wicked, like a surcharged gun to recoil upon and destroy themselves: It often falls out with the undermining enemies of the Church, as it sometimes doth with them that dig deep Mines in the Earth, who are destroyed and buried in their own work; Psal. 9. 15, 16. The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made, in the net which they hid is their own foot taken. The Lord is known by the judgments which he executeth, the wicked is snared in the work of his own hands. Higgajon, Selah. There is a double mercy in this providence, one in delivering the Saints from the danger, the other in causing it to fall upon the contrivers, and is therefore celebrated with a double note of attention: in these observable strokes, the righteousness of God shines forth, in repaying his peoples enemies in their own coin.

——— nec lex est justior ulla,
Quam necis Artifices arte perire sua.

Thus Haman did eat the first-fruits of that tree which his own hands planted, and thus Jerusalem becomes a burthensome stone to all that burthen themselves with it, Zech. 12. 3.

4. Admire and adore the Wisdom of your God in those great and unexpected advantages, which arise to you out of those very dangers and designs of your enemies that threatned your ruine; the very hands of your very enemies are sometimes made the instruments of your advancement and enlargement; your persecutions become your privileges, the Motto of the Palm tree fitly becomes yours, Suppressa Resurgo.

In three things the Wisdom of God makes advantage out of your troubles.

1. In fortifying your Souls and Bodies with suitable strength, when any eminent trial is intended for you: So it was with the Apostles, 2 Cor. 1. 5. As the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation by Christ. God lays in suitably to what men lay on mercilesly: Christ would not draw the poor timorous disciples out of Jerusalem unto hard encounters, until first he had endued them with power from on high, Luke 24. 49.

2. The Wisdom of your God can and often doth make your very troubles and sufferings instead of so many ordinances to strengthen your Faith and fortifie your Patience. So the Heads of Leviathan became meat to his people inhabiting the Wilderness, Psal. 74 14. And so the Plots of Balak and Balaam were designed by God to be as a standing instructing ordinance for the encouragement of his peoples Faith in future difficulties. Micah 6 5 O my people remember now what Balak King of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal that ye may know the righteousness of the Lord. q. d. You cannot but remember how those your enemies courted me with multitudes of Offerings to deliver you up into their hands, and how faithfully I stood by you in all those dangers; that Plot discovered at once the policy of your enemies, and the righteousness of your God.

3. His Wisdom is discovered to your advantage in permitting your dangers to grow to an extremity, on purpose to magnifie his goodness, and increase your comfort in your deliverance from it. Psal. 126. 1. When the Lord turned our captivity we were as them that dreamed. Proportionable to the greatness of your dangers will your joys be.

Sect III. Well then if the Wisdom of God shines forth so gloriously in the times of his peoples trouble; be perswaded by Faith to enter into this Chamber also; it is a Chamber where a believing Soul may enjoy the sweetest rest and quietness in the most hurrying and distracting Times; shut the door behind you, and improve this Attribute to your best Advantage.

1. Enter into this Chamber by Faith, believe firmly that the management of all the Affairs of this world, whether publick or personal, is in the hands of your All wise God; more particularly, exercise your faith about the Wisdom of God in these things.

1. Believe that the Wisdom of God can contrive and order the way of our escape and deliverance, when all doors of hope are shut up to sense and reason; we know not what to do, said good Jehoshaphat, but our eyes are unto thee. q. d Lord though I am at a loss and see no way of escape, thou art never at a loss. The Lord (saith Peter knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of Temptation: Divine wisdom hath infinite methods and ways of deliverance unknown to man, till they are opened in the event.

2. Believe that the Wisdom of God can turn your greatest troubles and fears into the choicest blessings and mercies to you: I know (saith Paul) that this shall turn to my salvation, Phil. 1. 19. meaning his bonds and sufferings for Christ Divine wisdom can give you honey out of the carcase of the Lion, cause you to part with those afflictions, admiring and blessing God for them, which you met with fear and trembling, as suspecting your destruction was imported in them.

3. In consideration of both these, resign up your selves to the wisdom of God, and lean not to your own understandings; Commit thy way unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established, Prov. 16. 3. When Melancthon was oppressed with cares and doubts about the distracting affairs of the Church in his time, Luther thus chides him out of his despondency, Desinet Philippus esse rector mundi, do not thou presume to be the Governour of the world; but leave the reins of Government in his hand that made it, and best knows how to rule it: Let God alone to chuse thy lot and portion, to order thy condition, and manage all thy affairs, and let thy Soul take its Rest in this quiet Chamber of Divine Wisdom. But then,

2. Be sure to shut thy door behind thee, and beware lest unbelief, anxieties, fears and doubts creep unto thee to disturb thy rest, and shake thy faith in this point; we are apt in two cases to be stumbled in this matter.

1. When subtle and cunning Enemies are engaged against us; this was David's case, 2 Sam. 15. 31. One told David, saying, Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom; and David said, O Lord, I pray thee turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness. When he heard Ahithophel was with the Conspirators, it greatly puzzled him. Though a whole Conclave of Politicians be against us, yet if God be with us let us not fear.

2. When our own Reason intrudes too far, and offers its dictates too boldly in the Case, we are apt to say in the arrogancy of our own Reason, we cannot be delivered; but oh that we would learn to resign it up to the Wisdom of God. The Lord knows how to deliver the godly. When the question was asked the Prophet, Ezek. 37. 3. Can these dry bones live? He answers, Lord thou knowest. That's excellent counsel, Prov. 3. 5. Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not to thine own understanding.

3. Improve the Wisdom of God for your selves in all difficult and distressful cases.

1. Beg of God to exercise his Wisdom for you when Enemies conspire against you: So did David, 2 Sam 15. 31. Lord, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness! O 'tis the noblest and surest way to vanquish an Enemy: it was but asked and done.

2. Comfort your selves with this when ever you are at a loss in your own thoughts, and know not what to do, then commit all to divine Conduct; let God steer for you in a Storm; he loves to be trusted, Psal. 37. 5. Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass.

3. Encourage your selves from this when the Church is in the greatest danger, and most sorely shaken; O that is a blessed promise, Zech. 3. 9. Upon one stone shall be seven eyes. Meaning Christ, and the Church built on him as the chief corner Stone; the seven Eyes are the seven Eyes of Providence, which are never all asleep.

CHAP. VIII.

Opening that glorious Attribute of divine Faithfulness as a third Chamber of Security to the People of God in times of Distress and Danger.

Sect. I. HAving viewed the Saints Refuge in the Power and Wisdom of God, we next proceed to a third Chamber of Safety for the Saints refuge, viz. The faithfulness of God.

In this Attribute is our safety and rest amidst the confusions of the World and daily Disappointments we are vexed withal through the vanity and falseness of the Creature: As to Creatures, the very best of them are but vanity, yea, vanity of vanity, the vaineſt vanity, Eccles. 1. 2. Every Man in his best estate is altogether vanity, Psal. 39. 5. Yea, those that we expect most from, give us most of trouble, Micah 7. 5. Neerest Relations bring up the rear of sorrows, Job 6. 15. My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook. Especially their deceit appears most when we have most need of their help, Psal. 142. 4. How great a mercy is it then to have a refuge in the faithfulness of God, as David had; I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me, refuge failed me, no man cared for my soul. And likewise the Church, Micah 7. 7. I will look unto the Lord, I will wait for the God of my salvation, my God will hear me. A time may come when you shall not know where to trust in all this World: Let me therefore open to you this Chamber of rest in the faithfulness of God, against such a day, and this I shall do in a twofold Consideration of it, viz.

1. Absolutely in its own Nature.
2. Relatively in the Promises and Providences of God.

1. Absolutely, and so the faithfulness of God is his sincerity, firmness, and constancy in performing his word to his People in all times and cases. So Moses describes him to Israel, Deut. 7. 9. Know therefore that the Lord thy God he is God, the faithful God. And Joshua appeals to their experience for the vindication of it, Josh. 23. 14. Ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good which the Lord your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass, and not one thing hath failed thereof. And it is also fully asserted, Jer. 31. 35, 36, 37. and greatly admired even in the darkest day, Lam. 3. 23. Great is thy faithfulness. And it is well for us that his faithfulness is great, for great is that weight that leans upon it, even all our hopes for both worlds, for this world, and for that to come, Tit. 1. 2. In hope of eternal life which God that cannot lye promised before the world began.

It was a very dishonourable character that Suidas gave of Tiberius, Eorum quæ appetebat ne quicquam præ se ferebat, & eorum quæ dicebat, ne quicquam facere volebat, i. e. He never made shew of having what he desired to have, nor ever minded to do what he promised to do: But God is faithful, and that will appear by these following Evidences of it.

1. Evid. By his exact fulfilling of his Promises of the longest date. So Acts 7. 6. four hundred and thirty Years were run out before the Promise of Israel's deliverance out of Egypt was accomplished, yet Acts 7. 17. when the time of the Promise was come, God was punctual to a day: Seventy Years in Babylon, and at the expiration of that time they returned, 2 Chron. 36. 21. Men may forget, but God cannot, Isa. 49. 15, 16.

2 Evid. By making way for his Promises through the greatest difficulties, and seeming impossibilities. So to Abraham when old, Gen. 18. 13, 14. Is there any thing too hard for the Lord? At the appointed time will I return unto thee, according to the time of life; and Sarah shall have a Son. And likewise to the Israelites, Can these dry bones live? Ezek. 37. 3. Difficulties are for Men, not God, Gen. 18. 14. What art thou O great Mountain, Zec. 8. 6. If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the Lord of hosts.

3. Evid. By fulfilling promises to his people, when their hopes and expectations have been given up. So Ezek. 37. 11. Our Bones are dry, our Hopes lost, we are cut off for our part. And Isa. 49. 14. Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. There may be much unbelief in good Men, their faith may be sorely staggered, yet God is faithful, Men may question his promises, yet God cannot deny himself, 2 Tim. 2. 13.

4. Evid. By God's appealing to his People, and referring the matter to their own judgment, Micah 6. 3, 4, 5. O my People, what have I done unto thee, and wherein have I wearied thee? Testifie against me, for I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants, and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. O my people, remember now what Balak King of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the Son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal, that ye may know the righteousness of the Lord. q. d. If I have failed in a Punctilio of my promiſe, ſhew it; did not Balak and Balaam court me, and try all ways to win me over to them by multitudes of Sacrifices, yet I did not deſert you. So Jer. 2. 31. O generation, ſee ye the word of the Lord, have I been a wilderneſs unto Iſrael, a land of darkneſs? wherefore ſay my people, we are Lords, we will come no more unto thee? Iſa. 44. 8.

Lord

5. Evid. The faithfulneſs of God is abundantly cleared by the conſtant Teſtimonies given unto it in all Ages by them that have tryed it, they have all witneſſed for God, and atteſted his unſpotted faithfulneſs to the generations that were to come. So did Joſhua 23. 14. All is come to paſs; and ſo did Daniel, Chap. 9. 4. O Lord the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him: With which David's Teſtimony concurs, Pſal. 146. 6. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whoſe hope is in the Lord his God, which made the heaven and earth, the ſea and all that therein is, which keepeth truth for ever. Thus his People have been witneſſes in all generations, unto the faithfulneſs of God in his promiſes; the conſideration whereof leaves no doubt or objection behind it.

Sect. II. And if we enquire into the grounds and reaſons why God is, and ever muſt be moſt faithful in performing his Promiſes, we ſhall find it is built upon ſtable and unſhaken Pillars: viz.

1. The Holineſs of his Nature.
2. The All-ſufficiency of his Power.
3. The Honour of his Name.
4. The Unchangeableneſs of his Nature.

1. The Faithfulneſs of God is built upon the perfect Holineſs of his Nature, by reaſon whereof it is impoſſible for God to lye, Tit. 1. 2. Heb. 6. 18. The deceitfulneſs of man flows from the corruption of the Humane Nature, but God is not as man that he ſhould lye, neither as the ſon of man that he ſhould repent; hath he ſaid, and ſhall he not do it? Or hath he ſpoken, and ſhall he not make it good? Numb. 23. 19. If there be no defect in his Being, there can be none in his working; if his Nature be pure Holineſs, all his ways muſt be perfect Faithfulneſs.

2. It is built upon the All-ſufficiency of his Power whatſoever he hath promiſed to his People, he is able to perform it; Men ſometimes falſifie their promiſes through the defects of ability to perform them: but God never out-promiſed himſelf; if he will work none can lett, Iſa. 43. 13. He can do whatſoever he pleaſeth to do, Pſal. 135. 6. The Holineſs of his Nature engageth, and the Almightineſs of his Power enables him to be faithful.

3. The glory and honour of his Name may aſſure us of his faithfulneſs in making good the Promiſes, and all that good which is in the promiſes to a tittle; for wherever you find a promiſe of God, you alſo find the Name and Honour of God given as a ſecurity for the performance of it; and ſo his Name hath ever been pleaded with him by his People, as a mighty Argument to work for them, Joſhua 7. 9. What wilt thou do to thy great name? q. d. Lord thine Honour is a thouſand times more than our lives, it is no ſuch great matter what becomes of us; but ah, Lord, it is of infinite concernment that the glory of thy Name be ſecured, and thy faithfulneſs kept pure and unſpotted in the world. So again, Exod. 32. 11, 12. And Moſes beſought the Lord his God, and ſaid, Lord, why doth thy wrath wax hot againſt the people, which thou haſt brought out of the land of Egypt, with great power, and with a mighty hand? Wherefore ſhould the Egyptians ſpeak and ſay, for miſchief did he bring them out to ſlay them in the mountains, and to conſume them from the face of the earth? turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil againſt thy people. q. d. It will be ſad enough for the hands of the Egyptians to fall upon thy people, but infinitely worſe for the Tongues of the Egyptians to fall upon thy Name.

4. The unchangeableneſs of his Nature gives us the fulleſt aſſurance of his faithfulneſs in the Promiſes, Mal. 3. 6. I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. God's unchangeableneſs is his Peoples indempnity, and beſt ſecurity in the midſt of dangers; whilſt there is not yea and nay with God, there ſhould be no ups and downs, offs and ons in our Faith; that which gives ſteadineſs to the Promiſes, ſhould give ſteadineſs alſo to our expectations for the performance of them; and ſo much briefly of the faithfulneſs of God abſolutely conſidered in the nature and grounds of it.

2. Next let us view the Faithfulneſs of God, as it relates to the many great and precious Promiſes made unto his people for their ſecurity both in their

1. Temporal
2. Spiritual

} Concernments.

1. We find the Faithfulneſs of God pawned and pledged for the ſecurity of his people in their Spiritual and eternal concernments, againſt all their dangers and fears, threatning them on that account, and that more eſpecially in theſe three reſpects.

1. It is given them as their great and beſt ſecurity for the Pardon of their ſins, 1 John 1. 9. If we confeſs our ſins he is faithful and juſt to forgive us our ſins, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſs. Our greateſt danger comes from ſin; Guilt is a fountain of fears, a pardoned Soul only can look other troubles in the face boldly: As Guilt breeds fear, ſo Pardon breeds Courage, and God's Faithfulneſs in the Covenant is as it were that Pardon-Office from whence we fetch our diſcharges and acquittances, Iſa. 43. 25. I, even I am he, that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake. The promiſes of remiſſion are made for Chriſt's ſake, and when made, they muſt be fulfilled for his own, that is his faithfulneſs ſake.

2. It is engaged for the perſeverance of the Saints and their continuance in the ways of God in the moſt hazardous and difficult times; this was the encouragement given them, 1 Cor 1. 8, 9. Who ſhall alſo confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; God is faithful by whom ye were called unto the fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Ah Lord! might thoſe Corinthians ſay, the powers of the World are againſt us, ſuffering and Death before us, a treacherous and fearful Heart within us. Ay, but yet fear not, Chriſt ſhall confirm you, whoſoever oppoſes you; though the World and your own Hearts be deceitful, yet comfort your ſelves with this, your God is faithful.

3. The faithfulneſs of God is given by Promiſe for his Peoples ſecurity in, and encouragement againſt all their ſufferings and afflictions in this world, 2 Theſ. 3. 2, 3, That we may be delivered from unreaſonable and wicked men, for all men have not faith; but the Lord is faithful, who ſhall ſtabliſh you, and keep you from evil. He prays they may be delivered from abſurd, treacherous and unfaithful men, who would trapan and betray them to ruine; but this is propoſed as their Relief that when the treachery of men ſhall bring them into troubles, the Faithfulneſs of God ſhall ſupport them under, and deliver them out of thoſe troubles; they ſhall have ſpiritual Supports from God, under their deepeſt ſufferings from men, 1 Pet. 4. 19.

2. God's

2. God's Faithfulneſs is engaged for his peoples indempnity and ſecurity amidſt the Temporal and outward evils whereunto they are liable in this world; and that either to preſerve them from troubles, Pſal. 91. 1, 2, 3, 4. or to open a ſeaſonable door of deliverance out of trouble, 1 Cor. 10 13. In both or either of which the hearts of Chriſtians may be at reſt in this troubleſome world; for what need thoſe troubles fright us, which either ſhall never touch us, or if they do, ſhall never hurt, much leſs ruin us.

Sect. III. Having taken a ſhort view of God's Faithfulneſs in the Promiſes, it will be a lovely ſight to take one view of it more as it is actuated, and exerted in his Providences over his people; believe it, Chriſtians, the Faithfulneſs of God runs through all his works of Providence, whenever he goes forth to work in the World, Faithfulneſs is the girdle of his loins, Iſa. 11. 5. It is an alluſion to workmen who going forth in the morning to their labour, gird their loins or reins with a girdle, now there is no work wrought by God in this world, but his faithfulneſs is as the girdle of his loins. The conſideration whereof ſhould make the moſt deſpondent believer, gird up the Loins of his mind, that is, encourage and ſtrengthen his drooping and diſcouraged heart. Thoſe works of God which are wrought in Faithfulneſs and in purſuit of his eternal purpoſes and gracious promiſes, ſhould rather delight, than affright us, in beholding of them. It pluckt out the Sting of David's affliction when he conſidered it was in very faithfulneſs, that God had afflicted him, Pſal. 119. 89, 90 But more particularly, let us behold with delight the faithfulneſs of God, making good ſix ſorts of Promiſes to his People, in the days of their affliction and trouble, viz.

1. The Promiſes of Preſervation.
2. The Promiſes of Support.
3. The Promiſes of Direction.
4. The Promiſes of Proviſion.
5. The Promiſes of Deliverance.
6. The Promiſes of Ordering and Directing the Event to their Advantage.

1. There are Promiſes in the Word for your preſervation from ruine, and what you read in thoſe promiſes you daily ſee the ſame fulfilled in your own experiences. You have a promiſe in Pſal. 57. 3. He ſhall ſend from Heaven, and ſave me from the reproach of him that would ſwallow me up. Selah. God ſhall ſend forth his mercy and his truth. Say now, have you not found it ſo, when Hell hath ſent forth its Temptations to defile you? The World its perſecutions to deſtroy your own heart, its unbelieving fears to deſtract and ſink you, hath not your God ſent forth alſo his mercy and his truth to ſave you? Hath not his truth been your ſhield and buckler? Pſal. 91. 4. May you not ſay with the Church it is of his mercy you are not conſumed, his mercies are new every morning, and great is his faithfulneſs, Lam. 3. 23.

2. As you have ſeen it actually fulfilling the promiſes for your preſervation, ſo you may ſee it making good all the promiſes in his word for your ſupport in troubles. That is a ſweet promiſe, Pſal. 91. 15. I will be with him in trouble: I will deliver him. You have alſo a very ſupporting promiſe in Iſa. 41. 10. Fear not thou, for I am with thee: be not diſmayed for I am thy God: I will ſtrengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteouſneſs. Oh! how evidently hath the faithfulneſs of God ſhone forth in the performance of his word to you in this reſpect! you are his witneſſes, you would have ſunk in the deep waters of trouble if it had not been ſo. So ſpeaks David, Pſal. 73. 26. My heart and my fleſh faileth, but God is the Strength of my heart; and my portion for ever. Have you not found it ſo with you as it is in 2 Cor. 12. 10. Therefore I take pleaſure in infirmities, in reproaches, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in diſtreſſes for Chriſt's ſake: for when I am weak, then am I ſtrong. God's ſtrength hath been made perfect in your weakneſs, by this you have been carried through all your troubles; hitherto hath he helped you.

3. As you have ſeen it faithfully fulfilling the promiſes for your preſervation, and ſupport; So you have ſeen it in the direction of your ways. So runs that promiſe, Pſal. 32. 8. I will inſtruct thee and teach thee in the way that thou ſhalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye. Certain it is, That the way of man is not in himſelf, Jer. 10. 23. O how faithfully hath your God guided you, and ſtood by you in all the difficult caſes of your Life! Is not that promiſe, Heb. 13. 5. faithfully fulfilled to a tittle, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee? Surely you can ſet your Seal to that in John 17. 17. Thy word is Truth; had you been left to your own counſels you had certainly periſhed; as it is ſaid of them in Pſal. 81. 12. I gave them up unto their own hearts luſts: and they walked in their own counſels.

4. As there are promiſes in the word for your preſervation, ſupport, and direction; So in the fourth place there are promiſes for your proviſions, as in Pſal. 34. 9. the Lord hath promiſed that They that fear him ſhall not want. When they are driven to extremity, he will provide, Iſa. 41. 17. When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them. And is not this faithfully performed? He hath given meat unto them that fear him: he will ever be mindful of his Covenant, Pſal. 111. 5. In all the Exigences of your lives, you have found him faithful to this day; you are his witneſſes that his Providences never failed you, his care hath been renewed every morning for you; how great is his faithfulneſs?

5. You alſo find in the word ſome reviving promiſes for your deliverances. You have a very ſweet promiſe in Pſal. 91. 14. Becauſe he hath ſet his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: and again, Pſal. 50. 15. Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee; you have done ſo, and he hath made a way to eſcape. Our lives are ſo many monuments of mercy; we have lived among lions, yet preſerved, Pſal. 57. 4. The burning Buſh was an embleme of the Church miraculouſly preſerved.

6. There are promiſes in the word for the ordering and directing all the occurrences of providence to your great advantages; ſo it is promiſed, Rom. 8. 28. That all things ſhall work together for good, to them that love God. Fear not, Chriſtians, however you find it now, whilſt you are toſſing to and fro upon the unſtable waves of this world; you ſhall find to be ſure when you come to heaven, that all the troubles of your lives were guided as ſteddily by this promiſe, as ever any Ship at Sea was directed to its Port, by the Compaſs or North-Star.

And now what remains, but that I preſs you as before,

1. To enter into this Chamber of Divine Faithfulneſs.

2. To ſhut the door behind you,

3. And then to live comfortably on it in evil days.

1. Enter into this Chamber of God's Faithfulneſs by Faith, and hide your ſelves there. Every man is a lye, but God is true, eternally and unchangeably faithful. Oh! exercise your Faith upon it, be at rest in it.

Now there are two great and weighty Arguments to press you to enter into this Chamber of Divine Faithfulness.

1 Arg. Is fetch'd from the Nature of God, who cannot lye, Tit. 1. 2. He is not as man, that he should lye, Numb. 23. 19. Neither the Son of man that he should repent: hath he said and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good? Remember upon what everlasting steddy grounds the faithfulness of God is built. These are immutable things, Heb. 6. 18. This Abraham built upon, Rom. 4. 21. being fully persuaded, that what he had promised, he was able also to perform. He accounted him faithful that promised. What would you expect or require in the person that you are to trust? You would,

1. Expect a clear promise; and lo! you have a thousand all the Scripture over, fitted to all the cases of your Souls and Bodies. This you may plead with God, as David, Psal. 119. 49. Remember the word unto thy Servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope. So Jacob pleaded, Gen. 32. 12. Thou saidst, I will surely do thee good. These are God's Bonds and Obligations.

2. You would expect sufficient power to make good what he promiseth. This is in God as a fair foundation of Faith, Isa. 26. 4. Trust ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength; Because of thy strength we will wait on thee: Creatures cannot, but God can do what he will.

3. You would expect infinite goodness and mercy inclining him to help and save you. Why, so it is here, Psal. 130. 7. Let Israel hope in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption. So Moses, Exod. 33. 18. I beseech thee show me thy glory. The request was, a view of God's glory: the answer is, My goodness shall pass before thee; which hints to us, that tho' all God's Attributes be glorious, yet that he most glories in is his Goodness. And then,

4. You would expect that none of his Promises were ever blotted or stained by his unfaithfulness at any time; and so it is here, Josh. 23. 14. Not one thing hath failed; all are come to pass, all ages have seal'd this conclusion, Thy word is truth, thy word is truth.

2. Arg. Besides all this, you have the encouragement of all former experiences, both others, and your own, as a second Argument to press you to enter into this Chamber of Safety, the faithfulness of God,

1. You have the experiences of others. Saints have reckon'd the experiences of others that lived a thousand years before them, as excellent Arguments to quicken their Faith: So Hos. 12. 4. he had power over the Angel, and prevailed; he found him in Bethel, and there he spake, Remember there was a Joseph with us in Prison, a Jeremy in the Dungeon, a Daniel in the Den, a Peter in Chains, an Hezekiah upon the brink of the grave; and they all found the help of God most faithfully protecting them and saving them in all their troubles. Suitable to this is that in Psal. 22. 4, 5. Our fathers trusted in thee; they trusted, and thou deliveredst them; they cryed unto thee, and were delivered; they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.

2. Your own experiences may encourage your Faith: So David's did, 1 Sam. 17. 37. The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the Lion, and out of the paw of the Bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. So did Paul's experience encourage his Faith, in 2 Cor. 1. 10. Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us. Thus enter into the Faithfulness of God by Faith.

2. Let me beg you to be sure to shut the doors behind you, against all unbelieving doubts, jealousies, and suspicions of the Faithfulness of God; the best men may find temptations of that nature; so did good Asaph, tho' an eminent Saint, Psal. 77. 78. Will the Lord cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more? Is his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promise fail for evermore? These jealousies are apt to creep in upon the minds of men, especially when,

1. God delays to answer our Prayers as soon as we expect the return of them; we are all in haste for a speedy answer, forgetting that seasons of Prayer are our seed-times; and when we have sown that precious seed, we must wait for the Harvest, as the Husbandman doth. Even a precious Heman may find a faint qualm of unbelief and despondency seizing him by the long suspension of God's answers, Psal. 88. 9, 10, 11.

2. 'Twill be hard to shut the door upon unbelief, when all things in the eye of our sense and reason seem to work against the Promise. It will require an Abraham's Faith at such a time to glorifie God by believing in hope against hope, Rom. 4. 18. If ever thou hop'st to enjoy the sweet repose and rest of a Christian in evil times, thou must resolve, whatever thine eyes do see, or thy senses report, to hold fast this as a most sure conclusion; God is faithful, and his word is sure; and that altho' clouds and darkness be round about him, yet righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne, Psal. 97. 2.

Oh that you would once learn to keep house upon God's Faithfulness, and fetch your daily reliefs and supports thence, whensoever you are pressed and assaulted, either,

1. By spiritual troubles. When you walk in darkness, and have no light, then you are to live by acts of trust and recumbency upon the most faithful one, Isa. 50. 10. Or,

2. By temporal distresses; so did the people of God of old, Hab. 3. 17, 18. He lived by faith on this Attribute, when all visible comforts and supplies were out of sight.

But especially let me warn and caution you against five principal enemies to your repose upon the Faithfulness of God, viz.

1. Distracting cares, which divide the mind, and eat out the peace and comfort of the heart, and which is worst of all, they reflect very dishonourably upon God, who hath pledged his Faithfulness and Truth for our security; against which I pray you bar the door of those two Scriptures, Phil. 4. 6. Be careful for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. And that in 1 Pet. 5. 7. Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you.

2. Bar the door against unchristian despondency, another enemy to the sweet repose of your Souls in this comfortable and quiet chamber of divine faithfulness; you will find this unbecoming and uncomfortable distemper of mind insinuating and creeping in upon you, except you believe and reason it out, as David did, Psal. 42. 11. Why art thou cast down, O my Soul, and why disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him!

3. Bar the door of your heart against carnal policies and sinful shifts, which war against your own Faith, and God's Faithfulness, as much as any other enemy whatſoever. This was the Fault of good David in a day of trouble, 1 Sam. 27. 1. And David ſaid to his heart, I ſhall now periſh one day by the hand of Saul; there is nothing better for me than that I ſhould ſpeedily eſcape into the land of the Philiſtines. Alas, poor David! nothing better than this? Time was when thou couldſt think on a better way, when thou couldſt ſay at what time I am afraid I will truſt in thee. How doſt thou forget thy ſelf in this ſtrait! doth thy old refuge in God fail thee now, can the Philiſtines ſecure thee better than the Promiſes? wilt thou fly from thy beſt friend to thy worſt enemies? But what need we wonder at David, who find the ſame diſtemper almoſt unavoidable to our ſelves in like caſes?

4. Shut the door againſt diſcontents at, and murmurings againſt the diſpoſitions of Providence, whatever you feel or fear: I perſuade you not to a Stoical Apathy, and ſenſeleſneſs of the evils of the times, that would preclude the exerciſe of patience. If the Martyrs had all had the dead Palſie before they came to the fire, their Faith and Patience had not triumphed ſo glorioufly as they did; but on the contrary, beware of grudgings againſt the ways and will of God, than which nothing militates more againſt your Faith and the Peace and Quietneſs of your Hearts.

5. To conclude, ſhut the door againſt all ſuſpicions and jealouſies of the firmneſs and ſtability of the Promiſes when you find all ſenſible comforts ſhaking and trembling under your feet; have a care of ſuch dangerous queſtions as that, Pſal. 77. 8. Doth his promiſe fail? Theſe are the things which undermine the foundation both of your faith and comfort.

3. In a word, having ſhelter'd your Souls in this Chamber of reſt, and thus ſhut the doors behind you, all that you have to do is to take your reſt in God, and enjoy the pleaſure of a reſigned ſoul into the hands of a faithful Creator, by oppoſing the Faithfulneſs of God to all the fickleneſs and unfaithfulneſs you will daily find in men, Micah 7. 6, 7. yea, to the weakneſs and fading of your own natural ſtrength and ability, Pſal. 73. 26. My fleſh and my heart faileth, but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. And ſo much of the Third Chamber prepared for Believers in the Name of their God.

CHAP. IX.

Opening to Believers the Unchangeableneſs of God, as a fourth Chamber of Refuge and Reſt in Times of Trouble.

Sect. I. IT is ſaid, Prov. 9. 1. Wiſdom hath builded her houſe, ſhe hath hewen out her ſeven pillars, (i. e.) She hath raiſed her whole building upon ſolid and ſtable foundations; for indeed the ſtrength of every building is according to the ground-work upon which it is erected. Debile fundamentum fallit opus; The Wiſdom and Love of God have built an Houſe for a Refuge and Sanctuary to Believers in tempeſtuous and evil times, containing many pleaſant and comfortable Chambers prepared for their lodgings, till the calamities be over-paſt; three of them have been already opened, viz. The Power, Wiſdom, and Faithfulneſs of God.

The laſt of which leads into a fourth much like unto it, namely, the unchangeableneſs of God; wherein his people may find as much reſt and comfort amidſt the viciſſitudes of this unſtable World, as in any of the former. This World is compared, Rev. 15. 2. to a Sea of glaſs mingled with fire. A Sea for its turbulency and inſtability; a Sea of glaſs for the brittleneſs and frailty of every thing in it; and a Sea of glaſs mingled with fire, to repreſent the ſharp ſufferings and fiery trials, with which the Saints are exerciſed here below. The only ſupport and comfort we have againſt the fickleneſs and inſtability of the Creature, is the Unchangeableneſs of God. There is a twofold Changeableneſs in the Creature:

1. Natural, the effect of Sin.
2. Sinful in its own Nature.

1. Natural, let in by the Fall upon all the Creation; by reaſon whereof the ſweeteſt Creature is but a fading flower, Pſal. 102. 26. Time, like a Moth, frets out the beſt wrought garment with which we cloath and deck our ſelves in this World, temporalia rapit tempus. Our moſt pleaſant Enjoyments, Wives, Children, Eſtates, like the Gourd in which Jonas ſo delighted himſelf, may wither in a night; Sin rings theſe changes all the World over.

2. Sinful, from the falſeneſs, inconſtancy, deceitfulneſs of the creature; Solomon puts a hard queſtion which may poſe the whole World to anſwer it, Prov. 20. 6. A faithful Man who can find? The meaning is, a man of perfect and univerſal Faithfulneſs is a Phœnix, ſeldom or never to be found in this world; for when a queſtion in Scripture is moved and let fall again without any anſwer, then the ſenſe is Negative; but tho' the believer deſpair of finding an unchangeable man, it is his happineſs and comfort to find an unchangeable God.

The unchangeableneſs of God will appear three ways.

1. By Scripture Emblems.
2. By Scripture Aſſertions.
3. By convincing Arguments

1. By Scripture Emblems: Remarkable to this purpoſe is that place, Jam. 1. 17. where God is called the Father of lights, with whom is no variableneſs, neither ſhadow of turning; no variableneſs. The word is, παραλλαγὴ, an Aſtronomical Term, commonly applied to the heavenly Bodies, which have their Parallaxes, i. e. their Declinations, Revolutions, Viciſſitudes, Eclipſes, Increaſes and Decreaſes: but God is a Sun that never riſes nor ſets, but is everlaſtingly and unchangeably one and the ſame; with him is no variableneſs nor ſhadow of turning, τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα. The Sun in its Zenith caſts no ſhadow, it is the Tropick, or turning of its courſe, that cauſes the ſhadow; the very ſubſtance of turning is with Man; but not the leaſt ſhadow of turning with God. And in Deut. 32. 4. Moſes tells us, God is a rock, and his work is perfect. And indeed perfect working neceſſarily follows a perfect Being. Now there is nothing found in Nature more ſolid, fixed, and immutable, than a rock; the firmeſt buildings will decay; a few ages will make them a ruinous heap; but tho' one age paſs away, and another comes, the rocks abide where and what they were; Our God is the rock of ages; and yet one ſtep higher, in Zech. 6. 1. his decrees and purpoſes are called mountains of Braſs, that is, moſt firm, durable, and unchangeable purpoſes. Thus the immutability of God is ſhadowed forth to us in Scripture Emblems.

2. The ſame alſo you will find in plain, poſitive Scripture-Aſſertions; ſuch as theſe that follow, Mal. 3. 6. I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. And Job 23. 13. He is in one mind, and who can turn him? Men are in one mind to day, and another to morrow; the winds are not more variable than the minds of Men; but God is in one mind, the purpoſes of his heart never change. Thou art the ſame, or, as ſome tranſlate, Thou art thy ſelf for ever, Pſal. 102. 27. Thus when Moſes deſired to know his name, that he might tell Pharoah Pharoah from whom he came; the Anſwer is, I am hath ſent me, Exod. 3. 14. not I was, or I will be, but I am that I am, noting the abſolute Unchangeableneſs of his Nature.

3. The Unchangeableneſs of God is fully proved by convincing arguments which Divines commonly draw from ſuch Topics as theſe, viz.

1. The Perfection of his Goodneſs.
2. The Purity of his Nature.
3. The Glory of his Name.

1. Arg. From the Perfection of his Goodneſs and Bleſſedneſs, God is Optimus, maximus, the beſt and chiefeſt good, and in that ſenſe, There is none good but one, which is God, Mark 10. 18. From whence it is thus argued, If there be any change in God, that change muſt either be for the better, or for the worſe, or into a State equal with that he poſſeſſed before.

But not for the better, for then he could not be the chief good; nor for the worſe, for then he muſt ceaſe to be God, the perfection of whoſe Nature is perfectly excluſive of all defects; nor into an equal ſtate of goodneſs with that he poſſeſſed before; that notion would involve Polytheiſm, and ſuppoſe two firſt and equal Beings, beſides the vanity of ſuch a change would be abſolutely repugnant to the Wiſdom of God.

Therefore with the Father of lights can be no variableneſs nor ſhadow of turning.

2. Arg. The Unchangeableneſs of God may be evinced from the Purity, Sincerity, and Uncompoundedneſs of his Being, in which there neither is, nor can be the leaſt mixture, he being a pure act. From whence it is thus argued;

If there be any change in God, that change muſt be made either by ſomething without himſelf; or by ſomething within himſelf, or by both together.

But it cannot be by any thing without himſelf; for in him all created dependent Beings live and move, and enjoy the Beings they have; and all the changes that are among them, are from the pleaſure of this unchangeable Being, he changeth them, but it is not poſſible for him, upon whoſe pleaſure they ſo intirely and abſolutely depend, both as to their Beings, and workings, to ſuffer any change himſelf from, or by them.

Nor can any ſuch change be made upon God by any thing within himſelf; for that would ſuppoſe action and paſſion, movens & motum, a mixture and compoſition in his Nature, which is abſolutely rejected and excluded by the ſimplicity and purity thereof; ſeeing therefore it can neither be from any power without him, nor any mixture within him, there can be no change at all made on him.

3. Arg. That is by no means to be aſcribed to God, which at once eclipſes the glory of his name, and overthrows the hopes and comforts of all his people.

But ſo would the ſuppoſition of mutability in God do, this would level him with the vain changeable creature; whereas it is a principal part of his glory, that He is not as man that he ſhould lye, neither the Son of man that he ſhould repent, Numb. 23. 19. This alſo would overthrow the hopes and comforts of all his people, which are built upon this Attribute as upon their ſtable and ſolid foundation: Among divers other we find three principal privileges of the people of God, built upon his Immutability, viz.

1. Their Perſeverance in Grace.
2. Their Comfort in the Promiſes.
3. Their Hopes of Eternal Life.

1. Their Perſeverance in Grace is built upon the foundation of God's unchangeableneſs; one main reaſon why Chriſtians never repent of their choice of Chriſt and the ways of Godlineſs, is becauſe the gifts and calling of God are without Repentance, Rom. 11. 29. Should God but once repent of the gifts of grace he hath beſtowed on us, and alter in his love towards us, how ſoon would our love to God, and delight in God vaniſh, as the image in the glaſs doth when the man that looked upon it hath once turned away his Face?

2. All their comfort in the Promiſes is built upon God's unchangeableneſs. The promiſes are the ſprings of conſolation; ſhould they fail and dry up, the whole world could not afford them one drop of Spiritual comfort to refreſh their thirſty Souls; the ſtrength of our conſolation immediately reſults from the ſtability and firmneſs of the Scripture promiſes, Heb. 6. 18.

3. Their hope of eternal life depends upon the unchangeableneſs of God that hath promiſed, Tit. 1. 2. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lye, promiſed before the world began. Take away then the Immutability of God, and you at once darken and eclipſe his Glory, and overturn the perſeverance, conſolations, and hopes of all his people; but bleſſed be God theſe things are built upon firm foundations.

1. His Nature is unchangeable, Thou art the ſame for ever, Pſ. 102. 27. The Heavens tho' they be the pureſt, and therefore the moſt durable and unchangeable part of the creation; yet they ſhall periſh and wax old, and be changed as a veſture, but our God is the ſame for ever.

2. His Power is unchangeable, Iſa. 59. 1. The Lord's hand is not ſhortened. Time will enfeeble the ſtrongeſt creature, and cut ſhort the Power of the hands of the mighty, they cannot do in their decrepit age as they were wont to do in their youthful and vigorous age; but the Lords hand never is, nor can be ſhortened.

3. The counſels and purpoſes of his heart are unchangeable, Pſ. 33. 11. The counſel of the Lord ſtandeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations.

4. The goodneſs, truth, and mercy of God are Unchangeable, Pſal. 100. 5. The Lord is good, his mercy is everlaſting, and his truth endureth to all generations.

5. The word of God is Unchangeable. Though all fleſh be as graſs, and the goodlineſs thereof as the flower of the field, yet the word of our God ſhall ſtand for ever; all the Promiſes contained therein are ſure and ſtedfaſt: Not yea and nay, but yea and Amen for ever, 2 Cor. 1. 20.

6. The love of God is an unchangeable love, Jer. 31. 3. Yea, I have loved thee with an everlaſting love.

7. In a word, all the gracious Pardons of God are unchangeable; as they are full without exceptions, ſo they are final Pardons without any revocation. I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, and their iniquities and ſins will I remember no more, Heb. 8. 12. And thus much briefly of God's unchangeableneſs abſolutely conſidered in it ſelf.

Sect. II. Let us next conſider, and believingly view the Unchangeableneſs of God in its reſpect and relation,

1. To his Promiſes.
2. To his Providences.

1. The Immutability of God gives down its comforts to Believers through the Promiſes, there is no other way by which they can have a comfortable admiſſion into this Chamber or Attribute of God; and there are ſix ſorts of promiſes in the word, by which it is highly improveable to their ſupport and comfort in an evil day. For,

1. The unchangeable God hath engaged himſelf by promiſe to be with his people in all times and in all ſtreights, Heb. 13. 5. I will never leave thee nor forſake thee. The life, joy, and comfort of a Believer lies in the boſom of that Promiſe, the concluſion of Faith from thence is ſweet and ſure: If I ſhall never be forſaken of my God, let Hell and Earth do their worſt, I can never be miſerable.

2. The unchangeable God hath promiſed to maintain their graces, and thereby his intereſt in them for ever, Jer. 32. 40. And I will make an everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good: But I will put my fear in their Hearts, that they ſhall not turn away from me. Where the Lord undertakes for both parts in the Covenant, his own and theirs: I will not depart from them; Oh unexpreſſible mercy! Yea, but Lord, may the poor believer ſay, that is not ſo much my fear, as that my treacherous heart will turn away from thee. No, ſaith God, I will take care for that alſo; I will put my Fear into thy Heart, and thou ſhalt never depart from me.

3. The unchangeable God hath promiſed to eſtabliſh the Covenant with them for ever; ſo that thoſe who are once taken into that gracious Covenant ſhall never be turned out of it again, Iſa. 54. 10. The Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my peace be removed, ſaith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.

4. The unchangeable God hath ſecured his loving kindneſs to his people by promiſe under all the trials, and ſmarting rods of affliction with which he chaſtens them in this World: he hath reſerved to himſelf the liberty of afflicting them, but bound himſelf by promiſe never to remove his favour from them, Pſal. 89. 33, 34. I will viſit their tranſgreſſion with the rod, and their iniquity with ſtripes, nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs will I not take from them, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs to fail.

5. The promiſes of a joyful Reſurrection from the dead are grounded upon the immutability of God, Matth. 22. 32. I am the God of Abraham, the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob; God is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living. Death hath made a great change upon them, but none upon their God; though they be not, He is ſtill the ſame: therefore they are not loſt in death, but ſhall aſſuredly be found again in the reſurrection.

6. To conclude, the promiſes of the Saints eternal happineſs with God in Heaven are founded in his immutability, 1 Cor. 1. 8, 9. Tit. 1. 2. By all which you ſee what a pleaſant lodging is prepared for the Saints in the unchangeable promiſes of God, amidſt all the changes and alterations here below.

2. Once more, let us view the unchangeableneſs of God in his Providences towards his people, whatever changes it makes upon us, or whatever changes we ſeem to diſcern in it, nothing is more certain than this, that it holds one and the ſame tenor, purſues one and the ſame deſign in all that it doth upon us, or about us. Providences indeed are very variable, but the deſigns and ends of God in them all are invariable, and the ſame for ever. It is noted in Ezek. 1. 12. that the wheels went ſtraight forward; whither the ſpirit was to go, they went, and they turned not when they went. As it is in nature, ſo in Providence, you have one day fair, halcyon, and bright, another dark and full of ſtorms; one ſeaſon hot, another cold; but all theſe ſerve to one and the ſame end and deſign to make the Earth fruitful; and the aim of all Providences is to make you holy and happy. That is a ſweet Promiſe, Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for good to them that love God. This is the compaſs by which all Providences ſteer their courſe, as a Ship at Sea doth by the Chard: but more particularly, let us note the unchangeableneſs of God in his Providences of all kinds, effective and permiſſive, and ſee in them all his unchangeable righteouſneſs and goodneſs.

1. It muſt needs be ſo, conſidering the unchangeableneſs of his Decree, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure. Providences ſerve, but never fruſtrate, execute, but cannot make void the Decree; ſo that you may ſay of the moſt afflicting Providences, as David doth of the ſtormy Winds, Pſal. 148. 8. They all fulfill thy word.

2. The Wiſdom of God proves it; he will not ſuffer his Works or Permiſſions to claſh with his deſigns and purpoſes: Divine Wiſdom ſhews it ſelf in the ſteddy direction of all things to the ultimate end. To open this in ſome particulars, conſider,

1. Doth the Lord permit wicked Men to rage and inſult, perſecute and vex his People? Yet all this while Providence is in its right way, it walks in as direct a line to your good, as when it is in a more pleaſant path of Peace, Jer. 24. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord, the God of Iſrael, like theſe good figs, ſo will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have ſent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. Iſrael was ſent to Babylon for their good. This improves your Faith and Patience, Rev. 13. 10. Here is the Patience and Faith of the Saints. So Rom. 5. 2, 3. By whom alſo we have acceſs by Faith into this grace, wherein we ſtand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God; and not only ſo, but we glory in tribulations alſo; knowing that tribulation worketh patience. By this you are weaned from, and mortified to this World.

2. Doth the Lord in his Providence order many and frequent, cloſe and ſmarting afflictions for you? Why, lo! here is the ſame deſign managing as effectually, as if all the peace and proſperity in the World were ordered for you: The face of Providence indeed is not the ſame, but the love of God is ſtill the ſame; he loves you as much when he ſmites, as when he ſmiles on you: for what are his ends in afflicting you, and what the ſanctified fruits of your afflictions? Is it not,

1. To purge your iniquities? Iſa. 27. 9. By this therefore ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away his ſin.

2. To reduce our hearts to God? Pſal. 119. 67. Before I was afflicted I went aſtray, but now have I kept thy word.

3. To quicken you to your duties: Let the beſt man be without afflictions, and he will quickly grow dull in the way of his duty.

3. Doth God let looſe the chain of Satan to tempt and buffet you? Yet is he ſtill the ſame God to you as before; for do but obſerve his ends in that permiſſion, and you will find, that by theſe things the Lord is leading you towards that deſired aſſurance of his love which your Souls long after. Few Chriſtians attain to any conſiderable Settlement of Soul, but by ſuch ſhakings and combats; the end of theſe permiſſions is to put you to your knees, and blow up a greater flame and fervour of Spirit in Prayer, 2 Cor. 12. 8. So that eventually theſe permiſſions of Providence prove ſingular advantages and bleſſings to you.

Sect. III.

Sect. III. What remains then, ſeeing God is unchangeable in his love to his people, purſuing the great ends of all his gracious Promiſes in a ſteddy courſe of Providence, wherein he will never effect, or permit any thing that is really repugnant to his own glory or their good; but that we enter alſo into this Chamber of Reſt, ſhut the doors about us, and comfortably improve the unchangeableneſs of God, while we ſee nothing but changes and troubles here below.

1. Enter into God's unchangeableneſs by Faith, take up your lodgings in this ſweet Attribute alſo; and to encourage your Faith thereunto, ſeriouſly conſider a few particulars.

1. Conſider how conſtant, firm, and unchangeable God hath been to his people in all times and ſtreights; not one among the many thouſands of his people that are paſſed on before you, but by frequent and certain experience have found him ſo. What a ſingular encouragement ſhould this be to our Faith in the caſe before us? Pſal. 9. 10. They that know thy name, will put their truſt in thee, for thou, Lord, haſt not forſaken them that ſeek thee. So Iſa. 25. 4. Thou haſt been a ſtrength to the poor, a ſtrength to the needy in his diſtreſs, a refuge from the ſtorm, a ſhadow from the heat, when the blaſt of the terrible ones is as the ſtorm againſt the wall. Neither is there any thing in your experience contradictory to the encouraging reports others have made of God; you muſt acknowledge, that notwithſtanding your own changeableneſs, who have hardly been able to maintain your hearts in any ſpiritual frame towards God for one day together, yet his mercies towards you have been new every morning, and great hath been his Faithfulneſs. You have often turned aſide from the way of your duty, and have not followed God in a ſteddy courſe of Obedience; and yet for all that, his goodneſs and mercy have followed you all the days of your life, as it is Pſal. 23. 6.

2. Conſider how often you have doubted and miſtruſted the unchangeableneſs of God, and been forced with ſhame and ſorrow to retract your folly therein; God hath many times convinced you that his love to you is an unchangeable love, how many changes ſoever in the courſe of his Providence have paſſed over you; conſult Iſa. 49. 14. and Pſal. 77, 78. and ſee how the caſes are parallel both in reſpect of Gods conſtancy to them and you, and the inconſtancy of his peoples Faith then, and yours now; your fears and doubts are the ſame with theirs; though his goodneſs and love have been as unchangeable to you as ever it was to them.

3. Conſider the Advocateſhip and Interceſſion of Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven for you, by vertue whereof the favour and love of God becomes unalterable towards his people. If any thing can be ſuppoſed to cool or quench the love of God towards you, nothing in the world is more like to do it than your ſin; and this indeed is that which you fear will eſtrange and alienate the heart of your God from you. But, Reader, if thou be one that ſincerely mourneſt for all the grief and diſhonour of God by thy ſin, appliеſt the blood of ſprinkling to thy Soul by Faith, and makeſt mortification and watchfulneſs thy daily buſineſs; comfort thy ſelf againſt that fear from that ſingular encouragement given thee in this caſe, 1 Joh 2. 1, 2. My little Children, theſe things write I unto you that ye ſin not; and if any man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſins. Look as the death of Chriſt healed the great breach betwixt God and thy Soul, by thy reconciliation at firſt; ſo the powerful Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven effectually prevents all new breaches betwixt God and thy Soul afterwards, ſo that he will never totally and finally caſt thee off again.

4. Shut the door behind you againſt all objections, ſcruples, and queſtionings of God's immutability, and by a reſolved and ſteddy Faith maintain the honour of God in this point, by the conſtant adherence to it, and dependance upon it; and eſpecially ſee that you give him the glory of his unchangeableneſs.

2. When thou ſhalt ſee the greateſt alterations and changes made by his Providence in the World. What though thou ſhouldeſt live to ſee all things turned upſide down, the foundations out of courſe, all things drawing into a Sea of confuſion and trouble? Yet in the midſt of thoſe publick diſtractions and diſtreſs of Nations, encourage thou thy ſelf in this: thy God, and his love to his people, is the ſame for ever. Pſal. 46. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. God is our refuge and ſtrength, a very preſent help in trouble; Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be moved, and the mountains be carried into the midſt of the Sea. God is in the midſt of her, ſhe ſhall not be moved.

2. Live by Faith upon God's unchangeableneſs under the greateſt changes of your own condition in this world. Providence may make great alterations upon all your outward comforts, it may caſt you down, how dear ſoever you be to God, from riches into poverty, from health into ſickneſs, from honour into reproach, from liberty into bondage; thou mayeſt overlive thy comfortable relations, and of a Naomi become a Marah. Thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down, ſaid as good a man as you, Pſal. 102. 10. Yet ſtill it is your duty, and will be your great privilege in the midſt of all theſe changes, to act your faith upon the never-changing God, as that holy man did, Hab. 3. 17. Although the fig-tree ſhall not bloſſom, neither fruit be in the vine; the labour of the olive ſhall fail; and the fields ſhall yield no meat; the flocks ſhall be cut off from the fold, and there ſhall be no herd in the ſtalls; yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my Salvation; q. d. Suppoſe a thouſand diſappointments of my earthly hopes, yet will I maintain my hope in God. Oh Chriſtian! with how many Yets, Notwithſtandings, and Nevertheleſſes, muſt thy Faith bear up in Times of Trouble, or thou'lt ſink?

3. See thou live upon God's Unchangeableneſs, when Age and Sickneſs ſhall inform thee, that thy great change is at hand; though thy heart and thy fleſh fail, comfort thy ſelf with this; thy God will never fail thee. Pſal. 73. 16. O God (ſaith David) thou haſt taught me from my youth, and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works, now alſo when I am old and grey-headed, forſake me not, Pſal. 71. 17, 18.

4. Live upon the unchangeableneſs of God under the greateſt and ſaddeſt changes of your ſpiritual condition; God may cloud the light of his countenance over thy Soul, he may fill thee with fears and troubles, and the Comforter that ſhould relieve thee may ſeem to be far off; yet ſtill maintain thy Faith in the unchangeableneſs of his loves; truſt in the Name of the Lord, ſtay thy ſelf upon thy God when thou walkeſt in darkneſs, and haſt no light, Iſa. 50. 17. Thus ſhut thy door.

3. Improve the unchangeableneſs of God to thy beſt Advantage in the worſt Times, by drawing thence ſuch comfortable Concluſions as theſe.

1. If God be an unchangeable God in his promiſes, and in his love to his people, what ſhould hinder but the people of God may live happily and comfortably in the ſaddeſt times, and greateſt troubles upon earth. As ſorrowful, yet always rejoycing, as poor, yet ought to quench a Chriſtians mirth that is not able to ſeparate him from the love of Chriſt, Rom. 8. 35.

2. If God be an unchangeable God in his love to his people; then it becomes all that have ſpecial intereſt in this God, to be unchangeable and immoveable in the ways of their obedience towards him: God will not caſt you off, ſee that you caſt not off your duties, no not when they are ſurrounded with difficulties; he loves you, though you often grieve him by ſin; ſee that you ſtill love him, though he often grieve and burden you by affliction: he will own you for his People under the greateſt contempts and reproaches of the World; ſee that you own and honour his Ways and Truths when you are under moſt Reproach from a vile World.

CHAP. X.

Opening the Care of God for his People in times of trouble, as the fifth Chamber of Reſt to Believers.

Sect. I. CAre in the general Notion of it, as it is applied to the Creature, imports the ſtudiouſneſs, and ſolicitouſneſs of our Thoughts, for the ſafety and welfare of our ſelves, or thoſe we love, and highly value. Now though there be no ſuch thing properly in God, at whoſe diſpoſe and pleaſure all events are, and to whoſe counſels and appointments, all difficulties muſt give way, yet he is pleaſed to accommodate himſelf to our weakneſs, and expreſs his regard and love to his People, by ſuch things as one Creature doth to another to which it is endeared by relation or affection. To this purpoſe we find many ſignificant, ſynonymous Expreſſions in Scripture, all importing the care of God over his People in a pleaſant variety of notion and expreſſion, as Nahum 1. 7. The Lord is good, a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble, and he knoweth them that truſt in him.

He knoweth them, i. e. he hath a ſpecial, tender, and careful eye upon them, to ſee their wants ſupplied, and to protect them in all their dangers; for in the common and general ſenſe, he knoweth them that truſt not in him, as well as thoſe that do; and farther to clear this ſence of the place, it is ſaid, Pſalm 40. 17. The Lord thinketh on them. Importing not only ſimple cogitation, but the immoration or abiding of his thoughts upon them, as our thoughts are wont to do, upon that which we highly eſteem, eſpecially when any danger is near it. And yet farther to clear this ſenſe, it is ſaid, Job 36. 7. He withdraweth not his eye from the righteous. As when Moſes was expoſed in the Ark of Bulruſhes, where his life was in imminent hazards by the waters of Nilus upon one ſide, and the Egyptian Cut-throats on the other; his Siſter Miriam kept watch at a diſtance, to ſee what would be done to him. Her Eye was never off that Ark wherein her dear Brother lay; fear and care engaged her eye to keep a true watch for him. Thus the Lord withdraweth not his eye from the righteous. To the ſame purpoſe is that expreſſion, Deut. 33. 3. Yea, he loved the People; all his Saints are in thy hand. That which we dearly love and prize above ordinary, we keep in our own hands for its ſecurity, as not thinking it ſafe enough in any other hand or place. And once more, Iſa. 49. 16. God is ſaid to engrave them upon the Palms of his Hands, alluding to what is cuſtomary among Men, who when they would charge their Memories with ſomething of ſpecial concernment, uſe to change a Ring, or bind a Thred about the Finger, to put them in mind of it. Thus is the Care of our God expreſſed to us in Scripture Notions. The amount of all which, is given us in that one proper and full Expreſſion of the Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 5. 7. He careth for you. To open this Chamber of Divine care, as a place of ſweeteſt reſt, to our anxious and perplexed minds, in times of difficulty and hazard, it will be neceſſary that you ſeriouſly ponder,

1. The Grounds and Reaſons
2. The Extent and Compaſs
3. The Lovely Properties

} of the care of God.

1. The grounds and reaſons of God's care for his people; which are,

1. The ſtrict and dear Relations in which he is pleaſed to own them. Believers are his children, and you know how naturally children engage and draw forth the Father's care for them. This is the argument Chriſt uſes, Matth. 6. 31, 32. Therefore take no thought, ſaying, what ſhall we eat? Or what ſhall we drink? Or wherewithal ſhall we be cloathed? For your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all theſe things. Children, eſpecially when young, diſquiet not themſelves about proviſions for back or belly, but leave that to the care of their Parents, from whom by the Tye and Bonds of Nature and Love, they expect proviſion for all thoſe wants: Every one takes care for his own; much more doth God for his own Children, and indeed he expects his Children ſhould live upon his Care; as our Children in their Minority, do upon ours.

2. God precious eſtimation and value of them, engages his conſtant care for them. Believers are his Jewels, Mal. 3. 17. his peculiar people, 1 Pet. 2. 6. his ſpecial portion or treaſure in this world, Deut. 32. 9. and as ſuch he prizes and eſteems them above all the people of the earth, and accordingly exerciſeth his ſpecial care in all the dangers they are here expoſed to. Special love engageth peculiar care.

3. The dangers and fears of the people of God, in this World, are many and great, and were it not for the Lord's aſſiduous and tender care over them, they muſt neceſſarily be ruined, both in ſoul and body by them. The Church is God's Vineyard, its Enemies as ſo many wild Boars to root it up: Upon this account he ſaith, Iſa. 27. 3: I the Lord do keep it, leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day. And indeed it is well for Iſrael, that he that keepeth it, never ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, Pſalm 121. 4. that our houſes are in peace, that we and our dear relations fall not as a prey, into cruel and bloody hands, skilful to deſtroy, that we find any reſt, or comfort in ſo evil and dangerous a world, it is wholly and only to be aſcribed to the care of God over us and ours.

4. Jeſus Chriſt hath ſolemnly recommended all the people of God, to his particular care. It was one of the laſt expreſſions of Chriſt's love to them at the parting hour, John 17. 11. And now I am no more in the world, but theſe are in the world; and I come to thee: Holy Father, keep through thine own name thoſe whom thou haſt given me, q. d. While I have been perſonally preſent with them, I took the ſame Care of them, as a Shepherd doth of his Flock, or a tender Father of his Children: But now now I muſt leave them in the world, and in the midſt of a world of dangers, fears, and troubles, againſt which they can make no proviſion or defence themſelves. Father remember them, look after them, when I ſhall be removed from them, they are thine, as well as mine; and I recommend them with my laſt breath to thy care and protection. This is a ſpecial ground alſo of God's care for them.

5. Believers daily caſt themſelves upon the care of God, and reſign themſelves unto it in their daily Prayers. And by their often renewed acts of Faith, than which no act is found more engaging from the Creature upon its God; though there be nothing of merit, yet there is much engaging efficacy in it, Iſa. 26. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee: becauſe he truſted in thee. We find it ſo among our ſelves, the more firmly and entirely any one truſteth to us, and dependeth upon us, the more he engageth us to protect or relieve him. Now this is the daily work of Chriſtians to truſt God over all, and put all their concernments into his hand, which very truſt and dependance draws forth the care of God for them.

6. In a word, the many promiſes God hath made to his people, to preſerve, ſupport, and ſupply them in all the times of need, engageth the care of God for them, as often as ſuch wants or dangers befall them; for indeed herein, he at once takes care for their neceſſity, and for his own honour and glory. They truſt to his word, and rely upon his promiſes, which therefore he will be carefull to make good. This was the Argument which the Church pleaded in the time of imminent danger, to engage the care of God for them, Pſal. 74. 20. Have reſpect unto the Covenant: for the dark places of the Earth are full of the habitations of cruelty, q. d. O Lord, thy people are in the midſt of cruel enemies, take care for their protection, and though there be no worth in them, to which thou ſhouldeſt have reſpect, yet have reſpect unto thine own Covenant: let the glory of thy Name draw forth thy care to thy people.

Sect. II. We have ſeen the grounds and reaſons of God's care over his people, let us next view the extent and compaſs of this divine care; and here methinks the Lord ſaith to his people as he ſaid to Abraham, Gen. 13, 14, 15. Lift up now thine eyes from the place where thou art, northward, and ſouthward, and eaſtward, and weſtward, for all the land which thou ſeeſt, to thee will I give it, and to thy ſeed for ever. So here, poor timorous dejected Believer, lift up thine eyes where thou art, and take a view of all the promiſes in the Scriptures of truth; promiſes of ſupports under all burthens, ſupplies of all wants, deliverances out of all dangers, aſſiſtances in all diſtreſſes; to thee have I given them all as a portion for ever. This care of God walks the round, and encompaſſeth the Souls and Bodies of them that fear him day and night. There is no intereſt or concern of either found without the Line of his all ſurrounding Care, and every one of his children are enfolded in his Fatherly Arms, Deut. 33. 3. All his Saints are in thy hand. All and every one of their wants and ſtreights are obſerved by this Care, in order to their ſupply, Phil. 4. 19. My God ſhall ſupply all your wants.

1. Great is the care of God over the Bodies of his people, and all the dangers and neceſſities of them as they daily grow; your meat and drink are daily provided for you by your Father's care, Pſalm 111. 5. He hath given meat unto them that fear him; he will ever be mindful of his Covenant. It is from this Care of thy Heavenly Father, that neceſſary proviſions have been made for thee, of which it may be thou haſt had no foreſight: This is the God that hath fed thee all thy life long, Gen. 48. 15. It is from the ſame care thy body hath been cloathed, Mat. 6. 28. How much more ſhall he cloath you, O ye of little faith? It is through this Care, you ſleep in peace, and your reſt is made ſweet unto you, Prov. 3. 24. When thou lyeſt down thou ſhalt not be afraid; yea, thou ſhalt lie down, and thy ſleep ſhall be ſweet. In a word; thou oweſt all thy recoveries from dangerous diſeaſes, and narrow eſcapes from the grave to this care of thy God over thee, He is the Lord that healeth thee, Exod. 15. 26. That the incenſed humours of thy body had not overflowed their banks, like an inundation of the Sea, when they raged in thy dangerous diſeaſes, is only becauſe thy God took the care of thee, and ſet them their bounds.

2. Divine Care extends it ſelf to the Souls of all that fear God, and to all the concernments of their Souls; and manifeſtly diſcovers it ſelf in all the gracious proviſions it hath made for them. More particularly, it is from this tenderly Fatherly care that,

1. A Saviour was provided to redeem them when they were ruined and loſt by ſin, John 3. 16. Rom. 8. 32.

2. That ſpiritual cordials are provided to refreſh them in all their ſinking ſorrows, and inward diſtreſſes, Pſal. 94. 19.

3. That a door of deliverance is opened to them, when they are ſorely preſſed upon by temptations, and ready to be overwhelmed, 1 Cor. 10. 13.

4. That a ſtrength above their own comes in ſeaſonably to ſupport them, when they are almoſt overweighed with inward troubles, when great weights are upon them, the everlaſting arms are underneath them, Pſal. 138. 3. Iſa. 57. 16.

5. That their ruine is prevented when they are upon the dangerous and ſlippery brink of temptations, and their feet almoſt gone, Pſalm 73. 12. Hoſ. 2. 6. 2. Cor. 12. 7.

6. That they are recovered again after dangerous falls by ſin, and not left as a Prey and Trophy to their enemy, Hoſ. 14. 4.

7. That they are guided and directed in the right way, when they are at a loſs, and know not what courſe to take, Pſam 16. 11. Pſalm 73. 24.

8. That they are eſtabliſhed and confirmed in Chriſt in the moſt ſhaking and overturning times of trouble and perſecution; ſo that neither their heart turneth back, nor their ſteps decline from his ways, Jer. 32. 40. John 4. 14.

9. That they are upheld under ſpiritual deſertions, and recovered again out of that diſmal darkneſs into the chearful light of God's Countenance, Iſa. 57. 16.

10. That they are at laſt brought ſafe to Heaven through the innumerable hazards and dangers all along their way thither, Heb. 11. 16. In all theſe things the care of their God eminently diſcovers it ſelf for their Souls.

3. Once more let us conſider the Care of God for his people in the lovely properties thereof. As,

1. It is a Fatherly care, than which none is more great or tender, Matth. 6. 8. Your father knoweth that you have need of all theſe things. And indeed the greateſt and tendereſt care of an earthly Father is but a faint ſhadow of that tender care which is in the heart of God over his Children; for for to that end we find them compared, Matth. 7. 11. If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more ſhall your father which is in heaven, give good things to them which ask him. The care of Parents is careleſneſs it ſelf compared with that care which God takes of his.

2. The care of God is an univerſal care, watching over all his people in all ages, places and dangers, 2 Chron. 16. 9. The eyes of the Lord run to and fro through the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in behalf of them whoſe heart is perfect towards him. This was apply'd by way of reproof to Aſa, who out of a ſinful diſtruſt of the care of God, relyed upon the help of Syria, as if there had not been a God in Heaven to take care of him and the people.

3. God's care over his, is aſſiduous and continual; his mercies are new every morning, great is his faithfulneſs, Lam. 3. 22, 23. He keeps his people night and day, Iſa. 27. 3. Could Satan, or his inſtruments find ſuch an hour wherein the ſeven eyes of Providence ſhould be all aſleep, that would be the fatal hour to our Souls and Bodies; but he that keepeth Iſrael ſlumbereth not.

4. God's care over his, is exceeding tender, far beyond the tenderneſs that the moſt affectionate mother ever felt in her heart towards the child that hanged on her breaſt, Iſa. 49. 15. Can a mother forget her ſucking child, &c. they may, yet will not I forget thee. The birds of the air are not ſo tender of their young in the neſt, as God is of his people in the world, Iſa. 31. 5. Mercy fills the heart of God, yea, multitudes of tender mercies, Pſal. 51. 1.

5. The care of God is a ſeaſonable care, which is always ſure to nick the opportunity and proper ſeaſon of relieving his people; in the mount of the Lord it ſhall be ſeen: The beauty of Providence is much ſeen in this thing, wherever you feel a want; this care finds a ſupply; and thus much briefly of the care of God abſolutely conſidered in it ſelf.

Sect. III. It remains that we alſo conſider the care of God in its twofold reſpect, viz.

1. To his Promiſes.
1. To his Providences.

1. There are multitudes of Promiſes found in the Scriptures, exactly fitted as ſo many keys to open the door of this comfortable Chamber to receive, and ſecure all that fear God, whatever their wants, fears, or diſtreſſes are. Theſe are reducible into two Claſſes, or Ranks, viz.

1. More general and comprehenſive,
2. More particular Promiſes.

The general and more comprehenſive Promiſes are found in the general expreſſions of the Covenant, as that to Abraham, Gen. 17. 1. I am God Almighty, walk thou before me and be perfect. q. d. Let it be thy care to walk exactly in the paths of obedience before me, and I will take care to ſupply all thy wants from the never failing fountain of my alſufficiency; and of the ſame tenour is that, 2 Cor. 6. 19. I will be to them a Father, and they ſhall be my ſons and daughters, i. e. Expect your proviſions from my care, as children do from their father. More particularly, there are ſix ſorts of Promiſes, wherein the care of God is particularly made over to his people in the greateſt hazards and difficulties in this life, viz.

1. It is aſſigned and made over to them to ſupply all their needs, ſo far as the Glory of God and Advancement of their ſpiritual and eternal good ſhall require it, Pſal. 34. 9. They that fear the Lord ſhall not want any good thing. All your livelihood is in that Promiſe; thence comes your daily bread; your own and your families meat is in that cupboard.

2. It is made over to the Church and People of God for their defence againſt all danger, Iſa. 54. 17. No weapon that is formed againſt thee ſhall proſper. This promiſe wards off all the deadly blows, and puts by all the mortal thruſts that are made at you; here the care of God forms it ſelf into a ſhield for your defence.

3. The care of God is engaged by promiſe for the moderation and mitigation of your afflictions, that they may not exceed your abilities to bear them, Iſa. 27. 8, 9. In meaſure when it ſhooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it; he ſtayeth the rough wind in the day of the eaſtwind, if the wind blow from a cold corner, this Promiſe moderates it, that it blow not a ſtorm; all the ſparing mercies and ſweetning circumſtances, which gracious Souls thankfully note in the ſharpeſt trials come from this promiſe, wherein the care of God is engaged for that purpoſe.

4. Divine care is put under the bond of a promiſe, for the direction and guidance of all their troubles and trials to an happy iſſue, Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for good. From what quarter ſoever the Wind bloweth, God will take care that it ſhall be uſeful to drive you to your Port; the very Providences that caſt you down, by vertue of this promiſe prove as ſerviceable and beneficial as thoſe that lift you up.

5. The care of God ſtands engaged in the promiſe for the help and aid of his people in all the extremities and exigencies of their lives, Pſal. 46. 1. God is our refuge and ſtrength, a very preſent help in trouble. Never is the care of God more viſible and conſpicuous, than in ſuch times of need.

6. Laſtly, the care of God is engaged to carry his people ſafe through all the dangers of the way, and bring them all home to glory at laſt, John 10. 28. I give unto them eternal life, and they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand. This care of God thus engaged for you is your convoy to accompany and ſecure you till it ſee you ſafe into your harbour of eternal reſt.

2. You have heard how the care of God is engaged for you by promiſe; now ſee how it actuates, and exerts it ſelf for the people of God in the various methods of Providence; and here, oh here is the ſweeteſt pleaſure of the Chriſtian life, a delight far tranſcending all the delights of this life. Sit down Chriſtian in this Chamber alſo, and make but ſuch obſervations upon the care of thy God as follow, and then tell me whether the world with all its pleaſures and delights can give thee ſuch an other entertainment.

1. Reflect upon the conſtant, ſweet, and ſuitable proviſions that from time to time have been prepared for thee and thine, by this care of thy God; from whence ſoever thy wants did come, I am ſure from hence came thy ſupplies, it hath enabled thee to return the ſame anſwer the diſciples did to that queſtion, Luke 22. 35. Lacked ye any thing, and they ſaid nothing.

2. Reflect with admiration upon the various difficulties of your lives, wherein your thoughts have been entangled, and out of which you have been extricated and delivered by the care of God over you: How oft have your thoughts been like a ravelled skeyn of ſilk, ſo entangled and perplexed with the difficulties and fears before you, that you could find no end, but the longer you thought, the more you were puzled, till you have left thinking, and fell to praying; and there you have found the right end to wind up all your thoughts upon the bottom of peace and ſweet contentment, according to that direction, Pſalm 37. 5. Commit thy way unto the Lord, truſt alſo in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſs.

3. Obſerve with a melting heart how the care of thy God hath diſpoſed and directed thy way to unforeſeen advantages: had he not ordered thy ſteps when, and as he did, thou hadſt not been in poſſeſſion of thoſe Temporal and Spiritual mercies that ſweeten thy life at this day. Surely the ſteps of good men are ordered by the Lord; and as for thee Chriſtian, what reaſon haſt thou with an heart overflowing with love and thankfulneſs to look up and ſay, My father, thou art the guide of my youth? It is ſweet to live by faith upon Divine care. Oh what a Serene life might we live, careful for nothing, but making known our requeſt unto God in every thing, Phil. 4. 6. caſting all our care on him that careth for us, 1 Pet. 5. 7. perplexing our thoughts about nothing, but rolling every burthen upon godly Faith. Thus lived holy Muſculus when reduced to extreme poverty, and danger at the ſame time; then it was that he ſolaced his Soul with that comfortable Diſtich, a good leſſon for others,

Eſt Deus in cœlis, qui providus omnia curat,
Credentes nuſquam deſeruiſſe poteſt.

The provident care of his heavenly father, made his heart as quiet as the child at the breaſt. Chriſtian, thou knoweſt not what diſtreſsful days are coming upon the earth, nor what perſonal trials ſhall befal thee in this world; but I adviſe thee as thou valueſt the tranquility and comfort of thy life: Shut up thy ſelf by Faith in this Chamber of Divine Care, it is thy beſt ſecurity in this world: Reflect frequently and thankfully upon the manifold ſupports, ſupplies, and ſalvations thou haſt already had, from this fountain of mercies, and be not diſcouraged at new difficulties. When an eminent Chriſtian was told of ſome that way-laid him to deſtroy him: his anſwer was, Si Deus mei curam non habet, quid vivo: In like manner thou mayeſt ſay, if God had not taken care for thee, how couldſt thou have lived till now? How couldeſt thou have over-lived ſo many troubles, fears and dangers as thou haſt done?

CHAP. XI.

Opening the ſixth and laſt Chamber, viz. The Love of God, as a reſting place to believing Souls in evil times.

Sect. I. THough all the Attributes in the name or chambers of this houſe of God are glorious, and excellent; yet this of love is tranſcendently glorious: Of this room it may be ſaid as it was of Solomon's royal Chariot, Cant. 3. 10. The midſt thereof is paved with love. In this Attribute the glory of God is ſignally and eminently manifeſted, 1 John 4. 9, 10. And upon this foundation the hopes and comforts of all Believers are built and founded, Rom. 8. 35. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall tribulation, or diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword? He defies and deſpiſes them all, becauſe neither of them alone, nor all together by their united ſtrength, can unclaſp the arms of Divine Love, in which Believers are ſafely enfolded. In this Attribute God's people by Faith entrench themſelves, and of it a Believer ſaith, Hic murus aheneus eſto, this ſhall be my ſtrong hold and fortreſs in the day of trouble, and well may we ſo eſteem and reckon it, if we conſider,

1. That wherever the ſpecial love of God goes, there the ſpecial preſence of God goes alſo, John 14. 23. He ſhall be loved of my father, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. And O how ſecure and ſafe muſt thoſe be (however times govern) with whom God himſelf maketh his abode! For as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 91. 1. He that dwells in the ſecret place of the moſt high, ſhall abide under the ſhadow of the Almighty. And he that is overſhadowed by an Almighty power, needs not fear how many mighty enemies combine againſt him.

2. Wherever the ſpecial love of God is placed, that perſon becomes, precious and highly valuable in the eyes of God; he appretiates and eſtimates ſuch a man as his peculiar treaſure, which naturally and neceſſarily draws and ſpreads the wing of Divine care over him for his protection, Deut. 33. 12. The beloved of the Lord ſhall dwell in ſafety by him, and the Lord ſhall cover him all the day long. Things of greateſt value are always kept in ſafeſt cuſtody.

3. Upon whomſoever the ſpecial love of God is ſet, there all events and iſſues of troubles are ſure to be over-ruled to the eternal advantage of that Soul, Rom. 8. 28. Which conſideration alone is ſufficient to unſting all the troubles in the world, and make the beloved of the Lord ſhout and triumph in the midſt of tribulations.

But let us enter yet farther into this glorious Chamber of Divine love, and more particularly view the admirable properties thereof, though when all is done, it will be found a love paſſing knowledge; our thoughts may admire, but can never meaſure it.

1. And firſt you will find it an ancient love whoſe ſpring is in eternity it ſelf. Believer, God is thine ancient friend, who foreſaw and loved thee, before thou, yea, before this world was in being; the fruits and effects thereof thou gathereſt in time, but the root that produces them was before all times, Prov. 8. 22, 23. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was ſet up from everlaſting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. Thus was the love of God contriving, and providing the beſt of mercies in Chriſt for us; while as yet there were no ſuch creatures in the world, nor a world prepared to receive us.

2. The love of God to his people is a free, and altogether undeſerved love; it muſt needs be ſo, ſeeing it prevented our very being, which had it not done, yet no motives had been found in us, to allure it to us more than others, Deut. 7. 7. The Lord did not ſet his love upon you, nor chuſe you, becauſe ye were more in number than any people, (for ye were the feweſt of all people) but becauſe the Lord loved you. So that we cannot find one ſtone of our merit in the foundation of this love; for thoſe whom it embraceth in its arms are, Immerentes, & male merentes, ill deſerving as well as undeſerving, we were loved of God, before we were lovely in our ſelves; it is freely pitched upon us, not purchaſed by us, Iſa. 43. 24.

3. The love of God to Believers is a bountiful love, ſtreaming forth continually mercies both innumerable and invaluable to the Souls and Bodies, 2 Pet. 1. 3. Chriſtian, it would quickly weary thine arm, yea, let me ſay the arm of an Angel, but to write down the thouſandth part of the mercies which have already flowed out of this precious fountain to thee; though all thou haſt received, or ſhalt receive in this world, are but the beginnings of mercy, and firſt-fruits of the love of God to thee; 'tis the love of God which daily loads thee with benefits, as the expreſſion is, Pſal. 68. 19. And if thou art daily loaded with mercies, what an heap of mercies will the mercies of thy whole life be.

4. The love of God to believers is a diſtinguiſhing love, not the portion of all, no, nor yet of many beſides thee, 1 Cor. 1. 26. The generality of the world dwell in the Room of common Providence, not in the Chamber of ſpecial love into which God hath admitted thee; this conſideration ſhould make thee break out in admiration, as it is, John 19. 22. Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifeſt thy ſelf to me, and not to the world.

5. The Love of God to Believers is a love tranſcendent to all creature love, it moves in an higher Sphere than the love of any creature doth, Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8. We read of Jacob's love to Rachel, which is ſo celebrated in the ſacred Story for the fervour of it, and yet all that enabled him to ſuffer was but the Summers heat and the Winters cold; a trifle to what the love of Chriſt engaged, and enabled him to ſuffer for thy ſake. We read alſo of the love of David to Abſalom which made him wiſh, would God I had died for thee, O Abſalom, my Son, my Son. This love was only manifeſted in a wiſh, which haply might have been retracted too, had there been an exchange to be made indeed; but the life of Chriſt, worth millions of his life, was actually and willingly ſtaked down for thy Soul. We read of the love of one Diſciple manifeſted to another Diſciple in a Cup of cold Water; but Chriſt hath manifeſted his love to thee in pouring out his warmeſt Heart Blood for thy redemption. O what a tranſcendent love is the divine love!

6. To conclude, (though, alas, little is ſaid of the love of God,) it is an everlaſting and unchangeable love. Hills and Mountains ſhall ſooner ſtart from their Baſes, than his loving kindneſs depart from his People, Iſa. 54. 10. Though he afflict us ſtill he loves us, Pſal. 89. 32, 33. Nay, though we grieve him, yet ſtill he loves us, Mark 16. 7. Tell the Diſciples, and tell Peter. Peter had grieved Chriſt, denied Chriſt, yet will he not renounce nor caſt off Peter.

Sect. II. Well then, if God hath opened to your Souls ſuch a Chamber of love, where your Souls may be raviſhed with daily Delights, as well as ſecured from danger and ruine: O that you would enter into it by Faith, and dwell for ever in the love of God! I mean, clear up your intereſt in it, and then ſolace your Souls in the delights of it. Need I to uſe an Argument, or ſpend one Motive to preſs you to enter into ſuch an Heaven upon Earth? If the deadneſs of thy Heart doth need it take into Conſideration, Reader, theſe few that follow.

1. Motive. Ponder with thy ſelf how ſad and miſerable the caſe will be with thee in the days of calamity and diſtreſs, if the love of God ſhall then be clouded to thy ſoul; in thoſe days ſuch as love thee will either be abſent from thee, or impotent to help thee, all thy friends and familiars may be removed far off, and whither then wilt thou turn, ſhould God be far off too? This was that evil which Jeremiah ſo vehemently deprecated, Ch. 17. v. 17. Be not a terrour unto me, thou art my hope in the day of evil. q. d. O Lord my Soul depends upon refreſhment, and comfort from thee, when all the ſprings of earthly comfort are dried up. Shouldeſt thou be a terrour to me in the day of evil, it will be the moſt terrible diſappointment that ever befel my Soul; if thou be kind, I care not who be cruel; if I have the love of God, I value not the hatred of Men; but if God be a terrour, who or what can be a Comforter? The love of God is the alone refuge to which the gracious Soul retreats upon all creature diſappointments, and failings. This therefore is the main Thing to be feared againſt the evil Day.

2. Mot. The knowledge and aſſurance of the love of God is a Mercy attainable by a gracious Soul, notwithſtanding the imperfections of Grace. Peter had his falls and failings as well as other Chriſtians, yet when Chriſt puts the queſtion home to him, Joh. 21. 15. Simon ſon of Jonas loveſt thou me more than theſe, he was able to return a clear poſitive anſwer; Yea, Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee. Study thy heart Chriſtian, and ſtudy the Scriptures; if thou canſt find the ſincere love of God in thy heart, that Scripture will clear the love of God to thy Soul, 1 John 4. 19. We love him becauſe he firſt loved us. If thou lay thine hand upon a ſtone wall, and feel it warm, thou mayeſt conclude the Sun-beams have ſhone upon it; for warmth is not naturally in dead Stones. Our love to God is but the reflex Beam of his love to us, and we know there can be no reflex without a direct Beam. Thouſands of Chriſtians do at this day actually poſſeſs the raviſhing ſenſe of divine love, whoſe fears and complaints have been the ſame that thine now are; that God who indulged this favour to them, can do as much for thee.

3. Mot. Think how well thou wilt be provided for the worſt and difficulteſt times, when the love of God ſhall be well ſecured to thy ſoul; when the love of God, i. e. the ſenſe of his love is once ſhed abroad in the heart by the holy Ghoſt, which for that end, among others, is given unto us, we ſhall then be able to glory in tribulation, Rom. 5. 3, 5. We may then bid defiance to all the adverſe powers of Hell, and Earth, and ſay, Now do your worſt: we are out of your reach, and above all your terrors and affrights. Be adviſed then to ſit cloſe to this work: clear but this point once, and the worſt is paſt. O lie at the feet of God night and Day, give him no reſt, take no denial from him, fill thy mouth with pleas and arguments? tell him, Lord, it is neither for Corn nor Wine that I ſeek thee, but only for thy love; beſtow thy other gifts upon whom thou wilt, only ſeal up thy love to my Soul.

And Laſtly, I adviſe thee, Reader, to be exceeding careful, when God admits thee into the ſenſe of his love, to ſhut the door behind thee, leſt thy Soul be ſoon expelled thence, by the ſubtilty of Satan, who envies nothing more, than ſuch an happineſs as this: that envious Spirit totally deſpairs of the leaſt drop of ſuch a Mercy, and therefore ſwells with envy at thy enjoyment of it; but if ever thou faſten thy hand of faith upon this mercy, looſe not thy hold by every objection with which he will rap thy fingers.

1. If he object the many ſharp Afflictions, and manifold rods of God upon thee, call not the love of God in queſtion for that; but remember what he ſaith, Heb. 12. 6. Whom the Lord loveth he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth. Fatherly Corrections are ſo far from being inconſiſtent with the love of God, that his love is rather queſtionable without them, than for them; they are love tokens, not marks of hatred.

2. Yie

2. Yield not up thy claim and title to the love of God, becauſe he ſometimes hides away his face from thee; thou knoweſt the Sun is up, and going on in its regular courſe, in the darkeſt and cloſeſt day. My God, my God, ſaith Chriſt himſelf, Why haſt thou forſaken me? believe he is ſtill thy God. and his love immutable, when the ſenſe and manifeſtations thereof do fail.

3. Call not the love of God into queſtion, becauſe of thy great vileneſs and unworthineſs; ſay not when thou moſt loatheſt thy ſelf, God muſt needs loath thee too; he can love where thou loatheſt. Return, return, O Shulamite, return, return, that we may look upon thee: what will ye ſee in the Shulamite? as it were the company of two Armies. The Spouſe was exceeding beautiful in the Eyes of others, when moſt baſe and vile in her own: What would you ſee in the Shulamite? alas, there is nothing in me, at the beſt, but Conflicts and Wars, betwixt Grace and Corruption, as it were betwixt two Armies, Cant. 6. 13.

4. Quit not thy claim to the Love of God, becauſe he ſeems to ſhut out thy Prayers, and delays to anſwer the long continued deſires and importunities of thy Soul in ſome caſes. David would neither cenſure his God, no nor call in queſtion his intereſt in him, becauſe of ſuch a delay and ſilence, Pſal. 22. 1, 2. My God, My God. The claim is doubled, ver. 1. and yet in the next breath he ſaith, I cry in the day time, but thou heareſt not, and in the night ſeaſon, I am not ſilent.

Thus I have offered you ſome advice and aſſiſtance, how to ſecure your ſelves in theſe Divine Attributes, viz. The Power, Wiſdom, Faithfulneſs, Unchangeableneſs, Care and Love of God, as in ſo many Sanctuaries, and comfortable Refuges in the days of common Calamity. It is noted even of the Egyptians, when the ſtorm of Hail was coming upon the Land, Exod. 9. 20. He that feared the word of the Lord among the ſervants of Pharaoh, made his ſervants and his cattle flee into the houſes, Let not an Egyptian take more care of his beaſts than Chriſtians of their Souls. Stormy days are coming, God hath provided you a Refuge, and given you ſeaſonable Præmonitions, and Calls from Heaven, to haſten into them before Deſolations come. The Lord help us to hear his Calls, and comply with them, which will be as much our Privilege, as it is our Duty. And ſo much of the Fifth Propoſition, viz. That God's Attributes, Promiſes, and Providences, are prepared for the ſecurity of his people in the greateſt diſtreſſes that befal them in the world.

PROPOSITION VI.

That none but God's own People are taken into theſe Chambers of Security, or can expect his ſpecial Protection in Evil Times.

Sect. I. THis Propoſition deſcribes and clears the qualified ſubject of this Privilege God's own People, and none but ſuch can warrantably claim ſpecial Protection in evil times; and this is conſonant to the current account of Scripture. Iſa. 3. 10, 11. Say ye unto the righteous, it ſhall be well with him. Wo to the wicked, it ſhall be ill with him. He ſpeaks concerning the day of Jeruſalem's ruin, and Judah's fall, as appears, ver. 8. So great a difference will God make even in this world, betwixt the righteous, and the wicked. In Nah. 1. you have alſo a terrible day deſcribed, wherein Baſhan, Carmel, and Lebanon, the moſt pleaſant and fruitful places of the land ſhall languiſh, ver. 4. The mountains ſhall quake, the hills melt, the earth, and thoſe that dwell therein burnt up, ver. 5. The indignation and fury of God poured out like fire, ver. 6. The privileged people in this terrible day are God's own people, they only are taken into ſecurity, ver. 7. The Lord is good, a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble, and he knoweth them that truſt in him, i. e. he ſo knoweth them, as to care and provide for them in that evil day, and ſo throughout the whole Scripture, you ſhall find the Promiſes of Protection ſtill made to the people of God. When the Chaldean Army, like a devouring fire, was ready to ſieze upon the Land, the ſinners in Sion were afraid, fearfulneſs ſurprized the hypocrites, for who among us (ſay they) ſhall dwell with devouring fire, and everlaſting burning? Yes, ſaith God, ſome there are that ſhall abide that day, viz. He that walketh righteouſly, and ſpeaketh uprightly; he ſhall dwell on high, his place of defence ſhall be the munition of rocks, i. e. God will be a ſanctuary to them, when others ſhall be as ſtubble before the flames, Iſa. 33. 14, 15, 16.

But for the right ſtating of this Propoſition, three things muſt be heedfully adverted.

1. That all good men are not always exempted from the ſtroke of outward Calamities; in that ſenſe the righteous may periſh, and merciful men be taken away, yea, they may periſh in love, and be taken away in mercy from the evil to come, Iſa. 57. 1, 2. Micah 7. 1, 2.

2. That all wicked men are not always expoſed to external miſeries, but a juſt man may periſh in his righteouſneſs, and a wicked man prolong his life in his wickedneſs, Eccleſ. 7. 15.

3. But in this ſenſe we are to underſtand the Propoſition, That none, but the people of God, have right, by promiſe, to his ſpecial protection in evil days, and that all ſuch ſhall either be preſerved from the ſtroke of calamities, or from the deadly ſting, namely eternal ruin, by them; though they ſhould fall by the hands of enemies, yet they die, as Joſiah did, in Peace, 2 Kings 22. 19, 20. If they be taken away, it is but out of the way of greater miſchiefs: death doth but lay the Saints in their beds of reſt, when it hurries away others into everlaſting miſeries: If they be not excuſed from troubles, yet their troubles are ſure to be ſanctified to their eternal good, Rom. 8. 28. And the Lord will be with them in their troubles, Pſal. 91. 15. Iſa. 41. 10.

Two things remain to be conſidered, before we finiſh this laſt Propoſition: viz.

1. Who the People of God are?
2. Why this Privilege is peculiar to them?

1. Who are the People of God? The Scripture deſcribes them two ways; Negatively, and Poſitively; Negatively, in oppoſition to thoſe who are not the People of God, but are (1.) the ſervants of ſin, obeying it in the luſt of it, which the People of God neither are, nor dare to do, Rom. 6. 11, 12. &c. (2.) The men of this World, who have their portion in this life, ſavouring and minding the things of the world only, whereas the People of God are called out of the world, Joh. 17. 16. and principally ſtudy, and labour after the higher concernments of the world to come, Rom. 8. 5. (3.) The Vaſſals of Satan doing his luſt, and in ſubjection to his power, Acts 26. 18. Epheſ. 2. 2. from which bondage the People of God are made free. (4.) Nor yet are they their own, living wholly to themſelves, and ſeeking only their own ends, as others do, 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. Theſe, all theſe are not the People of God, God will not own them for ſuch; they but deceive themſelves in thinking, and calling themſelves ſo: but then poſitively. They are (1.) a people regenerated, and born again Joh. 1. 13. Their regeneration gives them both the eſſence and denomination of the people of God: it is as impoſſible to be the children of God, without regeneration, as it is to be the children of Men without generation. (2.) They are people in Covenant with God, Ezek. 16. 8. I entered into a Covenant with thee, and thou becameſt mine. For in this Covenant they give themſelves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. They avouch the Lord to be their God, and make over themſelves to him to be his people, Jer. 31. 33. devoting unto God all that they are, their ſouls, and bodies, with every faculty and member incluſively Rom. 12. 1. Luke 10. 27. All that they have, Rom. 11. 36. all is dedicated and devoted to the Lord's uſe and ſervice, and theſe only are the people of God.

2. The laſt thing to be cleared is, Why the people of God, and none beſide them, have this peculiar privilege of an hiding-place in the day of trouble? And the grounds of it are,

1. Becauſe they only have ſpecial intereſt in God, and propriety is the ground on which they claim and expect protection: I am thine, ſave me, Pſal. 119. 94. Upon this very ground it was, that David encouraged himſelf in one of his greateſt plunges and diſtreſſes of his whole life, 1 Sam. 30. 6. But David encouraged himſelf in the Lord his God.

2. The people of God only are at peace with God; and where there is no Peace, there can be no Protection: The harbours and gariſons of one Kingdom never receive into their Protection the Subjects of another Kingdom that are in open hoſtility againſt them. Now there is open War betwixt God and the Wicked, Pſal. 7. 11. Zech. 11. 8. 'Till they have Peace with God, they can claim no Protection from God.

3. The promiſes of Protection are made only to God's people; and where there is no promiſe, there can be no warrantable claim to Protection, 2 Cor. 1. 20. 2 Pet. 1. 4. Common Providence may ſhelter them for a time, but the Saints only have the Keys of the Promiſes which open the Chambers or Attributes of God to them.

4. None but the people of God walk in the ways of God, and none but thoſe that walk in his way can groundedly expect his Protection; for ſo runs the promiſe, 2 Chron. 15. 2. I am with you, whilſt you are with me, i. e. I am with you, by way of Protection, Direction, Supportation, and Salvation, whilſt you are with me in the duties of Obedience, and exerciſes of your Graces; ſee that you love, fear, and obey me, and then depend upon it I will look after, and take care of you.

5. To conclude: The people of God only flee to God for Sanctuary, and caſt themſelves upon him for Protection, Pſal. 56. 3. At what time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee. Pſal. 18. 2. The Lord is my rock, and my fortreſs, and my deliverer; my God, my ſtrength, in whom I will truſt, my buckler, and the horn of my ſalvation, and my high tower. This their confidence in God and reliance upon him, engages him to protect them in their dangers, Iſa. 26. 3. All others put themſelves out of God's Protection, by making fleſh their Arm, and ſo giving the honour of God to the Creature, Jer. 17. 5. And thus much for clearing this laſt Propoſition alſo. All that remains will be diſpatched in brief and cloſe Application of the point thus opened and confirmed.

CHAP. XII.

Containing the firſt Uſe of the Point, in ſeveral informing Conſectaries, and Deductions of Truth from it.

Sect. I.

Conſect. 1. FRom the whole of this Diſcourſe we may be informed what a miſerable and ſhiftleſs People all thoſe will be in times of trouble, who have no ſpecial Intereſt in God or the Promiſes. Sad and lamentable was the caſe of Saul, as it is by himſelf expreſſed, 1 Sam. 28. 15. I am ſore diſtreſſed, for the Philiſtines make war againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more. It is a wonderful and unaccountable thing, how carnal Men and Women ſubſiſt, and bear up, when their earthly props and hopes ſink under and fail them; ſo long as any creature-comfort is left, thither they will retreat for relief and ſuccour: but if all fail, as quickly they may, whither will they turn for comfort, having not a God nor a Promiſe to flee to? which the people of God can do, when all things elſe fail them, Heb. 3. 17. Their different conditions in the day of trouble, is clearly expreſſed in Zeph. 2. 3, 4. Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment, ſeek righteouſneſs, ſeek meekneſs, it may be ye ſhall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. There is God's may be, which is better ſecurity than Man's ſhall be, for their temporal deliverance: but what ſhall become of others, that have no refuge but in the Creature? Why, the miſery and ſhiftleſsneſs of their condition follows in the next words: Gaza ſhall be forſaken, and Aſhkelon a deſolation; they ſhall drive out Aſhdod at noon-day, and Ekron ſhall be rooted up; i. e. All their earthly ſecurities ſhall fail them; their ſtrong hold ſhall not ſecure them; they ſhall find no ſhelter in the ſcorching heat of the day of trouble. Moab, Aſhdod, and Ekron, have no more benefit by the Promiſes made to Sion, than the Inhabitants of Rome can claim by the Charter of London. If a wicked or hypocritical perſon cry to God in his diſtreſs, he will not hear him, Prov. 1. 25, 26. Job 27. 9. but will bid him go to his earthly Refuges which he hath choſen; if he go to the Promiſes, knock at thoſe doors of hope, they cannot relieve him, being all made in Chriſt to Believers; if to the Name and Attributes of God, all the doors are ſhut againſt them, Pſal. 34. 16. There are ſeven dreadful Aggravations of a wicked man's Troubles;

(1.) When Troubles come upon him, the Curſe of God follows him into his carnal Refuges; Jer. 17. 5. Curſed be the man that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arm, and whoſe heart departeth from the Lord. Trouble is the Arrow, and this Curſe the Venom of the Arrow, which makes the Wound incurable.

2. When troubles fall upon him from without, a guilty Conſcience will terrifie him from within; ſo that the Mind can give no relief to the Body, but both ſink under their own weights; it is not ſo with the people of God, they have inward relief under outward preſſures, 2 Cor 4. 16.

3. The guſts and ſtorms of wicked mens troubles may blow them into Hell, and hurry them into eternal Deſtruction; if Death march towards them upon the pale Horſe, Hell always follows him, Rev. 6. 8.

4. If troubles and diſtreſſes overwhelm their hearts, they can give them no vent or eaſe by Prayer, Prayer, Faith, and Reſignation to God, as his people uſe to do, 1 Sam. 1. 18.

5. When their troubles and diſtreſſes come, then comes the hour and power of their temptation, and to ſhun ſorrow they will fall into ſin, having no promiſe to be kept in the Hour of Temptation, as the Saints have, Rev. 3. 10.

6. When their troubles come, they will be left alone in the midſt of them; theſe are their burthens, and they alone muſt bear them. God's gracious, comfortable, ſupporting preſence is only with his own people.

7. If Trouble or Death come upon them as a ſtorm, they have no Anchor of Hope to drop in the ſtorm; The wicked is driven away in his wickedneſs: but the righteous hath hope in his death, Prov. 14. 32. By all which it appears that a Chriſtleſs perſon is a moſt helpleſs and ſhifleſs Creature in the day of trouble.

2 Conſect. Secondly, Hence it follows, That Chriſtians ought not to droop like other men in the day of trouble. A wicked man's boldneſs, and a Chriſtian's cowardlineſs in times of affliction, are alike ungrounded and uncomely. Why ſhould thy heart, Chriſtian, deſpond and ſink at this rate, upon the proſpect of approaching troubles? Are there not ſafe and comfortable Chambers taken up, and provided for thee againſt that day? Is not the Name of the Lord a ſtrong Tower, into which thou may'ſt run and be ſafe? The heart of a good man, ſaith Chryſoſtom, ſhould at all times be like the higher Heavens, ſerene, tranquil and clear, whatever Thunders and Lightnings, Storms and Tempeſts, trouble and diſturbance terrifie the lower world. If a Man have a good Roof over his head, where he can ſit dry and warm, what need he trouble himſelf to hear the Winds roar, the Lightnings flaſh, and the Rains pour down without doors? Why, this is thy privilege, Chriſtian; A Man (to wit, the Man Jeſus Chriſt) ſhall be as an hiding-place from the Wind, a covert from the Tempeſt: as rivers of water in a dry place, as the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land, Iſa. 32. 2. Art thou in Chriſt and in the Covenant? give me then one good reaſon for thy dejections in a day of trouble; or if thou haſt none to give, hearken to theſe Reaſons againſt it.

1. If thou be in Chriſt, thy Sins are forgiven thee; and why ſhould not a pardoned Soul be a chearful Soul in Adverſity? Afflictions may buz and hum about thee, like Bees that have loſt their ſting, but they can never hurt thee.

2. If thou be in Chriſt, thy God is with thee in all thy troubles; and how can thy heart ſink or faint in ſuch a preſence? Let them that are alone in troubles fail under them: but don't thou do ſo, that art ſurrounded with Almighty Power, Grace and Love, Iſa. 43. 1, 2.

3. If thou be in Chriſt, thy greateſt afflictions ſhall prove thy beſt Friends and Benefactors, Rom. 8. 28. Sure then thou art more afraid than hurt, thou miſtakeſt thy beſt friends for thy worſt enemies, thou and thy afflictions ſhall part more comfortably than you met.

4. If thou be in Chriſt, thy Treaſure is ſafe, thy eternal happineſs is out of the reach of all thine Enemies, Luke 12. 4. Luke 10. 42. And if that be ſafe, thou haſt no cauſe to be ſad; to droop and tremble at the hazard of earthly comforts, whilſt heavenly and eternal things are ſafe, is as if a man that had gotten his Pardon from the King, and had it ſafe in his Boſom, ſhould be found weeping upon the way home, becauſe he hath loſt his Staff or Glove. Theſe Reaſons are ſtrong againſt the dejections of God's people under outward troubles; but yet I am ſenſible that all the reaſoning in the world will not prevent their dejections, except they will take pains to clear up their Intereſt in God againſt ſuch a day, Pſal. 18. 2. and will act their Faith by way of adherence and dependence upon God in want of the former light and evidence, Iſa. 50. 10. And laſtly, that they keep their conſciences pure and inviolate, which will be a ſpring of comfort in the midſt of troubles, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

3. Conſect. Thirdly, It hence appears to be the greateſt folly and vanity in the world, to make any thing but God our refuge in the day of trouble. This practice, as you heard but now, is under God's Curſe, and that which is curſed of God, can never be comfortable to us. It is an honour peculiar to God, the right of Heaven, and therefore curſed Sacrilege to beſtow it on the Creature. We read of ſome that make Lyes their refuge, and hide themſelves under Falſhood, thinking when the overflowing Sourge comes it ſhall not come nigh unto them, Iſa. 28. 15. They will truſt to their Wits and Policies, they will fawn and flatter, lye and diſſemble, caſt themſelves into a thouſand ſhapes and forms to ſave themſelves; but all in vain, the Flood ſhall ſweep away their refuge of lyes. Others make riches their truſt and confidence, Prov. 10. 15. The rich man's wealth is his ſtrong City. If enemies come, their Money ſhall be their ranſom: but, oh! what a poor refuge will this be! It may betray, but cannot ſecure them. Behold, ſaith God, I will ſtir up the Medes againſt them, which ſhall not regard ſilver; and as for gold, they ſhall not delight in it, Iſa. 13. 17. Riches profit not in the day of wrath, Prov. 11. 4. Job bleſſed God in the day of his adverſity, that he had not made gold his hope, or the fine gold his confidence, Job 31. 24. Bleſs not thou thy ſelf that thou haſt ſuch things to beſtow thy hope and truſt upon. Others make men their refuge, eſpecially great and powerful men: but to how little purpoſe is it! Put not your truſt in Princes, nor in the ſon of man, in whom there is no help, Pſal. 146. 3, 4. They cannot keep their Crowns upon their Heads, no, nor their Heads upon their Shoulders; the greateſt Men are but Duſt, and what can Duſt do to Duſt? Three things aggravate their miſery, who miſplace their confidence by beſtowing it on any Creature. 1. That Creature will certainly deceive them; Men are deceitful Men, Pſal. 62. 9. Riches are deceitful Riches, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Every thing you lean on beſide God will ſtart aſide, like a deceitful Bow, Pſal. 78. 57. (2.) The diſappointment of your hopes from the Creature will enflame your affliction, and greatly aggravate your ſorrow, 2 Kings 18. 21. The broken reeds of Egypt will not only fail, but pierce you. (3.) In a word, God will take none into his protection, who make any thing beſides himſelf their hope and confidence; if we fly from God to the Creature, God will ſay to the Creature, Thou ſhalt go; except I have thy dependence, thou ſhalt never have my protection; where I have no honour, thou ſhalt have no comfort.

4 Conſect. Fourthly, The former Diſcourſe yields us alſo this comfortable concluſion, That whatever confuſions, deſolations, and troubles be in the earth, the Church and People of God can never be wholly exterminated and deſtroyed, ſeeing ſuch a ſecure refuge is prepared for them of God, Pſal. 102. 28. The Children of thy ſervants ſhall continue, and their ſeed ſhall be eſtabliſhed before thee. Which is aſſigned as the true reaſon of its perpetuity and ſafety, Pſal. 48. 3. God is known in her palaces for a refuge. The Church's Enemies have tried the utmoſt of their Policies and Powers in all Ages againſt it, but to no purpoſe: whilſt they have been plotting and perſecuting, the preſerved Remnant have been ſinging their Song upon Alamoth, even Praiſes to their great Preſerver; tho' they have no external viſible defence, yet are they as ſafe as Salvation it ſelf can make them, for ſalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks, Iſa. 26. 1, 2. Four things are exceeding remarkable in the Church's Preſervation: (1.) No people were ever ſo fiercely oppoſed by the Powers of this World, The Kings of the earth have ſet themſelves, and the Rulers have taken Counſel together, Pſal. 2. 2. All methods and artifices have been tryed, ſometimes to jeer and ſcoff them out of their Religion, ſo did the Apoſtate Julian: and ſometimes by cruel tortures to affright them from their Religion; the variety, and more than barbarous inhumanity whereof the Church hiſtories give us a ſad and amazing account. (2.) Under theſe cruel Perſecutions they have ſeemed to be utterly loſt, to the eye of ſenſe and reaſon; Iam left alone, ſaid Elijah, and they ſeek my life, 1 Kings 19. 10. By whom, Lord, ſhall Jacob ariſe, ſaid Amos, for he is very ſmall? Amos 7. 2. (3.) Notwithſtanding all which, the Church hath out-lived all its dangers; it is the true Phœnix which hath out-lived the Deluge. (4.) Such deliverances are proper and peculiar to the Church alone; no people, beſides the people of God, have ſuch Salvations upon Record. The great and famous Monarchies of the World have daſh'd one another to pieces, like earthen Potſheards.

——Sic Medus ademit
Aſſyrio, Syroque tulit moderamina Perſes.

And all this by vertue of that promiſe, Jer. 30. 11. For I am with thee, ſaith the Lord, to ſave thee; tho' I make a full end of all Nations whither I have ſcattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee.

5 Conſect. Fifthly, to conclude: If this be ſo, then it is a deep and dangerous policy of Satan to ſhut up our refuge in God againſt us, as much as may be in times of trouble. Satan, like a cunning Fowler, deſpairs of getting the Birds in his Net, except he can beat them out of their coverts; it is therefore his great deſign, to eſtrange and alienate the Saints from their God, as much as he can, thereby to cut off their retreat to him in times of trouble; a miſchief which the people of God have always vehemently deprecated, Pſal. 102. 2. Jer. 17. 17. and oh that we would beware of it, and ſhun this miſchief, by our ſeaſonable preventing watchfulneſs. There are, among others, three ſpecial Projects of Satan, whereby he manages this miſchievous deſign againſt the people of God.

1. By drawing their Conſciences under guilt, on purpoſe to deſtroy the liberty, freedom, and child-like confidence of their Souls, in their addreſſes to God. This, if any thing in the world will do it, Job 11. 14, 15. What a loſs will that poor Soul be at, in times of trouble, whoſe grumbling and condemning conſcience will not ſuffer him to look up chearfully and believingly in the face of its God and Father, having loſt its ancient freedom at the Throne of Grace?

2. By prevailing with them to neglect and intermit the courſe of their daily duties, and thereby to let down their communion with God, and in a great meaſure loſe their acquaintance with him. This is a dangerous Policy of the Devil, and an unſpeakable prejudice to the Soul. Oh Chriſtian! take heed of a lazy ſlothful ſpirit, or a vain and earthly heart, which will eaſily ſuffer the Duties of Religion to be joſtled aſide, and put by for every trivial occaſion; eſpecially beware of ſlight, formal, ſuperficial and dead-hearted performances of duty, which is little better than the intermiſſion of them, it may indeed prevent the ſcandal, but can never give thee the comfort of Religion.

3. By beclouding their intereſt in God, and darkening their titles and evidences, by thick clouds of doubts and fears. This is the ſad caſe of many a poor Chriſtian in a day of trouble, without fightings, within fears. Brethren, I beſeech you, think often what thoſe things are, which uſually put men into ſuch frights and ſtreights, when imminent dangers ſtare them in the face, what it is that daunts and damps the hearts of Chriſtians at ſuch times; and as you value the peace and freedom of your Souls with God, give not matter for your conſciences to reproach you of miſ-ſpent time, indulged ſins, neglected duties, formality or hypocriſie in duties, ſiniſter, and by-ends in your tranſactions with God or Man: preſerve the purity and peace of your conſciences, as you would preſerve your two eyes; if by ſuch wiles the Devil cannot bar you from your God, or ſhut up your refuge in him, your outward troubles can do you no hurt.

The Second Uſe, of Direction and Advice.

Sect. II. The Providence of God in theſe days, giving us ſuch loud warnings of approaching judgment; how are all that are wiſe in heart, and of underſtanding of the times, now more-eſpecially concerned to clear their intereſt in theſe bleſſed Attributes of God, which have here been opened, as their only refuge in the evil day. Let me therefore perſuade and preſs you to betake your ſelves to God, your Refuge and ſtrong Hold in Trouble, and that more-eſpecially in theſe two great Duties, viz.

1. Of fervent Supplication.
2. Of univerſal Reſignation.

1. Betake your ſelves to God by fervent Prayer and Supplication. Let me ſay of theſe Times, as holy Mr. Perkins did of his, Non ſunt iſta litigandi, ſed orandi tempora; Theſe are no times for Chriſtians to contend and ſtrive one with another, but with their united cries to ſtrive with God, and, among other requeſts, ſtrongly to enforce and follow home that of David, Pſal. 71. 2, 3. Deliver me in thy righteouſneſs, and cauſe me to eſcape; incline thine ear unto me, and ſave me; be thou my ſtrong habitation, whereunto I may continually reſort. That's a true and weighty obſervation of Auſtin, Non facilè inveniuntur præſidia in adverſitate, quæ non fuerint in pace quæſita; A refuge is not to be found in trouble, except it be provided before-hand in peace. For this, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, ſhall every one that is godly pray unto thee, in a time when thou maiſt be found, ſurely in the floods of great waters they ſhall not come nigh unto him, Pſal. 32. 6. Had not Noah prepared and ſecured himſelf in the Ark, before the floods of great water came, he had not ſate, as he did, mediis tranquillus in undis; ſleeping quietly, when others were periſhing in the waters. Gather your ſelves therefore together, before the Decree bring forth; ſeek the Lord, all ye meek of the Earth, be more frequent, and more fervent in Prayer, now than ever; you have all the encouragements in the world to incite you to this Duty: the nature of your God is exceeding pitiful, tender, and compaſſionate, Jam. 5. 11. The endeared relations betwixt God and you give ſingular encouragement of ſucceſs: Shall not God hear his his own Elect, which cry unto him day and night? Luke 18. 7. The ſweet returns and anſwers of former Prayers are ſo many motives and encouragements to follow cloſe that thriving Trade; Pſal. 52. 1, 2, 3. And above all, your prevalent Advocate in the Heavens ſhould encourage you to come frequently and boldly to the Throne of Grace, that you may obtain Mercy, and find Grace, to help in the time of need, Heb. 4. 16. In two things I ſhall briefly offer a little direction here, viz.

1. As to the matter } of Prayer.
2. As to the manner }

1. As to the matter of Prayer, I mean ſuch as the ſtate and condition of the times, now more eſpecially, ſuggeſt.

(1.) Unite your Prayers, and cry mightily to the Lord, that if it be his good pleaſure, this cup of wrath which ſeems to be mingled and prepared, may paſs from his People. Now cry to God, as they are directed to do, Joel 2. 17. Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen ſhou'd rule over them: wherefore ſhould they ſay among the people, Where is their God? O pray, That England may not be delivered into the hands of blood-thirſty Papiſts, that the golden Candleſtick may not be removed, that Idolatry may not return into thoſe places where God hath been ſo ſweetly worſhipped; that a Land ſo peculiarly bleſſed with Goſpel-light, wherein ſo many thouſand Sons, and Daughters, have been born to God, may not at laſt become an Aceldama, a great Shambles, to quarter out the Limbs of his dear Saints; that the pleaſant Plant of Reformation, planted with his own right hand, and watered with ſo many Tears, yea with ſo much blood, may not at laſt be rooted up by the wild Boar out of the Foreſt!

(2.) Pray indeſinently, That you may be kept from the ſins and temptations of the times. O watch and pray, that you enter not into temptation; if you cannot prevail with God, to turn away his Anger, yet be importunate with him, that you may be kept from Sin, that if you loſe your outward Peace, you may be able to keep inward Peace, that you may never ſacrifice your Conſciences, to ſave your Fleſh, that you may never fall under the diſpleaſure of God, to avoid the rage of Men. Ah Friends, we little think what a fearful havock an hour of temptation will make in ſuch a profeſſing Nation as this is; then ſhall many be offended. Matth. 24. 10. O pray, that you may never give offence to others, by ſcandal, or take offence your ſelves at the ways of God, whatever ſufferings and ſharp Tryals ſhall come.

(3.) Pray earneſtly for the ſanctification of all your troubles, to your eternal good; an unſanctified comfort never did any man good, and a ſanctified trouble never did any man hurt; be more earneſt therefore with God, rather to have your troubles ſanctified, than prevented; to get the bleſſing, than to avoid the ſmart of them; if they cannot be turned away from you, pray they may be turned to your ſalvation.

2. Betake your ſelves to God your refuge by Faith, reſigning and committing all into his Hands, Now the juſt ſhall live by faith, Heb. 10. 38. The more you can truſt God, the more you ſecure your ſelves from danger; he that can live by Faith, ſhall never die by Fear, and be ſure to inform your ſelves well in two things, viz.

1. What it is to truſt God over all.
2. What grounds you have ſo to do.

1. Be well inſtructed in the Nature of this Duty, there are ſix things imported in ſuch Acts, of Reſignation.

1. An awakened ſenſe of our dangers and hazards. At what time I am afraid I will truſt in thee, Pſal. 56. 3. Suffering times are reſigning times, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their ſouls to him in well doing; as unto a faithful creator. And the greater and nearer our dangers are, the more frequent and vigorous ſhould the actings of our faith this way be; Be not far from me, for trouble is near.

2. Reſignation to God neceſſarily implies our renunciation, and diſclaiming of all other refuges. Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, we will not ride upon horſes, neither will we ſay any more to the work of our hands, ye are our Gods, for in thee the fatherleſs findeth mercy, Hoſ. 14. 3. He that relies upon God, muſt ceaſe from Man; reſignation to God excludes not the uſe of lawful Means, but it doth exclude dependence upon them.

3. Reſignation to God is always grounded upon an intereſt in God, we have no warrant, nor encouragement to expect protection from him in trouble, except we can come to him as Children to a Father: It is the filial relation that gives encouragement to this fiducial reſignation, and the clearer that relation and intereſt is, the more bold and confident thoſe acts of Faith will be, Pſal. 86. 2. Preſerve my ſoul, for I am holy. O thou my God ſave thy ſervant that truſteth in thee. And again, Pſal. 119. 94. I am thine, ſave me. I ſpeak not here of the firſt act of Faith, which flows not from an intereſt, but gives the Soul an intereſt in God. Nor do I ſay that poor doubting and timorous Believers whoſe intereſt in him is dark and dubious, have no warrant to reſign themſelves and their concernments into his hands, for it is both their Right and Duty to do it: But certainly the clearer our intereſt is, the more facile and comfortable will thoſe Acts be.

4. The committing acts of Faith imply a full acknowledment and owning of God's Power to protect us, be the danger never ſo imminent, Pſal. 31. 15. My times are in thy hand, deliver me from the hands of mine enemies, and from them that perſecute me. q. d. O Lord I am fully ſatisfied, my life is not at the diſpoſe of mine enemies, 'tis not in their hands, but in thine; all the traps and ſnares they lay for it ſhall not ſhorten one minute of my time, I know thine hand is fully able to protect me, and therefore into thine hands I reſign my ſelf, and all I have.

5. Reſignation involves in it an expectation of help and ſafety from God, when we ſee no way of ſecurity from Men. O Lord, ſaith Jehoſhaphat, We have no might nor no ſtrength, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are unto thee, 2 Chron. 20. 12. So David, Pſal. 62. 5, 6. My ſoul wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him, he only is my rock and my ſalvation, he is my defence I ſhall not be moved.

6. Reſignation to God implies the leaving of our ſelves and our concernments with him to be diſpoſed of according to his good pleaſure; the reſigning Soul deſires the Lord to do with him what he will, and is content to take what Lot divine pleaſure ſhall caſt for him, 2 Sam. 15. 25. And the King ſaid unto Zadok, carry back the Ark of God into the City, if I ſhall find favour in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again and ſhew me both it and his habitation; but if he thus ſay, I have no delight in thee, behold, here am I, let him him do to me as ſeemeth good unto him. And ſo much of the Nature of this Duty, that we may underſtand what to do.

2. Next let me ſhew you what encouragements you that are the People of God, have to this duty, and they will appear to be great and many.

The Soverignty and abſolute Dominion of God over all Creatures, is a ſingular encouragement to all, Pſal. 59. 9. Becauſe of his ſtrength will I wait upon thee, for God is my defence. If a man were in danger amidſt a great Army of rude and inſolent Souldiers, and were to put himſelf under the protection of any one, it would be his wiſdom to chuſe to do it under the General who had all the Souldiers of his Army at his Beck. Chriſtian, thy God unto whoſe hands thou committeſt thy ſelf, is Lord General of all the Hoſts and Armies in Heaven and Earth; how ſafe muſt thou then be in his hands?

2. The unſearchable and perfect Wiſdom of God is a mighty encouragement to commit our ſelves into his hands, with him is plenteous redemption, Pſal. 130. ult. i. e. Choice and variety of ways and methods to ſave his people; we are, but God never is at a loſs to find a door for our eſcape, 2 Pet. 2. 9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation.

3. The infinite tenderneſs and compaſſionateneſs of our God is a ſweet encouragement to reſign and commit our ſelves and all we have into his hands, his mercy is incomparably tender towards his people, infinitely beyond whatever any creature felt ſtirring in its own bowels towards another that came out of its bowels, Iſa. 49. 15. This compaſſion of God engageth the two forementioned Attributes, viz. his Power and Wiſdom, for the preſervation and relief of his people, as often as diſtreſſes befall them. Yea,

4. The very diſtreſſes his people are in, do, as it were, awake the Almighty power of God for their defence and reſcue; our diſtreſſes are not only proper ſeaſons, but powerful motives to his ſaving power, Deut. 36. For the Lord ſhall judge his people, and repent himſelf for his ſervants, when he ſeeth that their power is gone, and there is none ſhut up or left. God makes it an argument to himſelf, and his people Plead it as an argument with him, be not far from me, for trouble is near, for there is none to help.

5. We have already committed greater and weightier concernments into his hand than the deareſt intereſt we have in this World, we have intruſted our ſouls with him, 1 Pet. 4. 19. 2 Tim. 1. 12. Well therefore may we commit the leſſer, who have intruſted the greater with him; what are our lives, liberties, eſtates, and relations, compared with our Souls, and the eternal ſafety and happineſs of them!

6. The committing act of Faith is the great and only expedient to procure and ſecure the peace and tranquility of our minds, amidſt the diſtractions and troubles of the preſent World; the greateſt part of our affliction and trouble in ſuch days, is from the working of our own thoughts; theſe torments from within are worſe than any from without; and the reſignation of all to God by Faith is their beſt and only cure, Prov. 16. 3. Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts ſhall be eſtabliſhed. A bleſſed calmneſs of mind, a ſweet tranquility and ſettlement of thoughts follows immediately hereupon, Iſa. 94. 19. Oh then, leave all with God, and quietly expect a comfortable iſſue; and for the better ſettlement, and ſecurity of thy peace in times of diſtraction and trouble, I beſeech thee, Reader, carefully to watch and guard againſt theſe two evils.

1. Caution. Beware of Infidelity and diſtruſtfulneſs of God and his Promiſes, which ſecretly lurks in thy heart, and is hugely apt to bewray it ſelf; when great diſtreſſes and troubles befall thee, thou wilt know it by ſuch Symptoms as theſe. 1. In an over haſty and eager deſire after preſent deliverance, Iſa. 51. 14. The captive exile haſteneth that he may be looſed, and that he ſhould not die in the pit, nor that his bread ſhould fail. The leſs Faith, always the more impatience, and the more ability to believe, the more patience to wait. 2. It will diſcover it ſelf in our readineſs to cloſe with and catch at ſinful mediums and methods of deliverance, Iſa. 30. 15, 16. And this is the handle of temptation and occaſion of Apoſtacy. But he that believeth will not make haſte, Iſa. 26. 18. No more haſte than good ſpeed. 3. It will ſhew it ſelf, in diſtracting cares and fears about events, which will rack the mind with various and endleſs tortures.

2. Caution. Beware of dejection and deſpondency of mind in evil times, take heed of a poor low ſpirit, that will preſently ſink and give up its hope upon every appearance and face of trouble; it is a promiſe made unto the righteous, Pſal. 112. 7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tidings, his heart is fixed truſting in the Lord. The truſting of God fixes the heart, and the fixing of the heart fortifies it againſt Fear: but I know what many poor Chriſtians will ſay in this caſe, their timorouſneſs and deſpondency ariſes not ſo much from the greatneſs of outward evils, as from the darkneſs and doubtfulneſs of their Spiritual and inward condition, which doubtleſs is the very truth of the caſe, which brings me to the laſt uſe of this point.

Uſe the Third.

Search and examine your hearts, Chriſtians, whether thoſe graces and qualifications to which God hath promiſed protection in evil times may not be found upon an impartial ſearch in your hearts; amongſt which I will ſingle out three principal ones, as the proper matters of your ſelf examination, viz.

1. Uprightneſs of Heart and Way.
2. Humiliation for your own and others ſins.
3. Righteouſneſs in doing and meekneſs in ſuffering the Will of God.

1. Uprightneſs and Integrity of heart and way. To this qualification belong many ſweet promiſes of protection, ſuch is that Prov. 2. 7. He is a buckler to them that walk uprightly, Pſal. 7. 10. My defence is of God, which ſaveth the upright in heart. If your hearts be true to God, theſe promiſes ſhall be truly performed to you, but beware you deceive not your ſelves in ſo great a point as this is; thy heart cannot be an upright heart, except, (1.) It be a renewed heart; the Natural heart is always a falſe heart, 'tis only regeneration that gives the heart a right temper and frame; all the duties and labours in the world can never keep that heart right in its courſe, which is not firſt ſet right for God by a principle of renovation. (2.) We cannot judge our ſelves upright, except uprightneſs be the ſetled frame and ſtanding bent of our hearts, Pſal. 119. 112, 117. It is not our integrity in one or two ſingle actions, but in the general courſe, and complex frame of our lives and ways, that will prove our integrity to God. (3.) Then may we reckon our ſelves upright, when the dread and awe of God's all-ſeeing eye keeps our hearts and ſteps from turning aſide to iniquity, quity, Gen. 39. 9. 2 Cor. 2, 17. That's a ſincere and upright heart indeed, that finds it ſelf at all times and in all places overawed from ſin, by the eye of God upon him. (4.) That man's heart alſo is upright with God, who purely aims at and deſigns the glory of God, as the ſcope and end of his life and actions, who lives not to himſelf, neither acts ultimately and principally for himſelf, but lives to God as a perſon dedicated and devoted to him, Rom. 14. 7 (5.) That heart alſo is upright with God, which governs it ſelf and its ways by the directions and rules of the Word, Pſal. 119. 11, 24, 133. Happy is that Soul that finds ſuch evidences of Integrity in it ſelf, when it is brought to the trial of it at the Bar of the Word, Heb. 4. 12. at the Bar of Conſcience, 2 Cor. 1. 12. at the Bar of Afflictions, Pſal. 119. 87. and at the Bar of ſtrong Temptations, Gen. 39. 9. The Eyes of the Lord ſhall run to and fro through the whole Earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of ſuch whoſe hearts are thus perfect towards him.

2. Another gracious qualification, intitling the Soul to God's ſpecial Protection in the worſt and moſt dangerous times, is the true humiliation for our own and other Mens ſins: Go, ſet a mark, ſaith God, upon the foreheads of the men that ſigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midſt thereof Ezek. 9. 4. Theſe that thus mourn, when others laugh, ſhall laugh when others mourn. Lot was the only Mourner in Sodom, and he was the only perſon exempted from deſtruction in the ruin and overthrow thereof, 2 Pet. 2. 7. That's a ſweet and bleſſed privilege mentioned in Iſa. 66. 10. Rejoice ye with Jeruſalem, and be glad with her all ye that love her rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her, that ye may ſuck and be ſatisfied with the breaſts of her conſolations, that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory. Be contented, Chriſtians, to bear your part in Sion's groans and ſorrows, you may live to bear your part in her triumphs and ſongs of deliverance; it is an Argument of the true publickneſs and tenderneſs of your Spirits for preſent, and as ſweet a ſign as can appear upon your Souls, that you are reſerved for better days.

3. Righteouſneſs in doing, and meekneſs in ſuffering the Will of God, is another Mark or Note, diſtinguiſhing and deſcribing thoſe perſons whom God will preſerve in the evil day. You have both theſe together in Zeph. 2. 3. Seek ye the Lord, all ye the meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgments, ſeek Righteouſneſs, ſeek Meekneſs; it may be ye ſhall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their Prayers, 1 Pet. 3. 12. If righteouſneſs brings you into danger, the righteous God will take care of you in that danger, and bring you out of it. Oh! tis a ſingular comfort, when a man can ſay, It was not my Sin, but my Duty, that brought me into trouble; this Affliction met me in the path and way of my duty; 'tis for thy ſake, O Lord, that I am in trouble; as the Martyr that held up the Bible at the Stake, ſaying, This hath brought me hither.

To conclude, Manage all your Sufferings for Chriſt with Chriſtian Meekneſs: A Righteouſneſs muſt bring you into them, ſo Meekneſs muſt carry you through them; if you avenge your ſelves, you take the Cauſe out of God's hand into your own, but the meek Chriſtian leaves it to the Lord, and ſhall never have cauſe to repent of his ſo doing. If thou have an upright heart with God, a tender and mournful heart for ſin, and thou ſuffer with Meekneſs for Righteouſneſs-ſake, thou art one of thoſe Souls to whom that ſweet Voice is directed in my Text, Come, my People, enter thou into thy Chambers, and ſhut thy doors about thee; hide thy ſelf, as it were, for a little moment, until the indignation be over-paſt.

ΠΑΑΝΗΛΟΓΙΑ.

A Succinct and Seaſonable DISCOURSE of the Occaſions, Cauſes, Nature, Riſe, Growth, and Remedies of MENTAL ERRORS.

THE Reverend Author of the enſuing Treatiſes, having in them explained and defended ſeveral Goſpel-Truths, unto which divers things in the Writings of the Reverend Dr. Criſp deceaſed, do ſeem very oppoſite; whereas ſome of us who ſubſcribed a Paper, the deſign whereof was only to teſtify, That we believed certain Writings of the Doctor's never before publiſhed, were faithfully tranſcribed by his Son, the Publiſher of them; which Paper is now, by the Bookſeller, prefixed to the whole Volume, containing a large Preface, which we never ſaw till after the Publication, together with all the Doctor's former Works that were publiſhed many years before; and are hereupon, by ſome weak People, miſunderſtood, as if by that Certificate, we intended an Approbation of all that is contained in that Volume. We declare, we had no ſuch Intention: As the Paper we ſubſcribed hath no word in it that gives any ſuch intimation: But are all well pleaſed theſe latter Writings are publiſh'd (in reference whereto we only certified our belief, which we fixedly retain, of the Publiſher's fidelity) as they contain many paſſages in them, that may in ſome meaſure remedy the hard and hurtful conſtruction that many expreſſions were more liable to in the former; whereof the Doctor ſeem'd apprehenſive himſelf, when in the beginning of his Diſcourſe, on Tit. 2. 11, 12. he ſpeaks thus: [Beloved, I am jealous of you with an holy jealouſie, 1 Cor. 11. 2, 3. Leſt after the ſweet wooing of you in Chriſt's Name, that ye might be eſpouſed unto him; I ſay, I am jealous, and fear, leſt as the Serpent beguiled Eve, through his ſubtilty, namely, bewitching her to a preſumptuous licentious adventuring on God's gentleneſs, while ſhe taſted the forbidden Fruit; ſo your minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in him, namely by preſuming too much upon him, and adventuring to conti- me in Sin, in hope that Grace may abound. For the preventing of which dangerous miſcarriage, which hath been the dangerous lot of many Thouſands, I thought good to ſtep in with this Text, which I am perſuaded will prove a ſeaſonable warning to ſome at leaſt.] And this pious Caution of the Author herein, leſt he ſhould be miſunderſtood, gives us ſome grounds to believe, that he intended them not in the more exceptionable ſenſe. 'Tis beſt, if any unwary Reader receive hurt, that he receive his healing alſo from the ſame hand. And whereas a Paper was printed upon this occaſion, ſoon after the Publication of the Doctor's Works, we willingly adopt ſo much of it as is requiſite to our own preſent purpoſe, which is to this effect:

'Some who ſubſcribed this Certificate, ſaw only the Paper it ſelf, to which Subſcription was deſired; never having peruſed the Works of Dr. Criſp. The Certificate only concerned the Son, not the Father; and certified only concerning the Son, That they who ſhould ſubſcribe it, believed him in this, to deal truly; that he was not a Falſarius; that he would not ſay that was his Father's, which was not ſo; a Paper ſo ſober, ſo modeſt, was (taken by it ſelf) ſcarce refuſable by a Friend.

'The Son's Preface, ſome that ſubſcribed this Certificate, ſaw not, nor had any notice, or the leaſt imagination of its Contents, otherwiſe the part of a Friend had certainly been done, as well in adviſing againſt much of the Preface as in ſubſcribing the Certificate.

'For the Works of this Reverend Perſon themſelves, as it no way concern'd the ſubſcribing this Certificate, to know what they were; ſo from the opinion that went of the Author, among many good Men, That he was a Learned, Pious, Good Man, it was ſuppoſed they were likely to have in them many good and uſeful things; to which it was only needful to think them his, not to think them perfect.

'We may in ſome reſpect judge of Books as of Men, i. e. reckon, that though divers very valuable Men, have had remarkable failings; yet that upon the whole, 'tis better they have lived and been known in the World, than that they ſhould not have lived, or have lived obſcure.

'The Truth is (which we have often conſidered) that though the great Doctrines of Chriſtian Religion do make a moſt cohèrent, comely Scheme, which every one ſhould labour to comprehend and digeſt in his mind; yet when the Goſpel firſt becomes effectual for the changing mens hearts, 'tis by God's Bleſſing this or that paſſage which drops; the moſt diſcern not the ſeries and connection of Truths at firſt, and too little afterwards.

'Upon that view of Dr. Criſp's Writings we have had ſince the Publication, we find there are many things ſaid in them, with that good ſavour, quickneſs, and ſpirit, as to be very apt to make good impreſſions upon men's hearts; and do judge, that being greatly affected with the Grace of God to Sinners himſelf, his Sermons did thereupon run much in that ſtrain. All our minds are little, and incomprehenſive; we cannot receive the weight and impreſſion of all neceſſary things at once, but with ſome inequality; ſo that when the Seal goes deeper in ſome part, 'tis the ſhallower in ſome others.

'If ſome parts of Dr. Criſp's Works be more liable to exception, the danger of hurt thereby ſeems in ſome meaſure obviated in ſome other: As when he ſays, p. 46. Vol. 1. Sanctification of Life, is an inſeparable Companion with the Juſtification of a Perſon by the Free Grace of Chriſt: And Vol. 4. p. 93. That in reſpect of the Rules of Righteouſneſs, or the Matter of Obedience, we are under the Law ſtill, or elſe we are Lawleſs, to live every Man as ſeems good in his own eyes, which I know no true Chriſtian does ſo much as think.

'In like manner, whereas, Vol. 2. Serm. 15. and perhaps elſewhere, the Doctor ſeems to be againſt evidencing our Juſtification and Union to Chriſt, by our Sanctification and new Obedience; we have the Truth of God in this matter plainly deliver'd by him. Vol. 4. p. 36. when he teacheth, that our Obedience is a comfortable evidence of our being in Chriſt; and on that, as well as on many accounts, neceſſary.

'The difference between him and other good men, ſeems to lie not ſo much in the things, which the one or other of them believe, as about their order and reference to one another; where 'tis true, there may be very material difference: but we reckon, That notwithſtanding what is more controverſible in theſe Writings, there are much more material things, wherein they cannot but agree, and would have come much nearer each other, even in theſe things, if they did take ſome words or terms which come into uſe on the one or the other hand, in the ſame ſenſe; but when one uſes a word in one ſenſe, another uſes the ſame word (or underſtands it, being uſed) in quite another ſenſe, here ſeems a vaſt diſagreement, which proves at length to be verbal only, and really none at all: As let by Condition, be meant a deſerving Cauſe, (in which Caſe 'tis well known Civilians are not wont to take it) and the one ſide would never uſe it, concerning any good Act that can be done by us, or good Habit that is wrought in us, in order to our preſent acceptance with God, or final Salvation. Let be meant by it, ſomewhat, that by the conſtitution of the Goſpel-Covenant, and in the nature of the thing is requiſite to our preſent and eternal well-being, without the leaſt notion of deſert, but utmoſt abhorrence of any ſuch notion in this caſe, and the other ſide would as little refuſe it. But what need is there for contending at all about a Law-Term, about the proper or preſent uſe whereof, there is ſo little agreement between them it ſeems beſt to ſerve, and them it offends. Let it go, and they will well enough underſtand one another. Again, Let Juſtification be taken for that which is compleat, entire, and full, as it reſults at laſt from all its Cauſes and Concurrents, and on the one hand it would never be denied, that Chriſt's Righteouſneſs juſtifies us at the Bar of God in the Day of Judgment, as the only deſerving Cauſe; or affirmed, that our Faith, Repentance, Sincerity, do juſtifie us there, as any Cauſe at all. Let Juſtification be meant only of being juſtified in this or that particular reſpect; as for inſtance againſt this particular Accuſation, of never having been a Believer: and the honeſt miſtaken Prefacer would never have ſaid, O horrid! upon its being ſaid, Chriſt's Righteouſneſs doth not juſtifie us in this Caſe: For he very well knows Chriſt's Righteouſneſs will juſtifie no man that never was a Believer; but that which muſt immediately juſtifie him againſt this particular Accuſation, muſt be proving

'proving, that he did ſincerely believe, which 'ſhews his intereſt in Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, which 'then is the only deſerving Cauſe of his full entire Juſtification.

'There is an Expreſſion in Vol. I. p. 46. That Salvation is not the end of any good work we do, which is like that of another; we are to act from Life, not for Life. Neither of which are to be rigidly taken, as 'tis likely they were never meant in the ſtrict ſenſe. For the former, this Reverend Author gives us himſelf the handle, for a gentle interpretation, in what he preſently ſubjoins, where he makes the end of our good works to be the manifeſtation of our Obedience and Subjection; the ſetting forth the praiſe of the glory of the Grace of God; which ſeems to imply, that he meant the foregoing negation in a comparative, not in an abſolute ſenſe; underſtanding the glory of God to be more principal; and ſo that by End he meant the very ultimate end: ſo for the other 'tis likely it was meant, that we ſhould not act or work for life only, without aiming and endeavouring, that we might come to work from life alſo.

'For it is not with any tolerable Charity ſuppoſable, that one would deliberately ſay the one or the other of theſe in the rigid ſenſe of the words; or that he would not, upon conſideration, preſently unſay it, being calmly reaſoned with. For it were in effect to abandon Humane Nature, and to ſin againſt a very Fundamental Law of our Creation, not to intend our own felicity; it were to make our firſt and moſt deeply Fundamental Duty, in one great eſſential branch of it, our ſin, viz. To take the Lord for our God: For to take him for our God moſt eſſentially includes our taking him for our ſupream good; which we all know is included in the notion of the laſt end; it were to make it unlawful to ſtrive againſt all Sin, and particularly againſt ſinful Averſion from God; wherein lies the very death of the Soul, or the ſum of its miſery; or to ſtrive after perfect conformity to God in holineſs, and the full fruition of him, wherein its final bleſſedneſs doth principally conſiſt.

'It were to teach us to violate the great Precepts of the Goſpel; Repent, that your ſins may be blotted out---Strive to enter in at the Strait Gate---Work out your Salvation with fear and trembling: To obliterate the Paterns and Precedents ſet before us in the Goſpel. We have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified---I beat down my body, leſt I ſhould be a caſt-away---That thou mayeſt ſave thy ſelf, and them that hear thee.

'It were to ſuppoſe one bound to do more for 'the Salvation of others, than our own Salvation. 'We are required to ſave others with Fear plucking them out of the Fire. Nay, we were not (by this rule ſtrictly underſtood) ſo much as to pray for our own Salvation; (which is a doing of ſomewhat) when no doubt, we are to pray for the ſucceſs of the Goſpel, to this purpoſe, on behalf of other men.

'Twere to make all the Threatnings of Eternal Death, and Promiſes of Eternal Life, we find in the Goſpel of our Bleſſed Lord uſeleſs, unleſs, as motives to ſhun the one, and obtain the other: For they can be motives no way but as the eſcaping of the former, and the attainment of the other have with us the place and conſideration of an end.

'It makes what is mentioned in the Scripture, as the Character and Commendation of the moſt eminent Saints, a fault; as of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, &c. That they ſought the better and Heavenly Country; and declared plainly that they did ſo: which neceſſarily implies their making it their end.

'But let none be ſo harſh as to think of any good man, that he intended any thing of all this; if every paſſage that falls from us be ſtretch'd and tortur'd with utmoſt ſeverity, we ſhall find little to do beſides accuſing others, and defending our ſelves as long as we live.

A Spirit of Meekneſs and Love, will do more to our Common Peace, than all the Diſputations in the World.

Upon the whole, we are ſo well aſſured of the peaceful healing temper of the preſent Author of theſe Treatiſes, that we are perſuaded he deſigned ſuch a courſe of managing the Controverſies wherein he hath concerned himſelf, as not on the one hand to injure the memory of the Dead; and on the other to prevent hurt or danger to the Living.

Nor do we ſay thus much of him as if he ſought, or did need any Letters of Recommendation from us; but as counting this Teſtimony to Truth, and this expreſſion of reſpect to him a Debt; to the ſpontaneous payment whereof, nothing more was requiſite beſides ſuch a fair occaſion as the Providence of God hath now laid before us, inviting us hereunto.

John Howe, Vin. Alſop, Nath. Mather, Increaſe Mather, John Turner, Rich. Bures, Tho. Powel.

An Epiſtle to the Reader.

Candid Reader,

CEnſure not this Treatiſe of Errors, as an Error in my Prudentials, in ſending it forth at ſuch an improper time as this. I ſhould never ſpontaneouſly have awakened ſleeping Controverſies, after God's ſevere caſtigation of his people for them, and in the moſt proper and hopeful Seaſon for their Redintegration.

And beſide what I have formerly ſaid, I think fit here to add, That if the attaque had been general, and not ſo immediately and particularly upon that Poſt or Quarter I was ſet to defend, I ſhould with Elihu have modeſtly waited till ſome abler and more skilful hand had undertaken the defence of this Cauſe.

If ever I felt a temptation to envy the happineſs of my Brethren, it hath been whilſt I ſaw them quietly feeding their Flocks, and my ſelf forced to ſpend ſome part of my precious and moſt uſeful time (devoted to the ſame Service) in combating with unquiet and erring Brethren: But I ſee I muſt not be my own chuſer. Notwithſtanding, I hope, and am in ſome meaſure perſuaded, that publick benefit will redound to the Church from this irkſome Labour of mine. And that this ſtrife will ſpread no further, but the Malady be cured by an Antidote growing in the very place where it began: And that the Chriſtian Camp will not take a general Alarm from ſuch a ſingle Duel.

The Book now in thy Hands consisteth of Four parts, viz. 1. A general Discourse of the Causes and Cures of Errors, very necessary at all times (especially at this time) for the reduction and establishment of seduced and staggering Christians; and nothing of that nature having occurred to my observation among the manifold Polemical Tracts that are extant, I thought it might be of some use to the Churches of Christ in such a vertiginous Age as we live in; and the blessing of the Lord go forth with it for benefit and establishment.

2. Next, thou hast here the Controversies moved by my Antagonist, first about the Mosaick Law complexly taken, which he boldly pronounces to be an Adam's Covenant of Works and secondly about God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17, which he also makes the same with that God made with Adam in Paradise: and affirms Circumcision (expresly called a Seal of the Righteousness of Faith) to be the Seal of the said Covenant of Works first made with Adam.

3. Finding my Adversary in the pursuit of his design, running into many Antinomian delirations, to the reproach and damage of the Cause he contends for, I thought it necessary to take the principal Errors of Antinomianism into examination, especially at such a time as this, when they seem to spring afresh, to the hazard of God's Truth, and the Churches Peace; wherein I have dealt with becoming modesty and plainness, if haply I might be any way instrumental in my plain and home way of Argumentation, to detect the falsity and dangerous Nature of those notions which some good men have vented; and preserve the sounder part of the Church from so dangerous a contagion.

4. In the next place I think it necessary to advertise the Reader, That whereas in my first Appendix under that head of the Conditionality of the New Covenant, I have asserted Faith to be the Condition of it, and do acknowledge, p. 246. that the word Condition is variously used among Jurists; yet I do not use it in any sense, which implies or insinuates, that there is any such Condition in the New Covenant, as that in Adam's Covenant was, consisting in perfect, personal, and perpetual Obedience; or any thing in its own Nature meritorious of the benefits promised, or capable to be performed by us in our own strength; but plainly, that it be an act of ours (tho' done in God's strength) which must be necessarily done before we can be actually justified or saved; and so there is found in it the true suspending nature of a Condition; which is the thing I contend for, when I affirm, Faith is the condition of the New Covenant.

How many senses soever may be given of this word Condition, this is the determinate sense in which I use it throughout this Controversie. And whosoever denies the suspending Nature of Faith, with respect to actual Justification, pleads according to my understanding) for the actual Justification of Infidels. And thus I find a Condition defined by Navar. Johan. Baptist. Petrus de Perus. &c. Conditio est Suspensio alicujus dispositionis tantisper dum aliquid futurum fiat. And again, Conditio est quidam futurus eventus, in quem dispositio suspenditur.

Once more, My Reader possibly may be stumbled at my calling Faith sometimes the Instrument, and sometimes the Condition of our Justification, when there is so great a Controversie depending among Learned Men, with respect to the use of both those terms. I therefore desire the Reader to take notice, That I dive not into that Controversy here, much less presume to determine it; but finding both those Notions equally opposed by our Antinomians, who reject our actual Justification by Faith either way, and allow to Faith no other use in our actual Justification, but only to manifest to us what was done from Eternity; I do therefore use both those terms, viz. the Conditionality and Instrumentality of Faith, with respect unto our Justification, and shew in what sense those terms are useful in this Controversy, and are accommodate enough to the design and purpose for which I use them, how repugnant soever they are in that particular, wherein the Learned contend about the Use and Application of them.

To be plain, when I say, Faith justifieth us as an Organ or Instrument; my only meaning is, that it receives, or apprehends the Righteousness of Christ, by which we are justified; and so speaking to the Quomodo, or manner of our Justification, I say with the general Suffrage of Divines, we are justified instrumentally by Faith.

But in our Controversy with the Antinomians, where another different Question is moved about the Quando, or time of our actual Justification; there I affirm, that we are actually justified at the time of our believing, and not before; and this being the Act upon which our Justification is suspended, I call Faith the Condition of our Justification.

This, I desire, may be observed lest in my use of both those terms, my Reader should think, either that I am not aware of the Controversy depending about those terms; or, that I do herein manifest the vacillancy of my Judgment, as if I leaned sometime to one side, and sometime to another. I speak not here, ad idem, as they do in that Contest; but when I call it a Condition of Justification, my meaning is, that no Man is justified until he believe. And when I call it an Instrument, my meaning is, that it is the Righteousness of Christ apprehended by Faith, which doth justifie us when we believe. And so I find the Generality of our Divines calling Faith sometimes a Condition, and sometimes an Instrument of our Justification, as here I do.

And if there be any Expression my Reader shall meet with, which is less accurate, and may be capable of another sense: I crave that Candor from him, that he interpret it according to this my declared Intention.

5. Lastly, I have added to the former, a short, plain practical Sermon, to promote the Peace and Unity of the Churches of Christ, and to prevent their Relapse into past Follies.

In all the Parts of this Discourse, I have sincerely aimed at the Purity and Peace of the Church of God; and he greatly mistakes, that takes me for a Man of Contention. 'Tis true, I am here contending with my Brethren, but pure necessity brought me in; and an unpleasing irksomness hath attended me through it, and an hearty desire, and serious motion for Peace amongst all the professed Members of Christ, shall close and finish it. Let all Litigations of this nature (at least in this Critical Juncture) be suspended by common Consent, since they waste our time, hinder our Communion, imbitter our Spirits, impoverish practical Godliness, grieve the Spirit of God, and good Men, make sport for our common Enemies, who warm their own Fingers at the Fire of our Contentions; and place more Trust in our dividing Lusts, than they do in their own feeble Arguments or castrated Penal Laws, to effect our Ruin.

It is my grief (the Lord knows) to see the delightful Communion the Saints once enjoyed, whilst they walked together under the same Ordinances of God, now dissolved in such a sad and scandalous Degree, by the Impressions of erroneous Opinions, made both upon their Heads and Hearts. I do therefore heartily join with Budæus in his pious Wish, * That God would give his People as much Constancy in retaining the Truths they once received, as they had Joy and Comfort at their first Reception of them. I must on this occasion declare my just Jealousy, that the Non-improvement of our Baptismal

* Utinam tam consertis manibus compertam comprehensamque veritatem semel retinere possemus quàm protinùs agnitam festivis oculis hilares exosculamur. Cove-

Covenant unto the great and ſolemn Ends thereof in our Mortification, Vivification, and regular Communion with the Church of Chriſt, into which Society we were matriculated by it, is at this day puniſhed upon Profeſſors in thoſe fiery Heats, and fierce Oppoſitions unto which God ſeemeth to have penally delivered us at this day.

For my own part, it is my fixed Reſolution to provoke no good Man if I can help it. But if their own intemperate Zeal ſhall provoke them, in purſuit of their Errors, to deſtroy the very Nature of God's Covenant of Grace with Abraham and his Seed, and I have a plain call (as here I had) at once to defend God's Truths and Peoples Soul againſt them, I will earneſtly contend in the Cauſe of Truth, whilſt I can move my Tongue, or make uſe of the Pen of the Scribe.

Reader, I ſhall appeal to thee, if thou be wiſe and impartial, Whether any man that underſtands the Covenant of God renewed with Abraham (which is the grand Charter, by which we and our Children hold and enjoy the moſt invaluable Privileges) can endure to ſee it diſſolved and utterly deſtroyed, by making it an aboliſhing Adam's Covenant of Works; and ſtand by as an unconcerned Spectator, when challenged and provoked to ſpeak in defence there of.

Is there any thing found in God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. to make it an aboliſhed Covenant of Works, which doth not as injuriouſly bear upon, and ſtrike at the very life of the Covenant of Grace in the laſt and beſt Edition of it, under which the whole Church of God now ſtands? What is that thing (I would fain know) in God's Covenant with Abraham? It is the Promiſſory part of it, I will be a God unto thee, and to thy Seed after thee, Gen. 17. 7. God forbid: for the eſſential and ſweeteſt part of the New Covenant is contained in that Promiſe, Jer. 31. 33. Heb. 8. 10. Yet thou wilt find my Antagoniſt here forced to aſſert, God may become a Peoples God in a ſpecial manner by virtue of the aboliſhed Covenant of Works; and ſuch he makes this Covenant to be.

Or does the Reſtipulation Abraham and his were here required to make unto God, even to walk before him, and be perfect; doth this make it an Adam's Covevenant of Works? Surely no. For as God there requires perfection of Abraham, ſo Chriſt requires the ſame perfection of all New covenant Fœderates now, Matth. 5. 48. Be ye perfect, as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect; which is altogether as much as ever God required of Abraham and his, in Gen. 17. 1. Take perfection in what ſenſe you will, either for a poſitive Perfection, conſiſting in truth and ſincerity; or a comparative Perfection conſiſting in the growth and more eminent degrees of Grace; or a ſuperlative Perfection, which all New-covenant Fœderates ſtrive after here, Phil. 3. 12, 13. and ſhall certainly attain in Heaven, Heb. 12. 23. In this alſo the Covenant with Abraham, and with us are duly and ſubſtantially one and the ſame.

Or doth my miſtaken Friend imagine, that God required this Perfection of Abraham, and his, as in the Firſt Covenant he required it from Adam and all his? viz. to be performed and maintained in his own ſtrength, under penalty of the Curſe; but now though Chriſt command perfection, yet what duty lies in any command, anſwerable ſtrength for it lies in the Promiſe? Very well, and was it not ſo then? compare the Command, Deut. 10. 16. Circumciſe therefore the fore-skins of your hearts, with the anſwerable gracious Promiſe to enable them ſo to do, Deut. 30. 6. The Lord thy God will circumciſe thy heart, and the heart of thy Seed, to love the Lord thy God.

Or laſtly, Did Circumciſion, the Sign and Seal added to Abraham's Covenant, make it an Adam's Covenant of Works? That's equally impoſſible with the former: for no man, but ſuch a daring man as I am concerned with, will dare to ſay, that a Seal of the Righteouſneſs of Faith (as Circumciſion was, Rom. 4. 11.) can make the Covenant, to which it is affixed (and which I have ſhewn in all the other ſubſtantial parts, the very ſame with that we are now under) to become an Adam's Covenant of Works.

Theſe things I have here ſuperadded, to leave as little as is poſſible behind me to be an occaſion of further trouble and contention. Let all ſtrife therefore in ſo plain a caſe be ended: Contentious Spirits are not the moſt excellent Spirits among Chriſtians. Fire (and ſo Contention) is more apt to catch in low built thatcht Cottages, than in high built Caſtles and Princely Palaces: the higher we go, ſtill the more peace. The higheſt Region is moſt ſedate and calm. Stars have the ſtrongeſt influence, when in conjunction. Angels (th' Legions) have no wars among them; and as willingly go down, as up the Ladder, without juſtling each other. And the Moſt High God is the God of Peace; let us alſo be the Children of Peace. And I do aſſure the Perſons with whom I contend, That whilſt they hold the head, and are tender of the Churches Peace, I can live in Charity with them here, and hope to live in glory with them hereafter.

I remain, Reader, thine and the Truth's Friend,
John Flavell.

The INTRODUCTION.

FInding by ſad Experience, what I before juſtly feared, that Errors would be apt to ſpring up with Liberty (though the reſtraint of juſt Liberty, being a practical Error in Rulers, can never be the cure of Mental Errors in the Subjects;) I judged it neceſſary at this Seaſon to give a Succinct Account of the Riſe, Cauſes, and Remedies of ſeveral Miſtakes and Errors, under which even the Reformed Churches among us, as well as others, do groan at this Day.

I will not ſtay my Reader long upon the Etymology and Derivations of the Word. We all know that Etymologies are no Definitions: Yet becauſe they caſt ſome light upon the Nature of the thing we enquire after, it will not be loſt labour to obſerve, that this word E R R O R derives it ſelf from three Roots in the Hebrew Language.

(1.) The firſt word primitively ſignifies to deviate or decline from the true Scope or Path, as Unskilful Marks-Men, or Ignorant and Inadvertent Travellers uſe to do. The leaſt variation or turning aſide from the true Rule and Line, tho' it be but an Hairs breadth, preſently becomes an Error. We read, Judg. 20. 16. of 700 Benjamites, who could every one ſling Stones at an Hairs Breadth, and not miſs, לא יחטא Heb. and not err. This by a Metaphor is applied to the Mind or Judgment of Man; and denotes the warpings thereof from the ſtraight, perfect, divine Law or Rule, and is uſually tranſlated by the Word Sin.

חטא Chatta, a Scopo aberravit.

(2.) It is derived from another Word alſo, which ſignifies to wander in variable and uncertain Motions: You find it in the Title of the 7th Pſalm, Shiggaion of David, a wandring Song, or a Song of variable Notes and Tunes, higher and lower, ſharper and flatter. In both the former Derivations it ſeems to note ſimple Error, thro' meer Weakneſs and Ignorance. But then, שגה Shaga.

(3.) In its Derivation from a third Root, it ſignifies not only to Err, but to cauſe others to Err alſo; and ſo ſignifies a Seducer or one that is active in leading others into a wrong way; and is applied in that ſenſe to the Prophets in Iſrael, who ſeduced the People, Ezek. 13. 10. The Greek Verb πλανάω takes in both theſe ſenſes, both to go aſtray, and when put Tranſitively, to lead or cauſe others to go aſtray with us. Hence is the word πλανήτης, Planets or wandring Stars; the Title given by the Apoſtle, Jude ver. 13. to the falſe Teachers and Seducers of his Time.

תעה Tagna in Hiph.

An Error then is any departure or deviation in our Opinions or Judgments from the perfect Rule of the Divine Law: And to this all Men by Nature are not only liable but inclinable. Indeed Man by Nature can do nothing elſe but Err, Pſal. 58. 3. He goeth aſtray as ſoon as born; makes not one true ſtep till renewed by Grace, and many falſe ones after his Renovation. The Life of the Holieſt Man is a Book with many Errata's; but the whole Edition of a wicked Man's Life is but one continued Error; he that thinkshe cannot Err, manifeſtly Errs in ſo thinking. The Pope's ſuppoſed and pretended Infallibility hath made him the great Deceiver of the World. A good Man may Err, but is willing to know his Error, and will not obſtinately maintain it, when he once plainly diſcerns it.

Error and Hereſy among other things differ in this; Hereſy is accompanied with pertinacy; and therefore the Heretick is αὐτοκατάκριτος, ſelf-condemned; his own Conſcience condemns him, whilſt Men labour in vain to convince him. He doth not formally and in terms condemn himſelf, but he doth ſo equivalently, whilſt he continues to own and maintain Doctrines and Opinions which he finds himſelf unable to defend againſt the evidence of Truth. Humane frailty may lead a Man into the firſt, but Deviliſh Pride fixes him in the laſt.

The Word of God, which is our Rule, muſt therefore be the only Teſt and Touchſtone to try and diſcover Errors; for Regula eſt index ſui & obliqui. 'Tis not enough to convince a Man of Error, that his Judgment differs from other Mens; you muſt bring it to the Word, and try how it agrees or diſagrees therewith; elſe he that charges another with Error, may be found in as great or greater an Error himſelf. None are more diſpoſed eaſily to receive and tenaciouſly to defend Errors, than thoſe who are the Anteſignani, Heads or Leaders of Erroneous Sects, eſpecially after they have fought in Defence of bad Cauſes, and deeply engaged their Reputation.

The following Diſcourſe juſtly entitles it ſelf, A BLOW AT THE ROOT: And tho' you will here find the Roots of many Errors laid bare and open; which comparatively are of far different degrees of Danger and Malignity; which I here mention together, many of them ſpringing from the ſame Root: Yet I am far from cenſuring them alike, nor would I have any that are concerned in leſſer Errors be exaſperated, becauſe their leſſer Miſtakes are mentioned with greater and more pernicious ones; this Candor I not only intreat, but juſtly challenge from my Reader.

And becauſe there are many general and very uſeful Obſervations about Errors, which will not ſo conveniently come under the Laws of that Method which governs the main part of this Diſcourſe, viz. the CAUSES and CURES of Error: I have therefore ſorted them by themſelves, and premiſed them to the following Part in Twenty Obſervations next enſuing.

Twenty General OBSERVATIONS about the Riſe and Increaſe of the Errors of the Times.

Firſt Obſervation.

TRuth is the proper Object, the natural and pleaſant Food of the Underſtanding, Job 12. 11. Doth not the Ear (that is, the Underſtanding by the Ear) try words, as the Mouth taſteth Meat? Knowledge is the Aſſimilation of the Underſtanding to the Truths received by it. Nothing is more natural to Man, than a deſire to know: Knowledge never cloys the Mind, as Food doth the natural Appetite; but as the one increaſeth, the other is proportionably ſharpened and provoked. The Minds of all (that are not wholly immers'd in Senſuality) ſpend their Strength in the laborious ſearch and purſuit of Truth. Sometimes climbing up from the Effects to the Cauſes, and then deſcending again from the Cauſes to the Effects; and all to diſcover Truth. Fervent Prayer, ſedulous Study, fixed Meditations, are the labours of inquiſitive Souls after Truth. All the Objections and Counter-Arguments the Mind meets in its way, are but the Pauſes and Heſitations of a bivious Soul, not able to determine whether Truth lies upon this ſide, or upon that.

Anſwerable to the ſharpneſs of the Mind's Appetite, is the fine Edge of Pleaſure and Delight it feels in the Diſcovery and Acquiſition of Truth. When it hath rack'd and tortured it ſelf upon knotty Problems, and at laſt diſcovered the Truth it ſought for; with what Joy doth the Soul dilate it ſelf, and run (as it were with open Arms) to claſp and welcome it?

The Underſtanding of Man at firſt was perſpicacious and clear, all Truths lay obvious in their comely order and raviſhing beauty before it: God made Man upright, Eccl. 7. 29. this Rectitude of his Mind conſiſted in Light and Knowledge, as appears by the preſcribed Method of his Recovery, Col. 3. 10. Renewed in Knowledge, after the Image of him that created him. Truth in the Mind, or the Minds union with Truth, being part of the Divine Image in Man, diſcovers to us the Sin and Miſchief of Error, which is a defacing (ſo far as it prevails) of the Image of God.

No ſooner was Man created, but by the exerciſe of Knowledge he ſoon diſcovered God's Image in in him; and by his Ambition after more, loſt what he had. So that now there is an hazineſs or cloud ſpread over Truth by Ignorance and Error, the ſad effects of the Fall.

Second Obſervation. Of Knowledge there are divers ſorts and kinds; ſome is Humane, and ſome Divine; ſome Speculative, and ſome Practical; ſome Ingrafted, as the Notions of Morality, and ſome Acquired by painful ſearch and ſtudy: But of all Knowledge none like that Divine and Supernatural Knowledge of ſaving Truths revealed by Chriſt in the Scriptures; from whence ariſeth the different degrees both of the ſinfulneſs and danger of Errors; thoſe Errors being always the worſt, which are committed againſt the moſt important Truths revealed in the Goſpel.

Theſe Truths lie infolded either in the plain words, or evident and neceſſary Conſequences from the words of the Holy Scriptures; Scripture-Conſequences are of great uſe for the Refutation of Errors; it was by a Scripture-Conſequence, that Chriſt ſucceſsfully proved the Reſurrection againſt the Sadduces, Matth. 22. The Arrians and other Hereticks rejected conſequential Proofs, and required the expreſs words of Scripture only, hoping that way to defend and ſecure their Errors againſt the Arguments and Aſſaults of the Orthodox.

Some think that reaſon and natural light is abundantly ſufficient for the direction of Life; but certainly nothing is more neceſſary to us for that end, than the written Word; for though the remains of natural Light have their place and uſe, in directing us about natural and earthly things; yet they are utterly inſufficient to guide us in ſpiritual and heavenly things, 1 Cor 2. 14. The natural Man receiveth not the things of God, &c. Eph. 5. 8. Once were ye darkneſs, νῦν δὲ φῶς ἐν κυρίῳ, now are ye light in the Lord, i. e. by a beam of heavenly light ſhining from the Spirit of Chriſt, through the written Word, into your Minds or Underſtandings.

'Tis the written word which ſhines upon the path of our Duty, Pſal. 119. 105. the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament do jointly make the ſolid Foundation of a Chriſtian's Faith. Hence, Eph. 2. 20. we are ſaid to be built upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets. We are bound therefore to honour Old Teſtament Scriptures, as well as New, they being part of the Divine Canon; and muſt not ſcruple to admit them as ſufficient and authentick Proofs, for the confirmation of Truths, and refutation of Errors. Chriſt referr'd the People to them, John 5. 39. and Paul Preached and Diſputed from them, Acts 26. 22.

Third Obſervation. Unto the Attainment of Divine Knowledge out of the Scriptures, ſome things are naturally, yet leſs principally requiſite in the Subject; and ſomething abſolutely and principally neceſſary.

The natural Qualifications deſirable in the Subject, are clearneſs of Apprehenſion, ſolidity of Judgment, and fidelity of Retention. Theſe are deſirable requiſites to make the Underſtanding ſuſceptible of Knowledge; but the irradiation of the Mind, by the Spirit of God, is principally neceſſary, John 16. 13. He ſhall guide you into all Truth: The cleareſt and moſt comfortable light he giveth to Men, is in the way of Sanctification, called the teachings of the Anointing, 1 John 2. 27.

When this ſpiritual ſanctifying light ſhines upon a Mind, naturally enriched and qualified with the three forementioned requiſites, that Mind excels others in the riches of knowledge. And yet the teachings of the Spirit in the way of Sanctification, do very much ſupply and recompence the defects and weakneſſes of the forementioned qualifications. Whence two things are highly remarkable:

1. That men of great abilities of Nature, clear apprehenſions in natural things, ſtrong Judgments, and tenacious Memories, do not only frequently fall into groſs Errors and damnable Hereſies themſelves; but become Hereſiarchs, or Heads of erroneous Factions, drawing multitudes into the ſame Sin and Miſery with themſelves; as Arrius, Socinus, Pelagius, Bellarmin, and multitudes of others have done.

And Secondly, It is no leſs remarkable, that men of weaker parts, but Babes in compariſon, through the Sanctification and Direction of the Spirit, for which they have humbly waited at his feet in Prayer, have not only been directed and guided by him into the Truth, but ſo confirmed and fixed therein, that they have been kept ſound in their Judgments in times of abounding Errors, and firm in their adherence to it in days of fierceſt Perſecution. How men of excellent natural Parts have been blinded, and men of weak natural Parts illuminated; ſee 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. Matth. 11. 25.

Fourth Obſervation. Among the manifold impediments to the obtaining of true Knowledge, and ſetling the mind in the Truth and Faith of the Goſpel, theſe Three are of ſpecial remark and conſideration, viz. Ignorance, Curioſity, and Error.

Ignorance ſlights it, or deſpairs of attaining it. Truth falls into contempt among the ignorant, from ſluggiſhneſs and apprehenſion of the difficulties that lie in the way to it, Prov. 24. 7. Wiſdom is too high for a fool. Curioſity runs beſide or beyond it. This Pride and Wantonneſs of the mind puffs it up with a vain conceit, that it is not only able to penetrate the deepeſt Myſteries revealed in the Scripture, but even unrevealed ſecrets alſo, Col. 2. 18. intruding into thoſe things which he hath not ſeen, vainly puffed up by his fleſhly mind. But Error militates directly againſt it, contradicts and oppoſeth Truth, eſpecially when an Error is maintained by Pride againſt inward convictions, or means of better information. 'Tis bad to maintain an Error for want of light; but abundantly worſe to maintain it againſt light. This is ſuch an affront to the Spirit of God, as he uſually puniſhes with Penal Ignorance, and gives them up to a Spirit of Error.

Fifth Obſervation. Error is binding upon the Conſcience, as well as Truth; and altogether as much, and ſometimes more influential upon the Affections and Paſſions, as Truth is.

For it preſents not it ſelf to the Soul in its own name and nature, as Error; but in the name and dreſs of Truth; and under that notion binds the Conſcience, and vigorouſly influences the paſſions and affections; and then being more indulgent to Luſt than Truth is, it is for that ſo much the more embraced and hugg'd by the deceived Soul, Acts 22. 4, 5. The heat that Error puts the Soul into, differs from Religious Zeal, as a Feveriſh doth from a Natural heat, which is not indeed ſo benign and agreeable, but much more fervent and ſcorching. A mind under the power of Error, is reſtleſs and impatient to propagate its Errors to others, and theſe heats prey upon, and eat up the vital Spirits and Powers of Religion.

Sixth

Sixth Obſervation. 'Tis exceeding difficult to get out Error, when once it is imbib'd, and hath rooted it ſelf by an open profeſſion.

Errors, like ſome ſorts of Weeds, having once ſeeded in a Field or Garden, 'tis ſcarce poſſible to ſubdue and deſtroy them, eſpecially if they be hereditary Errors, or have grown up with us from our youth; à teneris aſſueſcere multum eſt, ſaith Seneca; 'tis a great advantage to Truth or Error, to have an early and long poſſeſſion of the mind. The Phariſees held many erroneous opinions about the Law, as appears by their corruptive Commentaries upon it, refuted by Chriſt, Matth. 5. but did he root them out of their Heads and Hearts thereby? No, no; they ſooner rid him out of the World. The Sadduces held a moſt dangerous Error about the Reſurrection; Chriſt diſputed with them to the admiration of others; and proved it clearly againſt them; and yet we find the Error remaining long after Chriſt's Death, 2 Tim. 2. 18. The Apoſtles themſelves had their minds tinctured with this Error, That Chriſt ſhould be outwardly great and magnificent in the World, and raiſe his Followers to great Honours and Preferments amongſt men: Chriſt plainly told them it was their Miſtake and Error; for the Son of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter; yet this did not rid their minds of the Error; it ſtuck faſt in them, even till his Aſcenſion to Heaven. O how hard is it to clear the heart of a good man once leaven'd with Error! and much more hard to ſeparate it from a wicked man. *

* I am perſuaded (ſaith Mr. Gurnal) ſome men take more pains to furniſh themſelves with Arguments to defend ſome Error they have taken up, than they do for the moſt ſaving Truths in the Bible. Auſtin ſaid, when he was a Manichæan, Non Tu eras, ſed Error meus erat Deus meus; Thou, O Lord, wert not, but my Error was my God. Gurnal's Chriſtian Armour, part 1. page 36.

Some have choſe rather to die, than to part with their darling Errors, and Soul-damning Hereſies. I have read (ſaith Mr. Bridges) of a great Atheiſt, that was burnt at Paris for blaſpheming Chriſt, held faſt his Atheiſtical Opinions till he came to the very Stake; boaſted to the Prieſts and Fryars that followed him, how much more confidently he went to ſacrifice his Life in the ſtrength of reaſon, under which he ſuffered, than Chriſt himſelf did; but when he began to feel Torments indeed, then he roared and raged to the purpoſe. Vidi ego hominem, ſaith the Author; in his Life he was Looſe; in his Impriſonments, Sullen; and at his Death, Mad with the Horrors of Conſcience.

Some indeed have recovered the ſoundneſs of their Judgments, after deep corruptions by dangerous Errors. Auſtin was a Manichee, and fully recovered from it. So have many more; and yet multitudes hold them faſt even to death, and nothing but the Fire can reveal their Work, and diſcover what is Gold, and what is Straw and Stubble.

Seventh Obſervation. It deſerves a Remark, That Men are not ſo circumſpect and jealous of the corruption of their Minds by Errors, as they are of their Bodies in times of Contagion; or of their Lives with reſpect to groſs Immoralities.

Spiritual dangers affect us leſs than corporeal; and intellectual evils leſs than moral. Whether this be the effect of Hypocriſie, the Errors of the Mind being more-ſecret and inviſible than thoſe of the Converſation, God only knows, Man cannot poſitively determine.

Or whether it be the effect of Ignorance, that Men think there is leſs ſin and danger in the one than in the other; not conſidering, that an Apoplexy ſeizing the Head, is every way as mortal as a Sword piercing the Body: And that a Vertigo will as much unfit a Man for ſervice, as an Ague or Fever: The Apoſtle in 1 Pet. 2. 1. calls them αἱρέσεις ἀπωλείας, damnable Hereſies, or Hereſies of Deſtruction. An Error in the Mind may be as damning and deſtructive to the Soul, as an Error of Immorality or Prophaneneſs in the Life.

Or whether it may come to paſs from ſome remains of fear and tenderneſs in the Conſcience, which forbids Men to reduce their erroneous Principles into Practice; there lying under many confident Errors in the Mind a ſecret Jealouſie, which we call formido oppoſiti, which will not ſuffer them to act to the full height of their profeſſed Opinions. Auſtin gives this Character even of Pelagius himſelf, Retract. lib. 2. cap. 33. Nomen Pelagii non ſine laude aliqua poſui, quia vita ejus a multis prædicabatur: I have not mentioned (ſaith he) the name of that Man, without ſome praiſe, becauſe his Life was famed by many. And of Swinkfeldius it is ſaid, Caput regulatum illi defuit, cor bonum non defuit: His Heart was much more regular than his Head. Yet this falls out but rarely in the World; for looſe Principles naturally run into looſe Practices; and the Errors of the Head into the Immoralities of Life.

Eighth Obſervation. It is a great Judgment of God, to be given over to an erroneous Mind.

For the Underſtanding being the leading Faculty, as that guides, the other Powers and Affections of the Soul follow, as Horſes in a Team follow the Fore-horſe. Now how ſad and dangerous a thing is this, for Satan to ride the Fore-horſe, and guide that that is to guide the Life of Man? That's a dreadful, ſpiritual, judicial ſtroke of God, which we read of, Rom. 1. 26. παρέδωκεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς πάθη ἀτιμίας; God by a penal Tradition ſuffered them to run into the Dregs of Immorality, and pollutions of Life; and that becauſe they abuſed their Light, and became vain in their Imaginations, ver. 21.

Wild whimſies and fancies in the Head, uſually miſlead Men into the puddle and mire of Prophaneneſs, and then 'tis commonly obſerved God ſets ſome viſible Mark of his Diſpleaſure upon them; eſpecially the Hereſiarchs, or Ring-leaders in Error. Neſtorius his Tongue was conſumed by Worms. Cerinthus his Brains knock'd out by the Fall of an Houſe. Montanus hang'd himſelf: It were eaſie to inſtance in multitudes of others, whom the viſible hand of God hath marked for a warning to others; but uſually the ſpiritual Errors of the Mind are followed with a conſumption and decay of Religion in the Soul. If Grace be in the Heart, where Error ſways its Scepter in the Head, yet uſually there it languiſhes and withers. They may miſtake their Dropſie for growth and flouriſhing, and think themſelves to be more ſpiritual, becauſe more airy and notional; but if Men would judge themſelves impartially, they will certainly find that the Seeds of Grace thrive not in the Heart, when ſhaded and over-dropt by an erroneous Head.

Ninth Obſervation. 'Tis a pernicious Evil, to advance a meer Opinion into the place and ſeat of an Article of Faith; and to lay as great a ſtreſs upon it, as they ought to do upon the moſt clear and fundamental Point. To be as much concerned for a Tile upon the Roof, as for the Corner-ſtone, which unites the Walls, and ſuſtains the Building. Opinion Opinion (as one truly ſaith) is but Reaſon's Projector, and the Spy of Truth: It makes in its fulleſt diſcovery no more than the dawning and twilight of Knowledge; and yet I know not how it comes to paſs, but ſo it is, that this Idol of the Mind holds ſuch a ſway and empire over all we hold, as if it were all the day we had. Matters of meer Opinion, are every where cried up by ſome Erroriſts, for Mathematical Demonſtration, and Articles of Faith, written with a Sun-beam; worſhipping the Fancies and Creatures of their own Minds, more than God; and putting more truſt in their ill-founded Opinions, than in the ſurer word of Prophecy. Much like that Humoriſt that would not truſt day-light, but kept his Candle ſtill burning by him; becauſe (ſaid he) this is not as ſubject to Eclipſes, as the Sun is.

And what more frequent, when Controverſies grow fervent, than for thoſe that maintain the Error, to boaſt every ſilly Argument to be a Demonſtration; to upbraid and pity the blindneſs and dulneſs of their Oppoſers, as Men that ſhut their Eyes againſt Sun-beams; yea, ſometimes to draw their preſumptuous Cenſures thro' the very Hearts of their Oppoſers, and to inſinuate, that they muſt needs hold the Truths of God in Unrighteouſneſs, ſin againſt their Knowledge, and that nothing keeps them from coming over to them, but Pride, Shame, or ſome worldly Intereſt? What a complicated Evil is here! Here's a proud exalting of our own Opinions, and an immodeſt impoſing on the Minds of others, more clear and ſound than our own, and a dangerous Uſurpation of God's Prerogative in judging the Hearts and Ends of our Brethren.

Tenth Obſervation. Error being conſcious to its ſelf of its own weakneſs, and the ſtrong aſſaults that will be made upon it, evermore labours to defend and ſecure it ſelf under the wings of Antiquity, Reaſon, Scripture, and high Pretenſions to Reformation and Piety.

Antiquity is a venerable word, but ill uſed, when made a cloak for Error. Truth muſt needs be elder than Error, as the Rule muſt neceſſarily be, before the aberration from it. The gray Hairs of Opinions are then only Beauty, and a Crown, when found in the way of Righteouſneſs. Copper (ſaith Learned Du Moulin) will never become Gold by Age. A Lye will be a Lye, let it be never ſo ancient. We diſpute not by Years, but by Reaſons drawn from Scripture. That which is now call'd an Ancient Opinion, if it be not a true Opinion, was once but a new Error. When you can tell us, how many Years are required to turn an Error into Truth, then we will give more heed to Antiquity, when preſs'd in the Service of Error, than we now think due to it.

If Antiquity will not do, Reaſon ſhall be preſs'd to ſerve Error's turn at a dead lift; and indeed the Pencil of Reaſon can lay curious Colours upon rotten Timber, and varniſh over erroneous Principles, with fair and plauſible Pretences. What expert Artiſts have the Socinians proved themſelves in this matter? But becauſe Men are bound to ſubmit human Authority and reaſon to Divine Revelation, both muſt give way and ſtrike ſail to the Written Word.

Hence it comes to paſs, that the great Patrons and Factors for Error, do above all things labour to gain Countenance to their Errors from the Written Word; and to this end they manifeſtly wreſt and rack the Scriptures to make them ſubſervient to their Opinions; not impartially ſtudying the Scriptures firſt, and forming their Notions and Opinions according to them; but they bring their erroneous Opinions to the Scriptures, and then with all imaginable Art and Sophiſtry wire-draw and force the Scriptures to countenance and legitimate their Opinions. †

But becauſe Pretences of Piety and * Reformation are the ſtrokes that give life to the Face of this Idol, and give it the neareſt reſemblance unto Truth, theſe therefore never fail to be made uſe of, and zealouſly profeſſed in the favour of Error, though there be little of either many times to be found in their Perſons, and nothing at all in the Doctrines that lay claim to it.

* Take heed (ſaith one) that when Zeal for Reformation knocks at the Door, ſome new Errors ſtep not in with it, which will as much need an after Reformation.

Eleventh Obſervation: God in all Ages in his tender care for his Churches and Truths, hath ſtill qualified and excited his Servants for the defence of his precious Truths, againſt the Errors and Hereſies that have ſucceſſively aſſaulted them.

As Providence is obſerved in every Climate and Iſland of the World to have provided Antidotes againſt the poiſonous Plants and Animals of the Country; and the one is never far from the other: So is the care of his Providence much more conſpicuous in the caſe now before us. When, or whereſoever venomous Errors and deadly Hereſies do ariſe, he hath his Servants at hand with Antidotes againſt them.

When Arius, that cunning and deadly Enemy to the Deity of Chriſt, ſtruck at the very Heart of our Religion, Faith, and Comfort; a Man of ſubtil Parts and blameleſs Life, which made his Hereſie much the more ſpreading and taking; the Lord had his well-furniſhed Athanaſius in a readineſs to reſiſt and confound him. And as he had his Athanaſius to defend the Deity of Chriſt; ſo he wanted not his Baſil to defend the Doctrine of the Holy Spirit againſt Macedonius.

So when Pelagius was buſily advancing Free-will into the Throne of Free-grace, Providence wanted not its Mallet in Learned and Ingenious Auguſtin, to break him and his Idol to pieces: And it is highly remarkable (as the Learned Dr. Hill obſerves) that Auguſtin was born in Africa the ſame Day that Pelagius was born in Britain.

When Goteſchalchus publiſhed his dangerous Doctrine about Predeſtination, the Lord drew forth Hincmarus to detect and confure that Error, by evincing clearly, that God's Predeſtination forces no Man to Sin.

So from the beginning and firſt riſe of Popery, that center and ſink of Errors, we have a large Catalogue of the Learned and Famous Witneſſes, which in all Ages have faithfully reſiſted and oppoſed it; and when notwithſtanding all, it had even over-run Europe like a rapid Torrent, or rather Inundation of the Ocean: And Germany was brought to that paſs, that if the Pope had but commanded it, they would have eaten Graſs or Hay more pecudum. Then did the Lord bring forth invincible Luther, and with him a Troop of Learned Champions, into the Field againſt him; ſince which time the Cauſe of Popery is become deſperate.

Thus

Thus the care of Providence in all Ages hath been as much diſplayed in protecting the Church againſt the dangers that aroſe from falſe Brethren within it, as from avowed perſecuting Enemies without it; and had it not been ſo, the rank Weeds of Hereſies and Errors had long ſince overtopt and choaked the Corn, and made the Church a barren Field.

Twelfth Obſervation. The want of a modeſt Suſpicion, and juſt reflection, gives both confidence and growth to Erroneous Principles.

If Matters of meer Opinion were kept in their proper place, under the careful guard of Suſpicion; they would not make that buſtle and confuſion in the Churches, they have done, and do at this Day.

'Tis confeſſed, that all Truths are not Matters of meer Opinion; neither are all Opinions of equal weight and value; and therefore not to be left hanging in an equipondious Sceptiſciſm: And yet it is as true, that Matters of Opinion ought carefully to be ſorted from Matters of Faith, and to be kept in their own Rank and claſs, as things doubtful, quibus poteſt ſubeſſe falſum; whilſt Matters of Faith clearly revealed, are to ſtand upon their own ſure and firm Baſis. The former, viz. Matters of meer Opinion, we are ſo to hold, as upon clearer light to be ready to part with them, and give them up into the Hands of Truth. The other, viz. Matters of Faith, we are to hold with Reſolutions to live and die by them.

What is Opinion, but the wavering of the underſtanding betwixt probable Arguments, for and againſt a point of Doctrine? So that it's rather an inclination, than an aſſertion, as being accompanied with Fear, Floating, and Inconſtancy. In ſuch caſes there ſhould be a due Conceſſion and Allowance of other Mens Opinions to them, and why not, whilſt they offer as fair for the Truth as we? And haply their Parts, Helps, and Induſtries, are not inferiour to ours, it may be beyond them, and we may diſcern in them as much tenderneſs of Conſcience, and fear of Sin as in our ſelves. In this caſe a little more modeſt Suſpicion in our Opinions, would do the Church a great deal of right; and that which ſhould prevail with all modeſt perſons to exerciſe it, is the juſt reflection they may make upon their own former confident miſtakes.

Thirteenth Obſervation. There is a remarkable involution or concatenatiton of Errors, one linking in, and drawing another after.

Amongſt all Erroneous Sects, there is ſtill ſome πρῶτον ψεῦδος, ſome Helena, for whoſe ſake the war againſt Truth is commenced; and the other leſſer Errors are preſs'd for the ſake and ſervice of this leading darling Error. As we ſee the whole * Troop of Indulgences, Bulls, Maſſes, Pilgrimages, Purgatory, with multitudes more, flow from, and are preſs'd into the Service of the Pope's Supremacy and Infallibility. So in other Sects, men are forced to entertain many other Errors, which, in themſelves conſidered, they have no great kindneſs for; but they are neceſſitated to entertain them in defence of that great, leading darling Opinion they firſt eſpouſed.

* Πρώτου Ψεύδος R. Eccleſiæ ſubjicienda eſſe omnia ſummo judicio & tribunali Eccleſiæ, cui præeſt Papa, &c. indè conficitur immotas habendas eſſe traditiones omnes R. Eccleſiæ, dogmata omnia decreta ſeu Pontificum ſeu Conciliorum. Fred. Spanhem. Elench. Controv. p. 51.

Thoſe that cry up and trumpet abroad the Sovereign Power of Free-will, even without the preventing Grace of God, enabling Men to ſupernatural Works, as if the Will alone had eſcaped all damage by the Fall, and Adam had not ſinned in that noble Virgin-faculty. To defend this Idol, which is the πρῶτον ψεῦδος, they are forced to oppugn and deny ſeveral other great and weighty Truths, as particular eternal Election, the certainty of the Saints Perſeverance, the neceſſity of preventing Grace in Converſion; which Errors are but the Outworks raiſed in defence of that Idol.

So in the Baptiſmal Controverſy, Men would never have adventured to deny God's Covenant with Abraham, to be a Covenant of Grace; or to aſſert the Ceremonial Law, ſo full of Chriſt, to be an Adam's Covenant of Works; and Circumciſion, expreſly called the Seal of the Righteouſneſs of Faith, to be the Condition of Adam's Covenant. Much leſs would they place all the elect of God in Iſrael, at one and the ſame time, under the ſevereſt Curſe and Rigour of the Law, and under the pure Covenant of Grace, were they not forced into theſe Errors and Abſurdities by dint of Argument, in defence of their darling Opinion.

Fourteenth Obſervation. Errors abound moſt, and ſpring faſteſt in the times of the Churches Peace, Liberty, and outward Proſperity under Indulgent Rulers. * Arrianiſm ſprang up under Conſtantine's mild Government.

* Arrius Alexandrinus. Hæreſin inſanam incepit Alexandriæ ſub annum Domini 324, ut Euſebius annotavit, Anno Impérii Conſtantini 15.

Chriſtian benevolent Rulers are choice Mercies and Bleſſings to the Church. Such as rule over men in the fear of God, are to the Church as well as Civil State, like the light of the morning, when the Sun ariſeth, even a morning without Clouds, as the tender Graſs ſpringing out the Earth by clear ſhining after rain, 2 Sam. 23. 4.

But this as well as other mercies, is liable to abuſe; and under the influences of indulgent Governours, Error as well as Truth, ſpring up Flowers, and Seeds. Perſecution gives check to the wantonneſs of Mens Opinions, and finds them other and better work to do. Caterpillars and Locuſts are ſwept away by the bitter East-winds, but ſwarm in Halcyon days, and fall upon every green thing. So that the Church rides in this reſpect more ſafely in the ſtormy Sea, than in the calm Harbour. Peace and Proſperity is apt to caſt its Watchmen into a ſleep, and whilſt they ſleep, the envious one ſoweth Tares, Matth. 13. 25.

'Twas under Conſtantine's benign Government that Poiſon was poured out into the Churches. The abuſe of ſuch an excellent mercy provokes the Lord to cut it ſhort, and cauſe the Clouds to gather again after the Rain. We have found it ſo once again (alas! that I muſt ſay again,) in this wanton and fooliſh Nation. Profeſſors could live quietly together, Converſe, Faſt, and Pray in a Chriſtian manner together under common Calamities and Dangers; Differences in Opinion were ſuſpended by conſent. But no ſooner do we feel a warm Sun-blaſt of Liberty and Peace, but it revives and heats our dividing Luſts and Corruptions, inſtead of our Graces. The Sheep of Chriſt fight with each other, though their furious puſhing one at another is known to preſage a change of Weather.

Fifteenth

fteenth Obſervation. Errors in the tender bud and firſt ſpring of them, are comparatively ſhy and modeſt, to what they prove afterwards, when they have ſpread and rooted themſelves into the Minds of Multitudes, and think it time to ſet up and juſtle for themſelves in the World *.

* Eunomius hæreſin ſuam (communicato Conſilio cum Eudoxio) aliquandiù occultè & intricatè ac perplexè ſparſit; tandem animo ſumpto, quæ hæreticè ſentiret, in cœtibus publicis palam oſtendit. Theodoret. lib. 2. cap. 29.

They uſually begin in modeſt Scruples, conſcientious Doubts and Queries. But having once gotten many Abetters, and amongſt them ſome that have ſubtilty and ability to plead and diſpute their Cauſe, they ruffle it out at another rate; glory in their numbers, piety and ability of their Party; boaſt and glory in the conceited Victories they atchieved over their Oppoſers. The Maſque drops off its Face, and it appears with a brow of Braſs, becomes inſolent and turbulent both in Church and State. Of which it is eaſie to give many pregnant inſtances, in the Arians of old, and more recent Errors, which I ſhall not at preſent be concerned with, leſt I exaſperate, whilſt I ſeek to heal the Wound:

* The Donatiſts in Auguſtin's time modeſtly moved, that men might not be compelled to live holy. Coacta & invita pietas, they mentioned it with diſlike; but when grown in power, facti inſolentes vim Orthodoxis inferebant, inſomuch that Dulcitius the Tribune was feign to defend the Orthodox againſt them with an Army.

* Should a Man hear the Sermons or private Diſcourſes of Erroriſts, whilſt the Deſign is but forming and projecting, he ſhould meet with little to raiſe his jealouſie. They ſpeak in Generals, and guard their Diſcourſes with Politick Reſerves. You ſhall not ſee, tho' you ſeem to ſee, the tendency of their Diſcourſes. Hence the Apoſtle ſaith, 2 Pet. 2. 1. παρεισάξουσιν, They ſhall privily (or covertly) bring in damnable Hereſies: As the Boy in Plutarch, being asked by a Stranger, what is that you carry ſo cloſely under your Cloak? wittily anſwered, You may well know that I intend you ſhall not know it by my ſo carrying it.

Sixteenth Obſervation. Nothing gives more countenance and increaſe to Error, than a weak and feeble defence of the Truth againſt it *.

* Quidam verò non ſatis Cœleſtibus literis eruditi, cùm veritatis accuſatoribus reſpondere non poſſent, objicientibus, vel impoſſibile vel incongruens eſſe, ut Deus in uterum ſe mulieris includeret, &c. quæ omnia cùm neque ingenio, neque doctrinâ defendere ac refutare poſſent (nec enim vim rationémque penitùs pervidebant) depravati ſunt ab itinere recto, & cœleſtes literas corrupêrunt, & novam ſibi doctrinam ſine ullâ radice ac ſtabilitate componerent. Lactan. lib. 4. cap. 30. de Hæreſibus.

The ſtrength of Error lieth much in the weakneſs of the Advocates and Defendants of Truth. Every Friend of Truth is not fit to make a Champion for it. Many love it, and pray for it, that cannot defend and diſpute for it. I can die for the Truth (ſaid the Martyr) but I cannot diſpute for it. Zuinglius blamed Caraloſtadius for undertaking the Controverſie of that Age, becauſe (ſaid he) non habuit ſatis humerorum, his Shoulders were too weak for the Burthen.

It can be ſaid of few, as Cicero ſpeaks of one, Nullum unquàm in diſputationibus rem defendit, quam non probarit; nullum oppugnavit, quem non everterit; He undertook no Cauſe in diſputation, which he could not defend; he oppoſed no Adverſary, but could otherthrow him. Here is a rare and happy Diſputant, who can clear and carry every Point of Truth, of which he undertakes the Defence. 'Twere happy for the Church, if the abilities and prudence of all her Friends were commenſurate and equal to their love and zeal. Every little foyl, every weak or impertinent Anſwer of a Friend to Truth, is quickly turned into a weapon to wound it the deeper.

Seventeenth Obſervation. Errors of Judgment are not cured by compulſion and external force, but by rational conviction, and proper ſpiritual Remedies.

Bodily ſufferings rather ſpread than cure intellectual Errors, I deny not but fundamental Hereſies breaking forth into open Blaſphemies againſt God, and Seditions in the Civil State, ought to be reſtrained. 'Tis no way fit Men ſhould be permitted to go up and down the World with Plague-ſores running upon them. Nor do I underſtand why Men ſhould be more cautious to preſerve their Bodies than their Souls. But I ſpeak here of ſuch Errors as may conſiſt with the Foundations of the Chriſtian Faith, and are not deſtructive to Civil Government. They take the ready way to ſpread and perpetuate them, that think to root them out of the World by ſuch improper and unwarrantable means as external force and violence. The Wind never cauſes an Earthquake, 'till it be pent in, and reſtrained from motion.

We neither find, nor can imagine, that thoſe Church or State Exorciſts ſhould ever be able to effect their end, who think to confine all the Spirits of Error within the Circle of a ſevere Uniformity. Fires, Priſons, Pillories, Stigmatizings, Mutilations, Whippings, Baniſhments, &c. are the Popiſh Topicks to confute Errors. 'Tis highly remarkable that the World long ago conſented for the avoiding of diſſent in Judgment, to enſlave themſelves and their Poſterity to the moſt fatal and deſtructive Hereſie that ever it groaned under.

'Tis a rational and proper Obſervation long ſince made by Lactantius, Quis mihi imponat neceſſitatem credendi, quod nolim, vel non credendi, quod velim? Who can force me to believe what I will not, or not to believe what I will? The rational and gentle Spirit of the Goſpel is the only proper and effectual method to cure the Diſeaſes of the Mind.

Eighteenth Obſervation. Erroneous Doctrines producing Diviſions and fierce Contentions amongſt Chriſtians, prove a fatal Stumbling-block to the World; fix their Prejudices, and obſtruct their Converſion to Chriſt *.

* Many Enemies to Chriſtianity flockt to the Nicene Synod, odio Chriſtianorum, propter abolitam Gentilium ſuperſtitionem, ut haberent in quos illuderent, ſay the Centuriſts.

They diſſolve the lovely union of the Saints, and thereby ſcare off the World from coming into the Church. This is evidently implied in that Prayer of Chriſt, John 17. That all his People might be one, that the World might believe the Father had ſent him. There is indeed no juſt cauſe for any to take offence at the Chriſtian Reformed Religion, becauſe ſo many Errors and Hereſies ſpring up among the Profeſſors of it, and divide them into ſo many Sects and Parties; for in all this we find no more than what was predicted from the beginning, 1 Cor. 11. 18, 19. I hear there be diviſions among you, and I partly believe it: for there muſt be alſo Hereſies among you, &c. And again Acts 20. 30. Alſo of your own ſelves ſhall Men ariſe, ſpeaking perverſe verſe things to draw away Diſciples after them *.

* Ante omnia, ſcire nos convenit, & ipſum, & legatos ejus prædixiſſe, quòd plurimæ Sectæ, & Hæreſes deberent exiſtere, quæ concordiam ſancti corporis rumperent: ac monuiſſe, ut ſummâ prudentiâ caveremus, ne quando in laqueos & fraudes illius adverſarii noſtri cum quo nos Deus luctari voluit, incideremus, Lactan. lib. 4. cap. 30.

The very ſame things ſtrongly confirm the Chriſtian Religion, which wicked Men improve to the reproach and prejudice of it. When Celſus objected to the Chriſtians the variety and contrariety of their Opinions; ſaying, Were we willing to turn Chriſtians, we know not of what Party to be, ſeeing you all pretend to Chriſt, and yet differ ſo much from one another. Tertullian, the Chriſtian Apologiſt, made him this wiſe and pertinent Reply, Hæreſes non dolemus veniſſe, quia novimus eſſe Prædictas. We are not troubled that Hereſies are come, ſeeing it was predicted that they muſt come. Theſe Things deſtroy not the credibility of the Chriſtian Religion, but increaſe and confirm it, by evidencing to the World the truth and certainty of Chriſt's Predictions (which were quite beyond all human foreſight) that as ſoon as his Doctrine ſhould be propagated, and a Church raiſed by it, Errors and Hereſies ſhould ſpring up among them, for the tryal of their Faith and Conſtancy.

Nevertheleſs, this no way excuſes the ſinfulneſs of Errors and Diviſions in the Church. Chriſt's Prediction neither infuſes, nor excuſes the Evil predicted by him: for what he elſwhere ſpeaks of Scandals, is as true in this caſe of Errors. Theſe Things muſt come to paſs, but woe be to that Man by whom they come.

Nineteenth Obſervation. How ſpecious and taking ſoever the Pretences of Error be, and how long ſoever they maintain themſelves in eſteem among Men, they are ſure to end in the loſs and ſhame of their Authors and Abettors at laſt *

* Poſt fœdum Arii obitum, quam plurimos ex iis, qui ab Ario priùs decepti fuerant, ad ſanitatem rediiſſe, ſcribit. Athanaſius ad Serapionem.

Truth is a Rock, that the Waves of Error daſh againſt, and evermore returnin froth and foam: yea, they foam out their own ſhame, ſaith the Apoſtle, Jude 13. What Tacitus ſpake of crafty Counſels. I may as truly apply to crafty Errors, Conſilia callida primò ſpecie læta, tractatu dura, eventu triſtia. They are pleaſant in their beginnings, difficult in their management, and ſad in their event and iſſue.

Suppoſe a Man have union with Chriſt, yet his Errors are but ſo much Hay, Wood, Straw, Subble built, or rather endeavoured to be built upon a foundation of Gold; this the fiery tryal burns up; the Author of them ſuffers loſs; and though himſelf may be ſaved, yet ſo as by fire, 1 Cor. 3. 12, 13, 14, 15. the meaning is, he makes a narrow eſcape. As a Man that leaps out of an Houſe on fire, from a Window or Battlement, with great Difficulty ſaves his Life; juſt ſo Erroriſts ſhall be glad to quit their Erroneous Opinions, which they have taken ſo much Pains to build, and draw others into: and then, oh what a ſhame muſt it be for a good Man to think, how many Days and Nights have I worſe than waſted, to defend and propagate an Error, which might have been employed in a cloſer ſtudy of Chriſt, and mine own Heart! Keckerman relates a Story of a vocal Statue, which was Thirty Years a making by a cunning Artiſt, which by the motion of its Tongue, with little Wheels, Wires, &c. could Articulate the Sound, and pronounce an entire Sentence. This Statue ſaluting Aquinas, ſurprized him, and at one ſtroke he utterly deſtroyed the curious Machin, which exceedingly troubled the fond Owner of it, and made him ſay with much concernment, Uno ictu opus triginta annorum deſtruxiſti, Thou haſt at one ſtroke deſtroyed the ſtudy and labour of thirty Years. Keck. Phyſ. p. 16 Albertus Magnus.

Beſide, what ſhame and trouble muſt it be to the zealous Promoters of Errors, not only to caſt away ſo vainly and unprofitably their own time and ſtrength, which is bad enough: but alſo to enſnare and allure the Souls of others into the ſame, or worſe Miſchief; for tho' God may ſave and recover you, thoſe that have been miſled by you may periſh.

Twentieth Obſervation. If ever Errors be cured, and the Peace and Unity of the Church eſtabliſhed, Men muſt be convinced of, and acquainted with the Occaſions and Cauſes both within and without themſelves, from whence their Errors do proceed; and muſt both know and apply the proper Rules and Remedies for the Prevention or Cure of them.

There is much Difference betwixt an Occaſion, and a proper Cauſe; theſe two are heedfully to be diſtinguiſh'd. Critical and exact Hiſtorians, as Polybius and Tacitus, diſtinguiſh betwixt the ἀρχὴ, and the αἰτία, the beginning Occaſions, and the real Cauſes of a War; and ſo we ought in this caſe of Errors carefully to diſtinguiſh them. The moſt excellent and innocent things in the World, ſuch as the Scriptures of Truth, the Liberty of Chriſtians, the Tranquility and Peace of the Church (as you will hear anon) may by the Subtilty of Satan working in conjunction with the Corruptions of Mens Hearts, become the Occaſions, but can never be the proper culpable Cauſes of Errors.

Accordingly having made theſe twenty Remarks upon the Nature and Growth of Errors (which cannot ſo well be brought within the following Rules of Method) I ſhall in the next place proceed in the Diſcovery both of the meer Occaſion, as alſo of the proper culpable Cauſes of Errors, together with the proper Preventives and moſt effectual Remedies placed together in the following Order.

The Occaſion DIVINE PERMISSION. The holy God, who is a God of Truth, Deut. 32. 4. and hateth Errors, Rev. 2. 6. the God of Order, and hates Confuſions and Schiſms in his Church, 1 Cor. 14. 33. is yet pleaſed to permit Errors and Hereſies to ariſe, without whoſe Permiſſion they could never ſpring. And this he doth for the Tryal of his Peoples Faith and Conſtancy, and for a ſpiritual Puniſhment upon ſome Men for the abuſe of his known Truths; and by the permiſſion of theſe Evils he advanceth his own Glory, and the good of his Church and People. Auguſtine anſwers that Queſtion, Why doth not God, ſince he hates Errors, ſweep them out of the World? becauſe (ſaith he) it is an act of greater Power to bring good out of evil, than not to ſuffer Evils to be at all.

Satan's Deſign in Errors is to cloud and darken God's Name and precious Truths; to deſtroy the Beauty, Strength, and Order of the Church. But God's Ends in permitting and ſending Errors, are (1.) to plague and puniſh Men for their Abuſe of Light, 2 Theſſ. 2. 11. For this Cauſe God ſhall ſend them strong Deluſions, &c. (2.) To prove and try the Sincerity and Conſtancy of our Hearts, Deut. 13. 1, 3. 1 Cor. 11. 19. And, laſtly, By theſe things the Saints are awakened to a more diligent ſearch of the Scriptures, which are the more critically read and examined upon the tryal of Spirits and Doctrines by them, 1 John 4. 1. Believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits; And Rev. 2. 2. Thou haſt tried them, that ſay they are Apoſtles, &c.

The Prevention. Though Hereſies and Errors muſt (muſt for the Reaſons aſſigned) break forth into the World, and God will turn them eventually into his own Glory, and the Benefit of his Church: yet it is a dreadful Judgment to be delivered over to a ſpirit of Error, to be the Authors and Abettors of them; this is a judicial ſtroke of God: and as ever we hope to eſcape, and ſtand clear out of the way of it, let us carefully ſhun theſe three following Cauſes and Provocations thereof.

(1.) Want of Love to the Truth, which God hath made to ſhine about us in the means, or into us by actual illumination under the means of knowledge. 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11. Becauſe they received not the love of Truth, God gave them up to ſtrong Deluſions. They are juſtly plagued with Error that ſlight Truth. Falſe Doctrines are fit Plagues for falſe Hearts.

(2.) Beware of Pride and Wantonneſs of Mind. 'Tis not ſo much the Weakneſs as the Wantonneſs of the Mind, which provokes God to inflict this Judgment. None likelier to make Seducers than Boaſters, Jude 16. Arrius gloried, that God had revealed ſome things to him, which were hidden from the Apoſtles themſelves. Simon Magus boaſted himſelf to be the mighty Power of God. The erroneous Phariſees loved the praiſes of Men. When the Papiſt reproached Luther that he affected to have his Diſciples called Lutherans, he replyed, Non ſic, ô fatue, non ſic; oro ut nomen meum taceatur: he diſdain'd that the Children of Chriſt ſhould be called by ſo vile a name as his.

(3.) Beware you neglect not Prayer, to be kept ſound in your Judgments, and guided by the Spirit into all Truth, Pſal. 119. 10. With my whole Heart have I ſought thee: O let me not wander, or err, from thy Commandments. This do, and you are ſafe from ſuch a judicial Tradition.

The Firſt Cauſe. We ſhall next ſpeak of the Cauſes of Error found in the evil Diſpoſitions of the Subjects, which prepare and incline them to receive Erroneous Doctrine and Opinions, and even catch at the Occaſions and leaſt Sparkles of Temptation, as dry Tinder: and amongſt theſe is found,

(1.) A perverſe wrangling Humour at the pretended OBSCURITY of the Scriptures. The Romiſh Party ſnatch at this Occaſion, and make it the proper Cauſe, when indeed it is but a pickt Occaſion of the Errors and Miſtakes among Men. They tell us the Scriptures are ſo difficult, obſcure, and perplext, that if private Men will truſt to them as their only Guide, they will inevitably run into Errors, and their only relief is to give up their Souls to the conduct of their Church; whereas indeed the true Cauſe of Error is not ſo much in the Obſcurity of the Word, as in the Corruption of the Mind, 1 Tim. 6. 5. 2 Tim. 3. 8.

We do acknowledge there are in the Scriptures τινα δυσνόητα, καὶ τινα δυσπαρανόητα, ſome things hard to be underſtood, 2 Pet. 3. 16. the ſublime and myſterious nature of the matter rendring it ſo: and ſome things hard to be interpreted from the manner of Expreſſion; as indeed all myſtical parts of Scripture, and Prophetical Predictions are, and ought to be delivered. The Spirit of God this way deſignedly caſts a veil over them, 'till the proper ſeaſon of their revelation and accompliſhment be come. Beſides (as the Learned Glaſſius obſerves) in Paul's ſtyle there are found ſome peculiar words and forms of Speech, which ordinary Rules of Grammar take no notice, nor give any parallel Examples of: as to be buried with Chriſt; to be baptized into his death; to which I may add, to be circumciſed in him, &c. There are alſo Multitudes of Words found in Scripture, of various and vaſtly different Significations: and accordingly there is a diverſity, and ſometimes a contrariety of Senſes given of them by Expoſitors; which to an Humoriſt, or quarrelſome Wit gives an Occaſion to vent his Errors with a plauſible appearance of Scripture-conſent. And indeed Tertullian ſaith, Non periclitor dicere ipſas Scripturas ita diſpoſitas eſſe, ut materiam ſubminiſtrarent Hæreticis. The Scriptures are ſo diſpoſed, that Hereticks may pick Occaſions; and thoſe that will not be ſatisfied, may be hardened. See Mark 4. 11, 12.

But all this notwithſtanding, the great and neceſſary things to our Salvation are ſo perſpicuouſly and plainly revealed in the Scriptures, that even Babes in Chriſt do apprehend and underſtand them, Matth. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 1. 27, 28, 29. And tho' there be difficulties in other points more remote from the foundation; yet the Spirit of God is not to be accuſed, but rather his Wiſdom to be admired herein. For (1.) this ſerves to excite our moſt intenſe ſtudy and diligence, which by this difficulty is made neceſſary, Prov. 2. 3, 4, 5. the very Prophets, yea the very Angels ſearch into theſe things, 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12. (2.) Hereby a ſtanding Miniſtry in the Church is made neceſſary, Nehem. 8. 8. Eph. 4. 11, 12, 13. So that to pretend Obſcurity of Scripture to be the culpable cauſe of Error, when indeed the fault is in our ſelves; this is too much like our Father Adam, who would implicitely accuſe God, to excuſe himſelf; he laid it upon the Woman which God gave him, and we upon the Scriptures which God hath given us.

The Remedies.

The proper Remedies and Preventives in this caſe are an heedful Attendance to, and Practice of theſe Rules.

Rule 1. Let all obſcure and difficult Texts of Scripture be conſtantly examined and expounded according to the Analogy or proportion of Faith, which is St. Paul's own Rule, Rom. 12. 6. Let him that propheſieth, (i. e. expoundeth the Scriptures in the Church) do it according to the proportion of Faith. The Analogy or proportion of Faith, is what is taught plainly and uniformly in the whole Scriptures of Old and New Teſtament, as the Rule of our Faith and Obedience. Whilſt we carefully and ſincerely attend hereunto, we are ſecured from ſinful corrupting the word of God. Admit of no ſenſe which interfereth with this proportion of Faith. If Men have no regard to this but take Liberty to rend off a ſingle Text from the body of Truth to which it belongs, and put a peculiar interpretation upon it, which is abſonous and diſcordant to other Scriptures, what woful work will they quickly make?

Give but a Papiſt liberty to take that Scripture, Jam. 2. 24. out of the frame of Scripture, A Man is juſtified by Works, and not by Faith only; and expound it without Regard to the Tenor of the Goſpel-Doctrine of Juſtification in Paul's Epiſtles to the Romans and Galatians, and a groſs Error ſtarts up immediately. Give but a Socinian the like liberty to practiſe upon John 14. 28. and a groſs Hereſy ſhall preſently look with an Orthodox Face.

Rule II. Never put a new Senſe upon Words of Scripture, in favour of your preconceived Notions and Opinions, nor wreſt it from its general and common uſe and ſenſe. This is not to interpret but to rack the Scriptures, as that Word στρέβλωσιν ſignifies, 2 Pet. 3. 16. Interpretis officium eſt, non quid ipſe velit, ſed quid cenſeat ille, quem interpretatur, exponere, as Hieron. againſt Ruff. ſpeaks. We are not to make the Sciptures ſpeak what we think, but what the Prophet or Apoſtle thought, whom we interpret. In 1 Cor. 7. 14. we meet with the word [holy] applied to the Children of Believers; that word is above 500 Times uſed for a ſtate of ſeparation to God: Therefore to make it ſignify in that place nothing but Legitimacy, is a bold and daring practiſing upon the Scripture.

Rule III. Whenever you meet with an obſcure place of Scripture, let the Context of that Scripture be diligently and throughly ſearched; for 'tis uſual with God to ſet up ſome light there to guide us through the Obſcurity of a particular Text. And there is much truth in the Obſervation of the Rabbines, Nulla eſt objectio in Lege, quæ non habet ſolutionem in latere. There's no ſcruple or objection in the Law, but it hath a ſolution at the ſide of it.

Rule IV. Let one Teſtament freely caſt its light upon the other; and let not Men undervalue or reject an Old Teſtament Text, as no way uſeful to clear and eſtabliſh a New Teſtament Point of Faith or Duty. Each Teſtament reflects light upon the other. The Jews reject the New-Teſtament, and many among us ſinfully ſlight the Old: But without the help of both, we can never underſtand the mind of God in either. 'Tis a good Rule in the Civil Law, Turpe eſt de Lege judicare, tota lege nondum inſpectâ. We muſt inſpect the whole Law, to know the ſenſe of any particular Law.

Rule V. Have a due regard to that ſenſe given of obſcure places of Scripture, which hath not only the current Senſe of Learned Expoſitors, but alſo naturally agrees with the ſcope of the place. A careleſs neglect and diſregard to this, is juſtly blamed by the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 1. 7.

Cauſe II.

A Second evil Temper in the Subject, diſpoſing and inclining Men to receive and ſuck in erroneous Doctrines and Opinions, is the ABUSE of that juſt and due CHRISTIAN LIBERTY allowed by Chriſt to all his People to read, examine, and judge the ſenſe of Scriptures with a private Judgment of Diſcretion.

Controverſiæ Anabaptiſticæ exortæ ſunt ſuperiore ſæculo variis in Europæ locis, putá à Montzero Saxone cum Sociis Anno MDXXI. occaſione ſcripti Lutheri de Libertate Chriſtianâ. Fred. Spanh. Elench. Contr. p. 95.

This is a glorious acquiſition, and bleſſed fruit of Reformation, to vindicate and recover that juſt Right, and gracious Grant made to us by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, out of the injurious hands of our Popiſh Enemies, who had uſurped and invaded it. The exerciſe of this Liberty, is at once a Duty commanded by Chriſt, John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures, ſaith Chriſt to his People. 1 Cor. 10. 15. I ſpeak as to wiſe men; judge you what I ſay. And the exerciſe of this private judgment of diſcretion by the People, is highly commended by St. Paul in the Bereans, Acts 17. 11. Theſe were more noble than thoſe in Theſſalonica, in that they received the word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearched the Scriptures daily whether thoſe things were ſo. This Liberty is not allowed in that latitude in any Religion, as it is in the Chriſtian Religion, nor enjoyed in its Fulneſs, as it is in the Reformed Religion, whoſe Glory it is that it allows its Principles and Doctrines to be critically examined and tryed of all Men by the Rule of the Word, as well knowing, the more it is ſifted and ſearched by its Profeſſors, the more they will be ſtill confirmed and ſatisfied in the truth of it.

But yet this gracious and juſt liberty of Chriſtians, ſuffers a double abuſe: One from the Popiſh Enemies, who injuriouſly reſtrain and deny it to the People. Another, by Proteſtants themſelves, who ſinfully ſtretch and extend it beyond the juſt degree and meaſure in which Chriſt allows it to them.

The Pope injuriouſly reſtrains it, diſcerning the danger that muſt neceſſarily follow the conceſſion of ſuch a liberty to the People, to compare his ſuperſtitious and erroneous Doctrines with the Rule of the Word.

St. Peter, in 2 Pet. 1. 19. tells the People they have a more ſure Word of Prophecy, whereunto they do well that they take heed. Certainly the Pope forgot either that he was Peter's Succeſſor; or that ever St. Peter told the People they did well to make uſe of that liberty which he denies them. Mr. Pool tells us of a Spaniard that uſed this Expreſſion to an Engliſh Merchant, You People of England (ſaith he) are happy, you have liberty to ſee with your own eyes, and to examine the Doctrines delivered to you, upon which your everlaſting Life depends; but we dare not ſay our Souls are our own, but are commanded to believe whatever our Teachers tell us, be it never ſo unreaſonable or ridiculous. This is a moſt injurious and ſinful Reſtraint upon it on the one Side.

And then Secondly, 'Tis too frequently abuſed, by ſtretching it beyond Chriſt's allowance and intendment upon the other ſide; when every ignorant and confident Perſon ſhall, under pretence of liberty granted by Chriſt, rudely break in upon the Sacred Text, diſtort, violate, and abuſe the Scriptures at pleaſure, by putting ſuch ſtrange and foreign ſenſes upon them, as the Spirit of God never meant or intended[k].

[k] Pro. 8. 22. Quod dictum ſcribit Epiphanius, primam Ario præbuiſſe occaſionem, hæreſin contra filium Dei fingendi.

How often have I heard that Scripture, Micah 4. 10. They ſhall be brought even to Babylon, confidently interpreted for almoſt, but not full home to Babylon, againſt the very Grammar of the Text, and the Truth of the Hiſtory? And ſo again, that place, Iſa. 58. 8. The glory of the Lord ſhall be thy rereward, through ignorance of the word, read re-reward, that is a double reward to his People? But theſe are ſmall matters compared with thoſe groſſer abuſes of Scripture by the ignorant and unlearned, which prejudice Truth, and too much countenance Popiſh Reproaches.

The Remedies.

The proper Way to prevent and remedy this Miſchief, is not by depriving any Man of his juſt Liberty, either to read or judge for himſelf what God ſpeaks in his Word, and think that way to cure cure Errors; that were the same thing as to cut off the Head to cure the Head-ach. Leave that sinful Policy with the false Religion. Let those only that do evil, be afraid of coming to the light. But the proper course of preventing the Mischiefs that come this way, is by labouring to bound and contain Christians within those limits Christ himself hath set unto this Liberty which he hath granted them. And these are such as follow:

Limitation I.

Tho' Christ hath indulged to the meanest and weakest Christian a Liberty to read and judge of the Scriptures for himself; yet he hath neither thereby, nor therewith granted him a liberty publickly to Expound and Preach the Word to others: That's quite another thing.

Every Man that can read the Scriptures, and judge of their sense, is not thereby presently made Christ's Commission-Officer, publickly and authoritatively to Preach and Inculcate the same to others: Two things are requisite to such an employment, viz. Proper Qualifications, 1 Tim. 3. And a solemn Call or Designation, Rom. 10. 14, 15. The Ministry is a distinct Office, Acts 20. 17, 28. 1 Thes. 5. 12. and none but qualified and ordained Persons can authoritatively preach the Word, 2 Tim. 1. 6. 1 Tim. 4. 14. 1 Tim. 5. 22.

Christians may privately edify one another by reading the Scriptures, communicating their sense one to another of them, admonishing, counselling, reproving one another in a private fraternal way, at seasons wherein they interfere not with more publick Duties: But for every one that hath confidence enough (and the ignorant usually are best stock'd with it) to assume a Liberty without due Qualification or Call, to expound and give the sense of Scriptures, and pour forth his crude and unstudied Notions, as the pure sense and meaning of God's Spirit in the Scriptures; this is what Christ never allowed, and through this Flood-gate Errors have broken in, and overflowed the Church of God, to the great scandal of Religion, and Confirmation of Popish Enemies.

Limitation II. Though there be no part of Scripture shut up or restrained from the knowledge or use of any Christian; yet Jesus Christ hath recommended to Christians of different Abilities, the study of some parts of Scripture rather than others, as more proper and agreeable to their Age and Stature in Religion.

Christians are by the Apostle rank'd into three Classes, Fathers, Young-men, and Little Children, 1 John 2. 13. and accordingly the Wisdom of Christ hath directed to that sort of Food which is proper to either: For there is in the Word all sorts of Food suitable to all Ages in Christ; there's both Milk for Babes, and strong Meat for grown Christians, Heb. 5. 13, 14. Those that are unskilful in the word of Righteousness, should feed upon Milk, that is, the easie, plain, but most nutritive and pleasant practical Doctrines of the Gospel. But strong Meat (saith he) that is, the more abstruse, deep, and mysterious Truths, belongeth to them that are of full Age, even those who, by reason of use, have their Senses exercised to discern both good and evil; that is, Truth and Error. To the same purpose he speaks, 1 Cor. 3. 2. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it.

Art thou a weak unstudied Christian? a Babe in Christ? Then the easier, and more nutritive Milk of plain Gospel-Doctrine is fitter for thee, and will do thee more good, than the stronger Meat of profound and more mysterious Points; or the Bones of Controversy, which are too hard for thee to deal with.

God hath blessed this Age with great Variety of sound and allowed Expositors in our own Language, by the diligent Study of which, and Prayer for the Illumination and Guidance of the Spirit, you may not only attain unto the true sense and meaning of the more plain and obvious; but also unto greater knowledge, and clearer insight into the more obscure and controverted parts of Scripture.

Cause III. There is also another evil disposition in the Subject, rendring it easily receptive of Errors, and that is spiritual SLOTHFULNESS and carelesness in a due and serious search of the whole Scripture, with a sedate and rational consideration of every part and particle therein, which may give us any, though the least light to understand the mind of God in those obscure and difficult Points we search after the knowledge of.

Truth lies deep, as the rich Veins of Gold do, Prov. 2. If we will get the Treasure, we must not only, beg, as he directs, ver. 3. but dig also, ver. 4. else as he speaks, Prov. 14. 23. The talk of the lips tends only to poverty. We are not to take up with that which lies uppermost, and next at hand upon the surface of the Text; but to search with the most sedate and considerative Minds into all parts of the written Word, examining every Text which hath any respect to the Truth we are searching for, heedfully to observe the Scope, Antecedents, and Consequents, and to value every Apex, Tittle, and Iota; for each of these are of Divine Authority, Matt. 5. 18. and sometimes greater weight is laid upon a small word, yea, upon the addition or change of a Letter in a word, as appears in the Names Abram and Sarai.

It will require some strength of Mind, and great sedulity, to lay all parts of Scripture before us, and to compare words with words, and things with things, as the Apostle speaks, 1 Cor. 2. 13. comparing spiritual things with spiritual. And though it be true that some important Doctrines, as that of Justification by Faith, are methodically disposed, and throughly cleared and settled in one and the same Context; yet it is as true, that very many other points of Faith and Duty are not so digested, but are delivered sparsim, here a little, and there a little, as he speaks, Isa. 28. 10. You must not think to find all that belongs to one Head or Point of Faith, or Duty, laid together in a System, or common place in Scripture; but scattered abroad in several Places, some in the Old-Testament, and some in the New, at a great distance one from another.

Now in our Searches and Inquiries after the full and satisfying Knowledge of the Will of God in such Points, it is necessary that the whole Word of God be throughly searched, and all those Parcels brought together to an Interview. Ex. Gr.

If a Man would see the entire discovery that was made of Christ, to the Fathers, under the Old Testament, he shall not find it laid together in any one Prophet; but shall find that one speaks to one part of it, and another to another.

Moses

Moſes gives the firſt general hint of it, Gen. 3. 15. The ſeed of the Woman ſhall break the Serpent's head. But then if you would know more particularly of whoſe Seed, according to the Fleſh, he ſhould come, you muſt turn to Gen. 22. 18. In thy ſeed (ſaith God to Abraham) ſhall all Nations of the Earth be bleſſed. And if you yet doubt what Seed God means there, you muſt go to the Apoſtle, Gal. 3. 16. To thy ſeed, which is Chriſt. If you would further know the place of his Nativity, the Prophet Micah muſt inform you of that, Mic. 5. 2. it ſhould be Bethlehem Ephrata. If you inquire of the quality of his Parents, another Prophet gives you that, Iſa. 7. 14. Behold a Virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a Son, and call his Name Immanuel. If the Time of his Birth be inquired after, Moſes and Daniel muſt inform you of that, Gen. 49. 10. Dan. 9. 24.

So under the New-Teſtament, If a Man inquire about the change of the Sabbath, he muſt not expect to find a formal repeal of the Seventh Day, and an expreſs inſtitution of the firſt Day in its room; but he is to conſider, Firſt, What the Evangeliſt ſpeaks, Mark 2. 28. That Chriſt is Lord of the Sabbath, and ſo had Power, not only to diſpenſe with it, but to change it.

Secondly, That on the firſt Day of the Week Chriſt roſe from the dead, Matt. 28. 1, 2. And that this is that great Day, foretold to be the Day to be ſolemnized upon that Account, Pſal. 118. 24.

Thirdly, That accordingly the firſt Day of the Week is emphatically ſtiled the Lord's Day, Rev. 1. 10. where you find his own Name written upon it.

Fourthly, You ſhall find this was the Day on which the Apoſtles and Primitive Chriſtians aſſembled together for the ſtated and ſolemn performance of publick Worſhip, John 20. 19. and other publick Church-Acts and Duties, 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2. And ſo by putting together, and conſidering all theſe Particulars, we draw a juſt Concluſion, That it is the Will of God, that ſince the Reſurrection of Chriſt, the firſt Day of the Week ſhould be obſerved as the Chriſtian-Sabbath.

In like manner as for the Baptizing of Believers Infants; We are not to expect it in the expreſs words of a New-Teſtament-Inſtitution or Command, that Infants under the Goſpel ſhould be Baptized; but God hath left us to gather Satisfaction about his Will and our Duty in that point, by comparing and conſidering the ſeveral Scriptures of the Old and New-Teſtament which relate to that Matter; which if we be impartial and conſiderative, we may do, Firſt, By conſidering, that by God's expreſs Command, Gen. 17. 9, 10. the Infant Seed of his People were taken into Covenant with their Parents, and the then Sign of that Covenant commanded to be applied to them.

Secondly, That though the Sign be altered, the Promiſe and Covenant is ſtill the ſame, and runs as it did before to Believers and their Children, Acts 2. 38, 39.

Thirdly, That the fœderal holineſs of our Children is plainly aſſerted under the New-Teſtament, 1 Cor. 7. 14. Rom. 11. 16.

Fourthly, We ſhall further find, that Baptiſm ſucceeds in the room of Circumciſion, and that by an Argument drawn from the compleatneſs of our Privileges under the New-Teſtament, no way inferiour, but rather more extenſive than thoſe of the Jews, Col. 2. 10, 11, 12.

Fifthly, We ſhall find that upon the Converſion of any Maſter or Parent, the whole Houſhold were Baptiz'd. By putting all theſe things, with ſome others, together, we may arrive to the deſired Satisfaction about the Will of God in this Matter.

But ſome Men want Abilities, and others are too ſluggiſh and lazy to gather together, compare and weigh all theſe and many more hints and diſcoveries of the mind of God, which would give much light unto this point; but they take an eaſier and cheaper way to ſatisfy themſelves with what lies uppermoſt upon the Surface of Scripture, and ſo, as it were by conſent, let go, and loſe their own, and their Childrens bleſſed and invaluable Privileges, for want of a little labour and patience to ſearch the Scriptures; a Folly which few would be guilty of, if but a ſmall earthly inheritance were concerned therein.

The Remedies.

To cure this Spiritual ſluggiſhneſs, and awaken us to the moſt ſerious and diligent ſearch after the Will of God in ſuch controverſial and doubtful Points, that we may not neglect the ſmalleſt hint given us about it, the following Conſiderations will be found of great uſe and weight.

Conſideration I. The moſt ſedate, impartial, and diligent Inquiries after the Will of God revealed in his Word, is a Duty expreſly enjoyned by his Sovereign Command, which immediately and indiſpenſably binds the Conſcience of every Chriſtian to the practice of it.

Remarkable is that Text to this purpoſe, Rom. 12. 2. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God. Here you find this Duty, not only aſſociated with, but made the very end of our Non-conformity to the World, and renovation of our Minds, the very things which conſtitute a Chriſtian.

And to ſweeten our pains in this Work, that Will of God, for the diſcovery whereof, we ſearch, is preſented to us under three illuſtrious and alluring Properties, viz. Good, Acceptable, and Perfect. Good it muſt needs be, becauſe the Will and Eſſence of God, the chief Good, are not two Things, but one and the ſame. And Perfect it muſt needs be, becauſe it is the Beam and Standard, by which the Actions of all reaſonable Creatures ought to be weighed and tryed, as to the moral good or evil of them. And being both good and perfect, how can it chuſe but, upon both accounts, be highly Acceptable and grateful to an upright Soul, as that Epithete εὐάρεστον there imports. Search the Scriptures, ſaith Chriſt, Joh. 5. 39. To the Law and to the Teſtimony, ſaith the Prophet, Iſa. 8. 20. This is not matter of meer Chriſtian Liberty, but a commanded Duty; and at our peril be it if we neglect it.

Conſideration II. No act of ours can be good and acceptable to the Lord, further than it is agreeable to his Will revealed in the Word.

No Man can be a Rule to himſelf. He can be no more his own Rule than his own End. One Man cannot be a Rule to another. The beſt of Men, and their Actions, and Examples, are only ſo far a Rule of imitation to us, as they themſelves are ruled by the Divine revealed Will, 1 Cor. 11. 1. uncommand-

1. uncommanded acts of Worship are abominable to God, and highly dangerous to our selves; they kindle the fire of his Jealousy to the Ruin and Destruction of the presumptuous Sinner, Levit. 10. 1, 2. So that if the Beauty and Excellency of the Will of God be not enough to allure us, the danger of acting without the knowledge of it may justly terrify us.

Consideration III. In this Duty we tread in the Footsteps of the wisest and holiest Men that ever went to Heaven before us.

It is not only the Characteristical Note of a good Man, Psal. 1. 2. but it has been the constant practice of the most eminent Believers in all Ages. The greatest Prophets, had this advantage of us, that they were the Organs or inspired instruments of discovering the Will of God to others, yet were not excused from, neither did they neglect to search it diligently themselves, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. Daniel, that great Favourite of Heaven, who had the Visions and Revelations of God; yet he himself diligently searched the written Word, in Order to the Discovery of the Mind of God, Daniel 9. 2.

Consideration IV. Every Discovery of the Will of God by fervent Prayer, diligent and impartial search of the Scriptures, and all other allowed helps, gives the highest pleasure the Mind of Man is capable of in this World.

If Archimedes, upon the Discovery of a Mathematical Truth, was so transported and ravished, that he cried out, ἕυρηκα, ἕυρηκα, I have found it, I have found it; what pleasure then must the investigation and discovery of a Divine Truth give to a sanctified Soul! Thy words were fond of me (saith Jeremiah) and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart, Jer. 15. 16. as pleasant Food to a famished Man; for now Conscience is quieted, comforted, and cheered in the way of Duty. A Man walks not at adventure with God, as that Word signifies, Levit. 26. 40, 41. but hath the pleasant directive Light of the Word and Will of God, shining sweetly upon the path of his Duty.

Consideration V. By this means you shall find your Faith greatly confirmed in the Truth of the Scriptures.

The sweet consent, and beautiful harmony of all the parts of the written Word, is a great Argument of its Divinity; and this you will clearly discern, when by a due search you shall find things that lie at the remotest distance, to conspire and consent in one, and one part casting light, as well as adding strength, to another. Thus you shall find Vetus Testamentum in novo revelatum, & novum in vetere velatum. The New Testament veiled in the Old, and the Old revealed in the New: And that such a consent of Things, so distant in Time and Place, can never be the project and invention of Man.

Consideration VI. The diligent and impartial search and inquiry after the Will of God, out of no other design than to please him in the whole course of our Duties, will turn to us for a Testimony of the integrity and sincerity of our hearts.

Thy word (said David) have I hid in my heart; that I might not sin against thee: And God will not hide his Will from those that thus seek to know it. If men would apply themselves to search the Word by fervent Prayer, and fixed Meditations, upon so pure a design, not bringing their prejudiced or prepossessed minds unto it; the Spirit of the Lord would guide them into all Truth, and keep them out of dangerous and destructive Errors.

Fourth Cause. Besides the Slothfulness of the Mind, there is found in many Persons another evil Disposition preparing them easily to receive Erroneous Impressions; namely, the INSTABILITY and Fickleness of the Judgment, and Unsetledness of Mind about the Truth of the Gospel.

Of this the Apostle warns us, Eph. 4. 14. That we henceforth be no more Children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of Doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive. None are so constant and steddy in the profession of the Truth, as those that are fully convinced of, and well satisfied with the Grounds of it. Every Professor, like every Ship at Sea, should have an ἴδιον σήκυμον, a ballast and steddiness of his own, 2 Pet. 3. 17. ready and prepared to render a reason of the hope that is in him, 1 Pet. 3. 15. able upon all occasions to give an account of those inward Motives which constrained his assent to the Truth.

He that professeth a Truth ignorantly, cannot be rationally supposed to adhere to it constantly. He that is but half convinced of a Truth, when he engages in the Profession of it, must needs be δίψυχος ἀνὴρ, a double-minded Man, as the Apostle calls him, Jam. 1. 8. half the mind hangs one way, and half another, and so it is easily moveable this way or that, with the least breath of temptation. And hence it comes to pass they are so often at a loss about their duty and their Practice; for Animi volutatio pendentem reddit vitam. A doubtful Mind must needs make a staggering and uncertain Practice.

Erroneous Teachers are called wandring Stars, Jude 13. which keep no certain course as the fixed Stars do, but are sometimes nearer and sometimes remoter one from another. Thus Errorists first imbibe unsettling Opinions, and then discover them in their inconstant Practices. Bertius wrote a Book de Apostasiâ Sanctorum, and soon after turned Papist. The Socinians and Libertines teach, That a Man of any Perswasion in Religion may be saved, so that he walk not contrary to his own Light: Such Doctrine directly tends to Scepticism in Religion.

And this Instability of the Judgment proceeds either from Hypocrisie or Weakness. Sometimes from Hypocrisie; All Hypocrites are δίψυχοι, double-minded Men: Jam. 4. 8. The double-minded man (that is the Hypocrite) is unstable in all his ways. One of that number was not ashamed to say, Se duas habere animas in eodem corpore, unam Deo dicatam, alteram unicuique illam vellet: That he had two Souls in one Body, one for God, and another for whosoever would have it.

Sometimes Instability of the mind is the effect only of Weakness in the Judgment, proceeding meerly from want of age and growth in Christ, not having as yet attained Senses exercised to discern both good and evil, Heb. 5. 14. they are but Children in Christ, and Children are easie and credulous Creatures, Eph. 4. 14. presently taken with a new Toy, and as soon weary of it; such a wavering and unstable temper invites temptation, and falls an easie prey into its hands.

I confess some cases may happen, where the Pretences on both sides may be so fair, as to put a judicious Christian to a stand what to chuse; but then their deliberation will be answerable, and then they will not change their Opinions every every Month, as Scepticks do. Whatever Error finds such a mutable disposition, its work is half done before it makes one assault. How many wavering Professors at this Day lie in Temptation's way? and how great a Harvest have Errorists and Hereticks had among them? There's not a Mountebank comes upon the Stage, but he shall find ten times more Customers for his Druggs, than the most Learned and Experienced Physician. The giddy-headed Multitude have more regard to Novelty, than Truth.

The Remedies.

How necessary and desirable are some effectual Rules and Remedies in this Case! O what a Mercy would it be to the Professors of these Days, to have their Minds fixed and their Judgments settled in the Truths of Christ! Happy is that man whose Judgment is so guarded, that no dangerous Error or Heresie can commit a Rape upon it. To this end I shall here commend the four following Rules to prevent this Vertiginous Malady in the Heads of Christians.

Rule I. Look warily to it that you get a real inward implantation into Christ, and lay the foundation deep and firm in a due and serious deliberation of Religion whenever you engage in the publick profession of it.

To this sense sound the Apostle's words, Col. 2. 6, 7. As you have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him, rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the Faith, as you have been taught. Fertility and Stability in Christ, a pair of inestimable Blessings, depend upon a good rooting of the Soul in him at first. He that thrusts a dead stick into the Ground, may easily pull it up again, but so he cannot do by a well-rooted Tree. A colour raised by violent Action, or a great Fire, soon dies away; but that which is natural or constitutional will hold. Every thing is as its foundation is 'Twas want of a good Root and due Depth of Earth which soon turned the green Corn into dry Stubble, Matth. 13. 21.

Rule II. Labour after an inward Experimental taste of all those Truths which you profess.

This will preserve your Minds from wavering and hesitation about the certainty and reality of them. We will not easily part with those Truths, which have sensibly shed down those sweet influences upon our Hearts, Heb. 10. 34. No Sophister can easily perswade a Man that hath tasted the sweetness of Honey, that it is a bitter and unpleasant thing; Non est disputandum de gustu: You cannot easily perswade a Man out of his Senses.

Rule III. Study hard and pray earnestly for Satisfaction in the present Truths; 2 Pet. 1. 12. That you may be established ἐν τῇ παρούσῃ ἀληθείᾳ, in the Truth that now is under Opposition and Controversie. Be not ignorant of the Truths that lie in present hazard.

Antiquated Opinions that are more abstracted from our present Interest, are no Tryals of the soundness of our Judgments, and integrity of our Hearts, as the controversies and conflicts of the present times are. Every Truth hath its time to come upon the Stage, and enter the Lists; some in one Age, and some in another; but Providence seems to have cast the Lot of your Nativity for the Honour and Defence of those Truths, with which Error is struggling and conflicting in your time.

Rule IV. Lastly, Be throughly sensible of the benefit and good of establishment, and of the Evil and Danger of a wavering Mind and Judgment.

Be not carried about with divers and strange Doctrines (saith the Apostle) for it is a good thing that the heart be established, &c. Heb. 13. 9. Established Souls are the Honour of Truth. It was the Honour of Religion in the primitive Days, that when the Heathens would proverbially express an impossibility, they used to say, You may as soon turn a Christian from Christ, as do it.

The Fickleness of Professors is a stumbling-block to the World. They'll say as Cato of the Civil Wars betwixt Cæsar and Pompey, quem fugiam, video, quem sequar, non video: They know whom to avoid, but not whom to follow. And as the honour of Truth, so the flourishing of your own Souls depend on it. A Tree often removed from one Soil to another, can never be expected to be fruitful, 'tis well if it make a shift to live.

Fifth Cause. Another inward Cause disposing men to receive erroneous Impressions, is an unreasonable EAGERNESS to snatch at any Doctrine or Opinion that promised Ease to an anxious Conscience.

Men that are under the frights and terrors of Conscience are willing to listen to any thing that offers present relief. Of all the Troubles in the World, those of the Mind and Conscience are most intolerable. And those that are in Pain are glad of Ease, and readily catch at any thing that seems to offer it.

This seems to be the thing which led those poor distressed Wretches, intimated Micah 6. 6. into their gross Mistakes and Errors about the Method of the Remission of their Sins. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, and bow my self before the high God? shall I come before him with Burnt-offerings, with Calves of a year old? Will the Lord be pleased with thousand of Rams, or with ten thousand of Rivers of Oyl? Shall I give my First-born for my Transgression, the Fruit of my Body for the Sin of my Soul? They were ready to puchase inward Peace, and buy out their Pardon at any Rate. Nothing but the twinges of Conscience could have extorted these things from them. Great is th Efficacy and Torment of a guilty Conscience.

Satan, who feels more of this in himself than any other Creature in the World, and knows how ready poor ignorant, but distressed Sinners, are to catch at any thing that looks like ease or comfort, and being jealous what these Troubles of Conscience may issue into, prepares for them such Erroneous Doctrines and Opinions under the names of Anodines and quieting Recipe's, by swallowing of which they feel some present ease; but their Disease is thereby made so much the more incurable.

* 'Tis upon this account he hath found such vent in the World for his Penances, Pilgrimages, and Indulgences among the Papists. But seeing this Ware will not go off among the Reformed and more enlightned Professors of Christianity, he changeth his hand and fitteth other Doses under other Names to quiet sick and distressed Souls, before ever their frights of Conscience come to settle into true Repentance and Faith in the Blood of Christ, by dressing up, and presenting to them such Opinions as these, viz.

That they may boldly apply to themselves all the Promises of Pardon and Peace, without any respect at all to Repentance or Faith in themselves; that it

* Mr. Gataker, in his Book against Saltmarsh, p. 27. tells us of one that had taken ill Courses, and being under much trouble of mind, could not be quiet till he turned Papist, and had been shrieved and absolved by a Priest.

it is not at all needful, nay, that it is illegal and sinful to have any respect to these things, forasmuch as their Sins were pardoned, and they justified from Eternity; and that the Covenant of Grace is in all Respects absolute, and is made to Sinners, as Sinners, without any Regard to their Faith or Repentance; and whatever Sins there be in them, God sees them not. *

* Saltmarsh, in the Title-page of his Book called Free-Grace, shews you the Sovereign Virtue of Antinomian Principles, to quiet Troubles of Conscience of 12 Years Growth.

To such a Charm of Troubles as this, how earnestly doth the Ear of a distressed Conscience listen! how greedily doth it suck in such pleasing words? Are all Sins that are pardoned, pardoned before they are committed? and does the Covenant of Grace require neither Repentance nor Faith antecedently to the Application of the Promises? how groundless then are all my Fears and Troubles? This, like a Dose of Opium, quiets, or rather stupifies the raging Conscience; for even an Error in Judgment, till it be detected and discovered to be so, quiets and comforts the Heart, as well as principles of Truth; but whenever the fallacy is detected, whether here or hereafter, the anguish of Conscience must be increased, or (which is worse) left desperate.

The Remedies.

To prevent and cure this Mistake and Error in the Soul, by which it is fitted and prepared to catch any Erroneous Principle (which is but plausible) for its present relief and ease, I shall desire my Reader seriously to ponder and consider the following Queries upon this Case.

Query I. Whether by the Vote of the whole Rational World, a good Trouble be not better than a false Peace? Present ease is desirable, but eternal safety is much more so: and if these two cannot consist under the present Circumstances of the Soul, Whether it be not better to endure for a time these painful pangs, than feel more acute and eternal ones, by quieting Conscience with false Remedies before the time?

'Tis bad to lie tossing a few Days under a laborious Fever; but far worse to have that Fever turned into a Lethargy or fatal Apoplexy. Erroneous Principles may rid the Soul of its present Pain, and eternal Hopes and Safety together. Acute Pains are better than a senseless stupidity. Tho' the present Rage of Conscience be not a right and kindly conviction, yet it may lead to it, and terminate in faith and union with Christ at last, if Satan do not this way practise upon it, and quench it before its time.

Query II. Bethink your selves seriously, Whether Troubles so quieted and laid asleep, will not revive and turn again upon thee with a double force, as soon as the Vertue of the Drug (I mean the Erroneous Principle) hath spent it self?

The Efficacy of Truth is eternal, and will maintain the peace it gives, for ever; but all delusions must vanish, and the Troubles which they damm'd up for a Time, break out with a greater force. Satan employs two sorts of Witches. Some to torment the Bodies of Men with grievous pain and anguish: but then he hath his White-Witches at hand to relieve and ease them. And have these poor Wretches any great Cause (think you) to boast of the Cure, who are eased of their Pains at the Price of their Souls?

Much like unto this, are the Cures of inward Troubles by Erroneous Principles. I lament the Case of blinded Papists, who by Pilgrimages, and and Offerings to the Shrines of Titular Saints, attempt the cure of a lesser Sin, by committing a greater. Is it because there is not a God in Israel, who is able in due season to pacify Conscience with proper and durable Gospel-Remedies, that we suffer our Troubles thus to precipitate us into the Snares of Satan for the Sake of present Ease?

Query III. Read the Scriptures, and inquire whether God's People, who have lain long under sharp inward Terrors, have not at last found settlement and inward Peace by those very Methods, which the Principles that quiet you, do utterly exclude?

If you will fetch your Peace from a groundless Notion, that your Sins were pardoned, and your Persons justified from all Eternity, and therefore you may apply boldly and confidently to your selves the choicest Promises and Privileges in the Gospel, without any regard to Faith or Repentance wrought by the Spirit in your souls: I am sure holy David took another course for the settlement of his Conscience, Psal. 51. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. And it hath been the constant practice of the Saints in all Ages, to clear their Title to the Righteousness of Christ wrought without them, by the Works of his Spirit wrought within them.

Sixth Cause. The next Evil Temper in the Subject, preparing and disposing it for Error, is an easie CREDULITY, or sequacious humour in Men, rendring them apt to receive things upon trust from others, without due and thorough examination of the Grounds and Reasons of them themselves.

This is a disposition fitted to receive any impression Seducers please to make upon them: they are said to deceive the Hearts of the simple, ἀκακῶν. i. e. credulous, but well-meaning People that suspect no harm. 'Tis said, Prov. 14. 15. the simple believeth every word. Through this Sluice or Flood-gate, what a multitude of Errors in Popery have overflowed the People! They are told, they are not able to judge for themselves, but must take the matters of their Salvation upon trust from their Spiritual Guides; and so the silly People are easily seduced, aad made easily receptive of the grossest absurdities their ignorant Leaders please to impose upon them.

And it were to be wished, That those two Points, viz. Ministrorum muta officia, & populi cæca obsequia, the dumb Services of their Ministers, and the blind Obedience of the People had stay'd within the Popish Confines. But alas, alas! how many simple Protestants be there, who may be said to carry their Brains in other Mens Heads? and like silly Sheep follow the next in the tract before them; especially if their Leaders have but wit and art enough to hide their Errors under specious and plausible Pretences. How many poisonous Drugs hath Satan put off under the gilded Titles of Antiquity; Zeal for God, higher attainments in godliness, new Lights? &c. How natural is it for Men to follow in the Tract, and be tenacious of the Principles and Practices of their Progenitors? Multitudes seem to hold their Opinions Jure Hereditario, by an Hereditary Right, as if their Faith descended to them the same way their Estates do.

The Emperor of Morocco told King John's Ambassador, That he had read St. Paul's Epistles; And truly (said he) were I now to chuse my Religion,

I would embrace Chriſtianity before any Religion in the World: but every Man ought to die in that Religion he received from his Anceſtors

Many honeſt, well-meaning, but weak Chriſtians, are alſo eaſily beguiled by ſpecious Pretences of new Light, and higher attainments in Reformation. This makes the weaker ſort of Chriſtians pliable to many dangerous Errors cunningly inſinuated under ſuch taking Titles. What are moſt of the Erroneous Opinions now vogued in the World, but old Errors under new Names and Titles?

The Remedies.

The Remedies and Preventions in this Caſe are ſuch as follow.

Remedy I. 'Tis beneath a Man to profeſs any Opinion to be his own, whilſt the grounds and reaſons of it are in other Mens keeping, and wholly unknown to himſelf.

If a Man may tell Gold after his Father, then ſure he may and ought to try and examine Doctrines and Points of Faith after him. We are commanded to be ready to give an account of the hope that is in us, and not to ſay, this or that is my Judgment or Opinion, but let others give an account of the ground and reaſon of it.

I confeſs, if he that leads me into an Error were alone expoſed to the hazard, and I quit and free, whatever become of him; it were quite another thing. But when our Saviour tells us, Matth. 15. 14. that both (that is, the Follower as well as the Leader) fall into the ditch; at my peril be it if I follow without Eyes of my own. That's but a weak building that is ſhored up by a prop from a Neighbour's Wall. How many Men have ruined their Eſtates by Suretiſhip for others? but of all Suretiſhip none ſo dangerous as ſpiritual Suretiſhip We neither ought (as a late Worthy ſpeaks) to defy the Judgment of the weakeſt, nor yet on the other ſide to deify the Judgment of the ſtrongeſt Chriſtian. He that pins his Faith upon another Man's Sleeve, knows not whither he will carry it.

Remedy II. As you ought not to abuſe your Chriſtian Privilege and Liberty to try all things, 1 Theſſ. 5. 21. ſo neither on the other ſide to undervalue or part with it. See the things that ſo much concern your eternal peace with your own Eyes.

I ſhewed you before, this Liberty is abuſed by extending too far; and under the notion of proving all thing, many embolden themſelves to innovate and entertain any thing. Yet beware of bartering ſuch a precious Privilege for the faireſt Promiſes others can make in lieu of it. I would not ſlight nor undervalue the Piety and Learning of others, nor yet put out my own Eyes to ſee by theirs.

Remedy III. Before you adventure to eſpouſe the Opinions of others, diligently obſerve and mark the fruits and conſequences of thoſe Opinions in the Lives of the zealous Abettors and Propagators of them: By their fruits (ſaith Chriſt) ye ſhall know them.

When the Opinion or Doctrine naturally tends to looſeneſs, or when it ſucks and draws away all a Man's Zeal to maintain and diffuſe it, and practical Religion thereby viſibly languiſhes in their Converſations, 'tis time for you to make a pauſe, before you advance one ſtep towards it.

Seventh Cauſe.

The next Evil Diſpoſition that I ſhall note in the Subject, is a vain CURIOSITY of Mind, or an itching deſire to pry into things unrevealed, at leaſt above our ability to ſearch out and diſcover.

'Tis an Obſervation as true as ancient, Pruritus aurium ſcabies Eccleſiæ, itching Ears come to a Scab upon the face of the Church. The Itch of Novelty produceth the Scab of Error. Of this Diſeaſe the Apoſtle warns us, 2 Tim. 4. 3. For the time will come, when they will not endure ſound Doctrine; but after their own luſts ſhall they heap to themſelves Teachers, having itching Ears. Nothing will pleaſe them but new Notions, and new modes of Language and Method, Tone and Geſture.

Sound Doctrine is the only ſubſtantial and ſolid Food that nouriſhes and ſtrengthens the Heart of the new Creature: but vain Scepticks nauſeate and deſpiſe this as trite, vulgar, cheap and low. Nothing humours them but Novelties and Rareties: their unſettled Brains muſt be wheel'd about, διδαχαῖς ποικίλαις καὶ ξέναις, with divers and ſtrange Doctrines, Heb. 13. 9. Novelty and Variety are the only Properties that commend Doctrines to wanton Palates. Hence it is they ſo boldly intrude into things they have not ſeen, Col. 2. 18. Theſe Cyril fitly calls τῶν τολμηρῶν πνεύματα, the domineerings, or darings of bold Spirits.

The Schoolmen have filled the World with a thouſand ungrounded Fancies, as the diſtinct Offices and Orders of Angels; and higher flights of fancy than theſe, which ſeem to be invented for no other end or uſe, but to pleaſe the itching Ears of the Curious.

There is not only a veſana temeritas Genethliacorum, a wild and daring raſhneſs of Aſtrologers, preſuming to foretell Futurities, and the Fates of Kingdoms, as well as particular Perſons, from the conjunctions and influences of the Stars; but there is alſo found as high a preſumption and boldneſs among Men in Matters of Religion.

Satan is well aware of this Humour in Men, and how exceeding ſerviceable it is to his Deſign; and therefore having the very knack of clawing and pleaſing itching Ears with taking Novelties, he is never wanting to feed their Minds with a pleaſing variety, and freſh ſucceſſion of them: new Opinions are ſtill invented and minted, in which the dangerous Hooks of Error are hid. If Men were once cured of this ſpiritual Itch, and their Minds reduced to that temper and ſobriety, as to be pleaſed with, and bleſs God for the plain revealed Truths of the Goſpel; Satan would drive but a poor Trade, and find but few Cuſtomers for his Erroneous Novelties.

The Remedies.

The proper Remedies to cure this itch after Novelty, or dangerous Curioſity of the Mind are Remedy I. Due reflection upon the manifold Miſchiefs that have entred into the World this way.

It was this Curioſity and deſire to know, that overthrew our firſt Parents, Gen. 3. 6. When the Woman ſaw that the Tree was good for food, and that it was pleaſant to the eyes, and a Tree to be deſired to make one wiſe; ſhe took of the fruit thereof. The very ſame way by which he let in the firſt Error, he hath let thouſands into the World ſince that Day. Nothing is more common in the World, than for an old Error to obtain afreſh under the new light. Satan hath the very art of turning ſtale Errors after the mode of the preſent Times, and make them current and paſſable, as new Diſcoveries and rare Novelties.

Thus

Thus he puts off Libertiniſm, the old Sin of the World, under the Title of Chriſtian Liberty. What a troop of Pagan Idolatrous Rites were by this means introduced among the Papiſts? A great part of Popery is but Ethniciſmus redivivus, Heatheniſm reviv'd. The Pagans Pontifex Maximus was revived under the new Title of Pope. The Gentiles Luſtrations in the Popiſh Holy-Water. Their Novendiale ſacrum, or Sacrifice nine Days after the burial of the Party, in the Popiſh Maſſes for the dead. Their Alvarium Fratrum, in Cloyſters of Monks and Fryars. Their Enchanters, in Popiſh Exorciſts. Their Aſyla, in Popiſh Sanctuaries. With multitudes more of Pagan Rites quite out of Date in Chriſtendum, introduced again under new Names in Popery; as was intimated, Rev. 11. 2. and Rev. 13. 15.

Quid neſciatur ſine crimine, ne diſcutiatur cum diſcrimine.

Remedy II. Be ſatisfied that God hath not left his People to ſeek their Salvation, or ſpiritual Subſiſtence among curious, abſtruſe, and doubtful Notions; but in the great, ſolid, and plainly revealed Truths of the Goſpel, John 17. 3. This is life eternal, that they may know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. In facili & abſoluto ſtat æternitas: the great concerns of our Salvation are plain and eaſie to be underſtood.

Remedy III. Vain Curioſity is a dangerous Snare of Satan. By ſuch Trifles as theſe, he devours our time, eats up our ſtrength, and diverts our minds from the neceſſary and moſt important buſineſs of Religion. Whilſt we immerſe our Thoughts in theſe pleaſing, but barren Contemplations, Heart-work, Cloſet-work, Family-work, lie by neglected. Whilſt we are employed in garniſhing the Diſh with Flowers, and curious Figures, the cunning Cheat takes away the Meat our Souls ſhould ſubſiſt by.

Eighth Cauſe.

Pride and Arrogancy of HUMANE REASON, is another Evil Diſpoſition, molding and preparing the Mind for Errors. When Men are once conceited of the ſtrength and perſpicacity of their own carnal Reaſons and Apprehenſions, nothing is more uſual than for ſuch Men to run mad with Reaſon into a thouſand Miſtakes and Errors. To this cauſe Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians aſcribe the Errors that infeſt the Church. *

* Deindè & humanæ rationis ſapientia quæ religioni plurimùm, ſemper nocuit, ſeu Philoſophia, non paucas ex ſeſe produxit hæreſes. Námque eo tempore Philoſophica ſtudia maximè vigebant; & ſuis argutiis, ſeu (ut ipſi putabant) demonſtrationibus, in ſuâ ſententiâ ità confirmati erant: ut nihil verum exiſtimarent, quod ab eorum conceptis jamdudum opinionibus diſcreparet. Magdeb. in Cent. 2. cap. 5. pag. 56.

Reaſon indeed is the higheſt natural excellency of Man: it exalts him above all Earthly Creatures, and in its primitive perfection almoſt equalized him with Angels, Heb. 2. 7. The Pleaſures which reſult from its Exerciſes and Experiments, tranſcend all the Delights and Pleaſures of Senſe. How common is it for Men to dote upon their own intellectual Beauty, and glory in their Victories over weaker Underſtandings? And though the reaſon of fallen Man is greatly wounded and weakened by Sin; yet it conceits it ſelf to be as ſtrong and clear as ever; and with Sampſon, when his Locks were ſhorn, goes forth as before time, being neither ſenſible of its own weakneſs, or of the myſterious and unſearchable Depths of Scripture.

Reaſon is our Arbiter and Guide by the Inſtitution and Law of Nature, in civil and natural Affairs: 'tis the beam and ſtandard at which we weigh them. It is an home-born Judge and King in the Soul: Faith comes in as a ſtranger to Nature, and ſo it is dealt with, even as an Intruder into Reaſon's Province, juſt as the Sodomites dealt with Lot: It refuſeth to be an Underling to Faith. Out of this Arrogancy of carnal Reaſon, as from Pandora's Box, ſwarms of Errors are flown abroad into the World.

By this Means Socinianiſm firſt ſtarted, and hath ſince propagated it ſelf. They look upon it as a ridiculous and unaccountable thing to Reaſon, that the Son ſhould be co-equal and co-eternal with the Father: that God ſhould forgive Sins freely, and yet forgive none but upon full Satisfaction. That Chriſt ſhould make that Satisfaction by his Sufferings, and yet be pars læſa, the Party offended, and ſo make Satisfaction to himſelf: with many more of the like Stamp.

Yea, Atheiſm, as well as Socinianiſm, are Births from this Womb. 'Tis proud and carnal Reaſon which quarrels at the Creation of the World, and ſeems to triumph in its incontrolable Maxim, Ex nihilo nihil fit, out of nothing comes nothing. It looks upon the Doctrine of the Reſurrection with a deriding ſmile, as a thing incredible. It thinks it hard and harſh that God ſhould command Men to turn themſelves to him, and threaten them with Damnation in caſe of Refuſal; and yet at the ſame time Man ſhould not have in himſelf a ſufficient Power, and a free will to do this, without the ſupernatural and preventing Grace of God. It thinks it a ridiculous thing for ſuch a great and ſolemn Ordinance of God as Baptiſm is, to paſs upon ſuch a Subject as an Infant of a Week old, which is not capable to underſtand the Ends and Uſes of it. Hence it is ſome over-heated Zealots have not ſtuck to ſay, That we have as good warrant and reaſon to baptize Cats, Dogs, and Horſes, as we have to baptize Infants. Oh the madneſs of carnal Reaſon!

Mr. Samuel Clark's Golden Apples. p. 149.

The Remedies.

To take down the Arrogance, and prevent the miſchief of carnal Reaſonings, let us be convinced, Remedy I. That it is the Will of God, that Reaſon in all Believers ſhould reſign to Faith, and all Ratiocination ſubmit to Revelation.

Reaſon is no better than an Uſurper, when it preſumes to arbitrate matters belonging to Faith and Revelation. † Reaſon's proper place is to ſit at the Feet of Faith, and inſtead of ſearching the ſecret grounds and reaſons, to adore and admire the great and unſearchable Myſteries of the Goſpel. None of God's Works are unreaſonable, but many of them are above Reaſon. It was as truly, as ingeniouſly ſaid by one; Never doth Reaſon ſhew it ſelf more reaſonable, than when it ceaſeth to reaſon about things that are above Reaſon. Where is the Wiſe? Where is the Scribe? Where is the Diſputer of this World? Hath not God made fooliſh the wiſdom of this World? For after that, in the wiſdom of God, the World by wiſdom knew not God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe, 1 Cor. 1. 20, 21. 'Tis not Reaſon but Faith that muſt ſave us.

† Man having ſinned by Pride, the Wiſdom of God humbles him at the very root of the Tree of Knowledge, and makes him deny his own Underſtanding, and ſubmit to Faith; or elſe for ever to loſe his deſired Felicity. Laud againſt Fiſher, p. 5.

The Wiſdom of God in the Goſpel, is Wiſdom in a Myſtery, even hidden Wiſdom, which God ordained before the World unto our Glory, 1 Cor. 2. 7. Such Wiſdom as the moſt Eagle-eyed Rationaliſts and famed Philoſophers of the World understood not. Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit, ibid. ver. 9, 10.

Remedy II. Be convinced of the weakneſs and deep Corruption of natural Reaſon, and this will reſtrain its Arrogance, and make it modeſt and wary.

A convinced and renewed Soul is conſcious to it ſelf of its own weakneſs and blindneſs, and therefore dares not pry audaciouſly into the Arcana Cœli, nor ſummon the great God to its Bar. It finds it ſelf poſed by the Myſteries of Nature, and therefore concludes it ſelf an incompetent Judge of the Myſteries of Faith.

The Arrogancy of Reaſon is the reigning Sin of the Unregenerate, though it be a Diſeaſe with which the Regenerate themſelves are infected. When Conviction ſhall do its work upon the Soul, the Plumes of ſpiritual Pride quickly fall; and it ſaith with Job: Once have I ſpoken, but I will ſpeak no more; yea, twice, but I will proceed no further. q. d. I have done, Father, I have done; I have uttered things that I underſtood not, Job 42. 3. Spiritual Illumination cures this Ambition.

Remedy III. Conſider the manifold Miſchiefs and Evils flowing from the Pride of Reaſon.

It doth not only fill the World with Errors and Diſtractions; but it alſo invades the Rights of Heaven, and caſts a vile Reflection upon the Wiſdom, Sovereignty, and Veracity of God. If lifts up it ſelf againſt his Wiſdom, not conſidering that the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than Men, 1 Cor. 1. 25. It ſpurns at his glorious Sovereignty, not conſidering that he giveth no account of his Matters, Job 33. 13. It queſtions his Veracity, in ſaying with Nicodemus, How can theſe things be? John 3. 9.

Cauſe IX. The laſt evil Diſpoſition I ſhall here take notice of in the Subject, is raſh and ignorant ZEAL; a Temper preparing the Mind both to propagate furiouſly, and receive eaſily Erroneous Doctrines and Opinions.

When there is in the Soul more Heat than light; when a fervent Spirit is governed by a weak Head, ſuch a Temper of Spirit Satan deſires, and ſingles out as fitteſt for his Purpoſe, eſpecially when the Heart is graceleſs, as well as the Underſtanding weak. A blind Horſe of an high Mettle will carry the Rider into any Pit, and venture over the moſt dangerous Precipices.

Such were the ſuperſtitious Jewiſh Zealots: they had a Zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. This κακοζηλία blind Zeal, St. Paul charges juſtly upon the Jewiſh Bigots, Rom. 10. 2. as the proper Cauſe of their dangerous Errors about the great Point of Juſtification: and ſurely no Man underſtood the evil of it more than he, who in his unregenerate ſtate was tranſported by it to the moſt ſerious perſecution of the Saints, Acts 26. 11. and even to dotage, and extream fondneſs upon the Erroneous Traditions of his Fathers, Gal. 1. 14.

Blind Zeal is a Sword in a Mad-Man's Hand. No Perſecutor to a conſcientious one, whoſe erroneous Conſcience offers up the blood of the Saints to the glory of God, John 16. 2. The blind, but zealous Phariſees would compaſs Sea and Land to make one Proſelyte, Matth. 23. 15. as our Modern Phariſees, the Jeſuits, have ſince done, who have mingled themſelves with the remoteſt and moſt barbarous Nations, to draw them to the Romiſh Error. Of the ſame temper were the falſe Teachers taxed by the Apoſtle, Gal. 4. 17. they zealouſly affect you, but not well: yea, they would exclude you (viz. from our Society and Ordinances) that you might affect them.

And as it is the great Inſtrument by which Satan propagates Errors, ſo it makes a fit Temper in the Souls of the People to receive them. For by this means Error gains the poſſeſſion of the Affections, without paſſing a previous and due teſt by the Underſtanding, and ſo gains the Soul by the Advantage of a Surprize. Every thing, by how much the more weak and ignoble it is, by ſo much the more it watcheth upon Surpriſals and Advantages. Error cares not to endure the due Examination and Teſt of Reaſon; and therefore ſeeks to gain by ſurpriſal, what it deſpairs of ever gaining by a plain and fair Tryal.

There be few Erroriſts in the World of Alexander's Mind, who would rather loſe the day, than ſteal the Victory. Hence it comes to paſs that the greateſt number of thoſe they lead Captives are ſilly Women, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, who are the moſt affectionate, but leaſt judicious Sex.

From this blind Zeal it is, that they cunningly wind their Erroneous Opinions into all their Diſcourſes, where they have any hope to prevail. A rational and modeſt Contradiction puts them into a Flame, it breaks the neareſt bonds of Friendſhip and Society.

Rabſhekah in 2 Kings 18. would not treat with Hezekiah's Counſellors of State, but with the common People upon the Wall: And Error cares not to treat with ſound Reaſon, able to ſift it through the Scripture-ſearce, but with the Affections; as well knowing, it is in vain to make War in Reaſons Territories without firſt gaining a Party among the Affections.

The Remedies.

The beſt Defenſatives againſt Erroneous Contagions in this caſe, are to be found in the following Particulars.

Defenſative I. Reflect ſeriouſly and ſadly upon the manifold Miſchiefs occaſioned every-where, and in all Ages of the World, by raſh Zeal.

Revolve Church-Hiſtories, and you ſhall find, that ſcarce any cruel Perſecution hath flamed in the World, which hath not been kindled by blind Zeal. Turn over all the Records, both of Pagan and Popiſh Perſecutions, and you ſhall ſtill find theſe two Obſervations confirmed and verified.

Firſt, That ignorant Zeal hath kindled the Fires of Perſecution; and Secondly, That the more zealous any have been for the ways of Error and Falſhood, ſtill the more implacably fierce and cruel they have been to the ſincere Servants of God. None like a Superſtitious Devoto to manage the Devil's work of Perſecution throughly and to purpoſe. They'll ruſh violently and head-long into the blood of their deareſt Relations, or moſt eminent Saints, to whoſe ſides the Devil ſets this ſharp Spur. Superſtitious Zeal draws all the Strength and Power of the Soul into that one Deſign; and woe to him that ſtands in the way of ſuch a Man, if God interpoſe not betwixt him and the Stroak. It was a rational Wiſh of him that ſaid, Liberet me Deus ab Homine unius tantum negotii, God deliver me from a Man of one only Now Deſign.

Now conſider, Reader, if thy judgment be weak, and thy affections warm, how much thou lieſt expoſed, not only to Errors which may ruin thy ſelf, but alſo to Tongue and Hand-perſecution, wherein Satan may manage thy Zeal for the Injury or Ruine of thoſe that are better than thy ſelf: And withal conſider, how many dreadful threatnings are found in Scripture againſt the Inſtruments of Perſecution, ſo employed and managed by Satan.

Certainly, Reader, it were better for thee to ſtand with thy naked Breaſt before the mouth of a diſcharging Canon, than that thy Soul ſhould ſtand under this guilt, before ſuch a Scripture-threatning as that, Pſal. 7. 13. He hath alſo prepared for him the inſtruments of death; he ordaineth his Arrows againſt the Perſecutors. And none more likely to become ſuch, than thoſe of thine own temper and complexion; eſpecially if Grace be wanting in the heart, whilſt Zeal for erroneous Principles eats up the Affections.

Second Defenſative. Conſider what Miſchief zeal for an Error will do thine own Soul, as well as others.

It will wholly ingroſs thy Time, Thoughts, and Strength; ſo that if there be any gracious Principle in thee, it ſhall not be able to thrive and proſper: For look, as a Fever takes off the natural Appetite from Food, ſo will erroneous Zeal take off thy Spiritual Appetite from Meditation, Prayer, Heart-examination, and all other the moſt neceſſary and nouriſhing Duties of Religion, by reaſon whereof thy Grace muſt languiſh.

When thy Soul, with David's, ſhould be filled and feaſted, as with Marrow and Fatneſs, by delightful Meditations of God upon thy Bed, thou wilt be rolling in thy Mind thy barren and inſipid Notions, which yield no Food or Spiritual Strength to thy Soul; thou wilt lie muſing how to diſſolve the Arguments and Objections againſt thine Errors, when thou ſhouldeſt rather be employed in ſolving the juſt and weighty Objections that lie againſt thy ſincerity and intereſt in Chriſt, which were time far better improved.

Third Defenſative. Conſider how baneful this inordinate Zeal hath been to Chriſtian Society, lamentably defacing, and almoſt diſſolving it every where, to the unſpeakable Detriment of the Churches.

We read, Mal. 3. 16. of a bleſſed time, when they that feared the Lord ſpake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a Book of Remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his Name. Oh happy time! Halcion days! I, my ſelf, remember the time, when the Zeal of the Saints ſpent it ſelf in provoking one another to Love and Good Works, in joint and fervent Prayer, in inward, experimental, and edifying Communion; my Soul hath them ſtill in remembrance, and is caſt down within me: For alas! alas! how do I ſee every where Chriſtian Communion turned into vain janglings? Churches and Families into meer Cock-pits? Mens Diſcourſings falling as naturally into Contentions about Trifles, as they were wont to do into Heavenly and Experimental Subjects, to the unſpeakable diſgrace and damage of Religion.

Fourth Defenſative. That Opinion is juſtly to be ſuſpected for erroneous, which comes in at the Poſtern-door of the Affections; and not openly and fairly at the right Gate of an enlightned and well ſatisfied Judgment. 'Tis a Thief that cometh in at the Back-door, at leaſt ſtrongly to be ſuſpected for one. Truth courts the Miſtreſs, makes its firſt and faireſt Addreſſes to the Underſtanding. Error bribes the Handmaid, and labours firſt to win the Affections, that by their influence it may corrupt the Judgment.

And thus you ſee, beſides the innocent Occaſion, viz. God's Permiſſion of Errors in the World, for the Tryal of his People, Nine proper Cauſes of Errors found in the evil Diſpoſitions of the Minds of Men, which prepare them to receive erroneous Doctrines and Impreſſions, viz.

1. A wrangling humour at the pretended Obſcurity of Scripture.
2. The Abuſe of that Chriſtian Liberty purchaſed by Chriſt.
3. Slothfulneſs in ſearching the whole Word of God.
4. Fickleneſs and Inſtability of Judgment.
5. Eagerneſs after Anodines to eaſe a diſtreſſed Conſcience.
6. An eaſy Credulity in following the Judgments and Examples of others.
7. Vain Curioſity, and prying into unrevealed Secrets.
8. The Pride and Arrogancy of Human Reaſon.
9. Blind Zeal, which ſpurs on the Soul, and runs it upon dangerous Precipices.

We next come to conſider the principal Impulſive Cauſe, by which Errors are propagated and diſſeminated in the World.

Cauſe X. Come we next in the proper order to conſider the Principal Impulſive Cauſe of Errors; which is SATAN working upon the prediſpoſed Matter he finds in the corrupt Nature of Man. * The Centuriſts ſpeaking of the ſtrange and ſudden growth of Errors and Hereſies, immediately after the planting of the Goſpel by Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, aſcribe it to Satan.

* Quæ quidem res abundè docet diram eſſe Diaboli malitiam: qui victus, atque proſtratus à Chriſto, nihilominus auſus eſt ejus Verbum ac totam religionis formam, tetris opinionibus ac blaſphemiis conſpurcare, lacerare, & propemodum evertere. Ut autem portenta hujus maligni ſpiritus in conſpectu ſint & quaſi primæ ſcaturigines plurimarum hæreſium, quæ poſtea, veluti aliis in ſe receptis rivis mirum in modum excreverunt, &c. Hiſt. Magdeb. Gent. 1. Lib. 2. Cap. 5. p. 368.

Satan was a Liar from the beginning, and abode not in the Truth: He hates it with a deadly hatred, and all the Children and Friends of Truth. And this hatred he manifeſteth ſometimes by raiſing furious Storms of Perſecution againſt the ſincere Profeſſors of it, Rev. 3. 10. and ſometimes by Clouds of Hereſies and Errors, with deſign to darken it. In the former he acts as a roaring Lyon; in the latter as a ſubtile Serpent, 2 Cor. 11. 5. I fear leſt as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his Subtilty; ſo your minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt.

When Swinkfeld ſent his Books to Luther, he told the Meſſenger, the Devil was the Author of them; and the Lord rebuke thee Satan, was the Anſwer he returned to them.

He is exceeding skilful and dexterous in citing and wreſting the Scriptures to ſerve his vile Deſigns and Purpoſes; and as impudently daring, as he is crafty and cunning; as appears in the Hiſtory of Chriſt's temptation in the Deſart, Matt. 4. 6. where where he cites one part of that Promiſe, Pſal. 91. 11. and ſuppreſſeth the reſt; ſhews the encouragement, viz. He ſhall give his Angels charge over thee; but clips off the limitation of it, viz. to keep thee in all thy ways: In viis, non in præcipitiis, In our lawful ways, not in raſh and dangerous Precipices; as Bernard well gloſſeth.

And 'tis worth obſervation, that he introduceth multitudes of Errors into the World, under the unſuſpected notions of admirable Prophylacticks, and approved Preſervatives from all Miſchiefs and Dangers from himſelf. Under this Notion, he hath neatly and covertly ſlided into the World, Holy-water, Croſſings, Reliques of Saints, and almoſt innumerable other ſuperſtitious Rites.

Erroneous Teachers are the Miniſters of Satan, however they transform themſelves into Miniſters of Righteouſneſs, 2 Cor. 11. 15, and the ſubtle dangerous Errors they broach, are fitly ſtiled by the Spirit of God, τὰ βάθη τοῦ Σατανᾶ, the Depths of Satan, Rev. 2. 24. The corrupt Teachers, the Gnoſticks, &c. called them Depths, i. e. great Myſteries, high and marvellous attainments in Knowledge; but the Spirit of God fits a very proper Epithete to them. They are Satanical Depths, and Myſteries of Iniquity. Now the level and deſign of Satan herein is double.

Firſt, He aims at the Ruin and Damnation of thoſe that vent and propagate them; upon which account the Apoſtle calls them αἱρέσεις ἀπωλείας, 2 Pet. 2. 1. deſtructive or (as we render it) damnable Hereſies. And becauſe God will preſerve the Souls of his own from this mortal Contagion, therefore,

Secondly, He endeavours by leſſer Errors to buſy the Minds, and check the growth of Grace in the Souls of the Saints, by employing them about Things ſo foreign to true Godlineſs, and the power thereof, Heb. 13. 9.

The Remedies.

The Rules for prevention and recovery are theſe that follow:

Rule I. Pray earneſtly for a thorough change of the ſtate and temper of thy Soul, by ſound Converſion and Regeneration.

Converſion turns us from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan to God, Acts 26. 18. They are his own ſlaves and vaſſals that are taken captive by him at his will, 2 Tim. 2. 16. A Sanctified Heart is a Sovereign defenſative againſt Erroneous Doctrines; it furniſhes the Soul with ſpiritual Eyes, judicious Ears, and a diſtinguiſhing Taſte, by which it may diſcern both Good and Evil, Truth and Error, Heb. 5. 14. yea, it puts the Soul at once under the conduct of the Spirit, and Protection of the Promiſe, John 16. 13. and though this doth not ſecure a Man from all leſſer Miſtakes, yet it effectually ſecures him from greater ones, which are inconſiſtent with Chriſt and Salvation.

Rule II. Acquaint your ſelves with the wiles and methods of Satan, and be not ignorant of his devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11.

When once you underſtand the waſh and paint with which he ſets off the ugly face of Error, you will not eaſily be enamoured with it. Pretences of Devotion upon one ſide, and of Purity, Zeal, and Reformation upon the other; though they be pleaſant ſounds to both Ears, yet the wary Soul will examine, before it receive and admit Doctrinal Points under theſe gilded Titles. Thoſe that have made their Obſervations upon the ſtratagems of Satan, will heedfully obſerve both the tendency of Doctrines, and the Lives of their Teachers; and if they find looſeneſs, pride, wantonneſs in them, it is not a glorious Title, or magnificent name that ſhall charm them. They know Satan can transform himſelf into an Angel of Light; and no wonder if his Miniſters alſo be transformed into Miniſters of Righteouſneſs, 2 Cor. 11. 14, 15.

Rule III. Reſign your Minds and Judgments in fervent Prayer to the Government of Chriſt, and Conduct of the Spirit; and in all your addreſſes to God, pray that he would keep them chaſte and pure, and not ſuffer Satan to commit a Rape upon them, Plead with God that part of Chriſt's Prayer, John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.

Rule IV. Live in the conſcientious and conſtant practice of all thoſe Truths and Duties God hath already manifeſted to you.

This will bring you under that bleſſed Promiſe of Chriſt, John 7. 17. If any Man will do his will, he ſhall know of the Doctrine, whether it be of God. Satan's greateſt Succeſſes are among idle, notional, and vain Profeſſors; not humble, ſerious, and practical Chriſtians.

Cauſe XI. Having conſidered and diſpatched the ſeveral internal Cauſes of Error, found in the evil diſpoſitions of the ſeduced, as alſo the Impulſive Cauſe, viz. Satan, who ſets ſuitable Baits to all theſe ſinful Humours and evil Tempers of the Heart; we come next to conſider the Inſtrumental Cauſe employed by Satan in this work, viz. the FALSE TEACHER, whom Satan makes uſe of as his Seeds-man, to diſſeminate and ſcatter Erroneous Doctrines and Principles into the Minds of Men, ploughed up, and prepared by thoſe evil Tempers forementioned, as a fit Soil to receive them.

The choice of Inſtruments is a principal part of Satan's Policy. Every one is not fit to be employed in ſuch a Service as this. All are not fit to be of the Council of War, who yet take their places in the Field. A Ruſtick carried out of the Field, on Board a Ship at Sea, though he never learned his Compaſs, nor ſaw a Ship before, can by another's Direction, tug luſtily at a Rope; but he had need be an expert Artiſt, that ſits at the Helm, and ſteers the courſe. The worſt Cauſes need the ſmootheſt Orators; and bad Ware a cunning Merchant to put it off *.

* Subtiles & aſtutas fuiſſe Montani fraudes, & quæ blandâ ſpecie quibuſvis imponere facilè potuerint; indè liquet quòd totam propemodùm Scripturam ſuſcepit; ac de Deo Patre, Filio, & Spiritu ſancto (ut Epiphanius ſcribit) eadem docuit quæ Eccleſia Chriſti, Magdeb. Cent. 2. Chap. 5. p. 72. De Hæreſibus ſub Commodo.

Deep pated Men are coveted by Satan to manage this Deſign. None like an eloquent Tertullus to confront a Paul, Acts 24. 1. A ſubtil Eccius to enter the Liſt in defence of the Popiſh Cauſe, againſt the Learned and Zealous Reformers. When the Duke of Buckingham undertook to plead the bad Cauſe of Richard the Third, the Londoners ſaid, They never thought it had been poſſible for any Man to deliver ſo much bad matter, in ſuch good Words and quaint Phraſes. Continuation of Daniel's Hiſtory, p. 233.

The firſt Inſtrument choſen by Satan to deceive Man, was the Serpent; becauſe that Creature was more ſubtil than any Beaſt of the Field. There is not a Man of eminent Parts, but Satan ſollicites him for this Service. St. Auſtin told an ingenious, but unſanctified Scholar, Cupit abs te ornari Diabolus, The Devil covets thy Parts to adorn his Cauſe. He ſurveys the World, and wherever he finds more than ordinary Strength of Reaſon, Pregnancy of Wit, Depth of Learning, and Elegancy of Language, that is the Man he looketh for.

Theſe are the Men that can almoſt indiſcernably ſprinkle their Errors among many precious Truths, and wrap up their poiſonous Drugs in Leaf-Gold or Sugar. Mareſius notes of Crellius and his Accomplices, That by the power of their Eloquence, and ſophiſtry of their Arguments, they were able artificially to cloath horrible Blaſphemies to allure the ſimple.

* Teſtorio fucatæ eloquentiæ, argutiiſq; Sophiſticis è Scripturâ perniciosè detortâ, ac fallaci fallentéq; ratione horrendæ blaſphemiæ artificiosè circumveſtiuntur ad ineſcandos ſimpliciores. Præfatio ad Hyd. Socin.

And like the Hyæna, they can counterfeit the Voices of the Shepherds, to deceive and deſtroy the Sheep. There is (ſaith a late * Worthy) an erudita nequitia, a learned kind of wickedneſs, a ſubtil art of deceiving the Minds of others. Upon which account the Spirit of God ſometimes compares them, 2 Pet. 2. 3. to cunning and cheating Tradeſmen who have the very Art to ſet a gloſs upon their bad Wares with fine Words, πλαστοῖς λόγοις ὑμᾶς ἐμπορεύσονται, they buy and ſell the People with their ensnaring and feigned words. And ſometimes he compares them to cunning Gameſters, that have the art and ſlight of hand to Cog the Die, to deceive the unskilful and win their Game, Eph. 4. 14. ἐν τῇ κυβείᾳ, &c.

* Mr. W. Gurnal, Chriſtian Armour, Part 2. p. 33.

Sunt quidam vaniloqui, & mentis ſeductores non Chriſtiani, ſed Chriſtum mercantes & cauponantes verbum Evangelii, qui venenum Erroris commiſcentes dulci blandimento ſicut œnomeli ut qui biberit illius potus guſtabilem ſenſum, dulcedine captus, inobſervanter morti addicatur. Ignatius Epiſt. ad Trallianos, p. 68.

And ſometimes the Spirit of God compares them to Witches themſelves, Gal. 3. 1. τίς ὑμᾶς ἐβάσκανε; fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitched you? How many ſtrange feats have been done upon the Bodies of Men and Women by Witchcraft? But far more and ſtranger upon the Souls of Men by the Magick of Error. Jannes and Jambres performed wonderful things in the ſight of Pharaoh, by which they deceived and hardened him; and unto theſe, falſe Teachers are compared.

Such a Man was Elymas the Sorcerer, who laboured to ſeduce the Deputy, Sergius Paulus, tho' a prudent Man, Acts 13. 7, 8, 9, 10. Oh full of all Subtilty, and all Miſchief, thou Child of the Devil! ſaid Paul unto him. The Art of ſeduction from the ways of Truth and Holineſs, diſcovers a Man to be both the Child and Scholar of the Devil.

But as the wiſe and painful Miniſters of Chriſt, who turn many to Righteouſneſs, ſhall have double Glory in Heaven; ſo theſe ſubtil and moſt active Agents for the Devil, who turn many from the ways of Righteouſneſs, will have a double portion of Miſery in Hell.

The Remedies.

The proper Remedies in this Caſe are principally Two.

Remedy I. Pray fervently, and labour diligently in the uſe of all God's appointed means, to get more ſolidity of Judgment, and ſtrength of Grace to eſtabliſh you in the Truth, and ſecure your Souls againſt the cunning craftineſs of Men that lie in wait to deceive.

'Tis the ignorance and weakneſs of the People, which makes the Factors for Error ſo ſucceſsful as they are. Conſult the Scriptures, and you ſhall find theſe cunning Merchants drive the quickeſt and gainfulleſt trade among the weak and injudicious. So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, With good Words and fair ſpeeches, they deceive the hearts of the ſimple; ἀκάκων, harmleſs, weak, eaſie Souls, who have a deſire to do well, but want wiſdom to diſcern the ſubtilties of them that mean ill; who are void both of fraud in themſelves, and ſuſpicion of others. Oh! what ſucceſs have the Deceivers, χρηστολογία καὶ εὐλογία, their fair words and ſugared ſpeeches, ſweet and taking expreſſions, among ſuch innocent ones!

And who are they among whom Satan's cunning Gameſters commonly win the Game, and ſweep the Stakes, but weak Chriſtians, credulous Souls, whom for that reaſon the Apoſtle calls νήπιοι, Children. The word properly ſignifies an Infant, when 'tis referred to the Age; but unskilful and unlearned, when referred (as it is here) to the Mind. So again, 2 Pet. 2. 14. They (that is, the Falſe Teachers there ſpoken of) beguile ψυχὰς ἀστηρίκτους, unſtable Souls, Souls that are not confirmed and grounded in the Principles of Religion. Whence by the way, take notice of the unſpeakable advantage and neceſſity of being well Catechized in our Youth: the more judicious, the more ſecure.

Remedy II. Labour to acquaint your ſelves with the ſleights and artifices Satan's Factors and Inſtruments generally make uſe of, to ſeduce and draw Men from the Truth. The knowledge of them is a good Defenſative againſt them. Now there are two common Artifices of Seducers, which it is not ſafe for Chriſtians to be ignorant of.

Firſt, They uſually ſeek to diſgrace and blaſt the Reputations of thoſe Truths and Miniſters ſet for their Defence, which they deſign afterwards to Overthrow and Ruin; and to beget Credit and Reputation to thoſe Errors which they have a mind to introduce. How many precious Truths of God are this Day, and with this Deſign, defamed as legal and carnal Doctrines; and thoſe that defend them, as Men of an Old Teſtament Spirit?

Humiliation for Sin, Contrition of Spirit, &c. fall under diſgrace with many, and indeed all Qualifications and Pre-Requiſites unto coming to Chriſt, as things not only needleſs, but pernicious unto the Souls of Men, although they have not the leaſt Dependance upon them: Yea, Faith it ſelf, as a Pre-Requiſite unto Juſtification, as no better than a Condition pertaining to Adam's Covenant.

And ſo for the Perſons of Orthodox Miniſters; you ſee into what Contempt the falſe Teachers would have brought both the Perſon and Preaching of Paul himſelf, 2 Cor. 10. 10. His bodily preſence (ſay they) is weak, and his ſpeech contemptible.

Secondly, Their other common Artifice is, to inſinuate their falſe Doctrines among many acknowledged and precious Truths, which only ſerve for a convenient Vehicle to them; and beſides that, to make their Errors as palatable and guſtful as they can to the vitiated Appetite of corrupt Nature. The forementioned Mr. W. G. Worthy hath judiciouſly obſerved how

how artificially Satan hath blended his baneful Dotes, to please the Palate of Carnal Reason, Spiritual Pride, and the desire of Fleshly Liberty.

Carnal Reason is that great Idol, which the more intelligent part of the carnal World worships. And are not the Socinian Heresies as pleasant to it, as a well-mixt Julep to a Feverish Stomach.

Spiritual Pride is another Diana, which obtains greatly in the World; and no Doctrine like the Pelagian and Semipelagian Errors, to gratify it. A Doctrine that sets fallen Nature upon its Legs again, and persuades it, it can go alone to Christ; at least, with a little external help of moral suasion, without any preventing or creating work in the Soul. This goes down glib and gratefully.

And then for Fleshly Liberty, How do those that are fond of it rejoice in that Doctrine or Opinion, which looses Nature from the Yoke of Restraint? How does the poor deluded Papist hug himself, to think he hath Liberty by his Religion, to let loose the reins of his Lust to all Sensualities, and quit himself from all that Guilt, by Auricular Confession to the Priest once a Year? How doth the Familist smile upon that Principle of his, which tells him, the Gospel allows more Liberty than severe Legal Teachers think fit to tell them of: They press Repentance and Faith; but Christ hath done all this to thy Hands.

Cause XII. Having considered the several Causes of Errors, found in the evil dispositions of the seduced, as also the impulsive and instrumental Causes, namely, Satan, and false Teachers employed by him; I shall next proceed to discover some special and most successful Methods frequently used by them, to draw the Minds of Men from the Truth. Amongst which, that which comes first to Consideration, is the great skill they have in representing the Abuses of the Ordinances of God, and Duties of Religion, by wicked Men, to scare tender and weak Consciences from the due use of them, and all further attendance upon them.

The abuse of Christ's holy Appointments are so cunningly improved to serve this Design, that the Minds of many well-meaning Persons receive such deep disgust at them, that they are scarce ever to be reconciled to them again. A strong prejudice is apt to drive Men from one extream upon another, as thinking they can never get far enough off from that which hath been so scaringly represented to them. Thus making good the old Observation, Dum vitant stulti vitia, in contraria currunt; they run from the troublesome smoak of Superstition, into the fire of an irreligious contempt of God's Ordinances, split themselves upon Charybdis to avoid Scylla. Ex. gra

The Papists having deeply abused the Ordinance of Baptism, by their corruptive mixtures and additions of the superstitious Cross, Chrism, &c. part whereof is not sufficiently purged to this Day by the Reformation; and finding also multitudes of carnal Protestants dangerously resting upon their supposed baptismal Regeneration, to the great hazard of their Salvation; which Mistake is but too much countenanced by some of its Administrators: They take from hence such deep offence at the Administration of it to any Infants at all (though the Seed of God's Covenanted People) that they think they can never be sharp enough in their Invectives against it; nor have they Patience to hear the most rational Defences of that Practice.

So, for that scriptural heavenly Duty of Singing: What more commonly alledged against it, than the abuse and ill effects of that precious Ordinance? How often is the Nonsense and Error of the common Translation, the rudeness and dulness of the Metre of some Psalms, as Psal. 7. 13. as also the cold formality, with which that Ordinance is performed by many who do but Parrotize? I say, How often are these things buzz'd into the Ears of the People, to alienate their Hearts from so sweet and beneficial a Duty?

And very often we find it urged to the same end, how unwarrantable and dangerous a thing it is for carnal and unregenerated Persons to appropriate to themselves in singing those Praises and Experiences which are peculiar to the Saints; not understanding or considering, that the singing of Psalms is an Ordinance of Christ, appointed for teaching and admonition, as well as praising, Col. 3. 16. Teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms and Hymns, &c. * Thus Antinomianism took, if not its Rise, yet its Encouragement from the too rigorous pressing of the Law upon convinced Sinners.

* The Divinity of former Ages, saith Mr. Saltmarsh put but a grain or Drachm of Gospel to a Pound of Law, in their Receipts for distemper'd Souls. Vide Saltmarsh of Free-grace, p. 40.

If Satan can prevail first with wicked Men, to corrupt and abuse God's Ordinances by the superstitious mixtures and additions; and then with good Men, to renounce and slight them for the sake of those abuses; he fully obtains his Design, and gives Christ a double wound at once; one by the hand of his avowed Enemies, the other by the hands of his Friends, no less grievous than the first. First, wicked Men corrupt Christ's Ordinances; and then good Men nauseate them.

The Remedies.

The proper Remedies against Errors, insinuated by the abuses of Duties and Ordinances, are such as follow:

Remedy I. Let Men consider, that there is nothing in Religion so great, so sacred and excellent, but some or other have greatly corrupted or vilely abused them.

What is there in the whole World more precious and excellent than the Free-grace of God? and yet you read, Jude 4. of some that turned the Grace of our Lord into Lasciviousness. What more desirable to Christians, than the glorious Liberty Christ hath purchased for them by his Blood, and settled upon them in the Gospel-Charter? A Liberty from Satan, Sin, and the rigour and curse of the Law; and yet you read, 1 Pet. 2. 16. of them that used this Liberty for a Cloak of maliciousness. 'Tis true, Christ came to be a Sacrifice for Sin, but not a Cloak for Sin; to set us at Liberty from the Bondage of our Lusts, not from the Ties and Duties of our Obedience. Under the pretence of this Liberty it was, that the Gnosticks, Carpocratians, and the Menandrians of old, did not only connive at, but openly taught and practised all manner of lewdness and uncleanness.

St. Augustin, in his Book of Heresy, makes this sad complaint, The Menandrians (saith he) do willingly embrace all uncleanness as the fruit of the Grace of God towards Men. And not only the Liberty purchased by Christ, but the very Person and Gospel of Christ are liable to abuses; and oftentimes through the corruptions of Mens Hearts become Stones of stumbling, and Menandriani omnem turpitudinem libenter amplexi sunt, tanquam gratiæ Dei erga homines fructum. August. Lib. de Hær.

Rocks

Rocks of offence. What then? Shall we renounce the Grace of God, our Chriſtian Liberty, the very Goſpel, yea, and Perſon of Chriſt himſelf, becauſe each of them have been thus vilely abuſed by wicked wretches? At the peril of our eternal damnation be it, if we do ſo. Bleſſed is he (ſaith our Lord) that is not offended in me. Beware, leſt by this means Satan at once wound the Lord Jeſus Chriſt by ſcandal, and thy Soul by prejudice.

Remedy II. Conſider alſo, that it is the nature and temper of a gracious Soul, to raiſe his eſteem, and heighten his love to thoſe Ordinances which are moſt abuſed and diſgraced by Men.

The more they are abuſed and oppoſed by others, the higher they ſhould be valued and honoured by us; Pſal. 119. 126, 127. It is time for thee, Lord, to work; for they have made void thy Law; therefore I love thy Commandments above gold, yea, above fine gold, q. d. The more they are diſgraced and abuſed by wicked Men, the more do I honour and prize them. A like Spirit, with David's was found in Elijah, 1 Kings 19. 14. I have been very jealous for the Lord God of Hoſts; becauſe the Children of Iſrael have forſaken thy Covenant, thrown down thine Altars, and ſlain thy Prophets with the Sword.

A good Man will ſtrive to honour and ſecure thoſe Truths and Duties moſt, which he finds under moſt diſgrace or danger. He loves the Truth ſincerely, who cleaves to it, and ſtands by it under all oppoſition. This is a good Trial of the ſoundneſs of thy Heart and purity of thine ends in Religion: Such a proof, as the Honour and Reputation of Religion in the World can never give thee.

In Solomon's time the Jews were very cautious how they admitted and received Proſelytes, ſuſpecting that by-ends and worldly reſpects may draw men to it; but they were not ſo cautelous in times of Diſgrace and Perſecution.

Remedy III. Before you part with any Ordinance or Practice in Religion, bethink your ſelves whether you never found any Spiritual Bleſſings or Advantages in that Path which you are now tempted to forſake.

Had you never any Spiritual Meltings of your Hearts and Affections in that Heavenly Ordinance of Singing? And may there not be now Thouſands of ſolemn Mercies in your poſſeſſion in conſequence to, and as the Fruit of your Dedication to God in Baptiſm by your Covenanted Parents? For my own part, I do heartily and ſolemnly bleſs God for it upon this account; and ſo I hope Thouſands beſides my ſelf have cauſe to do. However, ſuch a Practice may by no means be deſerted by you, becauſe abuſed by others.

Cauſe XIII.

Another Method and Artifice, by which falſe Teachers draw multitudes of Diſciples after them, is, by granting to their Ignorant and Ambitious Followers the LIBERTY of PROPHESYING; flattering them into a conceit of their excellent Gifts and Attainments, when God knows they had more need to be Catechized, and taught the Principles of Chriſtianity, than undertake to expound and apply thoſe profound Myſteries unto others.

Satan hath filled the Church and World with Errors and Troubles this way. * When ignorant and unexperienced Perſons begin to think it a low and dull thing to ſit from year to year under other mens teachings, and to fanſie that they are wiſer than their Teachers; their Pride will quickly tempt them to ſhew their Ignorance, and that miſchievous Ignorance will prove dangerous to the Truth, and troubleſome to the Church. The Apoſtle forbids the Ordination of a Novice, leſt he be puffed up, and fall into the condemnation of the Devil: and in 1 Tim. 1. 7. he ſhews us the reaſon why ſome ſwerved and turned aſide unto vain jangling; and it was this, That they deſired to be Teachers of the Law, neither underſtanding what they ſaid, nor whereof they affirmed. That is, They affected to be Preachers, though not able to ſpeak congruouſly, with tolerable ſenſe and reaſon.

I do not here cenſure and condemn the uſe and exerciſe of the Gifts of all private Chriſtians. There are to be found amongſt them ſome Perſons of raiſed Parts, and anſwerable Modeſty and Humility, who may be very uſeful, when called to Service, in extraordinary Caſes, by the voice of Providence; or exerciſe their Gifts in a probationary way, or in due ſubordination unto Chriſt's publick Officers and Ordinances, by, and with the conſent of the Paſtor, and Congregation.

But when unqualified and uncalled Perſons undertake ſuch a work out of the Conceit and Pride of their own Hearts, or are allured to it by the crafty Deſigns of Erroneous Teachers, partly to overthrow a publick, regular, and ſtanding Miniſtry in the Church, to which end the Scriptures are manifeſtly abuſed, ſuch as Jer. 31. 34. Rom. 12. 6. 1 Cor. 14. 1 Pet. 4. 10. with many others; this is the practice I here cenſure, which like a Trojan Horſe, hath ſent forth multitudes of Erroneous Perſons into the City of God to infeſt and defile it.

I cannot doubt but many a ſincere Chriſtian may be drawn into ſuch employment which puts him into a capacity of honouring God in a more eminent way, which is a thing deſirable to an honeſt and zealous Heart: And that the temptation may be greatly ſtrengthened upon them by the plauſible ſuggeſtions of cunning Seducers, who tell them, That thoſe Miniſters who oppoſe and condemn this practice, do it as Men concerned for their own Intereſt, as deſirous to monopolize the work to themſelves, and as envying the Lord's People: And that Chriſt hath given them a greater Liberty in this caſe, than thoſe Men will allow them. By this means they draw many after them, and fix them in their erroneous ways.

I have no mind at all here to expoſe the Follies and Miſchiefs introduced this way, as neither being willing to grieve the Hearts of the Sincere on one ſide, nor gratify ſcoffing Atheiſts, and prophane Enemies to Religion, upon the other ſide: only this I will, and muſt ſay, That by this means the Sacred Scriptures are moſt injuriouſly wreſted, the Peace and Order of the Church diſturbed, and a great many Miſtakes and Errors introduced.

The Remedies.

The prevention and cure of Errors this way introduced, or likely to be introduced into the Church, is by pondering and applying the following Conſiderations.

Conſideration I. Let all that encourage others, or undertake by others encouragement ſuch a Work as this, for which they are not competently qualified, and unto which they are not regularly called, con-conſider ſeriouſly with themſelves what danger they caſt their own and other mens Souls upon.

* Stultiſſimi atque impiiſſimi homines, non intelligentes nihil contrarium in rebus iiſdem ab eodem dictum fuiſſe, verbis tantùm inhærentes. Cauſas ipſas dictorum reliquêrunt. Et diverſa quidem Scripturæ dicta videntes, ad impietatem reciderunt, divinorum dictorum incapaces. Hilarius, Lib. 1. de Trinit.

The Apoſtle tells us, 2 Pet. 3. 16. That the unlearned and unſtable do wreſt the Scriptures to their own deſtruction. Danger enough, one would think, to ſcare them from it, did not the ſame Sin of Ignorance, which makes them wreſt the Scriptures, cauſe them alſo to ſlight and overlook the danger of ſo doing. *

* Athanaſius indicat Scripturas malitioſè intellectas & detortas, errores parere. Athanaſius contra Apollinar.

Certainly, my Friends, it is a great deal ſafer and more excuſable, to put an ignorant Ruſtick into an Apothecary's Shop to compound a Medicine of Drugs and Spirits, which he underſtands not, and confidently adminiſter the ſame to the Bodies of Men; than for ſuch Perſons as are led by ignorance and confidence, to intermeddle with the Miniſterial Employment: The one, perhaps, by miſtake, may poiſon men's Bodies; but the other their Souls. An ignorant Maſter, or Pilot, that never learned the Compaſs, are rather to be truſted among Rocks and Quick-ſands, than a proud ignorant Perſon with the conduct of Souls.

Conſideration II. What daring Preſumption is it to intrude our ſelves into ſo great and weighty an Employment without any Call or Warrant of Chriſt! Rom. 10. 14. How ſhall they call upon him of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear without a Preacher? and how ſhall they preach except they be ſent?

Theſe Myſteries muſt be committed to faithful Men, who ſhall be able to teach others. Thoſe Abilities muſt be examined, 1 Tim. 3. 10. and the Exerciſe of them warranted by a due and orderly appointment thereunto, 1 Tim. 4. 14. elſe (as one well obſerves) In tàm præpoſterâ diſciplinæ ruinâ tot eſſent ſenſus, quot capita; tot diſſenſus, quot ſenſus; we ſhall have as many ſenſes of Scripture, as we have Preachers, &c.

If every Phaeton, that thinks himſelf able, ſhall undertake to drive the Chariot of the Sun, no wonder if the World be ſet on Fire. Gifts and Abilities of Mind are not of themſelves ſufficient to make a Preacher. Some Lawyers at the Bar may be as skilful as the Judge upon the Bench, but without a Commiſſion they dare not ſit there.

Conſideration III. The Honour you affect, to vent your unſound Notions with liberty, is in Scripture-account your greateſt diſhonour.

The Scripture reckons falſe Teachers among the baſeſt of the People: The Prophet that teacheth lyes, he is the Tail, i. e. the baſeſt Part of the whole Body of the People, Iſ. 9. 15. And ſo far is due Goſpel-Liberty from countenancing ſuch dangerous Irregularities, that we find in a clear Prophecy of Goſpel-times, what ſhame God will pour upon them, Zech. 13. 4, 5. They ſhall be brought with ſhame enough to confeſs, I am no Prophet, I am an Husbandman; or man taught to keep Cattle from my youth.

Conſideration IV. How much more ſafe, regular, and advantageous were it for ſuch as you, to fill your own proper Places under able and faithful Goſpel-Miniſters, and to ſuck the Breaſts of fruitful Ordinances, than to conſume and pine away by ſucking your own Breaſts? I mean, living upon your own weak and inſufficient Gifts, in the ſinful neglect of Chriſt's Appointments?

Cauſe XIV. Falſe Teachers alſo propagate their Errors by a Spirit of ENTHUSIASM, the uſual comitant of Erroneous Doctrine; and draw away multitudes after them, by pretending to extraordinary Revelations, Viſions, and Voices from Heaven, which ſeem to give great credit to their Way and Party. *

* Nonnulli autem falſorum Prophetarum vaticinio illecti, de quibus & veri Prophetæ, & ipſe prædixerat, exciderunt à Doctrinâ Dei, & traditionem veram reliquerunt. Sed illi omnes dæmoniacis fraudibus irretiti, quas proſpicere & cavere debuerant, divinum nomen & cultum per imprudentiam perdiderunt. Lact. lib. 4. cap. 30. de Hæreſibus.

This was an old trick and practice of Deceivers, Deut. 13. 1. to give Signs and Wonders in confirmation of their Way, which Signs the Lord may permit to fall out to prove his People, verſ. 2. 3. tho', for the moſt part, they are confuted by their unanſwerable Events.

In the beginning of our Reformation by Luther, Calvin, &c. there ſprung up a Generation of Men, called Swenkfeldians, great Pretenders to Revelations and Viſions, who were always ſpeaking of Deifications; and an higher ſtrain of Language they commonly uſed among themſelves, than other ſerious Chriſtians underſtood, and therefore ſcornfully entitled Orthodox and humble Chriſtians, who ſtuck to the Scripture-phraſe, and wholſome form of ſound words, Grammatiſts, Vocabuliſts, Literaliſts, &c. Theſe Men (as * Sculletus in his Annals, ad annum 1525. obſerves of them) were ſo entangled in certain Enthuſiaſtick Snares, that they thought it the higheſt impiety to renounce them: And they had befooled multitudes with their magnificent words of Illumination, Revelation, Deification.

* Irretiti ſuis quibuſdam Enthuſiaſticis laqueis, unde ſe extricari ſummam putantimpietatem: dementabant multos magnificis iſtis verbis, Illuminatio, Revelatio, Deificatio, &c.

Much of the ſame Spirit was Thomas Muntzer, John of Leyden, David George, Jacob Behmen, &c. whoſe cloudy Nonſence, ænigmatical Expreſſions, and wilful Obſcurity, drew many into a ſtrange admiration of them: They all pretend to an higher knowledge of Myſteries than what the Goſpel is acquainted with; and yet give us (as Mr. Baxter well obſerves) neither Reaſons with Ariſtotle, nor Miracles with Chriſt and his Apoſtles, to cauſe us to believe any of their new Revelations. Vide Baxter of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, p. 148.

Of the ſame Bran were our late Familiſts in England, of whom Henry Nichols was the chief Leader, who decried the written Word as a dead Letter; and ſet up their own fond Conceits and Fancies under the notion of the Spirit, againſt whom that Heavenly and Learned Man, Mr. Samuel Rutherford, ſeaſonably and ſucceſsfully appeared. Hacket, Copinger and Arthington, were of the ſame Tribe; who lived a-while wrapt up in Antinomian Fancies, which at laſt brake forth into the higheſt and moſt horrid Blaſphemies.

Another Art they make uſe of to ſeduce the Credulous, is a pretence unto the Spirit of Prophecy; and great ſucceſs they promiſe themſelves this way among the weak, but curious Vulgar. And to this end Satan hath inſpired and employed ſome cunninger Heads to invent very pleaſing Predictions and Prophecies, in favour of that Party whom he deſigns to deceive. And how catching and bewitching theſe things are, gaining more reſpect among theſe vain Spirits, than the divine unqueſtionable Prophecies of Scripture, this Age hath had full and ſad experience.

Now the Deſign of Satan in theſe things, is to gain Credit to thoſe Sects, as People peculiarly favoured favoured and beloved of God above others; as if they were the particular Favourites of Heaven, as Daniel was; and ſo to draw the Multitude to admire their Perſons, and eſpouſe their Errors.

The Remedies.

Now the Remedies in this Caſe are ſuch as follow.

Remedy I. Whatever Doctrine or Practice ſeeks credit to it ſelf this way, falls juſtly thereby under ſuſpicion, that it wants a ſolid Scripture-foundation.

God hath not left his People to ſeek ſatisfaction in ſuch uncertain ways as theſe; but hath given them a ſurer word of Prophecy, to which they do well to take heed, 2 Pet. 1. 19. He hath tyed us to the ſtanding Rule of the Word; forbidding us to give heed to any other Voice, or Spirit, leading us another way, Iſa. 8. 19. 2 Theſſ. 2. 1, 2. Gal. 1. 8. Scripture-light is a ſafe and ſure Light, a pleaſant and ſufficient Light.

The Scripture (ſaith Luther) is ſo full, that as for Viſions and Revelations, Nec curo, nec deſidero, I neither regard, nor deſire them. And when he himſelf had a Viſion of Chriſt, after a day of Faſting and Prayer, he cried out, Avoid Satan, I know no Image of Chriſt, but the Scripture. An hankering Mind after theſe things, ſpeaks a ſickly and diſtempered ſtate of Soul, as longing after Traſh in young diſtempered Perſons, doth a diſtempered ſtate, or ill habit of Body.

Mr. William Bridges ſomewhere tells us of a Religious Lady of the Empreſſes Bed-chamber, whoſe Name was Gregoria, who being greatly troubled about her Salvation, wrote to Gregory, That ſhe would never ceaſe importuning him, till he had ſent her word, that he had obtained a Revelation from Heaven, that ſhe ſhould be ſaved: to whom he returned this Anſwer; Rem difficilem poſtulas & inutilem, Thou requireſt of me that which is difficult to me, and unprofitable for thee.

Remedy II. Conſider how often the World hath been abuſed by the Tricks and Cheats of that officious Spirit, the Devil, in ſuch ways as theſe.

What hath propagated Idolatry among Heathens and Chriſtians more than this? Hinc fluxerunt multæ peregrinationes, Monaſteria, delubra, dies feſti & alia, ſaith Lavater, in Job 33. Pilgrimages, Monaſteries, Shrines of Saints, Holydays, &c. have been introduced by this Trick. 'Twere endleſs to give Inſtances of it in the Hiſtories of former Ages. *

* Of the Prophecies, Viſions and pretended Inſpirations of Storke, Pfeiffer, Becold, Warendorp, &c. with the efficacy of them on the deluded People, and fatal conſequences of them both to the Deceived, and Deceivers. See Mr. Samuel Rutherford's Survey of the Spiritual Antichriſt, p. 7, 8, 9, 16, 11.

We have a notable late Account of it among our ſelves, in a Book, entitled, [A Diſcovery of the notorious Falſehood and Diſſimulation contained in a Book, ſtiled, The Goſpel-way confirmed by Miracles] Licenſed and publiſhed 1649. wherein is laid open to the World, the free Confeſſion of Ann Wells, Matthew Hall, &c. deluding the People of Whatfield in Suffolk with ſuch pretended Voices, Viſions, Prophecies and Revelations; the like have ſcarcely been heard of in England ſince the Reformation. Multitudes of People were deluded by them.

At length the Lord extorted from this Woman a full Confeſſion of the notorious falſeneſs of theſe things, by a terrible Viſion of Hell: her Partizans laboured four days to ſuppreſs and ſtifle it, but to no purpoſe: for the Horrors of Conſcience prevailed with her to confeſs the notorious Diſſimulations contained in that Book, before the People of Whatfield, and a Juſtice of the Peace. And thus the Lord out-ſhot Satan in his own Bow.

Remedy III. Conſider how difficult, yea, and impoſſible it is for a Man to determine, that ſuch a Voice, Viſion or Revelation is of God; and that Satan cannot feign or counterfeit it; ſeeing he hath left no certain Marks by which we may diſtinguiſh one Spirit from another: an albus? an ater?

Sure we are, Satan can transform himſelf into an Angel of Light; and therefore abandoning all thoſe unſafe and uncertain ways, whereby ſwarms of Errors have been conveyed into the World, let us cleave inſeparably to the ſure word of Prophecy, the Rule and Standard of our Faith and Duty.

Cauſe XV. Another way in which Falſe Teachers diſcover their Subtilty with great ſucceſs is, in TIMING their Aſſaults, and nicking the proper Seaſon, when the Minds of Men are moſt apt and eaſie to be drawn away by their fair and ſpecious Pretences.

Such a Seaſon as this, they find about the time of Mens firſt Converſion, or ſoon after their Implantation into Chriſt. Now it is that their Affections are moſt lively and vigorous, though their Judgments be but weak. They have now ſuch ſtrong and deep apprehenſions of the Grace and Love of Chriſt, and ſuch tranſcendent zeal for him, that they eaſily embrace any thing whereby they conceive he may be honoured and exalted. They have alſo ſuch deep Apprehenſions and powerful Averſations as to Sin, that they are in danger to fly even from Truth and Duty it ſelf, when it ſhall be artificially repreſented to them as Sin. For not only that which is malum per ſe, Sin indeed; but that which is malè coloratum, painted with Sin's Colours, is apt to ſcare and fright them.

Beſides, Theſe young Converts or Novices have not had time to confirm and root themſelves in the Truth; and Trees newly planted are much more eaſily drawn up, than thoſe that have ſpread and faſtened their Roots in the Earth. 'Tis obſervable what a ſwarm of falſe Teachers troubled the Churches of Corinth, Galatia, and Philippi, at, and newly after their firſt planting: and what danger theſe young Chriſtians were in, abundantly appears in the Apoſtle's frequent Cautions, and holy Jealouſy over them: he bids them beware of Dogs, beware of Evil Workers, beware of the Conciſion, Phil. 3. 2. I fear leſt by any means as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his ſubtilty, ſo your minds be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 11. 3. he was afraid of the Galatians, leſt he had beſtowed upon them labour in vain, Gal. 4. 11. he would not give place to falſe Brethren, no not for an hour, Gal. 2. 5. charges the Romans to receive them that were weak in the Faith, but not to doubtful Diſputations, Rom. 14. 1. All which, and many more Expreſſions, diſcover his grounded Jealouſy, and their extraordinary danger of ſeduction at their firſt plantation. A Novice in Chriſtianity is the Perſon Satan ſeeks for: ſtrong Believers are not in ſuch apparent danger as little ones in Chriſt, 1 John 5. 21. Little Children, keep your ſelves from Idols.

And the Reaſon is, becauſe keen Affections, match'd with weak Judgments, give a mighty advantage to Seducers. Children are apt to be taken with beautiful Appearances and fine Shews; and erroneous Teachers have the very knack to ſet a gloſs of extraordinary ſanctity upon their dangerous Opinions. Hence thoſe Perſons that promoted the Sect of the Nicolaitans, made uſe of a cunning Woman, who for her skill in painting Errors with the Colours of Truth, got the Name of Jezabel, Rev. 2. 20. That Queen was famous for the Art of Painting, 1 Kings 16. and ſo was this falſe Propheteſs: indeed there was ſcarce any eminent Sect of Errorists or Hereticks mentioned in Chruch-Hiſtory, but ſome curious feminine Artiſt hath been employed to lay the beautiful Colours upon it. So we find Simon Magus had his Helena. Carpocrates his Marcellina. Montanus his Priſcilla and Maximilla. And the curious Colours of Holineſs, Zeal, and Free-grace, artificially laid upon the face of Error, how wrinkled and ugly ſoever in it ſelf, ſets it off temptingly and takingly to weak and injudicious Minds.

Moreover, Erroneous Teachers are great Boaſters: They uſually give out to the World, what extraordinary Comforts they meet with in their way, which proves a ſtrong Temptation to young Converts, who have been ſo lately in the Depths of ſpiritual Trouble, to try at leaſt, if not to embrace it, for the expected Comforts Sake.

Ah, how many pious Miniſters in England, upon ſuch Grounds and Pretences as theſe, have had their ſpiritual Children rent from them as ſoon as born! they have travelled as in birth for them; and no ſooner did they begin to take comfort in the ſucceſs of their Labours, but to the great grief and diſcouragement of their Hearts, they have been this way bereaved of them. Thoſe that have owned them as their ſpiritual Fathers one Month, would ſcarce vouchſafe to own them, when they have met them in the Streets, another Month. Many ſad Inſtances I could give of this, and ſome as remarkable as they are freſh and recent: but I ſilence Particulars. Oh, ſee the Advantage Satan and his Inſtruments gain by nicking ſuch a critical Seaſon as this is.

The Cure, or Remedy.

The Remedies in this caſe, are twofold: the firſt reſpects the ſpiritual Fathers; and the ſecond the ſpiritual Children: both are concerned in the danger, and the Lord help both to attend to their duty.

Remedy I. Let all thoſe whoſe Miniſtry God bleſſes with the deſirable fruits of Converſion, look carefully after the Souls of young Converts.

No Nurſe ſhould be more tender and careful of her Charge, than a Miniſter ſhould be: and unto the care of a tender Nurſe, Paul compareth his care over the young Converts in Theſſalonica, 1 Theſſ. 2. 7. for alas, they lie expoſed to all dangers, they are credulous, and Seducers cunning; they want Judgment to diſcern Truth from Error; have not yet attained unto Senſes exerciſed, and Age in Chriſt to diſcern Good from Evil: when Errors are made palatable, Children will be hankering after them, and Seducers have the very art to make them ſo.

> ——Veluti pueris abſynthia tetra medentes
> Cum dare conantur, prius oras pocula circum
> Contingunt dulci Mellis, flavóque liquore.

Shepherds look to your flocks; imitate the great Shepherd of the Sheep, who gathereth the Lambs with his Arms, and carries them in his Boſom; viſit them frequently, exhort and warn them diligently, and uſe all means to eſtabliſh them in the preſent Truths.

Remedy II. Let young Converts and weak Chriſtians look carefully to themſelves by an heedful attendance unto the following Truths.

Firſt, It is not ſafe to try, nor upon trial likely that you ſhould find Chriſt in one way, and comfort in another. God doth not uſually bleſs thoſe ways to Mens comfort and edification, into which they turn aſide from that good way wherein they firſt met with Chriſt and Converſion. The ſame Miniſtry and Ordinances which are appointed and bleſſed for the one, are likewiſe appointed, and commonly bleſſed for the other, Eph. 4. 11, 12, 13.

Secondly, 'Tis a manifeſt Snare of the Devil (and you may eaſily diſcern it) to take you off from the great Work you are newly engaged in, by entangling your Minds in Notions that are foreign to it. Your hearts are now warm with God, Satan labours this way to cool and quench them: the cunning Cheat labours to ſteal away the ſweet and nutritive Food which is before you, and lay the hard and dry Bones of barren Controverſies and inſipid Notions in their room. Your buſineſs is not to frame Syllogiſms, or ſtudy Solutions to cunning Arguments about lower and leſſer Matters, ſo much as it is by Prayer and Self-examination, to clear your Intereſt in Chriſt, and to ſolve thoſe doubts that lie with weight upon your Spirits, with reference to that great Concern.

Thirdly, 'Tis a ſad thing to grieve the Hearts of thoſe faithful Miniſters that have travelled in pain for us, and rejoyced in our Converſion as the Seal of their Miniſtry. Oh, ſerve not your godly Miniſters, as the Hen is ſometimes ſerved, that hath long brooded, brought forth, and with much care and ſelf-denial nouriſhed up young Partridges, which, as ſoon as fledged, take the wing, and return no more to her.

Cauſe XVI. There is yet another Artifice of falſe Teachers to draw Men into Errors, and that is, by preſſing the Conſciences of thoſe they have made ſome impreſſions upon, unto all HASTE and SPEED, openly to declare their new Opinions, and avow and own them before the World; as knowing that this will rivet and fix them to all Intents and Purpoſes.

When they find Men under half Convictions, and ſtrong Inclinations to their way, they are ſure then to ply them with a thick ſucceſſion of Motives and Arguments, to joyn themſelves by a free and open Profeſſion, to that erroneous Party which are headed by themſelves.

And the Arguments uſually preſſed to this purpoſe are,

1. The danger of delay.
2. The comfort of declaring themſelves.

1. They preſs them with the danger of the leaſt delay, by telling them, That now they muſt live every Day and Hour in known Sin, and hold the Truth of God in Unrighteouſneſs, the evil whereof they skilfully aggravate; and the more tender and ſenſible the Conſcience is, the deeper Impreſſions ſuch Diſcourſes make, although the Caſe, indeed, will not bear the weight they lay upon it, as having not that due allowance God gives of time and means of full information in matters of this nature; yea, poſſibly driving them into as great a Snare by Precipitation, and too haſty Engagements under a doubting Conſcience.

2dly, They preſs them to a quick Reſolution, with the Expectations of abundance of Comfort, inward Peace and Joy, which will reſult from a full full engagement of themſelves, and open declaration of their Judgment; proſelyting to a Party, being the main deſign they drive at.

This was the very Art and Method by which Satan prevailed with Eve to ſwallow the bait, Gen. 3. 5. For God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes ſhall be opened, and ye ſhall be as Gods, knowing good and evil, q. d. The ſooner thou taſteſt, the better; for the firſt taſte will give thee a God-like knowledge, and marvellous advancement of thy underſtanding: Didſt thou but know the benefit that would accrue to thee thereby, thou would'ſt not delay one moment. And thus by ſetting before her the ſpeedy and immediate benefits of eating, he prevailed, and drew her into the fatal Snare.

In this the Miniſters of Satan imitate the Miniſters of Chriſt: As theſe preſs Men to make haſte to Chriſt, leſt by conſulting with Fleſh and Blood, and liſtening to the Temptations of Satan, hopeful Inclinations ſhould be blaſted in the bud; ſo the others puſh Men on to haſty Reſolutions, leſt by hearkening to the Voice of God's holy Spirit, and their own Conſciences, the deſign they have ſo far advanced ſhould be loſt and diſappointed. The Miniſters of Chriſt urge Men to a ſpeedy change of their Company, and to aſſociate themſelves with ſpiritual and profitable Chriſtians, as well knowing of what great uſe this will be to confirm and ſtrengthen them in the ways of God. So Erroriſts in like manner vehemently urge them to aſſociate with their Party, as knowing how one wedges in and fixes another in the ways of Error; for ſuch Cauſes Satan puſhes on half-convictions into haſty reſolutions, quick diſpatch being his great Advantage. This the Apoſtle intimates, Gal. 1. 6. I marvel (ſaith he) that ye are ſo ſoon removed, &c. ὅτω ταχέως, what ſo ſoon! yes, if it had not been ſo ſoon, it might never have been at all; for Errors (as one ingeniouſly obſerves) like Fiſh, muſt be eaten freſh and new, or they'll quickly ſtink.

The Cure, or Remedy.

The Remedies and Preventives in this Caſe, are ſuch as follow:

Remedy I. Conſider, that haſty Engagements in weighty diſputable Matters have coſt many Souls dear.

As haſty Marriages have produced long and late Repentance; ſo hath the clapping up of an haſty Match betwixt the Mind and Error. By entertaining ſtrange Perſons, Men ſometimes entertain Angels unaware; but by entertaining of ſtrange Doctrines, many have entertained Devils unawares. 'Tis not ſafe to open the door of the Soul to let in Strangers in the Night; let them wait 'till a clear Day-light of Information ſhew you what they are.

Remedy II. Weighty Actions require anſwerable Deliberations. It was the worthy ſaying of Auguſtus Cæſar †, That's ſoon enough, that's well enough. There be many things to be conſidered, and throughly weighed, before a Man change his Judgment, and embrace a new Doctrine or Opinion. Luther in his Epiſtle to the Miniſters of Norimberg, cites an excellent paſſage out of Baſil *, He that is about to ſeparate himſelf from the Society of his Brethren, had need to conſider many things even unto anxiety; to beg of God the Demonſtration of Truth with many Tears, and to paſs many ſolitary Nights with waking Eyes, before he attempt, or put ſuch a matter in execution. By the vote of the whole rational World, Time and Conſideration ought to be proportionate to the Weight of an Undertakement.

* Multa anxiè conſiderare eum oportet & multas noctes abſumere inſomnes, & cum multis lacrymis petere à Deo veritatis demonſtrationem, qui ſe à fratribus ſeparari vult.

Remedy III. The only ſeaſon Men have to weigh things judiciouſly and impartially, is before their Affections be too far engaged, and their Credit and Reputation too much concerned.

Men are better able to weigh Doctrines and Opinions, whilſt they are other Mens, than when they have eſpouſed them and made them their own. Before an Opinion be eſpouſed, the Affections do not blind and pervert the Judgment, as they do afterward. Self-love pulls down the balance at that end which is next us. If therefore by haſty reſolution, you loſe this only proper and advantageous ſeaſon of deliberation, you are not like to find ſuch another.

Perit omne judicium, cum res tranſit in affectum.

Remedy IV. Truſt not to the clearneſs of your own unaſſiſted Eyes, nor to the ſtrength of your ſingle reaſon; but conſult in ſuch caſes, with others that are pious and judicious, eſpecially your godly and faithful Miniſters; and hearken to the Counſels they give you. Paul juſtly wondered that the Galatians were ſo ſoon removed; and well he might: For had they not a Paul to conſult with, before they gave their conſent to falſe Teachers? Or if he was at a diſtance from them about the work of the Lord in remote places, had they no godly and judicious Friends near them, whoſe Prayers and Aſſiſtances they might call in, as Daniel did? Dan. 2. 17. Woe unto him that is alone in the time of temptation, except the Lord be with him by extraordinary Aſſiſtance and Direction.

Remedy V. Laſtly, Suſpect that Opinion (as juſtly you may) for erroneous, that's too importunate and preſſing upon you, and will not allow you due time of conſideration, and means of information. That which is a truth to day, will be a truth to morrow: But that which looks like a truth to day, may be detected, and look like it ſelf, an odious Error to morrow. And this is the reaſon of that poſt-haſte that Satan and his Factors make to gain our preſent conſent, leſt a ſpeedy detection fruſtrate the ſuit, and ſpoil the deſign. The Uſes follow in ſix Conſectaries.

Conſectary I. From all that hath been ſaid about Errors, we ſee in the firſt place, the great uſefulneſs and plain neceſſity of an able, faithful, ſtanding Miniſtry in the Church.

One ſpecial end of the Miniſtry, is the eſtabliſhment of the Peoples Souls againſt the Errors of the Times, Eph. 4. 11, 14. He gave ſome Apoſtles, &c. that we henceforth be no more children toſſed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the ſleight of Men, &c. Miniſters are Shepherds, and without a Shepherd, how ſoon will the Flock go aſtray? Moſes was abſent but a few Days from the Iſraelites, and at his return found them all run into the ſnares of Idolatry. A Sheep is animal ſequax, a Creature that follows a Leader. One Straggler may miſlead a whole Flock. A Miniſter's work is not only to feed, but to defend the Flock. I am ſet (ſaith Paul) for the defence of the Goſpel, Phil. 1. 17. An Orthodox and Faithful Miniſter, is a double double Bleſſing to the People; but woe to that People, whoſe Miniſters, inſtead of ſecuring them againſt Errors, do cauſe them to err, Iſa. 9. 16. they are the Dogs of the Flock. Some in Scripture are called dumb Dogs, who, inſtead of barking at the Thief, bite the Children: But faithful Miniſters give warning of ſpiritual dangers. So did the worthy Miniſters of London, Worceſter-ſhire, Devon, &c. in their Teſtimonies againſt Errors.

Conſectary II. This Diſcourſe ſhews us alſo how little Quietneſs and Peace the Church may expect, 'till a greater degree of light and unity be poured out upon it; what by Perſecutions from without it, and Troubles from within, little Tranquility is to be expected. 'Tis a Note of St. Bernard's, that the Church hath ſometimes had Pacem a Paganis, ſed rarò aut nunquam à filiis, Peace ſometimes from Pagan Perſecutors, but ſeldom or never any Peace from her own Children.

We read, Zech. 14. 7. the whole ſtate of the Chriſtian Church, from the primitive Days, to the end of the World, ſet forth under the notion of one Day, and that a ſtrange Day too, the light of it ſhall neither be clear, nor dark, nor day nor night, but at evening time it ſhall be light; i. e. a Day full of interchangable and alternate Providences. Sometimes Perſecutions Hereſies, and Errors prevail, and theſe make that part of the Day dark and gloomy; and then Truth and Peace break forth again, and clear up the Day. Thus it hath been, and thus it will be untill the evening of it, and at even-time it ſhall be light; then light and love ſhall get the aſcendant of Error and Diviſions. Moſt of our Scuffles and Contentions are for want of greater meaſures of both theſe.

Conſectary III. From the manifold Cauſes and Miſchiefs of Errors before-mentioned, we may alſo ſee what a choice Mercy it is to be kept ſound in Judgment, ſtedfaſt and unmoveable in the Truths and Ways of Chriſt. A ſound and ſtedfaſt Chriſtian is a bleſſing in his Generation, and a glory to his Profeſſion. 'Twas an high Encomium of Athanaſius, Sedem maluit mutare, quam ſyllabam: He would rather loſe his Seat, that a Syllable of God's Truth. Soundneſs of Judgment muſt needs be a choice Bleſſing; becauſe the Underſtanding is the τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν, that leading faculty which directs the Will and Conſcience of Man, and they his whole Life and Practice. How often and how earneſtly doth Chriſt pray for his People, that they may be kept in the Truth? 'Tis true, Orthodoxy in it ſelf is not ſufficient to any Man's Salvation; but the conjunction of an Orthodox Head, with an honeſt ſincere Heart, does always conſtitute an excellent Chriſtian, Phil. 1. 10. Happy is the Man that hath an Head ſo hearted, and an Heart ſo headed.

Conſectary IV. By this Diſcourſe we may further diſcover one great and ſpecial Cauſe and reaſon of the lamentable decay of the Spirit and Power of Religion, amongſt the Profeſſors of the preſent Age.

'Tis a complaint more juſt than common. That we do all fade as a leaf. And what may be the Cauſe? Nothing more probable than the waſting of our Time and Spirits in vain Janglings, and fruitleſs Controverſies, which the Apoſtle tells us, Heb. 13. 9. have not profited, i. e. they have greatly damnified and injured them that have been occupied therein. Many Controverſies of theſe Times grow up about Religion, as Suckers from the Root and Limbs of a Fruit-Tree, which ſpend the vital Sap that ſhould make it fruitful.

* 'Tis a great and ſad Obſervation made upon the ſtate of England by ſome judicious Perſons, That after the greateſt increaſe of Religion, both intenſively in the power of it, and extenſively in the number of Converts, what a remarkable decay it ſuffered both ways, when about the Year Forty-four, Controverſies and Diſputations grew fervent among Profeſſors. Since that Time our Strength and Glory very much abated.

* Anglia 4. annis facta eſt colluvies, & lerna omnium errorum, & ſectarum nulla à condito orbe provincia tam parvo ſpatio tot monſtroſas hæreſes protulit atque hæc. Honor. Reg. de Statu Eccleſ. Britan. p. 1.

Conſectary V. From this Diſcourſe we may alſo gather, the true Grounds and Reaſon of thoſe frequent Perſecutions which God lets in upon his Churches and People: Theſe rank Weeds call for Snowy and Froſty Weather to ſubdue and kill them.

I know the Enemies of God's People aim at ſomething elſe; They ſtrike at Profeſſion, yea, at Religion it ſelf; and according to their wicked Intention, without timely Repentance, will their Reward be. But whatever the Intention of the Agents be, the iſſues of Perſecution are upon this account greatly beneficial to the Church; the Wiſdom of God makes them excellently uſeful, both to prevent and cure the Miſchiefs and Dangers of Errors. If Enemies were not, Friends and Brethren would be injurious to each other. Perſecution, if it kills not, yet at leaſt it gives check to the Riſe and Growth of Errors: And if it do not perfectly redintegrate and unite the Hearts of Chriſtians, yet to be ſure it cools and allays their ſinful Heats; and that two ways: (1.) By cutting out for them far better and more neceſſary work. Now, inſtead of racking their Brains about unneceſſary Controverſies, they find it high time to be ſearching their Hearts, and examining the foundations of their Faith and Hope, with reſpect to the other World. (2.) Moreover, ſuch Times and Streights, diſcover the Sincerity, Zeal, and Conſtancy of them we were jealous of, or prejudiced againſt before, becauſe they followed not us.

Conſectary VI. Laſtly, Let us learn hence, both the Duty and Neceſſity of Charity and mutual Forbearance; We have all our Miſtakes and Errors one way or other, and therefore muſt maintain mutual Charity under diſſents in Judgment.

I do not ſay, but an erring Brother muſt be reduced if poſſible, and that by ſharp Rebukes too, if gentler Eſſays be ineffectual, Tit. 1. 13. and the wounds of a Friend have more faithful love in them, than the kiſſes of an Enemy; And if God make us inſtrumental by that or any other Method, to recover a Brother from the Error of his way, he will have great cauſe, both to bleſs God, and thank the Inſtrument, who thereby ſaves a Soul from Death, and hides a multitude of ſins, Jam. 5. 20. 'Tis our Duty, if we meet an Enemy's Ox or Aſs going aſtray, to bring him back again; Exod. 23. 4. much more the Soul of a Friend. Indeed, we muſt not make thoſe Errors that are none, nor ſtretch every innocent Expreſſion to that purpoſe; nor yet be too haſty in medling with Contention, 'till we cannot be both ſilent and innocent; and then whatever the Expence be, Truth will repay it.

A N

An APPENDIX: Containing a full and modeſt Reply to Mr. Philip Cary's Rejoinder to my Vindiciæ Legis & Fœderis.

Manifeſting the Badneſs of his Cauſe, in the Feebleneſs and Impertinency of his Defence. And adding farther Light and Strength to the Arguments, formerly produced in Defence of God's Gracious Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. and the Right of Believers Infants to Baptiſm, grounded thereupon.

SIR,

NEXT to the not deſerving a Reproof, is the due reception and improvement of it. You deſerve a ſharper reprehenſion for your Temerity and Obſtinacy, than I am willing to give you from the Preſs. Yet in love to the Truth, and your own Soul, reprove you I muſt, and I hope God will enable me to be both mild in the manner, and convincingly clear in the matter and cauſe thereof. 'Tis better to loſe the Smiles, than the Souls of Men. I dare not neglect the Duty of a Friend, for fear of incurring the ſuſpicion of an Enemy. Several learned and eminent Divines who have ſeen what hath publickly paſſed betwixt you and me, have returned me their Thanks, and think you ought to thank me too for the pains I have taken to ſet you right, hoping you will evidence your ſelf-denial and repentance by an ingenuous Retraction of your Errors.

But how will you deceive their Expectations, and unbecome the Character given you by your Friends, when they ſhall find the true meaſure both of your Ability and Humility drawn by your own Pen in the following Rejoinder?

I have throughly conſidered your Reply in the Manuſcript you ſent me, which I hear is now in the Preſs; and in the following Sheets have given a full, and (I think) a final Anſwer to whatſoever is material therein. And, it ſo falling out, that my Diſcourſe of Errors was juſt going under the Preſs, whilſt your Rejoinder was there alſo, I thought it not convenient to delay my Reply any longer, but to have my Antidote in as great readineſs as might be to meet it.

One Inconvenience I eaſily foreſee, that the Pages of your Manuſcript, which I follow, may not throughout exactly anſwer to the Print: But every intelligent Reader will eaſily diſcern and rectify That, if my Bookſeller ſave him not that trouble, as I have deſired him to do.

As to the Controverſy about the Right of Believers Infant-ſeed to Baptiſm, you have altogether adventured it the ſecond time with the conſent of your Partizans, upon the three Hypotheſes, which (if I miſtake not) I have fully confuted and baffled in my firſt Anſwer. But if my Brevity occaſioned any Obſcurity in that, I hope you ſhall find it ſufficiently done here. Mean time you have given, and I accordingly take it for granted, that our Arguments for Infants Baptiſm ſtand in their full ſtrength againſt you, 'till you can better diſcharge and free your dangerous Aſſertions from the Errors and Abſurdities in which they are now more involved and intricated than before.

The weaker any thing is, the more querulous it is. If Scripture-Argument, and clear Reaſon, will not ſupport the Cauſe I undertake, I am reſolved never to call in paſſionate Invectives and weak Evaſions for my Auxiliaries, as you have here done. The Lord give us all clearer Light, tenderer Conſciences, exemplary Humility and Ingenuity.

Vindiciarum Vindex:

Or, A REFUTATION of the Weak and Impertinent Rejoinder of Mr. Philip Cary: Wherein he vainly attempts the Defence of his Abſurd Theſis, to the great Abuſe and Injury of the Laws and Covenants of GOD.

AND muſt I be dipt once more in the Water-Controverſy? 'tis time for me to think of undreſſing my ſelf, and making ready for my approaching Reſt, and employ thoſe few Minutes I have to ſpend, in more practical and beneficial Studies, for my own, and the Churches greater Advantage. And 'tis time for Mr. C. to reflect upon his paſt Follies, which have conſumed too much of his own, and others time, without any Advantage; yea, to the apparent loſs and injury of the Cauſe he undertakes to defend.

When I received theſe Sheets from him, in vindication of his Solemn Call, I was at a ſtand in my own Reſolutions, whether to let it paſs (without any Animadverſions upon it) as a paſſionate Clamour for a deſperate Cauſe; or give a ſhort and full Anſwer to his confuſed and impertinent Rejoinder. But conſidering that I had under-hand at the ſame time the fore-going Treatiſe of the Cauſes and Cures of Mental Errors; and that though my honeſt Neighbour diſcovers much weakneſs in his way of Argumentation, yet it was like to meet with ſome intereſted Readers, to whom, for that reaſon, it would be the more ſuitable; and how apt ſuch Perſons are to glory in the laſt Word; but eſpecially conſidering that a little time and pains would ſuffice (as the Caſe ſtands) to end the unſeaſonable Controverſy betwixt us, and both clear and confirm many great and weighty Points of Religion: I was upon these Considerations prevailed with, against my own Inclination, to cast in these few Sheets as a Mantissa to the former seasonable and necessary Discourse of Errors, resolving to fill them with what should be worth the Reader's Time and Pains.

As for the rude Insults, uncomely Reflections, and passionate Expressions of my discontented Friend, I shall not throw back the Dirt upon him, when I wipe it off from my self: I can easily forgive and forget them too. The best Men have their Passions, Jam. 5. 17. even Sweet-Briers and Holy-Thistles have their offensive Prickles. I consider my honest Neighbour under the strength of a Temptation. It disquiets him to see the Labours of many Years, and the raised Expectations of so great a Conquest and Triumph over Men of Renown, all frustrated by his Friend and Neighbour, who had done his utmost to prevent it; and often foretold him of the Folly and Vanity of his Attempt. Every thing will live as long as it can, and natura vexata prodit seipsum. But certainly it had been more for Truth's Honour, and Mr. C's Comfort, to have confessed his Follies humbly to God, and have laid his Hand upon his Mouth.

The Things in Controversy betwixt us, are great and weighty, viz. The true Nature of the Sinai Laws, in their complex Body; the Quality of God's Covenant with Abraham; and the Dispensation of the New Covenant we are now under. These are Things of great weight in themselves; and their due Resolutions are at this Time somewhat the more weighty, because my Antagonist hath adventured the whole Controversy of Infants Baptism upon them.

I have in my Vindiciæ Legis, &c. stated the several Questions clearly and distinctly. Shewn Mr. C. what is no part of the Controversy, and what is the very hinge upon which it turns; desired him, if he made any Reply, to keep close to the just and necessary Rules of Disputation, by distinguishing, limiting, or denying any of my Propositions; that the Matters in Controversy might be put to a fair and speedy Issue. But instead of that, I meet with a Flood of Words rolling sometimes to this part, and then to another part of my Answer, and so back again, without the steddy direction of Art or Reason. There may, for ought I know, be some things of weight in Mr. Cary's Reply, if a Man could see them for words: but, without scoff or vanity I must say of the rational part of it, as the Poet said of the over-dressed Woman, —— Pars minima est ipsa Puella sui, 'tis the least part of it. To follow him in his irregular and extravagant way of writing, were to make my self guilty of the same folly I blame him for. I am therefore necessitated to perstringe them, and reduce all I have to say, under three general Heads.

I. I shall clearly evince to the World, That Mr. Cary hath not been able to discharge and free his own Thesis from the horrid Consequents, and gross Absurdities which I laid to their Charge in my first Reply; but instead thereof, in this feeble and unsuccessful Attempt to free the former, he hath entangled himself in more and greater ones.

II. That he hath left my Arguments standing in their full strength against him.

III. And then I shall confirm and strengthen my three Positions, which destroy the Cause he manages, by some further Additions of Scripture, Reason, and Authorities, which I hope will fully end this Matter betwixt us.

But before I touch the Particulars, two things must be premised for the Reader's due Information.

1. That the Controversie about the true Nature of the Sinai Laws, both moral and ceremonial, complexly considered, is not that very Hinge upon which the Right of Believers Infants to Baptism depends: that stands as it did before, be the Sinai Laws what they will. We do not derive the Right of Infants from any other Law or Covenant, but that gracious Covenant which God made with Abraham, which was in being 430 Years before Moses his Law; and was no way injured, much less disannulled, by the Addition of it. If Abraham's Covenant be the same Covenant of Grace we are now under, the Right of Believers Infants to Baptism, is secured, whatever the Sinai Covenant prove to be. Which I speak not out of the least jealousie that Mr. Cary hath, or ever shall be able to prove it to be a pure Adam's Covenant of Works; but to prevent Mistakes in the Reader, Gal. 3. 17.

2. It must be heedfully observed also, that how free, gracious, and absolute soever the New Covenant be, (for God forbid that I should go about to eclipse the Glory of Free-grace, on which my Soul depends for Salvation) yet that will never prove Abraham's Covenant to be an abolished Adam's Covenant of Works, unless two things more be proved, which I never expect to see, viz.

First, That Abraham and his believing Posterity, were bound by the very Nature and Act of Circumcision to keep the whole Law in their own Persons, in order to their Justification and Salvation, as perfectly and perpetually, and under the same Penalty for the least failure, as Adam was to keep the Law in Paradise.

Secondly, It must be further proved, That Abraham, and all his believing Offspring, who stood with him under that Covenant, whereof Circumcision was the initiating Sign, were all saved in a different way from that in which Believers are now saved under the Gospel: For so it must be, if the Addition of Circumcision made it unto them an Adam's Covenant of Works. But this would be a direct Contradiction to the Words of the Apostle, speaking of them who were under the Covenant of Circumcision, Acts 15. 11. But we believe, that through the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved even as they. If he say, they stood indeed under that Covenant, as a pure Covenant of Works, but were saved by another Covenant; and so for many Ages the Church of God stood absolutely under the Covenant of Works, and at the same time under the pure Covenant of Grace; the one altogether absolute and free, the other wholly conditional: And though these two be in their own Natures inconsistent and destructive of each other, yet so it was, that all the Saints for many Ages were absolutely under the one, and yet purely under the other: shall I be then censured for saying he speaks pure Contradiction?

Possibly my Reader will be tempted to think I abuse him, and that no Man of common sense can be guilty of such an horrid Absurdity. I must, whatever respect I have for Mr. C. once more tell him before the World, that this is not only his own Doctrine, but that very Doctrine upon which he hath adventured the whole Cause and Controversy of of Infant's Baptiſm, which I therefore ſay is hereby become a deſperate Cauſe.

And this brings me to my firſt general Head, viz.

I. Firſt, That Mr. Cary hath not been able to free his Theſis from this horrid Abſurdity; but by ſtruggling to do it, hath (according to the Nature of Errors) entangled himſelf in more and greater ones.

Mr. Cary, in p. 174, 175. of his Solemn Call, was by me reduced to this Abſurdity, which he there owns in expreſs Words, "That Moſes and the "whole body of the People of Iſrael, were abſolutely "under (without the exception of any) the ſevereſt Penal-"ties of a dreadful Curſe; and that the Sinai Covenant "could be no other than a Covenant of Works, a Mi-"niſtration of Death and Condemnation; and yet at "the ſame time, both Moſes, and all the Elect, were "under a pure Covenant of Goſpel-grace: And if theſe "were two contrary Covenants in themſelves, and juſt "oppoſite the one to the other, as indeed they were, we "have nothing to ſay, but with the Apoſtle, Oh the "Depth, &c.

This, Reader, is the Poſition which muſt be made good for Mr. Cary, or his Cauſe is loſt. Deformed Iſſues do not look as if they had beautiful Truth for their Mother. No falſe or abſurd Concluſion can regularly follow from true Premiſſes: But hence naturally and neceſſarily follows this Abſurdity I. That Abraham, Moſes, and all the Believers under the Old Teſtament, by ſtanding abſolutely under Adam's Covenant of Works, as a Miniſtration of Death and Condemnation; and at the ſame time purely under the Covenant of Grace (as Mr. C. affirms they did) muſt neceſſarily, during their Lives, hang midway betwixt Life and Death, Juſtification and Condemnation; and after Death, midway betwixt Heaven and Hell. During life, they could neither be juſtified nor condemned. Juſtified they could not be, for Juſtification is the Soul's paſſing from Death to Life, 1 John 3. 14. John 5. 24. Upon a Man's Juſtification his Covenant and State are changed; but the Covenant and State of no Man can be ſo changed as long as he remains abſolutely under the ſevereſt Penalties and Condemnation of the Law, as Mr. C. affirms they did.

Again, Condemned they could not be, ſeeing all that are under the pure Covenant of Grace (as he ſaith they were at the ſame time) are certainly in Chriſt, and to ſuch there is no Condemnation, Rom. 8. 1. nor ever ſhall be: John 5. 24. He that believeth, ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life. What remains then, but that during Life, they could neither be perfectly juſtified, nor perfectly condemned; and yet being abſolutely under the ſevereſt Penalties of Adam's Covenant, they were perfectly condemned; and again, being under the pure Covenant of Grace, they muſt be perfectly juſtified?

And then after Death, they muſt neither go to Heaven, nor Hell; but either be annihilated, or ſtick mid-way in Limbo Patrum (as the Papiſts fanſie) betwixt both. No condemned Perſon goes to Heaven, nor any juſtified Perſon to Hell. His Poſition therefore, which neceſſarily infers this groſs Abſurdity, is juſtly renounced and deteſted by Learned and Orthodox Divines.

Turret. pars 2da pag. 290.

The Learned and Acute Turrettine, the late famous Profeſſor of Divinity, at Geneva, proving that the Sinai Law could not be a pure Covenant of Works, brings this very Medium to prove it, as a known Truth, allowed by all Men. "The Iſraelites (ſaith he) with whom "God covenanted, were already under Abraham's "Covenant, which was a Covenant of Grace; "and were ſaved in Chriſt by it; therefore they "could not be under the legal Covenant. Nemo "enim ſimul poteſt duobus fœderibus totâ ſpecie diſtinctis "ſubeſſe; becauſe no Man can be under two Co-"venants ſpecifically different at the ſame time, "as theſe two are.

Mr. Strong on the Covenant, p. 66, 67.

That great and renowned Divine Mr. William Strong, gives four irrefragable Arguments to prove, that no Man can ſtand under both theſe Covenants at the ſame time, which in co-ordination actually deſtroy and make void each other. "If the firſt Covenant ſtand, there is no "place for the ſecond; and if the ſecond ſtand, "the firſt is made void. And this (ſaith he) will "fully appear, if we conſider the direct contra-"riety in the Terms of thoſe two Covenants. "For (1.) the Righteouſneſs of the firſt Covenant "is in our ſelves; but the Righteouſneſs of the "ſecond is the Righteouſneſs of another, 1 John "5. 11, 12. (2.) In the Covenant of Works, ac-"ceptation is firſt of the Works, and afterwards "of the Perſon; Gen. 4. 7. but in the Covenant "of Grace, the acceptation is firſt of the Perſon "and then of the Work, Gen. 4. 4. (3.) The firſt "Covenant was a Covenant without a Prieſt, but "the ſecond is a Covenant with a Prieſt. (4.) In "the firſt Covenant there is matter of glorying, "but in the ſecond there is none, Rom. 3. 27. So "that theſe two can never conſiſt, except you can "compound, or reconcile theſe four Oppoſites in "the juſtification of the ſame Perſon.

Bolton's Bounds, p. 133.

To the ſame purpoſe, ſaith that excellent Mr. Samuel Bolton, "If the "Law were a Covenant of Works, then "were the Jews under a different Co-"venant from us, and ſo none of them were ſaved, "which the Apoſtle gainſays, Acts 15. 11. or "elſe they were both under a Covenant of Works, "and a Covenant of Grace. But that they could "not be; they are utterly inconſiſtent. Ergo. And thus all ſound Divines ſpeak. I may therefore ſay of Mr. Cary's Poſition, as Ruveus before me did, omnem abſurditatem excedere videtur, it ſeemeth to exceed all Abſurdities. A Man may more rationally ſuppoſe two Natures and eſſential Forms in one Body, and place the ſame thing under divers Species in the predicament of ſubſtance: yea, 'twere more tolerable to affirm, That ex duobus entibus per ſe fit unum ens per ſe, than to place any (as Mr. C. places all) of God's People under two oppoſite Covenants. If Mr. C. were abſolutely under the condemnation of the Law, would he not be purely juſtified, think you? Yet he places Abraham, Moſes, and all Believers with them, abſolutely under the ſevereſt condemnation of the Law, and the pure Goſpel Covenant at once.

But to cover the ſhame and nakedneſs of his Aſſertion, which places Believers abſolutely under Adam's Covenant, he is fain to make uſe of two Fig-leaves, as Adam did.

(1.) And the firſt attempt he now makes, p. 4, 5, 6, 7. of his Reply, is by way of Retortion, by telling us, "That the ſame pretended Abſurdities do "fall as heavily, and a great deal more, on our Do-"ctrine, who affirm the Sinai Law (complexly taken) "to be a Covenant of Faith, or Grace, than upon his "who makes them two eſſentially different Covenants:

" becauſe we are forced to comprize perfect doing, with
" the curſe for non-performance, under the ſame Cove- " nant with believing: and that it cannot be denied,
" but that all the People of God were abſolutely under
" the Sinai Covenant, Gal 3. 23 and Gal. 4. 4, 5.
" and conſequently under the curſe, Gal. 3. 10. This is the ſum and ſubſtance of his firſt Anſwer.

Reply. I will not be tempted to expoſe my Neighbour to deriſion for his ſtrange Anſwer; but rather propound two ſober Queries to him, and the Reader, viz. (1.) What Orthodox Divines he ever met with, and what are their Names, who are forced to comprize perfect doing, with the curſe for non-performance, under the ſame Covenant with believing: and ſo make the two oppoſite Covenants to be ſpecifically one and the ſame? Name your Men, with their Books and Pages; or retract with ſhame and ſorrow, what you have here abuſively affirmed of them. Cameron indeed makes it a ſubſervient Covenant; the moſt a true, though obſcure Covenant of Grace; but none comprize Adam's Covenant with its Curſe, in the New Covenant. (2.) Whether it be imaginable, That the ſame Abſurdity can follow from their Doctrine, that make the whole complex body of the Sinai Law a Covenant of Grace, though more obſcure, and ſo place all the People of God in thoſe Ages under it; as does neceſſarily follow his Doctrine, who makes it a pure Adam's Covenant of Works, and places the Church of God abſolutely under the curſe of it, and alſo under the pure Covenant of Grace at the ſame time? If Grace and Grace (how different ſoever in degrees of Manifeſtation) be as oppoſite and repugnant, as Grace and Works, as Juſtification and Condemnation are, 'tis time for me to lay down my Pen; for I have certainly loſt my Underſtanding to guide it any further.

But Mr. Cary will ſay, If you do not, yet Mr. Roberts doth comprize both in one Covenant. I ſay, you abuſe Mr. Roberts in ſo affirming: for he ſaith in that very place you refer to, * That believing in Chriſt, was ultimately and chiefly intended in the Sinai Covenant; and perfect doing was only urged upon Iſrael in ſubordination and tendency to that believing. And upon that ground it is he affirms that Covenant to be a Covenant of Faith, and ſo denominates it from the chief ſcope and intent of it. He ſets not doing and believing in co-ordination, or places the Church under two oppoſite Covenants, as you do; but places the Law, where it ought to be placed, in ſubordination to Faith and Chriſt, and therefore you have abuſed that good Man, as well as me, and your ſelf moſt of all in this your firſt impertinent and ſilly Anſwer.

* Roberts on the Covenant, pag. 775, 776, 777.

(2.) But you have one Evaſion more, p. 7. where " you ſay That how harſh and dreadful ſoever the Terms
" or Conditions of the Legal Covenant were to thoſe that " were under it, as Moſes, and the whole body of the " Iſraelites; then were; yet the grace of the Goſpel-
" Covenant far ſuperſeded, and was by far more victo-
" rious, powerful, and efficacious, Rom. 5. 17, 20.

Reply. Worſe and worſe. Your Diſcourſe mends like ſowre Ale in Summer. Here you fanſie the two Covenants (under which you place the whole Church of God) to be in a conflict one with the other; Condemnation and Juſtification ſtruggling one with another, as I told you before they would: but however, the Grace of the New Covenant prevails at laſt, and gets the victory over the Covenant of Works. Very good; but then pray, Sir, if you pleaſe, anſwer me a plain Queſtion or two at your leiſure.

Firſt, How far did the Covenant of Grace prevail againſt the Covenant of Works? Was it ſo far prevalent and victorious, as utterly to vanquiſh and diſannul it, as a Covenant of Works to them? or was it not? Was the Victory you ſpeak of, a compleat, or a partial one? If you ſay it was incompleat and partial, then you leave them (as I told you before you muſt) partly under the Promiſe, and partly under the Curſe; juſtified in part, and condemned in part. But if you ſay it was a compleat and perfect Victory, then it utterly diſſolved its Obligation as a Covenant of Works; then they did not remain under two oppoſite Covenants, as you affirmed they did; but on their believing, changed their ſtate with their Covenant, as we affirm they did.

Secondly. If you ſay, it did not totally free them from the Curſe of the Covenant of Works, but however prevailed ſo far that they were not actually damned by vertue of the Curſe; then be pleaſed to anſwer me one Queſtion more, How it was poſſible for them to be abſolutely under the Curſe of the Law (as you affirmed they were) and yet that Curſe to be ſo ſuperſeded by the Covenant of Grace, as here you ſpeak?

To ſuperſede the Curſe (though it be a Phraſe I never met with before) if it ſignify any thing, it muſt ſignify this; That the Covenant of Grace cauſed the Law to omit, forbear, or give over to curſe that People any more. But did, or can the Law forbear or ceaſe to curſe thoſe that are abſolutely under it as a miniſtration of death and condemnation? Pray conſult, Rom. 3. 19. and Gal. 3. 10. Are you aware what you ſay, when you place Believers abſolutely under the Curſe of the Law, and then talk of the New Covenant's Victory over it; and after all this, leave them as you do, abſolutely under the curſing power of the one; and ſtill under the victorious Grace of the other? For ſhame, my Friend, give up your abſurd Notion, and repent of this Folly. I would not willingly ſhame you before the World; I did all that lay in me to prevent it. But however, Pudor eſt medicina pudoris, the only way you have left me to prevent your glorying in your ſhame, is this way to make you aſhamed of your Vain-glory. As for that Scripture you alledge to countenance your Fancy, Rom. 5. 17, 20. you might to as good purpoſe have opened your Bible, and have taken the firſt Scripture that came to hand, and it would have done your Poſition leſs harm. For the Apoſtle's ſcope there, is to demonſtrate the perfection of the abounding Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, for the full diſcharge of Believers from the Guilt of Sin, and curſe of Adam's Covenant; and cuts the Throat of your Poſition, which it is alledged to prove.

I have ſtood the longer upon the clearing of this firſt Point; becauſe this being fully cleared, it runs through and clears the whole Controverſy betwixt us. For now it will be evident to all, That neither Abraham's, nor Moſes his Covenant (complexly taken, as Mr. Cary takes it) could poſſibly be for this reaſon an Adam's Covenant of Works; and if not a Covenant of Works, then how dark or legal ſoever the Diſpenſations of them were, they muſt needs be the ſame Covenant of Grace, for ſubſtance, under which we are, and ſo the main Controverſy betwixt us is hereby at an end.

I know not how many Covenants of Works, or how many of Grace, Mr. C. fanſies there are; but but Orthodox Divines constantly affirm, * That as there never were but two ways of Life to Mankind, the one before the Fall, by perfect doing; the other after the Fall, by sincere believing: So answerably there can be but two Covenants betwixt God and Mankind, viz. the Covenant of Works, and the Covenant of Grace. The last of which hath, indeed, been more obscurely Administred, and in that respect is called the Old Covenant; yet that and the New are essentially but one Covenant: And the Church of God, which for many Ages stood under that Old Covenant, did not stand under it as an Adam's Covenant, or the First Covenant of Works, for the undeniable Reasons above given. And therefore Abraham's Covenant, from whence we derive our Children's Title to Baptism, must of necessity be the very same Covenant for substance with this New Covenant, which all Abraham's believing off-spring, and their Infant-seed, are now under. And in proving this one point, I sufficiently confute both Mr. C's Solemn Call, and this his feeble vindication of it together.

* Vide Bolton's Bounds, p. 148.

But lest he should take this for the only Absurdity proved upon him, tho' it be tiresome to me, and must be ungrateful to him, give me leave to touch one more, among many; and that the rather, because I make great use of it in this Controversy, and Mr. Cary both yields and denies it. If his own words be the Messengers of his meaning, either he or I, must mistake their Errand.

I had in my Prolegomena, distinguished of the Law, as strictly taken for the Ten Commandments; and more largely and complexly, taken, as including the Ceremonial Law. The former I considered according to God's Intention and Design in the promulgation of it, which was to add it as an Appendix to the Promise, Gal. 3. 19. And the carnal Jews mistaking and perverting the end of the Law, and making it to themselves a Covenant of Works, by making it the very Rule and Reason of their Justification before God, Rom. 9. 32, 33. Rom. 10. 3. I told him, That the Controversie depended upon this double sense of the Law, for that it ought not to be denominated from the abused and mistaken End of it; but from God's chief scope and design in the promulgation of it, which was to add it as an Appendix to the Promise, as the word παρεισηλθεν there imports; and so must be published with Evangelical purposes. Let us now hear Mr. C's sense of this matter.

In his Call, p. 131. he yields the distinction proving the Law to be in these words.

The Jews were right enough in reference to the true nature of the Law, That it was a Covenant of Works, &c. though they were out in respect of its proper use and intention, which was not, that any should attain unto Life and Righteousness thereby; but to shew them the nature of Sin, and the Holiness and Righteousness of God; to convince them of their Sin and Misery without Christ, and their necessity of a Saviour;

In his Reply, p. 43. a Covenant of Works, from Rom. 10. 15. he saith,

This was the nature of the Law, and of it in the first sanction of it, as the fruit of God's special designation and appointment; and that it is the greatest violation and perverting of Scripture that can lightly be met with, to affirm, that this is uttered and declared by Paul, &c. only because the Jews had perverted it, and reduced it (as they thought) to its primitive intention. And again, p. 44. he saith, he hath proved that it was the same with Adam's Cove- ousness which was of the Law, and refusing to submit themselves unto the Righteousness of God, &c. stumbled at that stumbling stone, and were accordingly broken, snared, and taken, Rom. 9. 31, 32, 33. Rom. 10. 3. And this (saith he) was the true ground of dispute between the Apostle and them. This was Orthodoxly spoken, and would end the Controversy, would he stand to it. But vant in both respects, that is intentionally, as well as materially considered. And once more, p. 20. he expressly denies that the Law was added as an Appendix to the Promise; calls that a crude assertion of mine; and asks me, Why it might not be added as an Appendix rather to the first Covenant of Works, to reinforce that? And after all, gushes out many slighting and opprobrious terms upon me, which I will not throw back again, but rather leave him to reconcile himself with himself.

I shall only ask Mr. Cary a sober Question or two, instead of Recriminations, and rendring reviling for reviling.

First, How the Jews were right enough in reference to the nature of the Law, as it was a Covenant of Works, and yet out in respect of its proper use and intention, which was not, that any should attain unto Life and Righteousness by it, but to convince them of Sin, and of the necessity of a Saviour; and yet the Law be a Covenant of Works, intentionally, as well as materially considered; and that in respect of God's special designation and appointment? If God designed and appointed it in his Sinai dispensation, to be to them an Adam's Covenant of Works, then certainly they were not out (as you say they were) when they sought Righteousness by the works of it; nor could that mistake of theirs be the ground of the Controversy betwixt the Apostle and them: For it seems it was no mistake, being by God's Intention, as well as its own primitive Nature, promulged at Sinai, as a true Adam's Covenant.

Secondly, You deny the Law was added to the Promise, and ask me why it might not be added to the first Covenant to reinforce that? I answer, Because the scope of the Place will not bear it, nor any good Expositor countenance such a fancy. You make the Sinai Law to be the same with that first Covenant, and by so expounding the Apostle, you make him say, either that the same Thing was added to it self, (which must in your own Phrase, be by a Correspondency of Identity) or else that there are two distinct Covenants of Works (when indeed there is but one) and that the latter was added to the former. This is your way of Expounding Scripture, when driven to a streight by dint of Argument. Nothing beside such a pure necessity, could drive you upon such an Absurdity.

Παρεισηλθεν posita, pro apposita, hoc est, Promissioni adjecta. Beza.

It was added to the promise (saith Dr. Reynolds) by way of subserviency and attendance, the better to advance and make effectual the Covenant it self. Mr. Strong upon the two Covenants, saith, the Apostle's meaning is, that the Law was added as an Appendix to the Promise. But it may rather bear Dr. Crisp's Exposition * than his; for you say, had it been added to the Promise, it would have given Life. The Doctor will at once give you the true sense of the Text, and with it

Vide Dr. Reynold's Use of the Law, p. 378. full up to my sense, and p. 371.

* Dr. Crisp, Lib. 4. Serm. 9.

a full anſwer to your Objection. "Though Life "(ſaith he) be not the end of the Law, yet there are "other ſufficient uſes of it requiring the promulgation "thereof: It was publiſhed to be an Appendix to the "Goſpel, Gal. 3. 19. And this ſuppoſes, (1.) The "priority of the Goſpel to the Law. (2.) The princi- "pality of the Promiſe of Life by Chriſt, above the "Law. (3.) The Conſiſtence of the Law and Go- "ſpel. They may well ſtand one by another, as an "Houſe, and the addition to it may. That it was with ſuch an intention added to the Promiſe, I have met with no Man that had front enough to deny or ſcruple it before you. And that the Jews did miſtake its chief ſcope and uſe, from whence we denominate it a Covenant of Grace, the generality of Godly and Learned Divines conſtantly affirm. See Mr. Anth. Burgeſs de Lege, p. 227. Bolton's Bounds, p. 160, 161. Mr. Samuel Mather on the Types, p. 11. with multitudes more, whoſe citations would even weary the Reader. And what you urge from Mr. Pool's Annotations, on 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7. It makes nothing at all to your purpoſe: For it is manifeſt the Annotator there, takes the Moral Law in it ſelf, ſtrictly taken, and as ſet in oppoſition to the Goſpel, which it never was ſince the Fall, but by the Ignorance and Infidelity of unregenerate Men.

You alſo labour to ſhelter your erroneous fancy under the Authority of Dr. Owen; but you manifeſtly abuſe him in your Citation; for in that very place you refer to, he ſpeaks ſtrictly of the Covenant of Works made with Adam in Paradiſe; and plainly diſtinguiſhes it from the Sinai Covenant, which ſufficiently ſhews his judgment in this point. For theſe are his own words, which you ſuppreſſed in the Citation, "As to "the Sinai Covenant and the New Teſta- "ment, with their Privileges thence e- "merging, they belong not to our preſent "Argument. This Paragraph you wilfully omit, that you might include that which his words plainly exclude. In the ſame place he tells you that David and Abraham's Covenant, was for eſſence the Covenant of Grace, notwithſtanding the variations made in it: But you take and leave, as beſt ſuits your Deſign. †

Dr. Owen of Juſtification, p. 396, 397. Vindicated from Mr. C's groſs Miſrepreſentation.

† But if you will ſee the Doctor's judgment, in concurrence with all his Brethren, you have it in theſe very words: "Although this Covenant hath been vari- "ouſly adminiſtred in reſpect of Ordinances and Inſtitutions in the "time of the Law, and ſince the coming of Chriſt in the fleſh; yet "for the ſubſtance and efficacy of it, to all its ſpiritual and ſaving "ends, it is one and the ſame; upon the account of which various "Diſpenſations it is called the Old and New Teſtament. Vide Declaration of the Faith and Order of the Congregational Churches in England p. 15. at the Savoy, Octob. 12. 1658.

Once more in p. 16, 17, &c. of my Vindiciæ Legis, you find your ſelf pinched with another Dilemma, from Lev. 26. 40, 41, 46. whence I plainly proved, That there is a Promiſe of Pardon found in the Sinai diſpenſation, to penitent Sinners. That this Promiſe was given at Mount Sinai by the hand of Moſes, is undeniable from verſ. 46. That it contained the Relief of a gracious Remiſſion to penitent Sinners, is as undeniable from verſ. 40, 41. If you ſay, this Promiſe belongs to Moſes his diſpenſation (as verſ. 46. tells you it did) then there is remiſſion of Sins found in the Sinai Laws. If you ſay it only refers to Abraham's Covenant of Grace; then that Covenant of Grace appears to be conditional, which you utterly deny.

Now what is your Reply to this? (1.) You object my own words in the Method of Grace, p. 326. as if you had never read the juſt and fair Vindication I had before given you of them, p. 134, 135. of my firſt Reply to you. At this rate Men may continue Controverſies to the World's end. Sir, there are many Witneſſes, that you are very well acquainted with my Method of Grace. (2.) You ſay, p. 31 of your Reply, That that Covenant could not be conditional, becauſe a Condition implies merit either of congruity or condignity. This is a further Diſcovery of your Ignorance of the nature of Conditions as well as Covenants: But that point belonging to the laſt Head of Controverſy between us, I ſhall refer it thither.

It were eaſie for me to inſtance in many more Abſurdities which Mr. C. cannot eluctate, and to prove them upon him as eaſily as to name them. But I will not preſs him too far; what hath been named and proved already, is more than enough to convince the Reader, that my firſt Argument is left ſtanding in its full force and ſtrength againſt him, viz.

Argument I. That Propoſition can never be true, which neceſſarily draws many horrid and groſs Abſurdities after it by juſt conſequence. But ſo doth this: Ergo.

Argument II. My next Argument, Vindiciæ, &c. p. 27. is as ſecure as the firſt. It was this. If Adam's Covenant had one end, namely, the Happineſs and Juſtification of Men by their own Obedience, and the Law at Sinai had quite another end, namely to bring Sinners to Chriſt by Faith for their Righteouſneſs; the one to keep him within himſelf, the other to take him quite out of himſelf; then the Sinai Law cannot poſſibly be the ſame with Adam's Covenant of Works in Paradiſe.

But ſo ſtands the Caſe, Rom. 10. 4. Chriſt is the End of the Law for Righteouſneſs to every one that believeth.

Therefore they cannot be the ſame, but two different Covenants.

All that touches this Argument, is but three Lines in the 49th page of your Reply; where you ſay you have ſufficiently anſwered and cleared this in p. 169, 172. of your former Diſcourſe, from the corrupt interpretation by me faſtened thereon.

Now, if the Reader will give himſelf the Trouble to examine thoſe Pages, he ſhall find that Mr. C. there allows that very interpretation which he here calls corrupt; and ſaith it comes all to one reckoning with his own. If this will overthrow my ſecond Argument, it is gone.

Argument III. My third Argument was drawn from Acts 7. 38. in this Form:

If Chriſt himſelf were the Angel by whom the Laws were delivered to Moſes, which are there called the lively Oracles of God; then the Law cannot be a pure Adam's Covenant of Works: For it is never to be imagined that ever Jeſus Chriſt himſelf ſhould deliver to Moſes ſuch a Covenant directly oppoſite to all the ends of his future Incarnation.

But it is more than probable from that Text, that it was Chriſt which delivered the Law to Moſes on the Mount. Ergo.

To this Argument he ſaith not one word in p. 49. of his Reply, where he cites a part of it, nibling a little at that expreſſion [The lively Oracles of God,] thinking it unimaginable the Sinai Law ſhould be ſuch; when as the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 7. 10. found ound the Commandment to be unto death; and the Apoſtle 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7. calls it a Miniſtration of Death. I muſt therefore leave Mr. C. to reconcile thoſe two Scriptures. And withal, I muſt tell him, that Spanhemius gives the ſame ſenſe I do of Acts 7. 38. as the current judgment of Chriſtians againſt the Jews, That it was not a created Angel, but Chriſt himſelf.

Fr. Spanhem. Elench. Controv. p. 552.

Argument IV. The laſt Argument I urged, was from Rom. 9. 4. and thus it may run.

No ſuch Covenant as by the Fall had utterly loſt all its Promiſes, Privileges, and Bleſſings, and could retain nothing but Curſes and Puniſhments, could poſſibly be numbred among the chief Privileges in which God's Iſrael gloried.

But the Law given at Sinai was numbred among their chief Privileges, Rom. 9. 4. Ergo.

To this he only ſaith, p. 57. of his Reply, 'That the Law even as it was a Covenant of Works, 'was a privilege ineſtimable, beyond what all 'others enjoyed; becauſe the very Curſes and 'Puniſhments annexed thereunto, in caſe of the 'leaſt failure, were of excellent uſe to convince 'them of their ſin and miſery without Chriſt, 'and their neceſſity therefore of a Saviour; which 'was the proper work of the Law, as a Cove-'nant of Works; which advantage all other 'Nations wanting, it might well be numbred 'among the chief Privileges they were inveſted 'with.

But (1.) If the Law were intended by God, to be an Adam's Covenant to them (as Mr. C. ſaith it was) where then is the Privilege of God's Iſrael above other Nations? (2.) If their Privilege conſiſted in the ſubſerviency of that Law to Chriſt (as he here intimates it did) then he yields the Thing I contend for. For this being its chief Scope and End, we do hence juſtly denominate it a Covenant of Grace, though more obſcure and legally adminiſtred. And in this Judgment moſt of our ſolid Divines concurr. Mr. Charnock on the Attributes, p. 390. is clear and judicious in the point. Mr. Samuel Bolton, in that excellent Book called, The Bounds of Chriſtian Liberty, gives nine ſolid Arguments to prove the Law was not ſet up at Sinai as a Covenant of Works. Mr. Anth. Burgeſs gives us ſix Arguments to prove the ſame Concluſion. Mr. Greenhill on Ezek. 16. gives us demonſtration from that Context, That ſince it was a Marriage Covenant, as it appears to be v. 8. it cannot poſſibly be a diſtinct Covenant from the Covenant of Grace. The incomparable Turrettine learnedly and judiciouſly ſtates this Controverſy; and both poſitively aſſerts, and by many Arguments fully proves, That the Sinai Law cannot be a pure Covenant of Works, or a Covenant ſpecifically diſtinct from the Covenant of Grace. It were eaſie to fill Pages with Allegations of this kind; but I hope what hath been ſaid, may ſuffice for this Point.

Greenhill, in Loc.

Turrettine part 2. p. 288, 289.

But ſtill Mr. Cary complains, that I have all this while but threatned his Arguments to prove them fallacious, or to have four Terms in them; and therefore he hath drawn out ſome ſelect Arguments, as he calls them, p. 37. to try my ſkill upon. I will neither tire my Reader in a fooliſh chaſe of ſuch weak and impertinent Arguments as he there produceth, nor yet wholly neglect them, leſt he glory in them as unanſwerable. And therefore to ſhew him the fate of the reſt, I will only touch his firſt Argument, which being his Argumentum Palmarium, deſervedly leads the Van to all the reſt. And thus it runs upon all four.

That Covenant that is not of Faith, muſt needs be a Covenant of Works, yea, the very ſame for Subſtance with that made with Adam.

But the Scripture is expreſs, That the Law is not of Faith, Gal. 3. 12. Ergo.

The Law is conſidered two ways in Scripture. (1.) Largely, for the whole Moſaical Oeconomy, comprehenſive of the Ceremonial as well as Moral Precepts; and that Law is of Faith, as the Learned Turrettine hath proved by four Scripture Arguments, Pars ſecunda, p. 292, 293. * Becauſe it contained Chriſt the Object of Faith, &c. Becauſe it impelled Men to ſeek Chriſt by Faith. Becauſe it required that God be worſhipped, which he cannot rightly be without Faith. And becauſe Paul deſcribes the Righteouſneſs of Faith in thoſe very words whereby Moſes had declared the Precepts of the Law, Deut. 30. 11, 12, 13. Again, the Law in Scripture is taken ſtrictly for the Moral Law only, conſidered abſtractly from the Promiſes of Grace, as the Legal Juſticiaries underſtood it. Theſe are two far different ſenſes and acceptations of the Law. Your Major Propoſition takes the Law in its large complex body, as appears by your 3*d.* Page. Your Minor Propoſition, which you would confirm by Gal. 3. 12. takes the Law ſtrictly and abſtractly, as it is ſet diſjunctly from, yea in oppoſition to Faith and the Promiſes, and ſo there are two ſorts of Law in your Argument, and conſequently your Argument is fallacious, as all its fellows be, and runs (as I told you before) upon all four.

* Lex dicitur non eſſe ex fide, Gal. 3. 12. non ut latè ſumitur prout notat Oeconomiam Moſaicam; ſed ſtrictè, quum ſumitur pro Lege Morali abſtracte, & ſeorſim à promiſſionibus gratiæ, quomodo illam intelligebant Juſticiarii, qui vitam ex eâ quærebant. Nam fidem etiam in fœdere Sinaitico præceptam fuiſſe evincitur, &c.

I hope this may ſuffice with reſpect to the Sinai Covenant controverted betwixt me and my Neighbour, to evince that it cannot be what he aſſerts it to be, even an Adam's Covenant of Works: And that I have diſcharged what I undertook to prove with reſpect to this Covenant, namely, That Mr. C. cannot free his Poſition from the groſs Abſurdities with which I loaded it, but endeavouring to do that, hath incurred many more: that his Reply hath left my Arguments ſtanding in their full ſtrength againſt him, and that the Poſition I have ſet up againſt him, is well founded in Scripture; and hath the general concurrence and conſent of Learned, Holy, and Orthodox Divines.

To conclude, Let the Grave and Learned Dr. Edw. Reynolds, in his excellent Treatiſe of the Uſe of the Law, determine this Controverſy betwixt us, p. 371, &c. where deſignedly handling this Doctrine from Rom. 7. 13. 'That the Law was revived 'and promulgated anew on Mount Sinai by the Miniſtry 'of Moſes, with no other than evangelical and merciful 'purpoſes, he abundantly confirms my Senſe and Arguments, and ſaves me the labour of refuting the principal, and moſt of yours: where carrying before him the whole Context of Gal. 3. from the 15*th* to the 23*d*, he clearly carries his Doctrine with it, proving from ver. 15. 'That God's Co-'venant with Abraham was perpetual and immu-'table, and therefore all other ſubſequent Acts of

'God

'God (such as the giving of the Law was) do 'some way or other refer unto it. P. 376. '(2.) From ver. 16. he further proves, 'That as God's Covenant with Abra- 'ham is most constant in regard of the wisdom 'and unvariableness of him that made it; so it 'can never expire for want of a Seed to whom 'it is made. (3.) From ver. 17. he P. 377. 'proves, that if another Law be 'made after the Promise, which prima 'specie, and in strict construction, doth imply a 'contradiction to the terms and nature of the for- 'mer Law; then it is certain, that this latter Law 'must be understood in some other sense, and ad- 'mit of some other subordinate use, which may 'well consist with the being and force of the former 'Covenant. (4.) From ver. 18. he proves, that 'the coming of the Law hath not voided the Pro- 'mise, and that the Law is not of Force (as you 'vainly dream) towards the Seed to whom the 'Promise is made; and therefore if it be not to 'stand in a contradiction, it follows that it must 'stand in subordination to the Gospel; and so to 'tend to Evangelical Purposes. (5.) He further proves his conclusion from ver. 19. which shews for what end the Law was added, προσετέθη. 'It was 'not (saith he) set up alone, as a thing in gross 'by it self; as an adequate, compleat, solid Rule 'of Righteousness, as it was given to Adam in 'Paradise: much less was it published to void and 'disannul any precedent Covenant; but so far 'was it from abrogating, that it was added to the 'Promise by way of subserviency, and attendance; 'the better to advance and make effectual the Co- 'venant it self; and that untill the Seed should 'come, which whether it respect Christ personal, 'or mystical, in either sense (saith he) it confirms 'the point we are upon, viz. That the Law hath 'Evangelical Purposes. If the Seed be understood 'of the Person of Christ, then this shews, that 'the Law was put to the Promise, the beter to 'raise and stir up in Men the Expectations of 'Christ, the promised Seed. But if we understand 'by Seed, the Faithful (which I rather approve;) 'then the Apostle's Meaning is this; P. 379. 'That as long as any are either to 'come into the unity of Christ's Bo- 'dy, and have the Covenant of Grace applied to 'them, &c. so long there will be use of the Law, 'both to the Unregenerate, to make them fly to 'Christ, and those that are already called, that 'they may learn, to cast all their Faith, Hope, 'and Expectation of Righteousness upon him still. 'This then manifestly shews, that P. 380. 'there was no other intention in pub- 'lishing the Law, but with reference 'to the Seed: that is, with Evangelical Purposes 'to shew Mercy: not with reference to those 'that perish, who would have had condemnation 'enough without the Law. And further streng- thens his Conclusion from the last words of ver. 19. 'That it was ordained by Angels in the Hands of 'a Mediator. This (saith he) evidently declares, 'That the Law was published in Mercy and Pa- 'cification, not in Fury or Revenge; (for the 'work of a Mediator is to negotiate Peace, and 'treat of Reconcilement between Parties offend- 'ed) whereas, if the Lord had intended Death 'in the publishing of the Law, he would not 'have proclaimed it in the hand of a Mediator, 'but of an Executioner. (6.) From P. 381, 'ver. 20. Those Words (saith he) 'shew why the Law was published in 'the hand of a Mediator, viz. that they should not 'despair and sink under the fear of his Wrath. 'For as he made a Covenant of Promise to Abra- 'ham, and his Seed; so he is the same God still, 'one in his Grace and Mercy towards Sinners. 'God is one, i. e. in sending this Mediator, he doth 'declare to Mankind, that he is at peace and 'unity with them again. Moses was the Repre- 'sentative, and Christ the substantial and real 'Mediator. God is one, i. e. he carries P. 382. 'the same Purpose and Intention both 'in the Law and in the Gospel; P. 384. 'namely, benevolence, and desire of 'Reconcilement with Men. (7.) To sum up all 'that hath been spoken touching the use of the 'Law in a plain similitude; Suppose we a 'Prince should proclaim a Pardon to all Traitors, 'if they would come in and plead it; and after 'this, should send forth his Officers to attack, 'imprison, examine, convince, arraign, threaten, 'and condemn them: Is he now contrary to him- 'self? Hath he repented of his Mercy? No, but 'he is unwilling to lose his Mercy, desirous to 'have the Honour of his Mercy acknowledged 'unto him. The same is the Case between God 'and us. To Abraham he made a Promise of 'Mercy and Blessedness to all that would plead 'interest in it, for the Remission of their Sins; 'but Men were secure and heedless of their Estate, '&c. Hereupon the Lord published 'by Moses a severe and terrible Law; P. 385. 'yet in all this, God doth but pursue 'his first purpose of Mercy, and take a course to 'make his Gospel accounted worthy of all accep- 'tation; which clears the general Point, That 'God in the publication of the Law by Moses, on Mount 'Sinai, had none but Merciful and Evangelical Inten- 'tions. And once more, The Law was not pub- 'lished by Moses on Mount Sinai, as it was given to 'Adam in Paradise, to justify or to save 'Men. And p. 385. it is not given, P. 386. 'ex primariâ intentione, to condemn 'Men. In consequence to all which he saith, 'p. 388, 389. that to preach the Law alone by it 'self, is to pervert the use of it; neither have we 'any power or commission so to do. It was pub- 'lished as an Appendant to the Gospel, and so must 'it be preached. It was published in the hand of 'a Mediator, and must be preached in the hand of 'a Mediator. It was published Evangelically, and 'it must be so preached.

See how this agrees now with p. 173. of your Call, and how the several parts of the Discourse of this sound and eminent Doctor (which I have been forced to sum up and contract) do abundantly confute your vain Notions of the Law, and cut the very Nerves of your best Arguments, if they had any Nerves in them: for indeed it is moles absque nervis.

It were easy for me to represent the Sense of many other eminent Divines in perfect harmony with the Doctrine of this great and excellent Divine, who hath substantially proved the Point I defend against you: but 'tis enough.

II. Let us next examine what Execution his Reply hath done upon my second Position, set up in direct Opposition to him; namely, That God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. unto which Circumcision was annexed, is, for its substance, the self-same Covenant of Grace with that which Gentile-believers and their Infant-seed are now under.

Abraham's Covenant, Gen. 17. the Covenant of Grace.

Here

Here I have abundant cauſe again to complain, that Mr. C. hath ſo formed his Anſwers, as if he had never read the Book he undertakes a Reply to. And I do verily believe, the greateſt part of his Reply was made at random, before ever my printed Book was in his hands: For he hath not at all conſidered the ſtate of the Queſtion, as I there gave it him; nor kept himſelf to the juſt and neceſſary Rules of Diſputation, as I earneſtly deſired he would. However, 'tis not Complaints, but Confirmation and Vindication of my Arguments, which is my proper Work. I ſhall therefore recite them briefly, and vindicate and confirm them ſtrongly; contracting all into as few Words as can expreſs the Senſe and Argument of the Point before me.

Argument. I. If Circumciſion be a part of the ceremonial Law, and the ceremonial Law was dedicated by Blood; and whatſoever is ſo dedicated, is by you confeſſed to be no part of the Covenant of Works: then Circumciſion can be no part of the Covenant of Works, even by your own Confeſſion. But it is ſo. Ergo.

Vindiciæ Legis, &c. p. 42.

Reply. To this Mr. Cary returns a Tragical Complaint inſtead of a Rational Anſwer. Inſinuates my falſe and groſs abuſe of him. Appeals to his Reader. Tells him, I have taken a liberty to ſay what I pleaſe, as if there were no future Judgment to be regarded. And that I can expect no comfort another day without Repentance now. For thoſe things that have thus paſſed betwixt him and me, ſhall again be reviſed, and ſet in order before me. That he is weary of noting my Miſcarriages of this kind. That there is hardly a Page or Paragraph in my whole Reply, but abounds with Tranſgreſſions of this Nature. He begs the Lord to forgive me; and wiſhes he could ſay, Father, forgive him, for he knows not what he doth; as if my Sin were greater than the Sin of thoſe that ſtoned Stephen, or crucified Chriſt.

P. 68.

Reply. Either I am guilty or innocent in the Matters here charged upon me by Mr. C. If guilty, I promiſe him an ingenuous Acknowledgment. If innocent, (as both my Conſcience, and his own Book will prove me to be) then I ſhall only ſay, He knoweth not what Spirit he is of. The caſe muſt be tried by his own Book, and it will quickly be decided. Theſe are the very Words in his Solemn Call, p. 148. 'He (that is Mr. Sedgwick) makes 'no diſtinction betwixt the ceremonial Covenant that was 'dedicated with Blood, and the Law written in Stones 'that was not ſo dedicated. How ſtrangely doth he con'found and obſcure the word and truth of God, which 'ought to have been cleared and diſtinctly declared to 'thoſe he had preached or written to?' With much more, p. 149, 150, 151. where he ſaith, 'It's plain, that 'the Law written in Stones, and the Book wherein the 'Statutes and Judgments were contained, were two di'ſtinct Covenants, and delivered at diſtinct Seaſons, 'and in a diſtinct Method; the one with, the other 'without a Mediator; the one dedicated with blood and 'ſprinkling, the other (that we read of) not ſo dedi'cated.

Now let the Reader judge whether I have deſerved ſuch Tragical Complaints and dreadful Charges for inferring from theſe Words, That the ceremonial Law being by him pronounced a diſtinct Covenant from the Moral Law, which he makes all one with Adam's Covenant; delivered at a diſtinct Seaſon, and in a diſtinct Method; the ceremonial Law with a Mediator, the moral Law without a Mediator; the ceremonial Law dedicated with blood and ſprinkling, the moral Law not ſo dedicated: let him judge (I ſay) whether I have wronged him in ſaying, that by his own confeſſion, Circumciſion being a part of this ceremonial Law, it can therefore be no part of the Covenant of Works?

Exception. But Mr. Cary hath two things to ſay for himſelf. (1.) That in the ſame place he makes the ceremonial Law no other than a Covenant of Works: And the wrong I have done him, is by not diſtinguiſhing (as he did) betwixt A Covenant of Works, and The Covenant of Works. Here it ſeems lies my Guilt upon which this dreadful Out-cry againſt me is made.

Reply. But if I ſhould chance to prove, that there never was, is, or can be any more than one Covenant of Works; and that any other Covenant which is diſtinguiſhed from it (as he confeſſes the ceremonial Law was) by a Mediator, and the blood of ſprinkling, can be no part of that Covenant of Works: what then will become of Mr. C's diſtinction of A Covenant of Works, and The Covenant of Works? Now the matter is plain and evident, That as there never were, are, or can be more than two common Heads appointed by God, namely, Adam and Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46, 47, 48. Rom. 5. 15, 17, 18, 19. ſo it is impoſſible there ſhould be more than two Covenants, under which Mankind ſtands, under theſe two common Heads. And the firſt Covenant once broken, it is utterly impoſſible that fallen Man ſhould ever attain Life that way, or that ever God ſhould ſet it up again with ſuch an intention and ſcope, unleſs (as Mr. Charnock ſpeaks) he had reduced Man's Body to the Duſt, and his Soul to nothing, and framed another Man to have governed him by a Covenant of Works; but that had not been the ſame Man that had revolted, and upon his revolt was ſtained and diſabled. If Mr. C. therefore be not able to prove more Covenants of Works with Mankind than one, let him rather bluſh at his ſilly diſtinction betwixt a Covenant of Works, and the Covenant of Works. For indeed he makes at leaſt four diſtinct Covenants of Works, one with Adam, two with Moſes; one moral the other ceremonial; and a fourth with Abraham at the Inſtitution of Circumciſion, Gen. 17.

Charnock on the Attributes, p. 390.

(2.) If it appear (as it clearly doth) that as there never was, is, or can be any more than one Covenant of Works, ſo whatſoever Covenant is diſtinguiſhed from it by a Mediator, and dedication by the ſprinkling of Blood (as he ſaith the Ceremonial Law was) cannot poſſibly, for the Reaſons he gives, be any Part or Member of Adam's Covenant of Works; then, I hope, I have done Mr. C. no wrong in my Aſſumption from his own Words, for which he ſo reviles and abuſes me. But this will appear as plain as the Noon-day-light: For a Covenant with a Mediator, and dedicated by ſprinkling of Blood, doth, and neceſſarily muſt eſſentially difference ſuch a Covenant from that Covenant that had no Mediator, nor dedication of Blood. To deny this, were to confound Law and Goſpel, Adam's and Chriſt's Covenant; but the Diſtinction betwixt them is his own, therefore my Aſſumption was juſt. That this Blood was typically the Blood of Chriſt, and that the Holy Ghoſt ſignified the one by the other, is plain from Heb. 9 7, 8. And I never met with that Man that ſcrupled it before Mr. Cary. So then my firſt Argument to prove Abraham's Covenant of Circumciſion to be the Covenant of Grace, and not an Adam's Covenant, or any Part thereof, ſtands firm after

after Mr. C's passionate Reply, which I hope the Lord will pardon to him, though he had scarce Charity enough left to desire a pardon for his Friend, who had neither wronged the Truth, nor him.

Argument II. My second Argument was this. If Circumcision was the seal of the Righteousness of Faith, it did not pertain to the Covenant of Works; for the Righteousness of Faith and Works are opposite.

But Circumcision was the Seal of the Righteousness of Faith, Rom. 4. 11. Ergo.

The sum of what he answers to this, p. 72, 73, &c. (as far as I can pick his true sense out of a multitude of needless words) in this. 'He confesses this Argument seems very plausible; but however, Abraham, 'was a Believer before Circumcision; and though indeed 'it sealed the Righteousness of Faith to him, yet it sealed 'it to him only as the Father of Believers, and denies 'that ever Jacob, or Isaac, or any others enrolled in 'that Covenant, were sealed by it; but to all the rest, 'beside Abraham, it was rather a token of servitude 'and bondage'. This is the sum and substance of his Reply.

Reply. But, Sir, let me ask you two or three plain Questions. (1.) What is the reason you silently slide over the Question I asked you, p. 41. of my Vindiciæ, &c.? Did you find it an hot Iron which you durst not touch? 'Tis like you did. My Question was this. Had Adam's Covenant a seal of the Righteousness of Faith annexed to it, as this had, Rom. 4. 11.? The Righteousness of Faith is Evangelical Righteousness, and this Circumcision sealed. Say not it was to Abraham only that it sealed it, for 'tis an injurious Restriction put upon the Seal of a Covenant which extended to the Fathers as well as to Abraham: however, you admit that it sealed Evangelical Righteousness to Abraham: but I hope you will not say, that a Seal of the Covenant of Works (for so you make Circumcision to be) ever did, or could seal Evangelical Righteousness to any individual Person in the World.

I find you a Man of great confidence, but certainly here it failed you: not one word in Reply to this. (2.) 'I told you your distinction was invented by Bellarmine, and shew'd you where it was 'confuted by Dr. Ames: but not a word to that. (3.) I shew'd, 'That the extending of that Seal 'to all Believers, as well as Abraham, is most 'agreeable to the drift and scope of the Apostle's 'Argument, which is to prove, that both Jews 'and Gentiles are justified by Faith, as Abraham 'was: and that the Ground of Justification is 'common to both: and that how great soever 'Abraham was, yet in this case he hath found no-'thing whereof to glory. And is not your Ex-'position a notable one, to prove the community 'of the privilege of Justification, because the 'Seal of it was peculiar to Abraham alone? p. '47, 48.

Sir, You have spent Words enough upon this Head to tire your Reader. But why can I not meet with one Word among them, that fairly advances to grapple with my Argument? or answer the important Questions before you, upon which the matter depends? If this be all you have to say, I must tell you, you are but a weak manager of a bad Cause, which is the less hazard to Truth.

Argument III. In the Covenant of Circumcision, Gen. 17. God makes over himself to Abraham, and his Seed, to be their God, or gives them a special interest in himself.

But in the Covenant of Works, God doth not since the Fall, make over himself to any to be their God by way of special Interest.

Therefore the Covenant of Circumcision cannot be the Covenant of Works.

The sum of your Reply in p. 76. is under two Heads.

(1). "You boldly tell me, That God doth, in "in the Covenant of Works make over himself to Sin-"ners to be their God by way of special Interest: but "it being upon such hard terms, that it's utterly im-"possible for Sinners that way to attain unto Life, he "hath therefore been pleased to abolish that, and make "a new Covenant: and bring Exod. 20. 2. to prove it.

Reply. This is new and strange Divinity with me. (1.) That God should become a People's God by way of special Interest, by vertue of the broken Covenant of Works. This wholly alters the nature of that Covenant; for then it was a Law that could give Life, contrary to Gal. 3. 21. unless you can suppose a Soul that's totally dead in Sin, to have a special Interest in God, as his God. (2.) This Answer of yours yields the Controversy about the nature of the Sinai Law: for this very Concession of yours, is the Medium by which our Divines prove it to be a Covenant of Grace. (3.) This Concession of yours confounds the two Covenants, by communicating the essential property and prime privilege of the Covenant of Grace, to Adam's Covenant of Works. Either therefore expunge Jer. 31. 33. as a Covenant of Grace, I will be their God, and they shall be my People; or allow that in Gen. 17. 7. to be specifically the same; and that Exod. 20. though more obscurely delivered. (4.) "You assert, That God "may actually become a Peoples God by way of special "interest, and yet the Salvation of that People be sus-"pended upon impossible terms. You sent them before to Purgatory, but by this you must send them directly to Hell; For if the Salvation of God's peculiar People be upon impossible terms, 'tis certain they cannot be saved. And lastly, it is an horrid reflection upon the Wisdom and Goodness of God, who never did, or will make any Covenant, wherein he takes fallen Men to be his peculiar People, and make over himself to be their God; and yet not make Provision for their Salvation in the same Covenant, but leave their Salvation for many Ages upon hard and impossible terms, (i. e.) leave them under Damnation.

(2.) I told you in my Vindiciæ, &c. p. 49. that you were fain to cut Abraham's Covenant, Gen. 17. into two parts; and make the first to be the pure Covenant of Grace, which is the promissory part to the 9th. verse; and the Restipulation (as you call it, p. 205.) to be as pure a Covenant of Works. Which I truly said was a bold Action; and in so calling it, I gave it a softer name than the nature of it deserved.

The sum of what you reply to this, is, (1.) By denying the matter of Fact, and charging me with misrepresentation; and in the next page confessing the whole Charge, saying, Though the Promise and the Restipulation, mentioned vers. 7, 8, 9 make but one and the same Covenant of Circumcision; yet there are two Covenants mentioned in that Context, the first between God and Abraham himself, vers. 2. 4. the other between God and Abraham, and his natural Posterity also, vers. 7, 8, 9, 10. The former you call a Covenant of Grace, the the latter a Covenant of Works. And p. 81. you affirm, That after God had entred the Covenant of Grace with Abraham, Verſe 2, 4. that Abraham himſelf was required to be circumciſed by the Command of God, as a Token of the Covenant of Works. And then (after ſome unbecoming Scoffs for miſplacing, verſ. 7, 8. where v. 9, 10. ſhould be; as alſo of Gen. 12. for Gen. 17. (whether by the Scribe, my Self, or Preſs, I cannot ſay; but in each place ſufficient light is given to ſet you right in the ſcope and Argument of my Diſcourſe) you tell us, That how harſh and unlikely ſoever it may ſeem to Man's carnal reaſon, that the latter, to wit, the Covenant of Works made with Abraham, verſ. 9, 10. muſt needs make void the Covenant of Grace made with him, v. 2. 4. yet the Apoſtle gives a quite contrary reſolution of it, Gal. 3. 17. And after all, p. 79. in return to my Argument, That the Circumciſion of Abraham, and his Seed, verſ. 9, 10. could not poſſibly be a condition of Adam's Covenant of Works ☜ from the nature of the act: becauſe Paul himſelf circumciſed Timothy Acts 16. 1, 2, 3. and aſſerts it to be a part of his Liberty, Gal. 2. 3, 4. which could never be, if in the very nature of the Act it had bound Timothy to keep the Law for juſtification; and had been contrary to the whole ſcope of the Apoſtle's Doctrine: but it became an obligation only from the intention of the Agent. All that you ſay to this, p. 95. is, "That as for Paul's compliance with "the Jews, however the caſe ſtood in that reſpect, this "is certain, That the bleſſed Apoſtle would never have "expreſſed himſelf with that vehemency he doth, Gal. "5. 2, 3. if this had been only the ſenſe of the Jewiſh "Teachers, or that Circumciſion in it's own nature did "not oblige to the keeping of the whole Law; and that "this is only my corrupt gloſs upon the Text.

Reply. If there be but one Covenant made betwixt God and Abraham in that 17th of Geneſis, and you make two, not only numerically, but ſpecifically diſtinct, yea, oppoſite Covenants of it; then you boldly cut God's Covenant with Abraham in two, and are guilty of an inſufferable abuſe of the Covenant of God. But the former is true: therefore ſo is the latter. You ſay, p. 223, 224. of your Call, "That at the ſecond and fourth Verſes God "made a Covenant with Abraham himſelf alone; "but at verſ 7. he makes the Covenant of Circumciſion betwixt himſelf and Abraham, and his "natural Seed alſo; and ſaith verſ. 7. And, or "(according to the old Tranſlation) Moreover; as "proceeding to ſpeak of another Covenant than "what he had been before inſiſting on.

Now I would ſoberly ask, (1.) What Vouchers you have amongſt Expoſitors for this your raſh and daring Aſſertion? I find not a Man that hath trod this path before you, and I hope none will be hardy enough to follow. You certainly ſtand alone, and 'tis pity but you ſhould. (2.) Where do you find the juſt parts of the New Covenant in the 2d & 4th ver. Is it not altogether promiſory on God's part, without any reſtipulation on Abraham's? for you have excluded, v. 1, 9, 10. from that which you call God's Covenant of Grace with him. And then for your Covenant of Works, ver. 7, 8, 9, 10. you make this to be the Promiſory part of that Covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy Seed after thee; and again, ver. 8. I will be their God. Was ever ſuch a Promiſe as this, found in a Covenant of Works? Tell me what-ever God ſaid more in the New Covenant, than he ſaith here? Oh bleſſed Covenant of Works, if this be ſuch! (3.) Tell me whether you can ſatisfy your own Conſcience with the Anſwers you have given to my firſt Argument againſt your paradoxical, yea, heterodoxical Expoſition? I told you, That if verſ. 7, 8, 9, 10. contain another Covenant, viz. of Works, entred by God with Abraham and his Seed, it muſt needs make void the former Covenant, v. 2, 4. for where-ever the Covenant of Works takes place, the Covenant of Grace gives place, they cannot conſiſt, as I have abundantly proved before. Do you verily think thoſe words of the Apoſtle, Gal. 3. 17. which you bring as a foundation to ſupport your ſingular and ſinful Expoſition, viz. And this I ſay, That the Covenant that was confirmed before of God in Chriſt, the Law, which was four hundred and thirty Years after, cannot diſannul that it ſhould make the Promiſe of none effect; do you think (I ſay) that in that, or any other Text, the Apoſtle oppoſes the two Covenants made (as you fanſie) with Abraham, Gen. 17? or doth he not there ſpeak of God's Covenant with Abraham, as diſtinguiſhed from the Law made 430 Years afterward? (4.) Have you ſatisfied your own Judgment and Conſcience in the Reply you make to that unanſwerable Objection from Paul's circumciſing of Timothy, Acts 16. 2, 3. where you have the plain matter of Fact before you, that he was circumciſed by Paul; and this Fact of his juſtified as a part of the Liberty he had in Chriſt, Gal. 2, 3, 4. from whence it evidently appears, That Circumciſion in its own nature did not ſimply and abſolutely oblige Men to the keeping of Moſes his Law for Righteouſneſs, but only from the Intention or Opinion of the Perſon. And though you call this my corrupt gloſs upon the Text, therein you groſly abuſe me. The gloſs is neither corrupt, nor my own; but the unanimous Judgment of all ſound Expoſitors of the Text, as you might ſee, were you capable of ſeeing it, in a Collection of their Judgments upon that Text, Gal. 5. 2, 3. in Mr. Poole's Synopſis. And tho' Eſtius thinks the Act of Circumciſion might be obligatory to the Gentiles, to whom the Law was not given; yet it was not ſo to the Jews that believed, and ſuch was Timothy. But why do I refer you to the Judgment of Commentators? the very reaſon of it may convince you: For, Tenetur non ſimpliciter & abſolutè ex genere operis, ſed ex intentione operantis, & ſuppoſitâ tali opinione, &c. Poole in loc.

If the very Act of Circumciſion did in its own nature oblige all on whom it paſſed, to keep the whole Law for their Righteouſneſs, then Paul ſo obliged Timothy, and all others on whom he paſſed it, to keep the Law for their Righteouſneſs.

But Paul did not oblige Timothy, or any other on whom he paſſed it, by the very Act of Circumciſion ſo to keep the Law.

Therefore the very Act of Circumciſion in its own nature did not oblige all on whom it paſſed, to keep the whole Law for Righteouſneſs.

You may ponder this Argument at your leiſure, and not think to refute it at ſo cheap a rate, as by calling it a corrupt gloſs of my own. And thus I hope I have ſufficiently fortified and confirmed my Third Argument, to prove Abraham's Covenant to be a Covenant of Grace. My Fourth was this.

Argument IV. That which in its direct and primary end teacheth Man the corruption of his Nature by Sin, and the mortification of Sin by the Spirit of Chriſt, cannot be a condition of the Covenant of Works.

But ſo did Circumciſion in the very direct and primary end of it. Therefore, &c.

Your Reply to this is, 'That when I have ſubſtantially proved that the Sinai Covenant, as it contained the Paſſover, Sacrifices, Types, and Appendages, under which were veiled many ſpiritual Myſteries relating to Chriſt, and Mortification of Sin by his Grace and Spirit, to be no Covenant of Works, but a Goſpel-covenant; you will then grant with me, that the preſent Argument is convincing; p. 96, 97. of your Reply.

Reply. Sir, I take you for an honeſt Man; and every honeſt Man will be as good as his word. Either I have fully proved againſt you, that the Sinai Law (taken in that latitude you here expreſs it) is not an Adam's Covenant of Works, or I have not. If I have not, doubtleſs you have reſerved your more pertinent and ſtrong Replies in your own Breaſt, and truſt not to thoſe weak and ſilly ones which you ſee here baffled, and have only ſerved to involve you in greater Abſurdities than before. But if you have brought forth all your ſtrength (as in ſuch a deſperate ſtrait no Man can imagine but you would) then I have fully proved the Point againſt you. And if I have, I expect you to be ingenuous and candid in making good your word, That you will then grant with me, that this Argument is convincing to the end for which it was deſigned. And ſo I hope we have fully iſſued the Controverſy between us, relating to God's Covenant with Abraham. You have indeed four Arguments, p. 59, 60, 61, 62. of your Reply, to prove Abraham's Covenant a Covenant of Works, of the ſame nature with Adam's Covenant.

(1.) Becauſe as Life was implicitly promiſed to Adam upon his Obedience, and Death explicitly threatned in caſe of his Diſobedience, which made that properly a Covenant of Works; ſo it was in the Covenant of Circumciſion, Gen. 17. 7, 8. compared with ver. 10, 14.

Reply. This Argument or Reaſon can never conclude: becauſe as God never required of Abraham, and his Children, perſonal, perfect, and perpetual Obedience to the whole Law for Life, as he did of Adam; ſo the Death, or cutting off, ſpoken of here, ſeems to be another thing from that threatned to Adam. Circumciſion (as I told you before) was appointed to be the diſcriminating Sign betwixt Abraham's Seed, and the Heathen World: and the wilful neglect thereof is here threatned with cutting off by Civil or Eccleſiaſtical Excommunication from the Commonwealth, and Church of Iſrael, as Luther, Calvin, Paræus, Muſculus, &c. expound; not by death of Body and Soul, as was threatned to Adam, without place for Repentance, or hope of Mercy.

(2.) You ſay Abraham's Covenant could not be a Covenant of Faith, becauſe Faith was not reckoned to Abraham for Righteouſneſs in Circumciſion, but in Uncircumciſion, Rom. 4. 9, 10.

Reply. This is weak reaſoning. Circumciſion could not belong to a Goſpel-Covenant, becauſe Abraham was a Believer before he was Circumciſed. You may as well deny the Lord's-Supper to be the Seal of a Goſpel-Covenant, becauſe the Partakers of it are Believers before they partake of it. Beſide, you cannot deny but it ſealed the Righteouſneſs of Faith to Abraham; And I deſired you before, to prove that a Seal of the Covenant of Works is capable of being applied to ſuch an uſe and ſervice, which you have not done, nor ever will be able to do; but politickly ſlided by it.

(3.) You ſay it cannot be a Covenant of Grace, becauſe it is contra-diſtinguiſhed to the Righteouſneſs of Faith, Rom. 4. 13.

Reply. The Law in that place is put ſtrictly for the pure Law of Nature, and Metaleptically ſignifies the Works of the Law, which is a far different thing from the Law taken in that latitude wherein you take it. And is not this a pretty Argument, that becauſe the Promiſe to Abraham, and his Seed, was not through the Law, but through the Righteouſneſs of Faith; therefore the Covenant of God made with Abraham, and his Seed, Gen. 17. cannot be a gracious, but a legal Covenant? This Promiſe mentioned, Rom. 4. 13. was made to Abraham long before the Law was given by Moſes: and Free-grace, not Abraham's legal Righteouſneſs, was the impulſive cauſe moving God to make that Promiſe to Abraham, and to his Seed: and their enjoyment of the Mercies promiſed, was not to be through the Law, but through the Righteouſneſs of Faith. By what Rule of Art this Scripture is alledged to prove God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. to be a Covenant of Works, I am utterly to ſeek. If it be only becauſe Circumciſion was added to it, that's anſwered over and over before; and you neither have nor can reply to it.

(4.) Laſtly, It cannot (ſay you) be a Covenant of Grace, becauſe it's repreſented to us in Scripture as a Bondage-Covenant, Acts 15. 10, &c. Gal. 5. 1.

Reply. 'Tis time, I ſee, to make an end. Your Diſcourſe runs low and dreggy. Do you think it is one and the ſame thing to ſay, That the Ceremonial Law was a yoke of Bondage to them that were under it, and to ſay it was an Adam's Covenant? Are theſe two parallel diſtinctions in your Logick? Alas! Sir, there is a wide difference. The difficulty, variety, and chargeableneſs of thoſe Ceremonies, made them indeed burthenſome and tireſome to that People; but they did not make the Covenant, to which they were annexed, to become an Adam's Covenant of Works: for in the very next breath, verſ. 11. the Apoſtle will tell you, they were ſaved; yea, and tells us, that we ſhall be ſaved even as they. So that either they that were under this Yoke, were ſaved by Faith in the way of Free-grace, as we now are; or we muſt be ſaved in the way of legal Obedience, as they were. Take which you pleaſe, for one of them you muſt take. We ſhall be ſaved, even as they, Acts 15. 10, 11.

If you can make no ſtronger oppoſition to my Arguments, than ſuch as you have here made, your Cauſe is loſt; though your confidence and obſtinacy remain. It were eaſy for me to fill more Paper than I have written on this Subject, with Names of principal Note in the Church of God, who with one Voice decry your groundleſs Poſition, and conſtantly affirm, That the Law in the complex ſenſe you take it, as it comprehends the Ceremonial Rites and Ordinances whereunto Circumciſion pertains, is, and can be no other than the Covenant of Grace, though more obſcurely adminiſtred. But becauſe Latin Authors are of little uſe to you, and among Engliſh ones, the Judgment of Dr. Criſp, I ſuppoſe, will be inſtar omnium with you: I will recite it faithfully out of his Sermon upon the two Covenants, where he makes the Old and New Covenant to be indeed two diſtinct Covenants of Grace, (for which I ſee no reaſon at all) but proves the former to be ſo in theſe words. Vol. 2. Serm. 2. pag. 247, 248, 250.

'It is granted of all Men, That in the Covenant of Works there is no remiſſion of Sin, there is

'is no notice of Chriſt; but the whole buſineſs or 'imployment of the Prieſts of the old Law, was 'altogether about remiſſion of Sins, and the exhi-'biting and holding forth of Chriſt in their faſhi-'on unto the People. In the 15th of Numbers, 'verſ. 28. (I will give you but one Inſtance) 'there you ſhall plainly ſee, That the adminiſtra-'tion of that Prieſtly Office had remiſſion of Sins 'as the main end of that adminiſtration. If a 'Soul ſin through Ignorance, he ſhall bring a She-goat 'unto the Prieſt, and he ſhall make an atonement for the 'Soul that ſinneth ignorantly, and it ſhall be forgiven 'him: See, the main end is adminiſtring forgive-'neſs of Sins.

'And that Chriſt was the main Subject of that 'their Miniſtry, is plain, becauſe the Apoſtle 'ſaith in the Verſe before my Text, That all that 'Adminiſtration was but a Shadow of Chriſt, 'and a Figure for the preſent to repreſent him, 'as he doth expreſs in the 9th Chapter of this 'Epiſtle. And the truth is, the uſual general 'Goſpel that all the Jews had, was in their Sacri-'fices and Prieſtly Obſervations. ——

'So that it's plain, the adminiſtration of their 'Covenant, was an adminiſtration of Grace, 'and abſolutely diſtinct from the adminiſtration of 'theCovenant of Works.And what canbe ſaid more abſolutely and directly contradictory to your*Poſition*. than this is? And yet again, p. 250. ſpeaking to that Scripture, Heb. 8. 8. 'where the Apoſtle 'diſtinguiſhes of a better and a faulty, of Firſt and 'Second; he ſaith, (finding fault with them) The 'days come, when I will make a new Covenant 'with the Houſe of Iſrael, and with the Houſe of Judah, not according to the Covenant I made with 'their Fathers, when I took them by the hand to lead 'them out of the Land of Egypt; and (as Jeremiah adds it, for the Apoſtle takes all this out of 'Jer. 31. 31.) although I was an Husband to them; and in the cloſe of all, Your Sins and Iniquities 'will I remember no more.—— Here are two Covenants, a new Covenant, and the Covenant he made with their Fathers. Some may think it was the Covenant of Works at the promulgation of the Moral Law; but mark well that Expreſ-ſion of Jeremiah, and you ſhall ſee it was the Co-venant of Grace. For (ſaith he) not according to the Covenant I made with their Fathers, although I was an Husband unto them. How can God be conſi-dered as Husband to a People under the Covenant of Works, which was broken by Man in innocency, and ſo became diſannulled or impoſſible by the breach of it? The Covenant of Works runs thus: Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the Book of the Law; and, In the day thou ſinneſt, thou ſhalt die the death. Man had ſinned before God took him by the hand to lead him out of the Land of Egypt, and Sin had ſeparated Man from God: How then can God be called an Husband in the Covenant of Works? The Covenant therefore was not a Covenant of Works, but ſuch a Covenant as the Lord became an Husband in, and that muſt be a Covenant of Grace, &c.

How the Doctor makes good his two diſtinct Covenants of Grace, I ſee not, nor expect ever to ſee proved, and is not my preſent concernment to enquire; but once it is evident by what he hath here ſaid, That the Ceremonial Law, whereof Circumciſion is a branch, can be no other than the Covenant of Grace. And nothing is more common among our Divines, than to prove not only the Sinai Law, but God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. to be the Covenant of Grace, by this Medium, That God having entred into a Co-venant of Grace with Abraham before, would never bring him under a Covenant of Works afterwards, which muſt nullify and void the former. And beſide, ſuch a Covenant of Works as you make this, was never heard of in the World, wherein God pro-miſes to be a God to Abraham, and hisSeed, in their Generations, upon the rigorous and impoſſi-ble Terms of Adam's Covenant.

By this time, I preſume, you muſt feel the force of thoſe Arguments produced againſt your vain and groundleſs Notion; and how little you are able to do to deliver your Theſis from them, but the more you ſtruggle, the more ſtill you are intangled. Go which way you will, your Ab-ſurdities follow you as your Shadow. —— hæ-ret lateri lethalis arundo. Leaving therefore all your Abſurdities upon you, till God ſhall give you more Illumination and Ingenuity to diſcern and ac-knowledge them; I ſhall paſs on to the Examina-tion of your third Poſition, which led you into theſe other groſs Miſtakes; and if God ſhall con-vince you of your Error in this Point, I hope it may prove a Means of recovering you out of the reſt: which in Love to your Soul, I hearti-ly deſire.

III. Your third Poſition is, That God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. can be no other than the Covenant of Works, becauſe Circumciſion was the Con-dition of it: For (ſay you) the new Covenant is alto-gether abſolute and unconditional.

Of the Conditionality of the New Covenant.

This Queſtion, Whether the Covenant of Grace be Conditionate or Abſolute, was moved (as a Learned Man obſerves) in the former Age, by occaſion of the Controverſy about Juſtification, betwixt the Proteſtants and Papiſts. Among the Proteſtants, ſome denied, and others affirmed the Conditionality of the Goſpel-Covenant. Thoſe that denied it, did ſo for fear of mingling Law and Goſpel, Chriſt's Righteouſneſs and Man's, as the Papiſts had wickedly done before. Thoſe that affirmed it, did ſo out of fear alſo; leſt the Neceſ-ſity of Faith and Holineſs being relaxed, Libertiniſm ſhould be that way introduced. But if the Queſtion were duly ſtated and the ſenſe of its Terms agreed upon, the Goſpel-Covenant may be affirmed to be conditional, to ſecure the People of God from Libertiniſm, without the leaſt dimi-nution of the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, or cloud-ing the Free-Grace of God.

I did in my firſt Anſwer to your Call endeavour to prevent the needleſs Trouble you have here given your ſelf, by a ſuccinct ſtate of the Queſti-on; telling you the Controverſy betwixt us, is not, (1.) Whether the Goſpel Covenant requires no Duties at all of them that are under it? nor (2.) Whether it requires any ſuch Conditions as were in Adam's Covenant, namely, perfect, per-ſonal, and perpetual Obedience under the Penalty of the Curſe, and admitting no place of Repen-tance? nor (3.) Whether any Condition required by it on our part, have any Thing in its own na-ture meritorious of the Benefits promiſed? nor (4) Whether we be able in our own ſtrength, and by the power of our Free-will, without the preventing, as well as the aſſiſting Grace of God, to perform any ſuch work or duty as we call a Condition? Theſe things I told you were to be excluded out of this Controverſy. But the only Queſtion betwixt us, is, Queſtion p. 4.; Whether in the

New Covenant, ſome act of ours (though it have no merit in it, nor can be done in our own ſingle ſtrength) be not required to be performed by us antecedently to a bleſſing or privilege conſequent by vertue of a Promiſe: And whether ſuch an act or duty, being of a ſuſpending nature to the Bleſſing promiſed, it have not the true and proper Nature of a Goſpel-Condition?

In your Reply (contrary to all rule and reaſon) you include and chiefly argue againſt the very Particulars by me there excluded; and ſcarcely (if at all) touch the true Queſtion as it was ſtated, and by you ought accordingly to have been conſidered. I might therefore juſtly think my ſelf diſcharged from any further concernment with you about it: for if you will include what I plainly exclude, you argue not againſt mine, but another Man's Poſition, which I am not concerned to defend. You here diſpute againſt meritorious Conditions which I explode and abhor as much as your ſelf. You ſay, p. 34. of your Reply, that a Condition plainly implies ſomething of Merit, by way of condignity or congruity; which is falſe, and turns the Queſtion from me to the Papiſts. And were it not more for the clearing up of ſo great a Point for the Inſtruction and Satisfaction of others, than any hope you give me of convincing you, I ſhould not have touched this Queſtion again, unleſs I had found your Replies more diſtinct and pertinent. But finding the Point in Controverſy of great weight, I will once more tell you,

1. What the word [Condition] ſignifies.
2. In what ſenſe it is by us uſed in this Controverſy.
3. Eſtabliſh my Arguments for the Conditionality of the New Covenant.

(1.) And firſt we grant, That neither our word [Condition] nor your Term [Abſolute] are either of them found in Scripture, with reſpect to God's covenanting of Man; ſo that we contend not about the ſignification of a Scripture term. But though the word Conditional be not there, yet the thing being found there, That brings the word Conditional into uſe in this Controverſy. For we know not how to expreſs thoſe ſacred Particles, εἰ, ὅτι ἐὰν, ἐὰν μὴ, μόνον, εἰ οὐ ἔχ, &c. If, If not, Unleſs, But if, Except, Only, and the like, which are frequently uſed to limit and reſtrain the Grants and Privileges of the New Covenant, Rom. 10. 9. Mat. 18. 3. Mark 5. 36. Mark 11. 26. Rom. 4. 24. I ſay, we know not how to expreſs the true ſenſe and force of theſe Particles in this Controverſy, by any other word ſo fit and full as the word Conditional is. Now this word Condition being a Law-term, is variouſly uſed among Juriſts; and the various uſe of the word, occaſions that confuſion which is found in this Controverſy. He therefore that ſhall clearly diſtinguiſh the various ſenſes and uſes of the word, is moſt likely to labour with Succeſs in this Controverſy. I ſhall therefore briefly note the principal Senſes and uſes of the Term, and ſhew in what ſenſe we here take it. Of Conditions there be two ſorts.

1. Antecedent
2. Conſequent

} Conditions.

As to the latter, namely, conſequent Conditions, you your ſelf acknowledge, p. 100. 'That in 'the Covenant, many Things are required of us 'in order unto the Participation or Enjoyment 'of the full end of the Covenant in Glory.

So then the Covenant is acknowledged to be conſequentially conditional, which is no more than to ſay with the Apoſtle, Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee God; or, that if any man draw back, his Soul ſhall have no pleaſure in him, &c. Our Controverſy therefore is not about conſequent Conditions, laid by God upon Believers, after they are in Chriſt and the Covenant; the Covenant ſo conſidered, a poſteriori, will not be denied to be Conditional. The only Queſtion is about Antecedent Conditions; and of theſe we are here to conſider,

1. Such as reſpect the firſt Sanction of the Covenant in Chriſt.
2. Such as Reſpect the Application of the Benefits of the Covenant unto Men. *.

Si promiſſiones fœderis intelligantur de fine, nemo negare poteſt eſſe conditionales; quià fiunt ſemper ſub conditione fidei, & pœnitentiæ. Turrettine.

* Si fœdus ſpectetur ratione ſanctionis primæ in Chriſto, nullam habet conditionem præviam; ſed ſolâ gratia Dei, & Chriſti merito nititur. Sed ſi attendatur ratione acceptationis & applicationis in fideli, conditionem habet Fidem, quæ hominem unit Chriſto, & ſic in communionem fœderis mittit. Turret. vol. 2. p. 203.

As to the firſt Sanction of the Covenant in Chriſt, we freely acknowledge it hath no previous Condition on Man's part; but depends purely and only upon the Grace of God and Merit of Chriſt. So that our Queſtion proceeds about ſuch Antecedent Conditions only as reſpect the Application of the Benefits of the Covenant unto Men. And of theſe Antecedent Conditions there are likewiſe two ſorts, which muſt be carefully diſtinguiſhed.

1. Such Antecedent Conditions which have the force of a meritorious and impulſive Cauſe, which being performed by the proper ſtrength of Nature, or at moſt by the help of common aſſiſting Grace, do give a Man a right to the Reward or Bleſſings of the Covenant. And in this Senſe we utterly diſclaim antecedent Conditions, as I plainly told you, p. 61. of my Vindiciæ, &c. Or,
2. An Antecedent Condition ſignifying no more than an act of ours, which though it be neither perfect in every degree, nor in the leaſt meritorious of the Benefit conferred; nor performed in our own natural ſtrength; yet according to the conſtitution of the Covenant, is required of us in order to the Bleſſings conſequent thereupon by Virtue of the Promiſe: and conſequently the Benefits and Mercies granted in the Promiſe in this order are, and muſt be ſuſpended by the Donor or Diſpoſer of them, until it be performed. Such a Condition we affirm Faith to be. But here again, Faith in this Senſe, the Condition of the New Covenant is conſidered,

{ 1. Eſſentially. Or,
{ 2. Organically and Inſtrumentally.

In the firſt conſideration of Faith, according to its Eſſence, it is contained under Obedience, and in that reſpect we exclude it from juſtifying our Perſons, or entitling us to the ſaving-mercies of the New Covenant, as it is a work of ours; and ſo I excluded it, p. 133. of my Method of Grace, which you ignorantly or wilfully miſtake, when in your Reply, p. 88, 89. you object againſt me: Faith conſidered in this ſenſe, is not the Condition of the Covenant, nor can pretend to be ſo, more than any other Grace. But

We

We conſider it Organically, Relatively, and (as moſt ſpeak) Inſtrumentally, as it receives Chriſt, Joh. 1. 12. and ſo gives us power to become the Sons of God; it being impoſſible for any Man to partake of the ſaving Benefits of the Covenant, but as he is united to Chriſt. For all the Promiſes of God in him are yea, and in him, Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. And united to Chriſt no Man can be, before he be a Believer; for Chriſt dwelleth in our Hearts by Faith, Eph. 3. 17. Upon which Scriptural Grounds and Reaſons it is, that we affirm Faith to be an Antecedent Condition, or, Cauſa ſine quâ non, to the ſaving Benefits of the New Covenant; and that it muſt go before them, at leaſt in order of Nature, which is that we mean, when we ſay Faith is the Antecedent Condition of the New Covenant. And thoſe that deny it to be ſo, as the Antinomians do, who talk of actual and perſonal Juſtification from Eternity, or at leaſt from the death of Chriſt, muſt conſequently aſſert the actual Juſtification of Infidels; and not only diſturb, but deſtroy the whole order of the Goſpel, and open the Sluces and Flood-gates to all manner of licentiouſneſs.

Moſes's Self-denial, p. 188.

And thus our Pious and Learned Divines generally affirm Faith to be the condition of the Covenant. 'So 'Mr. Jeremiah Burroughs, Faith (ſaith he) hath the 'great Honour above all other Graces, to be the 'Condition of the ſecond Covenant; therefore 'certainly it is ſome great matter that Faith ena-'bles us to do. Whatſoever keeps covenant with 'God, brings ſtrength, though it ſelf be never ſo 'weak; as Sampſon's Hair: What is weaker than 'a little Hair? Yet becauſe the keeping that, 'was keeping Covenant with God; therefore 'even a little Hair was ſo great ſtrength to Samp-'ſon. Faith then, that is the condition of the 'Covenant, in which all Grace and Mercy is con-'tained, if it be kept, it will cauſe ſtrength indeed 'to do great things.

And as this excellent Man, Mr. Burroughs, is in this ſenſe for the conditionality of the new Covenant; ſo are the moſt learned and eminent of our own Divines. Dr. Edward Reynold's aſſigning the differences betwixt the two Covenants, gives this for one: 'They differ in the Condi-

Dr. Reynold's his Life of Chriſt. p. 512.

'tion (ſaith he;) there Legal Obedi-'ence, here only Faith; and the cer-'tain conſequent thereof, Repen-'tance. There is difference likewiſe in the man-'ner of performing theſe conditions: For now 'God himſelf begins firſt to work upon us, and 'in us, before we move or ſtir towards him. He 'doth not only command us, and leave us to our 'created ſtrength to obey the command; but he 'furniſheth us with his own Grace and Spirit to 'obey the command.

Dr. Owen's Treatiſe of Redemption. Book 3. Chap. 1. p. 103, 104. And in his Tract of Juſtification, p. 299. &c.

Of the ſame judgment is Dr. Owen. 'Are we able (ſaith he) of our 'ſelves to fulfil the condition of the 'New Covenant? Is it not as eaſie 'for a Man by his own ſtrength to 'fulfil the whole Law, as to repent, 'and believe the promiſe of the Go-'ſpel? This then is one main diffe-'rence of theſe two Covenants, That 'the Lord did in the Old only require the Condi-'tion; now in the New, he alſo affects it in all 'the Fœderates to whom the Covenant is extend-'ed. This is the Man you pretend to be againſt 'Conditions.

Mr. William Pemble opening the Nature of the two Covenants, ſaith, 'The Law 'offers Life unto Man upon Condi-'on of perfect Obedience; the Go-'ſpel offers Life unto Man upon ano-'ther Condition, to wit, of Repen-'tance, and Faith in Chriſt. And 'after his Proofs for it, ſaith, From whence we 'conclude firmly, That the difference between 'the Law and the Goſpel, aſſigned by our Di-'vines, is moſt certain and agreeable to the Scrip-'tures, viz. That the Law gives Life unto the 'Juſt, upon condition of perfect Obedience in 'all things; the Goſpel gives Life unto Sinners, 'upon condition they repent and believe in Chriſt 'Jeſus.

Pemble, of Juſtif. Sect. 4. Chap. 1. p. 214, 215, 216, 217.

Learned and judicious Mr. William Perkins thus, 'The Covenant of 'Grace is that whereby God freely 'promiſing Chriſt and his Benefits, 'exacts again of Man, that he would 'by Faith receive Chriſt. And again, in the 'Covenant of Grace two things muſt be conſider-'ed, the Subſtance thereof, and the Condition. The 'Subſtance of the Covenant is, That 'Righteouſneſs and Life Everlaſting, 'is given to God's Church and People 'by Chriſt. The Condition is, That 'we for our Parts are by Faith to receive the 'foreſaid Benefits; and this Condition is by Grace, 'as well as the Subſtance.

Reformed Catholick of Juſtif. p. 570.

That learned, humble, and painful Miniſter of Chriſt Mr. John Ball, ſtating the difference betwixt the two Covenants, ſhews, that in the Covenant at Sinai, in the Covenant with Abraham, and that with David, that in all theſe Covenant-expreſſures, there are for ſubſtance the ſame Evangelical Conditions of Faith and Sincerity.

Mr. J. Ball of the Covenant of Grace, Chap. 1. Of the New Covenant, p. 198.

Dr. Davenant thus: 'In the Cove-'nant of the Goſpel it is otherwiſe; 'for in this Covenant, to the obtain-'ment of Reconciliation, Juſtifica-'tion, and Life Eternal, there is no other condi-'tion required than of true and lively Faith, 'John 3. 16. Therefore Juſtification, and the 'right to Eternal Life, doth depend on the con-'dition of Faith alone.

Davenant De Juſtif. Act. Cap. 30.

Dr. Downame harmonizeth with the reſt in theſe words: 'That which is 'the only condition of the Covenant 'of Grace, by that alone we are 'juſtified: But Faith is the condi-'tion of the Covenant of Grace, 'which is therefore called Lex Fidei. Our Writers (ſaith he) diſtinguiſheth the two Covenants of 'God, that is, the Law and the Goſpel, whereof 'one is the Covenant of Works, the other the 'Covenant of Grace, do teach, That the Law 'of Works is that which to Juſtification requireth 'Works as the condition thereof: The Law of 'Faith that, which to Juſtification requireth Faith 'as the condition thereof. The former ſaith, Do 'this, and thou ſhalt live; the latter, Believe in 'Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaved.

Tract. 1. of Juſtif. Lib. 6. Cap. 8. Sect. 10. and Lib. 7. Cap. 2. Sect. 6.

But what ſtand I upon particular, though renowned Names? You may ſee a whole Conſtellation of our ſound and famous Divines in the Aſſembly, thus expreſſing themſelves about this Point. 'The Grace of God (ſay they) is manifeſted in 'the ſecond Covenant, in that he freely provideth,

and

Larger Catech. 4to. London 1648. p. 8.

'and offereth to Sinners a Mediator, & 'Life and Salvation by him, and requiring Faith as the condition to interest them in him, promiseth and giveth his holy Spirit to all his Elect, to 'work in them that Faith, with all other saving 'Graces, and to enable them to all holy Obedience, as the Evidence of the Truth of their 'Faith, &c.

I could even tire the Reader with the Testimonies of eminent foreign Divines, as Cameron de triplici fœdere, Thes. 82. Ursinus & Paræus explicatio Catech. Quæst. 18. de fœdere. Wendeline, Christian Theology, Lib. 1. Cap. 19. Thes. 9. Poliander, Rivet, Wallæus and Thysius, the four learned Professors at Leyden, Synops. Disp. 23. Sect. 27, &c. And as for those ancient and modern Divines, whom the Antinomians have corrupted and misrepresented, the Reader may see them all vindicated, and their concurrence with those I have named, evidenced by that learned and pious Mr. John Graile, in his Modest Vindication of the Doctrine of Conditions in the Covenant of Grace, from p. 58. onward; a Man whose Name and Memory is precious with me, not only upon the account of that excellent Sermon he preached, and those fervent Prayers he poured out many Years since at my Ordination, but for that learned and judicious Treatise of his against Mr. Eyre, wherein he hath cast great light upon this Controversy, as excellent Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Woodbridge have also done. But alas, what Evidence is sufficient to satisfy ignorant and obstinate Men!

Sir, It pities me to see the lamentable confusion you are in. You are forced, by the Evidence of Truth to yield and own the Substance of what I contend for. You have yielded the Covenant to be consequently conditional in p. 84. of your Reply. You have also as plainly yielded that the Application of Pardoning Mercy unto our Souls, is in order of nature consequent unto believing; p. 31. of your Reply. From both which concessions in your own words recited, this conclusion is evident and unavoidable, viz.

That no adult Person, notwithstanding God's Eternal Election, and Christ's meritorious Death and Satisfaction, according to the Constitution and Order of the New Covenant, can either be justified in this World, or saved in the World to come, unless he first believe.

For if the Application of pardoning Mercy unto our Souls, is in order of Nature consequent unto believing (as you truly affirm it to be) then according to the Constitution and Order of the new Covenant, no Application of Pardoning Mercy can be made to our Souls before we believe. And if it be evident (as you say it is, p. 84.) that unto a full and compleat Enjoyment of all the Promises of the Covenant, Faith on our Part is required; then as no Man can be actually justified in this World, so neither can he be saved before, or without Faith in the World to come. And if you did but see the true suspending Nature of Faith, which you plainly yield in these two Concessions; you would quickly grant the conditional Nature of it: For what is the proper Nature and true Notion of a Condition, but to suspend the Benefits and Grants of that Covenant in which it is so inserted? And thus the Controversy betwixt us is fairly issued. But I doubt you understand not what you have here written, or are troubled with a very bad Memory: Because I find you in a far different Note from this in p. 103. of your Reply, where you say, 'That if Jesus Christ 'fulfilled the Law, and purchased Heaven and Happi'ness for Men (as all true Protestants hitherto have 'taught) then nothing can remain, but to declare this to 'them, to incline them to believe and accept it; and to 'prescribe in what way, and by what Means they shall 'finally come to inherit Eternal Life. To affirm there'fore, that Faith and Repentance are the Conditions of 'the New Covenant required of us in Point of Duty, 'antecedent to the Benefit of the Promise, doth neces'sarily suppose, that Christ hath not done all for us, nor 'purchased a Right to Life for any; but only made way 'that they may have it upon certain Terms, or (as some 'say) he hath merited that we might merit: But the Con'ditions of the Covenant are not to be performed by the 'Head and Members both, Gal. 4. 4. Christ therefore 'having in our stead performed the Conditions of Life, 'there remains nothing but a Promise, and the Obedience 'of Children, as the Fruit and Effect thereof to them 'that believe in him, together with Means of obtaining 'the full Possession, which here we want.

Reply. Either these Passages I have here cited and compared, were fetched at a great distance of time, out of Authors differing as much in Judgment as you and I do; and so the Dissonancy of them is the meer Effect of Oblivion and Incogitancy: Or else your Intellectuals are more confused and weak than I am willing to suspect them to be. For if the Application of Pardoning Mercy to our Souls, is in order of Nature consequent to Believing (as you truly say it was;) then certainly, notwithstanding Christ's fulfilling the Law, and purchasing Heaven and Happiness for Men, something else must remain to be done, besides declaring this to them, to incline them to believe and accept it, or prescribing to them in what way they shall finally come to inherit Eternal Life. For besides those Declarations and Prescriptions you talk of, Faith it self must be wrought in the Souls of Men, or else Pardoning Mercy is not in order of Nature consequent unto Believing, as you said it was: For all the external Declarations and Prescriptions in the World, are not Faith it self, but only the means to beget it; which may, or may not become effectual to that end.

Secondly, Whereas you say, that this (senseless Notion) is consequent upon the Doctrine of all true Protestants, you therein grosly abuse them, and make all the true Protestants in the World guilty of worse than Arminian or Antinomian Dotage. The Antinomian indeed makes our actual Justification to be nothing else but the Manifestation or Declaration of our Justification from Eternity, or the Time of Christ's Death. And the Arminian tells us, That the Declaration of the Gospel to Men, is sufficient to bring them to Faith by the assisting Grace of the Spirit. But your Notion is worse than the very Dregs of both, and yet you tack it as a just consequent to the Doctrine of all true Protestants.

Reply. Thirdly, You say, That to affirm Faith and Repentance to be the Conditions of the New Covenant required of us in Point of Duty, antecedent to the Benefit of the Promise, doth necessarily suppose that Christ hath not done all for us, nor purchased a right to Life for any; but only made way that they may have it upon certain Terms, or merited that we might merit. Here, Sir, you vilely abuse all those worthy Divines before-mentioned, who have made Faith the Condition of the New Covenant, pinning upon them both Popery and Judaism. Popery, yea, the Dregs of Popery, in supposing their Doctrine necessarily implies that Christ hath merited P. 104.

that we might merit. And Judaism to the height, in saying, their Doctrine necessarily supposes that Christ hath not purchased a right of Life to any. What can a Jew say more? Ah, Mr. C. can you read the words I have recited out of blessed Burroughs, Owen, Pemble, Perkins, Davenant, Downame, yea, the whole Assembly of Reverend and Holy Divines, with multitudes more (who have all with one Mouth assested Faith to be the Condition of the New Covenant required on Man's part, in point of Duty; and that Men must believe before they can be justified; which is the very same thing with what I say, That it is antecedent to the benefit of the Promise) and not tremble to think of the direful charges you here draw against them? The Lord forgive your rash presumption.

Fourthly, Whereas you say, Christ hath in our stead performed the Conditions of Life, and that there remains nothing but a Promise, &c. you therein speak at the highest Dialect of Antinomianism; hath not Christ by his Life and Death performed the Conditions of Life in our stead? yet you your self confess, that pardoning Mercy is in order of Nature consequent to our believing, certainly then there is something more to be done beside the mere making, or being of a Promise: there must be the effect of the Promise in our Hearts; yea, the effects of those absolute Promises of the first Grace, Ezek. 36. Jer. 32. Or else notwithstanding Christ's performance of Redemption on his part, we can neither be justified nor saved. For I don't think you intend to lay the Conditions of Repentance or believing upon Christ, who in the New Covenant hath laid them upon us, tho' in the same Covenant he graciously undertakes to work them in us: and yet your words sound in that wild Antinomian Note.

Saltmarsh, of Free-grace, p. 126, 127.

Objection. But, I suppose, you take my Notion to be as self-repugnant as your own, when I say Faith is an antecedent Condition to Justification: because I also say, this Grace is also supernaturally wrought in us, and is not of our selves. This staggers you, and is the very Stone you stumble at all along this Controversie: for in your sense, p. 34. every Condition is meritorious by condignity or congruity.

Reply. First, What do I say more in all this, than what those Worthies before-mentioned do expresly affirm? Doth not Dr. Owen (the Man whom you deservedly value) make Conditions both in Adam's Covenant and the New, with this difference, that Adam's Covenant required them, but the New Covenant effects them in all the Fœderates? Sir, We take it for no contradiction to assert, That the planting of the Principle, and the assisting and exciting of the Acts of Faith, are the proper Works of the Spirit of God, and are also contained in the absolute Promises of the New Covenant, Ezek. 36. 26, 27. Jer. 32. 39, 40. And yet Faith, notwithstanding this, is truly and properly our Work and Duty; and that upon our believing, or not believing, we have, or have not, an actual Interest in Christ, Righteousness, and Life. For though the Author of Faith be the Spirit of God, yet believing is properly our Act, and an Act required of us by a plain Command, 1 John 3. 23. This is the Command of God, That ye believe. And if its being wrought in God's strength makes it cease to be our Work, I would fain know what Exposition you would give of that place, Phil. 2. 12, 13. Work out your own Salvation, &c. for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do. And as this Faith is truly and properly our work, though wrought in God's strength (for it is not God, but we that do believe) so it is wrought in us by him (by your own confession) before the application of pardoning Mercy, which is consequent in order of nature thereunto: and therefore hath the true nature of an antecedent Condition, which is that I contend for; and did you but understand your own words, you would not contend against.

Object. 2. Oh, but say you p. 34. every Condition is meritorious, either by way of congruity or condignity.

Reply. This is your ignorance of the nature of a Condition, with which I find you as unacquainted as with the nature of a Covenant. A Condition, whilst unperformed, only suspends the Act of the Law or Testament: it being the Will of the Testator, Legislator, or Donor, that his Law or Testament should act or effect, when the Condition is performed, and not before: but it is not essential to a Condition, to be a meritorious or impulsive cause moving him to bestow the benefit for the sake thereof. A Man freely gives another out of his love and bounty such an Estate or Sum of Money, which he shall enjoy if he live to such a Year, or Day; and not before: is this quando dies veniet, this appointed time the meritorious or impulsive cause of the gift? surely no Man will say it: but that it is a causa sine quâ non, or a Condition suspending the enjoyment of the Gift, no Man will deny that knows what the nature of a Condition is. An Act meritorious by way of Congruity, is that to which a Reward is not due out of strict Justice, but out of Decency, or some kind of Meetness. Merit of condignity is a voluntary Action, for which a Reward is due to a Man out of Justice, and cannot be denied him without Injustice. Our Faith is truly the Condition of the New Covenant, and yet we detest the meritoriousness of it in either sense.

Object. 3. But you object my words to me in my Method of Grace, where I assert the impossibility of believing without the efficacy of supernatural Grace, p. 102, 103.

Reply. Sir, I own the words you quote, and am bold to challenge the most envious Eye that shall read those Lines, to shew me the least repugnancy betwixt what I said there, and what I have said in my Vindiciæ Legis, &c. p. 9. of the Prolegomena, and p. 61. of that Book. You shew your good-will to make an advantageous thrust; but your Weapon is too short, and can draw no Blood. But leaving these weak and impertinent cavils, let us come to your Solution of my Arguments, p. 98. by which I proved the Conditionality of the New Covenant. My first Argument was this.

Argument 1. If we cannot be justified or saved till we believe, and are justified when we believe; then Faith is the Condition on which those consequent Benefits are suspended, &c.

Answer. The sum of your Answer (without denying, distinguishing, or limiting one Proposition) is this, That, "here Faith is properly put in "to the room of perfect Obedience, and is to do "what perfect Obedience was to do under the "Law: whereas (say you) Faith is only appointed as an Instrument to receive and apply "the Righteousness of Christ, which is the alone "matter of our Justification before God; and Faith "it self is not our Righteousness, as it would be if "it were a Condition, p. 105, 106.

Reply.

Reply. Not to note the weakneſs and impertinence of this Anſwer, I ſhall only take notice of what you here allow, and grant, That Faith is appointed as an Inſtrument to receive and apply the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which is the alone matter of our Juſtification before God. Whence I infer three Concluſions.

Firſt, That we cannot be juſtified before God till we believe, except you can prove, that the unaccepted and unapplied Righteouſneſs of Chriſt doth actually juſtify our Perſons before God.

Secondly, That the juſtification of our Perſons before God, is, and muſt be ſuſpended (as by a non-performed Condition) until we actually believe. Which two Concluſions yield up your Cauſe to my Argument, which you here ſeem to oppoſe.

Thirdly, That hereby you perfectly renounce and deſtroy your Antinomian Fancy before-mentioned, That if Chriſt have fulfilled the Law, and purchaſed Heaven for Men, nothing can remain but to declare this to them, &c. for it ſeems by this, they muſt receive and apply Chriſt's Righteouſneſs by Faith, or they cannot be juſtified (you ſay not declaratively in their own Conſciences, but) before God. And thus inſtead of anſwering, you have confirmed and yielded my firſt Argument, and only oppoſe your own Miſtakes, not the ſenſe or force of my Arguments, in all that you ſay to it, or the Scriptures produced to prove it.

Argument 2. To my ſecond Argument, recited, p. 94. where I argued from God's Covenant with Abraham, and proved it to be conditional; and yet by you acknowledged to be a pure Goſpel-Covenant: all that you ſay, is, That you have diſpatched that before, in your Diſcourſe about the Covenant of Circumciſion, and therefore will ſay nothing to it here.

Reply. In ſaying nothing to it here, you have ſaid as much as you did before in the place you refer to: and therefore finding nothing ſaid here or there, I conclude you can ſay nothing to it at all.

Argument. 3. My third Argument was this. If all the Promiſes of the Goſpel be abſolute and unconditional, then they do not properly belong to the New Covenant. That cannot properly and ſtrictly be a Covenant which is not a mutual Compact, and in which there is no Reſtipulation, nor Re-obligation: 'tis a naked Promiſe, not a Covenant.

To this you anſwer three things. In the firſt branch of your Anſwer you impudently beg the Queſtion, by ſaying, That ‘ you have proved already in your Replies to my former Arguments, that the ‘ New Covenant is wholly free and abſolute. Upon ‘ this abſurd Petitio Principii you make bold to in- ‘ vert my Argument thus in your ſecond Reply. If ‘ all the Promiſes of the Goſpel be wholly abſolute and ‘ unconditional, they do properly and truly belong to the ‘ New Covenant: But ſo they are. Therefore, &c. Oh ‘ rare Diſputant! In the laſt place, in oppoſition ‘ to the Sequel of my Major Propoſition, you tell ‘ me you will oppoſe the Judgment of Dr. Owen, ‘ on Heb. 8. 10. where he ſaith, That a Covenant ‘ properly is a Compact or Agreement on cer- ‘ tain Terms ſtipulated by two or more Parties, &c. and that the word Διαθήκη there uſed, ſignifies a Covenant improperly, &c.

Anſwer, page 113, 114.

Reply. If you call this an oppoſition to the Sequel of my Major, either your Brains or mine do want Hellebore. Doth he not ſay the very ſame thing I do, that there muſt be a Reſtipulation in a proper Covenant? And as for the word Διαθήκη, which (he ſaith) ſignifieth a Covenant improperly, but properly is a Teſtamentary Diſpoſition, I fully concur with him therein. But I hope a Teſtamentary Diſpoſition may have a Condition in it; to be ſure ſuch a one as I aſſert Faith here to be, which is the free Gift of God; and in this ſenſe I ſhewed you before where the Doctor yields Faith to be the Condition of the new Covenant.

Argument 4. My fourth Argument was this. If all the Promiſes of the New Covenant be abſolute and unconditional, and have no reſpect nor relation to any Grace wrought in us, or Duty done by us; then the trial of our Intereſt in Chriſt by Marks and Signs of Grace is not our Duty, nor can we take comfort in Sanctification as it is an evidence of our Juſtification, &c.

Your Anſwer is, That ‘ at this rate I ‘ may prove quidlibet à quolibet: for it ‘ doth not follow, that, becauſe the ‘ New Covenant is abſolute, therefore ‘ it hath no reſpect nor relation to any Grace ‘ wrought in us, nor Duty done by us, or that ‘ we may not juſtly take comfort in Sanctification ‘ as an evidence of our Juſtification.

Reply. If I had a mind to learn the Art of proving quidlibet à quolibet, and make my ſelf ridiculous to others by ſuch fooliſh Attempts, I know no Book in the World fitter to inſtruct me therein, than yours. Certainly you have the knack of it, and gave us an Inſtance of it but now, in confuting the Sequel of my Major, by an Allegation out of Dr. Owen, which expreſly confirms and eſtabliſhes it. But to the Point, I would willingly know how it is poſſible for Sanctification to be a true and certain mark and ſign of Juſtification, when (according to the Antinomian Principle, which you here too much comprobate and eſpouſe) a Man may be juſtified before he believe, yea, before he is a Man, even from the time of Chriſt's Death, and (as others of them ſpeak) from Eternity. A true mark and ſign muſt be proper to, and inſeparable from that which it ſignifies. Now if that be true which you ſaid before, That after Chriſt's fulfilling of the Law in his own Perſon, &c. nothing can remain but to declare this to Men to incline them to believe and accept it, and to preſcribe in what way they ſhall come to inherit eternal life. If this be all that can remain to us, then nothing but the Declarations and Preſcriptions of the Goſpel, which are things without us, can remain to be marks and ſigns of Juſtification to us; and conſequently all thoſe to whom thoſe Declarations and Preſcriptions are made and given, have therein the marks and evidences of their Juſtification. But I am truly weary of ſuch ſtuff. I am ſure the Apoſtle places Vocation before Juſtification, Rom. 8. 30. Whom he called, them he juſtified. And without an immediate Teſtimony from Heaven, I know not how to evidence and prove my Juſtification, but from, and by my Faith, and other parts of Sanctification; whereby I apprehended and applied the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt: if you can prove it from the Declarations and Preſcriptions of the Goſpel, I cannot.

Argument V. My fifth and laſt Argument ran thus. If the Covenant of Grace be altogether abſolute and unconditional, requiring nothing to be done on our part, to entitle us to its Benefits; then it cannot be Man's Duty in entring Covenant with God, to deliberate the Terms, count the the Coſt, or give his Conſent by Word or Writing, to the Terms of this Covenant: for where there are no Terms at all (as in abſolute Promiſes there are none) there can be none to deliberate. But I ſhewed you, this is Man's Duty, from clear and undeniable Scriptures, &c.

You ſay by way of anſwer hereunto, that, 'You muſt tell me, that 'the Scriptures do make a plain di- 'ſtinction betwixt the New and 'Everlaſting Covenant which God hath been 'pleaſed to make with Sinners in Jeſus Chriſt; 'and the Return of that ſincere and dutiful Obe- 'dience which he requires of us, by way of an- 'ſwer thereunto. (2.) You ſay, there are many 'things, which tho' promiſed in the Covenant, 'and wrought in us by the Grace of God; are 'yet Duties indiſpenſably required of us in order 'to the Participation of the full end of the Co- 'venant in Glory: and in reſpect hereof, we 'are indeed to deliberate the Terms, count the 'Coſt, and give up our ſelves ſolemnly to him 'with ſincere Reſolutions, &c. But then you 'thought I had underſtood there had been a vaſt 'Difference betwixt God's Covenant with us, 'and our Covenant with God, citing Ezek. 16. '59, 60, 61. where God promiſeth to give them 'their Siſters for Daughters, but not by their Covenant. 'And with this you compare Pſal. 89. My Cove- 'nant will I not break; where (you ſay) we find 'a plain Diſtinction betwixt God's Covenant with 'them, and their Duty to God. And laſtly, you 'ſay, p. 105. that the want of a due obſervation 'of this plain Scripture-diſtinction, betwixt God's 'free and abſolute Covenant made with Sinners 'in Chriſt, and our Covenants with God by way 'of Return thereunto; is the true reaſon of all 'our Miſtakes about the true Nature of the Go- 'ſpel-Covenant, whilſt we jumble and confound 'together that which the Scriptures do ſo plainly 'diſtinguiſh.

Anſwer p. 122, 123.

Reply. To your firſt Anſwer, I ſay: It is true, the Scriptures do diſtinguiſh betwixt Covenant and Covenant; that of Works, and that of Grace. It alſo diſtinguiſhes the ſame Covenant of Grace for Subſtance, according to its various adminiſtrations into the Old and New Covenant. It alſo diſtinguiſhes betwixt the promiſſory part of the ſame Covenant of Grace, and the reſtipulatory part; not as of two oppoſite Covenants, (as you diſtinguiſh them, Gen. 17.) but as the juſt and neceſſary parts of one and the ſame Covenant. It alſo diſtinguiſhes betwixt Vows made by Men to God in ſome particular Caſes, and the Covenant of Grace betwixt God and them. But what's all this to your purpoſe? Or in what point doth it touch my Argument? You deſire me to caſt mine Eye upon Ezek. 16. and Pſal. 89. I have done ſo, and that impartially; and do aſſure you, I admire why you produce them againſt my Argument. That in Ezek. ſpeaks of the Enlargement of the Church by the Acceſſion of the Gentiles to it; and the ſenſe of thoſe words ſeems to me to be this; That this Enlargement of the Church is a gracious Addition, or ſomething beyond what God had ever done in his former Diſpenſations of the Covenant to that People. And for Pſal. 89. I know not what you meant to produce it for, unleſs it be to prove, what I never denied, That notwithſtanding our failures in Duty towards God, God will ſtill keep his Covenant with us; though he will viſit the Iniquities of his Covenant-People with a Rod.

To your ſecond Anſwer, That we are to deliberate the Terms, and count the Coſt, with reſpect to thoſe Duties, which are in order to the Participation of the full end of the Covenant in Glory: by which, I ſuppoſe you mean ſelf-denial, Perſeverance, &c. I have no Controverſy with you about that. Our Queſtion is, Whether there be no deliberations required of, or to be performed by Men, who are not yet in Chriſt by juſtifying Faith, but under ſome preparatory Works towards Faith? And whether at the very time of their cloſing with Chriſt, there be not a conſent of the Will unto thoſe Terms required of them? If you ſay there be (as by the Places I alledged it evidently appears there are) then you yield the Point I contend for. If you ſay they are not before, or at the Time of believing, to conſider any Terms, or give their conſent to them by Word or Writing; ſuch an Anſwer would fly in the very Face of thoſe Scriptures I produced: for then a Man may be in Covenant without his own Conſent; he that deliberates not, conſents not; non conſentit, qui non ſentit. And therefore you durſt not ſpeak it out (for which Modeſty I commend you) and ſo leave me with half an Anſwer, not touching that part, viz. Antecedent deliberations which were concerned in this Argument. And now let your moſt partial Friends judge, Whether from this performance of yours, you have any juſt ground for that vain Boaſt which concludes your Anſwer, viz. 'That the 'Covenants themſelves, which thoſe Privileges are 'bottomed on, are now repealed, and that there is no 'room left for any other Argument to infer the Bap- 'tiſm of Infants: at leaſt, I ſhall willingly commit it to the judgment of all intelligent and impartial Readers, Whether Mr. Cary hath any real ground in this Performance of his, for ſuch a Thraſonical Concluſion, ſuch a vain and fulſom boaſt?

I find that with like Confidence he hath alſo attempted a Reply to Mr. Joſeph Whiſton, a Reverend, Learned, and Aged Divine, who hath accurately and ſucceſsfully defended God's Covenant with Abraham, againſt Mr. Cox, and doubt not, if Mr. Cary, and his Party have but Confidence enough to expoſe it to the publick view, and to adventure the Cauſe of Infant-baptiſm upon it, the World will quickly ſee an end of this long-continued and unhappy Controverſy, which hath vexed the Church of God, and alienated the Affections of good Men; and that the Wiſdom of Providence hath permitted and over-ruled this laſt Attempt, to the ſingular advantage of the Truths of God, and Tranquility of good Men, whoſe concernment (at this time eſpecially) is rather to ſtrengthen their Faith, and heighten their Encouragements from God's gracious Covenant, than to undermine it, when all things beſide it are ſhaking and tottering round about them.

And now, Sir, for a Coronis to all thoſe things that have been controverted betwixt us about the Covenants of God, and the right of Believers Infants to Baptiſm, reſulting from one of them, which I have aſſerted and argued againſt you in my firſt Anſwer, and you have ſilently and wholly paſs'd over in your Reply, hoping to deſtroy them all at once, by proving God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. to be a pure Adam's Covenant of Works; I judge it neceſſary, as Matters now lie between us, to give the Reader the Grounds and Reaſons of my Faith and Practice with Reſpect unto the Ordinance of Infant Baptiſm, and that as succinctly and clearly as I can, in the following Theses; which being laid together by an unprejudiced and considerative Reader, will, I think amount to more than a strong probability, That it is the will of God, that the Infant-seed of Believers ought now to be baptized.

But here I must remind the Reader, and beg him to review what I have said before in the third Cause of Errors, That to arrive to Satisfaction in this Point, requires a due and serious search of the whole Word of God; with a sedate, rational and impartial Mind; comparing one Thing with another, though they lie scattered at a distance in the Scriptures; some in the Old Testament and some in the New. Bring but these Things to an Interview, as we do in discovering the Change of the Sabbath, and we may arrive unto a due Satisfaction of the Will of God herein. This, I confess, calls for strength of Mind, great Sedulity, Attention, and Impartiality; and yet what Man would think all this too much, if it were but to clear his Children's Title unto a small Earthly Inheritance? I intend not to give the Reader here an Account of all the Arguments drawn from several Scripture Topicks by the strenuous Defenders of Infants Baptism; but to keep only to the Arguments drawn from God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. which is the Scripture mainly controverted betwixt us: You affirming boldly and dangerously, that Covenant to be no other than an Adam's Covenant of Works; and I justly denying and abhorring your Position upon the Grounds and Reasons before given, which you neither have, nor ever will be able to destroy. Now that the Reader, who hath neither Time nor Ability to read the Larger, and more Elaborate Treatises on this Subject, may ὡς ἐν πίνακι, in one short view, see the deduction of Believers Infants right to Baptism from this Gospel Covenant of God with Abraham, I shall gather the Substance of what I contend for, and lay it as clearly as I can before the Eyes of my Reader in the following Theses; which being distinctly considered as to the evident Truth of each, and then rationally compared one with the other, he will see how each fortifies other, and how all together do strongly confirm this conclusion, That the Infants of Believers under the Gospel, as they naturally descend from Abraham's Spiritual Seed, are therefore Partakers at least of the External Privileges of the visible Church, and therefore ought now to be Baptized.

P. 61, 62.

Thesis I. It hath pleased God, in all Ages of the World, since Man was created, to deal with his Church and People, by way of Covenant, and in the same way he will still deal with them unto the end of the World.

God might have dealt with us in a supream way of meer Sovereignty and Dominion, commanding what Duties he pleased, and establishing his Commands by what Penalties he had pleased, and never have brought himself under the Tye and Obligation of a Covenant to his own Creatures: but he chuses to deal familiarly with his People, the way of Covenanting being a familiar Way, 2 Sam. 7. 19. Is this the manner of Men, O Lord God! or (as Junius renders it) and that after the manner of me, O Lord God! 'Tis a way full of condescending Grace and Goodness: he is willing hereby his People should know what they may certainly expect from their God, as well as what their God requires of them. Hereby also he will furnish them with mighty Pleas and Arguments in Prayer, succour their Faith against Temptations; strengthen their Hands in Duties of Obedience, sweeten their Obedience to them, and discriminate his own People from the World.

As soon therefore as Man was created and placed in Paradise, being made upright, and throughly furnished with Abilities perfectly and compleatly to obey all the Commands of his Maker; the Lord immediately entred into the Covenant of Works with him, and with all his natural Posterity in him: and in this Covenant his standing or falling was according to the perfection and constancy of his personal Obedience, Gen. 2. 17. Gal. 3. 10. But in this First Covenant of Works no provision at all was made for his recovery (in case of the least Failure) by his Repentance or better Obedience; but the Curse immediately seized both Soul and Body: and Sin by the Fall entring into Man's Nature, totally disabled him to the perfect performance of any one Duty, as that Covenant required it to be done, Rom. 8. 3. nor would God accept any Repentance, or after-endeavours, in lieu of that perfect Obedience due by Law. So that from the Fall of Adam, to the end of the World, this Covenant ceaseth as a Covenant of Life, or a Covenant able to give Righteousness and Life unto all Mankind for evermore, Rom. 3. 28. Therefore by the deeds of the Law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight. Gal. 2. 16. By the Works of the Law shall no Flesh be justified. Gal. 3. 11. But that no Man is justified by the Law in the sight of God, is evident. And it being so evident, that Righteousness and Life being for ever impossible to be obtained upon the Terms of Adam's Covenant; it must therefore be a self-evident Truth, That since the Fall, God never did, and to the end of the World he never will open that way or door to Life (thus block'd up by an absolute impossibility) for the Justification and Salvation of any Man.

Thesis II. Soon after the violation and Cessation of this first Covenant, as a Covenant of Life, it pleased the Lord to open and publish the second Covenant of Grace by Jesus Christ, the first dawning whereof we find in Gen. 3. 15. where the Seed is promised which shall bruise the Serpent's head. And though this be but a very short, and somewhat obscure Discovery of Man's Remedy and Salvation by Christ; yet was it a joyful Sound to the Ears of God's People, it was even Life from the dead to the Believers of those Times. For we may rationally conclude, That that Space of Time betwixt the breaking of the first, and making of the second Covenant, was the most dismal Period of Time that ever the World did, or shall see. This Covenant of Grace now took Place of the Covenant of Works, comprehended all Believers in the bosom of it. The Covenant of Works took Place from the Time it was made until the Fall of Adam, and then was abolished as a Life-giving Covenant. The second Covenant took place from the Time it was made soon after the Fall, and is to continue to the end of the World. And these only are the two Covenants God hath made with Men; the latter succeeding the former, and commencing from its expiration; but both cannot possibly be in force together at the same Time, and upon the same Persons, as co-ordinate Covenants of Life and Salvation. For in co-ordination they expel and destroy each other, Gal. 5. 4. Whosoever of you are justified by the Law, ye are fallen from Grace. The first Covenant was a Covenant without a Mediator; tor; the second is a Covenant with a Mediator. Place a Believer under both at once, or put these two Covenants in co-ordination, and that which results will be a pure Contradiction, viz. That a Man is saved without a Mediator, and yet by a Mediator. Moreover, if there be a way to Life without a Mediator, there was no need to make a Covenant in and with a Mediator; or can those Words of Christ be true, Joh. 4. 6. I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life: no Man cometh to the Father but by me.

The Righteousness of the first Covenant was within Man himself; the Righteousness of the second Covenant is without Man in Christ. Put these two in co-ordination, and that which Results is as pure a Contradiction as the former, viz. That a Man is justified by a Righteousness within him and yet is justified by a Righteousness without him; expresly contrary to the Apostle's conclusion, Rom. 3. 20. Therefore by the Deeds of the Law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight. It is therefore an intolerable Absurdity to place Believers under both these Covenants at the same time; under the Curse of the first, and Blessing of the Second. For whensoever the state of any Person is changed by Justification, his Covenant is changed with his State, Col. 1. 13. 'Tis as unimaginable that a Believer should thus stand under both Covenants, as it is to imagine a Man may be born of two Mothers, Gal. 4. 22, 23, 24, 25. or a Woman lawfully married to two Husbands, Rom. 7. 1, 2, 3, 4. and more absurd (if it be possible any thing can be more absurd) to attribute the most glorious privilege of the Covenant of Grace. (viz. I will be a God to thee, and to thy Seed after thee, Gen 17. 7.) to the impotent and abolished Covenant of Works; both which Absurdities are asserted in Defence of Antipædo-Baptism.

And though it be true, that after the first Edition of the Covenant of Grace, the matter of the first Covenant was represented to the Israelites in the moral Law: yet that Representation was intended and designed to be subservient, and added to the Promise, Gal. 1. 19. and so (as an acute and learned Divine * speaks the very Decalogue or moral Law it self pertained to the Covenant of Grace; yea, in some sort flowed out of this Covenant, as it was promulged by the Counsel of God to be serviceable to it; both antecedently to lead Men by the conviction of Sin, fear of Wrath, and Self-despair, to the Covenant of Grace; and also consequently as it is a Pattern of Obedience and Rule of Holiness. For had it been published as a Covenant designed intentionally to its primitive use and end, it had totally frustrated the Covenant of Grace.

* Turrettini Pars 2da loc. 12. p. 248.

Thesis III. Though the primordial Light or first Glimmerings of this Covenant of Grace, were comparatively weak and obscure; yet from the first Publication of it to Adam, God in all Ages hath been amplifying the Privileges, and heightning the Glory of this second Covenant in all the after Expressures and Editions of it unto this Day, and will more and more amplify and illustrate it to the End of the World.

That first Promise, Gen. 3. 15. is like the first small Spring or Head of a great River, which the farther it runs, the bigger it grows by the Accession of more Waters to it. Or like the Sun in the Heavens, which the higher it mounts, the more bright and glorious the Day still grows.

In that Period of time, betwixt Adam and Abraham, we find no Token of God's Covenant ordered therein to be applied to the Infant Seed of Believers. But in that second Edition of the Covenant to Abraham, the Privileges of the Covenant were amplified, and his Infant-Seed, not only taken into the Covenant (as they were before) but also added to the visible Church, by receiving the Token of the Covenant, which then was Circumcision: and so here is a great Addition made to the visible Church, even the whole Infant Off-spring of adult Believers.

From that Period, untill the coming of the Messiah in the Flesh, the Jewish Church, and their Infant-Seed, except only some few Proselytes out of the Gentile Nations, made up the visible Church of God, and the poor Gentiles were without Christ, being Aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel, and Strangers from the Covenant of Promise, having no hope, and without God in the World, Ephes. 2. 12. but in this glorious third Period, the Covenant again enlarges it self more than before, and the Privileges of it are no longer limited and restrained to the Jewish Believers and their Infant-Seed; but the Gentiles also are taken into the Covenant, and the Door of Faith was opened unto them, Acts 14 27. the partition-wall was now broken down, which separated the Church from the Gentile World, Eph. 2. 14. This was a glorious Enlargement of the Covenant, and many glorious Prophecies and Promises were fulfilled in it; such as those, Isa. 11. 10. and 42. 1, 6. 49. 22. 54. 3. 60. 3, 5, 11, 16. 62. 2, &c.

And though the Covenant, as to its external part, seems to have lost ground in the breaking off of the Jewish Nation from the Church; yet like the Sea, what it loses in one place, it gains with Advantage upon another; the Addition of many Gentile Nations to the Church, more than recompences for the present breaking off of that one Nation of the Jews. And indeed they are broken off but for a time; for God shall graff them in again, Rom. 11. 23. This therefore being the Design of God, and steddy Course of his Covenant of Grace, more and more to enlarge it self in all Ages; nothing can be more opposite to the Nature of this Covenant, than to narrow and contract its Privileges in its farther Progress, and cut off a whole Species from it, which it formerly took in.

Thesis IV. It is past all doubt and contradiction, that the Infant-Seed of Abraham, under the second Edition of the Covenant of Grace, were taken with their believing Parents into God's gracious Covenant, had the Seal of that Covenant applied to them, and were thereby added to the visible Church, Gen. 17. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. which was a gracious Privilege of the Covenant superadded to all the former, and such as sweeps away all the frivolous and groundless Cavils and Exceptions of those that object the incapacity of Infants to enter into Covenant with God, or receive Benefit from the external Privileges of the visible Church. Nor can the subtilest Enemy to Infants Baptism, give us a convincing reason why the Infants of Gentile Believers are not equally capable of the same benefits that the Infants of Jewish Believers were, if they still stand under the same Covenant that the former stood under; and God hath no where repealed the gracious Grant formerly made to the Infant-Seed of his Covenant-People.

Theſis V. It is to me clear beyond all contradiction, from Rom. 11. 17. If ſome of the Branches be broken off, and thou being a wild Olive-Tree, wert grafted in amongſt them, and with them partakeſt of the root and fatneſs of the Olive-Tree: I ſay, I can ſcarcely deſire a clearer Scripture-light than this Text gives, to ſatisfy my Underſtanding in this caſe, That when God brake off the unbelieving Jews from the Church, both Parents and Children together; the Believing Gentiles, which are as truly Abraham's Seed as they were, Gal. 3. 29. yea, the more excellent Seed of Abraham, were implanted or ingrafted in their room, and do as amply enjoy the Privileges of that Covenant, both internal and external, for themſelves, and for their Infant-Seed, as ever any Members of the Jewiſh Church did or could do.

Our Adverſaries in this Controverſy do pitifully and apparently ſhuffle here, and invent many ſtrange and unintelligible Diſtinctions to be-cloud the light of this famous Text. What they are, and how they are baffled, the Reader will eaſily diſcern from what hath already paſs'd betwixt my Antagoniſt and me, in p. 108, &c. of my Vindiciæ Legis & Fœderis. It is plain, that Abraham is the Root, the Olive-Tree, the viſible Church; the Sap and Farneſs of the Olive, are Church Ordinances and Covenant-Privileges; the Gentile Believers, who are Abraham's Seed according to Promiſe, are the ingrafted Branches ſtanding in the place of the natural Branches, and with them, or in like manner as they did, partaking of the Root and Fatneſs of the Olive-Tree, that is as really and amply enjoying all the Immunities, Benefits, and Privileges of the Church and Covenant (amongſt which the initiating Sign was one, and a chief one too) as ever the natural Branches that were broken off, that is the Jewiſh Parents and their Children, did or might have done. And to deny this (as before was noted) is to ſtraiten Covenant-Privileges in their farther Progreſs.

Theſis VI. Suitably hereunto we find, that no ſooner was the Chriſtian Church conſtituted, and the Believing Gentiles by Faith added to it; but the Children of ſuch Believing Parents are declared to be fœderally Holy, 1 Cor. 7. 14. and the unbelieving Jews, who were ſuperſtitiouſly fond of Circumciſion, and prejudiced againſt Baptiſm, as an injurious Innovation, are by the Apoſtle perſwaded to ſubmit themſelves to it, Acts 2. 38, 39. aſſuring them that the ſame Promiſe, viz. I will be a God to thee, and to thy ſeed after thee, is now as effectually ſealed to them and their Children by Baptiſm, as it was in the former Age by Circumciſion: And that the Gentiles, which are yet afar off, whenever God ſhall call them, ſhall equally enjoy the ſame Privilege, both for themſelves and for their Children alſo.

We alſo find a Commiſſion given by Chriſt to the Diſciples, Matt. 28. 19, 20. To diſciple all Nations, baptizing them, &c. from which Diſcipleſhip, Infants ought not to be excluded, Acts 15. 10. Yea, we find, that as at the Inſtitution of Circumciſion, Abraham, the Father and Maſter of the Family, was firſt circumciſed in his own Perſon, and then his whole Houſhold, Gen. 17. 23, 24. Anſwerably as ſoon as any Perſon by Converſion, or publick Profeſſion of Faith became a viſible Child of Abraham, that Perſon was firſt Baptized, and the whole Houſhold with him or her, Acts 16. 33. 15. 'Tis unreaſonable to put us upon the Proof, that there were Infants in thoſe Houſes; it being more than probable, that in ſuch frequent Baptizing of Houſholds belonging to Believers, there were ſome Infants; but if there were none, 'tis enough for us to prove from their fœderal Holineſs, 1 Cor. 7. 14. and the extent of God's Promiſe to them, Acts 2. 38, 39. if there had never been ſo many Infants in thoſe Houſholds, they might and ought to have been Baptized. How the true ſenſe and ſcope of the two laſt mentioned Scriptures are maintained and vindicated againſt Mr. Cary's corrupt Gloſſes and Interpretations, ſee my Vindiciæ Legis & Fœderis, p. 90, 91. We do not lay the ſtreſs of Infants Baptiſm upon ſuch ſtrictures as the Baptizings of the Houſholds of Believers, or Chriſt's taking up in his Arms, and bleſſing the little ones that were brought to him. Theſe and many other ſuch Things found in the Hiſtory of Chriſt, and Acts of the Apoſtles, have their Uſe and Service to fortify that Doctrine. But if we can produce no Example of any Believer's Infant Baptized, the merit of the Cauſe lies not in the Matter of Fact, but Covenant-right. For our Advarſaries themſelves, if we go to Matter of Fact, will be hard put to it to produce us one Inſtance out of the New Teſtament of any Child of a Believing Chriſtian whoſe Baptiſm was deferred, or by Chriſt or his Apoſtles ordered to be deferred, until he attained to Years of Maturity, and made a perſonal Profeſſion of Faith himſelf.

Theſis VII. The Change of the Token and Seal of the Covenant from Circumciſion to Baptiſm, will by no means infer the Change or Diverſity of the Covenants, eſpecially when the latter comes into the Place and ſerves to the ſame Uſe and End with the former, as it is manifeſt Baptiſm doth, from Col. 2. 11, 12. as hath been, I think, ſufficiently argued againſt Mr. Cary's Gloſſes and Exceptions, pag. 100, 101. of my Vindiciæ Legis & Fœderis. The Covenant is ſtill the ſame Covenant of Grace, though the external initiating Sign be changed. For what is the ſubſtantial part of the Covenant of Grace now, but the ſame it was to Abraham and his Seed before? Is not this our Covenant of Grace, Heb. 8. 10. I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a People? And in what Words was Abraham's Covenant expreſſed, Gen. 17. 7. I will eſtabliſh my Covenant between me and thee, and thy Seed after thee in their Generations for an everlaſting Covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy Seed after thee. This makes Abraham's Covenant, ſealed to him and his Seed, as truly and properly the Covenant of Grace, as that which Baptiſm now ſeals to Believers and their Seed. The raſh Ignorance of thoſe that affirm, God may become a People's God in the Way of a ſpecial Intereſt, by virtue of the broken and aboliſhed Covenant of Works, rather deſerves ſharp Reprehenſion, and ſad Lamentation, than a Confutation; which, nevertheleſs out of reſpect to my Friend Mr. Cary, I have given it in its proper place in this Rejoinder.

I hope by this time I have made it evident, That the Defenders of Infants Baptiſm, as it is eſtabliſhed upon God's Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. have not ſo miſtaken their Ground, as Mr. Cary hath, by his endeavours to carry that Covenant, as an Adam's Covenant of Works, through ſuch a multitude of other Errors and Abſurdities, as he draws along with it in his way of reaſoning.

A POST-

A POSTSCRIPT to Mr. Cary.

SIR,

I Reſolved not to diſturb my Mind with your paſſionate provoking Language, at leaſt whil'ſt I was buſily employed in ſearching for Reaſon and Argument (two ſcarce Commodities) amongſt heaps of vain and fulſome Words. Nor will I now imitate your folly and rudeneſs, leſt I become an Offender, whilſt I am to act the part of a Reprover. When I read your Title, A Juſt and Sober Reply, and preſently fell in among rude inſults, ſilly evaſions, and ſuch inartificial diſcourſes as follow in your Book, I began to challenge you in my Thoughts for matching ſuch bad ſtuff with ſo fair and lovely a Title: But a ſecond Thought quickly corrected the former; for I conſidered no Man living could juſtly forbid the Marriage betwixt your Book and its Title, ſince there is not the leaſt kindred or relation between them.

Had your Anſwers been juſt, you would have obſerved the Rules of a Reſpondent, which you have not done: And if they had been ſober, you had never been ſo free in your Reproaches, and ſparing in your Arguments as you have been. Is this the Man, of whom it is ſaid in the Epiſtle to his Solemn Call, That his Lines are free from reflection and reproach towards thoſe of the perſwaſion he contends with? Is this my old friendly Neighbour? It calls to my mind the Italian Proverb, God keep us from our Friends, and we will do what we can to keep our ſelves from our Enemies. And though you act the part of an Enemy, you ſhall be my Friend whether you will or no. If you will not be my Friend out of Love, I will make you ſo by a good improvement of your Hatred.

I have been muſing with my ſelf, what might be the true cauſe of all your rage againſt my Book; one while I thought it proceeded from want of Diſcretion, that you were not able to diſtinguiſh betwixt an Adverſary in a Controverſie, and an Adverſary to the Perſon; but thought every Blow that was given to your Error, muſt needs be a mortal wound to your Reputation. But, Sir, how cloſe and ſmart ſoever my Diſcourſes againſt your Errors be, I'm ſure they are more full of civility and reſpect to you, than ſuch a Reply as you have made deſerves: And if in expoſing your Errors, your Reputation be expos'd, you muſt blame them for occaſioning it, and not me.

Sometimes I thought it an effect of your Policy, that when followed cloſe, and hard put to it, you endeavoured an eſcape this way. Camero ſpeaking of this kind of ſubtilty in his Adverſaries, ſaith, Faciunt quod quarundam ferarum ingenium eſt, ut fœtore & graveolentia, defectæ jam viribus, ac fractæ venatorem abigunt. Some cunning Animals, as Foxes, &c. when purſued at the heels, drive away both Dogs and Huntſmen with their intolerable ſtench. And Hierom long ago told Helvidius, his Adverſary, Arbitror te veritate convictum, ad maledicta converti; being vanquiſhed by Truth, he betook himſelf to ill Language. After the ſame manner you act here, being no longer able to defend your ſelf by ſolid and ſober ratiocination, you truſt to your faculty in crimination. Bad Cauſes only drive Men into ſuch Refuges.

In a word, I am ſatisfied nothing but your extravagant zeal for your Idolized Opinion, could have thrown you into ſuch diſingenuous Methods and Artifices as theſe. The Epheſians were quiet enough till their Diana began to totter. Your paſſionate Outcries ſignifie to me, ſomething is touched to the quick, which you are more fondly in love with than you ought. When one told Luther what hideous Out-cries his Enemies made againſt him, and how they revil'd him in their Books: I know by their roaring (ſaid he) that I have hit them right.

You tell me in your Reply, p. 24. That you perceive I have a mighty itch to find out your Abſurdities. I wiſh, Sir, you were no more troubled with the itch after them, than I am after the diſcovery of them. Had I affected ſuch Employments, I could eaſily have gathered three to one out of your Book, more than I did: And have repreſented thoſe I gather'd, much more odiouſly (and yet juſtly) than I did. But Friendſhip conſtrain'd me to handle them (becauſe yours) as gently as I could.

I might have juſtly charg'd you from what you ſay, p. 174, 175. of your Solemn Call, where you place all the Believers on Earth, without exception of any, under the Covenant of Works, as a miniſtration of Death and Condemnation, and the ſevereſt Penalties of a dreadful Curſe: I might thereupon have juſtly charg'd you for preſenting to the World ſuch a monſtrous Sight as was never ſeen before ſince the Creation, viz. A whole Church of condemned and curſed Believers. This I might as well have charged upon your Poſition, and done it no wrong.

I could tell you from what you ſay, p. 76. of your Reply, That God doth indeed in the Covenant of Works make over himſelf to Sinners, to be their God in a way of ſpecial Intereſt; but it being upon ſuch hard terms, that it is utterly impoſſible that way to attain unto life, &c. I could juſtly have told you, That theſe Paſſages of yours, drop pure nonſenſe upon the Reader's Underſtanding: as if Salvation were impoſſible to be attain'd by the ſame Covenant wherein God becomes our God, and makes over himſelf by way of ſpecial Intereſt to us.

Had I had an itch to expoſe the Burleſque and ridiculous Stuff, which lies obvious enough in your Book; I ſhould then have told your Reader, That according to your Doctrine, how oppoſite and inconſiſtent ſoever the two Covenants of Works and Grace be, yet the ſame Subjects, viz. Believers, may at once, not only ſtand under them both, but that the ſame common Seal, viz. Circumciſion, equally ratifies and confirms them both; for you allow in your Call, p. 205. That it ſealed the Covenant of Grace to believing Abraham, and yet was a ſeal of the Covenant of Works, yea, the very condition of that Covenant, as you frequently affirm it to be, Vide p. 81. of your Reply and Paſſim.

I could as eaſily and juſtly have told you, That the moſt malicious Papiſt could ſcarcely have invented a more horrid Reproach againſt our famous Orthodox Proteſtant Divines, than you (I dare not ſay maliciouſly, but) ignorantly have done, when you charge ſuch Men as Mr. Francis Roberts, Mr. Obadiah Sedgwick; and indeed all that aſſert the Law, complexly taken, to be an obſcurer Covenant of Grace; that they comprize perfect doing with the conſequent Curſe for nonperformance; and believing in Chriſt unto Life and Salvation in one and the ſame Covenant. This is an intolerable abuſe of yours, p. 5. of your Reply. They generally aſſert the Law, in that complex ſenſe and latitude you take it, to be a true Covenant venant of Grace, though more obſcurely adminiſtred; and that the diſtinction of the Covenants into Old and New, is no parallel diſtinction with that of Works and Grace, or Chriſt's and Adam's Covenant. Your publick recantation of the Injury you have done the very Proteſtant Cauſe herein, is your unqueſtionable Duty, yet ſcarce a due reparation of the Injury.

In a word, I cannot but look upon it as a diſcovery of your great weakneſs, That when you meet with ſuch a difficulty as poſes your Underſtanding, and you cannot poſſibly reconcile with your Notion; as that of Paul's circumciſing Timothy, and you affirming that the very act of Circumciſion did in its own nature oblige all on whom it paſs'd, to the perfect obſervation of the Law for Righteouſneſs, You will rather chuſe to leave the bleſſed Apoſtle in a contradiction to his own Doctrine, than to your vain Notion; For what do you ſay, p. 95. of your Reply? That however the caſe ſtood in that reſpect, this is certain, &c. It alſo argues weakneſs in you to inſiſt upon, aggravate, jeer, and reproach at that rate you do, p. 83. of your Reply, for the miſtake, and miſplacing of one Figure, viz. Gen. 12. for Gen. 17. as if the merit of the whole Cauſe depended on it. The like I may ſay of your charging me with Nonſenſe, for putting Gen. 17. 7, 8. for Gen. 17, 9, 10. when yet you your ſelf, p. 205. of your Call, tell us, That Circumciſion was appointed as a Sign or Token of the Covenant, Gen. 17. 7, 8, 9. What pitiful Trifles are theſe to raiſe ſuch a mighty triumph upon? When Dureus accuſed our famous Whitaker for one or two trivial verbal Miſtakes, Whitaker return'd him the ſame Anſwer I ſhall give you, Benè habet, his in rebus non vertuntur fortunæ Eccleſiæ. 'Tis well the Caſe of the Church depends not upon ſuch Trifles.

For a Concluſion; I do ſeriouſly warn all Men to beware of receiving Doctrines ſo deſtructive to the great Truths of the Goſpel as theſe are. And I do ſolemnly profeſs, I have not deſignedly ſtrained them, to caſt reproach upon him that publiſh'd them; but the matters are ſo plain, that if Mr. Cary will maintain his Poſitions, not only my ſelf, but every intelligent Reader will be eaſily able to faſten all thoſe odious Conſequents upon him, after all his Apologies.

Sir, in a word, I dare not ſay, but you are a good Man; but ſince I read your two Books, you have made me think more than once of what one ſaid of Jonah after he had read his Hiſtory, that he was a ſtrange Man of a good Man; yet as ſtrange a good Man as you are, I hope to meet you with a ſounder Head, and better Spirit, in Heaven.

The Second APPENDIX: Giving a brief Account of the Riſe and Growth of ANTINOMIANISM; the Deduction of the principal Errors of that Sect: With modeſt and ſeaſonable Reflections upon them.

THE Deſign of the following Sheets, caſt in as a Mantiſſa to the foregoing Diſcourſe of Errors, is principally to diſcharge and free the Free Grace of God from thoſe dangerous Errors, which fight againſt it under its own Colours; partly to prevent the ſeduction of ſome that ſtagger; and laſtly, (though leaſt of all) to vindicate my own Doctrine, the ſcope and current whereof hath always been, and ſhall ever be, to exalt the Free Grace of God in Chriſt, to draw the vileſt of Sinners to him, and relieve the diſtreſſed Conſciences of Sin-burthened Chriſtians.

But notwithſtanding my utmoſt care and caution, ſome have been apt to cenſure it, as if in ſome things it had a tang of Antinomianiſm: But if my publick or private Diſcourſes be the faithful Meſſengers of my Judgment and Heart, (as I hope they are) nothing can be found in any of them caſting a friendly aſpect upon any of their Principles, which I here juſtly cenſure as erroneous.

Three things I principally aim at in this ſhort Appendix.

1. To give the Reader the moſt probable Riſe of Antinomianiſm.
2. An Account of the principal Errors of that Sect.
3. To confirm and eſtabliſh Chriſtians againſt them, by ſound Reaſons back'd with Scripture-Authority. And

I. Of the Riſe of Antinomianiſm.

The Scriptures foreſeeing there would ariſe ſuch a ſort of Men in the Church as would wax wanton againſt Chriſt, and turn his Grace into laſciviouſneſs; hath not only precautioned us in general to beware of ſuch Opinions as corrupt the Doctrine of Free Grace, Rom. 6. 1, 2. Shall we continue in ſin that grace may abound? God forbid: but hath particularly indigitated and marked thoſe very Opinions by which it would be abuſed, and made abundant proviſion againſt them; as namely,

1. All ſlighting and viliſying Opinions or Expreſſions of the Holy Law of God, Rom. 7. 7, 12.
2. All Opinions and Principles inclining Men to a careleſs diſregard and neglect of the Duties of Obedience, under pretence of Free Grace and Liberty by Chriſt, Jam. 2. Matth. 25.
3. All Opinions neglecting or ſlighting Sanctification as the evidence of our Juſtification, and rendring it needleſs or ſinful to try the ſtate of our Souls by the Graces of the Spirit wrought in us, which is the principal ſcope of the Firſt Epiſtle of John.

Notwithſtanding, ſuch is the wickedneſs of ſome, and weakneſs of others, that in all Ages (eſpecially the laſt paſt, and preſent) Men have audaciouſly broken in upon the Doctrine of Free Grace; and notoriouſly violated and corrupted it, to the great reproach of Chriſt, ſcandal of the World, and hardning of the Enemies of Reformation. Behold (ſaith Contzen the Jeſuit, on Matth. 24.) the fruit of Proteſtantiſm, and their Goſpel-preaching.

Nothing is more oppoſite to looſeneſs than the Free Grace of God, which teacheth us, That denying all ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world. Nor can it, without manifeſt violence, be made pliable to ſuch wicked purpoſes. And therefore the Apoſtle tells us, Jud. 4. That this is done by turning the Grace of our Lord into laſciviouſneſs: μεταθέντες, transferring it, ſcil. fœdâ interpretatione, by by a corrupt abusive Interpretation, to such Uses and Purposes as it abhors. No such wanton, licentious Conclusions can be infer'd from the Gospel Doctrines of Grace and Liberty, but by wresting them against their true scope and intent, by the wicked Arts and Practices of Deceivers upon them.

The Gospel makes Sin more odious than ever the Law did, and discovers the punishment of it in a more severe and dreadful manner, than ever it was discovered before, Heb. 2. 2, 3. For if the word spoken by Angels were stedfast, and every Transgression and Disobedience received a just recompence of reward; How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation? It shews our Obligations to Duty, to be stronger than ever; and our Encouragements to Holiness greater than ever; 2 Cor. 7. 1. and yet corrupt Nature will be still tempting Men to corrupt and abuse it. The more luscious the Food is, the more Men are apt to surfeit upon it.

This Perversion and Abuse of Free-grace and Christian-liberty, is justly chargeable (though upon different accounts) both upon wicked and good Men. Wicked Men corrupt it designedly, that by entitling God to their Sins, they might sin the more quietly and securely. So the Devil instigated the Heathens to sin against the Light and Law of Nature, by representing their Gods to them as drunken and lascivious Deities. So the Nicolaitans, and School of Simon, and after them the Gnosticks, and other Hereticks, in the very dawning of Gospel Light and Liberty, began presently to loose the Bond of Restraint from their Lusts under Pretence of Grace and Liberty. The Etiani blushed not to teach, That Sin, and Perseverance in Sin, could hurt the Salvation of none so that they would embrace their Principles.

Augustin. de Hæres. Tom. 6. Hæres. 54.

How vile and abominable Inferences the Manichæans, Valentinians, and Cerdonites, drew from the Grace and Liberty of the Gospel in the following Ages, I had rather mourn over, than recite. And if we come down to the 15th Century, we shall find the Libertines of those days as deep drenched in this Sin, as most that went before them. Calvin mournfully observes, That under Pretence of Christian-liberty, they trampled all Godliness under Foot. The vile Courses their loose Opinions soon carried them into, plainly discovered for what Intents and Purposes they were projected and calculated: and he that reads the Preface to that Grave and Learned Mr. Thomas Gataker's Book, Entituled, God's Eye upon Israel, will find, That some Antinomians of our Days are not much behind the worst and vilest of them. One of them cries out, Away with the Law, away with the Law, it cuts off a Man's Legs, and then bids him walk. Another saith, 'Tis as possible for Christ himself to sin, as for a Child of God to sin. That if a Man by the Spirit know himself to be in the state of Grace, though he be drunk, or commit murther, God sees no sin in him: with much more of the same Bran, which I will not transcribe.

Calv. adversus Libert. ch. 2.

But others there be, whose Judgments are unhappily tainted and leavened with these loose Doctrines; yet being in the main godly Persons, they dare not take Liberty to sin, or live in the neglect of known Duties, though their Principles too much incline that Way. But though they dare not, others will, who imbibe corrupt Notions from them; and the renowned Piety of the Authors will be no Antidote against the Danger, but make the Poison operate the more powerfully, by receiving it in such a Vehicle. Now it is highly probable such Men as these might be charmed into such dangerous Opinions upon such accounts as these.

(1.) 'Tis like some of them might have felt in themselves the anguish of a perplexed Conscience under Sin; and not being able to live with these Terrors of the Law, and dismal Fears of Conscience, might too hastily snatch at those Doctrines which promise them relief and ease, as I noted before in the 5th Cause of my Treatise of Errors. And that this is not a guess at random, will appear from the very Title-page of Mr. Saltmarsh's Book of Free-grace, where (as an Inducement to the Reader to swallow his Antinomian Doctrine) he shews him this curious Bait.

It is (saith he) an Experiment of Jesus Christ upon one who hath been in the bondage of a troubled Conscience at times for the space of about twelve Years 'till now upon a clearer Discovery of Jesus Christ in the Gospel, &c.

(2.) Others have been induced to espouse these Opinions from the excess of their Zeal against the Errors of the Papists, who have notoriously corrupted the Doctrine of Justification by Free-grace; decried imputed, and exalted inherent Righteousness above it. The Papists have designedly and industriously sealed up the Scriptures from the People, lest they should there discover those sovereign and effectual Remedies which God hath provided for their distressed Consciences, in the Riches of his own Grace, and the meritorious Death of Christ; and so all their Masses, Pilgrimages, Auricular Confessions, with all their dear Indulgences, should lie upon their Hands as stale and cheap Commodities. Oh, (said Stephen Gardiner) let not this Gap of Free-grace be opened to the People.

But as soon as the Light of Reformation had discovered the Free-grace of God to Sinners, (which is indeed the only effectual Remedy of distressed Consciences) and by the same Light the horrid Cheats of the Man of Sin were discovered; all good Men, who were enlightned by the Reformation, justly and deeply abhorred Popery, as the Enemy of the Grace of God, and true Peace of Conscience, and fixed themselves upon the sound and comfortable Doctrines of Justification by Faith through the alone Righteousness of Christ. Mean while thankfully acknowledging, that they which believe, ought also to maintain good Works. But others there were, transported by an indiscreet Zeal, who have almost bended the Grace of God as far too much the other way, and have both spoken and written many things very unbecoming the Grace of God, and tending to looseness and neglect of Duty.

(3.) 'Tis manifest that others of them have been ingulphed, and suckt into those dangerous Quicksands of Antinomian Errors, by separating the Spirit from the written Word; if once a Man pretend the Spirit without the Scriptures to be his Rule, whither will not his own deluding Fancies carry him under a vain and sinful Pretence of the Spirit!

In the Year 1528. when Helsar, Traier, and Seckler, were confuted by Hallerus; and their Errors about Oaths, Magistrates, and Pædo-Baptism were detected by him, and by Colveus at Bern, that which they had to say for themselves was, That the Spirit taught them otherwise than the letter of the Scriptures speaks. So dangerous it is to separate what God hath conjoined, and father our own Fancies upon the Holy Spirit.

(4.) And

(4.) And it is not unlike, but a comparative weakneſs and injudiciouſneſs of mind meeting with a fervent Zeal for Chriſt, and his Glory may induce others to eſpouſe ſuch taking and plauſible, though pernicious, Doctrines. They are not aware of the dangerous Conſequences of the Opinions they embrace, and what looſeneſs may be occaſioned by them. I ſpeak not of Occaſions taken, but given, by ſuch Opinions and Expreſſions. A good Man will draw excellent Inferences of Duty from the very ſame Doctrine. Inſtance that of the ſhortneſs of time, from whence the Apoſtle infers abſtinence, ſtrictneſs and diligence, 1 Cor. 7. 29. but the Epicure infers all manner of diſſolute and licentious Practices, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we ſhall die, 1 Cor. 15. 22. The beſt Doctrines are this way liable to abuſe.

But let all good men beware of ſuch Opinions and Expreſſions as give an handle to wicked Men to abuſe the Grace of God, which haply the Author himſelf dare not do, and may ſtrongly hope others may not do: but if the Principle will yield it, 'tis in vain to think corrupt Nature will not catch at it, and make a vile uſe and dangerous Improvement of it.

For example; If ſuch a Principle as this be aſſerted for a Truth before the World, Then men need not fear that any, or all the Sins they commit, ſhall do them any hurt; let the Author, or any Man in the World warn, and caution Readers (as the Antinomian Author of that Expreſſion hath done) not to abuſe this Doctrine, 'tis to purpoſe. The Doctrine it ſelf is full of dangerous Conſequents, and wicked Men have the beſt skill to infer and draw them forth to cheriſh and countenance their Luſts: That which the Author might deſign for the relief of the diſtreſſed, quickly turns it ſelf into Poiſon in the Bowels of the wicked; nor can we excuſe it by ſaying any Goſpel-Truth may be thus abuſed: for this is none of that number; but a Principle that gives offence to the Godly, and encouragement to the Ungodly. And ſo much as to the Riſe and Occaſion of Antinomian Errors.

II. In the next Place, let us view ſome of the chief Doctrines commonly called Antinomian, amongſt which there will be found a Πρῶτον ψεῦδος, the radical and moſt prolifique Error, from which moſt of the reſt are ſpawned and procreated.

Error I. I ſhall begin with the dangerous miſtake of the Antinomians in the Doctrine of Juſtification. The Article of Juſtification is deſervedly ſtiled by our Divines, Articulus ſtantis, vel cadentis Religionis, the very Pillar of the Chriſtian Religion.

In two things however I muſt do the Antinomians right. (1.) In acknowledging, that though their Errors about Juſtification be great and dangerous, yet they are not ſo much about the Subſtance, as about the mode of a Sinner's Juſtification: An Error far inferiour to that of the Papiſts, who depreſs the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and exalt their own inherent Righteouſneſs in the buſineſs of Juſtification. (2.) I am bound in Charity to believe, that ſome among them do hold thoſe Errors but ſpeculatively, whilſt the Truth lies nearer their Hearts, and will not ſuffer them to reduce their own Opinions into Practice. Now as to their Errors about Juſtification, the moſt that I have Error I. read do make Juſtification to be an immanent and eternal Act of God; and do affirm, the Elect were juſtified before themſelves, or the World, had a Being. Others come lower, and affirm, the Elect were juſtified at the time of Chriſt's death. With theſe Dr. Criſp harmonizes.

Error II. That Juſtification by Faith is no more but a Manifeſtation to us of what was really done before we had a Being. Hence Mr. Saltmarſh thus defines Faith, It is (ſaith he) a being perſwaded more or leſs of Chriſt's Love to us; ſo that when we believe, that which was hid before, doth then appear. God (ſaith another) cannot charge one Sin upon that Man, who believes this Truth; That God laid his Iniquities upon Chriſt.

Error. III. That Men ought not to doubt of their Faith, or queſtion, Whether they believe or no. Nay, That we ought no more to queſtion our Faith, than to queſtion Chriſt. Saltm. Of Free-Grace, p. 92, 95.

Error. IV. That Believers are not bound to confeſs Sin, mourn for it, or pray for the forgiveneſs of it; becauſe it was pardoned before it was committed; and pardoned Sin is no Sin. See Eaton's Honycomb, p. 446, 447.

Error V. They ſay, that God ſees no Sin in Believers, whatſoever Sins they commit. Some of them, as Mr. Town, and Mr. Eaton, ſpeak out, and tell us, That God can ſee no Adultery, no Lying, no Blaſphemy, no Cozening in Believers: For though Believers do fall into ſuch Enormities; yet all their Sins being pardoned from Eternity, they are no Sins in them. Town's Aſſertions, 96, 97, 98. Eaton's Honey-comb, c. 7. p. 136, 137. with others of a more pernicious Character than they.

Error VI. That God is not angry with the Elect, nor doth he ſmite them for their Sins; and to ſay that he doth ſo, is an injurious Reflection upon the Juſtice of God. This is avouched generally in all their Writings.

Error VII. They tell us, That by God's laying our Iniquities upon Chriſt, he became as compleatly ſinful as we, and we as compleatly righteous as Chriſt. Vide Dr. Criſp, p. 270.

Error VIII. Upon the ſame ground it is that they affirm, That Believers need not fear either their own Sins, or the Sins of others; for that neither their own, nor any other Mens Sins, can do them any hurt, nor muſt they do any Duty for their own Salvation.

Error. IX. They will not allow the New Covenant to be made properly with us, but with Chriſt for us; and that this Covenant is all of it a Promiſe, having no Condition on our part. They do not abſolutely deny that Faith, Repentance, and Obedience, are Conditions in the New Covenant; but ſay, They are not Conditions on our part, but Chriſt's; and that he repented, believed, and obeyed, for us. Saltmarſh of Free-grace, p. 126, 127.

Error X. They ſpeak very ſlightingly of trying our ſelves by marks and ſigns of Grace. Saltmarſh often calls it a weak, low, carnal way; but the New-England Antinomians, or Libertines, call it a fundamental Error, to make Sanctification an Evidence of Juſtification; that it is to light a Candle to the Sun; that it darkens our Juſtification; and that the darker our Sanctification is, the brighter our Juſtification is. See their Book, entituled, Riſe, Reign, Error 72.

In this breviate, or ſummary Account of Antinomian Doctrines, I have only ſingled out, and touched ſome of their principal Miſtakes and Errors, into which ſome of them run much farther than others. But I look upon ſuch Doctrines to be in themſelves of a very dangerous Nature, and the the Malignity and Contagion would certainly ſpread much farther into the World than it doth, had not God provided two powerful Antidotes to reſiſt the Malignity, viz.

1. The ſcope and current of Scripture.
2. The Experience and Practice of the Saints.

(1.) Theſe Doctrines run croſs to the ſcope and current of the Scriptures, which conſtantly ſpeak of all unregenerate Perſons (without Exception of the very Elect themſelves, during that ſtate) as Children of Wrath, even as others, without Chriſt, and under Condemnation.

They frequently diſcover God's Anger, and tell us his caſtigatory Rods of Affliction are laid upon them for their Sins.

They repreſent Sin as the greateſt Evil; moſt oppoſite to the Glory of God, and good of the Saints; and are therefore filled with Cautions and Threatnings to prevent their ſinning.

They call the Saints frequently and earneſtly, not only to mourn for their Sins before the Lord; but to pray for the Pardon or Remiſſion of them in the Blood of Chriſt.

They give us a far different account of ſaving Faith, and do not place it in a perſwaſion more or leſs of Chriſt's Love to us, or a manifeſtation in our Conſciences of the actual Remiſſion of our Sins before we had a Being; but in our receiving Chriſt, as the Goſpel offers him, for righteouſneſs and life.

They frequently call the People of God to the Examination and Trial of their Intereſt in Chriſt by Marks and Signs: and acordingly furniſh them with variety of ſuch Marks from the divers parts or branches of Sanctification in themſelves.

They earneſtly, and every where, preſs Believers to ſtrictneſs and conſtancy in the Duties of Religion, as the way wherein God would have them to walk. They infer Duties from Privileges; and therefore the Antinomian Dialect is a wild Note, which the generality of ſerious Chriſtians do eaſily diſtinguiſh from the Scripture-ſtile and Language.

(2.) The Experience and Practice of the Saints recorded in Scripture, as well as our contemporaries, or thoſe whoſe Lives are recorded for our Imitation, do greatly ſecure us from the ſpreading malignity of Antinomianiſm. Converſe with the living or read the Hiſtories of dead Saints, and you ſhall find, That in their Addreſſes to God, they ſtill bleſs and praiſe him for that great and wonderful change of State which was made upon them when they firſt believed in Chriſt, and on their believing paſſed from Death to Life; freely acknowledging before God, they were before their Converſion equal in Sin and Miſery with the vileſt Wretches in the World: They heartily mourn for their daily Sins; fear nothing more than Sin; no Afflictions in the World go ſo near their Heart as Sin doth. They mourn for the Hardneſs of their Hearts, that they can mourn no more for Sin. They acknowledge the Rods of God that are upon them, are not only the Evidences of his Diſpleaſure againſt them for their Sins; but the fruits of their uneven walking with him. And that the greateſt of their Afflictions is leſs than the leaſt of their Iniquities deſerve. They fall at their Father's Feet as oft as they fall into ſin, humbly and earneſtly ſuing for Pardon through the Blood of Chriſt. They are not only ſenſible that God ſees Sin in them; but that he ſeeth ſuch, and ſo great evils in them, as makes them admire at his Patience, that they are not conſumed in their Iniquities. They find cauſe enough to ſuſpect their own Sincerity: doubt the Truth of their Faith, and of their Graces: and are therefore frequent and ſerious in the Trial and Examination of their own States by Scripture Marks and Signs. They urge the Commands and Threatnings, as well as the Promiſes, upon their own Hearts, to promote Sanctification. Excite themſelves to Duty and Watchfulneſs againſt Sin. They alſo encourage themſelves by the Rewards of Obedience, knowing their Labour is not in vain in the Lord. And all this while they look not for that in themſelves, which is only to be found in Chriſt: nor for that in the Law, which is only to be found in the Goſpel: nor for that on Earth, which is only to be found in Heaven: This is the way that they take. And he that ſhall tell them, their Sins can do them no hurt, or their Duties do them no good, ſpeaks to them, not only as a Barbarian, in a Language they underſtand not, but in ſuch a Language as their Souls deteſt and abhor.

Moreover, the Zeal and Love of Chriſt, and his Glory, being kindled in their Souls, they have not Patience to hear ſuch Doctrines as ſo greatly derogate from his Glory, under a Pretence of honouring and exalting him. It wounds and grieves their very Hearts to ſee the World hardned in their Prejudices againſt Reformation, and a gap opened to all Licentiouſneſs.

But notwithſtanding this double Antidote and Security, we find by daily Experience ſuch Doctrines too much obtaining in the profeſſing World. For my own part, He that ſearches my Heart and Reins is witneſs, I would rather chuſe to have my right Hand wither, and my Tongue rot within my Mouth, than to ſpeak one Word, or write one Line to cloud or diminiſh the Free-grace of God. Let it ariſe and ſhine in its Meridian Glory. None owes more to it, or expects more from it, than I do. And what I ſhall write in this Controverſy, is to vindicate it from thoſe Doctrines and Opinions, which under pretence of exalting it, do really militate againſt it. To begin therefore with the firſt and leading Error.

Error I. That the Juſtification of Sinners is an immanent and eternal Act of God, not only preceding all Acts of Sin; but the very Exiſtence of the Sinner himſelf, and ſo perfectly aboliſhing Sin in our Perſons, that we are as clean from Sin as Chriſt himſelf, ἀναμάρτητοι, as ſome of them have ſpoken. To ſtop the Progreſs of this Error, I ſhall,

1. Lay down the Sentence of the Orthodox about it.
2. Offer ſome Reaſons for the Refutation of it.

(1.) That which I take to be the Truth agreed upon, and aſſerted by ſound reformed Divines touching Goſpel-Juſtification, is by them made clear to the World in theſe following Scriptural Diſtinctions of it.

Juſtification may be conſidered under a twofold Reſpect or Habitude.

1. According to God's Eternal Decree: Or,
2. According to the Execution thereof in Time.

(1.) According to God's Eternal Decree and Purpoſe; and in this Reſpect Grace is ſaid to be given us in Chriſt before the World began, 2 Tim. 1. 9. And we are ſaid to be predeſtinated to the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ, Eph. 1. 5.

(2.) According to the Execution thereof in Time; So they again distinguish it, by considering it two ways:

1. In its Impetration by Christ.
2. In its Application to us.

That very Mercy or Privilege of Justification which God from all Eternity, purely out of his benevolent Love, purposed and decreed for his Elect, was also in Time purchased for them by the Death of Christ, Rom. 5. 9, 10. where we are said to be justified by his Blood; and he is said to have made Peace through the Blood of his Cross, to reconcile all Things to himself, Col. 1. 20. to be delivered for our Offences, and raised again for our Justification, Rom. 4. 25. Once more, That God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses, 2 Cor. 5. 19. God the Father had in the Death of Christ a Foundation of Reconciliation, whereby he became propitious to his Elect, that he might absolve and justify them. Again,

(2.) It must be considered in its Application to us, which Application is made in this Life at the Time of our effectual Calling. When an elect Sinner is united to Christ by Faith, and so passeth from Death to Life, from a state of Condemnation, into a state of Absolution and Favour; this is our actual Justification, Rom. 5. 1, Acts 13. 39. John 5. 24. which actual Justification is again considered two ways:

1. Universally, and in General, as to the State of the Person.
2. Specially, and Particularly, as to the Acts of Sin.

As soon as we are received into Communion with Christ, and his Righteousness is imputed by God, and received by Faith, immediately we pass from a state of Death and Condemnation, to a state of Life and Justification, and all Sins already committed, are remitted without Exception or Revocation; and not only so, but a Remedy is given us in the Righteousness of Christ against Sins to come; and though these special and particular Sins we afterward fall into, do need particular Pardons; yet, by renewed Acts of Faith and Repentance, the Believer applies to himself the Righteousness of Christ, and they are pardoned.

Again, they carefully distinguish betwixt,

1. It's Application by God to our Persons. And
2. It's Declaration or Manifestation in us and to us.

Which Manifestation or Declaration, is either,

1. Private in the Conscience of a Believer. Or,
2. Publick, at the Bar of Judgment.

And thus Justification is many ways distinguished: And notwithstanding all this, it is still actus individuus, an undivided Act; not on our part, for it is iterated in many Acts; but on God's part, who at once decreed it; and on Christ's part, who by one Offering purchased it, and at the Time of our Vocation universally applied it, as to the state of the Person justified; and that so effectually, as no future Sin shall bring that Person any more under Condemnation.

In this Sentence or Judgment, the generality of Reformed Orthodox Divines are agreed; and the want of distinguishing, (as they according to Scripture have distinguished) hath led the Antinomians into this first Error about Justification, and that Error hath led them into most of the other Errors. That this Doctrine of theirs, (which teaches that Men are justified actually and completly, before they have a Being) is an Error, and hath no solid Foundation to support it, may be evidenced by these three Reasons.

1. Because it is Irrational.
2. Because it is Unscriptural.
3. Because it is Injurious to Christ, and the Souls of Men.

Reason 1. It is Irrational to imagine that Men are actually justified, before thay have a Being, by an immanent Act or Decree of God. Many things have been urged upon this Account to confute and destroy this Fancy, and much more may be rationally urged against it. Let the following Particulars be weighed in the Balance of Reason.

1. Can we rationally suppose, that Pardon and Acceptance can be affirmed, or predicated of that which is not? Reason tells us, Non entis nulla sunt accidentia; That which is not, can neither be condemned nor justified: But before the Creation, or before a Man's particular Conception, he was not, and therefore could not in his own Person be the Subject of Justification. Where there is no Law, there is no Sin: Where there is no Sin, there is no Punishment: Where there is neither Sin nor Punishment, there can be no Guilt (for Guilt is an Obligation to Punishment.) And where there's neither Law, nor Sin, nor Obligation to Punishment, there can be no Justification. He that is not capable of a Charge, is not capable of a Discharge. What remains then, but that either the Elect must exist from Eternity, or be justified in time? 'Tis true, future Beings may be considered, as in the purpose and decree of God from Eternity; or as in the Intention of Christ, who died intentionally for the Sins of the Elect, and rose again for their Justification. But neither the Decree of God, nor the Death of Christ, takes place upon any Man for his actual Justification, until he personally exist. For the Object of Justification is a Sinner actually ungodly, Rom. 4. 5. but so no Man is, or can be from Eternity. In Election, Men are considered without respect to Good or Evil done by them, Rom. 9. 11. not so in actual Justification.

2. In Justification there is a Change made upon the state of the Person, Rom. 5. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10, 11. By Justification Men pass from a State of Death to a State of Life, John 5. 24. But the Decree or Purpose of God in it self makes no such actual Change upon the State of any Person. It hath indeed the Nature of an universal Cause; but an universal Cause produceth nothing without Particulars. If our State be changed, it is not by an immanent Act of God: Hence no such thing doth transire. A mere velle non punire, or intention to justify us in due time and order, makes no change on our State, 'till that time come, and the particular Causes have wrought. A Prince may have a Purpose or Intention to pardon a Law-condemned Traitor, and free him from that Condemnation in due time; but whilst the Law that condemned him stands in its full force and power against him, he is not justified or acquitted, notwithstanding that gracious intention, but stands still condemned. So is it with us, 'till by Faith we are implanted into Christ. 'Tis true, Christ is a surety for all his, and hath satisfied the Debt. He is a common Head to all his, as Adam was to all his Children, Rom. 5. 19. But as the Sin of Adam condemns none, but those those that are in him; so the Righteousness of Christ actually justifies none but those that are in him; and none are actually in him, but Believers. Therefore till we believe, no actual change passeth, or can pass upon our State. So that this Hypothesis is contrary to Reason.

Reason 2. As this Opinion is Irrational, so it is Unscriptural. For (1.) The Scripture frequently speaks of Remission or Justification as a future Act, and therefore not from Eternity, Rom. 4. 23, 24. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe in him, &c. And Gal. 3. 8. The Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the Heathen through Faith, preached before the Gospel unto Abraham. The Gospel was preached many Years before the Gentiles were justified: but if they were justified from Eternity, how was the Gospel preached before their Justification?

(2.) The Scripture leaves all Unbelievers, without distinction, under condemnation and wrath. The Curse of the Law lies upon them 'till they believe, John 3. 18. He that believeth on him, is not condemned; but he that believeth not, is condemned already. And Eph. 2. 3, 12, 13. The very Elect themselves were by Nature the Children of Wrath, even as others. They were at that time, or during that state of Nature (which takes in all that whole space betwixt their Conception and Conversion) without Christ, without Hope, without God in the World. But if this Opinion be true, that the Elect were justified from Eternity, or from the time of Christ's Death; then it cannot be true, that the Elect by Nature are Children of Wrath, without Christ, without Hope, without God in the World; except these two may consist together (which is absolutely impossible) that Children of Wrath, without God, Christ, or Hope, are actually discharged from their Sins and Dangers, by a free and gracious Act of Justification.

Object. But doth not the Scripture say, Rom. 8. 33. Who shall lay any thing to the Charge of God's Elect? If none can charge the Elect, then God hath discharged them.

Sol. God hath not actually discharged them as they are Elect, but as they are justified Elect: for so runs that Text, and clears it self in the very next Words, It is God that justifieth. When God hath actually justified an Elect Person, none can charge him.

(3.) 'Tis cross to the Scripture-order of Justification; which places it not only after Christ's Death in the place last cited, Rom. 8. 33. but also after our actual vocation; as is plain, ver. 30. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. Is it absurd to place Vocation before Predestination, or Glorification before Justification? sure then it must be absurd also to place Justification before Vocation: the one as well as the other confounds and breaks the Scripture-order. You may as well say, Men shall be glorified, that were never justified; as say they may be justified before they believed or existed. So that you see the Notion of Justification from Eternity, or before our actual Existence, and effectual Vocation, is a Notion as repugnant to Sacred Scripture, as it is to sound Reason.

Reason 3. And as it is found repugnant to Reason and Scripture, so it is highly injurious to Jesus Christ, and the Souls of Men.

(1.) It greatly injures the Lord Jesus Christ, and robs him of the glory of being our Saviour. For if the Elect be justified from Eternity, Christ cannot be the Saviour of the Elect, as most assuredly he is; for if Christ save them, he must save them as Persons subject to perishing, either de facto or de jure. But if the Elect were justified from Eternity, they could in neither respect be subject to perishing: for he that was eternally justified, was never condemned, nor capable of Condemnation; and he that never was, or could be condemned, could never be subject to perishing; and he that never was, nor could be subject to perishing, can never truly and properly be said to be saved.

If it be said, the Elect were not justified till the Death of Christ: I demand then what became of all them that died before the Death of Christ? If they were not justified, they could not be glorified: for this is sure from Rom 8. 30. That the whole Number of the glorified in Heaven is made up of such as were justified on Earth: Let Men take heed therefore, lest under pretence of exalting Christ, they bereave him of the glory of being the Saviour of his Elect.

(2.) It bereaves him of another glorious Royalty. The Scripture every where makes our Justification the result and fruit of the meritorious death of Christ; Rom. 3. 24, 25. Rom. 8. 3, 4. 2 Cor. 5. 19, 20. Gal. 3. 13, 14 Eph. 1. 17. But if Men were justified from Eternity, how is their Justification the fruit and result of the blood of the Cross? as it plainly appears from these Scriptures to be. Nay,

(3.) This Opinion leaves no place for the satisfaction of Justice by the Blood of Christ for our Sins. He did not die, according to this Opinion, to pay our Debts. And here Antinomianism and Socinianism meet, and congratulate each other. For if there were no Debts owing to the Justice of God from Eternity, Christ could not die to pay them; and 'tis manifest there were no Debts due to God's Justice from Eternity on the account of his Elect, if the Elect were from Eternity justified; unless you will say, a Person may be justified, and yet his Debts not paid: for all Justification dissolves the Obligation to Punishment.

If there were any Debts for Christ to Pay by his Blood, they must either be his own Debts, or Elect's. To say they were his own, is a blasphemous Reproach to him: and according to this Opinion we cannot say they were the Elect's; for if they were justified from Eternity, their Debts were discharged, and their Bonds cancell'd from Eternity. So that this Opinion leaves nothing to the Blood of Christ to discharge or make Satisfaction for.

(2.) And as it hath been proved to be highly injurious to the Lord Jesus, so it is greatly injurious to the Souls of Men, as it naturally leads them into all those wild and licentious Opinions which naturally flow from it, as from the radical prolifique Error, whence most of the rest derive themselves, as will immediately appear in the

II. Error. That Justification by Faith is no more but the Manifestation to us of what was really and actually done before. Or a being perswaded more or less of Christ's love to us. And that when Persons do believe, that which was hid before, doth then only appear to them.

Refutation. As the former Error dangerously corrupts the Doctrine of Justification, so this corrupts the Doctrine of Faith; and therefore deserves to be exploded by all Christians.

That there is a manifeſtation and diſcovery of the ſpecial love of God, and our own ſaving concernment in the death of Chriſt to ſome Chriſtians at ſome times, cannot be denied. St. Paul could ſay, Gal. 2. 20, 21. Chriſt loved him, and gave himſelf for him: but to ſay that this is the juſtifying Act of Faith, whereby a Sinner paſſes from Condemnation and Death, into the ſtate of Righteouſneſs and Life; this I muſt look upon as a great Error, and that for theſe following Reaſons.

Reaſon I. Becauſe there be Multitudes of believing and juſtified Perſons in the World, who have no ſuch Manifeſtation, Evidence, or Aſſurance, that God laid their Iniquities upon Chriſt, and that he died to put away their Sins; but daily conflict with ſtrong Fears and Doubts, whether it be ſo or no. There are but few among Believers that attain ſuch a Perſwaſion and Manifeſtation, as Antinomians make to be all that is meant in Scripture by Juſtification through Faith. Many thouſand new-born Chriſtians live as the new-born Babe, which neither knows its own Eſtate, or Inheritance, to which it is born, Vivit, & eſt vitæ neſcius ipſe ſuæ.

A Soul may be in Chriſt, and a juſtified ſtate, without any ſuch Perſwaſion or Manifeſtation, as they here ſpeak of, Iſa. 50. 10. And if any ſhall aſſert the contrary, he will condemn the greateſt part of the Generation of God's Children. Now that cannot be the ſaving and juſtifying Act of Faith, which is not to be found in multitudes of believing and juſtified Perſons.

But Manifeſtation, or a perſonal Perſwaſion of the love of God to a Man's Soul, or that Chriſt died for him, and all his Iniquities are thereby forgiven him, is not to be found in multitudes of believing and juſtified Souls.

Therefore ſuch a Perſwaſion or Manifeſtation is not that ſaving, juſtifying Faith, which the Scripture ſpeaks of.

That Faith which only juſtifies the Perſon of a Sinner before God, muſt neceſſarily be found in all juſtified Believers, or elſe a Man may be juſtified without the leaſt degree of juſtifying Faith, and conſequently it is not Faith alone, by which a Man is juſtified before God.

Reaſon II. That cannot be the juſtifying Act of Faith, which is not conſtant and abiding with the juſtified Perſon, but comes and goes, is frequently loſt and recovered, the State of the Perſon ſtill remaining the ſame. And ſuch contingent things are theſe Perſwaſions and Manifeſtations; they come and go, are won and loſt, the ſtate of the Perſon ſtill remaining the ſame. Job was as much a juſtified Believer when he complained that God was his Enemy, as when he could ſay, I know that my Redeemer liveth. The ſame may be ſaid of David, Heman, Aſaph, and the greateſt Number of juſtified Believers recorded in the Scripture. There be two things belonging to a juſtified State, (1.) That which is eſſential and inſeparable, to wit, Faith uniting the Soul to Chriſt. (2.) That which is contingent and ſeparable, to wit, Evidence and Perſwaſion of our Intereſt in him. Thoſe Believers that walk in darkneſs, and have no light, have yet a real ſpecial Intereſt in God as their God, Iſa. 50. 10. Here then you find Believers without Perſwaſion or Manifeſtation of God's love to them; which could never be, if juſtifying Faith conſiſted in a perſonal Perſwaſion, Manifeſtation or Evidence of the love of God, and pardon of Sin to a Man's Soul. That cannot be the juſtifying Faith ſpoken of in Scripture, which a juſtified Perſon may live in Chriſt without, and be as much in a State of Pardon and Acceptation with God, when he wants it, as when he hath it. But ſuch is Perſwaſion, Evidence, or Manifeſtation of a Man's particular Intereſt in the love of God, or the pardon of his Sins. Therefore this is not the juſtifying Faith the Scripture ſpeaks of.

Reaſon III. That only is juſtifying, ſaving Faith, which gives the Soul Right and Title to Chriſt, and the ſaving benefits which come by Chriſt upon all the Children of God. Now it is not Perſwaſion that Chriſt is ours, but Acceptance of him, that gives us intereſt in Chriſt, and the ſaving benefits and privileges of the Children of God, John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God; even to them that believe on his Name. So that unleſs the Antinomians can prove, that receiving of Chriſt, and perſonal Perſwaſion of Pardon, be one and the ſame thing; and conſequently, that all Believers in the World are perſwaded or aſſured that their Sins are pardoned; and reject from the Number of Believers all tempted, deſerted, dark, and doubting Chriſtians; this Perſwaſion they ſpeak of, is not, nor can it be the Act of Faith, which juſtifies the perſon of a Sinner before God. That which I think led our Antinomians into this Error, was an unſound and unwary definition of Faith, which in their Youth they had imbibed from their Catechiſms, and other Syſtems, paſſing without Contradiction or Scruple in thoſe days, which though it were a miſtake, and hath abundantly been proved ſo in latter Days; yet our Antinomians will not part with a Notion ſo ſerviceable to the ſupport of the darling Opinion of Eternal Juſtification.

Reaſon IV. A Man may be ſtrongly perſwaded of the Love of God to his Soul, and of the pardon of his Sin, and yet have no intereſt in Chriſt, nor be in a pardoned State. This was the Caſe of the Phariſees and others, Luke 18. 9. Rev. 3. 17. Therefore this Perſwaſion cannot be juſtifying Faith. If a Perſwaſion be that that juſtifies the perſwaded Perſon, then the Pharaſees and Laodiceans were juſtified. Oh! how common and eaſie is it for the worſt of Men to be ſtrongly perſwaded of their good Condition; whilſt humble ſerious Chriſtians doubt and ſtagger? I know not what ſuch Doctrine as this is uſeful for, but to beget and ſtrengthen that Sin of Preſumption, which ſends down Multitudes to Hell, out of the profeſſing World: For what is more common amongſt the moſt carnal and unſanctified part of the World, not only ſuch as are meerly Moral, but even the moſt flagitious and prophane, than to ſupport themſelves by falſe Perſwaſions of their good Eſtate? When they are asked, in order to their Conviction, what hopes of Salvation they have, and how they are founded? Their common anſwer is, Chriſt died for Sinners, and that they are perſwaded, that whatever he hath done for any other, he hath done it for them, as well as others: But ſuch a Perſwaſion cometh not of him that called them, and is of dangerous Conſequence.

Reaſon V. This Doctrine is certainly unſound, becauſe it confounds the Diſtinction betwixt Dogmatical, and Saving Faith; and makes it all one, to believe an Axiom or Propoſition, and to believe ſavingly in Chriſt to Eternal Life. What is it to believe, that God laid our Iniquities upon Chriſt, more than the meer aſſent of the underſtanding to a Scripture Axiom or Propoſition, without any conſent ſent of the Will to receive Jeſus Chriſt as the Goſpel offers him? And this is no more than what any unregenerated Perſon may do; yea, the very Devils themſelves aſſent to the Truth of Scripture Axioms and Propoſitions as well as Men, Jam. 2: 19. Thou believeſt there is one God, thou doſt well: the Devils alſo believe and tremble. What is more than a Scripture Axiom or Propoſition, God lay'd the iniquity of us all upon Chriſt, Iſa. 53. 6? And yet (ſaith Dr. Criſp, p. 296.) God cannot charge one Sin upon that Man that believes this Truth, That God lay'd his iniquities upon Chriſt. The aſſent of the underſtanding may be, and often is given to a Scriptural Propoſition, whilſt the Heart and Will remain carnal, and utterly averſe to Jeſus Chriſt. I may believe Dogmatically, that the Iniquities of Men were lay'd upon Chriſt, and perſuade my ſelf preſumptively, that mine, as well as other Mens, were lay'd upon him, and yet remain a perfect Stranger to all ſaving Union and Communion with him.

Reaſon VI. This Opinion cannot be true, becauſe it takes away the only Support that bears up the Soul of a Believer in Times of Temptation and Deſertion.

For how will you comfort ſuch a diſtreſſed Soul that ſaith, and ſaith truly, I have no Perſwaſion that Chriſt is mine, or that my ſins are pardoned; but I am heartily willing to caſt my poor ſin-burthened Soul upon him, that he may be mine; I do not certainly know that he died intentionally for me, but I lie at his Feet, cleave to him, wait at the door of Hope; I ſtay and truſt upon him. though I walk in Darkneſs, and have no Light. Now let ſuch Doctrine as this be preached to a Soul in this Condition, (and we may be ſure 'tis the Condition of many thouſands belonging to Chriſt) I ſay, bring this Doctrine to them, and tell them, That unleſs they be perſuaded of the Love of God, and that God lay'd their Iniquities on Chriſt, except they have ſome Manifeſtation that their Perſons were juſtified from Eternity, their accepting of Chriſt, conſent of their Wills, waiting at his Feet, &c. ſignifies nothing; if we believe not that their particular Sins were lay'd upon Chriſt, and are pardoned to them by him, they are ſtill unbelievers, and have no part or portion in him. Whatever Pretences of Spiritual Comfort and Relief the Antinomian Doctrine makes, you ſee by this it really deprives a very great, if not the greateſt number of God's People of their beſt and ſweeteſt Relief in days of Darkneſs and ſpiritual Diſtreſs. So that this Doctrine, which makes Manifeſtation and Aſſurance the very Eſſence of juſtifying Faith, appears hereby to be both a falſe and very dangerous Doctrine. And yet there is as much or more danger to the Souls of Men in their

III. Error. That Men ought not to doubt of their Faith, or queſtion whether they believe or no. Nay, That they ought no more to queſtion their Faith, than to queſtion Chriſt.

Refutation. What an eaſy way to Heaven is the Antinomian way? Were it but as true and ſafe to the Soul, as it is eaſie and pleaſing to the Fleſh, who would not embrace it? What a Charm of the Devil is prepared in theſe two Propoſitions? Be but perſuaded more or leſs of Chriſt's Love to thy Soul (ſaith Mr. Saltmarſh) and that's juſtifying Faith. Here's a Snare of the Devil lay'd for the Souls of Men. And then (2.) to make it faſt and ſure upon the Soul, and effectually to prevent the Diſcovery of their Error, tell them they need no more to doubt or queſtion their Faith, than to queſtion Chriſt, and the Work is done to all Intents.

Now that this is an Error, and a very dangerous one, will appear by the following Reaſons.

Reaſon I. The queſtioning and examining of our Faith, is a commanded Scripture-duty, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own ſelves, &c. And 2 Pet. 1. 10. Give diligence to make your calling and election ſure. Let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall, 1 Cor. 10. 12. The ſecond Epiſtle of John, verſe 8. Look to your Selves, That we loſe not the things which we have wrought: With multitude of other Scriptures, recommending holy Jealouſy, ſerious Self-trial and Examination of our Faith, as the unqueſtionable Duties of the People of God. But if we ought to queſtion our Faith no more than we ought to queſtion Chriſt, away then with all Self-Examination, and Diligence to make our Calling and Election ſure; for where there is no Doubt nor Danger, there's no Place nor Room for Examination, or further Endeavours to make it ſurer than it is. How do you like this Doctrine, Chriſtians? How many be there among you, that find no more Cauſe to queſtion your own Faith or Intereſt in Chriſt, than you do to queſtion whether there be a Chriſt, or whether he ſhed his Blood for the Remiſſion of any Man's Sins?

Reaſon II. This is a very dangerous Error, and it is the more dangerous, becauſe it leaves no way to recover a preſumptuous Sinner out of his dangerous Miſtakes; but confirms and fixes him in them, to the great hazard of his eternal ruin. It cuts off all means of Conviction or better Information, and nails them faſt to the carnal ſtate in which they are. According to this Doctrine 'tis impoſſible for a Man to think himſelf ſomething, when he is nothing; or to be guilty of ſuch a Paralogiſm and Cheat, put by himſelf upon his own Soul, Jam. 1. 22. this in effect bids a Man keep on right or wrong; he is ſure enough of Heaven, if he be but ſtrongly perſuaded that Chriſt died for him, and he ſhall come thither at laſt. Certainly this was not the Counſel Chriſt gave to the ſelf-deceived Laodiceans, Rev. 3. 17, 18. but inſtead of diſſuading them from ſelf-jealouſy and ſuſpicion of their Condition, whether their Faith and State were ſafe or not, he rather counſels them to buy Eye-ſalve, that is to labour after better information of the true ſtate and condition they were in, and not caſt away their Souls by falſe perſwaſions and vain confidences.

Reaſon III. This Doctrine cannot be true, becauſe it ſuppoſes every Perſuaſion, or ſtrong conceit of a Man's own Heart, to be as infallibly ſure and certain, as the very fundamental Doctrine of Chriſtianity. No truth in the World can be ſurer than this, That Jeſus Chriſt died for Sinners. This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all acceptation, 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a foundation Stone, a tried, precious Corner Stone, a ſure Foundation laid by God himſelf, Iſa. 28. 16. and ſhall the ſtrong Conceits and Confidences of Men's Hearts vye and compare in point of certainty with it? As well may probable and meerly conjectural Propoſitions compare with Axioms that are ſelf-evident, or demonſtrative Arguments, that leave no Doubts behind them. Know we not, that the Heart is deceitful above all things, the moſt notorious Cheat and Impoſtor in the World, Jer. 17. 9?

17. 9? Does it not deceive all the formal Hypocrites in the World in this very point? And shall every strong conceit and presumptuous confidence, begotten by Satan upon a deceitful Heart, and nursed up by Self-love, pass without any examination or suspicion for as infallible and assured a Truth, as that Jesus Christ came into the World to save Sinners? The Lord sweep that Doctrine out of the World by Reformation, which is like to sweep so many Thousand Souls into Hell by a remedilesss Self-deception.

Error IV. The fourth Antinomian Error beforementioned, was this, That Believers are not bound to confess their Sins, or pray for the pardon of them; because their Sins were pardoned before they were committed; and pardoned sin is no sin.

Refutation. If this be true Doctrine, then it will justify and make good such Conclusions and Inferences as these which necessarily flow from it: viz.

1. That there is no Sin in Believers.
2. Or if there be, the evil is very inconsiderable. Or,
3. Whatever evil is in it, it is not the Will of God that they should either confess it, mourn over it, or pray for the remission of it; Whatever he requires of others, yet they need take no notice of it, so as to afflict their Hearts for it; God hath exempted them from such Concernments: There's nothing but Joy to a Believer, saith Mr. Eaton. But neither of these conclusions are either true or tolerable; therefore neither is the Principle so which yields them.

(1.) It is not true or tolerable to affirm, that there is no Sin in a Believer, 1 Joh. 1. 8. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive our selves, and the truth is not in us. There's not a just Man upon Earth, that doeth good and sinneth not, Eccles. 7. 20. In many things we offend all, James 3. 2. The Scriptures plainly affirm it, and the universal experience of all the Saints sadly confirms it. 'Tis true, the Blood of Christ hath taken away the guilt of Sin, so that it shall not condemn Believers; and the Spirit of Sanctification hath taken away the Dominion of Sin, so that it doth not reign over Believers; but nothing, except Glorification, utterly destroys the Existence of Sin in Believers. The acts of Sin are our acts, and not Christ's; and the Stain and Pollution of those sinful Acts, are the Burthens and Infelicities of Believers, even in their justified State. Dr Crisp indeed p. 270, 271. calls that objection (I suppose he means distinction betwixt the Guilt of Sin and Sin it self) a simple Objection, and tells us, the very Sin it self, as well as the guilt of it, passed off from us, and was lay'd upon Christ: So that speaking of the Sins of Blasphemy, Murther, Theft, Adultery, Lying, &c. From that time (saith he) that they were lay'd upon Christ, thou ceasest to be a Transgressor. If thou hast Part in the Lord Christ, all these Transgressions of thine become actually the Transgressions of Christ. So that now thou art not an Idolater, or Persecutor, a Thief, a Murtherer, and an Adulterer, thou art not a sinful Person; Christ is made that very sinfulness before God, &c. Such Expressions justly offend and grieve the Hearts of Christians, and expose Christianity to Scorn and Contempt. Was it not enough that the Guilt of our Sin was lay'd on him, but we must imagine also, that the thing it self, Sin, with all the Deformity and Pollution should be essentially transferred from us to Christ? No, no. After we are justified, Sin dwelleth in us Rom. 7. 17. warreth in us, and brings us into captivity, ver. 23. Burthens and oppresses our very Souls, ver. 24. Methinks I need not stand to prove what I should think no sound experienced Christian dares to deny, that there is much Sin still remaining in the Persons of the justified. He that dares to deny it, hath little Acquaintance with the Nature of Sin, and of his own Heart.

(2) It is neither true nor tolerable to say, there is no considerable evil in the sins of Believers, deserving a mournful confession or petition for Pardon. The desert of Sin is Hell; 'tis an artifice of Satan to draw Men to Sin by persuading them there is no great evil in it; but none except Fools will believe it. Fools, indeed, make a mock of Sin; but all that understand either the intrinsick evil of it, or the sad and dismal effects produced by it, are far from thinking it a light or inconsiderable evil. The Sins, even of Believers, greatly wrong and offend their God, Psal. 51. 4. and is that a light thing with us? They interrupt and clog our Communion with God, Rom. 7. 21. They grieve the good Spirit of God, Ephes. 4. 30. Certainly these are no inconsiderable Mischiefs.

(3.) Now if there be Sin in Believers, and so much evil in their Sins (neither of which any sober Christian will deny) then undoubtedly it is their Duty to confess it freely, mourn for it bitterly, and pray for the pardon of it earnestly, unless God have any where discharged them from those Duties, and told them these are none of their Concernments, and that he expects not these Things from justified Persons; but that these are Duties properly and only belonging to other Men. But on the contrary, you find the whole current of Scripture running strongly and constantly in direct opposition to such idle and sinful Notions. For first,

(1.) He hath plainly declared it to be his Will, that his People should confess their Sins before him, and strongly connected their Confessions with their Pardons, 1 John 1. 9. and frequently suspends from them the comfortable sense of forgiveness, till their Hearts be brought to this Duty, Psal. 32. 5. compared with verse 3. 4. the more to engage them to this Duty, by the sensible ease and comfort attending and following it.

(2.) He also enjoyns it upon them, That they mourn for their Sins, Isa. 22. 12. expresses his great Delight in Contrition and Brokenness of Spirit for Sin, Isa. 66. 2. To this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit. Christ himself pronounces a Blessing upon them that mourn, Matt. 5. 4. Justified Paul mournfully confesses his former Blasphemies, Persecutions, and Injuries done against Christ, 1 Tim. 1. 13. So did Ezra, Daniel, and other eximous Saints.

Object. Yes, say some, they did indeed confess their sins committed before their Justification, but not their after-sins.

Reply. According to Antinomian Principles, I would demand, If all the Elect were justified from Eternity, what sins any of them could confess which they had committed before their Justification? Or if they were justified from the time of Christ's Death, what were the sins any of us have to confess who had not a Being, and therefore had not actually sinned long after the Death of Christ?

But

But I hope none will deny, that the mournful Complaints the Apostle makes for Sin, Rom. 7. 23, 24 were after he was a sanctified and justified Person.

(3.) It is not the Will of Christ to exempt any justified Person upon Earth, from the Duty of Praying frequently and fervently for the Remission of his Sins. This the most eminent Saints upon Earth have done. The greatest Favourites of Heaven have freely confessed and heartily prayed for the Remission of Sin, Dan. 9. 4, 19. And that the Gospel gives us no Exemption from this Duty, appears by Christ's Injunction of it upon all his People, Matt. 6. 12.

Error V. To give countenance to the former Error, they say, That God sees no sin in Believers, whatsoever Sins they commit; and seek a covert for this Error from Numb. 23. 21. and Jer. 50. 20. In the former place it is said by Balaam, He hath not beheld Iniquity in Jacob, nor seen Perverseness in Israel. And in the other place it is said, In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them, whom I reserve.

Refutation. Now that this Opinion of our Antinomians is Erroneous, will appear four ways.

1. By its repugnancy to God's Omniscience.
2. By its inconsistency with his Dispensations.
3. By its want of a Scripture-foundation.
4. By its contradictoriness to their other Principles.

'Tis true, and we thankfully acknowledge it, that God sees no sin in Believers, as a Judge sees Guilt in a Malefactor, to condemn him for it; that's a sure and comfortable Truth for us: but to say he sees no Sin in his Children, as a displeased Father to correct and chasten them for it, is an Assertion repugnant to Scripture, and very injurious to God. For,

(1.) 'Tis injurious to God's Omniscience, Psal. 139. 2. Thou (saith holy David) knowest my down-sitting, and my up-rising, and understandest my thoughts afar off, and art acquainted with all my ways. Job 28. 24. He looketh to the ends of the Earth, and seeth under the whole Heavens. Prov. 15. 3. The Eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good. Psal. 33. 14, 15. From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the Inhabitants of the Earth; he fashioneth their hearts alike, he considereth all their works. He that denies that God seeth his most secret Sins, therein consequentially denies him to be God.

(2.) This Assertion is inconsistent with God's Providential Dispensations to his People. When David, a justified Believer, had sinned against him in the matter of Uriah, it is said, 2 Sam. 11. 27. The thing that David had done, displeased the Lord: and as the effect of that displeasure, it's said, Chap. 12. 15. The Lord struck the Child that Uriah's Wife bare unto David, and it was very sick. Among the Corinthians some that should not be condemned with the World, were judged and chastened of the Lord for their undue Approaches to his Table, 1 Cor. 11. 32. Now I would ask the Antinomians these two Questions. (1 Quest.) Whether it can be denied, that David under the Old Testament, and these Corinthians under the New, were justified Persons; and yet the former stricken by God in his Child, with its sickness and death; and the latter in like manner smitten by God in their own Persons; and both for their respective Sins committed against God; and yet God saw no sin in them? Did God smite them for sin, and yet behold no sin in them? Beware lest in ascribing such strokes to God, you strike at once both at his Omniscience and Justice. (2. Quest.) How God upon confession and repentance can be said to put away his People's sins (as Nathan there assures David he had done) when in the mean time he saw no sin in him, either to chastise him for, or to pardon in him? Do you think that God's Afflictions or Pardons are blind-fold Acts, done at random? how inconsistent is this with Divine Dispensations.

(3.) This Opinion is altogether destitute of a Scripture-foundation; 'tis evident it hath none in the only places alledged for it. It hath no footing at all in Numb. 23. 21. Grave and learned Gataker hath learnedly and industriously vindicated that Scripture from this Abuse of it by Antinomians, in his Treatise upon that Text, entitled God's Eye upon his Israel; where, after a learned and critical search of the Text, he telleth us, it soundeth word for word thus from the Original; He hath not beheld wrong against Jacob, nor hath he seen grievance against Israel; So that the meaning is not, That God did not see sin in Israel, but that he beheld not with Approbation the Wrongs and Injuries done by others against his Israel; and shews at large by divers solid Reasons, why the Antinomian sense cannot be the proper sense of that place, it being cross to the main tenour of the Story, and truth of God's Word, which shews, that God often complained of their Sins, often threatned to avenge them; yea, did actually avenge them by destroying them in the Wilderness; nay, Balaam himself, who uttered these words unto Balak, did not so understand them, as appears by the Advice he gave to Balak, to draw them into Sin, that thereby God might be provoked to withdraw his Protection from them.

And for Jer. 50. 20. it makes nothing to their purpose. Many expound the Sin there sought after, and not found, to be the Sin of Idolatry, which Israel should be purged from by their Captivity, according to Isa. 27. 9. But the generality of sound Expositors are agreed, That by the not finding of Israel's and Judah's Sin, is meant no more, but his not finding those Bonds or Obligations against them to eternal Punishment, which their Sins had put them under.

(4.) In a word, This Opinion clashes with their other Principles. For they say, That though there was pardon and remission under the Old Covenant (which they allowed to be a Covenant of Grace) yet it was but gradatim and successively, as they offered Sacrifices. If a Man had sinned ignorantly, until he brought a Sacrifice, his Sin lay upon him, it may be a Week, a Month's distance between, before they could have their Pardon. Vide Dr. Crisp of the two Covenants, p. 256, 257. Now I demand, If this were the state and case of all God's Israel under the Old Testament, Why do these Men affirm, that God can see no sin in a Believer? and why do they expound the words of Balaam so contradictory to this their other Opinion? For they will not deny but God sees unpardoned Sins in all; and here is a Week, or Month, or more Time, allowed between the Commission and Remission of their sin. And so much of the fifth Antinomian Error.

Error VI. That God is not angry with the Elect, nor doth he smite them for their Sins; and to say that he doth so, is an injurious Reflection upon the Justice of God, who hath received full satisfaction for all their Sins from the Hand of Christ. There

There are ſeveral Miſtakes and Errors in theſe Aſſertions; and I ſuppoſe our Antinomians were led into them, (1.) By their abhorrence of the Popiſh Doctrine, which errs more dangerouſly in the other Extream: For they wickedly aſſert our Sufferings to be ſatisfactory for our Sins, which is the ground of Popiſh Penances, and voluntary Self-caſtigations. (2.) From a groundleſs apprehenſion, That God's Corrections of us for our ſins, are inconſiſtent with the fulneſs of Chriſt's Satisfaction for them. Chriſt having paid all our Debts, and diſſolved our Obligations to all Puniſhment, it cannot conſiſt with the Juſtice of God to lay any Rod upon us for our Sins, after Chriſt hath born all that our Sins deſerved.

This miſtake of the end of Chriſt's death, occaſions them to ſtumble into the other Miſtakes: they imagine that Chriſt's Satisfaction aboliſhed God's hatred of Sin in Believers. But this cannot be; God's Antipathy to Sin, can never be taken away by the Satisfaction of Chriſt, though his hatred to the Perſons of the redeemed be: for the hatred of Sin is founded in the unchangable Nature of God; and he can as ſoon ceaſe to be holy, as ceaſe to hate Sin, Hab. 1. 13. Nor was Chriſt's death ever deſigned to this end: though Chriſt hath ſatisfied for the Sins of Believers, God ſtill hates Sin in Believers. His hatred to their Sins, and love to their Perſons, are not inconſiſtent. As a Man may love his Leg or Arm, as they are Members of his own Body, and notwithſtanding that Love, hate the Gangrene which hath taken them; and lance or uſe painful Corroſives for the cure of them.

Neither do our Antinomians diſtinguiſh as they ought, betwixt vindictive Puniſhments from God, the pure Iſſues and Effects of his Juſtice and Wrath againſt the Wicked; and his Paternal Caſtigations, the pure Iſſues of the Care and Love of a diſpleaſed Father. Great and manifold are the differences betwixt his vindictive Wrath upon his Enemies, and the rebukes of the Rod upon his Children. Thoſe are Legal, theſe Evangelical. Thoſe out of Wrath and Hatred, theſe out of Love. Thoſe unſanctified, but theſe bleſſed and ſanctified to happy ends and purpoſes to his People. Thoſe for Deſtruction, theſe for Salvation.

To narrow the matter in Controverſy as much as we can, I ſhall lay down three Conceſſions about God's Corrections of his People.

Conceſſion I. We chearfully and thankfully acknowledge the perfection and fulneſs of the ſatisfaction of Chriſt for all the Sins of Believers: and with thankfulneſs do own, that if God ſhould caſt all, or any of them, into an Ocean of temporal Troubles and Diſtreſſes; in all that Sea of Sorrow, there would not be found one drop of vindictive Wrath. Chriſt hath drunk the laſt drop of that Cup, and left nothing for Believers to ſuffer by way of Satisfaction.

Conceſſion II. We grant alſo. That all the Sufferings of Believers in this World, are not for their Sins; but ſome of them are for the prevention of Sin, 2 Cor. 12. 7. ſome for the tryal of their Graces, Jam. 1. 2, 3. ſome for a confirming Teſtimony to his Truths, Acts 5. 41. Such Sufferings as theſe have much heavenly Comfort concomitant with them.

Conceſſion III. We do not ſay, That God's diſpleaſure with his People for Sin, evidenced againſt them in the ſmarteſt Rebukes of the Rod, is any Argument that God's Love is turned into Hatred againſt their Perſons: No, no, his Love to his People is unchangeable. Having loved his own, he loved them to the end, John 13. 1. yet notwithſtanding all this, three things are undeniably clear, and being throughly apprehended, will end this Controverſy.

1. That God lays his correcting Rod in this World on the Perſons of Believers.
2. That this Rod of God is ſometimes laid on them for their Sins.
3. That theſe Fatherly Corrections of them for their Sins, are reconcileable to, and fully conſiſtent with his Juſtice, compleatly ſatisfied by the Blood of Chriſt for all their Sins.

1. That God lays his correcting Rod in this World upon the Perſons of Believers, This no Man can have the Face to deny that believes the Scriptures to be the Word of God, or that the Troubles of good Men in this Life fall not out by Caſualty, but by the Counſel and Direction of Divine Providence. He that denies the hand of God to be upon the Perſons of Believers in this Life in the way of painful Chaſtiſements and Sufferings, muſt either ignorantly, or wilfully, overlook that Scripture, Heb. 7. 8. What Son is he whom the Father chaſteneth not? but if ye be without Chaſtiſement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye Baſtards and not Sons. Nor will any ſober Chriſtian deny theſe Troubles of Believers to be the effects of God's Governing Providence in the World, or once imagine or affirm them to be mere Caſualties and Contingences: for affliction cometh not forth of the duſt, neither doth trouble ſpring out of the ground, Job 5. 6. In what Eutopia doth that good Man live upon Earth, that feels not the painful Rod of God upon himſelf, nor hears the ſad laments and moans of other Chriſtians under it! This ſure is undeniable, that the Rod of God is every-where upon the Perſons and Tabernacles of the Righteous; and if any doubt it, his own ſenſe and feeling may in a little time give him a painfull demonſtration of it.

2. And for the ſecond, That this Rod of God is ſometimes laid upon Believers for their Sins, methinks no ſober modeſt Chriſtian in the World ſhould doubt or deny it, when he conſiders, That,

1. God himſelf hath ſo declared it.
2. The Saints in all Ages have freely confeſſed it to be ſo.

1. God himſelf hath fully and plainly declared it to be ſo, 2 Sam. 12. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord, to do evil in his ſight? now therefore the Sword ſhall never depart from thy Houſe, &c. Here's the Sword a terrible and painful Evil, upon David's Houſe, a man after God's own Heart, and that expreſly for his Sin in the matter of Uriah. So Moſes, one of the greateſt Favourites of Heaven, for his ſinful ſhifting of the Lord's Work, Exod. 4. 13, 14. The anger of the Lord was kindled againſt Moſes. For the multitude of thine Iniquities, becauſe thy ſins were encreaſed, I have done theſe things unto thee, ſaith God to his own Iſrael, Jer. 30. 15. To inſtance in all the Declarations made by God himſelf in this caſe, were to tranſcribe a great part of both Teſtaments.

2. And as God hath declared the Sins of his People to be the provoking cauſes of his Rods upon them; ſo they have freely and ingenuouſly confeſſed and acknowledged the ſame, Lam. 3. 39, 40. Wherefore doth the living man complain? a man for the puniſhment of his Sins? Let us ſearch and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord. This was poken by Jeremy in the name of the whole captive Church. So Pſal. 38. 3. 5. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh (ſaith David) becauſe of thine Anger; neither is there any reſt in my bones, becauſe of my Sin. My wounds ſtink, and are corrupt, becauſe of my fooliſhneſs. And were it not an hideous and unaccountable Thing to hear any Child of God, under his Rod, to ſtand upon his own Juſtification, and ſay, Lord, my Sins have not deſerved this at thy Hand, nor is it juſtice in thee thus to chaſtiſe me after thou haſt received ſatisfaction for all my Sins from the Hand of Chriſt. Would it not look like an horrid Blaſphemy, to hear the beſt Man in the World diſputing and denying the Juſtice of God in the Troubles he lays him under? For my own part, let the Lord lay on as ſmartly as he will upon me, I deſire to follow the holy Patterns and Precedents recorded in Scripture for my imitation, and to ſay with the People of God, Ezr. 9. 13. Thou haſt puniſhed me leſs than mine Iniquities deſerve. And Micah 7. 9. I will bear the Indignation of the Lord becauſe I have ſinned againſt him. And he that refuſes ſo to do, gives little Evidence of the Spirit of Adoption in him, but a very clear evidence of the Pride and Ignorance of his own Heart. Job indeed ſtiffly ſtood upon his own Vindication; but that was when he had to do with Men, who falſly charged him, laying thoſe Sins as the Cauſes of his Troubles which he was innocent of, Job 23. 5, 6. But when he had to do with God he diſputes no more, but ſaith, Behold, I am vile, what ſhall I anſwer thee? I will lay my hand upon my mouth. q. d. I have done, Father, I have done; Whether theſe Chaſtiſements be for my Sins or no, ſure I am, my Sin not only deſerves all this, but Hell it ſelf; Thou art holy, but I am vile.

3. Nor can it at all be doubted, but that theſe Fatherly Corrections of the Saints for their Sins, are reconcileable to, and fully conſiſtent with his Juſtice, ſatisfied by the Blood of Chriſt for all their Sins. For (1.) If it were not ſo, the juſt and righteous God would never have inſerted ſuch a Clauſe of Reſervation in his gracious Covenant with his People, to chaſten them as he ſaw need after he had taken them into the Covenant, Pſal. 89. 30, 31, 32, 33. If they trangreſs, he will viſit their Tranſgreſſions with a Rod, and their Iniquity with ſtripes; neverthleſs (ſaith he) my loving-kindneſs will I not take away. That [Neverthleſs] clearly proves the conſiſtency of his Stripes for Sin, with his loving-kindneſs to his People, and with Chriſt's Satisfaction for their Sins. (2.) If this were not conſiſtent with the Juſtice of God, to be ſure he would never ſingle them out to ſpend his Rods upon, rather than others. 'Tis moſt certain the holieſt Men have moſt laſhes in this Life. Aſaph ſaid, Pſal. 73. 12, 14. The ungodly proſper in the World, but he was chaſtned every morning. And verſ. 5. The Wicked are not in trouble as other men. 1 Pet. 4. 17. Judgment muſt begin at the Houſe of God; and if Piety would give men an exemption from all Troubles, Pains, and Chaſtiſements, then men might diſcern Love or Hatred by the Things that are before them, contrary to Eccl. 9. 1, 2. Neither could thoſe that are in Chriſt ſuffer the painful Agonies of Death becauſe of Sin, expreſly contrary to Paul, Rom. 8. 10. And if Chriſt be in you, the Body is dead becauſe of Sin. (3.) In a word, As Chriſt never ſhed his Blood to extinguiſh or aboliſh God's Diſpleaſure againſt Sin in whomſoever it be found, ſo he never ſhed it to deprive his People of the manifold Bleſſings and Advantages that accrue to them by the Rods of God upon them. It was never his Intent to put us into a Condition on Earth, that would have been ſo much to our Loſs. So then, if the Hand of God be upon his People for Sin, and conſiſtently enough with his Juſtice, it muſt be an error to ſay God ſmites not Believers for their Sins, and it would be Injuſtice in him ſo to do: which is their ſixth Error.

Error VII. They tell us, That by God's laying our Iniquities upon Chriſt, he became as compleatly ſinful as we, and we as compleatly righteous as Chriſt. That not only the Guilt and Puniſhment of Sin was laid upon Chriſt; but ſimply the very faults that men commit, the tranſgreſſion it ſelf became the tranſgreſſion of Chriſt: Iniquity it ſelf, not in any figure, but plainly ſin it ſelf, was laid on Chriſt: and that Chriſt himſelf was not more righteous, than this Perſon is, and this Perſon is not more ſinful than Chriſt was.

Refutation. Theſe two Propoſitions will never go down with ſound and Orthodox Chriſtians. The firſt ſinks and debaſes Chriſt too low, the other exalts the ſinful Creature too high. The one repreſents the pure and ſpotleſs Lord Jeſus as ſinful: the other repreſents the ſinful Creature as pure and perfect: and both theſe Propoſitions ſeem evidently to be built upon theſe two Hypotheſes. (1.) That the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is ſubjectively and inherently in us, in the ſame fulneſs and perfection it is in Chriſt: grant that, and then it will follow indeed, That Chriſt himſelf is not more righteous than the Believer is. (2.) That not only the guilt and puniſhment of Sin was laid on Chriſt by way of imputation; but Sin it ſelf, the very tranſgreſſion, or ſinfulneſs it ſelf, was transferr'd from the Elect to Chriſt: and that by God's laying it on him, the ſinfulneſs or fault it ſelf was eſſentially transfuſed into him; and ſo Sin it ſelf did tranſire à ſubjecto in ſubjectum. Grant but this, and it can never be denied but Chriſt became as compleatly ſinful as we.

But both theſe Hypotheſes are not only notoriouſly falſe, but utterly impoſſible, as will be manifeſted by and by; But before I come to the Refutation of them, it will be neceſſary to lay down ſome Conceſſions to clear the Orthodox Doctrine in this Controverſie, and narrow the matter under Debate, as much as may be.

(1.) And firſt we thankfully acknowledge the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to be the Surety of the New Teſtament, Heb. 7. 22. and that as ſuch, all the Guilt and Puniſhment of our Sins, was laid upon him, Iſa. 53. 5, 6. That is, God imputed, and he bare it in our room and ſtead. God the Father, as Supreme Law-giver, and Judge of all, upon the Tranſgreſſion of the Law, admitted the Sponſion or Suretiſhip of Chriſt, to anſwer for the Sins of Men, Heb. 10. 5, 6, 7. And for this very end he was made under the Law, Gal. 4. 4, 5. And that Chriſt voluntarily took it upon him to anſwer as our Surety, whatſoever the Law could lay to our charge; whence it became juſt and righteous that he ſhould ſuffer.

(2.) We ſay, That God by laying upon, or imputing the guilt of our Sins to Chriſt, thereby our Sins became legally his; as the Debt is legally the Sureties Debt, tho' he never borrowed one Farthing of it: Thus God laid, and Chriſt took our Sins upon him, though in him was no Sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. He hath made him to be ſin for us, who knew no ſin. (i. e.) who was clean and altogether void of Sin.

(3.) We thankfully acknowledge, that Chriſt hath ſo fully ſatisfied the Law for the Sins of all that are his, that the Debts of Believers are fully diſcharged, and the very laſt Mite paid by Chriſt. His payment is full, and ſo therefore is our Diſcharge and Acquittance, Rom. 8. 1, 31. And that by Vertue hereof the Guilt of Believers is ſo perfectly aboliſhed, that it ſhall never more bring them under Condemnation, John 5. 24. And ſo in Chriſt they are without Fault before God.

(4.) We likewiſe grant, That as the Guilt of our Sins was by God's Imputation laid upon Chriſt, ſo the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is by God imputed to Believers by Virtue of their Union with Chriſt; and becomes thereby as truly and fully theirs, for the Juſtification of their particular Perſons before God, as if they themſelves had in their own Perſons fulfilled all that the Law requires, or ſuffered all that it threatned: No inherent Righteouſneſs in our own Perſons, is, or can be more truly our own for this end and Purpoſe, than Chriſt's imputed Righteouſneſs is our own. He is the Lord our Righteouſneſs, Jer 23. 6. We are made the Righteouſneſs of God in him, 1 Cor. 5. 21. Yea, the Righteouſneſs of the Law is fulfilled in them that believe, Rom. 8. 4.

But notwithſtanding all this, we cannot ſay, (1.) That Chriſt became as compleatly ſinful as we. Or (2) That we are as compleatly righteous as Chriſt; and that over and above the Guilt and Puniſhment of Sin, (which we grant was laid upon Chriſt) Sin it ſelf ſimply conſidered, or the very Tranſgreſſion it ſelf, became the Sin or Tranſgreſſion of Chriſt; and conſequently that we are as compleatly Righteous as Chriſt, and Chriſt as compleatly Sinful as we are.

1. We dare not ſay, That Sin ſimply conſider'd, as the very Tranſgreſſion of the Law it ſelf, as well as the Guilt and Puniſhment, became the very Sin and Tranſgreſſion of Chriſt: For two things are diſtinctly to be conſidered and differenced, with reſpect to the Law, and unto Sin. As to the Law, we are to conſider in it,

1. Its Preceptive Part.
2. Its Sanction.

(1.) The preceptive part of the Law, which gives Sin its formal Nature, 1 Joh. 3. 4. For ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the Law. All Tranſgreſſion ariſes from the preceptive part of the Law of God: He that tranſgreſſeth the Precepts ſinneth; and under this conſideration ſin can never be communicated from one to another: The Perſonal ſin of one cannot be in this reſpect the Perſonal ſin of another: There is no Phyſical Tranſfuſion of the Tranſgreſſion of the Precept from one ſubject into another: This is utterly impoſſible; even Adam's perſonal ſins conſider'd in his ſingle private Capacity, are not communicable to his Poſterity.

(2.) Beſides the Tranſgreſſion of the preceptive part of the Law, there is an obnoxiouſneſs unto Puniſhment, ariſing from the Sanction of the Law which we call the Guilt of Sin; and this (as Judicious Dr. Owen obſerves) is ſeparable from Sin: And if it were not ſeparable from the former, no ſinner in the World could either be pardoned or ſaved; Guilt may be made anothers by Imputation, and yet that other not rendred formally a ſinner thereby: Upon this ground we ſay, the Guilt and Puniſhment of our Sin, was that only which was imputed unto Chriſt; but the very Tranſgreſſion of the Law it ſelf, or Sin formally and eſſentially conſidered, could never be communicated or transfuſed from us into him. I know but two ways in the World by which one Man's ſins can be imagined to become anothers, viz. Either by Imputation, which is Legal, and what we affirm; or by Eſſential Tranſfuſion from ſubject to ſubject (as our Adverſaries fanſie) which is utterly impoſſible; and we have as good Ground to believe the abſurd Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, as this wild Notion of the Eſſential Tranſfuſion of Sin. Guilt ariſing from the Sanction of the Law, may and did paſs from us to Chriſt by Legal Imputation; but ſin it ſelf, the very Tranſgreſſion it ſelf, ariſing from the very Preceptive part of the Law, cannot ſo paſs from us to Chriſt: For if we ſhould once imagine, that the very acts and habits of Sin, with the odious Deformity thereof, ſhould paſs from our Perſons to Chriſt, and ſubjectively to inhere in him, as they do in us; then it would follow, Firſt, That our Salvation would thereby be rendred utterly impoſſible. For ſuch an inheſion of Sin in the Perſon of Chriſt, is abſolutely inconſiſtent with the Hypoſtatical Union, which Union is the very Foundation of his Satisfaction, and our Salvation. Tho' the Divine Nature can, and doth dwell in Union with the pure and Sinleſs human Nature of Chriſt, yet it cannot dwell in Union with Sin.

Secondly, This Suppoſition would render the Blood of the Croſs altogether unable to ſatisfie for us. He could not have been the Lamb of God to take away the Sins of the World, if he had not been perfectly pure and ſpotleſs, 1 Pet. 1. 19.

Thirdly, Had our Sins thus been eſſentially transfus'd into Chriſt, the Law had had a juſt and valid Exception againſt him; for it accepts of nothing but what is abſolutely pure and perfect. I admire, therefore how any good Man dares to call our Doctrine, which teaches the Imputation of our Guilt and Puniſhment to Chriſt, a ſimple Doctrine; and aſſert, that the Tranſgreſſion it ſelf became Chriſt's; and that thereby Chriſt became as compleatly ſinful as we. And, Fourthly, If the way of making our Sins Chriſt's by Imputation, be thus rejected and derided; and Chriſt aſſerted by ſome other way to become as compleatly ſinful as we; then I cannot ſee which way to avoid it, but that the very ſame Acts and Habits of Sin of Sin muſt inhere, both in Chriſt, and in Believers alſo. For, I ſuppoſe our Adverſaries will not deny, that notwithſtanding God's laying the Sins of Believers upon Chriſt, there remain in all Believers after their Juſtification, ſinful Inclinations and Averſations; a Law of Sin in their Members, a Body of Sin and Death. Did theſe Things paſs from them to Chriſt, and yet do they ſtill inhere in them? Why do they complain and groan of in-dwelling Sin? as Rom. 7. If Sin it ſelf be ſo transferr'd from them to Chriſt? Sure, unleſs Men will dare to ſay, the ſame Acts and Habits of Sin which they feel in themſelves, are as truly in Chriſt as in themſelves, they have no ground to ſay, that by God's laying their Iniquities upon Chriſt, he became as compleatly ſinful as they are; and if they ſhould ſo affirm, that Affirmation would undermine the very Foundation of their own Salvation.

Owen of Juſtification, p. 285.

I therefore heartily subscribe to that sound and holy Sentence, of a clear and learned Divine, Nothing is more absolutely true, nothing more sacredly and assuredly believ'd by us, than that nothing which Christ did or suffer'd, nothing that he undertook, or underwent, did, or could constitute him subjectively, inherently, and thereupon personally a Sinner, or guilty of any Sin of his own. To bear the Guilt or Blame of other Mens Faults to be alienæ culpæ reus, makes no Man a Sinner, unless he did unwisely or irregularly undertake it. So, then this Proposition, that by God's laying our Sins upon Christ (in some other way, than by Imputation of Guilt and Punishment) he became as compleatly sinful as we, will not, ought not to be receiv'd as the sound Doctrine of the Gospel. Nor yet this.

Owen, of Justification, p. 283.

Second Proposition. That we are as compleatly Righteous as Christ is; or, that Christ is not more Righteous than a Believer.

I cannot imagine what should induce any Man so to express himself, unless it be a groundless conceit and fancy, that there is an essential Transfusion of Christ's justifying Righteousness into Believers, whereby it becomes theirs by way of subjective inhesion, and is in them in the very same manner it is in him: And so every individual Believer becomes as compleatly righteous as Christ. And this conceit they would fain establish upon that Text, 1 Joh. 3. 7. He that doth righteousness, is righteous, even as he is righteous.

But neither this expression, nor any other like it in the Scriptures, gives the least countenance to such a general and unwary Position. It is far from the mind of this Scripture, That the Righteousness of Christ is formally and inherently ours, as it is his. Indeed it is ours relatively, not formally and inherently; not the same with his for quantity, though it be the same for verity. His Righteousness is not ours in its universal value, though it be ours, as to our particular use and necessity. Nor is it made ours to make us so many causes of Salvation to others; but it is imputed to us as to the Subjects, that are to be saved by it our selves.

'Tis true, we are justified and saved by the very Righteousness of Christ, and no other; but that Righteousness is formally inherent in him only, and is only materially imputed to us. It was actively his, but passively ours. He wrought it, though we wear it. It was wrought in the Person of God-Man for the whole Church, and is imputed (not transfused) to every single Believer for his own concernment only. For,

(1.) It is most absurd to imagine, that the Righteousness of Christ should formally inhere in the Person of all, or any Believer, as it doth in the Person of the Mediator. The impossibility hereof appears plainly from the incapacity of the Subject. The Righteousness of Christ is an infinite Righteousness, because it is the Righteousness of God-Man, and can therefore be subjected in no other Person beside him. It is capable of being imputed to a finite Creature, and therefore in the way of imputation we are said to be made the righteousness of God in him: but though it may be imputed to a finite Creature, it inheres only in the Person of the Son of God, as in its proper Subject. And indeed,

(2.) If it should be inherent in us, it could not be imputed to us as it is, Rom. 4. 6, 23. Nor need we go out of our selves for Justification, as now we must, Phil. 3. 9. but may justify our selves by our own inherent Righteousness. And

(3*dly*,) What should hinder, if this infinite Righteousness of Christ were infused into us, and should make us as compleatly Righteous as Christ; but that we might justify others also, as Christ doth: and so we might be the Saviours of the Elect, as Christ is? Which is most absurd to imagine. And

(4*thly*,) According to Antinomian Principles, What need was there that we should be justified at all? Or, What place is left for the Justification of any Sinner in the World? For according to their Opinion, the Justification of the Elect is an immanent Act of God before the World was; and that Eternal Act of Justification, making the Elect as compleatly Righteous as Christ himself, there could not possibly be any the least guilt in the Elect to be pardoned; and consequently no place, or room could be left for any Justification in time. And then it must follow, that seeing Christ died in time for Sin, according to the Scriptures; it must be for his own Sins that he died, and not for the Sins of the Elect; Diametrically opposite to Rom. 4. 25. and the whole current of Scripture, and Faith of Christians.

'Tis therefore very unbecoming and unworthy of a justified Person, after Christ hath taken all his Guilt upon himself, and suffer'd all the Punishment due thereunto in his place and room: Instead of an humble and thankful Admiration of his unparallel'd Grace therein, to throw more than the Guilt and Punishment of his Sins upon Christ, even the Transgression it self: and comparing his own Righteousness with Christ's, to say he is as compleatly Righteous as Christ himself. This is as if a company of Bankrupt Debtors Arrested for their own Debts, ready to be cast into Prison, and not having one Farthing to satisfy, after their Debts have been freely and fully discharg'd by another, out of his immense Treasure; should now compare with him, yea, and think they honour'd him, by telling him, that now they are as compleatly rich as himself.

I am well assur'd no good Man would embrace an Opinion so derogatory to Christ's Honour as this is; did he but see the odious consequences of it, doubtless he would abhor them as much as we. And as for those now in Heaven, who fell into such Mistakes in the Way thither, were they now acquainted with what is transacted here below, they would exceedingly rejoyce in the detection of those Mistakes, and bless God for the Refutation of them.

Error VIII. They affirm, That Believers need not fear their own Sins, nor the Sins of others; for as much as neither their own, or others Sins can do them any hurt, nor must they do any duty for their own good or salvation, or for eternal rewards.

That we need fear no hurt from Sin, or may not aim at our own good in Duty, are two Propositions that sound harsh in the Ears of Believers: I shall consider them severally, and refute them as briefly as I can.

Proposition I. Believers need not fear their own sins, or the sins of others; because neither our own, or others sins can do us any hurt.

They seem to be induced into this Error, by misunderstanding the Apostle, in Rom. 8. 28. as if the scope of that Text were to assert the Benefits of Sin to justified Persons; whereas he speaks there of Adversities and Afflictions befalling the Saints in this Life. Universalis restringenda est ad materiam subjectam, loquitur enim de afflictionibus piorum. The ſubject Matter (ſaith Pareus on the place) reſtrains the univerſal Expreſſion of the Apoſtle: For when he there ſaith, All things ſhall work together for good; he principally intends the Afflictions of the Godly, of which he treats there in that Context. It may be extended alſo to all providential Events; Omnia quæcunque eis accedunt forinſecus, tam adverſa, quàm proſpera: All adverſe and proſperous Events of things without us, as Eſtius upon the place notes. Nothing is ſpoken of Sin in this Text. And the Apoſtle diſtributing this General into Particulars, v. 38. plainly ſhews, what are the things he intended by his univerſal Expreſſion, verſe 28. as alſo in what reſpect no Creature can do the Saints any hurt, namely, that they ſhall never be able to ſeparate them from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. And in this reſpect it is true that the Sins of the Elect ſhall not hurt them, by fruſtrating the Purpoſe of God concerning their eternal Salvation; or totally and finally to ſeparate them from his Love. This we grant, and yet we think it a very unwary and unſound Expreſſion, That Believers need not fear their own Sins, becauſe they can do them no hurt: 'Tis too general and unguarded a Propoſition to be received for Truth. What if their Sins cannot do them that hurt, to fruſtrate the Purpoſe of God, and damn them to Eternity in the World to come? Can it therefore do them no hurt at all in their preſent ſtate of conflict with it in this World? For my part, I think the greateſt fear of Caution is due to Sin, the greateſt Evil; and that Chryſoſtome ſpake more like a Chriſtian, when he ſaid, Nil niſi peccatum timeo, I fear nothing but Sin. Though Sin cannot finally ruine the Believer, yet it can many ways hurt and injure the Believer; and therefore ought not to be miſrepreſented as ſuch an innocent and harmleſs thing to them. In vain are ſo many terrible Threatnings in the Scriptures againſt it, if it can do us no hurt; and it is certain nothing can do us good, but that which makes us better, and more holy: But Sin can never pretend to that, of all things in the World. But to come to an Iſſue, Sin may be conſider'd three ways.

1. Formally. 2. Effectively. 3. Reductively.

Firſt, Formally, as a Tranſgreſſion of the Preceptive Part of the Law of God, and under that Conſideration it is the moſt formidable Evil in the whole World. The Evil of Evils, at which every gracious Heart trembles, and ought rather to chuſe Baniſhment, Priſon, and Death it ſelf in the moſt terrible form, than Sin, or that which is moſt tempting in Sin, the Pleaſures of it; as Moſes did, Heb. 11. 25.

Secondly, Sin may be conſider'd Effectively, with reſpect to the manifold Miſchiefs and Calamities it produceth in the World, and the ſpiritual and corporeal Evils it infers upon Believers themſelves: Though it cannot damn their Souls, yet it makes War againſt their Souls, and brings them into miſerable Bondage and Captivity, Rom. 7. 23. It wounds their Souls, under which wounds they are feeble and ſore broken; yea, they roar by reaſon of the Diſquietneſs of their Hearts, Pſ. 38. 5, 8. Is War, Captivity, feſtering, painful Wounds, cauſing them to roar, no hurt to Believers? It breaks their very Bones, Pſ. 51. 8. And is that no hurt? It draws off their Minds from God, interrupts their Prayers and Meditations, Rom. 7. 18, 19, 20, 21. And is there no hurt in that? It cauſeth their Graces to decline, wither, and languiſh to that degree, that the things which are in them are ready to die, Rev. 3. 1. and Rev. 2. 4. And is the Loſs of Grace and Spiritual Strength, no hurt to a Believer? It hides the Face of God from them, Iſa 59. 2. And is there no hurt in ſpiritual Withdrawments of God from their Souls? Why then do deſerted Saints ſo bitterly lament and bemoan it? It provokes innumerable Afflictions and Miſeries, which fall upon our Bodies, Relations, Eſtates; and if Sin be the cauſe of all theſe inward and outward Miſeries to the People of God, ſure then there is ſome hurt in Sin, for which the Saints ought to be afraid of it.

Thirdly, Sin may be conſider'd Reductively, as it is over-ruled, reduced, and finally iſſued by the Covenant of Grace. Under this Conſideration of Sin, which rather reſpects the future, than preſent ſtate, the Antinomians only reſpect the hurt or evil of it; over-looking both the former Conſiderations of Sin, which concern the preſent ſtate of Believers, and ſo raſhly pronounce, Sin can do Believers no hurt. An Aſſertion tending to a great deal of Looſeneſs and Licentiouſneſs. A Man drinks deadly Poiſon, and is after many Months recover'd by the Skill of an excellent Phyſician; ſhall we ſay, there was no hurt in it, becauſe the Man died not of it: ſure thoſe fearful Twinges he felt, his Loſs of ſtrength and ſtomach, were hurtful to him, though he eſcaped with Life, and got this advantage by it, to be more wary for ever after. Tantum Religio potuit ſuadere malorum.

And then for other Men's Sins, (which they ſay we need not fear) 'tis an aſſertion againſt all the Laws of Charity. For the Sins of wicked Men eternally damn them: Diſturb the Peace and Order of the World: Draw down National Judgments upon the whole Community: Cauſe Wars, Plagues, Perſecutions, &c. Which Conſiderations of the Sins of others, opened fountains of Tears in David's Eyes, Pſ. 119. 136. cauſed horror to take hold upon him, v. 53. And yet if you will believe the Antinomian Doctrine, Believers have no need to fear, much leſs be in horror (which is the extremity of fear) for other Mens Sins. How is Satan gratified, and temptations to Sin ſtrengthned upon the Souls of Men, by ſuch indiſtinct, unwary, and dangerous Expreſſions as theſe are? A good Intention can be no ſufficient ſalve for ſuch Aſſertions as theſe.

Secondly, 'They tell us, That as the Saints 'need fear no Sin for any hurt it can do them, 'ſo they muſt do no duty for their own good; or 'with an eye to their own Salvation, or Eternal 'Rewards in Heaven.

Refutation. This, as the former, is too generally and indiſtinctly deliver'd. He that diſtinguiſheth well, teacheth well. The confounding of things which ought to be diſtinguiſh'd, eaſily runs Men into the bogs of Errors. Two things ought to have been diſtinguiſh'd here:

1. Ends } in Duties.
2. Self-ends }

Firſt, Ends in Duty; There are two Ends in Duties, one ſupream and ultimate, viz. the glorifying of God, which muſt, and ought to take the firſt place of all other ends. Another ſecondary and ſubordinate, viz. the good and benefit of our ſelves. To invert theſe, and place our own good in the room of God's Glory, is ſinful and unjuſtifiable; and he that aims only at himſelf in Religion, is juſtly cenſured as a mercenary Servant, eſpecially if it be any external good he aims at; but ſpiritual good, eſpecially the enjoyment of God, is ſo involv'd in the other, viz. the Glory of God, that no no Man can rightly take the Lord for his God, but he must take him for his supream Good, and consequently therein may, and must have a due respect to his own Happiness

Secondly, Self-ends must also be distinguished into

1. Corrupt, or carnal Self-ends.
2. Pure and spiritual Self-ends.

As to carnal and corrupt Self-ends, inviting and moving Men to the Performance of Religious Duties: when these are the only Ends Men aim at, they bewray the Hypocrisy of the Heart: and accordingly God charges Hypocrisy upon such Persons, Hos. 7. 14. They have not cried unto me with their Heart, when they howled upon their Beds: they assemble themselves for Corn and Wine, &c. God reckons not the most solemn Duties animated by such Ends, to be done unto him, Zech. 7. 5. Did ye at all fast to me?

But beside these, Man hath a best self, a spiritual self, to regard in Duty, viz. The conformity of his Soul to God in holiness, and the perfect fruition of God in Glory. Such holy self-ends as these, are often commended, but no where condemned in Scripture. 'Twas the Encomium of Moses, That he had Respect unto the Recompence of Reward, Heb. 11. 26. These ordinate respects to our spiritual best self, are so far from being our sin, that God both appoints and allows them for great uses and advantages to his People in their way to Glory. They are (1.) Singular Encouragements to the Saints under Persecution, Streights and Distresses, Heb. 10. 34. And to that end Christ proposes them, Luke 12. 32. And so the best of Saints have made use of them, 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. (2.) They are Motives and Incentives to Praise and Thankfulness, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. 1 Col. 12. (3.) They stir up the Saints to chearful and vigorous Industry for God, Col. 3. 23, 24. 1 Cor. 15. 58.

Now to cut off from Religion all these spiritual and excellent Self-respects, and to make them our sins, and marks of our Hypocrisy, is an Error very injurious to the Gospel, and to the Souls of Men. For (1.) it crosses the strain of the Gospel, which commands us to strive for our Salvation, Luke 13. 24, 25. Phil. 2. 12. 1 Tim. 4. 16. (2.) It blames that in the Saints as sinful, which the Scripture notes as their excellency, and records to their Praise, Heb. 11. 26. (3.) It makes the Laws of Christianity to thwart and cross the very fundamental Law of our Creation, which inclines and obliges all Men to intend their own Felicity. And on this Account not only our Antinomians are blame-worthy, but others also, who are far enough from their Opinion, who urge Humiliation for Sin beyond the Staple: teaching Men, they are not humbled enough till they be content to be damned. (4.) It unreasonably supposes a Christian may not do that for his own Soul, which he daily doth, and is bound to do for other Mens Souls, viz. to pray, preach, exhort, and reprove for their Salvation.

Error IX. ‘ They will not allow the ‘ New Covenant to be properly made with ‘ us, but with Christ for us. And some of them affirm, That this Covenant is ‘ all of it a Promise, having no Condition ‘ upon our part. They acknowledge indeed ‘ Faith, Repentance and Obedience, to be Conditions, ‘ but say they are not Conditions on our part, but on ‘ Christ's; and consequently affirm, That he repented, ‘ believed, and obeyed for us.

Vide Saltmarsh of Free-grace, pag. 126, 127.

Refutation. (1.) The confounding of distinct Covenants, leads them into this Error; we acknowledge there was a Covenant properly made with Christ alone, which we call the Covenant of Redemption. This Covenant indeed, though it were made for us, yet was it not made with us. It had its Condition, and that Condition was laid only upon Christ: viz. That he should assume our Nature, and pour out his Soul unto Death, which Condition he was solely concerned to perform; but besides this, there is a Covenant of Grace made with him, and with all Believers in him: with him primarily as the Head, with them as the Members, who personally come into this Covenant, when they come into Union with him by Faith. This Covenant of Grace is not made with Christ alone, personally consider'd, but with Christ, and all that are his, mystically considered, and is properly made with all Believers in Christ; and therefore it is called their Covenant, Zech. 9. 11. As for thee also, by the Blood of thy Covenant I have sent forth thy Prisoners out of the Pit wherein is no water. So when God entred into the Covenant of Grace with Abraham, Gen. 17. 7. I will establish my Covenant (saith he) between me and thee, and thy Seed after thee. So when he took the People of Israel into this Covenant, Ezek. 16. 8. I sware unto thee (saith he) and entred into a Covenant with thee, and thou becamest mine.

This Covenant of Grace made with Believers in Christ, is not the same, nor must it be confounded with the Covenant of Redemption made with Christ before the World began. They are Two distinct Covenants; for in the Covenant of Grace, into which Believers are taken, there is a Mediator, and this Mediator is Christ himself; but in the other Covenant of Redemption there neither was, nor could be any Mediator, which manifestly distinguishes them. Besides, In the Covenant of Grace Christ bequeaths manifold and rich Legacies, as he is the Testator; but no Man gives a Legacy to himself. This Covenant is really and properly made with every Believer as he is a Member of Jesus Christ the Head; and they are truly and properly fœderates with God: the Covenant binds them to their Duties, and encourages them therein by promises of Strength to be deriv'd from Christ to enable them thereunto.

(2.) We thankfully acknowledge, That the Glory of the New Covenant is chiefly discovered in the Promises thereof: upon the best Promises it is established. And all the Promises are reducible to the Covenant. They meet, and center in it as the Rivers in the Sea, or Beams in the Sun. But yet we cannot say, that nothing but Promises is contain'd in this Covenant: for there are Duties required by it, as well as Mercies promised in it.

Nor may we say, That those Duties required by it, are required only to be performed by Christ, and not by us; but they are required to be performed by us in his Strength. Nor is it Christ that repents and believes for us, but we our selves are to believe and repent in the Strength of his Grace. And 'till we do so actually in our own Persons, we have no part or portion in the Blessings and Mercies of this Covenant. If Christ by believing for us, give us an actual Right and Title to the Promises and Blessings of the New Covenant, then it will unavoidably follow,

(1.) That Men, who never repented for one Sin in all their Lives, may be, nay, certainly are pardoned doned as much as the greateſt Penitents in the World; becauſe though they never repented themſelves, yet Chriſt repented for them: expreſly contrary to his own Words, Luke 13. 3. Except ye repent, ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh. And contrary to his own eſtabliſhed Order, Luke 29. 47. Acts 3. 19.

(2.) It will alſo follow, That Unbelievers, who never had Union with Chriſt by one vital Act of Faith in all their Lives, may be, nay certainly ſhall be ſaved, as well as thoſe that are actual Believers: becauſe though they be Unbelievers in themſelves, yet Chriſt believed for them: expreſly contrary to Mark 16. 16. He that believeth not, ſhall be damned. John 3. 36. He that believes not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life; but the Wrath of God abideth on him. And Luke 12. 46. He will cut him in ſunder, and will appoint him his portion with Unbelievers.

(3.) It will alſo follow from hence, That Men may continue in a ſtate of Diſobedience all their Days, and yet may be ſav'd as well as the moſt obedient Souls in the World: expreſly contrary to Eph. 5. 6. Let no Man deceive you with vain Words; for becauſe of theſe things, cometh the Wrath of God upon the Children of Diſobedience. And Rom. 2. 8. But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the Truth, but obey Unrighteouſneſs, Indignation and Wrath. And 1 Pet. 4. 17. What ſhall the End of them be that obey not the Goſpel of God!

This Language ſounds ſtrange and harſh to the Ears of Chriſtians; a repenting Chriſt ſaving the impenitent Sinner: A believing Chriſt ſaving Unbelievers: An obeying Chriſt ſaving obſtinate and diſobedient Wretches. Whither doth ſuch Doctrine tend, but to encourage and fix Men in their Impenitence, Unbelief, and Diſobedience? But the Lord grant no poor Sinner in the World may truſt to this, or build his Hopes of Eternal Life upon ſuch a looſe ſandy Foundation as this is. Reader, All that Chriſt hath done without thee, will not, cannot be effectual to thy Salvation, unleſs Repentance, Faith, and Obedience be wrought by the Spirit in thy Soul. 'Tis Chriſt in thee that is the Hope of Glory, Col. 1. 27. Beware therefore in what Ground thou buildeſt for Eternity.

Error X. 'They deny Sanctification to be the Evidence 'of Juſtification; and deridingly tell us, This is to light 'a Candle to the Sun; and the darker our Sanctification 'is, the brighter our Juſtification is.

Refutation. I am not at all ſurprized at this ſtrange and abſonous Language. 'Tis a falſe and dangerous Concluſion, yet ſuch as naturally reſults from, and by a kind of neceſſity follows out of their other Errors. For if the Elect be all juſtified from Eternity and that neither Repentance, Faith, or Obedience be required of us in the Covenant of Grace; but were all required of, and performed by Chriſt, who repented, believed, and obeyed for us; then indeed I cannot underſtand what Relation our Sanctification hath to our Juſtification; or how it ſhould be an Evidence, Mark, or Sign thereof: or what regard is due from Chriſtians to any Grace or Work of the Spirit wrought in them, to clear up their Intereſt in Chriſt to them. For we being in Chriſt, and in a ſtate of Juſtification, before we were naturally born, we muſt neceſſarily be ſo before we be regenerated, or new-born; and conſequently, no work of Grace wrought in us, or holy Duties performed by us, can be evidential of that which from Eternity was done before them, and without them.

(1.) I grant indeed, That many vain Profeſſors do cheat and deceive themſelves by falſe unſcriptural Signs and Evidences, as well as by true ones miſapplied.

(2.) I grant alſo, That by reaſon of the Deceitfulneſs of the Heart, Inſtability of the Thoughts, ſimilar Works of common Grace in Hypocrites, Diſtractions of the World, Wiles of Satan, Weakneſs of Grace, and Prevalency of Corruptions: The clearing up of our Juſtification by our Sanctification, is a Work that meets with great and manifold Difficulties, which are the things that moſt Chriſtians complain of.

(3.) I alſo grant, That the Evidence of our Sanctification in this, or any other Method, is not eſſential, and abſolutely neceſſary to the Being of a Chriſtian. A Man may live in Chriſt, and yet not know his Intereſt in him, or Relation to him, Iſa. 50. 10. Some Chriſtians, like Children in the Cradle, live, but underſtand not that they live: are born to a great Inheritance, but have no knowledge of it, or preſent Comfort in it.

(4.) I will further grant, That the Eye of a Chriſtian may be too intently fixed upon his own gracious Qualification; and being wholly taken up in the reflex Acts of Faith, may too much neglect the direct Acts of Faith upon Chriſt, to the great Detriment of his Soul.

But all this notwithſtanding, The examination of our Juſtification by our Sanctification, is not only a lawful, and poſſible, but a very excellent and neceſſary Work and Duty. 'Tis the courſe that Chriſtians have taken in all Ages. And that which God hath abundantly bleſſed to the joy and encouragement of their Souls.

He hath furniſhed our Souls to this end with noble ſelf-reflecting Powers and Abilities. He hath anſwerably furniſhed his Word with variety of Marks and Signs for the ſame End and Uſe. Some of theſe Marks are excluſive to detect and bar bold preſumptuous Pretenders, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Rev. 21. 8, 27. Some are incluſive Marks, to meaſure the ſtrength and growth of Grace by, Rom. 4. 20. And others are poſitive Signs, flowing out of the very eſſence of Grace, or the New-Creature. 1 John 4. 13. Hereby we know that we dwell in him, and he in us, becauſe he hath given us of his Spirit.

He hath expreſly commanded us to examine and prove our ſelves: upbraided the Neglecters of that Duty, and enforced their Duty upon them by a thundring Argument, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves whether ye be in the Faith, prove your own ſelves; know ye not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be Reprobates. In a Word, For this End and Purpoſe, amongſt others, were the Scriptures written, 1 John 5. 13. Theſe things have I written to you, that believe on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal Life. And therefore to neglect this Duty, is exceeding dangerous; but to deny, and deride it, intolerable. It may juſtly be feared, ſuch Men will be drown'd in Perdition, who fall into the Waters, by making a Bridge over them with their own Shadows

For my own part, I verily believe that the ſweeteſt Hours Chriſtians enjoy in this World, is, when they retire into their Cloſets, and ſit there concealed from all Eyes, but him that made them; looking now into the Bible, then into their own Hearts, and then up to God; cloſely following the grand Debate about their Intereſt in Chriſt, 'till they have brought it to the happy deſired Iſſue.

And

And now, Reader for a cloſe of all, I call the Searcher of Hearts to witneſs, That I have not intermedled with theſe Controverſies of Antipædo-Baptiſm, and Antinomianiſm, out of any Delight I take in Polemical Studies, or an unpeaceable contradicting Humour, but out of pure zeal for the Glory and Truths of God; for the Vindication and Defence whereof, I have been neceſſarily engaged therein. And having diſcharged my Duty thus far, I now reſolve to return (if God will permit me) to my much ſweeter and more agreeable Studies; ſtill maintaining my Chriſtian Charity for thoſe whom I oppoſe; not doubting but I ſhall meet thoſe in Heaven, from whom I am forced in leſſer things to diſſent and differ upon Earth.

Goſpel-Unity recommended to the Churches of Chriſt.

In a SERMON Preached by J. F. Author of the foregoing Diſcourſe.

From 1 Cor. I. 10. Now I beſeech you, Brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, That ye all ſpeak the ſame thing; and that there be no Diviſions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the ſame mind, and in the ſame Judgment.

WHEN I conſider this Healing and Uniting Text, and the ſcandalous Diviſions of the Congregations to which I recommend it, I could chuſe rather to comment thereon with Tears, than Words. 'Tis juſt matter of Lamentation, to think what feeble influences ſuch Divine and Pathetical Exhortations have upon the Minds and Hearts of profeſſed Chriſtians. But it is not Lamentations, but proper Counſels, and Convictions obey'd muſt do the Work.

The Primitive and Pureſt Churches of Chriſt conſiſted of imperfect Members, who notwithſtanding they were knit together by the ſame internal Bond of the Spirit, and the ſame external Bonds of common Profeſſion, and common Danger, and enjoyed extraordinary Helps for uniting in the Preſence and Doctrine of the Apoſtles among them; yet quickly diſcover'd a Schiſmatical Spirit, dividing both in Judgment and Affection, to the great Injury of Religion, and Grief of the Apoſtles Spirits. To check and heal this growing-Evil in the Church at Corinth, the Apoſtle addreſſes his Pathetical Exhortation to them, and to all future Churches of Chriſt, whom it equally concerns in the Words of my Text. Now I beſeech you, Brethren, &c. Where note,

1. The Duty exhorted to.
2. The Arguments enforcing the Duty.

1. The Duty exhorted to; namely, Unity; the Beauty, Strength, and Glory, as well as the Duty of a Church. This Unity he deſcribes two ways; 1. As it is excluſive of its Oppoſite, Schiſm or Diviſion. All Rents, and raſh Separations, are contrary to it, and deſtructive of it: I beſeech you, brethren that there be no Diviſions [or Schiſms] among you. 2. As it is incluſive of all that belongs to it; namely, the Harmony and Agreement of their Judgments, Hearts, and Language. (1.) That ye all ſpeak the ſame Thing. (2.) That ye be perfectly joyned together in one Mind. And (3.) In the ſame Judgment. This threefold Union in Judgment, Affection, and Language, includes all that belongs to Chriſtian Concord, makes the Saints Σύμψυχοι, Men of one Heart and Soul, the lovelieſt Sight this World affords, Acts 2. 46, 47.

(2.) The Arguments enforcing this Duty upon them, come next under conſideration. And theſe are three. (1.) I beſeech you. (2.) I beſeech you, Brethren. (3.) I beſeech you, Brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe Arguments are not of equal force and efficacy. The firſt is great: The ſecond greater; The laſt the moſt efficacious and irreſiſtible of all the reſt: But all together ſhould come with ſuch Power, and irreſiſtible Efficacy upon the Judgments, Conſciences, and Hearts of Chriſtians, as ſhould perfectly knit them together, and defeat all the Deſigns of Satan and his Agents without them, or of their own Corruptions within them, to rend aſunder their Affections or Communion.

Arg. 1. And firſt, he enforces the Duty of Unity by a ſolemn Apoſtolical Obſecration and Adjuration; I beſeech you, ſaith he; he had Power to command them to this Duty, and threaten them for the neglect of it: He had in readineſs to revenge all Diſobedience, and might have ſhaken that Rod over them; but he chuſeth rather to intreat and beſeech them: Now I beſeech you, Brethren; Here you have, as it were, the great Apoſtle upon his Knees before them, meekly and Pathetically entreating them to be at perfect Unity among themſelves. 'Tis the Entreaty of their Spiritual Father, that had begotten them to Chriſt. Now [I] beſeech you, Brethren: I, who was the Inſtrument in Chriſt's Hand of your Converſion to him: I, that have planted you a Goſpel Church, and aſſiduouſly watered you: I beſeech you by all the Spiritual Ties and Endearments betwixt me and you, that there be no diviſions among you. This is the firſt Argument, wrapt up in a ſolemn Obſecration.

Next, he enforces the Duty of Unity, by the nearneſs of their Relation; I beſeech you, Brethren: Brotherhood is an endearing thing, and naturally draws Affection and Unity with it, 1 Pet. 3. 8. Be ye all of one Mind; having Compaſſion one of another; love as Brethren; be pitiful, be courteous; ye are the Children of one Father, Joint-heirs of one and the ſame Inheritance. To ſee an Egyptian ſmiting an Iſraelite, is no ſtrange ſight; but to ſee one Iſraelite quarrelling with another, is moſt unnatural and uncomely: The nearer the Relation, the ſtronger the Affection; How good and how pleaſant is it, (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) for Brethren to dwell together in Unity! Pſal. 133. 1.

But the greateſt Argument of all is the laſt, viz. In the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. In this Name he beſeeches and entreats them to be at perfect Unity among themſelves. In the former he ſweetly inſinuated the Duty by a loving Compellation, but here he ſets it home by a ſolemn Adjuration; I beſeech you, Brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: That is to ſay, (1.) For Chriſt's Sake, or for the Love of Chriſt; by all that Chriſt hath done, ſuffered, or purchaſed for you; and as Chriſt is dear and precious to you, let there be no Diviſions. If you have any Love for Chriſt, don't grieve him, and obſtruct his great Deſign in the World, by your ſcandalous Schiſms. Mr. John Fox never denied a Beggar that asked an Alms of him, for Chriſt Jeſus Sake.

2. In

2. In the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; that is in the Authority of Chriſt; for ſo his Name alſo ſignifies, 1 Cor. 5. 4. and it is as if he had ſaid, If you reverence the Supreme Authority and Sovereignty of Chriſt, which is the Fountain out of which ſo many ſolemn Commands of Unity do flow; then ſee, as you will anſwer it to him at the Great Day, that ye be perfectly joined together in one Mind, and in one Judgment. The Point will be this;

Doct. Unity amongſt Believers, eſpecially in particular Church-Relation, is as deſirable a Mercy, as it is a neceſſary and indiſpenſable Duty.

How deſirable a Mercy it is, and how neceſſary a Duty, let the ſame Apoſtle, who preſſeth it upon the Corinthians in my Text, be heard again, enforcing the ſame Duty with the ſame Warmth, upon the Church at Philippi, chap. 2. v. 1, 2. If there be therefore any Conſolation in Chriſt, if any Comfort of Love, if any Fellowſhip of the Spirit, if any Bowels of Mercies, fulfil ye my Joy, that ye be like minded, having the ſame Love, being of one Accord, of one Mind. In handling this Point, I will ſhew,

1. What Unity among Believers is.
2. How the neceſſity and deſirableneſs of it may be evinced.
3. And then lay down the Motives and Directions about it.

(1.) What Unity amongſt Believers is, and more particularly ſuch Believers as ſtand in particular Church-Relation to each other.

There is a twofold Union, one Myſtical, betwixt Chriſt and Believers; another Moral, betwixt Believers themſelves; Faith knits them all to Chriſt, and then Love knits them one to another. Their common Relation to Chriſt their Head, endears them to each other as Fellow-Members in the ſame Body. Hence they become Sanguine Chriſti conglutinati; Glued together by the Blood of Chriſt. Union with Chriſt is fundamental to all Union among the Saints. Perfect Union would flow from this their common Union with Chriſt their Head, were they not here in an imperfect State, where their Corruptions diſturb and hinder it; and as ſoon as they ſhall attain unto compleat Sanctification, they ſhall alſo attain unto perfect Unity. How their Unity with one another comes by way of neceſſary Reſultancy from their Union with Chriſt; and how this Unity among themſelves ſhall at laſt ariſe to its juſt Perfection, that one Text plainly diſcovers, John 17. 23. I in them, and thou in me; that they may be made perfect in one, &c.

Unity amongſt thoſe that hold not the Head, is rather a Conſpiracy than a Goſpel-unity. Believers and Unbelievers may have a Political or Civil Union; but there's no Spiritual-unity, but what flows from joint-membership in Chriſt. I will not deny, but in particular Churches there may be, and ſtill are ſome Hypocrites, who hold Communion with the Saints, and pretend to belong unto Chriſt, the ſame Head with them; but as they have no real Union with Chriſt, ſo neither have they any ſincere Affection to the Saints; and theſe, for the moſt part, are they that raiſe Tumults and Diviſions in the Church, as diſloyal Subjects do in the Commonwealth. Of theſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Joh. 2. 19. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us; but they went out, that it might be made manifeſt that they were not all of us.

Sincere Chriſtianity holds faſt the Soul by a firm Bond of Life to the truly Chriſtian Community, wherein they reap thoſe ſpiritual Pleaſures and Advantages which aſſure their Continuance therein to a great Degree: but thoſe that joyn with the Church upon carnal and external Inducements, make little conſcience of rending from it; and God permits their Schiſmatical Spirits thus to act, for the diſcovering of their Hypocriſy, or (as the Text ſpeaks) that it might be made manifeſt they were not of us; as alſo that they which are approv'd, may by their Conſtancy be alſo made manifeſt, 1 Cor. 11. 19.

It hath indeed been ſaid, That it's never better with the Church, than when there are moſt Hypocrites in it; but then you muſt underſtand it only with reſpect to the external tranquility and proſperity of the Church; for as to its real, ſpiritual Advantage, they add nothing: And therefore it behoves Church-Officers and Members to be exceeding careful (eſpecially in Times of Liberty and Proſperity) how they admit Members, as the Jews in Solomon's time were of admitting Proſelytes. 'Tis ſaid, Amos 3. 3. How can two walk together except they be agreed? I deny not but Perſons that differ in ſome leſſer Points, as to their Judgment, may, and ought to be one in Affection: But of this I am ſure, that when Sanctified Perſons, agreed in Judgments and Principles, do walk together under pious and judicious Church Officers, in tender Affection, and the exerciſe of all Duties tending to mutual Edification, glorifying God with one Mouth, Rom. 15. 6. and cleaving together with oneneſs of Heart, Acts 2. 42. This is ſuch a Church-unity as anſwers Chriſt's end in the Inſtitution of particular Churches, and greatly tends to their own Comfort, and the Propagation of Chriſtianity in the World. Tongue-unity flows from Heart-unity; Heart-unity, in a great meaſure from Head-unity; and all three from Union with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The Diviſions of our Tongues come moſtly from the Diviſions of our Hearts: Were Hearts agreed, Tongues would quickly be agreed; and then what bleſſed times might be expected? And ſo much briefly for the nature of Unity. Next

(2.) Let us evince both the neceſſity and deſirableneſs of this Unity among Believers; and this will appear in a threefold reſpect: viz.

1. With reſpect to the Glory of God.
2. The Comfort and Benefit of our own Souls.
3. The Converſion and Salvation of the World.

(1) With reſpect to the Glory of God. The manifeſtative Glory of God (which is all the Glory we are capable of giving him, is the very end of our Being, and ſhould be dearer to us than our Lives) is exceedingly advanced by the Unity of his People. Hence is the Apoſtle's Prayer, Rom. 15. 5, 6. Now the God of Patience and Conſolation grant you to be like minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus, that you may with one mind and one mouth glorifie God. 'Tis highly remarkable, That the Apoſtle in this Petition for the Unity of the Saints, doth not only deſcribe that Unity he prays for, one Mouth and one Mind, and ſhews how much God would be glorified by ſuch an Union; but he alſo addreſſes himſelf to God for it, under theſe two remarkable Titles, the God of Patience and Conſolation; thereby intimating two Things; (1.) How great need and exerciſe there is of Patience in maintaining Unity among the Saints; They muſt bear one another's Burthens; they muſt give allowance for mutual Infirmities; for the Church

Church here is not an Aſſembly of Spirits of juſt Men made perfect. The Unity of the Saints therefore greatly depends upon the exerciſe of Patience one towards another; and this he begs the God of Patience to give them. And to endear this Grace of Patience to them, He (2.) joyns with it another Title of God, viz. the God of Conſolation, wherein he points them to that abundant Comfort which would reſult unto themſelves from ſuch a bleſſed Unity continued and maintained by the mutual Exerciſes of Patience and Forbearance one towards another. And to ſet home all, he lays before them the Pattern and Example of Chriſt: The God of Patience and Conſolation grant you to be like minded according to Chriſt. How many thouſand Infirmities and Failures in Duty, doth Chriſt find in all his People? Notwithſtanding which, he maintaineth Union and Communion with them; and if they, after his Example, ſhall do ſo likewiſe with one another, God will be eminently glorified therein. This will evidence both the Truth and Excellency of the Chriſtian Religion, which ſo firmly knits the Hearts of its Profeſſors together.

(2.) Secondly, The Neceſſity and Deſirableneſs of this Unity farther appears, by the deep Intereſt that the Comfort and Benefit of our Souls have in it. A great Example hereof we have in Acts 2. 46, 47. Oh! what Cheerineſs, Strength and Pleaſure, did the Primitive Chriſtians reap from the Unity of their Hearts in the Ways and Worſhip of God? Next unto the Pleaſure and Delight of immediate Communion with God himſelf, and the ſhedding abroad of his Love into our Hearts by the Holy Ghoſt; none like that which ariſeth from the harmonious Exerciſes of the Graces of the Saints in their mutual Duties and Communions one with another. How are their Spirits dilated and refreſhed by it? What a lively Emblem is here of Heaven! the Courts of Princes afford no ſuch Delights. Whereas on the other ſide, when Schiſms have rent Churches a-ſunder, they go away from each other exaſperated, grieved, and wounded, crying out, Oh, that I had a Cottage in the Wilderneſs! or, Oh, that I had the Wings of a Dove, that I might flee away, and be at reſt.

3. Laſtly, The Neceſſity and Deſirableneſs of this Union further appears with reſpect unto the World, who are allured to Chriſt by it, and ſcared off from Religion by the Feuds and Diviſions of Profeſſors. To this the Prayer of Chriſt hath reſpect, John 17. 23. That they may be made perfect in one, that the World may know that thou haſt ſent me, q. d. This, O Father, will be a convincing Evidence to the World, of the Divinity both of my Perſon and Doctrine, and a great Ordinance for their Converſion to me, when they ſhall ſee my People cleaving inſeparably unto me by Faith, and to one another by Love. And on the other ſide, it will be a fatal Stumbling-block in the way of their Converſion, to obſerve my Followers biting and devouring, rending and tearing one another.

Mr. Joh. Cotton. A Learned and Judicious Divine Commenting upon thoſe Words, Cant. 2. 7. I charge you, O ye Daughters of Jeruſalem, by the Roes, and by the Hinds of the Field, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my Love till he pleaſe; gives the ſenſe thus; By Roes and Hinds of the Field (ſaith he) underſtand weak Comers on towards Chriſt. Perſons under ſome preparatory Works towards Converſion, who are as ſhy and as timorous as Roes and Hinds of the Field; and as they will be ſcared by the Yelp of a Dog, or Sound of a Gun; ſo will theſe at any offenſive Miſcarriages in the Churches of Chriſt.

Alexander Severus, finding two Chriſtians contending with one another, commanded them that they ſhould not preſume to take the Name of Chriſt upon them any longer; for (ſaith he) you greatly diſhonour your Maſter, whoſe Diſciples you profeſs your ſelves to be. And thus briefly of the Nature of Church-unity, and the neceſſity and deſireableneſs thereof among all that ſtand in that Relation.

Uſe. The only Improvement I ſhall make of this Point, ſhall be for,

1. Exhortation to Unity.
2. Directions for the maintaining of it.

The firſt Uſe for Exhortation.

Uſe 1. And firſt, having briefly diſcourſed the Nature, Neceſſity, and Deſirableneſs of Unity among all Chriſtians, and eſpecially of thoſe in particular Church-relation, I do in the Bowels of Chriſt, and in the Words of his Apoſtle, Phil. 2. 1, 2. earneſtly and humbly intreat all my Brethren, That if there be any Conſolation in Chriſt, if any Comfort of Love, if any Fellowſhip of the Spirit, if any Bowels of Mercies, fulfil ye my Joy; that ye be like-minded, having the ſame love, being of one accord, of one mind. He ſpeaketh not as one doubting, but as one diſputing, when he ſaith, If there be any Conſolation in Chriſt: And 'tis as if he had ſaid, I paſſionately and earneſtly intreat you by all that comfort and joy you have found in your mutual Communion from Chriſt, and his Ordinances, wherein you have comfortably walked together, by all that comfort reſulting from the mutual exerciſes and fruits of chriſtian Love; by the unſpeakable joys and delights the Spirit of God hath ſhed down upon you, whilſt you walked in Unity, in the ways of your Duty; by all the bowels of compaſſion and mercy you have for your ſelves, for your Brethren, or for the poor carnal World, who are in hazard of being deſtroyed by your Diviſions: Or for me, your Miniſter, whoſe joy and comfort is bound up in your Unity and Stability; That ye be like-minded, having the ſame love, being of one accord, of one mind. What Heart that hath one ſpark of the Love of Chriſt in it, yields not to ſuch an Exhortation as this, enforced by the Conſolation of Chriſt, Comfort of Love, Fellowſhip of the Spirit, and Bowels of Mercy? More particularly, ſuffer ye this Word of Exhortation from the Conſideration of the following Arguments or Motives, what diſtances ſoever your are at from one another.

Motive I. Reflect upon the late long and continued troubles you have been under, as the juſt rebukes of God for your former Contentions and Follies.

I need not tell you, you are but lately pluck'd as Brands out of the burning, and that the ſmell of Fire is yet upon you. The time lately was, when you gat your Bread with the peril of your lives; when God handed it to you behind your Enemies backs; when your Eyes did not, could not behold your former Teachers, except in Corners or Priſons, when your Souls were ſorrowful for the ſolemn Aſſemblies; when you mournfully confeſſed before the Lord, that theſe were the juſt and deſerved Puniſhments for your Wantonneſs, Barrenneſs, and provoking Animoſities. Theſe Things were not only the matter of your humble Confeſſions; but the Reformation of thoſe Evils was what you ſolemnly promiſed the Lord, when he ſhould again reſtore you to your Liberty. What! And is the Rod no ſooner off your Backs, but you will to the old Work again? read Ezra 9. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. and view the Face of this Sin in that Glaſs. Have we been ſo many Years in the Furnace, and our Droſs not purged? Such ſharp and long-continued Afflictions produce no better Effects? It may be ſaid of our Troubles, as of the Siege of Tyrus, Ezek. 29. 18. Every Head was made bald, and every Shoulder peeled. Some of us went young Men into Perſecution and Trouble, and are come forth old; and which is worſt of all, we bring our old Corruptions forth with us. Either we did confeſs and bewail theſe Sins in the days of our Affliction, or we did not. If we did not, we were incorrigible, and defeated the Deſign of the Rod. If we did, our Confeſſions and Sorrow were either ſincere or hypocritical: If ſincere, certainly they would effectually caution us, that we return not again to folly, Ezra 9. 13, 14. After all that is come upon us for our evil Deeds, and for our great treſpaſs, ſeeing that thou, our God, haſt puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities deſerve; and haſt given us ſuch a deliverance as this; Should we again break thy Commandment?

Motive II. Conſider the common imminent danger that now threatens us, both from Enemies upon our Borders, and within our own Bowels. The Canaanites are in the Land, let there be no Strife therefore betwixt Brethren; our natural, civil, and ſpiritual Comforts are all ſhaking and trembling about us. If wanton Children fall out and quarrel at a full Table, our Enemies ſtand ready to take away the Cloth. They are not ſo far from us, and out of Sight, but God can call them in a few Hours to end the Strife amongſt us. We act not only beneath the Rules of Religion but of Reaſon alſo. Brute Creatures will depoſe their very Antipathies in a common Danger. Mr. Tho. Fuller in his Hiſtory of the Worthies of England, tells us, That when the Severn-Sea overflowed the lower Grounds of Somerſetſhire, it was obſerved that Dogs, and Hares, and Cats, and Rats, ſwimming to the Burroughs and Hills to preſerve their Lives, ſtood quiet during the Flood; not offering the leaſt Injury one to another. 'Tis pity that Senſe ſhould do more with Beaſts, than Reaſon and Religion with Men.

Motive III. Reflect upon the Scandal your Diviſions give to the World; how it hardens and prejudices them againſt Religion and Reformation. And thus the Souls of Men are eternally hazarded by the Follies of Profeſſors: They are ready enough to take Occaſions againſt Religion, where none are given, and much more to improve them where Occaſions are given. Woe unto the World (ſaith Chriſt) becauſe of Offences: for it muſt needs be that Offences come; but woe to that Man by whom the Offence cometh, Mat. 18. 7. The Woe is not only denounced againſt the Taker, but the Giver of the Offence. It fixes ſuch Prejudices in the Hearts of carnal Men, that ſome of them will never have good Thoughts of Religion any more: but utterly diſtaſt and nauſeate thoſe Aſſemblies and Ordinances from which their Converſion may with greateſt Probability be expected.

How long and how anxiouſly have we prayed, and waited for ſuch a Day of Goſpel-liberty as we now enjoy? It hath been one of the ſoreſt Afflictions we have grapled with in the Days of our Reſtraint, that we could not ſpeak unto the carnal World. If we had Opportunity to ſpeak at all, it was for the moſt part to ſuch as ſtood in need of Edification more than of Converſion. God hath now, beyond Thoughts of moſt Hearts, opened to us a Door of Liberty to Preach, and for all that will, to hear. Some Fruits we have already ſeen, and more we expect. The Children are as it were coming to the Birth, and will you obſtruct it? Will you give the Goſpel a miſcarrying Womb? Be Inſtruments at once, by your Contentions, to deſtroy the Souls of Men, and break the very Hearts of your Miniſters, whoſe greateſt Comfort is bound up in the Succeſs of their Labours? Brethren, I beſeech you read theſe Words as if they were delivered to you upon my bended Knees; I beſeech you for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt's Sake, and for the Hopes Sake of ſaving the precious immortal Souls of Men; and for your poor Miniſters Sake, who have ſcarce any Thing beſides the Fruits of their Labours, to recompence their long-continued and grievous Sufferings, depoſe your Animoſities, maintain the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace; help us, but don't hinder us in our hard Labours. What good will our Lives do us, if we muſt labour in vain, and ſpend our Strength for nought? We find it difficult enough to perſwade Sinners to come unto Chriſt, when no ſuch Stumbling-blocks are laid in the Way; the Counter-pleas of Satan, the Unbelief and Senſualities of unſanctified Nature, are Difficulties too great for us to grapple with; but if to theſe muſt be added Prejudices againſt Religion, from your dividing Luſts, and ſcandalous Breaches, what Hope then remains? If you have no Pity for your ſelves, pity periſhing Souls, and pity your poor diſcouraged Miniſters; have a Care you make us not to groan to God againſt you; or if that be a ſmall thing in your Eyes, have a Care leſt the Blood of Souls be charged to your Account in the Great Day. Are there none in the Towns or Neighbourhoods where you live? Are you ſure there are none that have hopeful Inclinations towards Religion? Deſires and Purpoſes to attend on the ſame Means of Grace you ſit under, who will charge the Occaſion of their Damnation upon you at the Bar of Chriſt, and ſay, Lord, we had ſome weak Convictions upon our Conſciences, that we needed a rouzing and ſearching Miniſter; we were convinced that the profane and carnal World, among whom we had our Converſation, were not in the right Path that leadeth to Salvation! We felt in our ſelves Inclinations to caſt off our old Companions, and aſſociate with thoſe that profeſſed more Strictneſs and Holineſs, and place our ſelves under the moſt fruitful and advantageous Miniſtry, and accordingly improved Opportunities to get acquaintance with them; but when we came nearer to them, we found ſuch Wrath and Envy, ſuch Wranglings and Diviſions, ſuch undermining and ſupplanting each others Reputation; ſuch Whiſperings and Tale-bearings, ſuch malicious Aggravations and Improvements of common Failings and Infirmities, ſuch Covetouſneſs and Wordlineſs, ſuch Pride and Vanity, as gave us ſuch a Diſguſt and Offence at the Ways of Reformation, that we could never more be reconciled to them. Beware, I ſay, how you incurr the Guilt of ſuch a dreadful Charge as this, by giving Liberty to ſuch Luſts and Paſſions under a Profeſſion of Religion, and Pretence to Reformation.

Motive IV. Conſider the Contrariety of ſuch Practices to that ſolemn and fervent Prayer of Jeſus Chriſt, recorded in John 17. 'Tis highly remarkable, how in that Prayer, which he poured out a little before his Death with ſuch a mighty Pathos, and fervency of Spirit, he inſiſts upon nothing more than Unity among his People. He returns upon his Father again and again, for the obtaining of this one thing: Four times doth he beg for Unity among them, and every time he ſeems to riſe higher and higher, beſeeching his Father, (1.) That they may be one. (2.) That they may be one in us. (3.) That they may be one as thou and I are one. And Laſtly, That they may be made perfect in one: By all this ſhewing how intent his Spirit was upon this one thing.

Brethren, If you would ſtudy how to fruſtrate the Deſign, and grieve the Heart of your Lord Jeſus Chriſt (to whom you profeſs Love and Obedience) you cannot take a readier way to do it, than by breaking the Bonds of Unity among your ſelves. I beſeech you therefore in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath ſo earneſtly prayed for the Unity of his People, That ye be perfectly joined together in one Heart, and in one Mind, as the Text ſpeaks.

Motive V. Conſider how directly your Diviſions croſs and fruſtrate the Deſign and End of Church-Fellowſhip which is inſtituted for the Improvement of each others Graces, and helping on the Mortification of each others Corruptions.

God hath diſtributed variety of Gifts and Graces in different Degrees amongſt his People; the Improvement of theſe Gifts and Graces to the Glory of God, and our mutual Edification, is the very Scope and End of particular Church-fellowſhip and Communion: every Man hath his proper Gift of God, and (as a late Worthy Notes) the Gifts and Graces of all, are this Way made uſeful and beneficial. Job was exemplary for Plainneſs and Patience: Moſes for Faithfulneſs and Meekneſs: Joſiah for Tenderneſs and a melting Spirit: Athanaſius was Prudent and Active: Baſil Heavenly and of a ſweet Spirit: Chryſoſtom Laborious, and without Affectation: Ambroſe Reſolved and Grave. One hath Quickneſs of of Parts; but not ſo ſolid a Judgment: Another is Solid, but not Ready and Preſential. One hath a good Wit, another a better Memory, a third excells them both in Utterance. One is Zealous, but Ungrounded: Another Well-principled, but Timorous. One is Wary and Prudent; another Open and Plain-hearted. One is Trembling and Melting; another Chearful, and full of Comfort. Now the End and Uſe of Church-Fellowſhip is to make a rich Improvement unto all by a regular Uſe and Exerciſe of the Gifts and Graces found in every one. One muſt impart his Light, and another his Warmth. The Eye (viz. the knowing Man) cannot ſay to the Hand (viz. the active Man) I have no need of thee. Unſpeakable are the Benefits reſulting from ſpiritual and orderly Communion; but whatever the Benefits be, they are all cut off by Schiſms and Diſſentions; for as Faith is the Grace by which we receive all from God; ſo Love is the Grace by which we ſhare and divide the Comfort of all among our ſelves. The excellent Things of the Spirit are lodg'd in Earthen Veſſels, which Death will ſhortly break, and then we can have no more Benefit by them; but theſe Jars and Diviſions render Saints, as it were, dead one to another, whilſt they are alive. Ah, how lovely, how ſweet and deſirable it is to live in the Communion of ſuch Saints as are deſcribed! Mal. 3. 16. To hear them freely, and humbly to open their Hearts and Experiences to one another! After this Manner, ſome ſay, the Art of Medicine was found out: As any one met with an Herb, and diſcovered the Virtue of it by any Accident, he was to poſt it up, and ſo the Phyſician's Skill was perfected by a Collection of thoſe poſted Experiments. But woe to us! we are ready to poſt up each others Failings and Infirmities to the Shame and Reproach of Religion, and to furniſh our common Enemies with Matter of Contempt and Scorn againſt us all.

Motive VI. In a Word, Theſe Schiſms and Diſſentions in the Churches of Chriſt are ominous Preſages, and foreboding Signs of ſome ſweeping Judgment, and common Calamity near approaching us. 'Tis a common Obſervation with Shepherds, That when the Sheep puſh one another, a Storm ſpeedily enſues. I am ſure 'tis ſo here, if God turn not our Hearts one towards another, he will come and ſmite the Earth with a Curſe, Mal. 4. 6. I believe it, Sirs, you will have other Work to do ſhortly. There be thoſe coming, (if God prevent not) that will part the Fray.

USE II. for Direction.

Uſe 2. In the laſt place therefore give me leave to lay before you ſome neceſſary and proper Directions and Counſels for the Prevention and Healing of Schiſms and Diviſions amongſt the Churches of Chriſt: for it is not Complaints and Lamentations, but proper Counſels and Directions, and thoſe not only preſcribed but obeyed, that muſt do the Work. When Joſhua lay upon his Face before the Lord, Joſhua 7. 8, 9, 10. bewailing the Sins and Miſeries of Iſrael; Up (ſaith God) ſanctifie the People; wherefore lieſt thou upon thy Face? As if he ſhould ſay, Thy Moans and Lamentations are good and neceſſary in their place; but ſpeedy Action and vigorous Endeavours muſt be alſo uſed, or Iſrael will periſh. So ſay I, up, up, fall ſpeedily to your Duties as Men in earneſt; and for your Guidance in the Paths of Duty, I will lay before you the following plain and neceſſary Directions.

Direction I. The orderly gathering, and filling of particular Churches, is of great Influence unto the Peace and Tranquillty of thoſe Churches; and therefore it greatly concerns all that are intereſted therein, eſpecially ſuch as are veſted with Office-Power, to beware whom they receive inro their Communion.

The Scriptures do plainly diſcover to us, That Church-Members ought to be viſible Saints, 1 Cor. 1. 2. 2 Cor. 1. 1, 2. Acts 2. 41, to the End. Epheſ. 2. 7. 1 Theſſ. 1. 2, 3. Rom. 1. 7, Col. 1. 2. Hence particular Churches are called the Churches of the Saints, 1 Cor. 14. 33. If Admiſſions be lax and negligent, ſo much heterogeneous Matter fills the Church, that it can never be quiet. Chriſtians and Chriſtians may live together harmoniouſly and coaleſce in one orderly and comfortable Society, as having one and the ſame Head, one Spirit, the ſame general Deſign and End: but Godly and Ungodly, Spiritual and Carnal are acted by contrary Principles, purſue oppoſite Deſigns, and can never heartily coaleſce. There is a Spirit of Diſcerning, a Judgment of Diſcretion in the Saints, and it is eſpecially deſirable in a more eminent Degree in thoſe that have Office-Power in the Church, to judge of Mens fit Qualifications for Church-Communion. We all allow, that groſs Ignorance and Prophaneneſs are juſt Bars to Mens Admiſſion: And to deny this, were to take all Power from the Church, to preſerve the Purity of God's Ordinances, or to caſt out notorious Offenders. None ought to be admitted into Church Communion, but ſuch as do appear to the Judgment of Charity (comparing their Profeſſions and Converſations) to be Chriſtians indeed, that is, Men fearing God, and working Righteouſneſs.

And I make no Doubt, but ſome Opinions as well as Practices, render Men unmeet for Church-Communion, Tit. 3. 10. 2 John 10. All Opinions which overthrow Doctrines neceſſary to be believed, which the Apoſtle comprehends under the Name of Faith; and all ſuch Opinions as are inconſiſtent with an holy Life, and overthrow the Power of Godlineſs, which the Apoſtle comprehends under the Name of a good Conſcience, 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. whoſoever ſhall hold or maintain any ſuch Opinions as theſe, he is either to be kept out, if not admitted; or caſt out, if he be in Church-Fellowſhip. In receiving ſuch, you receive but Spies and Incendiaries among you. What a Fire-brand did Arius prove, not only in the Church of Conſtantinople, but even to the whole World? Men of graceleſs Hearts and erroneous Heads, will give a continual Exerciſe to the Patience of ſober Chriſtians. I deny not but out of the pureſt Churches Men may ariſe ſpeaking perverſe Things; and yet the Officers and Members of thoſe Churches be blameleſs in their Admiſſion: But if they can be diſcerned before they be admitted, a little preventive Care would be of ſingular and ſeaſonable Uſe to the Tranquility of Church Societies.

Direction II. Let all Officers and Members of the Church ſtudy their Duties, and keep themſelves within the Bounds of their proper Places. Ordinate Motions are quiet Motions, 1 Theſſ. 4. 11. Study to be quiet, and do your own Buſineſs, and work with your own Hands, as we commanded you. In which Words he condemns two Vices, which diſturb and diſtract the Churches of Chriſt, viz. Curioſity in Matters which pertain not to us, and Idleneſs in the Duties of our particular Callings. Two Things I will drop by way of Caution:

A Doctore glorioſo, à paſtore contentioſo & inutilibus Quæſtionibus liberet Eccleſiam Deus. Luther's Prayer.

(1.) Let it be for Caution to Miniſters, that they mind their proper Work, ſtudy the Peace of the Church, impartially diſpenſe their Reſpects to the Saints committed to their Charge, not ſiding with a Party. There be few Schiſms in Churches, in which Miniſters have not ſome Hand. Jerome upon thoſe Words, Hoſea 9. 8. hath this memorable Note; Veteres ſcrutans hiſtorias, invenire non poſſum ſcidiſſe Eccleſiam, præter eos qui Sacerdotes à Deo poſiti fuerunt. Searching the ancient Hiſtories (ſaith he) I can find none that hath more rent the Church of God, than thoſe that ſuſtain the Office of Miniſters. This is a ſad Charge, and 'tis too juſtly laid upon many of that Order: Oh what a Bleſſing is a Prudent, Patient, Peaceable Miniſter, to the Flock over which he watches!

(2.) Let the People keep their Places, and ſtudy their proper Duties. There be in moſt Congregations, ſome idle People, who having little to do at Home, are employed upon Satan's Errands to run from Houſe to Houſe, carrying Tales to exaſperate one Chriſtian againſt another. Theſe the Apoſtle particularly marks, and warns the Churches of 1 Tim. 5. 13. And withal they learn to be idle, wandring about from Houſe to Houſe; and not only Idle, but Tatlers alſo, and Buſie-Bodies, ſpeaking Things which they ought not. If that one Rule of Chriſt, Matth. 18. 15, 16. were conſcientiouſly and ſtrictly attended to, to tell a treſpaſſing Brother his Fault privately, then with one or two more, if obſtinacy make it neceſſary, and not to expoſe him to the whole Church, and much leſs to the whole World, without a plain Neceſſity; How many thouſand Ruptures would be prevented in Chriſtian Societies? But inſtead of regularly admoniſhing and reproving thoſe irregular and idle Tatlers (as the Apoſtle calls them) who make it their Buſineſs to ſow Jealouſies, to make and widen Breaches amongſt Brethren.

Direction

Direction III Let all Chriſtians govern their Tongues, and keep them under the Command of the Law of Kindneſs in their mutual Converſes with one another. A ſoft Anſwer (ſaith Solomon) Prov. 15. 1. turneth away Wrath; but grievous Words ſtir up Anger: Hard to hard will never do well: How eaſy did Abigail diſarm angry David by a gentle Apology? What more boiſterous than the Wind? Yet a gentle Rain will allay it. It may be ſtrongly preſumed that a meek and gentle Anſwer will more eaſily allay the Paſſions of a Godly Man, than of one that is both ungodly and full of Enmity towards us; and yet ſometimes it hath done the latter. A Company of vain wicked Men having inflamed their Blood in a Tavern at Boſton in New-England, and ſeeing that Reverend, Meek, and Holy Miniſter of Chriſt, Mr. Cotton coming along the Street, one of them tells his Companions, I'll go (ſaith he) and put a Trick upon the old Cotton; down he goes, and croſſing his way, whiſpers theſe Words into his Ear, Cotton (ſaid he) Thou art an old Fool: Mr. Cotton replied, I confeſs I am ſo; the Lord make both me and thee wiſer than we are, even wiſe to Salvation: He relates this Paſſage to his wicked Companions, which caſt a great Damp upon their Spirits in the Midſt of a Frolick: What peaceful Societies ſhould we have, if our Lips tranſgreſſed not the Laws of Love and Kindneſs.

Direction IV. Reſpectful Deportments to thoſe that are beneath us in Gifts or Eſtates, is an excellent Conſervative of Church-Peace. Lofty and contemptuous Carriages towards thoſe that are beneath us in either Reſpect, is a frequent Occaſion of bitter Jars and Animoſities. The Apoſtle chargeth it upon the Corinthians, That no one be puffed up for one againſt another; for who maketh thee to differ from another? 1 Cor. 4. 6, 7. What reſpectful Language did Holy Mr. Brewen give to his own godly Servants? Remember, Chriſtians, that there is neither Rich nor Poor, Bond nor Free, but all are one in Chriſt Jeſus. This indeed deſtroys not the civil Differences God hath made between one and another. Grace will teach the godly Servant to give double Honour to a Religious Maſter or Miſtreſs, the private Chriſtian to a godly Magiſtrate or Miniſter. It will teach the People to know them which labour among them, and are over them in the Lord, and admoniſh them, and to eſteem them very highly in love for their Works Sake, and to be at Peace among themſelves, 1 Theſſ. 5. 12, 13. and it will alſo teach Superiors to condeſcend to Men of low Degree, and not to think of themſelves above what they ought, but with all Lowlineſs, Meekneſs, and Long-Suffering to forbear one another in love, keeping (this way) the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace, Eph. 4. 2, 3.

Direction V. This gentle Language and reſpectful Deportment, would naturally and conſtantly flow from the uniting Grace of Wiſdom, Humility, and Love, were they more exalted in the Hearts of Chriſtians.

Wiſdom would allay theſe unchriſtian Heats, Prov. 17. 27. a Man of Underſtanding is of an excellent Spirit, ſo we render it; but the Hebrew ſignifies a cool Spirit; the Wiſdom that is from above is gentle and eaſie to be entreated, James 3. 17.

Humility takes away the Fewel from the Fire of Contention; only from Pride cometh Contention, Prov. 13. 10. How dearly hath Pride, eſpecially Spiritual Pride, coſt the Churches of Chriſt?

Love is the very Cement of Societies, the Fountain of Peace and Unity; it thinketh no Evil, 1 Cor. 13. puts the faireſt ſenſe upon doubtful Words and Actions, it beareth all things. Love me (ſaith Auſtin) and reprove me as thou pleaſeſt: 'Tis a radical Grace, bearing the Fruits of Peace and Unity upon it.

Direction VI. Be of a Chriſt-like forgiving Spirit one towards another, Eph. 4. 31, 32. Let all Bitterneſs and Wrath, and Anger, and Clamour, and Evil-ſpeaking be put away from you, with all Malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, as God for Chriſt's Sake hath forgiven you. Hath thy Brother offended thee? How apt art thou alſo to offend thy Brother? And which is infinitely more, how often doſt thou every Day grieve and offend Jeſus Chriſt, who yet freely forgives all thy Offences? Remember Friend, that an unforgiving is a ſad Sign of an unforgiven Perſon. They that have found Mercy, Pity, and Forgiveneſs, ſhould of all Men in the World be moſt ready to ſhew it.

Direction VII. Be deeply affected with the miſchievous Effects and Conſequents of Schiſms and Diviſions in the Societies of the Saints, and let nothing beneath a plain Neceſſity divide you from Communion one with another; hold it faſt till you can hold it no longer without Sin. As the Fire of your Contentions your Enemies warm their Hands, and ſay, Aha, ſo would we have it: Your Prayers are obſtructed, Mat. 5. 24. Firſt be reconciled to thy Brother, and then come and offer thy Gift. Edification is hindred: Feveriſh Bodies thrive not, Eph. 4. 15. God is provoked to remove his gracious Preſence from among you. Be of one Mind (ſaith the Apoſtle) live in Peace, and the God of Peace ſhall be with you, 1 Cor. 13. 11. implying that their Contentions would deprive them of his bleſſed Company with them. The Glory of your Society is clouded; if ye have bitter Envyings and Strife in your Hearts, glory not, 3. 14. Glory not in your Church Privileges, perſonal Gifts and Attainments; whatever you think of your ſelves you are not ſuch Chriſtians as you vogue your ſelves for, living in a Sin ſo directly contrary to Chriſtianity. The Name of Chriſt is diſhonoured. You are taken out of the World, to be a People for his Name, that is, for his Honour; but there's little Credit to the Name of Chriſt from a dividing, wrangling People. The alluring Beauty of Chriſtianity, by which the Church gains upon the World, Acts 2. 46, 47. is ſullied and defaced, and thereby (as I noted before) Converſion hindred, and a new Stone, as it were, rolled over the Graves of poor Sinners, to keep them down in their impenitency: Tremble therefore at the Thoughts of Diviſions and Separations. St. Auguſtine notes three Sins ſeverely puniſhed in Scripture. The Golden Calf, with the Sword; Jehoiakim's cutting the Sacred Roll, with a dreadful Captivity; but the Schiſm of Korah, and his Accomplices, with the Earth's opening her Mouth and ſwallowing them up quick.

Direction VII. Let all Church-Members ſee that they have Union with Chriſt, evidencing it ſelf in daily ſweet Communion with him. Lines drawn from a Circumference come neareſt to one another in the Center. When God intends to make the Hearts of Men one, he firſt makes them new, Ezek. 11. 91. I will give them one Heart, and I will put a new Spirit within you. And the more any renewed Heart taſtes the ſweetneſs of Communion with God, by ſo much it is diſpoſed for Unity and Peace with his People. Our Frowardneſs and Peeviſhneſs plainly diſcovers all is not well betwixt God and us. Nothing ſo oppoſite to, or abhorred by a Soul that enjoys ſweet Peace and Communion with Chriſt, than to live in ſinful Jars and Contentions with his People. Return therefore to the Primitive Spirit of Love and Unity; forbear one another; forgive one another; mortifie your dividing Luſts; cheriſh your uniting Graces; mark them which cauſe Diviſions and Offences, contrary to the Doctrine ye have learned, and avoid them, Rom. 16. 17. In a Word, and that the Word of the Apoſtle in the Text, I beſeech you, Brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye all ſpeak the ſame thing, and that there be no Diviſions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the ſame Mind, and in the ſame Judgment.

A TABLE of Scriptures illuſtrated in the firſt Volume; where Note, That thoſe which are mark'd with an Aſteriſm thus, * are Texts handled in ſet Diſcourſes.
