Lord of the lower World; not to ſerve, but to be ſerved by other Creatures; a Mercy able to melt the hardeſt Heart into thankfulneſs. I remember, Luther preſſing Men to be thankful, that they are not brought into the loweſt condition of Creatuers, and to bleſs God that they can ſee any Creature below themſelves, gives us a famous Inſtance in the following Story: Two Cardinals (ſaith he) riding in a great deal of Pomp to the Council of Conſtance, by the way they heard a Man in the Fields, weeping and wailing bitterly, they rode to him, and ask'd him what he ailed? Perceiving his Eye intently fixed upon an ugly Toad, he told them that his Heart was melted with the conſideration of this Mercy, that God hath not made him ſuch a deformed and loathſome Creature, though he were forced out of the ſame Clay with it: Hoc eſt quod amare fleo, ſaid he, This is that, that makes me weep bitterly. Whereupon one of the Cardinals cries out, Well, ſaid the Father, the unlearned will riſe and take Heaven, when we with all our Learning ſhall be thruſt into Hell. That which melted the Heart of this poor Man ſhould melt every Heart when we behold the Miſery to which theſe poor Creatures are ſubjected. And this will appear a Mercy of ſlight conſideration, if we but draw a Compariſon betwixt our ſelves, and theſe irrational Creatures, in theſe three Particulars.

Luther in 3. Precept.

1. Though they and we were made of the ſame Mould and Clay, yet how much better hath God dealt with us, even as to the outward Man? The Structure of our Bodies is much more excellent, God made other Creatures by a word of Command, but Man by Counſel; it was not be Thou, but let Us make Man. We might have been made Stones without Senſe, or Beaſts without Reaſon, but we were made Men. The noble Structure and Symetry of our Bodies invites our Souls not only to thankfulneſs but admiration. David ſpeaking of the curious frame of the Body, ſaith, I am wonderfully made, Pſal. 139. 13. or as the vulgar reads it, painted as with a Needle; like ſome rich piece of Needle-work curiouſly embroidered with Nerves and Veins. Was any part of the common lump of Clay thus faſhioned? Galen gave Epicurus an hundred years time to imagine a more commodious Situation, Configuration or Compoſition of any one part of a humane Body; and (as one ſaith) if all the Angels in Heaven had ſtudied to this day, they could not have caſt the Body of Man into a more curious Mold.

2. How little eaſe or reſt have they? They live not many years, and thoſe they do is in Bondage and Miſery, groaning under the effects of Sin; but God hath provided better for us, even as to our outward condition in the World; we have the more reſt, becauſe they have ſo little. How many Refreſhments and Comforts hath God provided for us, of which they are uncapable? If we be weary with labour, we can take our reſt; but freſh or weary, they muſt ſtand to it, or ſink under it from day to day.

3. What a narrow Capacity hath God given to Beaſts! What a large Capacity to Man! Alas, they are only capable of a little ſenſitive Pleaſure; as you ſhall ſee ſometimes, how they will frisk in a green Paſture, this is all they be capable of, and this Death puts an end to; but how comprehenſive are our Souls in their Capacities? We are made in the Image of God; we can look beyond preſent things, and are capable of the higheſt happineſs, and that to all Eternity; the Soul of a Beaſt is but a material form, which wholly depending upon, muſt needs dye with the Body; but our Souls are a Divine Spark or Blaſt; and when the Body dyes, it dyes not with it, but ſubſiſts even in its ſeparated State.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for an Unthankful Sinner.

1. How great a Sin is Ingratitude to God, for ſuch a common, but choice Mercy of Creation, and Proviſion for me in this World? There is no Creature made worſe by kindneſs, but Man. There is a kind of Gratitude which I may obſerve even in theſe brute Beaſts; they do in their way acknowledge their Benefactors; the Ox knows his Owner, and the Aſs his Maſter's Crib. How ready are they to ſerve ſuch as feed and cheriſh them? But I have been both unthankful and unſerviceable to my Creator and Benefactor, that hath done me good all my days; thoſe poor Creatures that ſweat and groan under the Loads that I lay upon them, never ſinned againſt God, nor tranſgreſſed the Laws of their Creation, as I have done; and yet God hath dealt better with me than with them. Oh that the Bounty of God, and his diſtinguiſhing Mercy between me and the Beaſts that periſh, might move and melt my Heart into thankfulneſs! O that I might conſider ſeriouſly what the higher and more excellent end of my Creation is, and might more endeavour to anſwer and live up to it! Or elſe (O my Soul) it will be worſe with thee than with the Beaſts. 'Tis true, they are under Bondage and Miſery; but it is but for a little time, Death will end all their Pains, and eaſe them of all their heavy loads; but I ſhall groan to all Eternity, under a heavier burden than ever they felt? they have no account to give, but ſo have I. What comfort is it that I have a larger Capacity than a Beaſt hath? That God hath endowed me with Reaſon, which is denied to them? Alas, this will but augment my Miſery, and enlarge me to take in a greater meaſure of anguiſh.

A Reflection for an Elect Soul.

2. But how many Steps (O my Soul) mayſt thou aſcend in the Praiſes of thy God, when thou conſidereſt the Mercies that God hath beſtowed upon thee! Not only in that he made thee, not a Stone or Tree without ſenſe, or an Horſe, or Dog without reaſon; but that thou art not an Infidel without light, or an unregenerate Perſon without grace. What! to have ſenſe, and all the delight of it, which Stones have not; reaſon, which the more high and noble Pleaſures of it, which Beaſts have not; the light and knowledge of the great things of the Goſpel, which the Heathens have not; and ſuch an expectation and hope of unconceiveable Glory and Felicity, which the unſanctified have not. O my Soul! how rich! how bountiful hath thy God been to thee! Theſe are the overflowings of his love to thee, who was moulded out of the ſame Lump with the Beaſts that groan on Earth, yea, with the Damned that howl in Hell; well may I ſay that God hath been a good God to me.

The POEM.

WHen I behold a tyred Jade put on
With Whip and Spur, till all his ſtrength is gone;
See ſtreams of Sweat run down his bleeding Sides,
How little Mercy's ſhewn by him that rides.

Am I more thankful to my God don't prove,
Than such a Rider's mercileſs, 'twill move
My Soul to praiſe; for who ſees this, and can
But bleſs the Lord that he was made a Man.
And ſuch a ſight the Rider ought to move,
This Meditation duly to improve.
What hath this Creature done that he ſhould be Thus beaten, wounded, and tyr'd out by me?
He is my Fellow-Creature, 'tis meer Grace
I had not been in his, he in my caſe.
Ungrateful, ſtupid Man, God might have made Me bear the Saddle, as I ſee this Jade.
He never ſinn'd, but for my Sin doth lye
Subjected unto all this Miſery.
Lord, make my Heart relent, that I ſhould be
To thee more uſeful, than my Horſe to me.
He did his utmoſt, went as long as ever
His Legs cou'd bear him; but for me I never Thus ſpent my Strength for God, but oft have been Too prodigal thereof in ways of ſin;
Though he's the Horſe, and I the Man, 'twill be Far better with my Horſe one day than me,
Unleſs thy Grace prevent, and ſuperadd
A new Creation unto that I had.
Could every Rider fix a ſerious thought
On ſuch a ſubject, and hereby be taught
To ſpiritualize it, and improve it thus;
How ſweet would tedious Journeys be to us!
But ſuch a Task a graceleſs Heart digs out
More than the tyred Horſe I write about.

CHAP. III.

Upon the ſeeking of loſt Cattel.

When ſeeking your loſt Cattel, keep in mind
That thus Chriſt Jeſus ſeeks your Souls to find,

OBSERVATION.

WHen Cattel are ſtrayed away from your Fields, you uſe all care and diligence to recover them again, tracing their footſteps, crying them in Market-Towns, ſending your Servants abroad, and enquiring your ſelves of all that you think can give news of them. What care and pains men will take in ſuch caſes, was exemplifyed in Saul, 1 Sam. 9. 4, 5. who with his Servant paſſed through Mount Ephraim, to ſeek the Aſſes that were strayed from his Father, and through the Land of Shalisha, and through the Land of Shalim, and they were not there, and through the Land of the Benjamites, but found them not.

APPLICATION.

THE care and pains you take to recover your loſt Cattel, carries a ſweet and lively repreſentation of the love of Jeſus Chriſt, in the recovery of loſt Sinners. Jeſus Chriſt came on purpoſe from Heaven upon a like Errand, to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt, Matt. 18. 11. There are ſeveral Particulars in which this glorious deſign of Chriſt, in ſeeking and ſaving loſt Man, and the care and pains of Husbandmen in recovering their loſt Cattel, do meet and touch, though there are as many particulars alſo in which they differ; which I ſhall open under the following heads.

1. We ſometimes find that Cattel will break out of thoſe very Fields where they have been bred, and where they want nothing that is needful for them. Juſt thus, loſt Man departed from his God, brake out of that pleaſant Incloſure where he was abundantly provided for, both as to Soul and Body; yet then he brake over the Hedge of the Command, and went aſtray, Eccleſ. 7, 29. Lo this only have I found, that God made Man upright, but he ſought out to himſelf many Inventions. He was not content and ſatisfyed with that bleſſed ſtate God had put him into, but would be trying new concluſions to the loſs and ruin both of himſelf and his Poſterity.

2. Strayers are evermore ſufferers for it; all they get by it, is to be pinned and pounded; and what did Man get by departing from his God, but Ruin and Miſery to Soul and Body? Will you have an Abreviate of his Sufferings and Loſſes? (the full Account none can give you) why? By ſtraying from his God, he loſt the rectitude and holineſs of his Nature; (like a true ſtrayer) he is all dirty and miry, overſpread and beſmeared both in Soul and Body, with the odious filthineſs of Sin; he loſt the liberty and freedom of his will to good; a precious Jewel of ineſtimable value: This is a real Miſery incurred by the Fall, though ſome have ſo far loſt their underſtandings and humility, as not to own it; he hath loſt his God, his Soul, his Happineſs, and his very Bowels of Compaſſion towards himſelf in this miſerable ſtate.

3. When your Cattel are ſtrayed, yea, though it be but one of the Flock or Herd, you leave all the reſt, and go after that which is loſt: So did Jeſus Chriſt, who in the fore-cited place, Mat. 18. 12. compares himſelf to ſuch a Shepherd; he left Heaven it ſelf, and all the bleſſed Angels there, to come into this World to ſeek loſt Man. O the precious eſteem, and dear love that Chriſt had to poor Man; How did his Bowels yearn towards us in our loſt ſtate! How did he pity us in our Miſery! As if he had ſaid, Poor Creatures they have loſt themſelves and are become a Prey to the Devil, in a periſhing ſtate; I will ſeek after them, and ſave them. The Son of Man is come to ſeek and to ſave.

4. You are glad when you have found your ſtrayers, much more is Chriſt, when he hath found a loſt Soul. O 'tis a great ſatisfaction to him to ſee the fruit of the travel of his Soul. Iſa. 53. Yea, there is more joy in Heaven over one Sinner that repenteth, than ninety nine juſt Perſons that need no Repentance. What demonſtrations of joy and gladneſs did the Father of the Prodigal give, when he had found his Son that was loſt? Luke 15. 20.

5. When you have brought home your Strayers, you ſometimes clog them, to prevent their wandering again, and ſtop up the gaps with Thorns; and ſo doth God oftentimes by ſuch Souls as are recovered and brought home to Chriſt; he hangs a clog of affliction to prevent their departure from God again, 2 Cor. 12. 7.

But then there are five Particulars in which Chriſt's ſeeking loſt Souls, and your ſeeking loſt Cattel differ.

1. Your Cattel ſometimes find the way home themſelves, and return to you of their own accord; but loſt Man never did, nor can do ſo; he was his own Deſtroyer, but can never be his own Saviour; it was impoſſible for him not to have loſt his God, but having once loſt him, can never find him again of himſelf. Alas! his Heart is bent to backſliding, he hath no will to return. Hear how Chriſt complains, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me. Man's Recovery begins in God, not in himſelf.

2. Your Servants can find, and bring back your loſt Cattel as well as you; but ſo cannot Chriſt's Servants. Miniſters may diſcover, but cannot recover them; they dayly ſee, but cannot ſave them; lament them they can, but help them they cannot; intreat and beg them to return they can, and do, but prevail with them they cannot. Melanćthon, thought when he began to preach, to perſwade all; but old Adam was too hard for young Melanćthon.

3. You ſeek all the Cattel that are ſtrayed from you, eſpecially the beſt; but Jeſus Chriſt only ſeeks poor loſt Man. There were other Creatures, and ſuch as by Nature were more excellent, that loſt their God and themſelves; I mean, the Apoſtate Angels; hut he came not to ſeek them: Herein his ſingular love to Man appears.

4. When you have recovered and brought home your loſt Cattel, you may loſe them the ſecond time, and never recover them again, but ſo cannot Chriſt. Man once recovered is for ever ſecured by him. All that thou haſt given me I have kept, and not one of them is loſt, but the Son of Perdition; and he was never ſavingly found, John 17. 12.

5. Though you prize your Cattel, yet you will not venture your Life for the recovery of them; rather let them go than regain them with ſuch an hazard; but Jeſus Chriſt not only ventured, but actually laid down his Life to recover, and ſave loſt Man: He redeemed them at the price of his own Blood; he is that good Shepherd that laid down his Life for the Sheep. O the ſurpaſſing love of Chriſt to loſt Souls!

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for a loſt Soul.

1. Lord, I am a loſt Creature, an undone Soul; and herein lies my Miſery, that I have not only loſt my God, but have no Heart to return to him! Nay, I fly from Chriſt, who is come on purpoſe from Heaven to ſeek and to ſave me; his Meſſengers are abroad ſeeking for ſuch as I am, but I avoid them, or at leaſt refuſe to obey their call and perſwaſions to return. Ah, what a miſerable ſtate am I in! Every ſtep I go is a ſtep towards Hell; my Soul, with the Prodigal, is ready to periſh in a ſtrange Countrey! But I have no mind, with him, to return home; wretched Soul, what will the end of this be? If God have loſt thee, the Devil hath found thee; he takes up all ſtrayers from God: Yea, Death and Hell will ſhortly find thee, if Chriſt do not; and then thy recovery (O my Soul!) will be impoſſible: Why ſit I here periſhing and dying! I am not yet as irrecoverably loſt as the Damned are. O let me delay no longer, leſt I be loſt for ever.

A Reflection for one that was loſt, but is found.

2. O my Soul! for ever bleſs and admire the love of Jeſus Chriſt, who came from Heaven to ſeek and ſave, ſuch a loſt Soul as I was. Lord, how matchleſs is thy Love! I was loſt, and am found. I am found, and did not ſeek; nay, I am found by him from whom I fled. Thy love, O my Saviour, was a preventing love, a wonderful love; thou lovedſt me much more than I loved my ſelf; I was cruel to my own Soul, but thou waſt kinde; thou ſoughteſt for me, a loſt Sinner, and not for loſt Angels; thy hand of Grace caught hold of me, and hath let go Thouſands, and the Thouſands as good as my ſelf by nature. Like another David, thou didſt reſcue my poor loſt Soul out of the Mouth of the Deſtroyer; yea, more than ſo, thou didſt loſe thine own Life to find mine: And now, dear Jeſus, ſince I am thus marvelouſly recovered, ſhall I ever ſtraggle again from thee? O let it for ever be a warning to me, how I turn aſide into by-paths of Sin any more.

The POEM.

When Cattel from your Fields are gone aſtray,
And you to ſeek them through the Country ride,
Enquiring for them all along the way,
Tracking their Foot-ſteps where they turn'd aſide.

One Servant this way ſent, another that,
Searching the Fields and Country round about;
This Meditation now falls in ſo pat,
As if God ſent it to enquire you out.

My Beaſts are loſt, and ſo am I by Sin;
My wretched Soul from God thus wandering went,
As I ſeek them, ſo was I ſought by him,
Who from the Father's Boſom forth was ſent.

Purſu'd by Sermons, follow'd cloſe by Grace,
And ſtrong Convictions Chriſt hath ſought for me,
Yea, though I ſhun him ſtill he gives me Chaſe,
As if reſolv'd I ſhould not Damned be.

When Angels loſt themſelves it was not ſo,
God did not ſeek, or once for them enquire;
But ſaid, let theſe Apoſtate Creatures go,
I'll plague them for it with eternal Fire.

Lord, what am I, that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine Eyes,
And ſtill ſeek after ſuch a Wretch as I?
Whoſe matchleſs Mercy, and rich Grace deſpiſe,
As if in ſpight thereof reſolv'd to dye.

Why ſhould I ſhun thee? Bleſſed Saviour, why Should I avoid thee thus? Thou doſt not chaſe
My Soul to ſlay it; O that ever I Should fly a Saviour that's ſo full of Grace.

Long haſt thou ſought me, Lord, I now return;
O let thy Bowels of Compaſſion ſound,
For my departure I ſincerly mourn;
And let this day thy wandring Sheep be found.

CHAP. IV.

Upon the Feeding of fat Cattel.

Fat Beaſts you kill, the Lean you uſe to ſave;
God's Diſpenſations ſome ſuch meaning have.

OBSERVATION.

IT is a good Obſervation of a Father, and well applyed; Vituli triturantes quotidie ligantur, vituli mactandi quotidie in paſcuis libere relinquuntur. Oxen for uſe are dayly yoaked and kept ſhort, whilſt thoſe that are deſigned for the Shambles, are let looſe in green Paſtures to feed at Pleaſure. Store Beaſts fare hard, and are kept lean and low; feeding Beaſts are excuſed from the Yoak, whilſt others are laboured and wrought hard every day; the one hath more than he can eat, the other would eat more if he had it.

APPLICATION.

THus deals the Lord of-times with his own Elect, whom he deſigns for Glory; and with the wicked, who are preparing for the Day of Wrath Wrath. Thus are they filled with earthly Prosperity, and Creature enjoyments, like rusty and wanton Beasts turned out at liberty in a fat Pasture, whilst poor Saints are kept hard and short, Amos 1. 4. Hear this word ye kine of Bashan, that are in the Mountains of Samaria, which oppress the Poor, crush the Needy. These Metaphorical Kine of the prosperous Oppressors of the World, are fulled, and wanton wicked Men. 'Tis true, Heaven hath not all the Poor, nor Hell all the Rich; but it's a very common Dispensation of Providence, to bestow most of the things of this World upon them that have no Portion in Heaven; and to keep them short on Earth, for whom that Kingdom is provided. Let me draw forth the Similitude a few Particulars.

1. The Beast of slaughter have the fattest Pastures; so have the ungodly in the World; Their Eyes stand out with Fatness, they have more than Heart could wish, Psa. 73. 7. Their Hearts are as fat as grease, Psal. 119. 70. These be they that fleet off the Cream of earthly Enjoyments, whose Bellies are filled with hidden Treasures, Psal. 17. 14. The Earth is given into the hand of the Wicked, Job 9. 24. O, what full Estates? What an affluence of Earthly delights hath God cast in upon some wicked Men? There is much wantonness, but no want in their dwellings; some that know not which way to turn themselves in Hell, once knew not where to bestow their Goods on Earth.

2. Feeding, grow wanton in their full Pastures; there you shall see them tumble and frisk, and kick up their Heels. The same effect hath the prosperity of the wicked, it makes them wanton; their Life is but a diversion from one Pleasure to another, Job 21. 11, 12, 13. They send forth their little ones like a Flock, and their Children dance; they take the timbrel and harp, and rejoyce at the sound of the Organ; they spend their Days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the Grave. The same Character doth the Prophet Amos give of them, Amos 6. 4, 5, 6. They stretch themselves upon Beds of Ivory, drink Wine in bowls, &c. and no sorrow goes to their Hearts. These are they that live in Pleasures upon Earth, as a Fish in the Water, Jam. 5. 5.

3. These fat Pastures do but the sooner hasten the death of these Cattel; the sooner they are fatted, the sooner they are slaughtered; and the prosperity of the wicked serves to the same end. The prosperity of Fools shall destroy them, (i. e.) shall be the means and instrument of heating and lightning their Lusts, and thereby fitting them for Destruction; their Prosperity is Food and Fuel to their Corruptions. Many wicked Men have not been so ripe for Hell, had they not grown in the Sun-shine of Prosperity.

4. Fatted Beasts do not in the least understand the intent and meaning of the Husbandman, in allowing them such large and fat Pastures, which he denies to his other Cattel; and as little as Beasts, wicked Men understand the scope and end of God's Providences, in casting Prosperity and Wealth upon them; little do they think their Table are a Snare, a Gin, and a Trap for their Souls, they only (like Beasts) mind what is before them, but do not at all understand the tendency and end of these their sensual Delights.

5. Though the Husbandman keep his store-Cattel in short Commons, yet he intends to preserve them: These shall remain with him, when the others are driven to the slaughter.

Such a design of Preservation is carryed on in all the outward straits, wants and hardships which the Lord exposes his People to. I confess, such Dispensations for present, are very stumbling and puzzling things, even to gracious and wise Persons. To see wicked Men, not only exempted from their Troubles, but even oppressed with Prosperity; to see a godly Man in Wants and Straits, and a wicked Man have more than his Heart can wish, is a case that poses the wisest Christian, till he considers the designs and issues of both those Providences, and then he acquiesces in the Wisdom of God so ordering it, Psal. 73. 5. 14. 18. 23.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for a Voluptuous worldling.

1. Doth my Prosperity fat me up for Hell, and prepare me for the Day of slaughter? Little cause have I then to glory in it, and lift up my Heart upon these things. Indeed, God hath given, (I cannot say blessed be with) a fulness of Creature-enjoyments; upon these my carnal Heart seizeth greedily and securely, not at all suspecting a Snare lying in these things, for the ruin of my Soul. What are all these charming Pleasures, but so many Rattles to quiet my Soul, whilst its Damnation steals insensibly upon it? What are all my Businesses and Imployments in the World, but so many Diversions from the Business of Life? There are but two differences betwixt me, and the poorest Slave the Devil hath on Earth, such are whiped on to Hell by outstard Miseries, and I am coached to Hell in a little more Pomp and Honour; these will have a less, and I a greater account in the Day of Reckoning. O that I had never known Prosperity! I am now tumbling in a green Pasture, and shortly shall be hanging up in the Shambles in Hell; if this be the best fruit of my Prosperity, if I were taken captive by cruel Canibals, and fed with the richest fare, but withal understood, that the design of it were to fat me up like a Beast for them to feed upon; how little Stomach should I have to their Dainties? O my Soul! it were much better for thee to have a sanctify'd Poverty, which is the Portion for many Saints, than an ensnaring Prosperity, set as a trap to ruin thee for ever.

A Reflection for a poor Christian.

2. The Wisdom of my God hath allotted me but short commons here, his Providence feeds me but from hand to mouth; but I am (and well may be) contented with my present state; that which sweetens it, is, that I am one of the Lord's preserved. How much better is a Morsel of Bread, and a Draught of Water here, with an expectancy of Glory hereafter, than a fat Pasture given in, and fitting for the Wrath to come? Well, since the case stands thus, blessed be God for my present Lot; though I have but a little in hand, I have much in hope; my present Troubles will serve to sweeten my future Joys; and the sorrows of this Life will give a Lustre to the Glory of the next; that which is now hard to suffer, will then be sweet to remember; my Songs will then be louder than my Groans now.

The POEM.

THose Beasts which for the Shambles are design'd,
In fragrant flowery Meadows you shall find,
Where they abound with rich and plenteous fare,
Whilst others graze in Commons thin and bare.
Those live a short and pleasant Life, but these Protract their lives in dry and shorter leas.

Thus

Thus lives the Wicked, thus they do abound
With earthly glory, and with honour crown'd.
Their lofty heads unto the Stars aspire,
And radiant beams their shining brows attire.
The fattest portion's serv'd up in their Dish;
Yea, they have more than their own hearts can wish.
Dissolv'd in pleasures, crown'd with buds of May;
They, for a time, in these fat Pastures play,
Frisk, dance and leap, like full-fed Beasts; and even Turn up their wanton Heels against the Heaven.
Not understanding that this pleasant Life,
Serves but to fit them for the Butcher's Knife.
In fragrant Meads they tumbling are to day,
To morrow to the slaughter led away
Their pleasure's gone, and vanish'd like a Bubble,
Which makes their future Torments on them double.
Mean while God's little Flock is poor and lean,
Because the Lord did ne'er intend or mean
This for their portion; and besides doth know
Their Souls prove best where shortest Grass doth grow.
Chear up, poor Flock, although your Fare be thin,
Yet here is something to take Comfort in:
You here securely feed, and need not fear
Th' infernal Butcher can't approach you here.
'Tis somewhat that, but O, which far transcends,
Your glorious Shepherd's coming, who intends
To lead you hence unto that fragrant Hill,
Where with green Pastures he his Flocks will fill.
On which he from Celestial Casements pours
The sweetest Dews, and constant gracious showers.
Along whose Banks Rivers of pleasures slide,
There his bless'd Flocks for ever shall abide.
O envy not the Worldlings present Joys,
Which to your future Mercies are but Toys.
Their Pasture now is green, your's dry and burn'd,
But then the Scene is chang'd, the Tables turn'd.

CHAP. V.

Upon the Husbandman's Care for Posterity.

Good Husbands labour for Posterity,
To after-Ages Saints must have an Eye.

OBSERVATION.

PRovident and careful Husbandmen do not only labour to supply their own Necessities while living, but lay up something for their Posterity when they are gone; they do not only leave to their Children what their Progenitors left them, but they desire to leave it improv'd and better'd. None but bad Husbands and Spend-thrifts are of the Mind with that Heathen Emperor Tiberius, who having put all into such Confusions in the Empire, that it might be thought the World would end with him; yet pleased himself with this apprehension, That he should be out of the reach of it; and would often say, when I am dead, let Heaven and Earth mingle; if the World will but hold my time, let it break when I am gone: But provident Men look beyond their own time, and do very much concern themselves in the good or evil of their Posterity.

APPLICATION.

WHat careful Husbands do, with respect to the Provisions they make for their Children, that all prudent Christians are bound to do, with respect to the Truths committed to them, and by them, to be transmitted to succeeding Saints.

In the first Ages of the World, even till the Law was given, faithful Men were in stead of Books and Records; they did by Oral Tradition convey the Truths of God to Posterity; but since the Sacred Truth hath been consigned to Writing, no such Tradition (except full consentient with that written word) is to be received as Authentick; but the Truths therein delivered to the Saints, are by verbal Declarations, open Confessions, and constant Sufferings, to be preserved and delivered from Age to Age. This was the constant care of the whole Cloud of Witnesses, both Ancient and Modern, who have kept the Word of God's Patience, and would not accept their own Lives, Liberties or Estates; no, nor the whole World in exchange for that invaluable Treasure of Truth; they have carefully practised Solomon's Counsel, Prov. 23. 23. Buy the Truth, but sell it not; they would not alienate that fair Inheritance for all the Inheritances on Earth. Upon the same reasons that you refuse to part with, or imbezzel your Estates, Christians also refuse to part with the Truths of God.

1. You will not waste or alienate your Inheritance, because it's precious, and of great value in your Eyes; but much more precious are God's Truths to his People. Luther professed, he would not take the whole World for one Leaf of the Bible. Though some profane Persons may say with Pilate, What is Truth? Yet know, that any one Truth of the Gospel is more worth than all the Inheritances upon Earth; they are the great things of God's Law, and he that sells them for the greatest things in this World, makes a Soul-undoing Bargain.

2. You will not waste or part with your Inheritance, because you know your Posterity will be much wronged by it. They that baffle or drink away an Estate, drink the Tears of their sad Widows, and the very Blood of their impoverish'd Children. The People of God do also consider, how much the Generations to come are concerned in the conservation of the Truths of God for them: It cuts them to the Heart, but to think that their Children should be brought up to worship Dumb Idols, and fall down before a Wooden and Breaden God. The very Birds and Beasts will expose their own Bodies to apparent danger of Death to preserve their young. Religion doth much more intender the hearts and bowels than Nature doth.

3. You reckon it a foul Disgrace to sell your Estates, and become Bankrupts; 'tis a word that bears ill among you: And a Christian accounts it the highest reproach in the World, to be a Traytor to, or an Apostate from the Truths of God. When the Primitive Saints were strictly required to deliver up their Bibles, those that did so, were justly branded, and hush'd out of their Company, under the odious Title of Traditores, or Deliverers.

4. You are so loth to part with your Estates, because you know its hard recovering an Estate again when once you lost it. Christians do also know, how difficult it will be for the People of God in times to come, to recover the Light of the Gospel again, if once it be extinguish'd. There is no Truth of God recovered out of Antichrist's hands without great wrestlings and much Blood. The Church may call every Point of Reformed Doctrine and Discipline so recovered, her Nepthalies; for with great wrestlings she hath wrestled for them. Earnestly contending for the Faith once delivered to them, Jude 3.

5. To conclude, rather than you will part with your Estates, you will chuse to suffer many Wants and Hardships all your Lives; you will fare hard and and go bear to preſerve what you have for your Poſterity: But the People of God have put themſelves upon far greater hardſhips than theſe to preſerve Truth; they have choſen to ſuffer Reproaches, Poverty, Priſons, Death, and the moſt cruel Torments, rather than the loſs of God's Truth. All the Martyrologies will inform you what their Sufferings have been, to keep the word of God's Patience; they have boldly told their Enemies, that they might pluck their Hearts out of their Bodies, but ſhould never pluck the Truth out of their Hears.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection of cowardly and faint-hearted Profeſſors.

1. Baſe unbelieving Heart! How have I flinched and ſhrunk from Truth when it hath been in danger? I have rather choſen to leave it, than my Life, Liberty or Eſtate, as a prey to the Ene-y. I have left Truth, and juſt it is that the God f Truth ſhould leave me. Cowardly Soul, that urſt not make a ſtand for Truth! Yea, rather old and daring Soul, that wouldſt rather venture look a wrathful God, than an angry Man, in e Face. I would not own and preſerve the ruth, and the God of Truth will not own me, Tim. 2. 12. If we deny him, he will deny us.

Reflection ſuch as fit for ruth.

2. Lord! unto me haſt thou committed the precious Treaſure and Truſt of Truth; and as I receiv'd it, ſo do I deſire to deliver it to the Generations to come, that the People hich are yet unborn may praiſe the Lord. God rbid I ſhould ever part with ſuch a fair Inheriince, and thereby beggar my own, and thouſands Souls! Thou haſt given me thy Truth, and the orld hates me; I well know that it is the ground the quarrel; would I but throw Truth over the alls, how ſoon would a Retreat be ſounded to all rſecutors? But, Lord! thy Truth is invaluably ecious; what a vile thing is my Blood, compared th the leaſt of all thy Truths? Thou haſt arged me not to ſell it, and in thy ſtrength I reve never to paſs a Fine, and cut off that Golden ne, whereby thy Truths are entailed upon thy ople, from Generation to Generation: My ends may go, my Liberty go, my Blood may but as for thee, precious Truth, thou ſhalt er go.

Reflection ſuch as in quiet ſſion of ab.

3. How dear hath this Inheritance of Truth coſt ſome Chriſtians? How little hath it coſt us? We are entered into their Labours; we reap in Peace, what they ſowed in Tears; yea, in Blood. O the grievous ſufferings that y choſe to endure! rather than to deprive us ſuch an Inheritance, thoſe noble Souls, heated h the Love of Chriſt, and Care for our Souls, de many bold and brave Adventures for it; and at what a low rate do we value what coſt them dear? Like young Heirs, that never knew the ring of an Eſtate, we ſpend it freely. Lord, p us thankfully and diligently to improve thy ths, while we are in quiet poſſeſſion of them. h Intervals of peace and reſt are uſually of no continuance with thy People.

The POEM.

Publick Spirit ſcorns to plant no Root,
But ſuch, from which himſelf may gather fruit.

For thus he reaſons, if I reap the gains
Of my laborious Predeceſſors pains,
How equal is it, that Poſterity
Should reap the fruits of preſent Induſtry?
Should every Age but ſerve it's turn, and take No thought for future times? It ſoon would make A Bankrupt World, and ſo entail a Curſe
From Age to Age, as it grows worſe and worſe.
Our Chriſtian Predeceſſors careful thus
Have been to leave an Heritage to us,
Chriſt's precious Truth conſerved in their Blood,
For no leſs price thoſe Truths our Fathers ſtood.
They have tranſmitted, would not alienate
From us their Children ſuch a fair Eſtate.
We eat what they did ſet, and ſhall Truth fail
In our days? Shall we cut off th' entail?
Or end the Line of Honour? Nay, what's worſe,
Give future Ages cauſe to hate, and curſe
Our Memories? Like Naboth, may this Age
Part with their Blood ſooner than Heritage.
Let pity move us, let us think upon
Our Childrens Souls when we are dead and gone.
Shall they, poor Souls, in darkneſs grope, when we Put out the light, by which they elſe might ſee
The way to glory? yea, what's worſe? Shall it
Be ſaid in time to come, Chriſt did commit
A precious Treaſure purchas'd by his Blood,
To us, for ours, and for our Childrens good?
But we, like Cowards, falſe, perfidious Men,
For carnal eaſe, loſt it, our ſelves, and them.
O let us leave, to carnal Ages, more
Than we received from all that went before.
That thoſe, to come, may bleſs the Lord, and keep Our Names alive, when we in duſt ſhall ſleep.

CHAP. VI.

Upon the Husbandman's Care to prove and preſerve his Deeds.

Deeds for your Lands you prove, and keep with care;
O that for Heaven you but as careful were.

OBSERVATION.

WE generally find Men are not more careful in trying Gold, or in keeping it, than they are in examining their Deeds, and preſerving them; theſe are virtually their whole Eſtate, and therefore it concerns them to be careful of them: If they ſuſpect a flaw in their Leaſe or Deed, they repair to the ableſt Counſel, ſubmit it to his Judgment, make the worſt of their Cauſe, and query about all the ſuppoſeable danger with him; if he tell them their caſe is ſuſpicious and hazardous, how much are they perplexed and troubled? They can neither eat, drink, or ſleep in peace, till they have a good Settlement; and willing they are to be at much coſt and pains to obtain it.

APPLICATION.

THeſe cares and fears, with which you are perplexed in ſuch caſes, may give you a little glimpſe of thoſe troubles of Soul, with which the people of God are perplexed about their Eternal Condition, which perhaps you have been hitherto unacquainted with, and therefore ſlighted them, as Fancies and Whimſies. I ſay, your own fears and troubles, if ever you were engaged by a cunning and powerful Adverſary in a Law Suit for your Eſtate, may give you a little glimpſe of Spiritual Troubles; and indeed it is no more but a glimpse of it: For, as the loss of an earthly (though fair) Inheritance, is but a trifle to the loss of God, and the Soul to Eternity; so you cannot but imagine, that the cares, fears, and sollicitudes of Souls about these things, are much, very much beyond yours. Let us compare the Cases, and see how they answer to each other.

1. You have Evidences for your Estates, and by them you hold what you have in the World. They also have Evidences for their Estate, in Christ, and Glory to come; they hold all in capite, by vertue of their Intermarriage with Jesus Christ; they come to be instated in that glorious Inheritance, contained in the Covenant of Grace. You have their Tenure in that Scripture, 1 Cor. 3. 22. 23. All is yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. Faith unties them to him, and after they believe, they are sealed by the Spirit of Promise. Eph. 1. 13. They can lay claim to no Promise upon any other ground; this is their Title to all that they own as theirs.

2. It often falls out, that after the sealing and executing of your Deads or Leases an Adversary finds some dubious Clause in them, and thereupon commences a Suit of Law with you. Thus it frequently falls out with the People of God, who after their believing and sealing time, have doubts and scruples raised in them about their Title. Nothing is more common, than for the Devil and their own Unbelief to start Controversies, and raise strong Objections against their Interest in Christ, and the Covenant of Promises. These are cunning and potent Adversaries, and do maintain long Debates with the gracious Soul, and reason so cunningly and sophistically with it, that it can by no means extricate and satisfy it self; always alledging, that their Title is worth nothing, which they, poor Souls, are but too apt to suspect.

3. All the while that a Suit of Law is depending about your Title, you have but little Comfort or Benefit from your Estate; you cannot look upon it as your own, nor lay out Moneys in Building or Dressing, for fear you should lose all at last. Just thus stands the case with doubting Christians, they have little comfort from the most comfortable Promises, little benefit from the sweetest Duties and Ordinances; they put off their own comforts, and say, If we were sure that all this were ours, we could then rejoice in them; but alas! our Title is dubious, Christ is a precious Christ, the Promises are comfortable things, but what if they be none of ours? Ah! how little doth the doubting Christian make of his large and rich Inheritance?

4. You dare not trust your own Judgments in such cases, but state your case to such as are Learned in the Laws; and are willing to get the ablest Counsel you can to advise you: So are poor doubting Christians, they carry their cases from Christian to Christian, and from Minister to Minister, with such requests as these. Pray tell me, what do you think of my condition? deal plainly and faithfully with me; these be my grounds of doubting, and these my grounds hope. O hide nothing from me! And if they all agree that their Case is good, yet they cannot be satisfyed till God say so too, and confirm the word of his Servants; and therefore they carry the case often before him in such words as those, Psal. 139. 23, 24. Search me, O God, and know my Heart; try me, and know my Thoughts, and see if there be any way of Wickedness in me.

5. You have little quiet in your Spirits, till the Case be resolved, your Meat and Drink doth you little good; you cannot sleep in the Night, because these troubled Thoughts are ever returning upon you, What if I should be turn'd out of all at last? So it is with gracious Souls, their Eyes are held waking in the Night, by reason of the troubles of their Hearts, Psal. 77. 4. Such Fears as these are frequently returning upon their Hearts, What if I should be found a Deceiver at last? What if I do but hug a Phantasm instead of Christ? How can this, or that, consist with Grace? The Meat and Drink doth them little good; their Bodies are often macerated by the troubles of their Souls.

6. You will not make the best of your condition when you state your Case to a faithful Counsellor, neither will they, but oft-times (poor pensive Souls) they make it much worse than indeed it is; charge themselves with that which God never charges them with, though this be neither their Wisdom nor their Duty, but the fears of miscarrying make them suspect Fraud in all they do or have.

7. Lastly, When your Title is cleared, your Hearts are eased; yea, not only eased, but overjoyed; though not in that degree, nor with the same kind of Joy that the Hearts of Christians are over-flowed, when the Lord speaks Peace to their Souls. O welcome the sweet Morning light after a tedious Night of darkness; now they can eat their Bread with Comfort, and drink their Wine (yea, if it be but Water) with a merry Heart, Eccles. 9. 7.

REFLECTIONS.

The Case of Soul's Reflection.

1. O how hath my Spirit been tossed and hurried, when I have met with troubles and clamors about my Estate! But as for spiritual Troubles, and those Soul-perplexing Cases, that Christians speak of, I understand but little of them. I never called my Everlasting State in question, nor lost an hour's Sleep upon any such account. Ah, supine and careless Soul! little hast thou regarded how matters stand in reference to Eternity! I have strongly conceited, but never thorowly examined the validity of my Title to Christ, and his Promises; nor am I able to tell, if my own Conscience should demand whereupon my demand is grounded.

O my Soul! why art thou so unwilling to determine how matters stand betwixt God and thee? Art thou afraid to look into thy condition, lest by finding thine Hypocrisy, thou shouldst lose thy Peace; or rather, thy Security? To what purpose will it be, to shut thine Eyes against the Light of Conviction, unless thou couldst also find out a way to prevent thy Condemnation? Thou seest other Souls, how attentively they wait under the Word, for any thing that may speak to their Conditions. Doubtless thou hast heard, how frequently and seriously they have stated their condition, and opened their Cases to the Ministers of Christ. But thou, O my Soul! hast no such cases to state, no doubts to be resolved; thou wilt leave all to the decision of the great day, and not trouble thy self about it now. Well, God will decide it to little to thy comfort.

The Case of doubting Christians.

2. I have heard how some have been perplexed by litigious Adversaries, but I believe none have been so tossed with fears, and distracted with Doubts, as I have been about the state

Soul. Lord, what I ſhall I do? I have often carried my doubts and ſcruples to thine Ordinances, waiting for ſatisfaction to be ſpoken there. I have carried them to thoſe I have judged skilful and faithful, begging their reſolution and help, but nothing will ſtick. Still my fears are dayly renewed. O my God, do thou decide my Caſe! tell me how the ſtate ſtands betwixt thee and me; my days conſume in trouble, I can neither do nor enjoy any good, whilſt things are thus with me; all my earthly Enjoyments are dry and uncomfortable things? yea, which is much worſe, all my Duties and thine Ordinances prove ſo too, by reaſon of the troubles of my Heart! I am no Ornament to my Profeſſion, nay, I am a diſcouragement and ſtumbling-block to others? I will hearken and hear what God the Lord will ſpeak; O that it might be peace! If thou do not ſpeak it, none can; and when thou doſt, keep thy Servant from returning again to folly, leſt I make freſh work for an accuſing Conſcience, and give new matter to the Adverſay of my Soul!

The Aſſured Chriſtian's Reflection.

3. But thou (my Soul) enjoyeſt a double Mercy from thy bountiful God, who hath not only given thee a ſound Title, but alſo the clear Evidence and Knowledge thereof. I am gathering, and dayly feeding upon the full-ripe fruits of Aſſurance, which grow upon the top Boughs of Faith, whilſt many of my poor Brethren drink their own Tears, and have their Teeth broken with Gravel-ſtones. Lord, thou haſt ſet my Soul upon her high-places but let me not exalt my ſelf, becauſe thou haſt exalted me; nor grow wanton, becauſe I walk at liberty, leſt for the abuſe of ſuch precious liberty, thou clap my old chains upon me, and ſhut up my Soul again in Priſon.

The POEM.

MEN can't be quiet till they be aſſur'd
That their Eſtate is good, and well ſecur'd.
To able Counſel they their Deeds ſubmit,
Intreating them with care t' examine it.
Fearing ſome Clauſe an Enemy may wreſt,
Or find a Flaw, whereby he may diveſt
Them, and their Children. O who can but ſee
How wiſe Men in their Generation be!
But do they equal Cares and Fears expreſs
About their everlaſting Happineſs?
In Spiritual things 'twould grieve one's Heart to ſee
What careleſs Fools theſe careful Men can be.
They act like Men of common Senſe bereaven,
Secure their Lands, and they'll truſt God for Heaven.
How many Caſes have you to ſubmit
To Lawyer's Judgments? Miniſters may ſit
From Week to Week, and yet not ſee the Face
Of one that brings a Soul-concerning Caſe.
Yea, which is worſe; how ſeldom do you cry
To God for Counſel? Or beg him to try
Your Hearts? and ſtricteſt Inquiſition make Into your ſtate, diſcover your miſtake.
O ſtupid Souls! clouded with Ignorance,
Is Chriſt and Heaven no fair Inheritance,
Compar'd with yours? or is Eternity
A ſhorter term than yours? that you ſhould ply
The one ſo cloſe, and totally neglect
The other, as not worth your leaſt reſpect.
Perhaps the Devil, whoſe Plot from you's conceal'd,
Perſwades your Title's good, and firmly ſeal'd
By God's own Spirit; though you never found
One act of ſaving Grace to lay a ground
For that Perſwaſion. Soul, he hath thee faſt,
Though he'll not let thee know it till the laſt.
Lord, waken Sinners, make them underſtand
'Twixt thee and them how rawly matters ſtand.
Give them no quiet reſt until they ſee
Their Souls ſecur'd better than Lands can be.

Occaſional Meditations upon Birds, Beaſts, Trees, Flowers, Rivers, and other Objects.

MEDITATIONS on Birds.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the Singing of a Nightingal.

WHO that hears ſuch various, raviſhing and exquiſite Melody, would imagine the Bird that makes it to be of ſo ſmall and contemptible a Body and Feather? Her charming Voice engaged not only my attentive Ear, but my Feet alſo, to make a nearer approach to that ſhady Buſh, in which that excellent Muſician ſat veiled, and the nearer I came, the ſweeter the Melody ſtill ſeemed to be; but when I had deſcribed the Bird her ſelf, and found her to be little bigger, and no better Feather'd than a Sparrow, it gave my Thoughts the occaſion of this following Application.

This Bird ſeems to me the lively Emblem of the formal Hypocrite, (1.) In that ſhe is more in ſound than ſubſtance, a loud and excellent Voice, but a little deſpicable Body; and it recall'd to my Thoughts the Story of Plutarch, who hearing a Nightingal, deſired to have one killed to feed upon, not queſtioning but ſhe would pleaſe the Palate as well as the Ear; but when the Nightingal was brought him, and he ſaw what a poor little Creature it was, Truly, ſaid he, thou art vox & preterea nihil, a meer Voice and nothing elſe: So is the Hypocrite; did a Man hear him ſometimes in more publick Duties and Diſcourſes, O, thinks he, what an excellent Man is this! What a choice and rare Spirit is he of? But follow him home, obſerve him in his private Converſation and Retirements, and then you will judge Plutarch's Note as applicable to him as the Nightingal. (2.) This Bird is obſerved to Charm moſt ſweetly, and ſet her Spirits all on work, when ſhe perceives ſhe hath engaged attention; ſo doth the Hypocrite, who lives and feeds upon the Applauſe and Commendation of his Admirers, and cares little for any of thoſe Duties which bring in no returns of Praiſe from Men; he is little pleaſed with a ſilent Melody and private Pleaſure betwixt God and his own Soul.

Scire tuum nihil eſt niſi te ſcire hoc ſciat alter.

Alas! his Knowledge is not worth a Pin,
If he proclaim not what he hath within.

He is more for the Theater than the Cloſet; and of ſuch Chriſt ſaith, Verily they have their Reward. (3.) Naturaliſts obſerve the Nightingal to be an ambitious Bird, that cannot endure to be outvied by any; ſhe will rather chuſe to dye than be excell'd; a notable Inſtance whereof we have in the following pleaſant Poem, tranſlated out of Strada, concerning the Nightingal and Lutaniſt.

Now

Now the declining Sun did downward bend
From higher Heavens, and from his Looks did send A milder Flame, when near to Tyber's flow,
A Lutanist allayed his careful woe,
With sounding Charms, and in a greeny seat
Of shady Oak, took shelter from the heat:
A Nightingal o'erheard him that did use
To sojourn in the neighbour Groves, the Muse
That fill'd the place, the Syrene of the Wood (Poor harmless Syrene) stealing near, she stood Close lurking in the Leaves, attentively
Recording that unwonted Melody.
She con'd it to her self, and every strain
His Fingers play'd, her Throat return'd again.
The Lutanist perceiv'd, an answer sent
From th' imitating Bird, and was content
To shew her play more fully, then in haste
He tries his Lute, and giving her a taste
Of the ensuing Quarrel, nimbly beats
On all his Strings, as nimbly she repeats,
And wildly raging o'er a Thousand Keys,
Sounds a shrill warning for her after-lays:
With rowling hand the Lutanist then plies
The trembling Threads, sometimes in scornful wise
He brushes down the Strings, and strikes them all
With one even stroke, then takes them several
And culls them o'er again, his sparkling Joints
With busy discant mincing on the Points,
Reach back again with nimble touch, then stays;
The Bird replies, and Art with Art repays.
Sometimes as one unexpert, and in doubt
How she might wield her voice, she draweth out
Her tone at large, and doth at first prepare
A solemn Strain, nor wear'd with winding Air,
But with an equal Pitch, and constant Throat,
Makes clear the Passage for her gliding Note;
Then cross-division diversly she plays,
And loudly chanting out her quickest lays,
Poyses the Sound, and with a quivering Voice
Falls back again; he wondring how so choice,
So various Harmony could issue out
From such a little Throat, doth go about
Some harder Lessons, and with wondrous Art
Changing the Strings doth up the Trebble dart,
And downward smite the Base, with painful stroke
He beats; and as the Trumpet doth provoke
Sluggards to fight, even so his wanton skill
With mingled discord joins the hoarse and shrill,
The Bird this also tunes, and whilst she cuts
Sharp Notes with melting Voice, and mingled puts Measures of middle sound, then suddenly
She thunders deep, and jugs it inwardly
With gentle murmur, clear and dull she sings
By course, as when the Martial warning rings;
Believ't the Minstrel blusht, with angry mood;
Inflam'd (quoth he) thou Chantress of the Wood,
Either from thee I'll bear the Prize away
Or vanquisht, break my Lute without delay.
Unimitable Accents then he strains,
His hand flies on the Strings, in one he chains
Far different numbers, chasing here and there,
And all the Strings he labours every where;
Both flat and sharp he strikes, and stately grows
To prouder strains, and backward as he goes Doubly divides, and closing up his Lays
Like a full Quire, a shivering Consort plays;
Then pausing stood in expectation
Of his Corrival, nor durst answer on.
But she, when practice long her Throat had whet,
Enduring not to yield, at once doth set
Her Spirits all to work, and all in vain;
For whilst she labours to express again,
With Nature's simple Voice, such divers Keys,
With slender Pipes such lofty Notes as these,
O'er-match'd with high-designs, o'er-match'd with woe,
Just at the last Encounter of her Foe,
She faints, she dies, falls on his Instrument
That conquer'd her, a fitting Monument.
So far even little Souls are driven on,
Struck with a vertuous Emulation.

And even as far are Hypocrites driven on by their Ambition and Pride, which is the Spur that provokes them in their Religious Duties.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the sight of many small Birds chirping about a dead Hawk.

HEaring a whole Quire of Birds chirping and twinking together, it engaged my Curiosity a little to enquire into the occasion of that Convocation, which mine Eye quickly imform'd me of; for I perceived a dead Hawk in the Bush, about which they made such a noise, seeming to triumph at the Death of their Enemy; and I could not blame them to sing his Knell, who like a Canibal was wont to feed upon their living Bodies; tearing them limb from limb, and scaring them with his frightful appearance. This Bird which living was so formidable, being dead, the poorest Wren or Titmouse fears not to chirp or hop over. This brings to my thoughts the base and ignoble ends of the greatest Tyrants and greedy Ingrossers of the World, of whom (whilst living) Men were more afraid than Birds of a Hawk, but dead became objects of contempt and scorn. The death of such Tyrants is both inglorious and unlamented; When the Wicked perish, there is shouting, Prov. 11. 12. which was exemplifyed to the Life at the Death of Nero, of whom the Poet thus sings,

Credibile est multos Romam agitasse jocos.

When Cruel Nero dyed, th' Historian tells,
How Rome did mourn with Bonefires, Plays and Bells.

Remarkable for Contempt and Shame have the ends of many Bloody Tyrants been; so Pompey the Great, of whom Claudian the Poet sings.

Nudus pascit aves jacet en qui possidet orbem
Exiguæ telluris inops. ——— ———

Birds eat his Flesh? lo, now he cannot have,
Who rul'd the World, a space to make a Grave.

The like is storied of Alexander the Great, who lay unburied thirty days, and William the Conqueror, with many other such Birds of Prey; whilst a beneficial and holy Life is usually closed up in an honourable and much lamented Death.

For mine own part, I wish I may so order my Conversation in the World, that I may live when I am dead in the Affections of the best, and leave an honourable Testimony in the Consciences of the worst; that I may oppress none, do good to all, and say when I dye, as good Ambrose did, I am neither ashamed to live, or afraid to dye.

MEDIT.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the sight of a Black-bird taking Sanctuary in a Bush, from a pursuing Hawk.

WHen I saw how hardly the poor Bird was put to it to save her self from her Enemy, who hovered just over the Bush in which she was flutter-ing and squeeking, I could not but hasten to relieve her, (pity and succour being a due debt to the di-stressed) which when I had done, the Bird would not depart from the Bush, though her Enemy were gone; this act of Kindness was abundantly repaid by this Meditation, with which I returned to my walk. My Soul, like this Bird, was once distressed, pursued, yea, seized by Satan, who had certainly made a Prey of it, had not Jesus Christ been a San-ctuary to it in that hour of danger. How ready did I find him to receive my poor Soul into his protecti-on? Then did he make good that sweet Promise to my experience, Those that come unto me, I will in no wise cast out. It call'd to mind that pretty and pertinent Story of the Philosopher, who walk-ing in the Fields, a Bird pursued by a Hawk flew into his Bosom; he took her out, and said, Poor Bird, I will neither wrong thee, nor expose thee to thine Enemy, since thou cameſt to me for refuge. So tender, and more than so, is the Lord Jesus to distressed Souls, that come unto him. Blessed Je-sus! How should I love and praise thee, glorify and admire thee, for that great Salvation thou hast wrought for me? If this Bird hath fallen into the Claws of her Enemy, she had been torn to pieces indeed and devoured, but then a few minutes had dispatch'd her, and ended all her Pain and Misery; but had my Soul fallen into the hand of Satan, there had been no end of its Misery.

Would not this scared Bird be flushed out of the Bush that secured her, though I had chased away her Enemy? And wilt thou (my Soul) ever be enticed or scared from Christ thy refuge? O let this for ever engage thee to keep close to Christ, and make me say with Ezra, and now, O Lord! Since thou hast given me such a deliverance as this, should I again break thy Commandments?

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the sight of divers Lennets intermingling with a Flock of Sparrows.

METhinks these Birds do fitly resemble the gau-dy Courtiers, and the plain Peasants; how bruce and richly adorned with shining and va-ious coloured Feathers, (like Scarlet, richly laid ith Gold and Silver-Lace) are those? How plain-clad, in a home-spun Country Russet are these? ne Feathers (saith our Proverb) make Proud Birds; d yet the Feathers of the Sparrow are as useful d beneficial, both for warmth and flight, though t so gay and ornamental as the others; and if th were stript out of their Feathers, the Sparrow uld prove the better Bird of the two; by which ee, that the greatest worth doth not always lye der the finest Cloaths. And besides, God can ke mean and homely Garments as useful and neficial to poor despised Christians, as the ruffl-; and shining Garments of wanton Gallants are them; and when God shall strip Men out of external Excellencies, these will be found to excel their glittering Neighbours in true worth and excellency.

Little would a Man think such rich Treasures of Grace, Wisdom, Humility, &c. lay under some Russet Coats.

Sæpe sub attrita latitat sapientia veste.

Under poor Garments more true worth may be Than under Silks that whistle, Who but he?

Whilst on the other side, the Heart of the Wick-ed (as Solomon hath observed) is little worth, how much soever his Cloaths be worth. Alas! It falls out too frequently among us, as it doth with Men in the Indies, who walk over the rich Veins of Gold and Silver Ore, which lyes hid under a rag-ged and barren Surface, and know it not. For my own part, I desire not to value any Man by what is extrinsical and worldly, but by that true internal excellency of Grace, which makes the Face to shine in the Eyes of God and good Men: I would contemn a vile Person, tho' never so glorious in the Eye of the World; but honour such as fear the Lord, how sordid and despicable soever to appear-ance.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the sight of a Robin-read-breast picking up a Worm from a Mole-hill, then rising.

OBserving the Mole working industriously be-neath, and the Bird watching so intently above, I made a stand to observe the issue. When in a little time the Bird descends and seizes upon a Worm, which I perceived was crawling apace from the Enemy below that hunted her, but fell to the share of another which from above waited for her. My Thoughts presently suggested these Meditati-ons from that occasion; methought this poor Worm seem'd to be the Emblem of my poor Soul which is more endangered by its own Lusts of Pride and Covetousness, than this Worm was by the Mole and Bird; my Pride, like the aspiring Bird, watch-es for it above; my Covetousness, like this subter-ranean Mole, digging for it beneath. Poor Soul! What a sad Dilemma art thou brought to? If thou go down into the Caverns of the Earth, there thou art a Prey to thy Covetousness that hunts thee; and if thou aspire, or but creep upward, there thy Pride waits to ensnare thee. Distressed Soul! Whi-ther wilt thou go? Ascend thou mayest, not by a vain Elation, but by a heavenly Conversation, be-side which there is no way for thy Preservation, the way of Life is above to the Wise, &c.

Again, I could not but observe the accidental be-nefit this poor harmless Bird obtain'd by the labour of the Mole, who hunting intentionally for her self, unburroughed and feretted out this Worm for the Bird, who possibly was hungry enough, and could not have been relieved for this time, but by the Mole, the fruit of whose labour she now feeds upon. Even thus the Lord oft-times makes good his Word to his People: The Wealth of the Wicked is laid up for the Just. And again, The Earth shall help the Woman. This was fully exem-plifyed in David, to whom Nabal, that churlish Muckworm, speaks all in Possessives. Shall I take my Bread, &c. and give it to one I know not whom? And yet David reaps the Fruits of all the Pains and Toil of Nabal at last. Let it never encourage me to idleneſs, that ſometimes God gives his People the Fruit of others Sweat; but if Providence reduce me to neceſſity, and diſable me from helping my ſelf, I doubt not then but it will provide Inſtruments to do it. The Bird was an hungry, and could not dig.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon the ſhooting of two Finches fighting in the Air.

HOW ſoon hath Death ended the Quarrel betwixt theſe two little Combatants! Had they agreed better, they might have lived longer; 'twas their own Contention that gave both the opportunity and provocation of their Death; and though living they could not, yet being dead, they can lye quietly together in my hand.

Fooliſh Birds, was it not enough that Birds of Prey watched to devour them, but they muſt peck and ſcratch one another? Thus have I ſeen the Birds of Paradice (Saints I mean) tearing and wounding each other, like ſo many Birds of Prey, and by their unchriſtian Conteſts giving the occaſion of their common Ruin; yea, and that not only when at liberty, as theſe were, but when engaged alſo; and yet, as one well obſerves, if ever Chriſtians will agree, 'twill either be in a Priſon, or in Heaven; for in a Priſon, their quarrelſome Luſts lye low, and in Heaven they ſhall be utterly done away.

But O! What pity is it, that thoſe who ſhall agree ſo perfectly in Heaven, ſhould bite and devour each other upon Earth? That it ſhould be ſaid of them, as one ingeniouſly obſerved, who ſaw their Carcaſſes lye together, as if they had lovingly embraced each other, who fell together by a Duel, Quanta amicitia ſe invicem amplectuntur; qui mutua & implacabili inimicitia periérunt.

Embracing one another, now they lye,
Who by each others bloody Hands did dye.

Or as he ſaid, who obſerved how quietly and peaceably the Duſt and Bones, even of Enemies, did lye together in the Grave; Non tanta vivi pace conjuncti eſſetis; you did not live together ſo peaceably. If Conſcience of Chriſt's Command will not, yet the Conſideration of common Safety ſhould powerfully perſwade to Unity and Amity.

MEDIT. VII.

Upon the ſinging of a blind Finch by Night.

A Dear Friend, who was a great Obſerver of the Works of God in Nature, told me, That being entertain'd with a ſight of many Rarities at a Friend's Houſe in London; among other things, his Friends ſhewed him a Finch, whoſe Eyes being put out, would frequently ſing, even at Midnight. This Bird, in my Opinion, is the lively Emblem of ſuch careleſs and unconcerned Perſons, as the Prophet deſcribes, Amos 6. 4, 5, 6. who chant to the Viol, when a diſmal night of trouble and affliction hath over-ſhadowed the Church. You would have thought it ſtrange to have heard this Bird ſing in the Night, when all others are in a deep ſilence; except the Owl, an unclean Bird, and the Nightingal; which before we made the Emblem of the Hypocrite. And as ſtrange it is, that any, except the Prophane and Hypocritical, ſhould ſo unſeaſonably expreſs their Mirth and Follity; that any of Sion's Children ſhould live in Pleaſure, whilſt ſhe herſelf lyes in Tears. The People of God, in Pſal. 137, tells us, in what poſtures of Sorrow they ſat; even like Birds, with their Heads under their Wings, during the Night of their Captivity. How ſhall we ſing the Lord's Songs in a ſtrange Land? 'Tis like enough, ſuch as can ſing, and chant in the Night of the Church's Trouble, have well feathered their Neſts in the Days of her Proſperity. However, let them know, that God will turn their unſeaſonable Mirth into a ſadder Note; and thoſe that now ſit ſad and ſilent, ſhall ſhortly ſing for Joy of Heart, when the Winter is paſt, the Rain over and gone, the Flowers appear again upon the Earth, and the time of the ſinging of Birds is come

MEDIT. VIII.

Upon the comparing of two Birds-Neſts.

'TIS pretty to obſerve the Structure and Commodiouſneſs of the Habitations of theſe little Architects, who, though they act not by Reaſon and Counſel, but only by natural Inſtinct, yet Reaſon it ſelf could hardly have contrived a neater Building of ſuch ſimple Materials. How neatly hath the Thruſh ceiled or plaiſtered his Neſt, with admirable Art and Induſtry? How warmly hath the Finch matted his? And both well fenced againſt the Injury of the Weather.

How comfortably hath Nature provided convenient Habitations for theſe weak and tender young Ones, who have warm Lodging, and variety of Proviſions hourly brought them, without their Care or Pains? This trifling Object ſuggeſts to my Thoughts a more excellent and ſerious Contemplation, even the wonderful and unparallel'd Abaſement of Jeſus Chriſt, who for my ſake voluntarily ſubmitted himſelf to a more deſtitute and neglected State, than theſe Birds of the Air; for Mat. 8. he ſaith, The Foxes have Holes, and the Birds of the Air have Neſts; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his Head.

Vulpibus in ſaltu rupes exciſa latebras

Heinſ. in lo

The craggy Rock to Foxes Holes affords,
The pleaſant Woods a reſting Place to Birds;
For Chriſt no fixed Habitation found,
But what was borrowed, or the naked Ground.

O melting Conſideration; that the glorious S of God, Joh. 1. 14. The Lord of Glory, Jam. 2. The brightneſs of his Father's Glory, Heb. 1. 2. was Rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9. And thought it not Robbery be equal with God, Phil. 2. 8. who from all E nity was infinitely and ineffably delighting and joycing in the Boſom of his Father, Prov. 8. 30. T he, I ſay, ſhould manifeſt himſelf in fleſh, 2 T 3. 16. Yea, in the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, Rom. 8 That is, in fleſh that had the marks and effects Sin upon it, as hunger, thirſt, pain, wearineſs mortality, and not only ſo, but to chuſe ſuch State of outward Meanneſs and Poverty, never ing poſſeſſed of a Houſe in this World; but liv as a Stranger in other Mens Houſes, and ſtoop in this respect to a lower Condition than the very Birds of the Air, and all this for Enemies. O let it work both admiration and thankfulness in my Soul! my Body is better accommodated than the Body of my Lord. Dear Jesus! by how much the viler thou madest thy self for me, by so much the dearer shalt thou be to me.

Quanto pro me vilior, tanto mihi charior.

MEDIT. IX.

Upon the early singing of Birds.

HOW am I reproved of Sluggishness by these watchful Birds! which cheerfully entertain the very dawning of the Morning, with their cheerful and delightful warblings! they set their little Spirits all a-work betimes, whilst my nobler Spirits are bound with the Bonds of soft and downy Slumbers. For shame, my Soul! suffer not that Publican sleep to seize so much of thy time, yea, thy best and freshest time; reprove and chide thy sluggish Body, as a good Bishop once did when upon the same occasion he said, Surrexerunt passeres, & steterunt Pontifices.

The early chirping Sparrows may reprove
Such lazy Bishops as their Beds do love.

Of many Sluggards it may be said, as Tully said of Verres, the Deputy of Sicily, Quod nunquam solem nec orientem, nec occidentem viderat; that he never saw the Sun rising being in Bed after, nor setting, being in Bed before.

'Tis pity that Christians of all Men, should suffer sleep to cut such large Thongs out of so narrow a Hide, as their time on Earth is. But alas! it is not so much early rising, as a wise improving those fresh and free Hours with God, that will enrich the Soul; else, as our Proverb saith, A Man may be early up, and never the near; yea, far better it is to be found in Bed sleeping, than to be up doing nothing, or that which is worse than nothing. O my Soul! Learn to prepossess thy self every morning with the Thoughts of God, and suffer not those fresh and sweet operations of the Mind to be prostituted to Earthly things; for that is experimentally true, which one in this case hath pertinently observed; that if the World get the start of Religion in the Morning, it will be hard for Religion to overtake it all the Day after.

My Case in point, to the Horn. Left.

MEDIT. X.

Upon the haltering of Birds, with a Grain of Hair.

OBserving in a snowy Season, how the poor hungry Birds were haltered and drawn in by a Grain of Hair cunningly cast over their Heads, whilst poor Creatures they were busily feeding, and suspected no danger; and even whilst their Companions were drawn away from them, one after another; all the Interruption it gave the rest, was only for a minute or two, whilst they stood peeping into that hole through which their Commons were drawn, and then fell to their Meat again as busily as before; I could not chuse but say, Even thus surprizingly doth Death steal upon the Children of Men, whilst they are wholly intent upon the Cares and Pleasures of this Life, not at all suspecting its near approach. These Birds saw not the Hand that ensnared them, nor do they see the Hand of Death plucking them one after another into the Grave.

Omnibus obscuras injecit illa manus. Ovid.

Death's steps as swift, and yet no noise it makes;
Its hand unseen, but yet most surely takes.

And even as the surviving Birds for a little time seemed to stand affrighted, peeping after their Companions, and then as busie as ever to their Meat again: Just so it fares with the careless inconsiderate World, who see others dayly dropping into Eternity round about them, and for the present are a little startled, and will look into the Grave after their Neighbours, and then fall as busily to their Earthly Employments and Pleasures again as ever, till their own turn comes.

I know my God! That I must dye as well as others; but, O let me not dye as do others, let me see Death before I feel it, and conquer it before it kill me; let it not come as an Enemy upon my back, but rather let me meet it as a Friend half way! Dye I must, but let me lay up that good Treasure before I go, Mat. 6. 19. Carry with me a good Conscience when I go, 2 Tim. 4. 6, 7. And leave behind me a good Example when I am gone, and then let Death come and welcome!

Meditations upon BEASTS.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the clogging a straying Beast.

HAD this Bullock contented himself, and remained quietly within his own bounds, his Owner had never put such an heavy Clog upon his Neck; but I see the prudent Husbandman chuses rather to keep him with this Clog, than lose him for want of one. What this Clog is to him, that is Affliction and Trouble to me; had my Soul kept close with God in Liberty and Prosperity, he would never thus have clogged me with Adversity; yea, and happy were it for me, if I might stray from God no more, who hath thus clogged me with preventive Afflictions. If, with David, I might say, Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I have kept thy word, Psal. 119. 67. O my Soul! 'tis better for thee to have thy Pride clogged with Poverty, thy Ambition with Reproach, thy carnal Expectancies with constant Disappointments, than to be at Liberty, to run from God and Duty.

'Tis true, I am sometimes as weary of these Troubles, as this poor Beast is of the Clog he draws after him, and often wish my self rid of them; but yet, if God should take them off, for ought I know I might have cause to wish them on again, to prevent a greater Mischief. 'Tis storied of Basil, that for many Years he was sorely afflicted with an inveterate Head-ach, (that was his Clog) he often prayed for the removal of it; at last God removed it, but instead thereof he was sorely exercised with the motions and temptations of Lust, which when he perceived, he as earnestly desired his Head-ach again, to prevent a greater Evil. Lord! if my Corruptions may be prevented by my Affliction, I refuse not to be clogged with them; but my Soul rather rather desires thou wouldst hasten the time when I shall be for ever freed from them both.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the Love of a Dog to his Master.

HOw many weary steps, through mire and dirt, hath this poor Dog followed my Horse's heels to day, and all this for a very poor Reward? For all he gets by it at Night, is but Bones and Blows, yet will he not leave my Company, but is content upon such hard Terms, to travel with me from day to day.

O my Soul! What conviction and shame may this leave upon thee, who art often-times even weary of following thy Master Christ, whose Rewards and Encouragements of Obedience are so incomparably sweet and sure? I cannot beat back this Dog from following me, but every inconsiderable trouble is enough to discourage me in the way of my Duty. Ready I am to resolve as that Scribe did, Mat. 8. 19. Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest; but how doth my Heart faulter, when I must encounter with the difficulties of the way? O! Let me make a whole Heart-choice of Christ for my Portion and Happiness! And then I shall never leave him, nor turn back from following him, though the present Difficulties were much more, and the present Encouragements much less.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the fighting of two Rams.

TAking notice how furiously these Sheep, which by Nature are milde and gentle, did yet, like Bulls, push each other, taking their advantage by going back to meet with a greater Rage and Fury. Methought I saw in this a plain Emblem of the unchristian Contests and Animosities which fall out amongst them that call themselves the People of God, who are in Scripture also stiled Sheep, for their meekness and innocency; and yet, through the remaining Corruptions that are in them, thus do they push each other; (as one long since complained) non sicus ac.

Cum duo conversis inimica in prælia tauri,
Frontibus incurrunt ——— ———

Shall Christians one another wound and push,
Like furious Bulls, when they together rush?

The fighting of these Sheep doth in two respects notably comport with the sinful Practices of contending Christians, 1. That in this fight they engage with their Heads one against another: And what are they but those Head-notions, or Opposition of Sciences, falsly so called, that have made so many Broils and Uproars in the Christian World? O! What clashings have these heady Opinions caused in the Churches? First Heads, and then Hearts have clashed. Christians have not distinguished betwixt Adversarius litis, & personæ; an Adversary to the Opinion, and to the Person; but dipt their Tongues and Pens in Vinegar and Gall, shamefully aspersing and reproaching one another, because their Understandings were not cast into one Mould, and their Heads all of a bigness. But, 2. That which Country-men observe from the fighting of Sheep, That it presages foul and stormy Weather, is much more certainly consequent upon the fighting of Christ's Sheep. Do these clash and push? Surely it is an infallible Prognostick of an ensuing Storm, Mal. 4. 6.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the Catching of a Horse in a fat Pasture.

WHen this Horse was kept in poor short Leas, where he had much Scope, but little Grass, how gentle and tractable was he then? He would not only stand quiet to be taken, but come to hand of his own accord, and follow me up and down the Field for a Crust of Bread, or Handful of Oats; but since I turned him into this fat Pasture he comes no more to me, nor will suffer me to come near him, but throws up his Heels wantonly against me, and flies from me, as if I were rather his Enemy than Benefactor. In this I behold the Carriage of my own Heart towards God, who the more he hath done for me, the seldomer doth he he hear from me; in a low and afflicted State, how tractable is my Heart to Duty? Then it comes to the Foot of God voluntarily? But in an exalted Condition, how wildly doth my Heart run from God and Duty? With this ungrateful requital God faulted his own People, Jer. 3. 31. teachable and tractable in the Wilderness, but when fatted in that rich Pasture of Canaan, Then we are Lords, we will come no more to thee. How soon are all God's former Benefits forgotten? And how often is that ancient Observation verified, even in his own People?

Μετὰ τὴν δόσιν τάχυ γηράσκει χάρις.

Post munera cito consenescit gratia.

No sooner do we Gifts on some bestow,
But presently our Gifts Grey-headed grow.

But that's a bad Tenant, that will maintain Suit at Law against his Landlord with his own Rent; and a bad Heart, that will fight against God with his own Mercies. I wish it may be with my Heart, as it is reported to be with the Waters in the Kingdom of Congo, that are never so sweet to the Taste, as when the Tide is at the highest.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the Hunting of a Deer.

THE full-mouthed cry of these Dogs, which from the Morning have hunted this poor tir Deer, which is now no longer able to stand before them, but is compassed round with them, w thirst for, and will presently suck her Blood; brin to my Thoughts the Condition and State of Je Christ, in the Days of his Flesh, who was t hunted from place to place by Blood-thirsty E mies. Upon this very account, the 22d Psalm, wh treats of his Death, is inscribed with the Title Aljeleth Shahar, which signifies the Hind of Morning, and fully imports the same Noti which this occasion presented me with; for lo as the Hind or Deer, which is intended to be down that day, is rouzed by the Dogs early in Morn

Morning; so was Christ, in the very Morning of his Infancy, by bloody Herod, and that cruel Pack confederated with him. Thus was he chased from Place to Place, till that was fulfilled which was prophetically written of him in Vers. 16. of the forecited Psalm: For Dogs have compassed me about, the assembly of the Wicked have inclosed me; they pierced my hands and my feet.

And canst thou expect, O my Soul! to fare better than he did, or escape the Rage of bloody Men? Surely, if the Spirit of Christ dwell in thee, if his Holiness have favoured thee, those Dogs will winde it, and give thee chase too; they go upon the Scent of Holiness still, and would hunt to destruction every one, in whom there is aliquid Christi, any thing of Christ, if the gracious Providence of the Lord did not sometimes rate them off: For it is no less the pleasure which some wicked once take in hunting the People of God, than what Claudian the Poet observes Men use to take in hunting wilde Beasts.

Venator defessa thero quum membra reponit
Mens tamen ad Sylvas, & sua lustra redit.

Whilst weary Huntsmen in the Night do sleep,
Their Fancies in the Woods still hunting keep.

Lord! should I with the Hypocrite decline the Profession and Practice of Holiness, to escape the Rage of persecuting Enemies, at what time they cease, my own Conscience would begin to hunt me like a Blood-hound; let me rather chuse to be chased by Men than God, to flee before pursuing Enemies, than be dogged from Day to Day with a guilty Conscience.

Meditations upon TREES.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the fall of Blossoms, nipt by a frosty Morning.

BEholding in an early Spring, Fruit-trees embossed with beautiful Blossoms of various Colours, which breathed forth their delicious Odours into the circumambient Air, and adorned the Branches on which they grew, like so many rich Jewels, or glittering Pendents; and further observing, how these perfumed Blossoms dropt off, being bitten with the Frost, and discoloured all the Ground, as if a shower of Snow had fallen; I said within my self, these sweet and early Blossoms are not unlike my sweet and early Affections to the Lord, in the Days of my first acquaintance with him. O what fervent Love, panting Desires, and heavenly Delights beautified my Soul in those Days! the odoriferous Scent of the sweetest Blossoms, the Morning Breath of the most fragrant Flowers, hath not half that sweetness with which those my first Affections were enriched. O! happy Time, thrice pleasant Spring! My Soul hath it still in remembrance, and is humbled within me; for these also were but Blossoms which now are nipt and faded, that first Flourish is gone; my Heart is like the Winter's Earth, because thy Face, Lord! is to me like a Winter Sun. Awake, O North Wind! and come South Wind, blow upon my Garden, that the Spices thereof may flow out, then let my Beloved come into his Garden, and eat his pleasant Fruit!

MEDIT. II.

Upon the Knitting or Setting of Fruit.

I Have often observ'd, that when the Blossoms of a Tree set and knit, though the flourish thereof be gone, and nothing but the bare Rudiment of the expected Fruit be left; yet then the Fruit is much better secured from the danger of Frosts and Winds, than whilst it remained in the Flower or Blossom; for now it hath past one of those Critical Periods, in which so many Trees miscarry and lose their Fruit. And methought this Natural Observation fairly led me to this Theological Proposition; That good Motions and holy Purposes in the Soul, are never secured, and past their most dangerous Crisis, till they be turned into fixed Resolutions, and answerable Executions, which is as the knitting and setting of them.

Upon this Proposition my melting thoughts thus dilated, happy had it been for thee, my Soul! had all the blessed Motions of the Spirit been thus knit and fixed in thee. Oh, how have mine Affections blown and budded under the warm Beams of the Gospel! But a chill blast from the Cares, Troubles and Delights of the World without, and the Vanity and Deadness of the Heart within, have blasted all; my Goodness hath been but as a Morning Dew, or early Cloud that vanisheth away. And even of Divine Ordinances, I may say what is said of Humane Ordinances, They have perished in the using. A Blossom is but fructus imperfectus, & ordinabilis, an imperfect thing in it self, and something in order to Fruit; a good Motion and holy Purpose is but opus Imperfectum, & ordinabile, an imperfect Work, in order to a compleat Work of the Spirit; when that primus impetus, those first Motions were strong upon my Heart, had I then pursued them in the force and vigour of them, how many Difficulties might I have overcome? Revive thy Work, O Lord! And give not to my Soul a miscarrying Womb, or dry Breasts.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the sight of a fair spreading Oak.

WHAT a lofty flourishing Tree is here? It seems rather to be a little Wood, than a single Tree; every Limb thereof having the Dimensions and Branches of a Tree in it; and yet as great as it is, it was once but a little slip, which one might pull up with two Fingers; this vast Body was contained vertually and potentially in a small Acorn. Well then, I will never despise the day of small Things, nor despair of arriving to an eminency of Grace, tho' at present it be but as a bruised Reed, and the things that are in me be ready to dye. As things in Nature, so the things of the Spirit grow up to their fulness and perfection by slow and insensible degrees. The famous and heroical Acts of the most renowned Believers were such as themselves could not once perform, or it may be think they ever should. Great things, both in Nature and Grace, come from small and contemptible Beginnings.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the ſight of many Sticks lodged in the Branches of a choice Fruit-Tree.

HOW is this Tree batter'd with Stones, and loaded with Sticks, that have been thrown at it, whilſt thoſe that grow about it, being barren, or bearing harſher Fruit, eſcape untouch'd! Surely if its Fruit had not been ſo good, its uſage had not been ſo bad. And yet it is affirmed, That ſome Trees, as the Walnut, &c. bear the better for being thus bruiſed and batter'd.

Even thus it fares in both reſpects with the beſt of Men; the more holy, the more envied and perſecuted; every one that paſſes by will have a fling at them. Methinks I ſee how Devils and wicked Men walk round about the People of God, whom he hath encloſed in his Arms of Power, like ſo many Boys about an Orchard, whoſe Lips water to have a fling at them. But God turns all the Stones of Reproach into precious Stones to his People; they bear the better for being thus batter'd. And, in them, is that ancient Obſervation verified.

Creſcunt virtutum palmæ, creſcuntque Coronæ
Mutantur mundi prælia, pace Dei.

The Palms and Crowns of Virtue thus encreaſe;
Thus Perſecution's turned into Peace.

Let me be but fruitful to God in Holineſs, and ever abounding in the Work of the Lord, and then whilſt Devils and Men are flinging at me, either by Hand or Tongue Perſecutions, I will ſing amidſt them all with the Divine Poet.

What open Force, or hidden Charm,
Can blaſt my Fruit, or bring me harm,
While the Incloſure is this Arm?

Herb. Poem. p. 125.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the gathering of choice Fruit from a ſcrubbed unpromiſing Tree.

WOuld any Man think to find ſuch rare delicious Fruit upon ſuch an unworthy Tree to appearance as this is? I ſhould rather have expected the moſt delicious Fruit from the moſt handſome and flouriſhing Trees; but I ſee I muſt neither judge the worth of Trees or Men by their external form and appearance. This is not the firſt time I have been deceived in judging by that Rule; under fair and promiſing out-ſides I have found nothing of worth; and in many deformed deſpicable Bodies, I have found precious and richly furniſhed Souls. The Sap and Juice of this ſcrubbed Tree is concocted into rare and excellent Fruits, whilſt the Juice and Sap of ſome other fair, but barren Trees, ſerves only to keep them from rotting, which is all the uſe that many Souls which dwell in beautiful Bodies ſerve for; they have (as one ſaith) animam proſale; their Souls are but Salt to their Bodies. Or thus,

Is but like Salt, their Bodies to preſerve.

If God have given me a ſound Soul in a ſound Body, I have a double Mercy to bleſs him for; but whether my Body be vigorous and beautiful, or not, yet let my Soul be ſo: For as the eſteem of this Tree, ſo the eſteem and true Honour of every Man riſes rather from his fruitfulneſs and uſefulneſs, than from his ſhape and form.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon an excellent, but irregular Tree.

SEeing a Tree grow ſomewhat irregular, in a very neat Orchard, I told the Owner it was pity that Tree ſhould ſtand there; and that if it were mine I would root it up, and thereby reduce the Orchard to an exact uniformity. It was replied to this purpoſe, That he rather regarded the Fruit than the Form; and that this ſlight inconveniency was abundantly preponderated by a more conſiderable advantage. This Tree, ſaid he, which you would root up, hath yielded me more Fruit than many of thoſe Trees which have nothing elſe to commend them, but their regular Scituation. I could not but yield to the Reaſon of this Anſwer; and could wiſh it had been ſpoken ſo loud, that all our Uniformity-Men had heard it, who will not ſtick to root up many hundred of the beſt Bearers in the Lord's Orchard, becauſe they ſtand not in an exact order with other more conformable, but leſs beneficial Trees, who do perdere ſubſtantiam propter accidentia, deſtroy the Fruit, to preſerve the Form.

Not much unlike ſuch fooliſh Men are thoſe
That ſtrive for Shadows, and the Subſtance loſe.

Meditations upon a Garden.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the new Modelling of a Garden.

A Gentlewoman who had lately ſeen a neat and curious Garden, returns to her own with a greater diſlike of it than ever; reſolves to new model the whole Plat, and reduce it to a better Form; is now become ſo curious and neat, that not a Weed or Stone is ſuffered in it, but all muſt lye in exquiſite order; and whatever Ornament ſhe had obſerved in her Neighbours, ſhe is now reſtleſs till ſhe ſee it in her own.

Happy were it, thought I, if in an holy Emulation every one would thus endeavour to rectify the Diſorders of their own Converſation, by the excellent Graces they behold in the more heavenly and regular Lives of others. Some Chriſtians there are (I wiſh their Number were greater) whoſe Actions lye in ſuch a comely and beautful Order that few of their Neighbours can look upon their Examples without ſelf-conviction and ſhame; but few are ſo happy to be provok'd into ſelf-reformation by ſuch rare Patterns. I ſee it is much eaſier to pull up many Weeds out of a Garden, than one Corruption out of the Heart; and to procure an hundred Flowers to adorn a Knot, than one Grace to beautify the Soul. 'Tis more natural to corrupt Man to Envy, than to imitate the Spiritual Excellencies of others.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the pulling up a Leek.

A White head and a green tail! How well doth this reſemble an old wanton Lover, whoſe green youthful Luſts are not extinguiſhed, though his white head declares that Nature is almoſt ſo! Gray Hairs ſhould be always match'd with grave Deportments; and the Sins of Youth ſhould rather be the Griefs than Pleaſures of old Age. 'Tis ſad when when the Sins of the Soul, like the Diſeaſes of the Body, grow ſtronger, as Nature grows weaker: And it recals to my mind that ancient Obſervation of Menanber.

Γέρων ἐρασθὶς ἐχάτη κακὴ τύχη.
Sene amore captus, ultimum malum.
It is the worſt of Evils, to behold
Strong youthful Luſts to rage in one that's old.

'Tis a thouſand pities, that thoſe who have one Foot in the Grave, would live as if the other were in Hell! that their Luſts ſhould be ſo lively, when their Bodies are three parts dead! Such Sinful Practices bring upon them more Contempt and Shame than their hoary Heads and reverend Faces can procure them Honour.

Magna fuit capitis quondam reverentia cani,
Inque ſuo pretio ruga ſenilis erat.
Ovid. 5. Faſt.
Gray Hairs, and aged Wrinkles, did of old Procure more reverence than Bags of Gold.

But alas! How little reſpect or reverence can the hoary Head obtain amongſt wiſe Men, except it be found in the way of Righteouſneſs? I think the loweſt eſteem is too much for an old Servant of the Devil; and the higheſt Honour little enough for ancient and faithful Servant of Chriſt.

MEDIT. III.

Upon a heedleſs Tread in a curious Garden.

PAſſing through the ſmall Diviſions of a curious Knot, which was richly adorned with rare Tulips, and other beautiful Flowers, I was very careful to ſhun thoſe Flowers, which indeed had no other worth to commend them, but their exquiſite Colour, and unadviſedly trod upon and ſpoiled an excellent choice Herb, which, though it grew obſcurely, yet had rare Phyſick Vertues in it.

When I was made ſenſible of the involuntary Treſpaſs I had committed, I thought I could ſcarcely make the Owner a better Compenſation, than by telling him, that herein (though againſt my will) I did but tread in the Footſteps of the greateſt part of the World, who are very careful (as I was) to keep their due diſtance from ſplendid, though worthleſs Gallallts; mean while trampling upon, and cruſhing under foot, the obſcure, but moſt precious Servants of God in the World. As little do they heed theſe moſt excellent Perſons as I did this precious Herb.

Summa ingenia in occulto ſæpe latent ſaith Plautus.
Rare Wits and Herbs ſometimes do ſculk and ſhrink
In ſuch blind Holes, as one would little think.

For my own part, I deſire to tread upon no Man with the Foot of Contempt and Pride, much leſs upon any good Man; and that I may not, it concerns me to look before I ſtep; I mean, to conſider before I cenſure: Had I done ſo by this rare Herb, I had never hurt it.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon a withered Poſie taken up in the way.

FInding, in my walk, a Poſie of once ſweet and fragant, but now dry and withered Flowers, which I ſuppoſe to be thrown away by one that had formerly worn it: Thus, ſaid I, doth the unfaithful World uſe its Friends, when Providence hath blaſted and withered them; whilſt they are Rich and Honourable, they will put them into their Boſoms, as the Owner of this Poſie did, whilſt it was freſh and fragrant, and as eaſily throw them away, as uſeleſs and worthleſs things, when thus they come to be withered. Such uſage as this Petronius long ſince complained of.

Cum fortuna manet vultum ſervatis amici,
Cum cecedit turpi vertitis ora faga. (i. e.)
Are they in Honour? Then we ſmile like Friends;
And with their Fortunes all our Friendſhip ends.

But this looſe and deceitful Friendſhip ſtinks ſo odiouſly in the very Noſtrils of Nature, that a Heathen Poet ſeverely taxes and condemns it as moſt unworthy of a Man.

Turpe ſequi caſum, & fortunæ cedere, amicum
Et niſi ſit fœlix eſſe negare ſuum. (i. e.)
'Tis baſe to change with Fortune, and deny
A faithful Friend, becauſe in Poverty.

And is this indeed the Friendſhip of the World? Doth it thus uſe them whom once it honoured? Then Lord! let me never ſeek its Friendſhip. O, let me eſteem the Smiles and Honours of Men leſs, and thy Love and Favour more! Thy Love is indeed unchangeable, being pure, free, and built upon nothing that is mutable; thou never ſerveſt thy Friends as the World doth its Darlings.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the ſudden withering of a Roſe.

BEing with my Friend in a Garden, we gathered each of us a Roſe; he handled his tenderly, ſmell'd to it but ſeldom, and ſparingly; I always kept it to my Noſe, or ſqueezed it in my Hand, whereby in a very ſhort time it loſt both colour and ſweetneſs, but his ſtill remained as ſweet and fragrant as if it had been growing upon its own Root. Theſe Roſes, ſaid I, are the true Emblems of the beſt and ſweeteſt Creature-enjoyments in the World; which being moderately and cautiouſly uſed and enjoyed may for a long time yield ſweetneſs to the Poſſeſſor of them; but if once the Affection ſeize too greedily upon them, and ſqueeze them too hard, they quickly wither in our Hands, and we loſe the comfort of them; and that either through the Soul's ſurfeiting upon them, or the Lord's Righteous and Juſt removal of them, becauſe of the exceſs of our Affections to them; Earthly Comforts, like Pictures, ſhew beſt at a due diſtance. It was therefore a good Saying of Homer, Ἀνδὲι ξεινόδοκω, &c.

Mihi nunquam is placet hoſpes
Qui valde preterque modum odit vel amat.

I like him not, who at the rate
Of all his might doth love or hate.

'Tis a point of excellent Wiſdom to keep the golden Bridle of Moderation upon all the Affections we exerciſe upon Earthly things, and never to ſlip thoſe Reins, unleſs when they move towards God, in whoſe love there is no danger of exceſs.

MEDIT. VI.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon the ſudden withering of beautiful Flowers.

HOW freſh and orient did theſe Flowers lately appear, when being daſh'd over with the Morning Dew, they ſtood in all their Pride and Glory, breathing out their delicious Odours, which perfumed the Air round about them, but now are dayered and ſhrivelled up, and have neither any deſirable Beauty or Savour in them.

So vain a thing is the admired Beauty of Creatures, which ſo captivates the Hearts, and exerciſes a pleaſing Tyranny over the Affections of vain Man, yet is as ſuddenly blaſted as the Beauty of a Flower.

Forma bonum fragile eſt quantumque accedit ad annos,
Fit minor & ſpacio carpitur ipſa ſuo.
Nec ſemper violæ, nec ſemper lilia florent
Et riget amiſſis ſpina relicta roſis.
Tempus erit quo vos ſpeculum vidiſſe pigebit,
Jam veniunt rugæ quæ tibi torpus arent, &c.

Ovid de art.

How frail is Beauty! In how ſhort a time
It fades! like Roſes, which have paſt their prime.
So wrinkled Age the faireſt Face will plow,
And caſt deep Furrows on the ſmootheſt Brow.
Then where's that lovely tempting Face? Alas!
Your ſelves would bluſh to view it in a Glaſs.

If then thou delighteſt in Beauty (O my Soul) chuſe that which is laſting. There is a Beauty that never fades, even the Beauty of Holineſs upon the inner Man; this abides freſh and orient for ever, and ſparkles gloriouſly, when thy face (the Seat of natural Beauty) is become an abhorrent and loathſome Spectacle. Holineſs enamels and ſprinkles over the face of the Soul with a Beauty, upon which Chriſt himſelf is enamour'd; even imperfect Holineſs on Earth is a Roſe that breathes ſweetly in the Bud; in Heaven it will be full-blown, and abide in its prime to all Eternity.

MEDIT. VII.

Upon the tenderneſs of ſome choice Flowers.

HOW much care is neceſſary to preſerve the Life of ſome Flowers? They muſt be boxed up in the Winter, others muſt be covered with Glaſſes in their ſpringing up, the fineſt and richeſt Mould muſt be ſifted about the Roots, and aſſiduouſly watered, and all this little enough, and ſometimes too little to preſerve them, whilſt other common and worthleſs Flowers grow without any help of ours; yea, we have no leſs to do to rid our Gardens of them, than we have to make the former grow there.

Thus ſtands the Caſe with our Hearts, in reference to the motions of Grace and Sin. Holy Thoughts of God muſt be aſſiduouſly watered by Prayer, earthed up by Meditation, and defended by Watchfulneſs; and yet all this is ſometimes too little to preſerve them alive in our Souls. Alas! the Heart is a Soyl that agrees not with them, they are tender things, and a ſmall matter will nip and kill them. To this purpoſe is the Complaint of the Divine Poet.

Who would have thought a Joy ſo coy
To be offended ſo,
and go
So ſuddenly away.
Hereafter I had need take heed.
Joys among other things have wings,
And watch their opportunities of flight,
Converting, in a moment, day to night.

Herbert.

But vain Thoughts, and unholy Suggeſtions, theſe ſpread themſelves, and root deep in the Heart; they naturally agree with the Soil; ſo that it is almoſt impoſſible at any time to be rid of them. 'Tis hard to forget what is our Sin to remember.

MEDIT. VIII.

Upon the ſtrange means of preſerving the Life of Vegetables.

I Obſerve that Plants and Herbs are ſometimes killed by Froſts, and yet without Froſts they would neither live or thrive; they are ſometimes drowned by Water, and yet without Water they cannot ſubſiſt; they are refreſhed and cheered by the heat of the Sun, and yet that heat ſometimes kills and ſcorches them up. Thus lives my Soul, Troubles and Afflictions ſeem to kill all its Comforts; and yet without theſe its Comforts could not live. The Sun-blaſts of Proſperity ſometimes refreſh me, and yet thoſe Sun-blaſts are the likelieſt way to wither me: By what ſeeming Contradictions is the Life of my Spirit preſerved? What a Myſtery, what a Paradox is the Life of a Chriſtian?

Welcome my Health, this Sickneſs makes me well.
Med'cines adieu.
When with Diſeaſes I have liſt to dwell,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Strength, this Weakneſs makes me able.
Powers adieu.
When I am weary grown of ſtanding ſtable,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Wealth, this Loſs hath gain'd me more.
Riches adieu.
When I again grow greedy to be poor,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Credit, this Diſgrace is Glory.
Honours adieu.
When for Renown and Fame I ſhall be ſorry,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome Content this Sorrow is my Joy.
Pleaſures adieu.
When I deſire ſuch Griefs as may annoy,
I'll wiſh for you.
Health, Strength and Riches, Credit and Content,
Are ſpared beſt ſometimes, when they are ſpent.
Sickneſs and Weakneſs, Loſs, Diſgrace and Sorrow,
Lend moſt ſometimes, when moſt they ſeem to borrow.

And if by theſe contrary and improbable ways the Lord preſerves our Souls in Life, no marvel then we find ſuch ſtrange and ſeemingly contradictory Motions of our Hearts, under the various dealings of God with us, and are ſtill reſtleſs in what condition ſoever he puts us; which reſtleſs Frame was excellently expreſſed in that Pious Epigram of Reverend Gataker, made a little before his Death.

I Thirſt for Thirſtineſs, I weep for Tears,
Well pleas'd I am to be diſpleaſed thus:
The only thing I fear, is want of fears,
Suſpecting I am not ſuſpicious.
I cannot chuſe but live, becauſe I dye;
And when I am not dead, how glad am I!
Yet when I am thus glad for ſence of Pain,
And careful am leſt I ſhould careleſs be,
Then do I grieve for being glad again,
And fear, leſt carefulneſs take care for me.
Amidſt theſe reſtleſs thoughts this reſt I find,
For thoſe that reſt not here, there's reſt behind.

Jam tetigi portum valete.

Psal. 127. 2.

If you that crosse the Seas.
would by this Compass steer;

Nor need you Rocks to fear.

This Compass truly touchst, your Course will so direct,
Psal. 119. 105 That on the Rock your Souls shall knock, unless they it neglect.

Could you but learn this Art, then who would you annoy?
Psal. 119. 50. What inward Calms, amidst all Storms, might your poor Souls enjoy.

Sirs, if you would but take some Pains this Art to learn, Matt. 5. 16. You might be then Fishers of Men, and make a Rich Return.

When you have vacant Hours, and Time to be alone.

and spend some Time hereon.

If this may win your Thought to God from Self and Sin;

Navigation Spiritualiz'd:

OR

A NEW COMPASS for SEAMEN,

Consisting of XXXII POINTS;

Of { Pleasant OBSERVATIONS, Profitable APPLICATIONS, and Serious REFLECTIONS.

All concluded with so many Spiritual POEMS.

all Masters, Mariners and Seamen: Especially such as belong to the Borough of Clifton, Dartmouth and Hardnes, in the County of Devon.

IRS,

Find it Story'd of Anacharsis, that when one ask'd him, Whether the Living or the Dead were more? He returned this Answer, You must first tell me (saith he) in which Number I must place Sea-: Intimating thereby, that Sea-men are, as it were, rd sort of Persons, to be number'd neither with the g nor the Dead; their Lives hanging continually pence before them. And it was anciently account- most desperate Imployment, and they little bet- an lost Men that us'd the Seas. Through all Life (saith Aristotle) Three Things do especially repent me: First, That ever I reveal'd a Secret to a Woman. Secondly, That ever I remain'd one day without a Will. Thirdly, That ever I went to any place by Sea, whither I might have gone by Land. Nothing (saith another) is more miserable, than to see a Virtuous and Worthy Person upon the Sea. And although Custom, and the great Improvement of the Art of Navigation, have made it less formidable now, yet are you no further from Death than you are from the Waters, which is but a remove of two or three Inches. Now you that border so nigh upon the Confines of Death and Eternity every Moment, may well be supposed to be Men of singular Piety and Seriousness: For nothing more composes the Heart to such a frame, than the lively apprehensions of Eternity do; and none have greater external Advantages for that, than you have. But alas! for the generality, what sort of Men are more ungodly, and stupidly insensible of eternal Concernments? Living, for the moſt part, as if they had made a Covenant with Death, and with Hell were at agreement. It was an ancient ſaying, Qui neſcit orare, diſcat navigare, He that knows not how to Pray, let him go to Sea. But we may ſay now, (alas, that we may ſay ſo in times of greater light) He that would learn to be prophane, to drink and ſwear, and diſhonour God, let him go to Sea. As for Prayer, it is a rare thing among Seamen, they count that a needleſs Buſineſs: they ſee the prophane and vile deliver'd as well as others; and therefore, What profit is there if they Pray unto him? Mal. 3. 4. As I remember, I have read of a prophane Soldier, who was heard Swearing, though he ſtood in a place of great danger; and when one that ſtood by him warned him, ſaying, Fellow-Soldier, do not ſwear, the Bullets fly; he anſwer'd, They that ſwear come off as well as they that pray. Soon after a Shot hit him, and down he fell. Plato diligently admoniſh'd all Men to avoid the Sea; For (ſaith he) it is the School-maſter of all Vice and Diſhoneſty. Sirs! it is a very ſad conſideration to me, that you who float upon the great Deeps, in whoſe bottom ſo many Thouſand poor miſerable Creatures lie, whoſe Sins have ſunk them down, not only into the bottom of the Sea, but of Hell alſo, whither Divine Vengeance hath purſued them: That you (I ſay) who daily float, and hover over them, and have the roaring Waves and Billows that ſwallow'd them up, gaping for you as the next Prey, ſhould be no more effected with theſe Things. Oh what a terrible Voice doth God utter in the Storms! It breaks the Cedars, ſhakes the Wilderneſs, makes the Hinds to Calve, Pſal. 29. 5. And can it not ſhake your Hearts? This Voice of the Lord is full of Majeſty, but his Voice in the Word is more efficacious and powerful, Heb. 4. 12. to convince and rip up the Heart, This Word is exalted above all his Name, Pſal. 138. 3. and if it cannot awaken you, it is no wonder you remain ſecure and dead, when the Lord utters his Voice in the moſt dreadful Storms and Tempeſts. But if neither the Voice of God uttered in his dreadful Works, or in his glorious Goſpel, can effectually awaken and rouze, there is an Euroclidon, a fearful Storm coming, which will ſo awaken your Souls, as that they ſhall never ſleep any more, Pſal. 11. 6. Upon the wicked he ſhall rain Snares, Fire and Brimſtone, and an horrible Tempeſt: This is the Portion of their Cup. You that have been at Sea in the moſt violent Storms, never felt ſuch a Storm as this, and the Lord grant you never may; no Calm ſhall follow this Storm. There are ſome among you, that, I am perſwaded, do truly fear that God in whoſe hand their Life and Breath is; Men that fear an Oath, and are an honour to their Profeſſion; who drive a Trade for Heaven, and are diligent to ſecure the happineſs of their Immortal Souls, in the Inſurance-Office above; but for the generality, alas! they mind none of theſe things. How many of you are coaſting to and fro, from one Country to another? But never think of that Heavenly Country above, nor how you may get the Merchandize thereof, which is better than the Gold of Ophir. How oft do you tremble to ſee the foaming Waves dance about you, and waſh over you? Yet conſider not how terrible it will be to have all the Waves and Billows of God's wrath to go over your Souls, and that for ever. How glad are you after you have been long toſs'd upon the Ocean, to deſcry Land? And how yare and eagerly do you look out for it? Who yet never had your Hearts warmed with the Conſideration of that Joy which ſhall be among the Saints, when they arrive at the Heavenly Strand, and ſet foot upon the ſhore of Glory.

O Sirs! I beg of you, if you have any regard to thoſe precious immortal Souls of yours, which are alſo imbarked for Eternity, whither all Winds blow them, and will quickly be at their Port of Heaven or Hell, that you will ſeriouſly mind theſe things, and learn to ſteer your courſe to Heaven, and improve all Winds (I mean opportunities and means) to waft you thither.

Here you venture Life and Liberty, run through many Difficulties and Dangers, and all to compaſs a periſhing Treaſure; yet how often do you return diſappointed in your Deſign? Or if not, yet it is but a fading ſhort-liv'd Inheritance, which like the flowing Tide, for a little while, covers the ſhore, and then returns, and leaves it naked and dry again: And are not Everlaſting Treaſures worth venturing for? Good Souls, be wiſe for Eternity: I here preſent you with the Fruit of a few ſpare Hours, redeemed for your ſakes, from my other Studies and Imployments, which I have put into a new Dreſs and Mode. I have endeavour'd to cloathe Spiritual Matters in your own Dialect and Phraſes, that they might be the more intelligible to you; and added ſome pious Poems, with which the ſeveral Chapters are concluded, trying by all means to aſſault your ſeveral Affections, and as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, to catch you with guile. I can ſay nothing of it; I know it cannot be without its manifeſt Imperfections, ſince I am conſcious of ſo many in myſelf: Only this I will adventure to ſay of it, That be defective or empty ſoever it be in other reſpects, yet is ſtuffed and filled with much true love to, and earneſt deſires after the ſalvation and proſperity of your Souls. And for the other defects that attend it, I have only two things to offer, in way of excuſe: It is the firſt Eſſay that I ever made in this kind, wherein I had no Preſident: And it was haſtned, for your ſakes, too ſoon out of my hands, that it might be ready to wait upon you, when you undertake your next Voyage; that I could not reviſe and poliſh it. Nor indeed was I ſollicitous about the ſtile; I conſider, I writ not to Critical and Learned Perſons; my deſign is not to pleaſe your Fancies any further, than I might thereby get advantage to profit your Souls. I will not queſtion your welcome Reception of it: If God ſhall bleſs theſe Meditations to the Converſion of any one of you, you will be the Gainers, and my Heart ſhall ſhare in joyce, even mine. How comfortably ſhould we ſhake Hands with you, when you go abroad, were we perſwaded your Souls were intereſted in Chriſt, and ſecure from periſhing, in the New Covenant? What life would it put into our Prayers for you, when you are abroad, to conſider that Jeſus Chriſt is interceding for you in Heaven, whilſt we are your Remembrancers here on Earth? How quiet would our Hearts be, when you are abroad in Storms, did we know you had a ſpecial Intereſt in him whom Winds and Seas obey? To conclude, what Joy would it be to your Godly Relations to ſee you return new Creatures? Doubtleſs more than if you came home laden with the Riches of the Indies.

Come, Sirs! ſet the heavenly Jeruſalem upon the Point of your New Compaſs; make all the Sail you can for it; and the Lord give you a proſperous Gale and a ſafe Arrival in that Land of Reſt.

So prays

Your moſt Affectionate Friend to ſerve you in Soul-Concernments,

JOHN FLAVEL.

To every Seaman Sailing Heaven-ward.

Ingenious Seaman,

THE Art of Navigation, by which Iſlands eſpecially are enriched, and preſerved in ſafety from Forenſical Invaſions; and the wonderful Works of God in the great Deep, and Foreign Nations are moſt delightfully and fully beheld, &c is an Art of exquiſite excellency, ingenuity, rarity, and mirability: But the Art of Spiritual Navigation is the Art of Arts. It is a gallant thing to be able to carry a Ship rich laden round the World; but it is much more gallant to carry a Soul (that rich loading, a Pearl of more worth than all the Merchandiſe of the World) in a Body (that is liable to leaks and bruiſes as any Ship is) through the Sea of this World (which is as unſtable as Water, and hath the ſame briniſh Taſte and ſalt Guſt which the Waters of the Sea have) ſafe to Heaven (the beſt Haven) ſo as to avoid ſplitting upon any Soul-ſinking Rocks, or ſtriking upon any Soul-drowning Sands. The Art of Natural Navigation is a very great Myſtery; but the Art of Spiritual Navigation is by much a greater Myſtery. Humane Wiſdom may teach us to carry a Ship to the Indies; but the Wiſdom only that is from above can teach us to ſteer our Courſe aright to the Haven of Happineſs. This Art is purely of Divine Revelation. The Truth is, Divinity (the Doctrine of living to God) is nothing elſe but the Art of Soul-Navigation, revealed from Heaven. A meer Man can carry a Ship to any deſired Port in all the World, but no meer Man can carry a Soul to Heaven. He muſt be a Saint, he muſt be a Divine (ſo all Saints are) that can be a Pilot to carry a Soul to the fair Haven in Emanuel's Land. The Art of Natural Navigation is wonderfully improved ſince the coming of Chriſt, before which time (if there be truth in Hiſtory) the uſe of the Load-ſtone was never known in the World; and before the vertue of that was revealed unto the Mariner, it is unſpeakable with what uncertain wandrings Seamen floated here and there, rather than ſailed the right and direct way. Sure I am, the Art of Spiritual Navigation is wonderfully improved ſince the coming of Chriſt; it oweth its cleareſt and fulleſt Diſcovery to the coming of Chriſt. This Art of Arts is now perfectly revealed in the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament; but the Rules thereof are diſpers'd up and down therein. The collecting and methodizing of the ſame, cannot but be a Work very uſeful unto Souls: Though when all is done, there is an abſolute neceſſity of the teachings of the Spirit, and of the anointing that is from above, to make Souls Artiſts in ſailing Heaven-ward. The Ingenious Author of the Chriſtian's Compaſs, or the Mariner's Companion, makes three parts of this Art (as the School-men of Divinity) viz. Speculative, Practical and Affectionate. The principal things neceſſary to be known by a Spiritual Seaman, in order to the ſteering rightly and ſafely to the Port of Happineſs, he reduceth to four Heads, anſwerable to the four general Points of the Compaſs; making God our North; Chriſt our Eaſt; Holineſs our South; and Death our Weſt Points. Concerning God, we muſt know, 1. That he is, Heb. 11. 6. and that there is but one God, 1 Cor. 8. 5,6. 2. That this God is that Supreme Good, in the enjoyment of whom all true Happineſs lies, Pſal. 4. 6, 7. Mat. 5. 8. --- 18. 20. 3. That (Life Eternal lying in God, and he being incomprehenſible and unconceivable in Eſſence, as being a Spirit) our beſt way to eye him is in his Attributes, Exod. 34. 5, 6, 7. and Works, Rom. 1. 20. and eſpecially in his Son, 2 Cor. 4. 6. 4. That as God is a Spirit, ſo our chiefeſt, yea, only way of knowing, enjoying, ſerving and walking with him, is in the Spirit likewiſe, Joh. 4. 24. Concerning Chriſt, we muſt know, 1. That he is the true Sun which ariſeth upon the World, by which all are enlightned, John 1. 9. Mal. 3. 2. Luke 1. 78, 79. 2. That God alone is in him, reconciling himſelf to the World, 2 Cor. 5. 19. 1 Cor. 1. 30. John 14. 6. 3. That Jeſus Chriſt is only made ours by the union and in-dwelling of himſelf in us through the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 9. 10. and 6. 17. John 16. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 12. 3, 13. 4. That the way of the Spirit's uniting us to Chriſt, is by an act of Power on his part, and by an act of Faith on our parts, Joh. 3. 16. laſt; 5. 29. Eph. 3. 17. Concerning Holineſs, we muſt know, 1. That whoever is in Chriſt is a new Creature, 2 Cor. 5. 17. 1 Cor. 6. 11. 2. Holineſs is the Souls higheſt Luſtre, Exod. 15. 11. when we come to perfection in Holineſs, then is our Sun at the height in us. 3. Holineſs, is Chriſt filling the Soul; Chriſt our Sun is at higheſt in our Hearts, when they are moſt holy. 4. This Holineſs is that which is directly oppoſite to Sin; Sin ecclipſes Holineſs, and Holineſs ſcatters Sin, Heb. 7. 26. Phil. 2. 15. 2 Pet. 3. 11. Concerning Death, we muſt know, 1. Death is certain; the Sun of our Life will ſet in Death; when our Days come about to this Weſtern-Point, it will be Night, Heb. 9. 27. Pſal. 49. 7, 9. 2. If we dye in our Sins out of Chriſt, we are undone for ever, Joh. 8. 24. Phil. 1. 21. 3. It is our benighting to dye, but it's not our annihilating, 1 Cor. 15. Rev. 20. 12. 4. After Death comes Judgment; all that dye ſhall ariſe to be judged, either for Life or Death the ſecond time, Heb. 9. 27. Mat. 25. Heb. 6. 2. Theſe four heads, and the particulars under them are as neceſſary to be known in Spiritual Navigation, as the four Points of the Compaſs are in Natural Navigation. The things which we ought to do, in order to our arrival to our Happineſs, our Author makes as many as there be Points in the Compaſs. And for an help to Memory, we may begin every particular with initial known Letters, on the Points of the Compaſs. 1. N. Never ſtir or ſteer any courſe, but by Light from God, Pſal. 119. 105. Iſa. 8. 10. 2. N. and by E. Never Enter upon any Deſign, but ſuch as tends towards Chriſt, Acts 10. 43. 3. N. N. E. Note Nothing Enviouſly, which thrives without God, Pſal. 73. 12, 13. 4. N. E. and by N. Never Enterprize Not-warrantable Courſes, to procure any the moſt prized or conceited Advantages, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. 5. N. E. Now Entertain the ſacred Commands of God, if hereafter thou expect the ſoveraign Conſolations of God, Pſ. 119. 48. 6. N. E. and by E. Never eſteem Egypt's Treaſures

Treaſures ſo much, as for them to forſake the People of God, Heb. 11. 26. 7. E. N. E. Err Not, Eſpecially in Soul-Affairs, Jam. 1. 16. 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. 2 Tim. 2. 18. 8. E. and by N. Eſchew Nothing but Sin, 1 Per. 3. 11. Job 1. 7, 8, —— 31. 34. 9. E. Eſtabliſh thy Heart with Grace, Heb. 13. 9. 10. E. and by S. Suffer every Evil of puniſhment of Sorrow, rather than leave the ways of Chriſt and Grace. 13. S. E. Sigh Earneſtly for more enjoyments of Chriſt. 14. S. E. and by S. Seek Evermore ſome Evidences of Chriſt in you the hope of Glory. 15. S. S. E. Still Set Eternity before you, in regard of enjoying Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 17. 24. 16. S. and by E. Settle it Ever in your Soul, as a Principle which you will never depart from, That Holineſs and true Happineſs are in Chriſt and by Chriſt. 17. S. Set thy ſelf always as before the Lord, Pſal. 16. 8. Acts 2. 25. 18. S. and by W. See Weakneſs haſtning thee to Death, even when thou art at the higheſt pitch or point. 19. S. S. W. See Sin Which is the ſting of Death, as taken away by Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. 20. S. W. and by S. Store up Wiſely Some proviſions every day for your dying day. 21. S. W. Set Worldly things under your feet, before Death come to look you in the Face. 22. S. W. and by W. Still Weigh and Watch with loins girded and lamps trimmed, Luke 12. 35, 36, 37. 23. W. S. W. Weigh Soul-Works, and all in the ballance of the Sanctuary. 24. W. and by S. Walk in Sweet communion with Chriſt here, and ſo thou mayſt dye in peace, Luke 2. 29. 25. W. Whatſoever thy condition be in this World, eye God as the diſpoſer of it, and therein be contented, Phil. 4. 11. 26. W. and by N. Walk Not according to the courſe of the moſt, but after the example of the beſt. 27. W. N. W. Weigh Not What Men ſpeak or think of thee, ſo God approve thee, 2 Chron. 10. 18. Rom. 2. 28, 29. 28. N. W. and by W. Never Wink at, but Watch againſt ſmall Sins, or neglect little Duties, Eph. 5. 15. 29. N. W. Never Wiſh raſhly for Death, nor love life too inordinately, Job 3. 4. 30. N. W. and by N. Now Work Nimbly 'ere Night come, Job. 12. 35, 36. Eccleſ. 9. 10. 31. N. N. W. Name Nothing When thou pleadeſt with God for thy Soul, but Chriſt and Free-grace, Dan. 9. 17. 32. N. and by W. Now Welcome Chriſt, if at death thou wouldſt be welcomed by Chriſt. A tender, quick, enlivened, and enlightned Conſcience, is the only Point upon which we muſt erect theſe practical Rules of our Chriſtian Compaſs, Heb. 13. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Our Memory, that is the Box in which this Compaſs muſt be kept, in which theſe Rules muſt be treaſured, that we may be as ready and expert in them, as the Mariner is in his Sea-compaſs. So much for the Speculative and Practical parts of the Art of Soul-Spiritual-Navigation. The Affectionate part doth principally lye in the ſecret motions or movings of the Soul towards God, in the Affections which are raiſed and warmed, and eſpecially appear active in Meditation: Meditation being as it were the Limbeck or Still in which the Affections heat and melt, and, as it were, drop ſweet ſpiritual Waters. The affectionate Author of the Chriſtian's Compaſs doth indeed, in the third and laſt part of his Undertaking, hint at ſeveral Meditations which the ſpiritual Seaman is to be acquainted with, unto which thou haſt an excellent Supplement in this New Compaſs for Seamen. This Collection is prefix'd, that at once thou mayſt view all the Compaſſes (both the Speculative, Practical, and Affectionate) by which thou muſt ſteer Heaven-ward. What further ſhall be added by way of Preface, is not to commend this New Compaſs, which indeed (2 Cor. 3. 1.) needs no ουσατικῶν ἐπιστολῶν, Letters of Commendation, or any Panegyrick to uſher it into any honeſt Heart; but to ſtir up all, eſpecially Seamen, to make Conſcience of uſing ſuch choice helps for the promoting the ſanctification and ſalvation of their Souls, for the making of them as dexterous in the Art of Spiritual Navigation, as any of them are in the Art of Natural Navigation. Conſider therefore,

1. What rich Merchandize thy Soul is. Chriſt aſſures us, one Soul is more worth than all the World. The Lord Jeſus doth as it were put the whole World into one Scale, and one Soul in the other, and the World is found too light, Mat. 16. 26. Shouldſt thou by skill in Natural Navigation carry ſafe all the Treaſures of the Indies into thine own Port, yea, gain the whole World, and for want of skill in Spiritual Navigation loſe thy Soul, thou wouldſt be the greateſt loſer in the World. So far wilt thou be from profiting by any of thy Sea-Voyages. There is a plain μείωσις in thoſe words of Chriſt, What is a Man profited if he ſhall gain the whole World, and loſe his own Soul? Or what ſhall a Man give in exchange for his Soul? More is meant, than is ſpoken.

2. What a leaking Veſſel thy body is in which this unſpeakable, inconceivable rich Treaſure, thy Soul, is embarked! O the many Diſeaſes and Diſtempers in the Humours and Paſſions, that thy body is ſubject to! It is above 2000 Years ago, that there have been reckoned up 300 Names of Diſeaſes; and there be many under one Name, and many Nameleſs, which poſe the Phyſicians not only how to cure them, but how to call them. And for the Affections and Paſſions of the Mind; the Diſtempers of them are no leſs deadly to ſome, than the Diſeaſes of the Body. But beſides theſe internal Cauſes, there are many external Cauſes of Leaks in this Veſſel, as * poiſonous Malignities, wrathful Hoſtilities, and caſual Miſhaps; very ſmall matters may be of great Moment to the ſinking of this Veſſel. The leaſt Gnat in the Air may choak one, as it did Adrian, a Pope of Rome; a little Hair in Milk may ſtrangle one, as it did a Counſellor in Rome; a little Stone of a Raiſin may ſtop ones Breath, as it did the Poetical Poet Anacreon. Thus you ſee what a leaking Veſſel you ſail in. Now the more leaky any Ship is, the more need there is of skill to ſteer wiſely.

Eraſmi Chiliad. p. 299.

The ſmalleſt Pore is a Leak wide enough to let in Death, and ſink thy Veſſel.

* In Nubis, quæ eſt Æthiopia, venenum eſt cujus grani unias decima pars hominem, vel unum granum decem homines, Dan. Sennert. Hypom. Phyſ. Cap. 2. P. 47.

3. Conſider what a dangerous Sea the World is, in which thy Soul is to ſail in the leaking Ship of thy Body. As there are not more changes in the Sea, than are in the World, the World being only conſtant in inconſtancy, The Faſhion of this World paſſeth away, 1 Cor. 7. 31. ſo there are no more dangers in the Sea for Ships, than there are in the World for Souls. In this world Souls meet with Rocks and Sands, Syrens and Pyrates. Worldly Temptations, wordly Luſts, and worldly Company cauſe many to drown themſelves in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. The very things of this World endanger our Souls. By worldly Objects we ſoon grow worldly. It is hard to touch Pitch, and not be defiled. The Luſt of this World ſtain our glory, and the Men of this World pollute all they converſe with. A Man that keeps company with the Men of this World, is like him that walketh in the Sun, tanned inſenſibly. Thus you have hinted the dangerouſneſs of the Sea wherein you are to ſail. Now the more dangerous the Sea is, the more requiſite it is the Sailer be an Artiſt.

4. Conſider, what if through want of skill in the Heavenly Art of Spiritual Navigation, thou ſhouldſt not ſteer thy Courſe aright! I will inſtance only in two conſequents thereof. 1. Thou wilt never arrive at the Haven of Happineſs. 2. Thou ſhalt be be drowned in the Ocean of God's Wrath. As true as the Word of God is true; as ſure as the Heavens are over thy head, and the Earth under thy feet; as ſure as thou yet liveſt and breatheſt in this Air: ſo true and certain it is, thou ſhalt never enter into Heaven, but ſink into the depth of the bottomleſs Pit. Am I not here a Meſſenger of the ſaddeſt Tydings that ever yet thy Ears did hear? Poſſibly now thou makeſt a light matter of theſe things, becauſe thou doſt not know what it is to miſs of Heaven, what it is for ever to lye under the Wrath of God; but hereafter thou wilt know fully what it is to have thy Soul loſt eternally, ſo loſt, as that God's mercies, and all the good there is in Chriſt, ſhall never ſave it; and as God hath ſet and ordered things, can never ſave it. Hereafter thou wilt be perfectly ſenſible of the good that thou mighteſt have had, and of the Evil that ſhall be upon thee (this is God's peculiar Prerogative, to make a Creature as ſenſible of Miſery as he pleaſeth) then thou wilt have other thoughts of theſe things than now thou haſt. Then the Thoughts of thy mind ſhall be buſied about thy loſt Condition, both as to the Pain of Loſs, and the Pain of Senſe; ſo that thou ſhalt not be able to take any Eaſe any moment; then, that thy Torments may be encreaſed, they acknowledge, the truth of thy apprehenſions, yea, the the ſtrength of them, ſhall be encreaſed; thou ſhalt have the true and deep apprehenſions of the greatneſs of that good that thou ſhalt miſs of, and of that evil which thou ſhalt procure unto thy ſelf; and then thou ſhalt not be able to chuſe, but to apply all thy Loſs, all thy Miſery to thy ſelf, which will force thee to roar out, O my Loſs; O my Miſery! O my unconceivable unrecoverable Loſs and Miſery! Yea, for the increaſing of thy Torments, thy Affections and Memory ſhall be enlarg'd. O that, to prevent that Loſs and Miſery, theſe things may now be known and laid to heart! O that a blind Underſtanding, a ſtupid Judgment, a bribed Conſcience, a hard Heart, a bad Memory, may no longer make Heaven and Hell to ſeem but trifles to thee! Thou wilt then eaſily be perſwaded to make it thy main buſineſs here, to become an Artiſt in Spiritual Navigation. But to ſhut up this Preface, I ſhall briefly acquaint Seamen, why they ſhould, of all others, be Men of ſingular Piety and Heavenlineſs, and therefore more than ordinarily ſtudy the heavenly Art of Spiritual Navigation. O that Seamen would therefore conſider,

1. How nigh they border upon the Confines of Death and Eternity every moment. There is but a ſtep, but an inch or two between them and their Graves continually. The next Guſt may over-ſet them; the next Wave may ſwallow them up. In one place lies lurking dangerous Rocks, in another perilous Sands, and every-where ſtormy Winds, ready to deſtroy them. Well may the Seamen cry out, Ego caſtrinum non habui: I have not had a Morrow in my hands theſe many Years. Should not they then be extraordinary ſerious and heavenly continually? Certainly (as the Reverend Author of this New Compaſs well obſerves) nothing more compoſeth the Heart to ſuch a frame, than the lively apprehenſions of Eternity do; and none have greater external advantages for that, than Seamen have.

2. Conſider (Seamen) what extraordinary help you have by the Book of the Creatures; the whole Creation is God's Voice, it is God's excellent Hand-writing, or the Sacred Scriptures of the Moſt High, to teach as much of God, and what reaſons we have to bewail our Rebellion againſt God, and to make conſcience of obeying God only, naturally and continually. The Heavens, the Earth, the Waters, are the three great Leaves of this Book of God, and all the Creatures are ſo many Lines in thoſe Leaves. All that learn not to fear and ſerve God by the help of this Book, will be left inexcuſable, Rom. 1. 20. How inexcuſable then will ignorant and ungodly Seamen be; Seamen ſhould, in this reſpect, be the beſt Scholars in the Lord's School, ſeeing they do more, than others, ſee the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the great Deep, Pſal. 107. 24.

3. Conſider how often you are nearer Heaven than any People in the World. They mount up to heaven, Pſal. 107. 26. It has been ſaid of an ungodly Miniſter, that contradicted his Preaching in his Life and Converſation, That it was pity he ſhould e'er come out of the Pulpit, becauſe he was there as near Heaven as ever he would be. Shall it be ſaid of you, upon the ſame account, That 'tis pity you ſhould come down from the high-tow'ring Waves of the Sea? Should not Seamen, that in ſtormy Weather have their feet (as it were) upon the Battlements of Heaven, look down upon all earthly Happineſs in this World but as baſe, wateriſh and worthleſs? The great Cities of Campania ſeem but ſmall Cottages to them that ſtand on the Alpes. Should not Seamen, that ſo oft mount up to Heaven, make it their main buſineſs here, once at laſt to get into Heaven? What (Seamen) ſhall you only go to Heaven againſt your Wills? When Seamen mount up to Heaven in a Storm, the Pſalmiſt tells us, That their Souls are melted becauſe of Trouble. O that you were continually as unwilling to go to Hell, as you are in a Storm to go to Heaven!

4. And laſtly, Conſider what Engagements lie upon you to be ſingularly holy, from your ſingular Deliverances and Salvations. They that go down to the Sea in Ships, are ſometimes in the Valley of the ſhadow of Death, by reaſon of the ſpringing of perilous Leaks; and yet miraculouſly delivered, either by ſome wonderful ſtopping of the Leak, or by God's ſending ſome Ship within their ſight, when they have been far out of ſight of any Land; or by his bringing their near-periſhing Ship ſafe to ſhore. Sometimes they have been in very great danger of being taken by Pyrates, yet wonderfully preſerved, either by God's calming of the Winds in that part of the Sea where the Pyrates have ſailed, or by giving the poor purſued Ship ſtrong Gale of Wind to run away from their Purſuers; or by ſinking the Pyrates, &c. Sometimes their Ships have been caſt away, and yet they themſelves wonderfully got ſafe to ſhore upon Planks, Yards, Maſts, &c. I might be endleſs in ennumerating their Deliverances from Drowning, from Burning, from Slavery, &c. (Sure Seamen) your extraordinary Salvations lay more than ordinary Engagement upon you, to praiſe, love, fear obey, and truſt in your Saviour and Deliverer. I have read, that the enthralled Grecks were ſo affected with their Liberty, procured by Flaminius the Roman General, that their ſhrill Acclamations of Σωτὴρ, Σωτήρ, A Saviour, a Saviour, made the very Birds falls down from the Heavens aſtoniſhed. O how ſhould Seamen be affected with their Sea-Deliverances! Many that have been delivered from Turkiſh Slavery, have vowed to be Servants to their Redeemers all their days of their Lives. Ah, Sirs, will not you be more than ordinarily God's Servants all the days of you Lives, ſeeing you have been ſo oft, ſo wonderfully redeemed from Death it ſelf by him? Verily, do what you can, you will dye in God's Debt. As for me, God forbid that I ſhould ſin againſt the Lord in ceaſing to pray for you, 1 Sam. 12. 23, 24. That by the peruſal of this ſhort and ſweet Treatiſe, wherein the judicious and ingenious Author hath well mixed utile dulci, Profit and Pleaſure, you may learn the good and right way, even to fear the Lord, and ſerve him in Truth with all your Hearts, conſidering how great things he hath done for you: This is the hearty Prayer of

Your Cordial Friend, earneſtly deſirous of a proſperous Voyage for your precious and immortal Souls,

The AUTHOR to the READER.

WHen Dewy-cheek'd Aurora doth diſplay
Her Curtains, to let in the New-born Day,
Her heavenly Face looks Red, as if it were Dy'd with a modeſt Bluſh, 'twixt Shame and Fear.
Sol makes her bluſh, ſuſpecting that he will Scorch ſome too much, and others leave to chill.
With ſuch a Bluſh, my little New-born Book
Goes out of hand, ſuſpecting ſome may look Upon it with Contempt, while others raiſe
So mean a Piece too high, by flattering Praiſe.
Its Beauty cannot make its Father dote;
'Tis a poor Babe, clad in a Sea-green Coat.
It's gone from me too young, and now is run
To Sea, among the Tribe of Zebulun.

Go, little Book, thou many Friends wilt find
Among that Tribe, who will be very kind;
And many of them Care of thee will take,
Both for thy own, and for thy Father's ſake.
Heav'n ſave it from the dangerous Storms and Guſts
That will be rais'd againſt it by Mens Luſts.
Guilt makes Men angry, Anger is a Storm,
But ſacred Truth's thy ſhelter, fear no harm.
On Times, or Perſons, no Reflection's found!
Though with Reflections few Books more abound.
Go, little Book, I have much more to ſay,
But Seamen call for thee, thou muſt away.
Yet e're you have it, grant me One Requeſt;
Pray do not keep it Priſoner in your Cheſt.

A

A New Compass for Seamen:

OR,

NAVIGATION Spiritualiz'd.

CHAP. I.

The Launching of a Ship plainly sets forth Our double State, by First and Second Birth.

OBSERVATION.

NO sooner is a Ship built, launched, rigged, victualled and manned, but she is presently sent out into the boisterous Ocean, where she is never at rest, but continually fluctuating, tossing and la-ouring, until she be either overwhelmed and ecked in the Sea, or through Age, Knocks and ruises, grows leaky and unserviceable; and so is led up, and ript abroad.

APPLICATION.

No sooner come we into the World as Men, or Christians, by a natural or supernatural Birth; t thus we are toss'd upon a Sea of Troubles, Job 7. Yet Man is born to trouble, as the Sparks fly wards. The Spark no sooner comes out of the re, but it flies up naturally; it needs not any ternal force, help or guidance, but ascends from Principle in it self: So naturally, so easily, doth rouble rise out of Sin. There is radically all the isery, Anguish and Trouble in the World in our rupt Natures. As the Spark lies close hid in Coals, so doth misery in Sin: Every sin draws Rod after it. And these sorrows and troubles not only on the Body, in those breaches, flaws, ormities, pains, aches, diseases, to which it is ject, which are but the groans of dying Nature, its crumbling, by degrees, into dust again; but all our Employments and Callings also, Gen. 3. 18, 19. These are full of pain, trouble, and ppointment, Hag. 1. 6. We earn Wages, and it into a Bag with holes, and disquiet our selves vain; all our Relations full of trouble. The ostle speaking to those that Marry, saith, 1 Cor. 28. Such shall have trouble in the Flesh. Upon ich words one glosseth thus: Flesh and Trouble marry'd together, whether we marry or no:

Mr. Whate. Care-Cloth.

But they that are marry'd, marry with, and match into new Troubles: All Relations have their burdens, as well as their comforts. were endless to ennumerate the sorrows of this ; and yet the Troubles of the Body, are but Body of our Troubles: The spirit of the Curse upon the spiritual and noblest part of Man. Soul and Body, like to Ezekiel's Roll, are ten full with sorrows, both within and without. So that we make the same Report of our lives, when we come to dye, that old Jacob made before Pharaoh, Gen. 47. 9. Few and evil have the days of the years of our lives been. For what hath Man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the Sun? For all his days are sorrows, and his travel grief, yea, his Heart taketh no rest in the Night: This is also vanity, Eccles. 2. 22, 23.

Neither doth our New Birth free us from troubles, though then they be sanctify'd, sweetned, and turned into Blessings to us. We put not off the Humane, when we put on the Divine Nature; nor are we then freed from the Sense, though we be deliver'd from the sting and curse of them. Grace doth not presently pluck out all those Arrows that Sin hath shot into the sides of Nature, 2 Cor. 7. 5. When we were come into Macedonia, our Flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side: Without were fightings, and within are fears. Rev. 7. 14, These are they that come out of great Tribulations. The first Cry of the New-born Christian (says one) gives Hell an Alarm, and awakens the rage both of Devils and Men against him. Hence Paul and Barnabas acquainted those now Converts, Acts 14. 22. That through much Tribulation they must enter into the Kingdom of God: And we find the state of the Church, in this World, set out Isa. 54. 11.) by the similitude of a distressed Ship at Sea: O thou afflicted [and tossed] with Tempests, and not comforted. [Tossed] as Jonas's Ship was; for the same word is there used, Jonas 1. 11, 13. as a Vessel at Sea, stormed, and violently driven without Rudder, Mast, Sail or Taclings. Nor are we to expect freedom from those Troubles, until harboured in Heaven; see 2 Thess. 1. 7. O what large Catalogues of Experiences do the Saints carry to Heaven with them, of their various Exercises, Dangers, Trials, and marvellous Preservations and Deliverances out of all! And yet all these Troubles without, are nothing to those within them; from Temptations, Corruptions, Desertions, by Passion and Compassion: Besides their own, there comes daily upon them the Troubles of others; many Rivulets fall into this Channel and Brim, yea, often overflow the Banks, Psal. 34. 19. Many are the Afflictions of the Righteous.

REFLECTION.

Hence should the graceless Heart thus reflect upon it self. O my Soul! into what a Sea of Troubles art thou launched forth! And what a sad case thou art in! Full of Trouble, and full of Sin; and these do mutually produce each other. And that which is the most dreadful Consideration of all, is, That I cannot see the end of them. As for the Saints, they suffer in the World as well as I; but it is but for a while, 1 Pet. 5. 10. and then they suffer no more, 1 Thes. 1. 7. But all Tears shall be wiped away from their Eyes, Rev. 17. 17. But my Troubles look with a long Visage: Ah! they are but the beginning of sorrows, but a parboyling before I be roasted in the Flames of God's eternal Wrath. If I continue as I am, I shall but deceive my self, if I conclude I shall be happy in the other World, because I have met with so much sorrow in this: For I read, Jude 7. that the Inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah, though consumed to Ashes, with all their Estates and Relations, (a sorer Temporal Judgment than ever yet befel me) do, notwithstanding that, continue still in everlasting Chains, under Darkness, in which they are reserved unto the Judgment of the great Day. The Troubles of the Saints are sanctified to them, but mine are fruits of the Curse. They have spiritual Consolations to ballance them, which flow into their Souls in the same height and degree as Troubles do upon their Bodies, 2 Cor. 1. 5. But I am a stranger to their Comforts, and intermeddle not with their Joys, Prov. 14. 10. If their Hearts be surcharged with Trouble, they have a God to go to; and when they have open'd their Cause before him, they are eased, return with comfort, and their Countenance is no more sad, 1 Sam. 1. 18. When their Belly, is as Bottles, full of new Wine, they can give it vent by pouring out of their Souls into their Father's Bosom: But I have no interest in, nor acquaintance with this God; nor can I pray unto him in the Spirit. My Griefs are shut up like Fire in my bosom, which preys upon my spirit. This is my Sorrow, and I alone must bear it. O my Soul, look round about thee! What a miserable case art thou in? Rest no longer satisfied in it, but look out for a Christ also. What though I be a vile, unworthy Wretch? yet he promiseth to love freely, Hos. 14. 4. and invites such as are heavy-laden to him, Mat. 11. 28.

Hence also should the gracious Soul reflect sweetly upon it self after this manner: And is the World so full of trouble? O my Soul, what cause hast thou to stand admiring at the Indulgence and Goodness of God to thee! Thou hast hitherto had a smooth Passage comparatively to what others have had. How hath Divine Wisdom ordered my Condition, and cast my Lot? Have I been chastised with Whips? others with Scorpions: Have I had no peace without? Some have neither had peace without nor within, but Terrors round about: Or have I felt trouble in my Flesh and Spirit at once? Yet have they not been extream, either for time or measure. And hath the World been a Sodom, an Egypt to thee? Why then dost thou thus linger in it, and hanker after it? Why do I not long to be gone, and sigh more heartily for Deliverance? Why are the thoughts of my Lord's coming no sweeter to me, and the day of my full deliverance no more panted for? And why am I no more careful to maintain peace within, since there is so much trouble without? Is not this it that puts weight into all outward troubles, and makes them sinking, that they fall upon me when my spirit is dark or wounded?

The POEM.

My Soul, art thou besieged with troubles round about?
If thou be wise, take this Advice, to keep these troubles out.

Wise Men will keep their Conscience as their Eyes;
For in their Conscience their best Treasure lies.
See you be tender of your inward Peace;
That shipwrackt, then your Mirth and Joy must cease.
If God from you your outward Comforts rend,
You'll find what need you have of such a Friend.
If this be not by Sin destroy'd and lost,
You need not fear, your Peace will quit your cost.
If you'ld know How to sweeten any grief,
Though ne'er so great, or to procure relief Against th' Afflictions, which like deadly Darts
Most fatal are to Men of carnal Hearts;
Reject not that which Conscience bids you chuse;
And chuse not you, what Conscience saith, Refuse.
If Sin you must, or Misery under lye,
Resolve to bear, and chuse the Misery.

CHAP. II.

In the vast Ocean Spiritual Eyes descry
God's boundless Mercy, and Eternity.

OBSERVATION.

THE Ocean is of a vast extent and depth though supposedly measurable, yet not to b sounded by Man. It compasseth about the whol Earth, which in the account of Geographers, Twenty one thousand and six hundred Miles i compass; yet the Ocean invirons it on every side Psal. 104. 25. and Job 11. 9. Suitable to which that of the Poet.

Tum freta diffudit, rapidisque tumescere ventis
Jussit & ambite circumdare littora terræ. Ovi

He spread the Seas, which then he did command,
To swell with Winds, and compass round the Land

And for its Depth, who can discover it? T Sea in Scripture is called, The Deep, Job 38. 3 The Great Deep, Gen. 7. 11. The gather together of the Waters into one place, Gen. 9. If the vastest Mountain were cast into it, would appear no more than the head of a Pin i Tun of Water.

APPLICATION.

This in a lively manner shadows forth the in nite and incomprehensible Mercy of our Go whose Mercy is said to be over all his Works, Ps 145. 9. In how many sweet Notions is the Me of God represented to us in the Scripture? He said to be Plenteous, Psal. 4. 5. Abundant, 1 Pet 3. Rich, Eph. 2. 4. in Mercy; then, that his M cies are unsearchable, Ephes. 3. 8. High as the H ven above the Earth, Psal. 10. 4. Which are high and vast, that the whole Earth is but a sm point to them: yea, they are not only compa to the Heavens, but to come home to the Meta to the Depths of the Sea, Mic. 7. 19. which swallow up Mountains as well as Mole-hills; in this Sea God hath drowned Sins of a drea height and aggravation, even Scarlet, Crimson, deep-dyed with many intensive aggravations, 1. 18. In this Sea was the Sin of Manasseh dro ed; and of what magnitude that was, may be s 2 Chron. 33. 3. Yea, in this Ocean of Mercy, the Lord drown and cover the Sins of Paul, tho a Blasphemer, a Persecutor, Injurious, 1 Tim. 1. None, saith Augustin, more fierce than Paul a the Perſecutors, and therefore none greater among Sinners: To which himſelf willingly ſubſcribes, 1 Tim. 1. 15. yet pardoned. How hath Mercy rode in triumph, and been glorified upon the vileſt of Men! How hath it ſtop'd the ſlanderous mouth of Men and Devils! It hath yearned upon Fornicators, Idolaters, Adulterers, Thieves, Covetous, Drunkards, Revilers, Extortioners; to ſuch hath the Scepter of Mercy been ſtretched forth, upon their unfeigned repentance and ſubmiſſion, 1 Cor. 6. 9. What doth the Spirit of God aim at, in ſuch a large accumulation of Names of Mercy? But to convince poor Sinners of the abundant fulneſs and riches of it, if they will but ſubmit to the Terms on which it is tender'd to them.

In the vaſtneſs of the Ocean, we have alſo a lively Emblem of Eternity. Who can comprehend or meaſure the Ocean, but God? And who can comprehend Eternity, but he that is ſaid to inhabit it? Iſa. 57. 15. Though ſhallow Rivers may be drained and dried up, yet the Ocean cannot. And though theſe tranſitory Days, Months and Years will at laſt expire and determine; yet Eternity ſhall not. O! it is a long World! and amazing Matter! what is Eternity, but a conſtant permanency of Perſons and Things, in one and the ſame State and Condition for ever; putting them beyond all poſſibility of change? The Heathens were wont to ſhadow it by a Circle, or a Snake twiſted round. It will be to all of us, either a perpetual Day or Night, which will not be meaſured by Watches, Hours, Minutes. And as it cannot be meaſured, ſo neither can it ever be diminiſhed. When thouſands of years are gone, there is not a minute leſs to come. Gerhard and Drexelius do both illuſtrate it by this known ſimilitude: Suppoſe a Bird were to come once in a thouſand years to ſome vaſt Mountain of Sand, and carry away in her Bill one Sand in a thouſand years; O what a vaſt time would it be, e'er that immortal Bird, after that rate, had recovered the Mountain! and yet in time this might be done. For there would be ſtill ſome diminution; but in Eternity there can be none. There be three things in Time, which are not competent to Eternity: In Time there is a Succeſſion, one Generation, Year, and Day paſſeth, and another comes; but Eternity is a fixed [now.] In Time there is a Dimiuution and waſting, the more is paſt, the leſs is to come: But it is not ſo in Eternity. In Time there is an Alteration of condition and ſtates: A Man may be poor to day, and rich to morrow; ſickly and diſeaſed this week, and well the next; now in contempt, and anon in honour: But no change paſſes upon us in Eternity. As the Tree falls at Death and Judgment, ſo it lies for ever. If in Heaven, there thou art a Pillar, and ſhalt go forth no more, Rev. 3 12. If in Hell, no Redemption thence, but the ſmoak of their Torments aſcendeth for ever and ever, Rev. 19. 3.

REFLECTION.

And is the Mercy of God like the great Deeps, an Ocean, that none can fathom? What unſpeakable Comfort is this to me? may the pardoned Soul ſay, Did Iſrael ſing a Song, when the Lord had overwhelm'd their corporeal Enemies in the Seas? And ſhall not I break forth into his Praiſes, who hath drowned all my ſins in the depth of Mercy? O my Soul, bleſs thou the Lord, and let his high Praiſes ever be in thy Mouth. Mayſt thou not ſay, that he hath gone to as high an extent and degree of Mercy, in pardoning thee, as ever he did in any? Oh my God, who is like unto thee! that pardoneſt Iniquity, Trangreſſion and Sin. What Mercy, but the Mercy of a God, could cover ſuch Abominations as mine!

But O! what terrible Reflections will Conſcience make from hence, upon all the Deſpiſers of Mercy, when the Sinner's Eyes come to be opened too late for Mercy, to do them good! We have heard indeed, that the King of Heaven was a merciful King, but we would make no addreſs to Him, whilſt that Scepter was ſtretched out. We heard of Balm in Gilead, and a Phyſician there, that was able and willing to cure all our wounds, but we would not commit our ſelves to him. We read that the Arms of Chriſt were open to embrace and receive us, but we would not. O unparallel'd folly! O Soul-deſtroying madneſs! Now the Womb of Mercy is ſhut up, and ſhall bring forth no more Mercies to me for ever. Now the Gates of Grace are ſhut, and no Cries can open them.

Mercy acted its part, and is gone off the Stage; and now Juſtice enters the Scene, and will be glorified for ever upon me. How often did I hear the Bowels of Compaſſion ſounding in the Goſpel for me? But my hard and impenitent Heart could not relent; and now, if it could, it is too late. I am now paſt out of the Ocean of Mercy, into the Ocean of Eternity, where I am fixed in the midſt of endleſs Miſery, and ſhall never hear the Voice of Mercy more.

O dreadful Eternity! O Soul-confounding Word! An Ocean indeed, to which this Ocean is but as a drop; for in thee no Soul ſhall ſee either Bank or Bottom. If I lye but one Night under ſtrong pains of Body, how tedious doth that Night ſeem! And how do I tell the Clock, and wiſh for Day! In the World I might have had Life, and would not; And now, how fain would I have Death, but cannot? How quick were my Sins in execution? And how long is their Puniſhment in duration? O, how ſhall I dwell with everlaſting Burnings? Oh that God would but vouchſafe one Treaty more with me! But alas, all Tenders and Treaties are now at an end with me. On Earth Peace, Luke 2. 13. but none in Hell. O my Soul! conſider theſe things, come, let us debate this matter ſeriouſly, before we launch out into the Ocean.

The POEM.

WHo from ſome high-rais'd Tower views the ground,
His heart doth tremble, and his head doth round;
Even ſo my Soul, whilſt it doth view and think
On this Eternity, upon whoſe brink
It borders, ſtands amazed, and doth cry,
O boundleſs! bottomleſs Eternity!
The Scourge of Hell, whoſe very Laſh doth rend
The damned Souls in twain: What! never end?
The more thereon they ponder, think and pore,
The more, poor Wretches, ſtill they howl and roar.
Ah! though more years in Torments we ſhould lye,
Than Sands are on the Shores, or in the Sky
Are twinkling Stars: Yet this gives ſome Relief!
The hope of ending. Ah! but here's the Grief!
A thouſand Years in Torments paſt and gone,
Ten Thouſand more afreſh are coming on;
And when theſe Thouſands all their Courſe have run,
The end's no more than when it firſt begun.
Come then, my Soul, let us diſcourſe together
This weighty Point, and tell me plainly whether
You for theſe ſhort-liv'd Joys, that come and go,
Will plunge your ſelf and me in endleſs Woe.

Resolve the Question quickly, do not dream
More Time away. Lo, in an hasty stream
We swiftly pass, and shortly we shall be Ingulphed both in this Eternity.

CHAP. III.

Within these smooth-fac'd Seas strange Creatures crawl;
But in Man's Heart, far stranger than them all.

OBSERVATION.

IT was an unadvised saying of Plato, Mare nil memorabile producit: The Sea produceth nothing memorable. But surely there is much of the Wisdom, Power, and Goodness of God manifested in those Inhabitants of the Watery Region: Notwithstanding the Sea's azure and smiling face, strange Creatures are bred in its Womb. O Lord (saith David) how manifold are thy works? In Wisdom hast thou made them all; the Earth is full of thy riches. So is this great and wide Sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great Beasts, Psalm 104. 24, 25. And we read Lam. 4. 3. of Sea-Monsters, which draw out their Breasts to their young. Pliny and Purchas tell incredible Stories about them. About the Tropick of Capricorn, our Seamen meet with flying-Fishes, that have Wings like a Rere-mouse, but of a Silver-colour; they fly in Flocks like Stares. There are Creatures of very strange Forms and Properties; some resembling a Cow, called by the Spaniards, Manates, by some supposed to be the Sea-monster spoken of by Jeremy. In the Rivers of Guina, Purchas saith, there are Fishes that have four Eyes, bearing two above, and two beneath the Water, when they swim: Some resembling a Toad, and very poisonous. How strange both in shape and property is the Sword-Fish and Thresher, that fight with the Whale? Even our own Seas produce Creatures of strange shapes, but the commonness takes off the wonder.

APPLICATION.

Thus doth the Heart of Man naturally swarm and abound with strange and monstrous lusts and abominations, Rom. 1. 29, 30, 31. Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness, full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boaster, inventers of evil things, disobedient to Parents, without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural Affection, implacable, unmerciful. O what a swarm is here! and yet there are multitudes more, in the depths of the Heart! And it is no wonder, considering that with this Nature, we received the spawn of the blackest and vilest Abominations. This original Lust is productive to them all, Jam. 1. 14, 15. which Lust, though it be in every Man numerically, different from that of others, yet it is one and the same specifically, for sort and kind, in all the Children of Adam: Even as the reasonable Soul, though every Man hath his own Soul, viz. a Soul individually distinct from another Man's, yet is it the same for kind in all Men. So that whatever Abominations are in the Hearts and Lives of the vilest Sodomites, and most profligate Wretches under Heaven; there is the same matter in thy Heart out of which they were shaped and formed. In the depths of the Heart they are conceived, and thence they crawl out of the Eyes, Hands, Lips, and all the Members, Mat. 15. 18, 19. Those things (saith Christ) which proceed out of the Mouth, come forth from the Heart, and defile a Man. For out of the Heart proceed evil thoughts, murders adulteries, fornications, thefts, false-witness, blasphemies: Even such Monsters, as would make a gracious Heart tremble to behold. What are my Lusts, (saith one) but so many Toads spitting of Venom, and spawning of Poison; croaking in my Judgment, creeping in my Will, and crawling into my Affections? The Apostle in 1 Cor. 5. 1. tells us of a Sin, Not to be named; so monstrous, that Nature it self startles at it: Even such Monsters are generated in the depths of the Heart. Whence come Evils? was a Question that much puzzled the Philosophers of old. Now here you may see whence they come, and where they are begotten. Fuller's Meditations, P. 11.

REFLECITON.

And are there such strange Abominations in the Heart of Man? Then how is he degenerated from his primitive Perfection and Glory! His Streams were once as clear as Crystal, and the Fountain of them pure, there was no unclean Creature moving in them. What a stately Fabrick was the Soul at first! And what holy Inhabitants possessed the several Rooms thereof! But now (as God speaks of Idumæa) Isa. 34. 11. The line of Confusion is stretched out upon it, and the stones of emptiness. The Cormorant and Bittern possess it; the Owl and the Raven dwell in it. Yea, as Isa. 13. 21, 22. The wild Beasts of the Desart lye there; it is full of doleful Creatures, the Satyrs dance in it, and Dragons cry in those sometimes pleasant places. O sad change! how sadly may we look back towards our first state! and take up the words of Job, O that I were as in months past, as in the days of my Youth; when the Almighty was yet with me, when I put on Righteousness, and it cloathed me, when my glory was fresh in me, Job 29. 2. 4, 5.

Again, think, O my Soul, what a miserable condition the Unregenerate abide in! Thus swarmed and over-run with hellish Lusts, under the Dominion and vassalage of divers Lusts, Tit. 3. 3. What a tumultuous Sea is such a Soul: How do these Lusts rage within them! how do they contest and scuffle for the Throne! and usually take it by turns: For as all Diseases are contrary to Health, yet some contrary to each other, so are Lusts. Hence poor Creatures are hurried on to different kinds of servitude, according to the Nature of that imperious Lust that is in the Throne; and like the Lunatick, Mat. 17. are sometimes cast into the Water, and sometimes into the Fire. Well might the Prophet say, The Wicked is like a troubled Sea that cannot rest, Isa. 57. 20. They have no Peace now in the service of Sin, and less they shall have hereafter, when they receive the wages of Sin. There is no Peace to the Wicked, saith my God. They indeed cry Peace, Peace; but my God doth not say so. The last Issue and Result of this is Eternal Death; no sooner it is delivered of its deceitful Pleasures, but presently it falls in travail again, and brings forth Death, Jam. 1. 15.

Once more: And is the Heart such a Sea, abounding with monstrous Abominations? Then stand astonished, O my Soul, at that Free-grace which hath delivered thee from so sad a Condition: O fall down, and kiss the feet of Mercy that moved so freely and seasonably to thy rescue! Let my Heart be enlarged abundantly here. Lord, what am I, that I should be taken, and others left? Reflect, O my Soul, upon the Conceptions and Births

Births of Lusts, in the days of Vanity, which thou now blushest to own. O what black Imaginations, hellish Desires, vile Affections, are lodged there! Who made me to differ? Or, how came I to be thus wonderfully separated? Surely, it is by thy Free-grace, and nothing else, that I am what I am: And by that Grace I have escaped (to mine own astonishment) the Corruption that is in the World through Lust. O that ever the holy God should set his Eyes on such an one; or cast a Look of Love towards me, in whom were Legions of unclean Lusts and Abominations!

The POEM.

My Soul's the Sea, wherein from day to day,
Sins like Leviathans do sport and play.
Great Master-Lusts, with all the lesser fry,
Therein increase, and strangely multiply.
Yet strange it is not, sin so fast should breed,
Since with this Nature I receiv'd the Seed
And Spawn of every Species, which was shed
Into its Caverns first, then nourished
By its own native warmth; which like the Sun,
Hath quickned them, and now abroad they come,
And like the Frogs of Egypt creep and crawl
Into the closest Rooms within my Soul.
My Fancy swarms, for there they frisk and play,
In Dreams by Night, and foolish Toys by Day.
My Judgment's clouded by them, and my Will Perverted, every corner they do fill.
As Locusts seize on all that's fresh and green, Uncloath the beauteous Spring, and make it seem Like drooping Autumn; so my Soul, that first
As Eden seem'd, now's like a Ground that's curst.
Lord purge my Streams, and kill those Lusts that lye
Within them: if they do not, I must dye.

CHAP. IV.

Seas purge themselves, and cast their filth ashore
But Graceless Souls retain, and suck in more.

OBSERVATION.

SEAS are in a continual Motion and Agitation; they have their Flux and Reflux, by which they are kept from putrefaction: Like a Fountain it cleanses it self, Isa. 57. 20. It cannot rest, but casts up mire and dirt; whereas Lakes and Ponds, whose Waters are standing, and dead, corrupt and stink. And it is observ'd by Seamen that in the Southern parts of the World, where the Sea is more calm and settled, it is more corrupt and unfit for use; so is the Sea of Sodom called, The Dead Sea.

APPLICATION.

Thus do regenerate Souls purify themselves, and work out corruption that defiles them, they cannot suffer it to settle there, 1 Joh. 3. 3. He purifieth himself, even as he is pure. Keepeth himself, that the wicked one toucheth him not, 1 Joh. 5. 18. scil. Tactu qualitativo, with a qualitative Touch, as the Loadstone toucheth Iron, leaving an Impression of its Nature behind it. They are Doves delighting in Cleanness, Isa. 33. 15. He despiseth the Gain of Oppression, he shaketh his hands from holding of Bribes, stoppeth his Ears from hearing Blood, and shutteth his Eyes from seeing Evil. See how all Sentences and Members are guarded against sin! But it is quite contrary with the wicked; there is no Principle of Holiness in them, to expose or expel Corruption: It lies in their Hearts as Mud in a Lake or Well, which settles and corrupts more and more. Hence Ezek. 47. 11. their Hearts are compared to miry or marshy Places, which cannot be healed, but are given to Salt: The meaning is that the purest streams of the Gospel, which cleanse others, make them worse than before, as abundance of Rain will a miry Place. The reason is, because it meets with an Obstacle in their Souls; so that it cannot run through them and be glorified, as it doth in gracious Souls. All the Means and Endeavours used to cleanse them, are in vain; all the grace of God they receive in vain, they hold fast Deceit; they refuse to let it go, Jer. 8. 5. Sin is not in them as floating Weeds upon the Sea, which it strives to expel and purge out, but as Spots in the Leopard's Skin, Jer. 13. 21. or Letters fashioned and engraven in the very substance of Marble or Brass, with a Pen of Iron, and point of a Diamond, Jer. 17. 1. Or as Ivy in an old Wall, that hath gotten rooting into its very Intrails. Wickedness is sweet in their mouths, they roul it under their tongues, Job 20. 12. No threats nor promises can divorce them from it.

REFLECTIONS.

Lord! this is the very frame of my Heart, may the graceless Soul say, My Corruptions quietly settle in me, my Heart labours not against it: I am a Stranger to that conflict which is dayly maintained in all the Faculties of the regenerate Soul. Glorified Souls have no such conflict, because Grace in them stands alone, and is perfectly triumphant over all its opposites; and graceless Souls can have no such conflict, because in them corruption stands alone, and hath no other Principle to make opposition to it. And this is my case, O Lord: I am full of vain hopes indeed, but had I a living and well-grounded hope to dwell for ever with so holy a God, I could not but be daily purifying my self. But O! what will the end of this be? I have cause to tremble at the last and dreadfullest Curse in the Book of God, Rev. 22. 11. Let him that is filthy be filthy still. Is it not as much as if God should say, Let them alone, I will spend no more Rods upon them, no more means shall be used about them; but I will reckon with them for all together in another World; O my Soul! what a dismal Reckoning will that be! Ponder with thy self in the mean while, those terrible and awaking Texts, that if possible, this fatal Issue may be prevented. See Isa. 1. 5. Hos. 4. 14. Jer. 6. 29, 30. Heb. 6. 8.

The POEM.

My Heart's no Fountain, but a standing Lake
Of putrid Waters; if therein I rake,
By serious Search, O! what a noisome smell,
Like Exhalations rising out of Hell;
The stinking Waters pump'd up from the Hole,
Are as Perfumes to Seamen: But my Soul
Upon the same account that they are glad,
(Its long continuance there) is therefore sad:
The Scripture saith, No Soul God's Face shall see, Till from such filthy Lusts it cleansed be.
Yet though unclean, it may that way be rid,
As Hercules the Augean Stable did.
Lord turn into my Soul that cleansing Blood,
Which from my Saviour's side flow'd as a Flood.
Flow, sacred, brim my Banks; and flow
Till you have made my Soul as white as Snow.

CHAP. V.

CHAP. V.

Seamen foresee a Danger, and prepare:
Yet few of greater Dangers are aware.

OBSERVATION.

HOW watchful and quick-sighted are Seamen, to prevent Dangers; If the Wind dye away, and then fresh up Southerly; or if they see the Sky hazy, they provide for a Storm: If by the Prospective-Glass they ken a Pyrate at the greatest distance, they clear the Gun-room, prepare for fight, and bear up, if able, to deal with him; if not, they keep close by the Wind, make all the Sail they can, and bear away. If they suppose themselves by their Reckoning near Land, how often do they sound? And if upon a Coast with which they are unacquainted, how careful are they to get a Pilot that knows and is acquainted with it?

APPLICATION.

Thus watchful and suspicious ought we to be in Spiritual Concernments. We should study, and be acquainted with Satan's Wiles and Policy: The Apostle takes it for granted, that Christians are not ignorant of his Devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. The Serpent's Eye (as one saith) would do well in the Dove's Head: The Devil is a cunning Pyrate, he puts out false Colours, and ordinarily comes up to the Christian in the disguise of a Friend.

O the manifold depths and stratagems of Satan, to destroy Souls! Though he have no Wisdom to do himself good, yet Policy enough to do us mischef. He lies in Ambush behind our lawful Comforts and Employments: Yet for the most of Men, how supine and careless are they, suspecting no Danger; their Souls, like Laish, dwell carelesly; their Senses unguarded. O what an easie Prize and Conquest doth the Devil make of them!

Indeed, if it were with us as with Adam in Innocency, or as it was with Christ in the Days of his Flesh (who by reason of that overflowing fulness of Grace that dwelt in him, the Purity of his Person, and the Hypostatical Union, was secured from the danger of all Temptations) the Case then were otherwise; but we have a Traytor within, Jam. 1. 14, 15. as well as a Tempter without, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Our Adversary, the Devil, goes about as a roaring Lyon, seeking whom he may devour. And like the Beasts of the Forests, poor Souls lye down before him, and become his Prey. All the Sagacity, Wit, Policy and Foresight of some Men, is sommoned in to serve their Bodies, and secure their fleshly Enjoyments.

REFLECTION.

Lord! how doth the Care, Wisdom and Vigilancy of Men in temporal and external things, condemn my carelessness in the deep and dear concernments of my precious Soul! What care and labour is there to secure a perishing Life, Liberty or Treasure! When was I thus sollicitous for my Soul, though its value be inestimable, and its danger far greater? Self-preservation is one of the deepest Principles in Nature. There is not the poorest Worm, or Fly, but will shun danger if it can: Yet I am so far from shunning those dangers to which my Soul lyes continually exposed, that I often run it upon Temptations, and voluntarily expose it to its Enemies. I see, Lord, how Watchful, Jealous and Laborious thy People are; what Prayers, Tears and Groans, searching of Heart, Mortification of Lusts, guarding of Senses: And all accounted too little by them. Have not I a Soul to save or lose eternally, as well as they? Yet I cannot deny one fleshly Lust, nor withstand one Temptation. O, how am I convinced and condemned; not only by others Care and Vigilancy but my own too, in lesser and lower matters?

The POEM.

I Am the Ship, whose Bills of Lading come
To more than Man's or Angel's Art can sum.
Rich fraught with Mercies, on the Ocean, now
I float, the dangerous Ocean I do plow.
Storms rise, Rocks threaten, and in every Creek Pyrates and Pickeroons their Prizes seek.
My Soul should watch, look out, and use its Glass,
Prevent Surprisals timely; but alas!
Temptations give it chase, it's grappled sure,
And boarded whilst it thinks it self secure,
It sleeps like Jonah, in the dreadful'st storm,
Although its case be dangerous and forlorn.
Lord, rowse my drowsie Soul, lest it should knock
And split it self upon some dangerous Rock.
If it of Faith and Conscience shipwrack make,
I am undone for ever; Soul, awake!
Till thou arrive in Heaven, watch and fear;
Thou mayst not say till then, the Coast is clear.

CHAP. VI.

How small a matter turns a Ship about?
Yet we against our Conscience stand it out.

OBSERVATION.

IT is just matter of admiration, to see so gr a body as a Ship is, and when under Sail t before a fresh and strong Wind, by which it is c ried, as the Clouds, with marvellous force a speed, yet to be commanded with ease, by so sm a thing as the Helm is. The Scripture takes n tice of it as a matter worthy our consideratio on, Jam. 3. 4. Behold also the Ships, which thou they be great, and driven of fierce Winds; yet they a turned about with a small Helm, whithersoever t Governor listeth. Yea, Aristotle himself, that Eagle-ey'd Philosopher, could not give a reason of it, but looked upon it as a very marvellous and wonderful thing. Aristot. Secu c.

APPLICATION.

To the same Use and Office has God desig Conscience in Man, which being rectified and gulated by the Word and Spirit of God, is to st and order his whole Conversation. Conscienc as the Oracle of God, the Judge and Determi of our Actions, whether they be good or e and it lays the strongest Obligations upon Creature to obey its Dictates, that is imagina For it binds under the Reason and Considera of the most Absolute and Soveraign Will of great God. So that as often as Conscience f the Word convinceth us of any Sin and Dut lays such a Bond upon us to obey it, as no po under Heaven can relax or dispence with. An cannot do it, much less Man; for that would to exalt themselves above God. Now there

s an high and dreadful way of ſinning to oppoſe rebel againſt Conſcience, when it convinces Sin or Duty. Conſcience ſometimes reaſons it with Men, and ſhews them the neceſſity of ging their way and courſe; arguing it from cleareſt and moſt allowed Maxims of right ſon, as well as from the indiſputable Soveraign-of God.

for Inſtance: It convinceth their very Rea-that things of Eternal Duration, are infinitely be preferred to all momentary and periſhing s, Rom. 8. 18. Heb. 11. 26. And it is our to chuſe them, and make all ſecular and tem-Concernments to ſtand aſide, and give place them. Yet though Men be convinced of this, ſtubborn Will ſtands out, and will not yield ſelf to the Conviction.

ther, It argues from this acknowledged Truth, all the Delights and Pleaſures in this World, but a miſerable Portion, and that it is the reſt Folly to adventure an immortal Soul for n. Luke 9. 25. Alas, what Remembrance is e of them in Hell? They are as the Waters paſs away. What have they left of all their and Joility but a tormenting Sting? It conches them clearly alſo that in matters of deep cernment, it is an high point of Wiſdom, to rehend and improve the right Seaſons and portunities of them, Prov. 10. 5. He that gain Summer is a wiſe Son. Eccleſ. 8. 5. *A wiſe
's Heart diſcerns both time and judgment. There ſeaſon to every purpoſe,* Eccleſ. 3. 1. viz. A nick time, an happy Juncture; when if a Man ſtrikes he doth his work effectually, and with much ility. Such ſeaſons Conſcience convinceth the el of, and often whiſpers thus in its ear: Now, el, ſtrike in, cloſe with this motion of the Spi-
, and be happy for ever; thou mayſt never have h a gale for Heaven any more. Now, though eſe be allowed Maxims of Reaſon, and Conſcice inforce them ſtrongly on the Soul, yet cannot prevail; the proud ſtubborn Will rebels, and ll not be guided by it. See Epheſ. 2. 3. Job 34.
. Iſa. 46. 12. Ezek. 2. 4. Jer. 44. 16.

REFLECTION.

Ah Lord, ſuch an Heart have I had before thee; us obſtinate, thus rebellious, ſo uncontrolable Conſcience. Many a time hath Conſcience thus iſpered in mine Ear; many a time hath it ſtood my way, as the Angel did in Balaam's, or the rubims that kept the way of the Tree of Life h flaming Swords turning every way. Thus hath ſtood to oppoſe me in the way of my Luſts.
w often hath it calmly debated the Caſe with alone? And how ſweetly hath it expoſtulated h me? How clearly hath it convinced me of Danger, Duty, with ſtrong demonſtration?
w terrible hath it menaced my Soul, and ſet point of the threatning at my very Breaſt? And my headſtrong Affections will not be reminded
it. I have obeyed the Voice of every Luſt Temptation. Tit. 3. 3. But Conſcience hath its Authority with me. Ah Lord! what a ſad dition am I in, both in reſpect of Sin and Mi-y? My Sin receives dreadful Aggravations; for bellion and Preſumption are hereby added to
I have violated the ſtrongeſt Bonds that ever e laid upon a Creature. If my Conſcience had thus convinced and warned, the Sin had not n ſo great and crimſon-coloured, Jam. 4. 17.
this is to ſin with an high hand, Numb. 15.

30. to come near to the great and unpardonable Tranſgreſſion, Pſal. 19. 13. O how dreadful a way of ſinning is this, with opened Eyes! And as my ſin is thus out of meaſure ſinful, ſo my puniſhment will be out of meaſure dreadful, if I perſiſt in this Rebellion. Lord, thou haſt ſaid, ſuch ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, Luke 12. 48. Yea, Lord, and if ever my Conſcience, which by rebellion is now grown ſilent, ſhould be in judgment awakened in this Life, Oh what an Hell ſhould I have within me! how would it thunder and roar upon me, and ſurround me with terrors!

Thy Word aſſures me, that no length of Time can wear out of its Memory what I have done, Gen. 42. 21. No Violence or Force can ſuppreſs it, Mat. 27. 4. No greatneſs of Power can ſlide it, it will take the mightieſt Monarch by the Throat, Exod. 10. 16. Dan. 5. 6. No Muſick, Pleaſures or Delights, can charm it, Job 20. 22. O Conſcience! thou art the ſweeteſt Friend, or the dreadfulleſt Enemy in the World; thy Conſolations are incomparably ſweet, and thy Terrors inſupportable. Ah let me ſtand it out no longer againſt Conſcience; the very Ship in which I ſail, is a confutation of my Madneſs, that ruſh greedily into ſin againſt both Reaſon and Conſcience, and will not be commanded by it; ſurely, O my Soul, this will be bitterneſs in the end.

The POEM.

A Ship of greateſt Burthen will obey
The Rudder; he that ſits at Helm may ſway
And guide its motion: If the Pilot pleaſe,
The Ship bears up againſt both Wind and Seas.
My Soul's the Ship, Affections are its Sails, Conſcience the Rudder. Ah! but Lord what ails
My naughty Heart, to ſhuffle in and out,
When its Convictions bid it tack about?
Temptations blow a Counter-blaſt, and drive
The Veſſel where they pleaſe, though Conſcience ſtrive.
And by its ſtrong Perſwaſions, it would force
My ſtubborn Will to ſteer another Courſe.
Lord, if I run this Courſe, thy Word doth tell
How quickly I muſt needs arrive at Hell.
Then rectifie my Conſcience, change my Will;
Fan in thy pleaſant Gales, my God, and fill
All my Affections, and let nothing carry
My Soul from its due Courſe or make it vary;
Then if the Pilot's Work thou wouldſt perform,
I ſhould bear bravely up againſt a Storm.

CHAP. VII.

Though many fears and dangers Seamen run,
But all's forgotten when they do return.

OBSERVATION.

WE have an elagant and lively Deſcription of their Fears and Dangers, Pſal. 107. 25, 26, 27. He commandeth and raiſeth the ſtormy Winds, which lifteth up the Waves thereof: They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the Depths; their Soul is melted becauſe of Trouble; they reel to and fro, they ſtagger like a Drunken Man; they are at their Wits end. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, All Wiſdom is ſwallowed up. Suitable to which is that of the Poet.

Rector in incerto eſt, nec quid fugitive petivé
Invenit; ambiguis ars ſtupet ipſa malis. Ovid.

The Pilot knows not what to chuse or flee;
Art stands amaz'd in ambiguity.

O what strange and miraculous Deliverances have many Seamen had? How often have they yielded themselves for dead Men, and verily thought the next Sea would have swallowed them up? How earnestly then do they cry for Mercy? And like the Cymbrians, can pray in a Storm, though they regard it not at other times, Psal. 107. 28. Jonah 1. 5, 6.

APPLICATION.

These dreadful Storms do at once discover to us the mighty Power of God in raising them, and the abundant Goodness of God in preserving poor Creatures in them.

1. The Power of God is graciously manifested in raising them: The Wind is one of the Lord's Wonders, Psal. 107. 24, 25. They that go down to the Sea, see the Works of the Lord, and his [Wonders] in the Deep; for he commandeth and raiseth the stormy Winds. Yea, Verse 18. God appropriates it as a peculiar Work of his; He causeth [His Wind to blow.] Hence, he is said in Scripture, to bring them forth of his Treasury, Psal. 137. 7. There they are locked up and reserved, not a Gust can break forth, till he command and call for it to go and execute his Pleasure: Yea, he is said to hold them in his Fist, Prov. 30. 4. What is more uncapable of holding than the Wind? Yet God holds it. Although it be a strong and terrible Creature. He controuls and rules it. Yea, the Scripture sets forth God, As riding upon the Wings of the Wind, Psal. 18. 10. It is a borrowed Speech from the manner of Men, who when they would shew their Pomp and Greatness, ride upon some stately Horse or Chariot; so the Lord to manifest the greatness of his Power, rides upon the Wings of the Wind, and will be admired in so terrible a Creature.

And no less of his glorious Power appears in remanding them, than in raising them. The Heathens ascribe this Power to their God Æolus; but we know this is the Royalty and sole Prerogative of the true God, who made Heaven and Earth; it is he that makes the Storm and Calm, Psal. 107. 29. And it is he that shifts and changes them from Point to Point as he pleaseth; for he hath appointed them their Circuits, Eccles. 1. 6. The Wind goeth towards the South, and turneth about unto the North; it whirleth about continually, and returneth again according to its Circuits.

2. And as we should adore his Power in the Winds, so ought we to admire his Goodness in preserving Men in the height of all their Fury and Violence. O what a marvellous Work of God is here! That Men should be kept in a poor weak Vessel, upon the wild and stormy Ocean, where the Wind hath its full stroke upon them, and they are driven before it as a Wreck upon the Seas; yet, I say, that God should preserve you there, is a Work of infinite Goodness and Power. That those Winds which do rend the very Earth, Mountains and Rocks, 1 Kings 29. 11. Breaks the Cedar, yea, the Cedars of Lebanon, shakes the Wilderness, and makes the Hinds to calve: Which Naturalists say bring forth with greatest difficulty, Psal. 29. 5. 8, 9. Surely your preservation in such Tempests, is an astonishing work of Mercy. O how dreadful is this Creature, the Winds, sometimes to you? And how doth it make your Hearts shake within you? If but a Plank spring, or a Bolt give way, you are all Sometimes the Lord for the magnifying of the ches of his Goodness upon you, drives you to Exigences, that, as Paul speaks in a like case, 17 20. All Hopes of Safety is taken away: Noth but Death before your Eyes. The Lord comma a Wind out of his Treasury, bids it go and lift the terrible Waves; lock you in upon the Sh and drive you upon the Rocks, so that no Art save you; and then sends you a piece of Wr or some other means to land you safe: And all to give you an Experiment of his Goodness and that you may learn to fear that God, in whose h your Soul and Breath is.

And it may be for the present, your Hearts much affected: Conscience works strongly, it sm you for Sins formerly committed, such and Counsels of Ministers or Relations slighted. N saith Conscience, God is come in this Storm reckon with thee for these things. But alas! this is but a Morning-dew; no sooner is that St without allayed, but all is quiet within too. little of the Goodness of God abides kindly effectually upon the Heart?

REFLECTION.

How often hath this glorious Power and Go ness of God passed before me in dreadful Sto and Tempests at Sea? He hath uttered his V in those Stormy Winds, and spoken in a terr manner by them; yet how little have I been affe with it? The Lord hath his way in the Whirlw and in the Storm, Nah. 1. 3. To some he h walked in ways of Judgment and Wrath, s ing them down in a moment to Hell; but to in a way of Forbearance and Mercy. Ah, h often have I been upon the very brink of Etern Had not God shifted or allayed the Wind, in a ment, I had gone down into Hell. What Wo ings of Conscience were at present upon me? what terrible Apprehensions had I then of my ternal Condition? What Vows did I make in t Distress? And how earnestly did I then beg Mercy? But Lord, though thy Vows are upon yet have I been the same; yea, added to, and led up the Measure of my Sins. Neither the bo of Mercy thou hast laid upon me, nor the sac and solemn Vows I have laid upon my self, co restrain me from those ways of Iniquity, wh then appeared so dreadful to me.

Ah Lord, what an Heart have I? What Lo Pity and Goodness have I sinned against? If G had but respited Judgment so long, what a Me were it. Sure I am, the damned would accoun so; but to give me such a space to Repent. what an invaluable Mercy is this! And do I t requite the Lord, Deut. 32. 6. and pervert a abuse his Goodness thus? Surely, O my Soul this be the Fruit of all thy Preservations, they rather Reservations to some further and sorer Ju ments. How dreadfully will Justice at last ave the Quarrel of abused Mercy, Josh. 24. 20. H grievously did God take it from the Israelites, t they provoked him at the Sea, even at the R Sea? Psal. 106. 7. where God had wrought th Deliverance in such a Miraculous way. Even t have I sinned after the Similitude of their Tra gressions; not only against the Laws of God, against the Love of God. In the last Storm shot off his Warning-piece; in the next, he may charge his Murdering-piece against my Soul a Body. O my Soul! hath he given thee such D verances as these, and dareſt thou again break his Commandments; Ezra 9. 13, 14. O let me pay the Vows that my Lips have uttered in my diſtreſs, leſt the Lord recover his glory from me in a way of Judgment.

The POEM.

THE Ship that now ſails trim before a Wind,
E'er the deſired Port it gains, may find
A tedious Paſſage: Gentle Gales a-while,
Do fill its Sails, the flattering Seas do ſmile,
The Face of Heaven is bright, on every ſide
The wanton Porpice tumbles on the Tide.
Into their Cabins now the Seamen go,
And then turn out again, with, What chear ho?
All on a ſudden darkned are the Skies,
The Lamp of Heaven obſcur'd, the Winds do riſe;
Waves ſwell like Mountains: Now their Courage flags,
The Maſts are crackt, the Canvas torn to rags.
The Veſſel works for Life; anon one cries,
The Main-maſts gone by th' Board; another plies
The Pump, until a third do ſtrike them blank
With, Sirs, prepare for Death, w' have ſprung a (Plank.
Now to their Knees they go, and on this wiſe
They beg for Mercy with their loudeſt Cries:
Lord, ſave us but this once, and thou ſhalt ſee
What Perſons for the future we will be:
Our former Time's miſ-ſpent, but with a Vow
We will engage, if thou wilt ſave us now,
To mend what is amiſs. The gracious Lord,
Inclin'd to pity, takes them at their word;
The Winds into their Treaſures he doth call,
Rebukes the ſtormy Sea, and brings them all
To their deſired Haven; once aſhore,
And then their Vows are ne'er remembred more.
Thus Souls are ſhipwrackt, tho' the Bodies live, Unleſs in time thou true Repentance give.

CHAP. VIII.

The Navigator ſhifts his Sails, to take
All Winds, but that which for his Soul doth make

OBSERVATION.

THE Mariner wants no Skill and Wiſdom to improve ſeveral Winds, and make them ſerviceable to his end; A bare ſide-wind, by his skill in ſhifting and managing the Sails, will ſerve his turn: He will not loſe the advantage of one breath or gale that may be uſeful to him, I have many times wondered to ſee two Ships ſailing in a direct counter-motion, by one and the ſame wind. Their skill and Wiſdom herein is admirable.

APPLICATION.

Thus prudent and skilful are Men in ſecular and lower matters, and yet how ignorant and unskilful in the great and everlaſting Affairs of their Souls! all their Invention, Judgment, Wit, and Memory ſeem to be preſt for the ſervice of the fleſh. They can learn an Art quickly, and arrive to a great deal of exactneſs in it; but in Soul-matters, no knowledge at all. They can underſtand the Equator, Meridian, and Horizon: By the firſt they can tell the Latitude of any Place, South or North, meaſuring it by the degrees in the Meridian; by the ſecond, they can tell you the Longitude of a Place, Eaſt and Weſt, from the Meridian, meaſuring it by the degrees of the Æquator: And by the third, they can diſcern the divers riſings and ſettings of the Stars. And ſo in other Arts and Sciences, we find Men endowed with rare Abilities, and ſingular Sagacity. Some have piercing Apprehenſions, ſolid Judgments, ſtupendous Memories, rare Invention, and excellent Elocution: But put them upon any ſpiritual ſupernatural Matter, and the weakeſt Chriſtian, even a babe in Chriſt, ſhall excel them therein, and give a far better account of Regeneration, the Work of Grace, the Life of Faith than theſe can. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Not many wiſe Men after the fleſh, &c. But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of this World, &c.

REFLECTION.

How inexcuſable then art thou, O my Soul! and how mute and confounded muſt thou needs ſtand before the Bar of God, in that great Day? Thou hadſt a Talent of Natural Parts committed to thee, but which way have they been improved? I had an Underſtanding indeed, but it was not ſanctify'd; a Memory, but it was like a Sieve, that let go the Corn, and retain'd nothing but Huſks and Chaff; Wit and Invention, but alas none to do my ſelf good. Ah! how will theſe riſe in judgment againſt me, and ſtop my Mouth? What account ſhall I give for them in that Day?

Again: Are Men (otherwiſe prudent and skilful) ſuch ſots and fools in ſpiritual Things? Then let the poor weak Chriſtian, whoſe Natural Parts are blunt and dull, admire the riches of God's Free Grace to him. O what an aſtoniſhing Conſideration is this! That God ſhould paſs by Men of the profoundeſt Natural Parts, and chuſe me, even poor me, whoſe Natural Faculties and Endowments, compared with theirs, are but as Lead to Gold! Thus under the Law he paſt by the Lyon and Eagle, and choſe the Lamb and Dove. O, how ſhould it make me to advance Grace, as Chriſt doth upon the ſame account, Mat. 11: 25. I thank thee, Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, that thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and revealed them to babes. And let it ever be an humbling Conſideration to me; For who made me to differ? Is not this one principal thing God aims at, in calling ſuch as I am; that boaſting may be excluded, and himſelf alone exalted?

The POEM.

ONE thing doth very much affect my mind;
To ſee the Seaman husband every Wind;
With exc'llent Art he ſhifts the Sails, and knows
How to improve the bareſt Wind that blows.
If a direct or foreright gale he want,
A ſide-wind ſerves his turn, tho' ne'r ſo ſcant.
And will not this one Day in judgment riſe
Againſt your Soul? Ah! can you be ſo wiſe
In ſmaller Matters; what, and yet not know
How to improve freſh gales of Grace that blow?
Faſt mor'd in Sin your wind-bound Souls can lye,
And let theſe precious gales riſe, blow, and dye.
Sometimes on your Affections you may feel
Such gracious breathings: Ah, but hearts of ſteel,
They move you not, nor cauſe you to relent;
Though able, like Elijah's Wind, to rent
The Rocks aſunder: If you do not prize
Thoſe breathings, other Winds will ſhortly riſe;
And from another quarter; thoſe once gone,
Then next look out for an Euroclydon.
A dreadful Storm: How ſoon no Man can tell;
But when it comes, 'twill blow ſuch Souls to Hell.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

If Seamen lose a Gale, there they may lye:
The Soul, when once becalm'd in Sin may dye.

OBSERVATION.

SEamen are very watchful to take their opportunity of Wind and Tide; and it much concerns them so to be: The neglect of a few hours, sometimes loses them their Passage, and proves a great detriment to them. They know the Wind is an uncertain variable thing; they must take it when they may; they are unwilling to lose one flow, or breath, that may be serviceable to them. If a prosperous Gale offer, and they not ready, it repents them to lose it, as much as it would repent us to see a Vessel of good Wine or Beer tapt and run waste.

APPLICATION.

There are also seasons and gales of Grace for our Souls; golden opportunities of Salvation afforded to Men, the neglect of which proves the loss and ruin of Souls. God hath given unto Men a Day of Visitation, which he hath limited, Heb. 4. 7. and keeps an exact account of every Year, Month, and Day, that we have enjoyed it, Luk. 13. 7. Jer. 25. 3. Luk. 19. 42. The longest date of it can be but the time of this Life: This is our Day to work in, Job. 9. 4. and upon this small wyre, the weight of Eternity hangs. But sometimes the season of Grace is ended, before the night of Death comes; the accepted time is gone, Men frequently out-live it, Luk. 19. 44. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Or, if the outward means of Salvation be continued, yet the Spirit many times withdraws from those means, and ceases any more to strive with Men; and then the Blessing, Power and Efficacy is gone from them, and instead thereof a Curse seizeth the Soul, Heb. 6, 7, 8. and Jer. 6. 29.

Therefore it is a matter of high importance to our Souls to apprehend these seasons. How pathetically doth Christ bewail Jerusalem upon this account! Luk. 19. 42. O that thou hadst known, at least in this thy day, the things of thy Peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. If a company of Seamen be set ashore upon some remote, uninhabited Island, with this advice, to be aboard again exactly at such an hour, else they must be left behind: How doth it concern them to be punctual in their time? The lives of those Men depend upon a quarter of an hour. Many a Soul hath perish'd eternally (the Gospel leaving them behind in their Sins) because they knew not the time of their Visitation.

REFLECTION.

What golden seasons for Salvation hast thou enjoyed, O my Soul? What Halcyon days of Gospel-light and Grace hast thou had? How have the precious Gales of Grace blown to no purpose upon thee! and the Spirit waited and striven with thee in vain? The Kingdom of Heaven (being opened in the Gospel-dispensations) hath suffered violence. Multitudes have been pressing into it in my Days, and I my self have sometimes been almost perswaded, and not far from the Kingdom of God: I have gone as far as conviction of Sin and Misery; yea, I have been carried by the power of the Gospel, to resolve and purpose to turn to God, and become a new Creature; but Sin hath been too subtil and deceitful for me: I see, my Resolutions were but as an early Cloud, or Morning-Dew; and now my Heart is cold and dead again, settled upon its Lees. Ah! I have cause to fear and tremble, lest God hath left me under that Curse, Rev. 20. 11. Let him that is filthy, be filthy still. I fear I am become as that miry place, Ezek. 47. 11. that shall not be healed by the streams of the Gospel, but given to salt, and cursed into perpetual barrenness. Ah Lord, wilt thou leave me so! and shall thy Spirit strive no more with me? Then it had been good for me that I had never been born. Ah, if I have trifled out this Season, and irrecoverably lost it, then I may take up that lamentation, Jer. 8. 20. and say, My Harvest is past, my Summer is ended, and I am not saved.

Every Creature knows its time, even the Turtle, Crane, and Swallow, know the time of their coming, Jer. 8. 7. How brutish am I, that have not known the time of my Visitation! O thou that art the Lord of Life and Time, command one gracious Season more for me, and make it effectual to me, before I go hence, and be seen no more!

The POEM.

A Fresh and whisking Gale presents to day;
But now the Ship's not ready; Winds must stay,
And wait the Seamens leisure. Well, to morrow
They will put out; but then, unto their sorrow,
That Wind is spent, and by that means they gain
Perchance a Month's Repentance, if not twain.
At last another offers, now they're gone;
But e'er they gain their Port, the Market's done.
For every work and purpose under Heaven,
A proper time and season God hath given.
The Fowls of Heaven, Swallow, Turtle, Crane,
Do apprehend it, and put us to shame.
Man hath his season too; but that mis-spent,
There's time enough his folly to repent.
Eternity's before him, but therein
No more such golden hours as these have been.
When these are past away, then you shall find
That Proverb true, Occasion's bald behind.
Delays are dangerous; see that you discern
Your proper seasons. O that you would learn
This Wisdom from those Fools that come too late
With fruitless cries, when Christ has shut the Gate.

CHAP. X.

By Navigation one place stores another;
And by Communion we must help each other.

OBSERVATION.

THE most wise God hath so dispenced with Bounty to the several Nations of the World that one standing in need of another's Commodities, there might be a sociable Commerce and Trafick maintain'd amongst them all, and all combining in a common League may, by the help of Navigation, exhibit mutual succours to each other. The Staple-Commodities proper to each Country I find thus expressed by the Poet, Bart. Coll.

Hence comes our Sugars from Canary Isles;
From Candy Currants, Muskadels, and Oyls;
From the Moluccoes, Spices; Balsamum
From Egypt; Odours from Arabia come;
From India Gums, rich Drugs and Ivory;
From Syria Mummy; Black, Red Ebony

Fr

From burning Chus; from Peru, Pearl and Gold;
From Russia Furs, to keep the Rich from Cold.
From Florence Silks; from Spain Fruit, Saffron, Sacks;
From Denmark Amber, Cordage, Firs and Flax;
From Holland Hops; Horse from the Banks of Rhine:
From England Wool; all Lands as God distributes,
To the World's Treasure pay their sundry Tributes.

APPLICATION.

Thus hath God distributed the more Rich and precious Gifts and Graces of his Spirit among his People: Some excelling in one Grace, some in another, though every Grace, in some degree, be in them all; even as in Nature, though there be all the Faculties in all, yet some Faculties are in some more lively and vigorous than in others; some have a more vigorous Eye, others a more ready Ear, others a more voluble Tongue; wits in Spirituals. Abraham excell'd in Faith, Job in Patience, John in Love. These were their peculiar Excellencies. All the elect Vessels are not of the quantity; yet even those that excel others in some particular Grace, come short in other respects of those they so excelled in the former, and may be much improv'd by converse with such as in some respects are much below them. The solid, wise, and judicious Christian may want that liveliness of Affections, and tenderness of Heart, that appears in the weak; and one that excels in gifts and utterance, may learn Humility from the very babes in Christ.

And one principal Reason of this different distribution is to maintain Fellowship among them, 1 Cor. 12. 21. The Head cannot say to the Feet I have no need of you. As in a Family where there is much Business to be done, even the little Children bear a part, according to their strength, Jer. 18. The Children gather Wood, the Fathers kindle the Fire, the Women knead the Dough. So in the Family of Christ the Weakest Christian is serviceable to the Strong.

There be precious Treasures in these Earthen Vessels, for which we should trade by mutual Communion. The preciousness of the Treasure, should draw out our Desires and Endeavours after it; and the consideration of the brittleness of those Vessels in which they are kept, should cause us to be the more expeditious in our Trading with them, and make the quicker Returns: For when those Vessels (I mean the Bodies of the Saints) are broken by Death, there is no more to be gotten out of them. That Treasure of Grace which made them so profitable, pleasant and desirable Companions on Earth; then Ascends with them into Heaven, where every Grace receives its Adolescence and Perfection: And then, though they be Ten thousand times more excellent and delightful than ever they were on Earth, yet we can have no more Communion with them, till we come to Glory our selves. Now therefore it behoves us to be enriching our selves by Communication of what God hath given into us, and Improvent of them, as one well

Notes. We should do by Saints, as Journal. we use to do by some choice Book lent us for a few days, we should fix in our Memories, or transcribe all the choice Notes we meet within it, that they may be our own when the Book is called for, and we can have it no longer by us.

REFLECTION.

Lord, How short do I come of my Duty in communicating to, or receiving good by others! My Soul is either empty and barren, or if there be any Treasure in it, yet it is but as a Treasure locked up in some Chest, whose Key is lost, when it should be open'd for the use of others, Ah Lord! I have sinned greatly, not only by vain Words, but sinful Silence. I have been of little use in the World.

How little also have I gotten by Communion with others? Some, it may be, that are of my own size, or judgment, or that I am otherwise obliged to, I can delight to converse with: But O, where is that largeness of Heart, and general Delight I should have to, and in all thy People? How many of my old dear Acquaintance are now in Heaven, whose Tongues were as choice Silver, while they were here, Prov. 10. 20. And blessed Souls! how communicative were they of what thou gavest them? O what an Improvement had I made of my Talent this way, had I been deligent! Lord pardon my neglect of those sweet and blessed Advantages. O let all my Delight be in thy Saints, who are the Excellent of the Earth. Let me never go out of their Company, without an Heart more warmed, quickned, and enlarged, than when I came amongst them.

The POEM.

TO several Nations God doth so distribute
His Bounty, that each one must pay a Tribute Unto each other. Europe cannot vaunt,
And say, Of Africa I have no want.
America and Asia need not strive,
Which of it self can best subsist and live.
Each Country's Want, in something, doth maintain Commerce betwixt them all. Such is the Aim
And End of God, who doth dispense and give More Grace to some, their Brethren to relieve.
This makes the Sun Ten thousand times more bright;
Because it is diffusive of its Light,
Its Beams are gilded gloriously; but then
This Property doth gild them o'er again.
Should Sun, Moon, Stars, impropriate all their Light,
What dismal Darkness would the World benight?
On this account Men hate the Vermin brood,
Because they take in much, but do no good.
What harm, if I at yours my Candle light?
Except thereby I make your Room more bright.
He that, by Pumping, sucks and draws the Spring,
New Streams, and sweeter, to the Well doth bring.
Grace is a Treasure in an Earthen Pot;
When Death hath dasht it, no more can be got Out of that Vessel: Then while it is whole,
Get out the Treasure to enrich your Soul.

CHAP. XI.

The Rocks abide, though Seas against them rage;
So shall the Church, which is God's Heritage.

OBSERVATION.

THE Rocks, tho' situate in the boisterous and tempestuous Ocean, yet abide firm and immovable from Age to Age: The impetuous Waves dash against them with great violence, but cannot remove them out of their place. And although sometimes they wash over them, and make them to disappear, yet there they remain fixt and impregnable.

APPLICATION.

This is a lively Emblem of the condition of the Church, amidst all dangers and oppositions wherewith it is encountred and assaulted in this World. These Metaphorical Waves roar and beat with violence against it, but with as little success as the Sea against the Rocks, Matt. 16. 18. Upon this Rock will I build my Church, and the [Gates] of Hell shall not prevail against it. The Gates of Hell, are the Power and Policy of Hell; for it is conceived to be an allusive Speech to the Gates of the Jews wherein their Ammunition for War was lodged, which also were the Seats of Judicature, there sate the Judges: But yet, these Gates of Hell shall not prevail. Nay, this Rock is not only invincible in the midst of their Violence, but also breaks all that dash against it, Zech. 12. 3. In that day I will make Jerusalem a Burthensome Stone for all People: All that burthen themselves with it, shall be cut in pieces, though all the People of the Earth be gathered together against it. An Allusion to one that essays to roul some great stone against the Hill, which at last returns upon him, and crushes him to pieces.

And the reason why it is thus firm and impregnable, is not from it self; for alas, so considered, it is weak, and obnoxious to ruin; but from the Almighty Power of God, which guards and preserves it Day and Night, Psal. 46. 5, 6. God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early. Vatab. Dum aspecit mane. When the Morning appears. Which notes (saith Calvin) God's assiduous and constant help and succour, which is extended in all Dangers, as constantly as the Sun arises. And this assiduous succour to his People, and their great security thereby, is set forth in the Scriptures by a pleasant variety of Metaphors and Emblems, Zech. 2. 5. I (saith the Lord) will be a Wall of Fire round about it. Some think this phrase alludes to the Cherubims, that kept the way of the Tree of Life with flaming Swords: Others, to the fiery Chariots round about Dothan, where Elisha was; but most think it to be an allusion to an ancient Custom of Travellers in the Desarts; who to prevent the assaults of wilde Beasts in the Night, made a Circular Fire round about them, which was as a Wall to them. Thus will God be to his People a Wall of Fire, which none can scale. So Exod. 3. 3, 4, 5. We have an excellent Emblem of the Churche's low and dangerous condition, and admirable preservation. You have here, both a Marvel and a Mystery. The Marvel was to see a Bush all on Fire, and yet not consumed. The Mystery is this, the Bush represented the sad condition of the Church in Egypt; the Fire flaming upon it, the grievous Afflictions, Troubles and Bondage it was in there; the remaining of the Bush unconsumed, the strange and admirable Preservation of the Church in those Troubles. It lived there as the three noble Jews, untouched in the midst of a burning fiery Furnace: And the Angel of the Lord in a flame of Fire in the midst of the Bush, was nothing else but the Lord Jesus Christ, powerfully and graciously present with his People, amidst all their dangers and sufferings. The Lord is exceeding tender over them, and jealous for them, as that Expression imports, Zech. 2. 8. He that toucheth you toucheth the Apple of mine Eye. He that strikes at them, strikes at the Face of God; and at the most excellent part of the Face, the Eye, and at the most tender and precious part of the Eye, the Apple of the Eye. And yet (as a Learned Modern observes) this People of whom he uses this tender and dear Expression, were none of the best of Israel neither; but the residue that staid behind in Babylon, when the Brethren were gone to rebuild the Temple; and yet over these, is he as tender, as a Man is over his Eye.

REFLECTION.

And is the Security of the Church so great! and its preservation so admirable, amidst all Storms and Tempests! Then why art thou so prone and subject to despond, O my Soul, in the day of Sad Trouble? Sensible thou wast, and oughtest to be, but no reason to hang down the head through discouragement, much less to forsake Sion in her distress, for fear of being ruined with her.

What David spake to Abiathar, 1 Sam. 22. that may Sion speak to all her Sons and Daughters in all their Distresses: Though he that seeketh my Life, seeketh mine also; yet with me shalt thou be in safeguard. God hath entail'd great Salvations and Deliverances upon Sion; and blessed are all her Friends and Favourers; the Rock of Ages is her defence. Fear not therefore, O my Soul, though the Hills be removed out of their place, and cast into the midst of the Sea. O let my Faith triumph and my Heart rejoyce upon this ground of comfort. I see the same Rocks now, and in the same place and condition they were many years ago. Though they have endeavoured many Storms, yet there they bide; and so shall Sion, when the proud Waves have spent their fury and rage against it.

The POEM.

MEsopotamia, scituate in the Seas,
May represent the Church, or, if you please,
A Rock, o'er which the Waves do wash and swill,
May figure it; chuse either, which you will.
Winds strive upon those Seas, and make a noise,
The lofty Waves sometimes lift up their Voice,
And swelling high successively do beat
With violence against it, then retreat.
They break themselves, but it abides their shock;
And when their Rage is spent, there stands the Rock.
Then they are out, that do affirm and vote,
Peace, Pomp and Splendor is the Church's Note.
And they deserve no less Reproof, that are In Zion's Troubles ready to despair.
This Rock amidst far stronger Rocks doth lye,
Which are its fence, so deep, so thick, so high;
They can't be batter'd, scal'd or undermin'd:
And these, environ'd by them, daily find
Their Bread ascertain'd; Waters too secur'd:
Then shout and sing, ye that are thus Immur'd.

CHAP. XII.

What Dangers run they for a little Gains,
Who, for their Souls, would ne'er take half the Pains.

OBSERVATION.

HOw exceeding sollicitous and adventurous are Seamen for a small portion of the World! How prodigal of Strength and Life for it? They will run to the ends of the Earth, engage a thousand Dangers, upon the hopes and probability of getting a small Estate. Per mare, per per mille pericula currunt. Hopes of Gain makes them willing to adventure their Liberty, yea, their Life; and encourages them to endure Heat, Cold and Hunger, and a thousand Streights and Difficulties, to which they are frequently exposed.

APPLICATION.

How hot and eager are Mens Affections after the World? And how remiss and cold toward things Eternal? They are careful and troubled about many things, but seldom mind the great and necessary matters, Luke 10. 40. They can rise early, go to bed late, eat the Bread of Carefulness: But when did they so deny themselves for their poor Souls? Their Heads are full of Designs and Projects to get or advance an Estate: We will go into such a City, continue there a Year, and Buy and Sell, and get Gain, Jam. 4. 13. This is the τὸ ἔργον the Master-Design, which engrosseth all their time, studies and contrivances. The Will hath past a Decree for it, the Heart and Affections are fully let out to it, They will be Rich, 1 Tim. 6. 9. This Decree of the Will, the Spirit of God takes deep notice of it; and indeed it is the cleerest and fullest Discovery of a Man's portion and condition: For look what is highest in the Estimation, first and last in the Thoughts, and upon which we spend our Time and Strength with delight; cereainly, that is our Treasure, Mat. 6. 20, 21. The Heads and Hearts of Saints are full of sollicitous Cares and Fears about their spiritual Condition: The great Design they drive on, to which all other things are but [παρεργα] things on the by, is to make sure their Calling and Election. This is the [Pondus] the Weight and Byass of their Spirit: If their Hearts stray and wander after any other thing, this reduces them again.

REFLECTION.

Lord, this hath been my manner from my Youth, may the Carnal-minded Man say, I have been labouring for the Meat that perisheth; disquieting my self in vain, full of Designs and Projects for the World, and unwearied in my endeavours to compass an earthly Treasure; yet therein I have either been checked and disappointed by Providence; or if I have obtained, yet I am no sooner come to enjoy that Content and Comfort I promised my self in it, but I am ready to leave it all, to be stript out of it by Death, and in that day all my thoughts perish: But in the mean time, What have I done for my Soul? When did I ever break a Night's Sleep, or deny and pinch my self for it? Ah fool that I am! to nourish and pamper a vile Body, which must shortly lye under the Clods, and become a loathsome Carcass; and, in the mean time, neglect and undo my poor Soul, which partakes of the Nature of Angels, and must live for ever. I have kept others Vineyards, but mine own Vineyard I have not kept: I have been a perpetual Drudge and Slave to the World; in a worse condition hath my Soul been, than others that are Condemned to the Mines. Lord, change my Treasure, and change my Heart: O let it suffice that I have been thus long labouring on the Fire, for very vanity. Now gather up my Heart and Affections in thy self, and let my great Design now be, to secure a special Interest in thy Blessed Self, that I may once say, To me to Live is Christ.

The POEM.

THE Face of Man impress't and stampt on Gold,
With Crown and Royal Scepters we behold.
No wonder that an humane Face it gains,
Since Head, Heart, Soul, and Body it obtains.
Nor is it strange a Scepter it should have,
That to its Yoke the World doth so enslave.
Charm'd with its chinking Note, away they go
Like Eagles to the Carcass, ride and row.
Through worlds of hazards foolish Creatures run,
That into its Embraces they may come.
Poor Indians in the Mines my Heart condoles,
But seldom turns aside to pity Souls,
Which are the Slaves indeed, that toyl and spend Themselves upon its service. Surely, Friend,
They are but Sextons to prepare and make Thy Grave within those Mines, whence they do take
And dig their Ore. Ah! many Souls, I fear, Whose Bodies live, yet lye entombed there.
Is Gold so tempting to you? Lo, Christ stands,
With length of Days, and Riches in his hands.
Gold in the Fire try'd he freely proffers;
But few regard or take those golden Offers

CHAP. XIII.

Millions of Creatures in the Seas are fed:
Why then are Saints in doubt of dayly Bread?

OBSERVATION.

THere are multitudes of Living Creatures in the Sea. The Psalmist saith, There are in it things creeping innumerable, both small and great Beasts, Psal. 104. 25. And we read, Gen. 1. 20. that when God blessed the Waters, he said, Let the Waters bring forth abundantly, both Fish and Fowl, that move in it, and fly about it. Yet all those multitudes of Fish and Fowl, both in Sea and Land, are cared and provided for, Psal. 145. 15, 16. Thou givest them their Meat in due season; thou openest thy hand, and satisfiest the Desire of every living thing.

APPLICATION.

If God take care for the Fishes of the Sea, and the Fowls of the Air, much more will he care and provide for those that fear him. When the poor and needy seeketh Water, and there is none, and their Tongue faileth for thirst; I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them, Isa. 41. 17. Take no thought for your Life (saith the Lord) what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; or for the Body, what ye shall put on; Which he backs with an Argument from God's Providence over the Creatures, and enforceth it with a [much rather] upon them, Matth. 6. 25, 31. God would have his People be without carefulness, (i.e.) anxious Care, 1 Cor. 7. 32. And to cast their care upon him, for he careth for them, 1 Pet. 5. 7. There be two main Arguments suggested in the Gospel, to quiet and satisfy the Hearts of Saints in this particular: The one is, that the Gift of Jesus Christ amounts to more than all these things come to; yea, in bestowing him, he has given that which virtually and eminently comprehends all these inferior Mercies in it, Rom. 8. 32. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all; how shall he not with him freely give us all things? And 1 Cor. 3. 22. All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

Gods. Another Argument is, That God gives these Temporal Things to those he never gave his Christ unto, and therefore there is no great matter in them: Yea, to those, which in a little while, are to be thrust into Hell, Psal. 17. 14. Now, if God clothe and feed his Enemies, if (to allude to that, Luke 12. 28.) he clothe this Grass, which to day is in its Pride and Glory in the Field, and to morrow is cast into the Oven, into Hell: How much more will he clothe and provide for you that are Saints?

This God that feeds all the Creatures, is your Father, and a Father that never dies; and therefore you shall not be as exposed Orphans, that are the Children of such a Father. For he hath said, I will never leave you nor forsake you, Heb. 13. 3. I have read of a good Woman, that in all Wants and Distresses, was wont to encourage herself with that Word, 2 Sam. 22. 47. The Lord liveth. But one time being in a deep Distress, and forgetting that consolation, one of her little Children came to her, and said, Mother, Why weep ye so? What, is God Dead now? Which Words from a Child, shamed her out of her unbelieving Fears, and quickly brought her Spirit to rest. O Saint, whilst God lives, thou canst not want what is good for thee.

How sweet a Life might Christians live, could they but bring their Hearts to a full subjection to the disposing-Will of God! to be content not only with what he commands and approves, but also with what he allots and appoints. It was a sweet Reply, that a gracious Woman once made upon her Death-bed, to a Friend that asked her, Whether she were more willing to live or dye? She answered, I am pleas'd with what God pleaseth. Yea, said her Friend, but if God should refer it to you, which would you chuse? Truly, (said she) if God should refer it to me, I would refer it to him again. Ah bless'd Life, when the Will is swallow'd up in the Will of God, and the Heart at rest in his care and love, and pleased with all his appointments.

REFLECTION.

I remember my fault this day, may many a gracious Soul say. Ah how faithless and distrustful have I been notwithstanding the great security God hath given to my Faith, both in his Word and Works! O my Soul, thou hast greatly sinned therein, and dishonoured thy Father! I have been worse to my Father, than my Children are to me. They trouble not their thoughts with what they shall eat or drink, or put on, but trust to my care and provision for that: Yet I cannot trust my Father, though I have Ten thousand times more reason so to do, than they have to trust me, Mat. 7. 11. Surely, unless I were jealous of my Father's Affection, I could not be so dubious of his Provision for me. Ah, I should rather wonder that I have so much, than repine that I have no more. I should rather have been troubled that I have done no more for God, than that I have receiv'd no more from God. I have not proclaimed it to the World by my Conversation, that I have found a sufficiency in him alone, as the Saints have done, Hab. 3. 17, 18. How have I debased the Faithfulness and All-sufficiency of God, and magnified these earthly Trifles, by my Anxiety about them? Had I had more Faith, a light Purse would not have made such an heavy Heart. Lord, how often hast thou convinced me of this Folly, and put me to the Blush, when thou hast confuted my unbelief; so that I have resolved never to distrust thee more, and yet new Exigencies renew this Corruption? How contradictory also hath my Heart and my Prayers been? I pray for them conditionally, and with submission to thy Will; I dare not say to thee, I must have them; yet this hath been the Language of my Heart and Life. O convince me of this folly!

The POEM.

Variety of curious Fish are caught
Out of the Sea, and to our Tables brought;
We pick the choicest Bits, and then we say,
We are sufficed; come, now take away.
The Table's voided, you have done; but fain
I would perswade to have it brought again.
The sweetest bit of all remains behind,
Which, through your want of skill, you could not find.
A bit for Faith, have you not found it? Then
I have made but half a Meal; come taste agen,
Hast thou considered (O my Soul) that Hand
Which feeds those multitudes in Sea and Land?
A double Mercy in it thou should'st see;
It fed them first, and then with them fed thee.
Food in the Waters we should think were scant
For such a multitude, yet none do want.
What numerous Flocks of Birds about me fly?
When saw I one, through want fall down and dye?
They gather what his Hand to them doth bring,
Though but a Worm, and at that Feast can sing.
How full a Table doth my Father keep?
Blush then, my naughty Heart, repent and weep;
How faithless and distrustful hast thou been,
Although his Care and love thou oft hast seen?
Thus in a single Dish you have a Feast,
Your first and second Course, the last the best.

CHAP. XIV.

Sea-Waters drained through the Earth are sweet;
So are the Afflictions which God's People meet.

OBSERVATION.

THE Waters of the Sea in themselves are brackish and unpleasant, yet being exhaled by the Sun, and condensed into Clouds, they fall down into pleasant Showers; or if drained through the Earth, their property is thereby altered; and that which was so salt in the Sea, becomes exceeding sweet and pleasant in the Springs. This we find by constant experience, the sweetest crystal Spring came from the Sea, Eccles. 1. 7.

APPLICATION.

Afflictions in themselves are evil, Amos 2. 6. Very bitter and unpleasant. See Heb. 12. 11. Yet not morally and intrinsically evil, as Sin is; for if so the holy God would never own it for his own act as he doth, Mic. 3. 2. but always disclaimeth Sin, Jam. 1. 3. Besides, if it were so evil, it could in no case, or respect, be the object of our election and desire; as in some cases it ought to be, Heb. 11. 25. But it is Evil, and as it is the Fruit of Sin, and grievous unto Sense, Heb. 14. 11. But though it be thus brackish and unpleasant in itself, yet passing through Christ, and the Covenant, loses that ungrateful Property, and becomes pleasant in the Fruits and Effects thereof unto Believers, Heb. 12. 11.

Yea, such are the blessed Fruits thereof, that the are to account it all joy, when they fall into divers afflictions, Jam. 1. 2. David could bleſs God, that he was afflicted, and many a Saint hath done the like. A good Woman once compared her Afflictions to her Children: For (ſaith ſhe) they put me in pain in bearing them; yet as I know not which Child, ſo neither which Affliction I could be without.

Sometimes the Lord ſanctifies Affliction to diſcover the Corruption that is in the Heart, Deut. 8. 2. It is a Furnace to ſhew the Droſs. Ah! when a ſharp Affliction comes, then the Pride, Impatiency, and Unbelief of the Heart appears. Materia vexata prodit ſeipſum. When the Water is ſtirred, then the Mud and filthy Sediment that lay at the bottom riſes. Little (ſaith the afflicted Soul) did I think, there had been in me that Pride, Self-love, diſtruſt of God, carnal Fear and Unbelief, as I now find. O where is my Patience, my Faith, my Glory in Tribulation? I could not have imagined the ſight of Death would have ſo appalled me, the loſs of outward things ſo have pierced me. Now what a bleſſed thing is this, to have the Heart thus diſcovered.

Again, Sanctified Afflictions diſcover the emptineſs and vanity of the Creature. Now the Lord hath ſtained its Pride, and vailed its tempting Splendor, by this or that Affliction; and the Soul ſees what an empty, ſhallow, deceitful thing it is. The World (as one hath truly obſerved) is then only great in our Eyes, when we are full of ſenſe and ſelf: But now Affliction makes us more ſpiritual, and then it is nothing. It drives them nearer to God, makes them ſee the neceſſity of the Life of Faith, with multitudes of other Benefits.

But yet theſe ſweet Fruits of Affliction do not naturally, and of their own accord, ſpring from it: No, we may as well look for Grapes from Thorns, or Figs from Thiſtles, as for ſuch Fruits from Affliction, till Chriſt's ſanctifying Hand and Art have been uſ'd upon them.

The Reaſon why they become thus ſweet and pleaſant (as I noted before) is, becauſe they run now into another Channel; Jeſus Chriſt hath removed them from Mount Ebal to Gerezim; they are no more the effects of vindictive Wrath, but paternal Chaſtiſement. And (as Mr. Caſe well notes) A teaching Affliction is to the Saints, the reſult of all the Offices of Jeſus Chriſt. As a King, he chaſtens; as a Prophet, he teacheth, viz. by chaſtening; and as a Prieſt he hath purchaſed this Grace of the Father, that the dry Rod might bloſſom, and bear fruit. Behold then, a ſanctified Affliction is a Cup, wherein Jeſus Chriſt hath wrung and preſs'd the Juice and Vertue of all his Mediatory-Offices. Surely that muſt be a Cup of Generous, Royal Wine, like that in the Supper, a Cup of Bleſſing to the People of God.

REFLECTION.

Hence may the unſanctified Soul draw matter of Fear and Trouble, even from its unſanctified Troubles. And thus it may reflect upon it ſelf: O my Soul, what good haſt thou gotten by all, or any of thy Afflictions? God's Rod hath been dumb to me, or thou deaf to it. I have not learned one ſpecial Inſtruction from it: My Troubles have left me the ſame, or worſe than they found me; my Heart was proud, earthly, and vain before, and ſo remains ſtill: They have not purged out, but only given vent to the Pride, Murmur and Atheiſm of my Heart. I have been in my Afflictions, as that Wicked Ahaz was in his, 2 Chron. 28. 22. Who in the midſt of his Diſtreſs, yet treſpaſſed more and more againſt the Lord. When I have been in ſtorms at Sea, or troubles at home, my Soul within me hath been as a raging Sea, caſting up Mire and Dirt. Surely this Rod is not the Rod of God's Children. I have proved but Droſs in the Furnace, and I fear the Lord will put me away as Droſs, as he threatens to do with the Wicked, Pſal. 119. 119.

Hence alſo ſhould gracious Souls draw much Encouragement and Comfort amidſt all their troubles. O theſe are the Fruits of God's Fatherly Love to me! Why ſhould I fear in the day of Evil? Or tremble any more at Affliction? Though they ſeem as a Serpent at a diſtance, yet are they a Rod in hand. O bleſſed be that skilful and gracious hand, that makes the Rod, the dry Rod to bloſſom, and bear ſuch Precious Fruit.

Lord; what a myſtery of Love lies in this Diſpenſation! That Sin which firſt brought Afflictions into the World, is now it ſelf carried out of the World by Affliction, Rom. 5. 12. Iſa. 7. 9. O what can fruſtrate my Salvation, when thoſe very things that ſeem moſt to oppoſe it, are made ſubſervient to it; and, contrary to their own nature, do promote and further it?

The POEM.

'TIS ſtrange to hear what different Cenſures fall
Upon the ſame Affliction; ſome do call
Their Troubles ſweet, ſome bitter; others meet
Them both mid-way, and call them Bitter Sweet.
But here's the Queſtion ſtill, I fain would ſee,
Why ſweet to him, and bitter unto me?
Thou Drinkſt them Dregs and all, but others find
Their Troubles ſweet, becauſe to them refin'd,
And ſanctify'd; which difference is beſt
By ſuch apt Similies as theſe expreſt:
From Salt and Brackiſh Seas Fumes riſe and fly,
Which into Clouds condens'd obſcure the Sky;
Their Property there alter'd in few Hours
Thoſe brackiſh Fumes fall down in pleaſant Showers:
Or as the dregs of Wine and Beer diſtill'd
By Limbeck, with Ingredients, doth yield
A Cordial-water, though the Lees were bitter,
From whence the Chymiſt did extract ſuch Liquor:
Then marvel not, that one can kiſs that Rod,
Which makes another to blaſpheme his God:
O get your Troubles ſweet'ned and refin'd.
Or elſe they'll leave bitter Effects behind.
Saints Troubles are a Cord let down by Love,
To pully up their Hearts to things above.

CAAP. XV.

The Seas within their bounds the Lord contains;
He alſo Men and Devils holds in Chains.

OBSERVATION.

IT is a wonderful Work of God, to limit and bound ſuch a vaſt and furious Creature as the Sea, which, according to the Judgment of many Learned Men, is higher than the Earth; and that it hath a Propenſion to overflow it, is evident both from its Nature and Motion; were it not, that the great Work of God had laid his Law upon it. And this is a Work wherein the Lord glories, and will be admired, Pſal. 104. 9. Thou haſt ſet a Bound that they may not paſs over, that they turn not again to cover the Earth. Which it's clear they would do, were they not thus limited. So Job 38. 8. 10, 11. Who shut up the Seas with Doors, when it break forth, as if it had issued out of the Womb? I brake up for it my decreed Place, and set Bars and Doors, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther; and here shall thy proud Waves be staid.

APPLICATION.

And no less is the glorious Power and Mercy of God discovered in bridling the Rage and Fury of Satan and his Instruments, that they break not in upon the Inheritance of the Lord, and destroy it. Surely the wrath of Man shall praise thee, and the remainder of Wrath thou shalt restrain, Psal. 76. 10. By which it is more than hinted, that there is a World of Rage and Malice in the Hearts of Wicked Men, which fain would but cannot vent it self, because the Lord restrains, or as the Hebrew, Girds it up. Satan is the Envious one, and his Rage is great against the People of God, Rev. 12. 12. But God holds him and all his Instruments in a Chain of Providence; and it is well for God's People that it is so.

They are limited as the Sea, and so the Lord in a providential way speaks to them, Hitherto shall you come, and no further. Sometimes he ties them up so short, that they cannot touch his People, though they have the greatest opportunities and advantages, Psal. 105. 12, 13, 14, 15. When they were but a few Men in number, yea, very few, and Strangers in it; when they went from one Nation to another, from one Kingdom to another People: He suffered no Man to do them wrong; yea, he reproved Kings for their sakes, saying, Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no harm. And sometimes he permits them to touch and trouble his People, but then sets bounds and limits to them, beyond which they must not pass. That is a pregnant Text to this purpose, Revel. 2. 10. Behold, the Devil shall cast some of you into Prison, that you may be tried, and ye shall have Tribulation ten days.

Here are four remarkable Limitations upon Satan and his Agents, in reference to the People of God: A Limitation as to the Persons not all, but some: A Limitation of the Punishment, a Prison, not a Grave, not Hell: A Limitation upon them as to the end; for Tryal, not Ruin: And lastly, as to the Duration; not as long as they please, but ten days.

REFLECTIONS.

O my Soul, what Marrow and Fatness, Comfort and Consolation, may'st thou suck from the Breast of this Truth, in the darkest day of Trouble? Thou seest how the flowing Sea drives to over-whelm the Earth. Who has arrested it in its course, and stopt its violence! Who has confin'd it to its place? Certainly none other but the Lord. When I see it threaten the Shore with its proud, furious and insulting Waves, I wonder it doth not swallow up all: But I see it no sooner touch the Sands, which God hath made its bounds, but it retires, and as it were with a kind of Submission, respects those Limits which God hath set it.

Thus the fiercest Element is repress't by the feebleſt things: Thou seest also, how full of Wrath and Fury wicked Men are, how they rage like the troubled Sea, and threaten to over-whelm * thee, and all the Lord's Inheritance: And then the Flood's of ungodly Men make thee afraid, yet are they restrained by an invisible Gracious Hand, that they cannot execute their purpose, nor perform their Enterprize. How full of Devils and devilized Men is this lower World? Yet in the midst of them all hast thou hitherto been preserved. O my Soul, admire and adore that glorious Power of God, by which thou art kept unto Salvation. Is not the Preservation of a Saint in the midst of such Hosts of Enemies, as great a Miracle, though not so sensible, as the Preservation of those three noble Jews, in the midst of the fiery Furnace, or Daniel in the Den of Lyons? For there is as strong a Propension in Satan and Wicked Men to destroy the Saints, as in the Fire to burn, or a Lyon to devour. O then let me cheerfully address my self to the faithful discharge of my Duty, and stand no longer in a slavish Fear of Creatures, who can have no power against me but what is given them from above, John 19. 11. And no more shall be given than shall turn to the glory of God, Psal. 76. 10. and the advantage of my Soul, Rom. 8. 28.

OBSERVATION.

OF how great use and necessity is the Comp to Seamen? Though they can coast a lit way by the Shore, yet they dare not venture into the Ocean without it. It's their Guide, directs and shapes their Course for them: And by the violence of Wind and Weather they driven beside their due Course, yet by the help this, they are reduced and brought to rights ag It is wonderful to consider, how by the help this Guide they can run in a direct Line m hundred Leagues, and at last fall right with smallest Island; which is in the Ocean, compa tively, but as the head of a small Pin upon a Ta

This is a faithful Guide, and brings all that follow it to a bleſſed end; Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel, and afterwards receive me to glory, Pſal. 73. 24. The whole hundredth and nineteenth Pſalm is ſpent in commendation of its tranſcendent excellency and uſefulneſs. Luther profeſs'd, that he prized it ſo highly, that he would not take the whole World in exchange for one Leaf of it. Lay but this Rule before you, and walk accurately by it, and you cannot be out of your way to Heaven, Pſal. 119. 30. I have choſen the way of truth, (or the true way;) thy Judgments have I laid before me. Some indeed have opened their detracting blaſphemous Mouths againſt it; as Julian, that curſed Apoſtate, who feared not to ſay, There was as good matter in Phocillides as in Solomon, in Pindarus's Odes, as in David's Pſalms.

And the Papiſts generally ſlight it, making it a lame imperfect Rule; yea, making their own Traditions the Touchſtone of Doctrines, and Foundation of Faith. Montanus tells us, that although the Apoſtle would have Sermons and Service celebrated in a known Tongue, yet the Church, for very good cauſe, hath otherwiſe order'd it. Gilford call'd it, the Mother of Hereſies. Bonner's Chaplain judged it worthy to be burnt as a ſtrange Doctrine. They ſet up their Inventions above it, and frequently come in with a Non obſtante againſt Chriſt's Inſtitutions. And thus do they make it void, or, as the Word ἀναλόωντες ſignifies, Matth. 15. 6. unlord it, and take away its authority as a Rule. But thoſe that have thus ſlighted it, and followed the By-paths unto which their corrupt Hearts have led them, they take not hold of the paths of Life, and are now in the depths of Hell. All other Lights, which Men pretend, in the neglect of this, are but falſe fires, that will lead Men into the Pits and Bogs of Deſtruction at laſt.

REFLECTION.

And is thy Word a Compaſs, to direct my courſe to Glory? O where am I then like to arrive at laſt, that in all my courſe have neglected it, and ſteered according to the counſel of my own Heart! Lord, have not made thy Word the main of my counſel, but conſulted with fleſh and blood; I have not endeavoured at this Oracle, nor ſtudied it, and made it the guide of my way, but walked after the ſight of my Eyes, and the luſt of my Heart. Whither Lord, ſhall I come at laſt, but to Hell, after this rate and proceeding? Some have ſlighted thy Word profeſſedly, and I have ſlighted it practically. I have a Soul embarked for Eternity, it is now floating on a dangerous Ocean, Rocks and Sands on every ſide, and I go adrift before every Wind of temptation, and know not where I am. Ah Lord, convince me of the danger of this condition. O convince me of my Ignorance in thy Word, and the fatal conſequence and iſſue thereof. Lord, let me now reſolve to ſtudy, prize, and obey it; hide it in my Heart, that I may not Sin againſt it. Open my Underſtanding, that I may underſtand the Scriptures: Open my Heart to entertain it in love. O thou that haſt been ſo gracious to give a perfect Rule, give me alſo a perfect Heart to walk by that Rule to glory!

The POEM.

THIS World's a Sea, wherein a numerous Fleet
Of Ships are under ſail. Here you ſhall meet
Of every Rate and Size; Frigots, Galleons,
The nimble Ketches. and ſmall Pickeroons:
Some bound to this Port, ſome where Winds and Weather
Will drive them, they are bound they know not whither.
Some ſteer away for Heaven, ſome for Hell;
To which ſome ſteer, themſelves can hardly tell.
The Winds do ſhape their courſe, which though it blow
From any Point, before it they muſt go.
They are directed by the Wind and Tide
That have no Compaſs to direct and guide:
For want of this, muſt run themſelves a-ground;
Brave Ships are caſt away, poor Souls are drown'd.
Thy Word our Compaſs is, to guide our way
To Glory; it reduces ſuch as ſtray.
Lord, let thy Word dwell richly in my Heart;
And make me skilful in this heavenly Art:
O let me underſtand and be ſo wiſe,
To know upon what Point my Country lies;
And having ſet my Courſe directly thither,
Great God preſerve me in the fouleſt Weather.
By Reaſon ſome will coaſt it; but I fear
Such Coaſters never will drop Anchor there.
Thy Word is truly teucht, and ſtill directs
A proper Courſe, which my baſe Heart neglects.
Lord, touch my Iron Heart, and make it ſtand
Pointing to thee, its Loadſtone. To that Land
Of Reſt above, let every Tempeſt drive
My Soul, where it would rather be than live.

CHAP. XVII.

Look as the Sea by turns doth ebb and flow,
So their Eſtates, that uſe it, come and go.

OBSERVATION.

THE Sea hath its alternate Courſe and Motion, its Ebbings and Flowings: No ſooner is it High-water, but it begins to Ebb again, and leave the Shore naked and dry, which but a little before it covered and over-flowed. And as its Tides, ſo alſo its Waves are the Emblem of Inconſtancy, ſtill rouling and tumbling, this way and that, never fixt and quiet. Inſtabilis unda: As fickle as a Wave, is common to a Proverb. See Jam. 1. 6. He that wavereth, is like a Wave of the Sea, driven with Winds, and toſſed. So Iſa. 57. 20. It cannot reſt.

APPLICATION.

Thus mutable and inconſtant are all outward things, there is no depending on them: Nothing of any ſubſtance, or any ſolid conſiſtence in them, 1 Cor. 7. 31. The faſhion of this world paſſeth away. It is an high point of folly to depend upon ſuch Vanities, Prov. 23. 5. Why wilt thou ſet, (or, as it is in the Hebrew) cauſe thine Eyes to fly upon that which is not?

not? For riches certainly make themselves wings, and fly away, as an Eagle towards Heaven. In flying to us (saith Augustine) they have, alas, vix quidem passerinas, scarce a Sparrow's Wings; but in flying from us, Wings as an Eagle. And those Wings they are said to make to themselves, (i. e.) the cause of its transitorineſs is in it self; the Creature is subjected to Vanity by Sin; they are sweet flowers, but withered presently, Jam. 1. 10. As the flower of the grass, so shall the rich Man fade away. The Man is like the stalk or grass, his riches are the flower of the grass; his glory and outward beauty, the stalk is soon withered, but the flower much sooner. This is either withered upon, or blown off from it, while the stalk abides. Many a Man out-lives his Estate and Honour, and stands in the World as a bare dry stalk in the Field, whose flower, beauty, and bravery is gone: One puff of Wind blows it away, one churlish easterly blast shrivels it up, 1 Pet. 4. 24.

How mad a thing is it then, for any Man to be lifted up in Pride, upon such a Vanity as this is; to build so lofty and over-jetting Roof upon such a feeble, tottering Foundation? We have seen Meadows full of such curious Flowers, mown down and withered, Men of great Estates impoverished suddenly: And when, like a Meadow that is mown, they have begun to recover themselves again (as the phrase is) the Lord hath sent Grashoppers in the beginning of the shooting up of the latter growth. Amos 7. 1. Just as the Grashoppers and other Creatures devour the second tender Herbage, as soon as the Field begins to recover its verdure: So Men, after they have been denuded and blasted by Providence, they begin after a while to flourish again, but then comes some new Affliction, and blasts all. None have more frequent experience of this, than you that are Merchants and Seamen, whose Estates are floating; and yet such as have had the highest Security in the eye of Reason, have notwithstanding experienc'd the Vanity of these things. Henry the Fourth, a potent Prince, was reduced to such a low ebb, that he petition'd for a Prebends place in the Church of Spire. Gallimer, King of the Vandals, was brought so low, that he sent to his Friend for a Spunge, a Loaf of Bread, and an Harp: A Spunge to dry up his Tears, a Loaf of Bread to maintain his Life, and an Harp to solace himself in his Misery. The story of Belisarius is very affecting: He was a Man famous in his Time, General of an Army, yet having his Eyes put out, and stripped of all earthly Comforts, was led about, crying, Date obolum Belisario, Give one penny to poor Belisarius. Instances in History of this kind are infinite. Men of the greatest Estates and Honours, have nevertheless become the very Ludibria Fortunæ, as one speaks, the very scorn of Fortune.

Yea, and not only wicked Men, that have gotten their Estates by Rapine and Oppression, have lived to see them thus scattered by Providence: But sometimes godly Men have had their Estates, how justly soever acquired, thus scattered by Providence also. Who ever had an Estate better gotten, better bottomed, or better managed, than Job? Yet all was overthrown and swept away in a Moment; tho' in mercy to him, as the issue demonstrated.

Oh then! what a Vanity is it to set the Heart and let out the Affections on them! You can never depend too much upon God, nor too little upon the Creature, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Charge them that are rich in this World, that they be not high minded and trust in uncertain Riches.

REFLECTION.

Are all earthly Things thus transitory and vain? Then what a reproach and shame is it to me, that the Men of this World should be more industrious and eager in the Prosecution of such Vanities, than I am to enrich my Soul with solid and everlasting Treasure? O that ever a sensual Lust should be more operative in them than the love of God in me! O my Soul, thou dost not lay out thy strength and earnestness for Heaven, with any proportion to what they do for the World. I have indeed higher Motives, and a surer Reward than they: But as I have an advantage above them herein, so have they an advantage above me in the strength and entireness of the principle by which they are acted. What they do for the World, they do it with all their might; they have no contrary principle to oppose them; their Thoughts, Strength and Affection, is entirely carried in one Channel. But I find a Law in my Members warring against the Law of my Mind; I must strive through a thousand Difficulties and Contradictions, to the discharge of a Duty. O my God! Shall not my Heart be more enlarg'd in Zeal, Love, and Delight in thee, than theirs are after their Lusts? O let me once find it so.

Again, is the Creature so vain and unstable? Then why are my Affections so hot and eager after it? And why am I so apt to dote upon its beauty, especially when God is staining all its pride and glory! Jer. 45. 5, 6. Surely it is unbecoming the Spirit of a Christian at any time, but at such time we may say of it, as Hushai of Ahitophel's Counsel, It is not good at this time.

O that my Spirit were raised above them, and my Conversation more in Heaven! O that like the Angel, Rev. 10. 1, 2. which came down from Heaven and set one foot upon the Sea, and another upon the Earth, having a Crown upon his Head, so might set one foot upon all the cares, fears and terrors of the World, and another upon all the tempting splendor and glory of the World, treading both under foot in the dust, and crowning my soul with nothing but spiritual Excellencies and Glory!

The POEM.

JUdge in thy self (O Christian) is it meet
To set thy Heart on what Beasts set their feet?
'Tis no Hyperbole, if you be told,
You dig for Dross with Mattocks made of Gold.
Affections are too costly to bestow
Upon the fair-fac'd Nothings here below.
The Eagle scorns to fall down from an high
(The Proverb saith) to catch the silly Flie.
And can a Christian leave the face of God,
T' embrace the Earth, or dote upon a Clod?
Can earthly Things thy Heart so strangely move,
To tempt it down from the Delights above;
And now to court the World at such a time
When God is laying Judgment to the Line?
It's just like him that doth his Cabbin sweep
And trim, when all is sinking in the Deep:
Or like the silly Bird, that to her Nest
Doth carry straws, and never is at rest,
Till it be feather'd well, but doth not see
The Axe beneath that's hewing down the Tree.
If on a Thorn thy Heart it self repose
With such delight, what if it were a Rose?
Admire, O Saint, the Wisdom of thy God,
Who of the self-same Tree do make a Rod,
Lest thou shouldst surfeit on forbidden Fruit,
And live not like a Saint, but like a Brute.

CHAP. XVIII.

Like hungry Lyons, Waves for Sinners gape:
Leave then your Sins behind, if you'll escape.

OBSERVATION.

THE Waves of the Sea are sometimes raised by God's Commission, to be Executioners of his threatnings upon Sinners. When Jonah fled from the presence of the Lord to Tarshish, the Text saith, the Lord sent out a great Wind into the Sea, and there was a mighty Tempest, so that the Ship was like to be broken, Joh. 1. 4. These were God's Bailiffs, to arrest the Run-away Prophet. And Psalm 148. 8. the stormy Winds are said to fulfil his word; not only his word of Command, in rising when God bids them, but his Word of threatning also. And hence it is called a destroying wind, Jer. 51. 1. and stormy wind in God's fury, Ezek. 13. 13.

APPLICATION.

If these be the Executioners of the Lord's threatnings, how sad then is their condition that put forth to Sea under the guilt of all their Sins? O, if God should commissionate the Winds to go after and arrest thee for all thou owest him, where art thou then? How dare you put forth under the power of a Divine threat, before all be cleared betwixt God and thee? Sins in Scripture are called Debts, Mat. 6. 12. They are Debts to God; not that we owe them to him, or ought to Sin, but Metonymically, because they render the Sinner obnoxious to God's Judgments, even as pecuniary Debts oblige him that hath not wherewith to pay, to suffer Punishment. All Sinners must undergo the Curse, either in their own Person, according to the express letter of the Law, Gen. 2. 17. Gal. 3. 10. or in their Surety, according to the tacit intent of the Law, manifested to be the mind of the Law-giver, Rom. 3. 15. Gal. 3. 13, 14.

Now he that by Faith hath Interest in his Surety, hath his Discharge, his Quietus est, sealed in the Blood of Christ; all Process at Law, or from the Law, is stopt, Rom. 8. 1. But if thou be an impenitent, persisting Sinner, thy Debt remains upon thine own score. And be sure thy Sin will find thee out wherever-ever thou goest, Numb. 32. 23. (i. e.) God's revenging hand for Sin will be upon thee: Thou mayst lose the sight and memory of thy Sin, but canst not lose the sight of thee; they follow after, as the Hound doth the fleeting game upon the scent, till they have fetcht thee up: And then consider, it is a fearful a thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God, Heb. 10. 31. How soon may a storm arise, and bring thee before the Bar of God?

REFLECTION.

O my Soul, what a case art thou in, if this be so? Is not all thy Sins yet upon thine own score? Hast thou not made light of Christ, and that precious Blood of his, and hitherto persisted in thy Rebellion against him? And what can the issue of this be at last but ruine? There is abundant Mercy indeed for returning Sinners; but the Gospel speaks of Wrath for persisting and impenitent Sinners. And though many who are going on in their Sins are taken by Grace, yet there is no Grace promised to such as go on in Sin. O, if God should meet me by the next Storm, and call me to an account for all that I owe him, I must then lie in the Prison of Hell to all Eternity; for I can never pay the Debt; nay, all the Angels in Heaven cannot satisfy for it. Being Christless, I am under all the Curses in the Book of God; a Child of Hagar. Lord pity and spare me a little longer! O discover thy Christ unto me, and give me Faith in his Blood, and then thou art fully satisfied at once, and I discharged for ever. O require not the Debt at my hand, for then thou wilt never be satisfied, nor I acquitted. What profit, Lord, is there in my Blood! O my Soul, make haste to this Christ, thy Refuge-City; thou knowest not how soon the avenger of Blood may overtake thee.

The POEM.

THY Sins are Debts, God puts them to account:
Canst tell, poor wretch, to what thy Debts amount?
Thou fill'st the Treasure of thy Sins each hour.
Into his Vials God doth also pour
Proportionable wrath: Thou seest it not;
But yet assure thy self, there's drop for drop.
For every Sand of Patience running out,
A drop of Wrath runs in. Soul, look about.
God's Treasure's almost full, as well as thine:
When both are full, O then the dreadful time
Of Reckoning comes; thou shalt not gain a day
Of patience more, but then there hastes away
Heaven's Pursevant, who comes upon the wing
With his Commission seal'd, to take and bring.
Do'st still reject Christ's tenders? Well, next storm
May be the Bailiff ordered to perform
This dreadful Office. O then restless be,
Till God in Christ be reconcil'd to thee.
The Sum is great, but if a Christ thou get,
Fear not, a Prince can pay a Beggar's debt.
Now if the Storm should rise, thou need not fear;
Thou art, but the Delinquent is not there.
A pardoned Soul to Sea may boldly go:
He fears not Bailiffs, that doth nothing owe.

CHAP. XIX.

To save the Ship, rich Lading's cast away.
Thy Soul is Shipwrackt if thy Lusts do stay.

OBSERVATION.

IN Storms and Distresses at Sea, the richest Commodities are cast over-board; they stand not upon it, when Life and all is in jeopardy and hazard. Jonah 1. 5. The Mariners cast forth the Wares that were in the Ship into the Sea, to lighten it. And Act. 27. 18, 19. they cast out the very tacklings of the Ship. How highly soever Men prize such Commodities, yet Reason tells them, it were better these should perish, than Life. Satan himself could say, Job 1. Skin for Skin, and all that a Man hath will he give for his Life.

APPLICATION.

And surely, it is every way as highly reasonable, that Men should mortifie, cast out, and cut off their dearest Lusts, rather than their Immortal Souls should sink and perish in the Storm of God's wrath. Life, indeed, is a precious Treasure, and highly valued by Men: You know what Solomon saith, Eccles. 9. 4. That a Living Dog is better than a Dead Lyon. And we find Men willing to part with their Estates, Limbs, or any outward Comfort, for the Preſervation of it. The Woman in the Goſpel ſpent all ſhe had on the Phyſicians for her Health, a degree below Life. Some Men indeed do much over-value their Lives, and part with Chriſt and Peace of Conſcience for it; but he that thus ſaves it, ſhall loſe it. Now if Life be ſo much worth, What then is the Soul worth? Alas! Life is but a vapour, which appeareth for a little while, and then vaniſheth away, Jam. 4. 14.

Life is indeed more worth than all the World, but my Soul is more worth than Ten thouſand Lives. Nature teacheth you to value the firſt ſo high, and Grace ſhould teach you to value the ſecond much higher, Mat. 19. 26. Now here is the caſe: Either you muſt part with your Sins, or with your Souls; if theſe be not caſt out, both muſt ſink together. If ye live after the fleſh, ye muſt die, Rom. 8. 13. God ſaith to you in this caſe, as to Ahab, when he ſpared Benhadad, 1 King, 20. 40. Becauſe thou haſt let go a Sin, which God hath appointed to deſtruction, therefore thy Life ſhall go for his Life. Guilt will raiſe a Storm of Wrath, as Jonah did, if not caſt out.

REFLECTION.

And muſt Sin or the Soul periſh? Muſt my Life, yea, my Eternal Life go for it, if I ſpare it? O then let me not be cruel to mine own Soul, in ſparing my Sin; O my Soul, this fooliſh pity, and cruel Indulgence will be thy ruine: If I ſpare it, God hath ſaid, He will not ſpare me, Deut. 26. 20. It is true, the pains of Mortification are ſharp, but yet it's eaſier than the pains of Hell. To cut off a right Hand, or pluck out a right Eye, is hard; but to have my Soul cut off eternally from God, is harder. Is it as eaſie (O my Soul!) to burn for them in Hell, as to mortifie them on Earth? Surely, it is profitable for me, that one Member periſh, rather than that all be caſt into Hell, Mat 5. 24. I ſee the Merchant willing to part with rich Wares, if imbarked with them in a Storm: And thoſe that have Gangreen'd Legs or Arms, willingly ſtretch them out to be cut off, to preſerve Life: And ſhall I be willing to endure no Difficulties for my Soul? Chriſt reckon'd Soul's worth his Blood: And is it not worth my Self-denial? Lord, let me not warm a Snake in my Boſom, that will at laſt ſting me to the Heart.

The POEM.

THY Soul's the Ship, its Lading is its Luſts,
God's Judgments, ſtormy Winds and dang'rous guſts;
Conſcience the Maſter; but the ſtubborn Will Goes Supra Cargo, and doth keep the Bill.
Affections are the Men, the Winds do riſe,
The Storm increaſes: Conſcience gives Advice
To throw thoſe Luſts o'erboard, and ſo to eaſe
The Veſſel, which elſe cannot keep the Seas.
The Will oppoſes, and th' Affections ſay,
The Maſter's Counſel they will not obey.
The caſe is dangerous, that no Man can doubt,
Who ſees the ſtorm within, and that without.
Luſts and Affections cannot part, no, rather,
They are reſolv'd to ſwim and ſink together.
Conſcience ſtill ſtrives, but they cannot abide
That it, or Reaſon ſhould the Caſe decide.
Luſt knows what Reaſon in like caſes ſtill
Determines well: Then chuſe ye whom ye will.
Shall's make the Devil Judge? This caſe has been Before him, and he judg'd, That skin for skin,
And all Men have, they'll part with for their life.
Then how unreaſonable is this ſtrife?
They that their Sins do with their perſons ſhip,
Do for their Souls prepare a dreadful whip.

CHAP. XX.

Chriſt with a word can ſurging Waves appeaſe;
His Voice a troubled Soul can quickly eaſe.

OBSERVATION.

WHen the Sea works, and is tempeſtuous, it is not in the power of any Creature to appeaſe it. When the Egyptians would by their Hieroglyphicks expreſs an Impoſſibility, they did it by the Picture of a Man treading upon the Waves. It is ſtoryed of Canute, an ancient Daniſh King, That when a mighty ſtorm of Flattery aroſe upon him, he appeaſed it by ſhewing that he could not appeaſe the Sea: But one of his Courtiers told him, as he rode near the Sea-ſide, That he was Lord of the Sea as well as Land. Well, ſaid the King, we ſhall ſee that by and by; and ſo went to the Water-ſide, and with a loud Voice cryed, O ye Seas and Waves, come no further, touch not my feet. But the Sea came up, notwithſtanding that charge, and confuted the flattery. But now Jeſus Chriſt hath the command of them indeed: It is ſaid of him, Mat. 8. 26. That he rebuked them. And Mark 4. 38. He quiets them with a word, Peace, be ſtill; as one would huſh a Child, and it obeyed him.

APPLICATION.

Conſcience, when awakened by the Terrors of the Lord, is like a raging tempeſtuous Sea; ſo it works, ſo it roars; and it is in the power of all the Creatures to huſh or quiet it. Spiritual Terrors, as well as ſpiritual Conſolations, are not known till felt. O when the Arrows of the Almighty are ſhot into the Spirit, and the Terrors of God ſet themſelves in array againſt the Soul, when the Venom of thoſe Arrows drink up the Spirits, and thoſe Armies of Terrors charge violently and ſucceſſively upon it, as Job. 6. 4. What Creature then is able to ſtand before them! Even God's own dear Children have felt ſuch Terrors as have diſtracted them, Pſal. 81. 15. Conſcience is the ſeat of Guilt. It is like a burning-glaſs, ſo it contracts the Beams of the Threatnings, twiſts them together, and reflects them on the Soul, until it ſmoke, ſcorch and flame. If the wrath of a King be like the roaring of a Lyon, then what is the Almighty's wrath! which is burning wrath, Job 19. Tearing wrath, Pſal. 50. 22. Surprizing wrath, Job 20. 23. And abiding wrath, Job 3. 36.

In this caſe no Creature can relieve, all are Phyſicians of no value; ſome under theſe Terrors have thought Hell more tolerable, and by a violent hand have thruſt themſelves out of the World into it, to avoid theſe gnawings: Yet Jeſus Chriſt can quickly calm theſe myſtical Waves alſo, and huſh them with a word; yea, he is the Phyſician, and no other. It is the ſprinkling of his Blood, which, like a cooling Fomentation, allays thoſe heats with. That Blood of ſprinkling ſpeaks Peace, when no other have practiſed upon the Soul to no purpoſe, and the reaſon is, becauſe he is a Perſon in whom God and Man, Juſtice and Mercy, meet, and kiſs each other, Eph. 2. 14. And hence Faith fetches in peace to the Soul, Rom. 5. 1.

REFLECTION.

Can none appeaſe a troubled Conſcience, but Chriſt? Then learn, O my Soul, to underſtand, and daily more and more to favour that glorious Name, even Jeſus, that delivers not only from the Wrath to come, but that which is felt here alſo. O, if the foretaſte of Hell be ſo intolerable, if a few drops let fall on the Conſcience in this Life, be ſo ſcalding and inſufferable, what is it to have all the Vials poured out to Eternity, when there ſhall be nothing to divert, mitigate, or allay it?

Here Men have ſomewhat to abate thoſe Terrors, ſome hopes of Mercy, at leaſt a poſſibility; but there is none. O my Soul! how art thou loaded with Guilt! And what a Morgamiſſabib wouldſt thou be, ſhould God rouſe that ſleepy Lyon in thy Boſom! My condition is not at all the better, becauſe my Conſcience is quiet. Ah, the day is coming, when it muſt awake, and will lighten and thunder terribly within me, if I get not into Chriſt the ſooner. O Lord, who knows the power of thy Wrath? O let me not carry this Guilt out of the World with me, to maintain thoſe everlaſting Flames, let me give no ſleep to mine Eyes, nor ſlumber to my Eyelids, till I feel the comfort of that Blood of Sprinkling, which alone ſpeaketh Peace.

The POEM.

AMong the dreadful works of God I find
No Metaphors to paint a troubled Mind.
I think on this, now that, and yet will neither Come fully up, though all be put together.
'Tis like the raging Sea that caſts up Mire,
Or like to Ætna, breathing Smoak and Fire;
Or like a rouſed Lyon fierce and fell.
Or like thoſe Furies that do howl in Hell.
O Conſcience! Who can ſtand before thy Power, Endure thy Gripes, and Twinges but an Hour?
Stone, Gout, Strappado, Racks, whatever is Dreadful to Senſe, is but a Toy to this.
No Pleaſures, Riches, Honours, Friends can tell
How to give eaſe: In this 'tis like to Hell.
Call for the pleaſant Timbrel, Lute and Harp;
Alas! The Muſick howls, the Pain's too ſharp
For theſe to charm, divert or lull aſleep:
Theſe cannot reach it, no, the Wound's too deep.
Let all the Promiſes before them ſtand,
And ſet a Barnabas at his Right Hand;
Theſe in themſelves no Comfort can afford,
'Tis Chriſt, and none but Chriſt, can ſpeak the Word.
And he no ſooner ſpeaks, but all is ſtill,
The Storm is over, and the Mind tranquil.
There goes a Power with his Majeſtick Voice,
To huſh the dreadful'ſt Storm, and ſtill its noiſe.
Who would but fear and love this glorious Lord,
That can rebuke ſuch Tempeſts with a Word?

CHAP. XXI.

Our Food out of the Sea God doth command;
Yet few therein take notice of his hand.

OBSERVATION.

THE Providence of God in furniſhing us with ſuch plenty and variety of Fiſh, is not ſlightly to be paſt over. We have not only ſeveral ſorts of Fiſh in our own Seas, which are caught in their ſeaſons; but from ſeveral Parts, eſpecially the Weſtern parts of England, many Sail of Ships are ſent yearly to the American parts of the World; as Newfound-Land, New-England, &c. Whence every Year is brought home, not only enough to ſupply our own Nation, but many thouſand Pounds worth alſo yearly returned from Spain, and other Countries; by which Trade many thouſand Families do ſubſiſt.

APPLICATION.

But now, what returns do we make to Heaven for theſe Mercies? O what notice is taken of the good hand of Providence, which thus ſupplies and feeds us with the Bleſſings of the Sea? I fear there are but few that own, act in ſubmiſſion to it, and are careful to return, according to received benefit. Men do not conſider, That their Works are in the hand of God, Eccleſ. 9. 1. And even thoſe that have the moſt immediate dependence upon Providence, as Merchants and Seamen, yet are very prone to undertake Deſigns in the Confidence of their own Wiſdom and Induſtry; not looking higher for the Bleſſing, Jam. 4. 13. They often ſacrifice to their own Net, and burn Incenſe to their Drag, becauſe by them their Portion is fat, and their Meat plenteous, Hab. 1. 16. viz. They attribute what is due to God, unto the Creature. Now this is a Sin highly provoking to the Lord; for look in what degree the Heart cleaves to the ſecond Cauſe, in the ſame degree it departs from the living God, Jer. 10. 5.

And how do you think the bleſſed God will take it, to ſee himſelf thus debaſed, and the Creature thus exalted into his Place; to ſee you carry your ſelves to the Creature as to a God, and to the Bleſſed God, as to a Creature. Surely, it is a great and common Evil, and ſuch as will blaſt all, if not timely diſcover'd and lamented. If we make Fleſh our Arm, it's juſt with God to wither and dry up the Arm. Do we not, my Brethren, look upon ſecond Cauſes, as if they had the main Stroke in our Buſineſs? And with a neglective Eye paſs by God, as if he came in but collaterally, and on the by, into it? But certainly, all Endeavours will be unſanctified, if not ſucceſsleſs, in which God is not eyed and engaged.

It is in vain for you to riſe up early, and ſit up late, and eat the Bread of Sorrows; for ſo he giveth his beloved Sleep, Pſal. 127. 2. (i. e.) It is to no purpoſe for Men to beat their Brains, tire their Spirits, and rack their Conſciences for an Eſtate. The true way of acquiring and enjoying the Creature, is by ſubmitting quietly to the Will of God, in a prudent and diligent, yet moderate uſe of lawful Means: Nothing can thrive with us till then.

REFLECTION.

Why then ſhould I diſquiet my ſelf in vain; and rob my ſelf of my Peace, by theſe unbelieving Cares and Diſtractions? O this hath been my Sin! I have acted, as if my condition had been at my own diſpoſe; I have eyed Creatures and means too much, and God too little. How have my Hands hanged down with Diſcouragement, when ſecond Cauſes have diſappeared, or wrought croſs to my Deſigns in the World, ready to transfer the Fault on this thing, or that! And again, how apt am I to be vainly lifted up in carnal Confidence, when I ſee my ſelf competently furniſhed with Creature-munition and Proviſion? Oh, what a God-provoking Wickedneſs is this! How oft hath Providence checked my carnal Preſumption, and daſhed many hopeful

hopeful Projects? Yet have I not owned it, as I ought, and ſubmitted to it. Oh, it is a wonder this hath not cloſed the hand of Providence againſt me, and pulled down a Curſe upon all! Ah Lord, let me now learn to acquaint my ſelf with thee, then ſhall I decree a thing, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed, Job 22. 28.

The POEM.

IN all the Gifts of God we ſhould advance
His glorious Name; not ſay, It came by chance.
Or to the Idol of our Prudence pay
The Tribute of our Praiſe, and go our way.
The Waves do clap their hands, and in their kind Acknowledge God; And what, are they more blind
That float upon them? yea, for what they get,
They offer Sacrifices to their Net.
This is your manner, thus to work you go:
Confeſs the naked Truth; ſay, Is't not ſo?
This Net was wiſely caſt, 'tis full, 'tis full:
O well done Mates, this is a gallant pull.
Thus what is due to God, you do apply
Unto your ſelves moſt Sacrilegiouſly.
I cannot wonder ſuch come empty home,
That are ſo full of ſelf and ſin: Yet ſome
I hope look higher, and on God reflect Due praiſe. A Bleſſing ſuch may well expect.

CHAP. XXII.

Whilſt thou by Art the ſilly Fiſh doſt kill,
Perchance the Devil's Hook ſticks in thy Gill.

OBSERVATION.

THere is skill in Fiſhing; they that go to Sea in a Fiſhing-Voyage, uſe to go provided with their Craft (as they very fitly call it) without which they can do nothing. They have their Lines, Hooks of ſeveral ſizes, and their Bait. They carefully obſerve their Seaſons; when the Fiſh falls in, then they ply their buſineſs day and night.

APPLICATION.

But how much more skilful and induſtrious is Satan to enſnare and deſtroy Souls? The Devil makes a Voyage as well as you; he hath his Baits for you, as you for the Fiſh: He hath his Devices and Wiles to catch Souls, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Epheſ. 6. 11. He is a Serpent, an old Serpent, Rev. 12. 9. Too crafty for Man in his perfection, much more in his collapſed and degenerated State, his Underſtanding being cracked by the Fall, and all his Faculties poiſoned and perverted.

Divines obſerve four ſteps or degrees of Satan's tempting-Power.

Firſt, He can find out the Conſtitution-Evils of Men; he knows to what Sin their Natures are more eſpecially prone and inclinable.

Secondly, He can propound ſuitable objects to thoſe Luſts, he can exactly and fully hit every Man's Humour. As Agrippina mixed her Poiſon in that Meat her Husband loved beſt.

Thirdly, He can inject and caſt Motions into the Mind, to cloſe with thoſe tempting objects; as it is ſaid of Judas, Joh. 13. 2. The Devil put it into his Heart.

Fourthly, He can ſollicite, irritate, and provoke the Heart, and by thoſe continual reſtleſs Sollicitations weary it; and hereby he often draws Men to commit ſuch things as ſtartled them in the firſt Motion.

All this can he do, if he find the Work ſtick, and meet with Rubs and Difficulties; yet doth he not act to the utmoſt of his Skill and Power, at all times and with all Perſons; neither indeed need he ſo to do, the very propounding of an Object, is enough to ſome, without any further Sollicitation: The Devil makes an eaſie Conqueſt of them.

And beſide all this, his Policy much appears in the election of Place, Time and Inſtruments to tempt by: And thus are poor Souls caught, as Fiſhes in an evil Net, Eccleſ. 9. 12. The carnal Man is led by Senſe, as the Beaſt; and Satan handles and fits him accordingly. He uſeth all ſorts of Motives, not only internal and intellective, but external and ſenſitive alſo; as the ſparkling of the Wine, when it gives its colour in the Glaſs; the Harlot's Beauty, whoſe Ey-lids are Snares, hiding always the Hook, and concealing the Iſſue from them. He promiſes them Gain and Profit, Pleaſure and Delight, and all that is Tempting, with aſſurance of Secreſy. By theſe he faſtens the fatal Hook in their Jaws, and thus they are led Captive by him at his Will.

REFLECITON.

And is Satan ſo ſubtil and induſtrious to entice Souls to ſin? Doth he thus caſt out his golden Baits and allure Souls with Pleaſure to their Ruin? Then how doth it behove thee, O my Soul, to be jealous and wary! How ſtrict a Guard ſhould I ſet upon every Senſe! Ah, let me not ſo much regard how Sin comes towards me in the Temptation, as how it goes off at laſt. The day in which Sodom was deſtroyed, began with a pleaſant Sun-ſhine, but ended in Fire and Brimſtone. I may promiſe myſelf much content in the ſatisfaction of my Luſts; But O, how certainly will it end in my Ruin? Ahab doubtleſs promiſed himſelf much content in the Vineyard of Naboth, but his Blood paid for it in the Portion of Jezerel. The Harlot's Bed was perfumed to entice the ſimple Young Man, Prov. 7. 17. But thoſe Chambers of Delights proved the Chambers of Death, and her Houſe the way to Hell. Ah, with what a ſmiling Face doth Sin come on towards me in its Temptations! How doth it tickle the carnal Phantaſy, and pleaſe the deceived Heart? But what a dreadful Cataſtrophe and Upſhot hath it? The delight is quickly gone, but the Guilt thereof remains to amaze and terrify the Soul with ghaſtly Forms, and dreadful Repreſentations of the Wrath of the God: As Sin hath its Delights attending to enter and faſten it, ſo it hath its Horrors and Stings to torment and wound: And as certainly as I ſee thoſe go before it to make way, ſo certainly ſhall I find theſe follow after, and tread upon its heels. No ſooner is the Conſcience awakened, but all thoſe Delights vaniſh as a Night viſion, or as a Dream when one awakes; and then I ſhall cry, Here is the Hook, but where is the Bait? Here is the Guilt and Horror, but where the Delight that I was promiſed! And I, whither ſhall I now go? Ah my deceitful Luſts! You have enticed and left me in the midſt of all Miſeries.

The POEM.

THere's skill in Fiſhing, that the Devil knows;
For when for Souls Satan a Fiſhing goes,
He Angles cunningly: He knows he muſt
Exactly fit the Bait unto the Luſt.
He ſtudies Conſtitution, Place and Time,
He gueſſes what is his delight, what thine:
And ſo accordingly prepares the Bait;
Whilſt he himſelf lies cloſely hid to wait
When thou wilt nibble at it. Doſt incline
To drunken Meetings? then he baits with Wine:
Is this the way? If unto this he'll ſmell,
He'll ſhortly pledge a Cup of Wrath in Hell.
To Pride or Luſt is thy vile Nature bent?
An Object ſuitable he will preſent.
O think on this, when you caſt in the Hook,
Say, Thus for my poor Soul doth Satan look.
O play not with Temptations; do not ſwallow
The ſugar'd Bait, conſider what will follow.
If once he hitch thee, then away he draws
Thy captive Soul cloſe Priſoner in his Paws.

CHAP. XXIII.

Doth Trading fail, and Voyages prove bad?
If you cannot diſcern the Cauſe, 'tis ſad.

OBSERVATION.

THere are many ſad Complaints abroad (and I think not without cauſe) that Trade fails, othing turns to account. And though all Countries e open and free for Traffick, a general Peace ith all Nations, yet there ſeems to be a Dearth, a ret Curſe upon Trading. You run from Coun- y to Country, and come loſers home. Men can rdly render a Reaſon of it; few hit the right auſe of this Judgment.

APPLICATION.

That Proſperity and Succeſs in Trade is from the eſſing of God, I ſuppoſe few are ſo Atheiſtical, once to deny or queſtion. The Devil himſelf nowledges it, Job 1. 10. Thou haſt bleſſed the k of his Hands, and his ſubſtance is increaſed in Land. It is not in the Power of any Man to Riches. Deut. 8. 18. Thou ſhalt remember the d thy God, for it is he that giveth thee Power to Wealth. It is his Bleſſing that makes good Men , and his Permiſſion that makes Wicked Men . That Maxim came from Hell, Quiſque for- ſuæ faber: Every Man is the Contriver of his Condition: Certainly, The good of Man is not own hand, Job 21. 16. Promotion cometh not the Eaſt to the Weſt, Pſal. 76. 6, 7.

his being acknowledged, it is evident, that in ſappointments, and want of ſucceſs in our Cal- , we ought not to ſtick in ſecond Cauſes, but ok higher, even to the hand and diſpoſe of For, whoſe it is to give the Bleſſing, his alſo o with-hold it. And this is as clear in Scrip- as the other. It is the Lord that takes away iſhes of the Sea, Hoſ. 4. 3. Zeph. 1. 3. It is at curſeth our Bleſſings, Mal. 2. 2.

is God doth as a Puniſhment for Sin, and the of Mercies: And therefore in ſuch caſes, we not to reſt in general Complaints to, or of other, but ſearch what thoſe Sins are that e the Lord to inflict ſuch Judgments.

And here I muſt requeſt your patience, to bear a plain and cloſe word of Conviction. My Brethren, I am perſwaded theſe are the Sins, among many other, that provoke the Lord to blaſt all your Employments.

1. Our undertaking deſigns without Prayer. Alas, how few of us begin with God? Intereſt him in our dealings, and ask Counſel and Direction at his Mouth? Prayer is that which ſanctifies all Employments and Enjoyments, 1 Tim. 4. 5. The very Heathen could ſay, A Jove Principium, They muſt begin with God. O that we had more Prayers and fewer Oaths.

2. Injuſtice and Fraud in our dealings. A Sin to which Merchants are prone, as appears by that Expreſſion, Hoſ. 12. 7. This is that which will blaſt all our Enjoyments.

3. An over-earneſt Endeavour after the World. Men make this their Buſineſs, they will be Rich: And hence it is, they are not only unmerciful to themſelves, in wearing and waſting their own Spirits with carking Cares, but to ſuch alſo as they employ; neither regarding the Souls or Bodies of Men: Scarce affording them the liberty of the Lord's Day, (as hath been too common in our New-found-Land Employments) or if they have it, yet they are ſo worn out with inceſſant Labours, that that precious time is ſpent either in Sleep or Idleneſs. It is no wonder God gives you more reſt than you would have, ſince that day of Reſt hath been no better improved. This over-doing hath not been the leaſt cauſe of our undoing.

Laſtly, Our abuſe of Proſperity, when God gave it; making God's Mercies the Food and Fuel of our Luſts. When we had an affluence and confluence of outward Bleſſings, this made us kick againſt God, as Deut. 32. 15. Forget God, Deut. 4. 14. Yea, grow proud of our Strength and Riches, Ezek. 16. 15. and Jer. 2. 31. Ah! How few of us in the days of our Proſperity, behaved our ſelves as good Jehoſaphat did? 2 Chron. 17. 5, 6. He had Silver and Gold in abundance, and his Heart was lifted in the way of God's Commandments; not in Pride and Inſolence.

REFLECTION.

Are theſe the Sins that blaſt our Bleſſings, and wither our Mercies? O then let me ceaſe to wonder it is no better, and rather admire that it is no worſe with me; that my neglect of Prayer, Injuſtice in Dealings, Earthly-mindedneſs, and abuſe of former Mercies, have not provoked God to ſtrip me naked out of all my Enjoyments. Let me humbly accept from the Lord the Puniſhment of my Iniquities, and lay my hand upon my Mouth. And O that theſe diſappointments might convince me of the Creature's vanity, and cauſe me to drive on another Trade for Heaven; then ſhall I adore thy Wiſdom in rending from me thoſe idolized Enjoyments. Ah Lord! when I had them, my Heart was a perpetual Drudge to them. How did I then forget God, neglect my Duty, and not mind my eternal Concernments! Oh, if theſe had not periſhed, in all probability I had periſhed. My God, let my Soul proſper, and then a ſmall Portion of theſe things ſhall afford me more comfort than ever I had in their greateſt abundance. A little that a Righteous Man hath, is better than the Riches of many wicked, Pſal. 37. 16.

The POEM.

THere's great Complaint abroad that Trading's bad;
You shake your Head, and cry, 'tis sad, 'tis sad.
Merchants lay out their Stock, Seamen their Pains,
And in their Eye they both may put their Gains.
Your Fishing fails, you wonder why 'tis so,
'Tis this (saith one) or that; but I say No;
'Twill ne'er be well, till you confess and say,
It is our Sin that frights the Fish away.
No wonder all goes into Bags with Holes,
Since so the Gospel hath been in your Souls.
We kick'd like Jesurun, when the flowing Tide
Of Wealth came tumbling in, this nourish'd Pride.
'Twixt Soul and Body, now I wish it may Fare, as betwixt the Jews and us this day.
O that our outward Want and Loss may be
To us a Soul-enriching Poverty!
If Disappointments here, advance the Trade
For Heaven, then complain not; you have made
The richest Voyage, and your empty Ships
Return deep laden with Soul-benefits.

CHAP. XXIV.

In Seas the greater Fish the less devour:
So some Men crush all those within their power.

OBSERVATION.

THere are Fishes of Prey in the Sea, as well as Birds and Beasts of Prey on the Land. Our Seamen tell us, how the devouring Whales, Sharks, Dolphins, and other Fishes follow the Caplein, and other smaller Fish, and devour multitudes of them. It is frequent with us, in our own Seas, to find several smaller Fishes in the Bellies of the greater ones, yea, I have often heard Seamen say, That the poor little Fry, when pursued, are so sensible of the danger, that they have sometimes seen multitudes of them cast themselves upon the Shore, and perish there, to avoid the danger of being devoured by them.

APPLICATION.

Thus cruel, mercileſs and oppreſſive, are wicked Men, whoſe tender Mercies are Cruelty, Prov. 22. 10. We ſee the like Cruelty in our Extortioners, and over-reaching Sharks aſhore, who grinde the Faces of the Poor, and regard not the Cries of the Fatherleſs and Widows, but fill their Houſes with the Gain of Oppreſſion. Theſe are, by the Holy Ghoſt, compared to the Fiſhes of the Sea, Hab. 1. 13, 14. This is a crying Sin, yea, it ſends up a loud cry to Heaven for Vengeance, Exod. 22. 23. If thou afflict the Widow and the Fatherleſs, and they cry unto me, I will ſurely hear their cry. And Verſe 27. I will hear his Cry, for I am gracious. Nay, God, will not only hear their Cry, but avenge their Quarrel. That is a remarkable Text, 1 Theſ. 4. 6. That no Man go beyond and defraud his Brother in any matter, becauſe that the Lord is the [Avenger] of all ſuch. This word Avenger, is but once more uſed in the New Teſtament, Rom. 13. 4. ἔκδικος. And there it is applyed to the Civil Magiſtrate, who is to ſee Execution done upon Offenders. But now this is a Sin that ſometimes may be out of the reach of Man's Juſtice, and therefore God himſelf will be their Avenger. You may overpower the Poor in this World, and it may be they cannot contend with you at Man's Bar, therefore God will bring it before his Bar.

Believe it, Sirs, it is a Sin ſo provoking to God, that he will not let it eſcape without ſevere Puniſhment, ſooner or later. The Prophet Habbakuk, Chap. 1. Verſe 13. wondered how the holy God could forbear ſuch till the general day of reckoning, and that he did not take exemplary Vengeance on them in this Life. Thou art of purer Eyes than to behold evil, and canſt not look upon Iniquity: Wherefore then lookeſt thou upon them that deal treacherouſly, and holdeſt thy Tongue when the Wicked devours the Man that is more Righteous than he? And Prov. 23. 10, 11. Enter not into the Fields of the Fatherleſs, (i.e.) Of the Poor and Helpleſs. But why is it more dangerous violently to invade their Right, than another's? The Reaſon is added, For their Redeemer is Mighty, and he ſhall plead their Cauſe with thee. It may be they are not able to retain a Councel to plead their Cauſe here; therefore God will plead their Cauſe for them.

REFLECTION.

Turn in upon thy ſelf (O my Soul) and conſider, Haſt thou not been guilty of this crying Sin? Have I not (when a Servant) over-reached and defrauded others, and filled my Maſter's Houſe with Violence and Deceit? and ſo brought my ſelf under that dreadful Threatning, Zeph. 1. 9. Or ſince I came to trade and deal upon mine own account, have not the Ballances of Deceit been in my hand? I have (it may be) kept many in my ſervice and employment; have not I uſed their Labours without reward, and ſo am under that Woe Jer. 22. 13. Or not given them Wages proportionable to their Work? Iſaiah 58. 3. Or by Delay of Payment and unjuſt Deductions and Allowances defrauded them of a part of their due? Mal. 3. Or at leaſt delayed Payment, out of a covetous diſpoſition to gain by it; whilſt their Neceſſities in the mean time cryed aloud for it; and ſo ſinned againſt God's expreſs Commands, Deut. 24. 14. Levit. 19. 30. Or have I not perſecuted ſuch whom God hath ſmitten? Pſal. 69. 26. And rigorouſly exacted the uttermoſt of my due, though the hand of God hath gone out againſt them breaking their Eſtates? O my Soul, examine thy ſelf upon these Particulars; reſt not quiet, until this guilt be removed by the Application of the Blood of Sprinkling. Hath not the Lord ſaid, Jam. 2. 13. They ſhall have Judgment without Mercy, that ſhewed no Mercy? And is it not a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the living God, who hath ſaid, He will take vengeance for theſe things?

The POEM.

DEvouring Whales and ravenous Sharks do follow
The leſſer Fry, and at one Gulp do ſwallow
Some hundreds of them, as our Seamen ſay:
But we can tell far ſtranger things than they.
For we have Sharks aſhore in every Creek,
That to devour poor Men, do hunt and ſeek.
No Pity, Senſe or Bowels in them be,
Nay, have they not put off Humanity?
Extortioners and Cheaters, whom God hates,
Have dreadful open Mouths, and through thoſe Gates
Brave Perſons with their Heritages paſs
In Funeral-ſtate, Friends crying out Alas!
O give me Agur's Wiſh that I may never
Be ſuch my ſelf, or feel the Hands of either.

And as for thoſe that in their Paws are grip'd,
Pity and Reſcue, Lord, from that ſad plight.
When I behold the ſqueaking Lark, that's born
In Faulcon's Talons, crying, bleeding, torn;
I pity its ſad Caſe, and would relieve
The Priſoner, if I could, as well as grieve.
Fountain of Pity! hear the piteous Moans
Of all thy Captive and Oppreſſed Ones.

CHAP. XXV.

In Storms to ſpread much Sail endangers all:
So carnal Mirth, if God for Mourning call.

OBSERVATION.

IN Storms at Sea, the wiſe Navigator will not ſpread much Sail; that is the way to loſe Maſts and all. They uſe then to furl up the Sails, and lye a Hull, when not able to bear a Knot of Sail, or elſe to lye a Try, or Scud before the Wind and Seas. It is no time then to hoiſt up the Top and Top-gallant, and ſhew their Bravery.

APPLICATION.

When the Judgments of God are abroad in the Earth, it is no time then to make Mirth, Ezek. 21. 10, 11. Should we [then] make Mirth? It contemneth the Rod of my Son as every Tree. (i. e.) As if it were a common Rod, and ordinary Affliction; whereas the Rod of my Son is not ſuch as may be had of every Tree, but it is an Iron Rod to ſuch as deſpiſe it, Pſal. 2. 9. O it is a provoking Evil, and commonly God ſeverely puniſhes it. Of all Perſons ſuch ſpeed worſt in the common Calamity, Amos 6. 1. Woe to them that are at eaſe in Sion, that are not grieved for the Afflictions of Joſeph, as ver. 4. It may be (as one obſerves upon my Text) they did not laugh at him, or break Jeſts upon him; but they did not condole with him. And what ſhall be their Puniſhment! ſee verſe 7. Therefore now ſhall they go Captive with the firſt that go Captive: God will begin with them firſt. Solomon tells us, Eccleſ. 3. 4. There is a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance: Only (as Maſter Trap notes upon the Text) we muſt not invert the Order, but weep with Men, that we may laugh with Angels. To be merry and frolick in a day of Tribulation, is to diſturb the order of Seaſons. That is a terrible Text, Iſai. 22. 12. which ſhould make the Hearts of ſuch as are guilty in this kind to tremble: In that day did the Lord of Hoſts call to mourning, and to girding with ſackloth; and behold, joy and gladneſs, ſlaying Oxen, killing Sheep, drinking Wine, &c. Well, what is the Iſſue of this? Surely, this Iniquity ſhall not be purged from you, till ye dye. O dreadful Word! Surely (my Brethren) Sympathy is a Debt we owe to Chriſt Myſtical. Whatever our Conſtitution, Condition, or Perſonal Immunities be, yet when God calls for Mourning, we muſt hear and obey that Call. David was a King, an expert Muſician, a Man of ſanguine and cheerful Conſtitution; yet who more ſenſible of the Evil of thoſe times than he? Rivers of Water ran down his eyes at the Conſideration of them. Melancthon was ſo affected with the Miſeries of the Church in his days, that he ſeemed to take little or no notice of the death of his Child, whom he entirely loved. At ſuch a time we may ſay of laughter, Thou art mad, and of mirth, What doth it?

REFLECTION.

Bluſh then, O my Soul! for thy levity and inſenſibility under God's angry Diſpenſations. How many of the precious Sons and Daughters of Sion, lye in Tears abroad, while I have been Nouriſhing my Heart, as in a day of Slaughter? The voice of God hath cried to the City, and Men of Underſtanding have heard its Voice, Mic. 6. 9. But I have been deaf to that Cry. How loth (my God) have I been to urge my ſenſual Heart to acts of Sorrow and Mourning! Thou haſt bid we weep with them that weep, but my vain Heart cannot comply with ſuch commands. Ah Lord! If I mourn not with Sion, neither ſhall I rejoyce with her.

O, were mine Eyes opened, and my Heart ſenſible and tender, I might ſee cauſe enough to melt into Tears! and like that Chriſtian Niobe, Luk. 7. 38. to lye weeping at the feet of Chriſt. Lord, What ſtupidity is this? Shall I Laugh when thou art Angry, and thy Children weeping and trembling? Then I may juſtly fear, leſt when they ſhall ſing for joy of Heart, I ſhall howl for vexation of Spirit, Iſa. 65. 13, 14. Surely, O my Soul! ſuch laughter will be turned into mourning, either here or hereafter.

The POEM.

IN troublous Times, Mirth in the Sinner's Face
Is like a Mourning-Cloak with Silver-Lace.
The Lyon's roaring makes the Beaſts to quake;
God's roaring Judgments cannot make us ſhake.
What Belluine Contempt is this of God,
To laugh in's face, when he takes up the Rod?
Such laughter God in Tears will ſurely drown, (Unleſs he hate thee) e'er he lay it down.
Theſe Rods have Voices; if thou hear them well:
If not, another Rod's prepar'd in Hell:
And when the Arm of God ſhall lay it on,
Laugh if thou canſt; no, then thy Mirth is gone.
All Sion's Children will lament and cry,
When all her beauteous Stones in duſt do lye;
And he that for her then laments and mourns,
Shall want no Joy, when God to her returns.

CHAP. XXVI.

A little Leak neglected, dangerous proves:
One Sin connived at, the Soul undoes.

OBSERVATION.

THE ſmalleſt Leak, if not timely diſcovered and ſtopt, is enough to ſink a Ship of the greateſt Burden: Therefore Seamen are wont frequently to try what Water is in the Hold; and if they find it freſh, and increaſing upon them, they ply the Pump, and preſently ſet the Carpenters to ſearch for it and ſtop it; and till it be found they cannot be quiet.

APPLICATION.

What ſuch a Leak is to a Ship, that is the ſmalleſt Sin neglected to the Soul; it is enough to ruin it eternally. For as the greateſt Sin, diſcover'd, lamented, and mourned over by a Believer, cannot ruin him; ſo the leaſt Sin indulged, covered, and connived at, will certainly prove the deſtruction of the Sinner. No Sin, though never ſo ſmall, is tolerated by the pure and perfect Law of God, Psal. 119. 96. The Command is exceeding broad; not as if it gave Men a latitude to walk as they please, but broad, (i. e.) extending it self to all our Words, Thoughts, Actions, and Affections: Laying a Law upon them all; conniving at no Evil in any Man, 1 Pet. 2. 1.

And as the Word gives no Allowance for the least Sin, so it is the very nature of sincerity and uprightness, to set the Heart against [every] way of Wickedness, Psal. 139. 23, 24. Job 4 23. And especially against that Sin which was its darling in the days of his Vanity, Psal. 18. 23. True hatred (as the Philosopher observes, is of the whole * kind: He that hates sin, as sin, and so doth every upright Soul, hates all sins as well as some.

* Εἰς τὸ ὅλον.

Again, the Soul that hath had a saving sight of Jesus Christ, and a true Discovery of the evil of sin, in the Glass both of the Law and Gospel, can account no sin small. He knows the demerit of the smallest Sin is God's Eternal Wrath, and that not the least Sin can be remitted, without the shedding and application of the Blood of Christ, Heb. 9. 22. which Blood is of infinite value and price, 1 Pet. 1. 19.

To conclude, God's People know, that little as well as great sins are dangerous, deadly and destructive in their own nature: A little Poyson will destroy a Man. Adrian was choak'd with a Gnat; Cæsar stabbed with a Bodkin. A Man would think Adam's Sin had been no great matter, yet what dreadful Work did it make! It was not as a single Bullet to kill himself only; but as a Chain-shot, which cut off all his poor miserable Posterity. Indeed, no sin can be little, because its object against whom it is committed is so great, whence it receives a kind of infiniteness in it self, and because the price paid to redeem us from it is so invaluable.

REFLECTION.

And is the smallest Sin not only damning in its own nature, but will certainly prove the ruin of that Soul that hides and covers it; O then let my Spirit accomplish a diligent search. Look to it, O my Soul! that no sin be indulged by thee. Set these Considerations as so many flaming Swords in the way of thy carnal Delights and Lust: Let me never say of any sin, as Lot did of Zoar, It is a little one, spare it. Shall I spare that which cost the Blood of Jesus Christ? The Lord would not spare him, When he made his Soul an offering for Sin, Rom. 8. 32. Neither will he spare me, if I defend and hide it, Deut. 29. 20. Ah! If my Heart were right and my Conversation sound, that Lust whatever it be, that is so favoured by me, would especially be abhorred and hated, Isa. 2. 20. and 30. 22. Whatever my Convictions and Reformations have been, yet if there be but one Sin retained and delighted in, this keeps the Devil's Interest still in my Soul: And though for a time he seem to depart, yet at last he will return with seven worse Spirits, and this is the Sin will open the door to him, and deliver up my Soul, Matth. 12. 43, 44. Lord, let me make thorough work of it; let me cut it off, and pluck it out, though it be as a right Hand, or Eye. Ah, shall I come so near the Kingdom of God, and make such a fair offer for Christ, and yet stick at a small matter, and lose all for want of one thing? Lord, let me shed the Blood of the deareſt Lust, for his sake that shed his deareſt Blood for me.

The POEM.

THere's many a Soul eternally undone
For sparing Sin, because a little one.
But we are much deceiv'd; no Sin is small,
That wounds so great a God, so dear a Soul.
Yet say it were, the smallest Pen-knife may
As well as Sword or Lance dispatch and slay.
And shall so small a matter part and sever
Christ and thy Soul? What! make you part for ever?
Or wilt thou stand on Toys with him, when he Deny'd himself in greatest things for thee?
Or will it be an ease in Hell to think
How easily thy Soul therein did sink;
Are Christ and Hell for Trifles sold and bought?
Strike Souls with trembling, Lord, at such a Thought.
By little Sins, belov'd, the Soul is lost,
Unless such Sins do great Repentance cost.

CHAP. XXVII.

Ships make much way when they a Trade-wind get;
With such a Wind the Saints have ever met.

OBSERAVTION.

THough in most parts of the World the Winds are variable, and sometimes blow from every Point of the Compass, by reason whereof, sailing is slow and dangerous; yet about the Equinoctial, Seamen meet with a Trade-wind, blowing for the most part one way; and there they sail jocund before it, and scarce need to lower a Top-sail for some hundreds of Leagues.

APPLICATION.

Although the People of God meet with many seeming Rubs and Set-backs in their way to Heaven, which are like contrary Winds to a Ship; yet are they from the Day of their Conversion, to the Day of their compleat Salvation, never out of a Trade-winds way to Heaven, Rom. 8. 21: We know that all things work together for good, to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpose. This is a most precious Scripture, pregnant with its Consolation to Believers in all conditions, a Pillar of Comfort to all distressed Saints: Let us look a little nearer to it.

(We know) Mark the Certainty and Evidence of the Proposition, which is not built upon a Guess or remote Probability, but upon the Knowledge of the Saints; we know it, and that partly by divine Revelation, God has told us so; and partly by our own experience we find it so.

(That all things) Not only things that lye in a natural and direct tendency to our good; as Ordinances, Promises, Blessings, &c. but even such things as have no natural fitness and tendency to such an end; as Afflictions, Temptations, Corruptions, Desertions, &c. All these help onward. They (Work together.) Not all of them directly, and of their own nature and inclination; but by being over-ruled, and determined to such an Issue by the gracious hand of God: Nor yet do they work out such good to the Saints, singly and apart, but as adjuvant causes or helps, standing under and working in subordination to the supreme and principal cause of their happiness.

Now the most seeming opposite things, yea Sin in its self, which in its own nature is really oppos-to their good, yet eventually contributes to it. Afflictions and Desertions seem to work against us; but being once put into the rank and order of Causes, they work together with such blessed Instruments, as Word and Prayer, to an happy Issue. And though the faces of these things, that thus agree and work together, look contrary ways; yet there be, as it were, secret chains and connections of Providence betwixt them, to unite them in their issue. There may be many Instruments employed about one Work, and yet not communicate Counsels, or hold Intelligence with each other. Joseph's Brethren, the Midianites, Potiphar, &c. knew not one another's Mind, nor aimed at one end, (much less the end that God brought about by them) one acts out of Revenge, another for Gain, a third out of Policy; yet all meet together at last, in that issue God had design'd to bring about by them, even Joseph's Advancement. Even so it is here, Christian, there be more Instruments at work for thine eternal good, than thou art aware of.

REFLECTION.

Chear up then, O my Soul, and lean upon this Pillar of Comfort in all Distresses. Here is a Promise for me (if I be a called one) that, like the Philosopher's Stone, turns all into Gold it toucheth. This Promise is my security, however things go in the World. My God will do me no hurt, Jer. 25. 6. Nay, he will do me good by every dispensation. O that I had but an Heart to make all things work for his glory, that thus causeth every thing to work for my good. My God, dost thou turn every thing to my advantage? O let me return all to thy Praise; and if by every thing thou work my eternal good, then let me in every thing give thanks.

But ah! How foolish and ignorant have I been? even as a Beast before thee. How hath my Heart been disquieted, and apt to repine at thy dispensations, when they have crossed my Will! not considering that my God faithfully pursues my good, even in those things that cross, as well as in that which pleases me.

Blessed Lord! What a blessed condition are all thy People in, who are within the Line of this Promise? All things friendly and beneficial to them, friends helpful, Enemies helpful, every thing conspiring and conducing to their Happiness. With others it is not so; nothing works for their good; nay, every thing works against it: Their very Mercies are snares, and their Prosperity destroys them, Prov. 1. 32. Even the blessed Gospel it self is a savour of Death to them: When Evil befals them, it is an only Evil, Ezek. 7. 5. that is, not turned into good to them; and as their Evils are not turned into good, so all their Good is turned into Evil. As this Promise hath an Influence into all that concerns the People, so the Curse hath an Influence into all the Enjoyments of the Wicked. O my Soul, bless the Lord, who hath cast thy Lot into so pleasant Place, and given thee such a glorious Heritage, as this Promise is.

The POEM.

When once the Dog star rises, many say,
Corn ripens then apace, both night and day.
Souls once in Christ, that Morning-star lets fall
Such Influences on them then, that all
God's Dispensations to them, sweet or sowr, Ripens their Souls for Glory every hour.

All their Afflictions, rightly understood,
Are Blessings; every Wind will blow some good.
Sure at their troubles Saints would never grudge,
Were Sense deposed, and Faith made the Judge.
Falls make them warier, amend their pace;
When Gifts puff up their Hearts, and weaken Grace.
Could Satan see the Issue and the Event
Of his Temptations, he would scarcely tempt.
Could Saints but see what fruits their Troubles bring,
Amidst those Troubles they would shout and sing.
O sacred Wisdom! who can but admire
To see how thou dost save from fire, by fire!
No doubt but Saints in glory wondering stand
At those strange Methods few now understand.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Storms make discovery of the Pilot's skill.
God's Wisdom in Affliction triumphs still.

OBSERVATION.

IN fair Weather, when there is Sea-room enough, then every common Person can guide the Ship, the Pilot may then lye down and take his rest; but in great Storms and stress of Weather, or when near the dangerous Shore, then the most skilful Pilot is put to it: Then he shews the utmost of his Art and Skill, and yet sometimes all is too little. They are (as the Scripture speaks, at their Wits end, know not what to do more, but are forced to commit all to the Mercy of God and the Seas.

APPLICATION.

In the Storms and Tempests of Affliction and Trouble, there are the most evident and full Discoveries of the Wisdom and Power of our God: It is indeed continually active for his People in all conditions, Isai. 27. 3. Lest any hurt it, I will keep it Night and Day. Psal. 121. 4. He that keepeth Israel neither slumbereth nor sleepeth. His Peoples dangers are without intermission, therefore his Preservations are so too. But now, when they come into the Streight of Affliction, and deadly Dangers, which threaten like Rocks on every side; now the Wisdom of their God rides triumphantly and visibly upon the Waves of that stormy Sea. And this infinite Wisdom is then especially discovered in these particulars.

1. In leaving them still somewhat in the lieu and room of those Comforts that they are deprived of; so that they see God doth exchange their comforts, and that for the better; and this supports them. So John 14. 1, 2, 3. Christ's bodily Presence is removed, but the Spirit was sent in the room of it, which was better.

2. In doubling their Strength, as he doubles their burdens. It is observed, that the Saints have many times very strong and sweet Consolation, a little before their greatest Tryals: And this is so ordinary, that commonly, when they have had extraordinary Consolations from God, they have then looked for some eminent Tryal. The Lord appeared to Abraham, and sealed the Covenant to him, and then put him upon that great Tryal of his Faith. So the Disciples, Luk. 24. 49. It was commanded them that they should tarry in Jerusalem, till they were endowed with Power from on high. The Lord knew what an hard Providence they were like to have, and what great Oppositions and Difficulties they must encounter, in publishing the everlasting Gospel to the World; and therefore first prepares, and endows them with power from on high, viz. with eminent measures of the Gifts and Graces of the Spirit; as Faith, Patience, Self-denial, &c. So Paul had first his Revelation, then his Buffetings.

3. In coming in so opportunely in the time of their great distress, with relief and comfort, 1 Pet. 4. 14. Then the Spirit of Glory and of God resteth on them. As that Martyr cryed out to his Friend Austin, at the very stake, He is come, he is come.

4. In appointing and ordering the several kinds of Afflictions to several Saints; and allotting to every one, that very Affliction, and no other, which is most suitable to his condition: Which Afflictions, like so many Potions of Physick, are prepared for that very maligniant Humour that predominates most in them. Peter's Sin was Self-confidence, God permits him to fall by denying Christ; which doubtless was sanctifyed to his good, in that particular. Hezekiah's Sin was Vain-glory, therefore Spoilers are sent to take away his Treasures.

5. In the duration of their Troubles, they shall not lye always upon them, Psal. 125. 3. Our God is a God of Judgment, Isa. 30. 18. Knows the due time of removing it, and is therein punctual to a Day, Rev. 2. 10.

REFLECTION.

If the Wisdom of God do thus triumph and glorify it self in the Distresses of the Saints, then why should I fear in the day of evil? Psal. 49. 4. Why doth my heart faint at the foresight and apprehension of approaching Trouble? Fear none of those things that thou shalt suffer, O my Soul, if thy God will thus be with thee in the Fire and Water, thou canst not perish. Though I walk through the Valley of the shadow of Death, yet let me fear no evil, whilst my God is thus with me. Creatures cannot do what they please, his Wisdom limits and over-rules them all, to gracious and sweet ends. If my God cast me into the Furnace, to melt and try me, yet I shall not be consumed there; for he will sit by the Furnace himself all the while I am in it, and curiously pry into it, observing when it hath done its work, and then will presently withdraw the fire. O my Soul, bless and adore this God of Wisdom! who himself will see the ordering of all thine Afflictions, and not trust it in the hands of Men or Angels.

The POEM.

THough tost in greatest Storms, I'll never fear,
If Christ will sit at Helm to guide and steer.
Storms are the triumph of his Skill and Art;
He cannot close his Eyes, nor change his Heart.
Wisdom and Power ride upon the Waves,
And in the greatest danger helps and saves.
From dangers it by dangers doth deliver,
And wounds the Devil out of his own Quiver;
It countermines his Plots, and so doth spoil,
And make his Engines on himself recoil.
It blunts the Politician's restless Tool,
And makes Ahitophel the veriest Fool:
It shews us how our Reason us misled,
And if we had not, we had perished.
Lord, to thy Wisdom I will give the Reins,
And not with Cares perplex and vex my Brains.

CHAP. XXIX.

Things in the bottom are unseen: No Eye
Can trace God's Paths, which in the Deeps do lye.

OBSERVATION.

THE Ocean is so deep, that no Eye can discover what lyes in the bottom thereof. We use to say proverbially of a thing that is irrecoverably lost, It is as good it were cast into the Sea. What lyes there, lyes obscure from all Eyes, but the Eye of God.

APPLICATION.

Thus are the Judgments of God, and the Ways of his Providence, profound and unsearchable, Isa. 36. 16. The Righteous is like the great Mountains, and thy Judgments are a great Deep; (i. e.) his Providences are secret, obscure, and unfathomable; but even then, and in those Providences, his Righteousness stands up like the great Mountains, visible and apparent to every Eye. Though the Saints cannot see the one, yet they can clearly discern the other. Jer. 12. 1. Jeremiah was at a stand; so was Job in the like case, Job. 12. 7. So was Asaph, Psal. 7. and Habbakuk, Chap. 1. 3. These Wheels of Providence are dreadful for their height, Ezek. 1. 18. There be deep Mysteries of Providence, as well as of Faith. It may be said of some of them, as of Paul's Epistles, That they are hard to be understood. Darkness and Clouds are round about the Throne of God: No Man can say what will be the particular Issue and Event of some of his Dispensations. Luther seemed to hear God say to him, when he was importunate to know his mind in some particular Providence, Deus sum non sequax: I am a God not to be traced. Some Providences, like Hebrew Letters, must be read backward, Psal. 92. 7. Some Providences pose Men of the greatest Parts and Graces. His way is in the Sea, his paths in the great Waters, and his foot-steps are not known, Psal. 77. 19. Who can trace Foot-steps in the bottom of the Sea? The Angels, Ezek. 1. Have their hands under their wings. The hand is either, Symbolum roboris, The Symbol of Strength; or Instrumentum Operationis, The Instrument of Action: Where these hands are put forth, they work effectually, yea, but very secretly, they are hid under their wings. There be some of God's Works that are such Secrets, as that they may not be enquired into; they are to be believed and adored, but not pryed into, Rom. 11. 33. Others that may be enquired after, but yet are so profound, that few can understand them, Psal. 111. 2. The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all those that have pleasure therein. When we come to Heaven, then all those mysteries, as well in the Works, as in the Word of God, will lye open to our view.

REFLECTIONS.

O then, why is my heart disquieted, because I cannot sometimes discern the way of the Lord, and see the connection and dependance on his providential Dispensations? Why art thou so perplexed, O my Soul, at the Confusions and Disorders that are in the World! I know that Goodness and Wisdom sits at the Stern: And though the Vessel of the Church be tossed and distressed in Storms of Trouble

Trouble, yet it ſhall not periſh. Is it not enough for me, that God hath condeſcended ſo far for my ſatisfaction, as to ſhew me plainly the ultimate and general iſſue of all theſe myſterious Providences, Eccleſ. 1. 22. Rom. 8. 28. unleſs I be able to take the height of every particular, Shall I preſume to call the God of Heaven to account? Muſt he render a reaſon of his ways, and give an account of his Matters to ſuch a worm as I am? Be ſilent (O my Soul) before the Lord; ſubſcribe to his Wiſdom, and ſubmit to his Will, whatſoever he doth. However it be, yet God is good to Iſrael; the Event will manifeſt it to be all over a deſign of love. I know not how to reconcile them to each other, or many of them to the Promiſe; yet are they all harmonious betwixt themſelves, and the certain means of accompliſhing the Promiſes. O what a favour is this, that in the midſt of the greateſt confuſions in the World, God hath given ſuch abundant ſecurity to his People, that it ſhall be well with them? Amos 9. 8. Eccleſ. 8. 12.

The POEM.

LORD! how ſtupendious, deep, and wonderful,
Are all thy draughts of Providence; So full
Of puzling Intricacies, that they lye
Beyond the ken of any mortal Eye,
A Wheel within a Wheel's the Scripture Notion,
And all thoſe Wheels tranſverſe, and croſs in motion.
The Creatures ſerve it in their place; yet ſo,
That thouſands of them know not what they do.
Unto this or that, their aim they do direct;
But neither this, nor that, is the effect:
For ſomething elſe they do not underſtand,
Which ſets all Politicians at a ſtand.
Thy Counſels, as the birth, this hand doth break,
And deeper things performeth by the weak.
Men are, like Horſes, ſet at every Stage,
To Providence to ride from Age to Age;
Which like a Poſt ſpurs on, and makes them run
From Stage to Stage until their Journey's done;
Then take a freſh: But they the buſineſs know,
Much more than Horſes the Poſt-Letters do.
Though its work be not conceal'd from ſight,
Yet it a glorious piece, when brought to light.

CHAP. XXX.

Millions of Men are ſunk into the Main:
But it ſhall not thoſe Dead always retain.

OBSERVATION.

WHAT multitudes of Men hath the Sea devoured! Thouſands have made their Graves there. What numbers of Men have been ingulfed therein Sea-fights, or Storms, or Inundations, whereby whole Towns have been ſwallowed up; and only the Dead which are there are innume-

APPLICATION.

Though the Sea have received ſo many thouſand Bodies of Men into its devouring Throat, yet it not the abſolute Lord or Proprietor of them, but rather a Steward intruſted with them, that Lord require an account of them; and then it muſt deliver up all it hath received, even to a ſmall Revel. 20. 11, 12. And I ſaw the Dead, ſmall and great, ſtand before God: And the Books were opened; and another Book was open, which is the Book of Life; and the dead were judged out of thoſe things which were written in the Books, according to their works. And the Sea gave up the dead which were in it.

The Doctrine of the Reſurrection of the Body, is a Doctrine full of ſingular Conſolations to Believers, 1 Cor. 15. and moſt clearly aſſerted in Scripture, Acts 26. 8. Job 19. 25. 1 Cor. 15, &c. And it is well for us this point is ſo plainly revealed; becauſe, as it is a moſt comfortable Truth to the people of God, ſo there is ſcarce any Truth that lies under more prejudice as to Senſe or Reaſon, and is more difficult to receive, than this is. The Epicures and Stoicks laughed Paul to ſcorn when he preached it to them, Acts 17. 32. The Familiſts and Quakers at this day reject it as a Fable. The Socinians ſay the ſame Body ſhall not riſe, but an aerial Body. And indeed if Men ſet up Reaſon as the only Judge of ſupernatural things, it is incredible to think that a Body ſhould be reſtored that hath been burnt to aſhes, and thoſe aſhes ſcattered in the Wind, as Hiſtory tells us was frequently done by the Bodies of the Saints in Dioclefian's Reign! Or when drowned in the Sea, and there devoured by ſeveral Fiſhes, and thoſe again devoured by others. But yet this is not to be objected to the Almighty Power of God, that gave them their firſt Being. Difficulties and Impoſſibilities are for Men, but not for him. Why ſhould it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God ſhould raiſe the Dead? Acts 26. 8.

REFLECTION.

And muſt I riſe again, where-ever my body falls at Death? Then, Lord, how am I concerned to get Union with Chriſt while I live? By vertue thereof only, my Reſurrection can be made comfortable and bleſſed to me! Ah, let my body lye where it will, in Earth or Sea; let my Bones be ſcattered, and fleſh devoured by Worms or Fiſh, I know thou canſt and wilt re-unite my ſcattered Parts; and in this body I muſt ſtand before thine awful Tribunal, to receive according to what I have done therein, 2 Cor. 5. 10. Thou that commandeſt me to ſtand forth amongſt the nobleſt Rank of Creatures, when I had no Being, and ſaweſt my Subſtance, being yet imperfect, canſt as eaſily reduce me to that Being again.

What though Reaſon vote impoſſible, and Senſe incredible? Though all theſe Difficulties and Incumbrances grow upon my Faith, yet I know my body is not loſt for ever; the ſound of thy laſt and dreadful Trumpet ſhall awaken me; and thy mighty Power, to which all things are poſſible, ſhall bring me before thy Bar.

O Lord, I know that I ſhall ſtand in that great Aſſembly at the laſt Day, when multitudes, multitudes, even all the Sons and Daughters of Adam ſhall appear together. O! If I dye Chriſtleſs, it were good for me that there were no Reſurrection: For then thoſe Eyes that have been windows of Luſt, muſt behold Chriſt the Judge, not as a Redeemer, but as a Revenger. That Tongue that has vented ſo much of the filthineſs of my Heart, will then be ſtruck ſpeechleſs before him; and this Fleſh which I ſo pamper'd and provided for, condemned to everlaſting flames. O my God, let me make ſure work for ſuch a Day. If I now get real Union with thy Son, I ſhall awake with ſinging out of the Duſt: And then, as thou ſaidſt to Jacob, ſo to me, when I go down into the Sea or Grave,

Gen-

Gen. 46. 3. 4. Fear not to go down into the deep; for I will surely bring thee up again.

The POEM.

IT should not seem incredible to thee,
That God should raise the dead in Seas that be:
We see in Winter, Swallows, Worms, and Flies
Depriv'd of Life, yet in the Spring they rise.
What though your Bodies several Fish devour,
Object not that to the Almighty pow'r.
Some Chymists in their Art are so exact,
That from one Herb they usually extract
Four different Elements; what think ye then,
Can pose that God, who gave this Skill to Men?
The Gard'ner can distinguish thirty kinds
Of Seeds from one another, though he finds
Them mixt together in the self-same dish;
Much more can God distinguish Flesh from Fish.
They seem as lost, but they again must live;
The Sea's a Steward, and Stewards Account must give.
Look what you are, when in the Ocean drown'd.
The very same at Judgment you'll be found.
I would not care where my vile body lies,
Were I assur'd it should with comfort rise.

CHAP. XXXI.

The Seaman's greatest danger's near the Coast;
When we are nearest Heav'n, the danger's most.

OBSERVATION.

THough Seamen meet with violent Storms, yet if they have Sea room enough, they are not much dismaid; but if they find themselves near the Shore, they look upon their condition as very dangerous. The sight of the Shore is to them (as Solomon speaks of the Morning in another Case) like the shadow of death, if not able to weather it. For one Ship swallowed up in the Ocean, many perish upon the Coast.

APPLICATION.

The greatest Streights and Difficulties that many Saints meet with in all their lives, is when they come neerest to Heaven, and have almost finished their Course. Heaven indeed is a glorious Place, the Spacious and Royal Mansion of the great King; but difficilia quæ pulchra. It hath a streight and narrow entrance, Luk. 13. 24. O the difficulty of arriving there! How many hard tugs in Duty! What earnest contention of striving, even to an Agony, as that word imports! Luk. 13. 24. Multitudes put forth, and by profession are bound for this fair Haven; but of the multitudes that put out, how few do arrive there? A Man may set out by a glorious profession, with much resolution, and continue long therein; he may offer very fair for it, and not be far from the Kingdom of God, and yet not be able to enter at the last, Matth. 7. 22.

Yea, and many of those who are sincere in their profession, and do arrive at last, yet come to Heaven (as I may say) by the Gates of Hell; and put in, as a poor Weather-beaten Vessel comes into the Harbour, more like a Wreck than a Ship, nor Mast nor Sail left. The Righteous themselves are scarcely saved, (i. e.) they are saved with very much difficulty. They have not all an abundant entrance, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Pet. 1. 11. Some Persons (as one well notes) are afar off, Eph. 2. 23. (i. e.) touched with no care of Religion: Some come near, but never enter, as Semi-converts, see Matth. 12. 34. Others enter, but with great difficulty, they are saved as by fire, 1 Cor. 3. 13. Make an hard shift. But then there be some that go in with full Sail before a Wind, and have an abundant entrance: They go triumphing out of the world. Ah! when we come into the Narrow Channel, at the very point of entrance into life, the Soul is then in the most serious frame, all things look with a new face. Conscience scans our evidence most critically; then also Satan falls upon us, and makes his sorest assaults and batteries. It is the last encounter, if they escape him now, they are gone out of his reach for ever: And if he cannot hinder their Salvation, yet if he can but cloud their Evening, and make them go groaning and haling out of the World, he reaches another end by it, even to confirm and prejudice the wicked, and weaken the hands of others that are looking towards Religion. Manton on Jude p. 119.

REFLECTION.

If this be so, how inevitable is my perdition, may the careless Soul say; if they that strive so much and go so far, yet perish at last, and if the righteous themselves are scarcely saved, then where shall such an ungodly Creature as I appear? O Lord! if those that have made Religion their business, and have been many years pursuing a work of Mortification, have gone mourning after the Lord Jesus, and walked humbly with God; yet if some of these have found an hard tug at last, then what will become of such a vain, sensual, careless, Flesh-pleasing Wretch as I have been!

Again, Do Saints find it so strait an Entrance? Then, though I have well-grounded Hopes of my arrival at last; yet let me look to it, that I do not increase the difficulty. Ah! they are the things that are now done, or omitted, that put Conscience into such an agony then; for then it comes to review the life with the most serious Eye. O, let me not stick my Death-bed full of Thorns, against I come to lye down upon it. O that I may turn to the Wall, in that hour, as Hezekiah did, 2 Kings 20. 2, 3. and say, Remember now, O Lord, I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, &c.

The POEM.

AFter a tedious Passage, Saints descry
The glorious Shore, Salvation being nigh:
Death's Long-boat's launch'd, ready to set ashore
Their panting Souls. O, how they tug at Oar, Longing to be at rest! but then they find,
The hardest Tug of all is yet behind.
Just at the Harbour's mouth, they see the Wrack
Of Souls there cast away, and driven back.
A world of dangerous Rocks before it lye;
The Harbours barr'd, and now the Winds blow high.
Thoughts now arise, fears multiply apace;
All things about them have another face.
Life blazes just like an expiring light;
The Soul's upon the Lip, prepar'd for flight.
Death, till the Resurrection, tears and rends
Out of each other's Arms two parting Friends,
The Soul and Body. Ah! but more than so,
The Devil falls upon them e'er they go,
With new temptations, back'd with all his pow'r,
And scruples kept on purpose for that hour.

This is the laſt encounter, now or never,
If he ſucceeds not now, they're gone for ever.
Thus in they put, with hardſhip at the laſt,
As Ships out of a Storm, nor Sail, nor Maſt:
Yet ſome go in before a Wind, and have Their Streamer of Aſſurance flying brave.
Lord, give me eaſier entrance, if thou pleaſe;
Or if I may not there arrive with eaſe,
Yet I beſeech thee ſet me ſafe aſhore,
Though ſtormy Winds at Harbour's mouth ſhould roar.

CHAP. XXXII.

How glad are Seamen, when they make the Shore?
And Saints no leſs, when all their Danger's o'er.

OBSERVATION.

WHat Joy is there among Seamen, when at laſt, after a tedious and dangerous Voyage, they deſcry Land, and ſee the deſired Haven before them? Then they turn out of their loath'd Cabbins, and come upon open Deck with much joy, Pſal. 107. 30. Then they are glad, becauſe they be quiet: So he bringeth them to their deſired Haven. Now they can reflect with comfort upon the many dangers they have paſt, Olim hæc meminiſſe juvabit; It is ſweet to recount them.

APPLICATION.

But O, what tranſcendent Joy, yea, raviſhing, will over-run the Hearts of Saints, when after ſo many Conflicts, Temptations, and Afflictions, they arrive in glory, and are harbour'd in Heaven, where they ſhall reſt for ever! 2 Theſ. 1. 7. The Scripture ſaith, They ſhall ſing the ſong of Moſes, and of the Lamb, Rev. 15. 3. The Song of Moſes was a triumphant Song, compoſed for the Celebration of that glorious Deliverance at the Red Sea. The Saints are now fluctuating upon a troubleſome and tempeſtuous Sea; their Hearts ſometime ready to ſink and dye within them, at the apprehenſion of ſo many and great Dangers and Difficulties. Many an hard Storm they ride out, and many Streights and Troubles they here encounter with: But at laſt they arrive in their deſired and long-expected Haven, and then Heaven rings and reſounds with their joyful Acclamations. And how can it be otherwiſe, when as ſoon as ever they ſet foot upon that glorious Shore, Chriſt himſelf meets and receives them with a Come ye bleſſed of my Father? Matth. 25. 34. O joyful Voice! O much deſired Word! (ſaith Paræus) What Tribulation would not a Man undergo for his Words ſake!

Beſides, then they are perfectly freed from all evils, whether of Sin or Suffering, and perfectly filled with all deſired good. Now they ſhall joyn with that great Aſſembly, in the high praiſes of God. O what a Day will this be! if (ſaith a worthy Divine) Diagoras dyed away with an excеſs of Joy, whilſt he embraced his three Sons that were crowned as Victors in the Olympic Games in one Day: And good old Simeon, when he ſaw Chriſt put in a body ſubject to the Infirmities of our Natures, cryed out, Now let thy Servant depart in Peace; what unſpeakable joy will it be to the Saints, to behold Chriſt in his glory, and ſee their godly Relations alſo (to whoſe converſion, perhaps, they have been inſtrumental) all crown'd in one Day with everlaſting Diadems of Bliſs! And if the Stars did (as Ignatius ſaith) make a Quire, as it were, about that Star that appear'd at Chriſt's Incarnation, and there be ſuch joy in Heaven at the converſion of a Sinner; no wonder then, the Morning Stars ſing together, and the Sons of God ſhout for Joy, when the general Aſſembly meet in Heaven: O how will the Arches of Heaven ring and eccho, when the high praiſes of God ſhall be in the mouth of ſuch a Congregation! then ſhall the Saints be joyful in glory, and ſing aloud upon their Beds of everlaſting Reſt.

Morning Exerciſe, p. 651.

REFLECTION.

And is there ſuch a Day approaching for the Sons of God indeed! and have I [authority] to call my ſelf one of the number! John 1. 12. O then let me not droop at preſent difficulties, nor hang down my hands when I meet with hardſhips in the way. O my Soul, what a joyful Day will this be! for at preſent we are toſt upon an Ocean of Troubles, Fears, Temptations; but theſe will make Heaven the ſweeter.

Chear up then, O my Soul, thy Salvation is now nearer than when thou firſt believedſt, Rom. 13. 11. And it will not now be long e'er I receive the end of my Faith, 1 Pet. 1. 9. And then it will be ſweet to reflect even upon theſe hardſhips in the way. Yet a few Days more, and then comes that bleſſed Day thou haſt ſo long waited and panted for. Oppoſe the glory of that Day (O my Soul) to thy preſent abaſures and ſufferings, as bleſſed Paul did, Rom. 1. 18. And thou ſhalt ſee how it will ſhrink them all up to nothing. Oppoſe the Inheritance thou ſhalt receive in that Day, to thy loſſes for Chriſt now; and ſee how joyfully it will make thee bear them, Heb. 10. 34. Oppoſe the honour that will be put upon in that Day, to thy preſent Reproaches; and ſee how eaſy it will make them to thee, 1 Cor. 4. 5. What condition can I be in, wherein the believing Thoughts of this bleſſed Day cannot relieve me?

Am I poor, Here is that which anſwers Poverty, Jam. 3. 5. Hearken, my beloved Brethren, hath not God choſen the poor of this World, rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom?

Am I tempted? Here is relief againſt that, Rev. 12. 16. Now is come Salvation and ſtrength; for the Accuſer of our Brethren is caſt down, &c.

Am I deſerted? Here is a remedy for that too, Revel. 22. 5. And there ſhall be no Night there, &c. Come then, my Soul, let us enter upon our Inheritance by degrees, and begin the Life of Heaven upon Earth.

The POEM.

WHen Solomon in Iſrael firſt was King,
Heaven's Arches, Earth's Foundations ſeem'd to ring
With joyful Exclamations! How much more
Will Heaven reſound, when Saints are come aſhore!
How will the raviſh'd Souls tranſported be
At the firſt glimpſe of Chriſt! Whom they ſhall ſee
In all his glory; and ſhall live and move
Like Salamanders in the fire of love.
A flood of Tears convey'd them to the Gate;
Where endleſs Joys receiv'd them. Now the date
Of all their Sorrow's out; henceforth they walk
In Robes of Glory. Now there's no more talk
Of Fears, Temptations, of that ſnare, or this:
No Serpent in that Paradiſe doth hiſs.

No more desertions, troubled Thoughts or Tears;
Christ's full enjoyment supersedes those Fears.
Delights of Princes Courts are all but toys
To these delights, these are transcendent joys,
The joys of Christ himself; of what they are,
An Angel's Tongue would stammer to declare.
Were our Conceptions clear, did their Tongues go Unto their Ela, yet the Note's too low.
What! Paint the Sun too bright! it cannot be;
Sure Heaven suffers no Hyperbole.
My thoughts are swallowed up, my Muse doth tire
And hang her Wings, Conception soars no higher.
Give me a place among thy Children there,
Although I lye with them in Dungeons here.

A Concluding SPEECH.

I Have now done, and am looking to Heaven for a blessing upon these weak Labours; what use you will make of them, I know not; but this I know, that the Day is coming, when God will reckon with you for this, and all other helps and means afforded to you. And if it be not improved by you, be sure it will be produced as a witness against you. Sirs, I beg you in the Name of Christ, before whom both you and I must shortly appear that you receive not these things in vain. Did I know what other lawful means to use that might reach your Hearts, they should not be in vain to you; but I cannot do God's part of the work, nor yours. Only I request you all, both Masters, common Men, and all others, into whose hands this shall come, that you will lay to heart what you read; pray unto him that hath the Key of the House of David, that openeth and no Man shutteth, to open your Hearts to give Entertainment to these Truths. Alas! If you apply it not to your selves, I have laboured to no purpose, the Pen of the Scribe is in vain: But God may make such an Application of them, in one Storm or another, as may make your Hearts to tremble. O Sirs! when Death and Eternity look you in the Face, Conscience may reflect upon these things to your Horror and Amazement, and make you cry out, as Prov. 5. 12. 13. How have I hated knowledge, and my heart despised Reproof? And have not obeyed the Voice of my Teacher, nor inclined my Ears to them that instructed me? And O what a dreadful shriek will such Souls give, when the Lord opens their Eyes, to see that misery that they are here warned of! But if the Lord shall bless these things to your Conversion, then we may say to you, as Moses did to Zebulum, the Mariner's Tribe, Deut. 33. 12. Rejoyce Zebulum, in thy going out. The Lord will be with you which way soever you turn your selves; and being in the bosom of the Covenant, you are safe in the midst of all dangers. O! thou that art the Father of Spirits that formedst, and canst easily reform the Heart open thou the blind Eye, unstop the deaf Ear, let the Word take hold upon the Heart. If thou will but say the Word, these weak Labours shall prosper, to bring home many lost Souls unto thee. Amen.

A Pathetical and Serious

DISSUASIVE

From the Horrid and Deteſtable SINS
OF

Drunkenneſs, Swearing, Uncleanneſs, Forgetfulneſs of Mercies, Violation of Promiſes, and Atheiſtical Contempt of Death.

Applyed by way of CAUTION to Seamen, and now added as an APPENDIX to their NEW COMPASS.

Being an Eſſay toward their much-deſired Reformation: Fit to be ſeriouſly recommended to their Prophane Relations, whether Seamen or others, by all ſuch as unfeignedly deſire their Eternal Welfare.

To the Right Worſhipful Sir JOHN FREDERICK, Kt. One of the Worſhipful Aldermen of the City of London, and their Honourable BURGESS in the preſent Parliament: And to the truly Religious and ever Honoured, Mr. JOHN LOVERING, of the City of London, Merchant.

Much honour'd and eſteem'd,

ALthough Dedications are too often abuſed to a vain flattery, yet is there an excellent uſe and advantage to be made of them: Partly to encourage Perſons of Worth and Eminency to uſe the Intereſt of Religion themſelves; and partly oblige thoſe Readers, for whom ſuch Books are principally intended, to a diligent peruſal of them, by intereſting ſuch Perſons in them, for whom they have great Reſpects, or on whom they have any dependance. Upon the firſt account, a Dedication would be needleſs to you; for I am perſuaded, you do not only in your Judgment approve the Deſign I here manage, The Reformation of the prophane and looſer ſort of Seamen; but are alſo heartily willing to improve your Intereſt to the uttermoſt for the promotion of it. I cannot look upon you as Perſons acted by that low and common ſpirit that the moſt of your Profeſſion are acted by, who little regard, if they be good Servants to them, whether God have any Service from them, or no; and if they pay them the Wages due for their work, never mind of the Wages they are to receive for their Sin. You are judged to be Perſons of another Spirit, who do not only mind, but advance Chriſt's Intereſt above your own, and negotiate for his Glory, as well as for your own gain: And yet, herein you conſult your own Intereſt as well as God's: Subordinata non pugnant. Intereſt is never more proſperouſly managed, or abundantly ſecured, than when it is carried on in a ſubordination to God's. Their Reformation will evidently tend to your advantage. Thoſe Sins of theirs, againſt which I have here engaged, are the Rocks in your Ships; 'tis Sin that ſinks them, and dashes them againſt the Rocks. One Sinner deſtroys much good, Eccleſ. 8. 11. How much more a leud Crew of them conſpiring to provoke God! The Death of their Luſts, is the more probable means to give life to your Trade. And as theſe Counſels proſper in their Hands, ſo will your Buſineſs thrive in your Hands. Piety and Proſperity *are married together in that Pro-*miſe, Pſal. 1. 3. Oneſimus was never ſo profitable a Servant to Philemon, as when he became his Brother in a Spiritual, as well as his Servant in a Civil Capacity, Philem. verſ. 11. and 16. compared. And yet if your Intereſt were forced to ſtep back, to give way to Chriſt's, I hope you would (notwithſtanding) rejoyce therein. So that my preſent buſineſs is, not ſo much to perſuade you, whoſe Hearts, I hope, God hath already perſuaded, to ſo good a work; as to make your Fames and Reſpects, which are great among them, an innocent Bait to tempt them to their Duty. And if either your Name or Intereſt may be uſeful to ſuch an end, I preſume I may uſe them freely, and welcome; for, ſure I am, they can never be put to a better uſe.

Well then, I will make bold to ſend this ſmall Adventure in your Ships; and if the Return of it be but the Converſion of one Soul to God, I ſhall reckon that I have made a better Voyage than you, let your Returns be never ſo rich.

How theſe things will affect them, I know not. I do ſuppoſe it will produce different effects upon them, according to the different Tempers of the Spirits, and according as God ſhall commend, or ſuſpend the Bleſſing. Poſſibly ſome will ſtorm at the cloſe and cutting Rebukes of the Word, (for moſt Mens Luſts are a great deal more ſenſible and tender than their Conſciences) and will fondly imagine that this neceſſary plainneſs tends to their Reproach. But if none but the guilty can be ſuppoſed to be angry at them, they will thereby reproach themſelves a great deal more than ever I intend to do.

I confeſs it is a bitter Pill, and compounded of many operative, and ſtrong Ingredients, which do acute it; but not a jot more than is neceſſary. I ſhall beg the aſſiſtance of your Prayers to God for them, and of your grave Admonitions and Exhortations to them for God; which will much help its Operation, and facilitate my Deſign, to do their Souls a piece of everlaſting Service; with which Deſign I can truly ſay I even travail in pain for them. Your aſſiſtance therefore in this good Work, will put the higheſt Obligation upon

Your moſt effectionate Friend and Servant
to be commanded,

JOHN FLAVEL.

A

Sober Conſideration

Of the SIN of

DRUNKENNESS

IN the former Treatiſe I have endeavoured to Spiritualize earthly Objects, and elevate your thoughts to more ſublime and excellent Contemplations; that earthly things may rather be a Step, than a Stop to Heavenly. You have therein my beſt Advice to guide you in your Courſe to that Port of your Eternal Reſt and Happineſs.

In this, I have given warning of ſome dangerous Rocks and Quick-ſands that lye upon your Left Hand; upon which millions of Souls have periſhed, and others are wilfully running to their own Perdition. Such are the horrid Sins of Drunkenneſs, Uncleanneſs, profane Swearing, Violation of Promiſes, and Engagements made to God, and Atheiſtical ſlighting and contempt of Death and Eternity. All which I have here given warning of, and held forth a Light to diſcover where your danger is. If after this you obſtinately proſecute your Luſts, and will not be reclaimed; you periſh without Apology, I have freed mine own Soul.

Let none interpret this neceſſary plainneſs, as a reproach to Seamen, as if I repreſented them to the World worſe than they are. If upon that account any of them be offended, methinks theſe three or four Conſiderations ſhould remove that offence.

Firſt, That if this cloſe and plain Dealing be neceſſary in order to your Cure, and you will be offended thereat, it's better you ſhould be offended than God. Miniſters are often put upon lamentable Streights, they ſail betwixt Scylla and Charibdis; the Wrath of God upon one ſide, if we do not ſpeak plain and home, as the neceſſity of the Caſe requires; and Man's Wrath if we do: What ſhall we do in this ſtreight? Either God or you, it ſeems, muſt be offended; and if it cannot be avoided, I ſhall rather hazard your Anger than God's, and think it far more tolerable.

Secondly, If you did but ſee the neceſſity and end of this manner of dealing with your Souls, you would not be offended. But put it into a more ſenſible caſe, and you will ſee and acknowledge it preſently. If I ſhould ſee an high-built Wall giving way, and ready to fall upon you, would you be angry with me, if by plucking you out of the danger, I ſhould pluck your Arm out of joint; Certainly you would not. Why this is the caſe here: See Iſa. 30. 13. Therefore this Iniquity ſhall be unto you as a Breach ready to fall, ſwelling out in a high Wall, whoſe breaking cometh ſuddenly, at an inſtant.

Thirdly, What a Madneſs is it to abide in a condition over which all Woes and Curſes hang, and yet not be able to endure to hear of it! Why what will it profit you to have your Miſery hid from yo Eyes, and kept from your Ears a little while? Y muſt ſee this Wrath, and hear louder Vollies Woes from your own Conſciences, if you rema in this condition. You cannot bear that from which your Conſcience will one of theſe days prea themſelves to you, and that in a more dread dialect than I have uſed here.

Fourthly, I do not charge theſe Sins indifferen ly upon all Seamen. No, I know there are ſo choice and good Men amongſt your Men, that fe an Oath, and hate even the Garments ſpotted w the Fleſh, who are (I queſtion not) the Credit a Glory of our Engliſh Nation, in the Eyes of Str gers that converſe with them. Nor yet do I thi that all that are wicked amongſt them are equa guilty of all theſe Evils; for though all that graceleſs, be equally under the Dominion of ginal Corruption, yet it follows not from then that therefore actual Sins muſt reign alike in the There is great difference, even among ungo Men themſelves, in this reſpect; which differe ariſeth from their various Cuſtoms, Conſtitutio Abilities, Educations, and the different Admi ſtrations of the Spirit, in enlightning, convinci and putting checks upon Conſcience: For thou God be not the Author, yet he is the Orderer Sin. And this makes a great deſparity, even mong wicked Men themſelves. Some are Perſ of good Morals, though not gracious Princip which produce a civil and ſober, though no holy and religious Life. And others, though t live in ſome one of theſe Luſts, yet are not gu of ſome others of them. For it is with Orig Corruption, juſt as it is with the ſap of the Ea which though it be the matter of all kind of Fru yet in ſome Ground it ſorts better with one G than with another: And ſo in Plants, in one T it becomes an Apple, in another a Cherry; e ſo it is with this Original Corruption: In one M it runs moſt into Swearing, in another into cleanneſs, in a third into Drunkenneſs. Luſ nothing elſe but the corrupt Appetite of the C ture to ſome ſinful Object; and therefore look a is with the Appetite with reſpect to Food, ſo with the vitiated Appetites of Souls to ſin. Man loves this Food beſt, and another that; th is endleſs variety in that, and ſo in this.

Having ſpoken thus much to remove Offenc ſhall now beg you to peruſe the following Diſcou Conſider what Evidence theſe things carry w them. Search the alledged Scriptures, ſee if t be truly recited and applyed to the caſe in hand: And if ſo, Oh tremble at the Truth you read; bring forth your Luſts that they may dye the death: Will you not part with theſe abominable Practices till Death and Hell make the ſeparation: Ah how much better is it for you, that Grace ſhould do it! And becauſe many of you ſee not the danger, and therefore priſe not the Remedy, I do here requeſt all thoſe that have the Bowels of Pity in them for their poor Relations, who are ſinking, drowning, periſhing, to ſpread theſe following Cautions before the Lord for a Bleſſing, and then put them into their hands. And Oh that all pious Maſters would perſuade all that are under their Charge to buy this enſuing Treatiſe, and diligently peruſe it. And the firſt Caution I ſhall give them is this.

I. CAUTION.

TAke heed and beware of the deteſtable Sin of Drunkenneſs, which is a beaſtly Sin, a voluntary madneſs, a Sin that unmans thee, and makes thee like the Beaſts that periſh; yea, ſets thee below the brute Beaſts, which will not drink to exceſs; or if they do, yet its not their ſin, One of the Ancients calls it, "A "diſtemper of the Head, a ſub- "verſion of the Senſes, a tempeſt "in the Tongue, a ſtorm of the "Body, the ſhipwrack of Ver- "tue, the loſs of Time, a wilful "Madneſs, a pleaſant Devil, a "ſugar'd Poyſon, a ſweet Sin, "which he that has, has not "himſelf, and he that commits "it, doth not only commit Sin, "but himſelf is altogether Sin. It is a Sin at which the moſt ſober Heathens bluſhed. The Spartans brought their Children to loath it, by ſhewing them a Drunkard, whom they gazed at as a Monſter; even Epicurus himſelf, who eſteemed Happineſs to conſiſt in Pleaſure, yet was temperate, as Cicero obſerves: Among the Heathens, he was accounted the beſt Man, that ſpent more Oyl in the Lamp, than Wine in the Bottle. Chriſtianity could once glory in its Profeſſors: Tertullian ſaith of the Primitive Chriſtians, They ſat not down before they Prayed, they eat no more than might ſuffice Hunger, they drank no more than was ſufficient for temperate Men; they did ſo Eat and Drink, as thoſe that remembred they muſt Pray afterward. But now we may bluſh to behold ſuch beaſtly ſenſualiſts adorning themſelves with its name, and ſheltring themſelves under its Wings.

Turbatum capitis, ſubverſio ſenſus tempeſtas linguæ, procella corporis, naufragium animus amiſſio temporis, inſania voluntas, blande dæmon, dulce venenum, ſuave execratum, quam qui habet ſeipſum non habet, quam qui fecit, peccatum non fecit, ſed ipſe totus eſt peccatum. Aug. ad Sacr. Viginis.

And amongſt thoſe that profeſs Chriſtianity, how ordinarily is this Sin committed by Seamen? This inſatiable Dropſy is a Diſeaſe that reigns, eſpecially among the inferior and ruder ſort of them. Some of them have gone aboard Drunk, and laid the Foundation of their Voyage in ſin. O what a Preparation is this! They know not whether ever they ſhall ſee the Land of their Nativity any more; the next Storm may ſend them into Eternity; yet this is the Farewel they take; this is their Preparation to meet the Lord. And ſo in their Returns, notwithſtanding the terrible and aſtoniſhing Works of the Lord, which they have beheld with their Eyes, and their marvellous Preſervation in ſo great and terrible Extremities; yet thus do they requite the Lord, as ſoon as their Dangers are over, as if they had been deliver'd to commit all theſe Abominations. But a few hours or days ſince, they were reeling to and fro upon a ſtormy Ocean, and ſtaggering like drunken Men, as it is Pſal. 107. 27. and now you may ſee them reeling and ſtaggering in the Streets, drowning the ſenſe of all thoſe precious Mercies and Deliverances in their drunken Cups.

Reader, If thou be one that is guilty of this ſin, for the Lord's ſake, bethink thy ſelf ſpeedily, and weigh, with the reaſon of a Man, what I ſhall now ſay, in order to thy Conviction, Humiliation and Reformation. I need not ſpend many Words, to open the nature of this Sin to you; we all grant, that there is a lawful uſe of Wine and ſtrong Drink, to ſupport Nature, not to clog it; to cure Infirmities, not to cauſe them. Drink no longer Water, but uſe a little Wine, for thy Stomach ſake, and thine often Infirmities, ſaith Paul to Timothy, 1 Tim. 5. 23. mark, drink not Water, but Wine, ſed modice (i. e) medice; pro remedio, non pro delicis, ſaith Ambroſe; that is, uſe it modeſtly, viz. Medicinally, not for pleaſure, but for Remedy. Yea, God allows it, not only for bare neceſſity, but for chearfulneſs and alacrity, that the Body may be more fit and expedite for duty, Prov. 31. 7. But further no Man proceeds, without the violation of Sobriety. When Men ſit till Wine have inflamed them, and Reaſon be diſturbed (for Drunkenneſs is the privation of Reaſon, cauſed by immoderate Drinking) then do they come under the Guilt of this horrid and abominable Sin. To the ſatisfaction and refreſhment of Nature, you may drink; for it is a part of the Curſe, to drink and not be ſatisfyed; but take heed you go no further, For Wine is a [mocker] ſtrong Drink is raging, and whoſoever is deceived thereby is not wiſe, Prov. 20. 1. The Throat is a ſlippery Place; how eaſily may a Sin ſlip through into the Soul? Theſe ſenſual Pleaſures have a kind of inchanting Power upon the Soul; and by cuſtom gain upon it, till they have enſlaved it, and brought it under their power. Now this is the Sin againſt which God hath delivered ſo many Precepts, and denounced ſo many Woes, in his Word: Epheſ. 5. 18. Be not drunken with Wine wherein is exceſs, Rom. 13. 18. Not in rioting and drunkenneſs, not in chambering and wantonneſs. Iſa, 5. 11. Woe to them that riſe early in the Morning, that they may follow ſtrong drink, that continue until Night, till Wine inflame them: With many other of dreadful Importance. Now to ſtartle thee for ever from this abominable and filthy Luſt, I ſhall here propound to thy Conſideration theſe ten enſuing Arguments; and Oh that they might ſtand in the way, as the Angel did in Balaam's, when thou art in the proſecution of thy ſenſual Pleaſures! And the firſt is this.

Qui dedit aquam, dedit vinum.

Arg. 1. It ſhould exceedingly diſſuade from this Sin, to conſider that it is an high abuſe of the Bounty and Goodneſs of God, in affording us thoſe ſweet Refreſhments, to make our Lives comfortable to us upon Earth. In Adam we forfeited all right, to all earthly as well as heavenly Mercies. God might have taken thee from the Womb, when thou waſt a Sinner but of a ſpan long, and immediately have ſent thee to thine own place; thou hadſt no right to a drop of Water, more than what the bounty of God gave thee. And whereas he might have thruſt thee out of the World as ſoon as thou cameſt into it, and ſo all thoſe days of Mercy thou haſt on Earth, might have been ſpent in howling and unſpeakable miſery in Hell: Behold the Bounty and Goodneſs of God in thee, I ſay, behold it, and wonder:

wonder: He hath ſuffered thee for ſo many years to live upon the Earth, which he hath prepared and furniſhed with all things fit for thy neceſſity and delight; out of the Earth on which thou treadeſt, he bringeth forth thy Food, and [Wine] to make glad thy Heart, Pſal. 104. 14, 15. And doſt thou thus requite the Lord? Hath Mercy armed an Enemy to fight againſt it with its own Weapons? Ah that ever the Riches of his Goodneſs, Bounty and Long-ſufferings, (all which are Arguments to lead thee to repentance) ſhould be thus abuſed! If God had not been ſo bountiful, thou couldſt not have been ſo ſinful.

Arg. 2. It degrades a Man from the Honour of his Creation, and equaliſeth him to the Beaſt that periſheth. Wine is ſaid to take away the Heart. Hoſ. 4. 11. (i. e.) the Wiſdom and Ingenuity of a Man, and ſo brutifyes him; as Nebuchadnezzar, who loſt the Heart of Man, and the Heart of a Beaſt given him, Dan. 4. 32. The Heart of a Man hath its Generoſity and Sprightlineſs, brave, vigorous Spirit in it, capable of, and fitted for noble and worthy Actions and Employments; but his Luſt effeminates, quenches and drowns that maſculine Vigour in the puddle of Exceſs and Senſuality. For no ſooner is a Man brought under the dominion of this Luſt, but the government of Reaſon is renounced, which ſhould exerciſe a coercive power over the Affections, and all is delivered up; and ſo they act, not into the hand of Luſt and Appetite, by Diſcretion and Reaſon, but by Luſt and Will, as the Beaſts do by Inſtinct. The Spirit of Man entertains it ſelf with intellectual and chaſte Delights, the Soul of a Beaſt is only fitted for ſuch low, ſenſitive and dreggy Pleaſures. Thou haſt ſomething of the Angel, and ſomething of the Beaſt in thee; thy Soul partakes of the nature of Angels, thy Body of the nature of Beaſts: Oh how many pamper the Beaſt, while they ſtarve the Angel! God in the firſt Chapter, put all the Creatures in ſubjection to thee; by this Luſt thou putteſt thy ſelf in ſubjection to the Creature, and art brought under his power, 1 Cor. 6. 12. If God had given thee the Feet or Head of a Beaſt, O what a Miſery wouldſt thou have eſteemed it! And is it nothing to have the Heart of a Beaſt? Oh conſider it ſadly.

Arg. 3. It is a Sin by which thou greatly wrongeſt and abuſeſt thine own Body. The Body is the Soul's Inſtrument, it is as the Tools are to a skilful Artificer, this Luſt both dulls and ſpoils it, ſo that it's utterly unfit for any ſervice of him that made it. Thy Body is a curious Piece, not made by a word of Command, as other Creatures but by a word of Counſel, I am fearfully and wonderfully made, and curiouſly wrought, (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) Pſal. 139. 14. or as the Vulgar, Acc pictus ſum, Painted as with a Needle-work of divers Colours richly Embroidered. Look how many Members, ſo many Wonders. There are Miracles enough (ſaith one) betwixt Head and Foot, to fill a Volume. There is (ſaith another) ſuch curious Workmanſhip in the Eye, that upon the firſt ſight of it ſome Atheiſts have been forced to acknowledge a God; eſpecially that fifth Muſcle in the Eye is wonderful, whereby (as a learned * Author obſerves) Man differeth from all other Creatures, who have but four; one to turn the Eye downward, a ſecond to hold it forward, a third to move it to the Right Hand, a fourth to the Left; but none to turn it upward as a Man hath. Now judge in thy ſelf, did God frame ſuch a curious Piece, and enliven it with a Soul, which is a Spark, a Ray of his own Light, whoſe Motions are ſo quick, various and indefatigable, whoſe flights of Reaſon are ſo tranſcendent; did God, thinkeſt thou, ſend down this curious piece, the top and glory of the Creation, the Index and Epitome of the whole World, Eccl. 12. 2. did God (I ſay) ſend down this Picture of his own Perfection, to be but as a ſtrainer for Meats and Drinks, a ſponge to ſuck in Wine and Beer? Or canſt thou anſwer for the Abuſe and Deſtruction of it? By this Exceſs thou filleſt it with innumerable Diſeaſes under which it languiſheth; and at laſt thy Life, like a Lamp, extinguiſhed, bedrowned with too much Oyl. Infinite Diſeaſes are begotten by it (ſaith Zanch) hence come Apoplexies, Gouts, Palſies, ſudden Death, trembling of the Hands and Legs; herein they bring Cain's Curſe upon themſelves, ſaith Ambroſe. Drunkenneſs ſlays more than the Sword. Oh! what a terrible thing will it be to conſider upon a Death-bed, that theſe Pangs and Aches are the fruits of thy Intemperance and Exceſs! Who hath Woe? Who hath Sorrows? Who hath Contention? Who hath Babling? Who hath Wounds without cauſe? Who hath redneſs of Eyes? They that tarry long at Wine, they that go to ſeek mixt Wine. Prov. 23. 29, 30. By this Enumeration, and manner of Interrogation, he ſeems to make it a difficult thing to recount the Miſeries that Drunkenneſs loads the outward Man with; for look as Vermin abound where there is ſtore of Corn, ſo do Diſeaſes in the Bodies of Drunkards, where Crudities do ſo abound: Now methinks if thou haſt no regard to thy poor Soul, or the glory of God; yet ſuch a ſenſible Argument as this, from thy Body, ſhould move thee.

Infinitæ morborum genera indenaſcuntur Apoplexiæ, paralyſes, Arthrides, &c. Ille optimus medicus fuit, qui modicus cibi. Aug.

Arg. 4. Drunkenneſs waſtes and ſcatters thine Eſtate, Poverty attends Exceſs; the Drunkard ſhall be cloathed with Rags, and brought to a Morſel of Bread. Solomon hath read thy fortune, Prov. 21. 17. He that loveth Wine and Oyl ſhall not be Rich. Luxury and Beggary are ſeldom far aſunder. When Diogenes heard a Drunkard's Houſe cryed to be ſold; I thought, quoth he, it would not be long e'er he vomited up his Houſe alſo. The Hebrew Word זירוש, and the Greek Word ἀσωτία, which ſignifie Luxury; the former is compounded of two Words which ſignify, Thou ſhalt be Poor; and the latter ſignifyes the loſing of the Poſſeſſion of that good which is in our hand. The Drunkard and the Glutton ſhall ſurely come to Poverty, Prov. 23. 21. In the Hebrew it is, he ſhall be diſinherited, or diſpoſſeſſed. It doth not only diſpoſſeſs a Man of his Reaſon, which is a rich and fair Inheritance given to him by God, but it alſo diſpoſſeſſes him of his Eſtate: It waſtes all that either the provident Care of thy Progenitors, or the Bleſſing of God upon thine own Induſtry, hath obtained for thee. And how will this ſting like an Adder, when thou ſhalt conſider it? Apicius the Roman, hearing that there were ſeven hundred Crowns, only remaining of a fair Eſtate that his Father had left him, fell into a deep Melancholly, and fearing want, hanged himſelf, ſaith Seneca. And not to mention the Miſeries and Sorrows they bring hereby upon their Families, drinking the Tears, yea, Blood of their Wives and Children: Oh what an Account will they give to God, when their Reckoning-Day comes! Believe it, Sirs, there is not a Shilling of your Eſtates, but God will reckon with you for the expence thereof. If you have ſpent it upon your Luſts, whilſt the neceſſity of your Families, or the Poor, called upon you for it; I should be loth to have your Account to make, for a thousand times more than ever you possessed. O woeful Expence, that is followed with such dreadful Reckonings!

Poo

Arg. 5. Consider what vile and ignominious Characters the Spirit of God hath put upon the Subjects of this Sin. The Scripture every where notes them for infamous, and most abominable Persons. When Eli supposed Hannah to be drunken, Count not thine Handmaid a Daughter of Belial, said she, 1 Sam. 1. 16. Now a Son or Daughter of Belial is, in Scripture-Language, the vilest of Men or Women. So Psal. 69. 12. They that sit in the Gate, speak against me, and I am the Song of Drunkards, (i.e.) of the basest and vilest of Men, as the opposition plainly shews; for they are opposed to them that sit in the Gate, that is, honourable Persons. The Lord would have his People shun the Society of such as a Pest. Not to eat with them, 1 Cor. 5. 11. Yea, the Scripture brands them with Atheism; they are such as have lost the Sense and Expectation of the Day of Judgment; mind not the other World, nor do they look for the coming of the Lord, Matth. 24. 27, 28. He saith the Lord delayeth his coming, and then falls a drinking with the Drunken. The Thoughts of that Day will make them leave their Cups, or their Cups will drown the Thoughts of such a Day. And will not the Contempt, Shame and Infamy, which the Spirit of God hath poured on the head of this Sin, cause thee to abhor it? Do not all Godly, yea Moral Persons, abhor the Drunkard? Oh methinks the Shame that attends it, should be as a Fence to keep thee from it.

Arg. 6. Sadly consider, there can be nothing of the Sanctifying Spirit in a Soul that is under the Dominion of this Lust; for upon the first discovery of the Grace of God, the Soul renounces the Government of Sensuality. The Grace of God that bringeth Salvation, teacheth Men to live Soberly, Tit. 2, 12. That is one of its first Effects. Drunkenness indeed may be found among Heathens, that are yet in the Darkness of Ignorance; but it may not be once named among the Children of the Day. They that be Drunken, are Drunken in the Night; but let us that are of the Day be Sober, 1 Thes. 5, 7, 8. And the Apostles often oppose Wine and the Spirit as things incompatible, Eph. 5. 16. Be not filled with Wine wherein is Excess, but be filled with the Spirit. So Jude 19. Sensual, not having the Spirit. Now what a dreadful Consideration is this: If any Man have not the Spirit of Christ the same is none of his, Rom. 8. 9. Sensual Persons have not the Spirit of Christ, and so can be none of his. It's true Noah, a Godly Man, once fell into this Sin, as Theodoret saith, and that truly, it proceeded ex inexperientia non intemperantia, from want of Experience of the force and power of the Grape, not from Intemperance; and besides, we find not that ever he was again overtaken with that Sin; but thou knowest it, and yet persistest. O wretched Creature! the Spirit of Christ cannot dwell in thee. The Lord help thee to lay it to Heart

Arg. 7. It's a Sin over which many direful Woes and Threats hang in the Word, like so many lowring Clouds, ready to pour down Vengeance upon the Heads of such Sinners. Look as the condition of the Saints is compassed round with Promises, so yours with Threatnings, Isa. 5. 11. Woe unto them that rise up early in the Morning, that they may follow strong Drink, and continue until Night, until Wine inflame. So Isa. 28. 1, 2. Woe to the Crown of Pride, to the Drunkards of Ephraim, &c. With many other, too long to enumerate here. Now consider what a fearful thing it is to be under these Woes of God: Sinner, I beseech thee, do not make light of them, for they will fall heavy; assure thy self, not one of them shall fall to the Ground; they will all take place upon thee, except thou repent.

There are Woes of Men, and Woes of God; God's Woes are true Woes, and make their Condition Woeful to purpose on whom they fall. Other Woes (as one saith) do but touch the Skin, but these strike the Soul; other Woes are but Temporal, these are Eternal; others do only part betwixt us and our outward Comforts, these betwixt God and us for ever.

Arg. 8. Drunkenness is a leading Sin, which has a great Retinue and Attendance of other sins waiting on it, it's like a sudden Land-flood, which brings a great deal of Dirt with it. So that look as Faith excels among the Graces, because it enlivens, actuates, and gives strength to them; so is this among Sins. It is not so much a special Sin against a single Precept of God, as a general Violation of the whole Law, (saith accurate Ames.) It doth not only call off the Guard, but warms and quickens all other Lusts, and so exposes the Soul to be prostituded by them. (1.) It gives occasion, yea, is the real cause of many Contentions, and fatal Quarrels, Prov. 23. 29. Who hath Woe! Who hath Sorrow? Who hath [Contention] Babbling, Wounds without Cause? They that tarry long at the Wine, &c. Contentions and Wounds are the ordinary Effects of drunken Meetings; when Reason is deposed, and Lust heated, what will not Men attempt? (2.) Scoffs and Reproaches of the ways and People of God, Psal. 69. 12. David was the Song of the Drunkards. (3.) It's the great incendiary of Lust: You shall find Rioting and Drunkenness joyned with Chambering and Wantonness, Rom. 13. 13. Nunquam ego ebrium castum putabo, saith Hierom, I will never think a Drunkard to be chaste. Solomon plainly tells us, what the Issue will be, Prov. 23. 33. Thine eyes shall behold a strange Woman, and thy Heart shall utter perverse things, speaking of the Drunkard. It may be called Gad, for a Troop followeth it. Hence one aptly calls it, The Devil's Bridle, by which he turneth the Sinner which way he pleases; he that is overcome by it, can overcome no other Sin.

Arg. 9. But if none of the former Considerations can prevail, I hope these two last may, unless all sense and tenderness be lost. Consider therefore in the 9th place, That Drunkards are in Scripture marked out for Hell; the Characters of Death are upon them. You shall find them pinioned with other Sons of Death, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Know ye not, that the Unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived: Neither Fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abusers of themselves with Mankind, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor [Drunkards,] nor Revilers, nor Extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God. Oh dreadful Thunderbolt! He is not asleep but dead, that is not startled at it. Lord, how are guilty Sinners able to face such a Text as this is! Oh Soul! Darest thou for a superfluous Cup adventure to drink a Cup of pure unmixed Wrath? O think when the Wine sparkles in the Glass, and gives its colour, think, I say, what a Cup of Trembling is in the hand of the Lord for thee. Thou wilt not now believe this; O but the day is coming, when thou shalt know the Price of their Brutish Pleasures. Oh it will then ſting like an Adder. Ah! this ſhort-lived beaſtly Pleaſure is the Price for which thou ſelleſt Heaven, and Rivers of Pleaſure that are at God's right Hand.

Obj. But I hope I ſhall repent, and then this Text can be no Bar to my Salvation.

Sol. True, if God ſhall give thee Repentance, it could not. But in the laſt place, to awaken thee thoroughly, and ſtartle thy ſecure Conſcience, which Senſuality hath brawned and cauterized, let me tell thee, Arg. 10. That it is a Sin out of whoſe power few or none are ever reſcued or reclaimed. On this account it was that St. Auguſtine called it the Pit of Hell: He that is addicted to this Sin, becomes incurable (ſaith a Reverend Divine) for ſeldom, or never, have I known a Drunkard recalled. And its power to hold the Soul in ſubjection to it, lies in two things eſpecially: (1.) as it becomes habitual; and habits are not eaſily broken; be pleaſed to view an Example in the caſe, Prov. 23. 35. They have ſtricken me, ſhalt thou ſay, and I was not ſick; they have beaten me and I felt it not. When I ſhall awake, I will ſeek it yet again. (2.) As it takes away the Heart, Hoſ. 4. 11. that is the Underſtanding, Reaſon and Ingenuity of a Man, and ſo makes him uncapable of being reclaimed by Counſel. Upon this account it was that Abigail would not ſpeak leſs or more to Nabal, till the Wine was gone out of him, 1 Sam. 25. 36, 37. plainly intimating, that no wholſome Counſel can get in, till the Wine be gone out. When one asked Cleoſtratus, whether he were not aſhamed to be drunken, he tartly replyed, And are not you aſhamed to admoniſh a Drunkard? intimating that no Wiſe Man would caſt away an Admonition upon ſuch an one. And it not only renders them uncapable of Counſel for the time, but by degrees it beſots and infatuates them; which is a very grievous ſtroke from God upon them, making way to their Eternal Ruin. So then you ſee upon the whole, what a daugerous Gulph the ſin of Drunkenneſs is. I beg you for the Lord's ſake, and by all the regard you have to your Souls, Bodies and Eſtates, beware of it. O conſider theſe ten Arguments I have here produced againſt it. I ſhould have proceeded to anſwer the ſeveral Pleas and Excuſes you have for it. But I mind brevity, and ſhall ſhut up this firſt Caution, with a very pertinent and ingenious Poem of Mr. George Herbert, in his Temple.

Ames, de conſc. p. 8, 9.

Drink not the third Glaſs, which thou canſt not tame
When once it is within thee; but before
Mayſt rule it as thou liſt, and pour the Shame
Which it will pour to thee, upon the Floor.
It is moſt juſt to throw that on the Ground,
Which would throw me there, if I kept the Round.

He that is drunken may his Mother kill,
Lye with his Siſter; he hath loſt his Reins;
Is outlaw'd by himſelf; all kind of ill
Did with the Liquor ſlide into the Veins.
The Drunkard forfeits Man, and doth diveſt
All wordly Right, ſave what he had by Beaſt.

Shall I to pleaſe another's Wine-ſprung mind,
Loſe all my own? God has given me a meaſure
Short of his Can, and Body; muſt I find
A Pain in that wherein he finds a Pleaſure?
Stay at the third Glaſs; if thou loſe thy hold,
Then thou art modeſt, but the Wine grows bold.

If Reaſon move not Gallants, quit the Room,
(All in a Shipwrack ſhipt their ſeveral way.)
Let not a common Ruin thee entomb;
Be not a Beaſt in Courteſies; but ſtay,
Stay at the third Glaſs, or forgo the place;
Wine above all things doth God's Stamp deface.

II. CAUTION.

THE Second Evil I ſhall deal with, is the Evil of the Tongue, which, as St. James ſaith, is full of deadly Poyſon, Oaths, Curſes, Blaſphemies; and this Poyſon it ſcatters up and down the World in all places; an untamed Member that none can rule, Jam. 3. 7, 8. The fierceſt of Beaſts have been tamed by Man, (as the Apoſtle there obſerves) which is a Relick of his old Superiority and Dominion over them: But this is an unruly Member that none can tame, but he that made it; no Beaſt ſo fierce and crabbed as this is. It may be, I may be bitten by it for my labour and endeavours to put a Reſtraint upon it. But I ſhall adventure it. My deſign is not to diſhonour or exaſperate you: But if my faithfulneſs to God and you ſhould accidentally do ſo, I cannot help that.

Friends, Providence oftentimes confines many of you together within the narrow Limits of a Ship, where you have time enough, and if your Hearts were ſanctifyed, many choice Advantages of edifying one another. O what tranſcendent Subjects doth Providence daily preſent you with, to take up your Diſcourſes! how many Experiences, extraordinary Mercies and Preſervations have you to relate to one another, and bleſs the Lord for! Alſo how many works of Wonder do you daily behold, who go down into the Deeps? O what heavenly Employment is here for your Tongues! How ſhould they be talking of all his Wonders! How ſhould you call upon each other, as David did, Pſ. 66. 16. Come hither, and I will tell you what God hath done for my Soul, at ſuch a time, in ſuch an Extremity. How ſhould you call upon one another to pay the Vows your Lips have uttered in your diſtreſs? Thus ſhould one provoke another to this Angelical Work, as one lively Bird ſets the whole Flock a Chirping.

But tell me, Sirs, ſhould a Man come Aboard you at Sea, and ask of you, as Chriſt did of the two Diſciples going to Emmaus, Luk. 24. 17. What manner of Communication is this that ye have by the way? O what a ſad Account would he have from moſt of you! It may be he ſhould find one Jeſting and another Swearing, a third Reviling Godlineſs and the Profeſſors of it; ſo that it would be a little Hell for a ſerious Chriſtian to be confined to your Society. This is not (I am confident) the manner of all. We have a company of more ſober Seamen, and bleſſed be God for them; but ſuch thus ſtands the caſe with moſt of you. Oh what Stuff is here from Perſons profeſſing Chriſtianity and bordering cloſe upon the Confines of Eternity as you do!

It is not my purpoſe to write of all the Diſeaſes of the Tongue; that would fill a Volume, and be inconſiſtent with my intended Brevity. Who can recount the Evils of the Tongue? The Apoſtle ſaith, It is a world of Iniquity, Jam. 3. 6. And if there be a world of Sin in one Member, Who can number the Sins of all the Members? Laurentius reckons as many ſins of the Tongue, as there are Letters in the Alphabet. And it is an obſervable Note that one hath upon Rom. 3. 13, 14.

Paul anatomiseth the unnatural Mah there, he insisteth longer upon the Organs of Speech, than all the other Members. Their Throat is an open Sepulchre, with their Tongues they have used Deceit, the Poyson of Asps is under their Lips, their Mouth is full of cursing and bitterness.

But to be short, we find the Spirit of God in Scripture comparing the Tongue to a Tree, Prov. 15. A wholsome Tongue is a Tree of Life. And words the fruit of the Tree, Isa. 57. 12. I create the fruit of the Lips. Some of these Trees bear precious fruits, and it is a lovely sight to behold them laden with them in their seasons, Prov. 25. 11. A word fitly spoken, is like Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver. Such a Tongue is a Tree of Life. Others of these Trees bear evil Fruit, Grapes of Sodom, and Clusters of Gomorrah. I shall only insist upon two sorts of these fruits, viz. (1.) Withered, sapless fruit; I mean, idle and unprofitable words. (2.) Rotten and corrupt fruit; I mean, prophane Oaths, and prophanations of the sacred Name of God. No Fruit in the World so apt to corrupt and taint, as the Fruits of the Lips. When it is so, the Scripture calls it σαπρὸς λόγος & corrupt or rotten communication, Ephes. 4. 29. To prevent this, the Spirit of God describes an excellent way to season our Words, and keep them sweet and sound, that they may neither wither nor become idle and sapless, or putrify and become rotten, as prophane words are, Col. 4. 6. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that you may know how to answer every man. Oh, if the salt of Grace were once cast into the fountain, the Heart, the streams must needs become more savoury and pleasant, as the Waters of Jericho when they were healed. My present work is to attempt the cure of this double evil, of idle words, and prophane Oaths, whereof thousands among you are deeply guilty. I shall begin with the first, viz.

I. IDLE WORDS: That is, useless Chat, unprofitable Talk, that is not referred any way to the glory of God: This is a common evil, and little regarded by most Men, but yet a sin of severer aggravations than the most imagine. Light Words weigh heavy in God's ballance.

Arg. 1. For first, the evil of them is exceedingly aggravated by this: They abuse and pervert the Tongue, that noble Member, from that employment and use which God by the law of Creation assigned it to. God gave not to Man the Organs or power of Speech (which is his excellency above the Beasts) to serve a passion, or vain humour, to vent the froth and vanity of his spirit; but to extol his Creator, and render him the praise of all his admirable and glorious works. For though the Creation be a curious well-tuned Instrument, yet God is the Musician that must touch it and make melody; this was the end of God in forming the Instruments and Organs: But now hereby they are subject to Satan and Lust, and employed to the dishonour of God that made them. God is used to suspend the power of Speech (as we see in children) till Reason begin to bud in them; they grant not the liberty of one, till they have the use of the other; which plainly shews, that God is unwilling to have our words run waste.

Arg. 2. It is a sinful wasting of our precious time, and that puts a further aggravation upon it. Consider, Sirs, the time of Life is but a little spot between two eternities. The long-suffering God wheels about those glorious Celestial Bodies over our Heads in a constant revolution, to beget time for you; and the preciousness of every Minute consists of results from its use and end; it is intended and afforded as a space to you to repent in, Rev. 2. 21. And therefore great things depend upon it; no less than your eternal Happiness or Misery hangs upon those precious opportunites. Every minute of it hath an Influence into Eternity. How would the damned value one hour of it, if they might enjoy it! The Business you have to do in it, is of unspeakable Weight and Concernment; this great Work, this Soul-work, and Eternity-work lies upon your hands, you are cast into streights of time about it. And if so, O what an Evil is it in you, to waste it away thus to no purpose!

Arg. 3. It's a Sin that few are sensible of, as they are of other Sins, and therefore the more dangerous. It's commonly committed, and that without checks of Conscience. Other Sins, as Murther and Adultery, though they be horrid Sins, yet are but seldom committed, and when they are, Conscience is startled at the horridness of them: Few, except they be prodigious Wretches indeed, dare make light of them. But now for idle and vain Words, there are innumerable swarms of these every day, and few regard them. The intercourse betwixt the Heart and Tongue is quick; they are quickly committed, and as easily forgotten.

Arg. 4. And then 4thly, They have mischievous Effects upon others. How long doth an idle Word or foolish jest stick in Men's Minds, and become an occasion of much Sin to them? The froth and vanity of thy Spirit, which thy Tongue so freely vents among thy vain Companions, may be working in their Minds, when thou art in the dust, and so be transmitted from one to another; for unto that no more is requisite than an objective Existence of those vain Words in their Memories. And thus mayst thou be sinning in the Persons of thy Companions, when thou art turned into Dust. And this is one Reason that Suarez gives for a general Judgment, after Men have past their particular Judgment, immediately after their Death, Because (saith he) after this, multitudes of Sins by their means will be committed in the World, for which they must yet be judged to a fuller measure of Wrath. So that look as many of the precious Servants of God now in glory, have left many weighty and holy Sayings behind them, by which many thousands of Souls have been benefitted, and God glorified on Earth, after they had left it: So thou leavest that Vanity upon the mind of others behind thee, by which he may be dishonoured to many Generations.

And then 2. For PROPHANE OATHS, the corrupt fruit of a graceless Heart; Oh how common are these among you! Yea, the habit of Swearing is so strengthened in some, that they have lost all Sense and Conscience of the Sin. Now, Oh that I might prevail with you to repent of this Wickedness, and break the force of this customary Evil among you! Will you but give me the reading of a few Pages more; and weigh with the reason of Men, what you read? If you will not hearken to counsel, it is a fatal sign, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. and you shall mourn for this obstinacy hereafter, Prov. 5. 12, 13. Desperate is that Evil that scorns the Remedy. And if you have patience to read it, the Lord give you an Heart to consider what you read, and obey the Counsels of God; or else it were better thine Eyes had never seen these lines. Well then, I beseech you consider,

Arg. 1. That prophane Oaths are an high abuse of the dreadful and sacred Name of God, which should neither be spoken or thought of without the deepest Awe and Reverence. It is the taking of that sacred Name in vain, Exod. 20. 7. Now God is exceeding tender and jealous over his Name; it is dear to him; his Name is dreadful and glorious, Malac. 1. 14. I am a great King, and my Name is dreadful among the Heathens. The Heathens would not ordinarily mention the Names of ſuch as they reverenced. Suetonius ſaith, that Auguſtus prohibited the common uſe of his Name; he thought it an indignity to have his Name toſſed up and down in every one's Mouth. Yea, ſays Dr. Willet on Exod. 30. it was a uſe among them to keep ſecret ſuch Names as they would have in reverence. They durſt not mention the name of Demogorgon, whom they held to be the firſt God: They thought when he was named, the Earth would tremble. Alſo the name of Mercurius Treſmegiſtus, was very ſparingly uſed, becauſe of that reverence the People had for him. Now conſider, ſhall poor Worms be ſo tender of preſerving the reverence of their Names? Shall not Heathens dare to uſe the Names of their Idols; and ſhall the ſacred and dreadful Name of the true God be thus bandied up and down by Tongues of his own Creatures? Will not God be avenged for theſe Abuſes of his Name? Be confident, it ſhall one day be ſanctifyed upon you in judgment, becauſe ye did not ſanctify it according to your duty.

Arg. 2. Swearing is a part of the Worſhip of God, and therefore prophane Swearing can be no leſs than the profanation of his Worſhip, and robbing him of all the Glory he has thereby, Deut. 6. 13. Thou ſhalt fear the Lord thy God, and ſerve him, and ſhalt ſwear by his Name. So Jer. 4. 2. Thou ſhalt ſwear the Lord liveth, in Truth, in Judgment, and in Righteouſneſs. If a Man ſwear by God after this manner, God is exceedingly glorifyed thereby. Now that you may ſee what revenue of Glory God hath from this part of his Worſhip, and how it becomes a part of Divine Worſhip, you muſt know then, an Oath is nothing elſe, but The asking or deſiring a Divine Teſtimony, for the Confirmation of the Truth of our Teſtimony. Heb. 6. 16. For Men verily ſwear by the greater, and an Oath for [Confirmation] is to them an end of all ſtrife. The Corruption of humane Nature by the Fall, has made Man ſuch a falſe and fickle Creature, that his ſingle Teſtimony cannot be ſufficient Security for another, (eſpecially in weighty Caſes) to reſt upon; and therefore in Swearing, he calleth God for a witneſs of the Truth of that he affirms, or promiſeth. I ſay, calleth God to be a Witneſs of the Truth of what he ſaith, becauſe he is Truth it ſelf, and cannot lye, Heb. 6. 18. Now this calling for, or asking of a Teſtimony from God, makes an Oath become a part of God's Worſhip, and gives him a great deal of Glory and Honour: For hereby he that ſweareth, acknowledgeth his Omniſciency and Infallible Truth and Righteouſneſs. His Omniſciency is acknowledged; for by this Appeal to him, we imply and acknowledge him to be the Searcher of the Hearts and Reins; that he knows the ſecret Intents and Meaning of our Spirits. His ſupreme and infallible Truth is alſo acknowledged; for this is manifeſtly carried in an Oath, That though I am a falſe and deceitful Creature and my Affirmation cannot obtain univerſal and full Credence, yet he that is greater than I, by whoſe Name I ſwear, cannot deceive. And laſtly, his Righteouſneſs is acknowledged in an Oath; for he that ſweareth doth either expreſly and implicitly put himſelf under the Curſe and Wrath of God, if he ſwear falſely. Every Oath hath an Execration or Imprecation in it, Neh. 10. 29. They entered into a Curſe and an Oath to walk in God's Law. And ſo 2 Cor. 1. 23. I call God for a Record upon my Soul. And the uſual form in the Old Teſtament was, The Lord do ſo to me, and more alſo. Now hereby God hath the Glory of his Righteouſneſs and Juſtice given him by the Creature, and therefore it is a choice part of the Divine Worſhip, or of that Homage which a Creature oweth to his God. And if this be ſo, then how eaſily may the Sin of raſh and profane Oaths be hence argued and aggravated? The more excellent any thing is by an Inſtitution of God, by ſo much more horrid and abominable is the abuſe thereof. O how often is the dreadful Majeſty of Heaven and Earth called to witneſs to frivolous things! and oft to be a Witneſs of our Rage and Fury! as 1 Sam. 14. 39. Is it a light thing to rob him of his peculiar Glory, and ſubject poor Souls to his Curſe and Wrath, who has ſaid, He will be a ſwift Witneſs againſt you, Mal. 3. 5. Your Tongues are nimble in committing this Sin, and God will be ſwift in punishing of it.

Arg. 3. It is a Sin which God hath ſeverely threatned to puniſh, and that with temporal and corporal Plagues: For by reaſon of Oaths, the Land mourns, Hoſ. 4. 2, 3. That is, it brings the heavy Judgment of God upon whole Nations, under which they ſhall mourn. And in Zech. 5. 2, 3, you have there a Roll of Curſes, (i. e.) a Catalogue of Judgments and Woes, the length thereof twenty Cubits (i. e. ten Yards.) To ſet out the multitude of Woes contained in it, it's a long Catalogue, and a Flying Roll, to denote the ſwiftneſs of it; it flyes towards the Houſe of the Swearer; it makes haſte. The Judgments that are written in it linger not, but are even in pain to be delivered. And this flying Roll full of dreadful Woes, flyes and enters into the Houſe of the Swearer; and it ſhall remain therein, ſaith the Lord, it ſhall cleave to his Family; none ſhall claw off theſe Woes from him. And it ſhall conſume the Timber thereof, and the Stones thereof, (i. e.) bring utter Subverſion, Ruine and Deſolation to his Houſe. O dreadful Sin! What a Deſolation doth it make! Your Mouths are full of Oaths, and your Houſes ſhall be full of Curſes. Woe to that wretched Family into which this flying Roll ſhall enter; Woe, I ſay, to the wretched Inhabitants thereof. The Curſe of the Lord (ſaith Solomon) is in the Houſe of the Wicked; but he bleſſeth the [Habitation] of the Juſt, Prov. 3. Tuguriolum, (i. e.) ſaith Mercer, his poor little Tenement or Cottage. There is a Bleſſing, the Promiſes like Clouds of Bleſſing, dwell over it, and drop Mercies on it; but a Curſe is in the Houſe of the Wicked. Ah, how many ſtately Manſions are there in which little other language but Oaths and Curſes are heard! and theſe are as ſo much Gunpowder laid under the Foundation of them, which when Juſtice ſhall ſet fire to, O what Work will make! Woe to the Inhabitants thereof. Well! break off this Sin by Repentance, unleſs you intend to ruin your Families, and bring all the Curſes of God into your Houſes. If you have no pity for your ſelves, yet pity your Poſterity; have Mercy for your Wives and Children, don't ruin all for the Indulgence of a Luſt.

Arg. 4. But that is not all; it brings Soul-torments and ſpiritual Plagues upon you: It brings Hell along with it. And if thou be not afraid of Sin, yet methinks thou ſhouldſt be afraid to Hell, if the Love of God can work nothing upon thy brawny Heart, yet methinks the Terrors of the Lord ſhould ſtartle and affright it. To this purpoſe I beſeech you, weigh theſe Scriptures; and met unleſs God hath loſt all his Authority with you, and Hell all its Terrors, it ſhould ſtartle you. The firſt is that dreadful Scripture, James 5. 12. But above all things, my Brethren, ſwear not; neither by Heaven, neither by the Earth, neither by any other Oath; but let your yea, be yea, and your nay, nay; leſt ye fall into [Condemnation.] O view this Text ſeriouſly. Methinks it ſhould be like the Fingers that came forth and wrote upon the Wall, that dreadful Sentence that changed the Countenance of a King, and that in the height of a frolick Humour, and made his Knees ſmite together. Mark, [Above all things] a form of Vehemency and Earneſtneſs, like that, Epheſ. 6. 16. But above all, taking the Shield of Faith. As Faith hath a prelation there before all the Graces, ſo Swearing here before all other Vices. [Swear not] (i. e) vainly, raſhly, profanely: For otherwiſe 'tis a lawful thing, and a part of God's Worſhip, as I have ſhewed; but ſwear not vain Oaths, by the Creatures, Heaven, or Earth, &c. Which is to advance the Creature into the room of God. A Sin to which the Jews were much addicted. But, Let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; (i. e.) accuſtom your ſelves to ſhort and plain Affirmations and Negations, to a ſimple and candid Expreſſion of your minds. And the Thundering Argument that backs it, is this; [leſt ye fall into Condemnation] (i. e.) leſt for theſe things the Judge of Heaven and Earth paſs a Sentence of Condemnation to Hell upon you. O Sirs, Dare you touch with this hot Iron? Dare you from henceforward commit that Sin, that you know will bring you under the Condemnation and Judgment of God? Do you know what it is for a Soul to be caſt at God's Bar? Did you never ſee a poor Malefactor tryed at the Aſſizes, and obſerve how his Face gathers paleneſs, how his Legs tremble, and Death diſplays its colours in his Cheeks, when ſentence is given upon him? But what's that to God's Condemnation? What is a Gallows to Hell? Another Text I would commend to your conſideration is that, Exod. 20. 7. The Lord will not hold him guiltleſs that taketh his Name in vain. Where vain Oaths are eſpecially included. Now what doth God mean, when he ſaith, He will not hold him guiltleſs? The meaning is plain, his Sins ſhall be reckoned and imputed to him, they ſhall lye upon his Soul; he ſhall be bound over to anſwer God for them. O terrible Sentence! What Soul can bear it, or ſtand before it! Bleſſed is the Man (ſaith David) to whom the Lord imputeth not Iniquity. Surely then, curſed is that Man, to whom God will impute them. And to the Swearer they ſhall all be imputed, if he break not off his Sin by Repentance, and get a Chriſt the ſooner. O Soul! how dar'ſt thou think of going before the Lord with the Guilt of all thy Sins upon thee? When Chriſt would adminiſter the very Spirit of Joy in one Sentence to a poor Sinner, Matth. 9. 4. He ſaid, Son, be of good cheer, thy Sins be forgiven. And when God would contract the Sum of all Miſery into one Word, He ſaith, His Sins ſhall lye down with him in the duſt, Job 20. 11. Ah Soul! One of theſe days thou ſhalt be laid on thy Death-bed, or ſee the Waves that ſhall entomb thee leaping and roaring upon every ſide; and then thou wilt ſurely have other thoughts of the Happineſs that lyes in remiſſion of Sin, than thou haſt now. Obſerve the moſt incorrigible Sinner then; hark, how he ſighs, and cries, and groans; Ah Lord! and muſt I dye? And then ſee how the Tears trickle down his Cheeks, and his Heart ready to burſt within him. Why, what's the matter? Oh, the Lord will not pardon him, he holds him guilty. If he were ſure his Sins were forgiven, then he could dye; but oh! to appear before the Lord in them, appals him, daunts him, kills the very Heart of him. He would fain cry for Mercy, but Conſcience ſtops his Mouth. Oh, ſaith Conſcience, how canſt thou move that Tongue to God in Prayer for Mercy, that hath ſo often rent and torn his glorious Name, by Oaths and Curſes? Sirs! I pray you, do not make light of theſe things; they will look wiſhly upon you one of theſe days, except ye prevent it by ſound Converſation.

Arg. 5. And then laſtly, to name no more, I pray you conſider, that a cuſtom of vain Words, and profane Oaths, is as plain an Indication and Diſcovery of an unregenerate Soul, as any in the World. This is a ſure Sign thou art none of Chriſt's, nor haſt any thing to do with the Promiſes and Priviledges of his People; for by this the Scripture diſtinguiſhed the ſtates of Saints and Sinners, Eccl. 9. 2. There is one Event to the Righteous, and to the Wicked; to the Clean and to the Unclean; to him that Sacrificeth, and to him that Sacrificeth not: As is the Good, ſo is the Sinner, and he that Sweareth, as he that feareth an Oath. Mark, he that Sweareth, and he that feareth an Oath, do as manifeſtly diſtinguiſh the Children of God from Wicked Men, as Clean and Unclean, Righteous and Wicked, Sacrificing and not Sacrificing. This fruit of the Tongue plainly ſhews what the Tree is that bears it, Iſa. 2. 6. The vile Perſon will ſpeak of Villany; and out of the abundance of the Heart the Mouth ſpeaks. Loquere, ut videam, ſaid one; ſpeak, that I may ſee what you are. Look what is in the Heart, that is vented by the Tongue; where the Treaſures of Grace are in the Heart, Words minſtring Grace will be in the Lips, Pſal. 37. 30. The Mouth of the Righteous ſpeaketh Wiſdom, and his Tongue talketh of Judgment; for the Law of the Lord is in his Heart. To this ſenſe we muſt underſtand that Scripture, Matt. 12. 27. By thy Words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy Words thou ſhalt be condemned. Certainly, Juſtification and Condemnation, in the day of Judgment, ſhall not paſs upon us meerly for the good or bad Words we have ſpoken; but according to the ſtate of the Perſon, and frame of the Heart. But the meaning is, that our Words ſhall Juſtify or Condemn us in that day, as Evidence of the ſtate and frame of the Soul. We uſe to ſay, ſuch Witneſſes hang'd a Man; the meaning is, the Evidence they gave caſt and condemned him. O think ſeriouſly of this; if Words evidence the ſtate of the Soul, what a woeful ſtate muſt thy Soul needs be in, whoſe Mouth overflows with Oaths and Curſes! How many Witneſſes will be brought in, to caſt thee in the great Day? Your own Tongue ſhall then fall upon you, as the Expreſſion is, Pſal. 64. 8. And out of your own Mouth God will fetch abundant Evidence to condemn you. And thus I have opened unto you the Evil of vain Words, and prophane Oaths; and preſented to your view their ſeveral Aggravations. If by theſe things there be a relenting Pang upon thy Heart, and a ſerious Reſolution of Reformation, then I ſhall commend theſe few helps or means to thy Peruſal, and conclude this Head. And the firſt help is this,

Help. 1. Seriouſly fix in thy thoughts that Scripture, Matth. 12. 36. But I ſay unto you, that every Idle Word that Men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give an Account thereof in the day of Judgment. O let it ſound in thine Ears day and night! O ponder them in thy Heart. [I ſay unto you] I that have always been been in the Father's Bosom, and do fully know his mind, that I am constituted the Judge of quick and dead, and do fully understand the rule of Judgment, and the whole Process thereof, I say, and do assure you, that [every idle Word that Men shall speak] (i. e.) every Word that hath not a tendency and reference to the Glory of God, though there be no other obliquity or evil in them than this, that they want a good End. How much more then scurrilous Words, bloody Oaths and Blasphemies! [Men shall give an Account thereof] that is, shall be cast and condemned to suffer the Wrath of God for them; as appears by that parallel Scripture, 1 Pet. 4. 4, 5. For as the Learned observe, there is plainly a Metalepsis in these words; The Antecedent, to give an Account, is put for the Consequent, Punishment, and Condemnation to Hell Fire; the certainty whereof admits but of this one Exception, viz. intervenient Repentance, or a Pardon obtained through the Blood of Christ here, before you be presented at that Judgment-Seat. Oh then, what a Bridle should this Text be to thy extravagant Tongue! I remember Hierom was wont to say, Whether I eat or drink, or whatever I do, methinks I still hear the Sound of these Words in mine Ear, Arise ye Dead, and come to Judgment. O that the sound of the Words may be always in your Ears!

Help 2. Consider before you speak, and be not rash to utter Words without Knowledge. He that speaks what he thinks not, speaks Hypocritically; and he that thinks not what to speak, speaks inconsiderately. You have cause to weigh your Words, before you deliver them by your Tongue; for whether you do, or do not, the Lord pondereth them. Records are kept of them; else you could not be called to an account for them, as I shewed you you must.

Help 3. Resign up your Tongues to God every day, and beg him to guide and keep it. So did David, Psal. 141. 3. Set a watch, O Lord, before my Mouth, and keep thou the door of my Lips. Beg him to keep you from Provocations and Temptations; or if you fall into them, intreat him for Strength to rule your Spirits in them, that you may not be conquered by Temptations.

Help 4. But above all, labour to get your Souls cleansed and purifyed by Faith, possessed with saving and gracious Principles: All other means will be ineffectual without this. O see the vileness of thy nature, and the necessity of a change to pass upon it. First make the Tree good, and then his Fruit good: A new Nature will produce new Words and Actions. To bind your Souls with Vows and Resolutions, while you are Strangers to a regenerate Work, is to bind Sampson with green Withs, whilst his Locks remain upon his Head. I will shut up this with the Advice of that divine Poet, Mr. George Herbert, it may be it may affect thee, and run in thy Thoughts when thou art alone.

Take not his Name, who made thy Mouth, in vain,
It gets thee nothing, and hath no excuse.
Lust and Wine plead a Pleasure; Avarice Gain;
But the cheap Swearer, through his open Sluice,
Let's his Soul run for nought, as little fearing.
Were I an Epicure, I could bare Swearing.

When thou dost tell another's Jest, therein
Omit the Oaths, which true Wit cannot need:
Pick out of Tales the Mirth, but not the Sin.
He pares his Apple that will cleanly feed.
Play not away the Vertue of that Name,
Which is thy best stake, when Grief makes thee tame.
The cheapest Sins most dearly punish'd are,
Because to shun them also is so cheap:
Or we have Wit to mark them, and to spare.
O crumble not away thy Souls fair heap.
If thou wilt dye, the Gates of Hell are broad,
Pride, and foul Sins, have made the Way a Road.

III. CAUTION.

THE next Danger I shall give you warning of is the Sin of Uncleanness; with which, I fear, too many of the rude and loose sort of Seamen defile themselves; and possibly, the Temptations to this Sin are advantaged, and strengthened upon them more than others, by their Condition and Employments. Let no Man be offended that I here give warning of this evil; I intend to asperse no Man's Person, or raise up Jealousy against any; but would faithfully discharge my Duty to all, and that in all things. It was the complaint of Salvian many hundred Years ago, that he could not speak against the Vices of Men, but one or other would thus object, There he meant me, he hit me; and so storm and fret. Alas (as he replyeth) it is not we that speak to you, but your own Conscience; we speak to the Order, but Conscience speaks to the Person. I shall use no other Apology in this case. That this Sin is a dreadful Gulph, a Quick-sand, that hath suck'd and destroyed thousands, is truly apparent both from Scripture and Experience. Solomon tells us, Prov. 22. 14. That it is a deep Ditch, into which such as are abhorred of the Lord shall fall. Oh the multitudes of Dead that are there! And if so, I cannot in duty to God, or in love to you, be silent, where the danger is so great. It is both needless, and besides my intention, here to insist largely upon the Explication of the Particulars in which Uncleanness is distributed; the more ordinary and common Sins of this kind are known by the names of Adultery and Fornication: The latter is, when single Persons come together, out of the state of Marriage: The former is, when at least one of the Persons committing Uncleanness is contracted in Marriage. This now is the Evil I shall warn you of. And that thou mayst never fall into this Pit, I shall endeavour to fence and hedge up thy way to it, by these ensuing Arguments: And oh that the light of every Argument may be powerfully reflected upon your Conscience! Many Men are very wise in generals, but very vain ἐν διαλογισμοῖς in the reasonings or imaginations, as the Apostle calls them, Rom. 1. 22. (i. e.) in their Practick Inferences. They are good at Speculation, but bunglers at Application. But it is Truth in the Particulars, that, like an hot Iron, pierces; and Oh that you might find these to be such in your Soul! To that end, consider,

Arg. 1. The Names and Titles by which this Sin is known in Scripture, are very vile and base. The Spirit of God, doubtless, hath put such odious names upon it, on purpose to deter and affright Men from it. In general it's called Lust; and (as one notes) it beareth the name of its Mother it is Uncleanness in the Abstract, Numb. 5. Filthiness it self; An Abomination, Ezek. 22. And they that commit it are called abominable, Re 21. 8. Varro saith, the Word imports that which is not lawful to mention; or rather, abominable Persons are such as are not fit for the Society of Men, such as should be hiss'd out of all Mens Company: They are rather to be reckoned to Beasts than Man. Yea, the Scripture compares them by an odious name, he calls it Adultery, ſo Ido-y is called Adultery, Ezek. 16. 32. And ind this ſpiritual and corporal Adultery often-es are found in the ſame Perſons. They that this Sin to ſet out the evil of other Sins, if it e not moſt vile and abominable. It's called

Epheſ. 5. 3.

Arg. 2. It is a Sin that the God of Heaven hath en prohibited and ſeverely condemned in the eatning upon threatning in the Word againſt it.

Day: Mountains and Hills may depart, but e Words ſhall not depart: Heaven and Earth ground. Which is a borrowed Speech from a e to the Mark, but falls to the ground by the way

e of theſe Words ſhall ſo fall to the ground.

Arg. 3. It is a Sin that defiles and deſtroys the Body, 1 Cor. 6. 18. He that committeth Adultery, ſinneth againſt his own Body. In moſt other Sins the Body is but the Inſtrument, here it is the Object againſt which the Sin is committed; that Body of thine, which ſhould be the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt, is turned into a ſtye of Filthineſs; yea, it not only defiles, but deſtroys it. Job calls it a Fire that burneth to Deſtruction, Job 31. 12. or as the Septuagint reads it, a Fire that burneth in all the Members. It is a Sin that God hath plagued with ſtrange and terrible Diſeaſes; that Morbus Gallicus, and Sudor Anglicus, and that Plica Polonica whereof you may read in Bolton's four laſt things, page 30 and Sclater on Rom. 1. 30. Theſe were Judgments ſent immediately by God's own hand, to correct the new Sins and Enormities of the World; for they ſeem to put the beſt Phyſicians beſides their Books. O how terrible is it to lye groaning under the ſad Effects of this Sin! As Solomon tells us, Prov. 5. 11. And thou mourn at the laſt, when thy Fleſh and thy Body are conſumed. To this ſenſe ſome expound that terrible Text, Heb. 13. 4. Marriage is honourable in all, and the Bed undefiled; but Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge. (i. e.) with ſome remarkable Judgment inflicted on them in this World; if it eſcape the Puniſhment of Men, it ſhall not eſcape the Vengeance of God. Ah! with what Comfort may a Man lye down upon a ſick Bed, when the Sickneſs can be looked upon as a Fatherly Viſitation coming in Mercy? But thou that ſhorteneſt thy Life, and bringeſt ſickneſs on thy ſelf by ſuch a Sin, art the Devil's Martyr; and to whom canſt thou turn in ſuch a Day for Comfort?

Arg. 4. Conſider what an indelible Blot it is to thy Nature which can never be wiped away; though thou eſcape with thy Life, yet, as one ſays, thou ſhalt be burnt in the Hand, yea, branded in the Forehead. What a foul Scar is that upon the Face of David himſelf, which abides to this day? He was upright in all things, ſave in the matter of Uriah. And how was he ſlighted by his own Children and Servants, after he had committed this Sin? Compare 1 Sam. 2. 30. with 2 Sam. 12. 10, 11. A Wound and Diſhonour ſhall he get; and his Reproach ſhall not be wiped away. This is to give thine Honour to another, Prov. 5. 9. The Shame and Reproach attending it, ſhould be a Preſervative from it. Indeed the Devil tempts to it by hopes of Secrecy and Concealment; but though many other ſins lye hid, and poſſibly ſhall never come to light, until that Day of Manifeſtation of all hidden things, yet this is a Sin that is moſt uſually diſcovered. Under the Law, God appointed an extraordinary way for the diſcovery of it, Numb. 5. 13. And to this day the Providence of God doth often very ſtrangely bring it to light, though it be a deed of Darkneſs. The Lord hath many times brought ſuch Perſons either by Terrors of Conſcience, Phrenſy, or ſome other means, to be the Proclaimers and Publiſhers of their own ſhame. Yea, obſerve this, ſaid Reverend Mr. Hilderſham on the fourth of John, even thoſe that are moſt cunning to conceal and hide it from the Eyes of the World, yet through the juſt Judgment of God, every one ſuſpects and condemns them for it; this daſhes in pieces, at one ſtroke, that Veſſel in which the precious Ointment of a good name is carried. A Fool in Iſrael ſhall be thy Title; and even Children ſhall point at thee.

Arg. 5. It ſcatters thy ſubſtance, and roots up the foundation of thy Eſtate. Job 31. 12. It roots up all the Increaſe. Strangers ſhall be filled with thy Wealth, and thy labours ſhall be in the Houſe of a Stranger. Prov. 5. 10. For by means of a Whoriſh Woman, a Man is brought to a Morſel of Bread, Prov. 6. 26. It gives Rags for its Livery (ſaith one) and though it be furthered by the fulneſs, yet it's followed with a Morſel of Bread. This is one of thoſe temporal Judgments with which God puniſhes the unclean Perſon in this Life. The Word Dalilah, which is the name of a Harlot, is conceived to come from a Root that ſignifyes to exhauſt, drain, or draw dry. This Sin will quickly exhauſt the fulleſt Eſtate; and oh what dreadful thing will this be, when God ſhall require an account of thy Stewardſhip in the great Day! How righteous is it, that that Man ſhould be Fuel to the Wrath of God, whoſe Health and Wealth have been ſo much Fuel to maintain the Flame of Luſt! Oh how laviſh of their Eſtates are ſinners to ſatisfy their Luſts! If the Members of Chriſt be ſick, or in Priſon, they may there periſh and ſtarve, before they will relieve them; but to obtain their Luſts, Oh how expenſive! Ask me never ſo much, and I will give it, ſaid Shechem, Gen. 34. 12. Ask what thou wilt, and it ſhall be given thee, ſaid Herod to the Daughter of his Herodias. Well, you are liberal in ſpending Treaſures upon your Luſts; and believe it, God will ſpend Treaſures of Wrath to puniſh you for your Luſts. It had been a thouſand times better for thee thou hadſt never had an Eſtate, that thou hadſt begged thy Bread from door to door, than to have ſuch a ſad Reckoning as thou ſhalt ſhortly have for it.

Arg. 6. Oh ſtand off from this Sin, becauſe it is a Pit out of which very few have been recovered that have fallen therein. Few are the Footſteps of returners from this Den. The longer a Man lives in it, the leſs power he hath to leave it. It is not only a damning, but an infatuating Sin. The danger of falling this way muſt needs be great, and the fall very deſperate, becauſe few that fall into it do ever riſe again. I ſhall lay two very terrible Scriptures before you to this purpoſe, either of them enough to drive thee ſpeedily to Chriſt, or to drive thee out of thy Wits; the one is that, Eccleſ. 7. 26. And I find more bitter than Death the Woman whoſe Heart is Snares and Nets, and whoſe Hands are Bands: Whoſo pleaſeth God ſhall eſcape from her, but the Sinner ſhall be taken by her. The Argument which the ſpirit of God uſes here to diſſuade from this Sin, is taken from the ſubject; they that fall into it, for the moſt part, are Perſons in whom God has no delight, and ſo in judgment are delivered up to it, and never recovered by Grace from it. The other is that in Prov. 22. 14. The Mouth of a ſtrange Woman is a deep Pit; he that is abhorred of the Lord ſhall fall therein. Oh terrible Word! able to daunt the Heart of the ſecureſt Sinner; your Whores embrace you, yea, but God abhors you; you have their love, oh but you are under God's hatred! What ſay you to theſe two Scriptures? If you are not Atheiſts, methinks ſuch a Word from the Mouth of God, ſhould ſtrike like a Dart through thy Soul. And upon this account it is they that never are recover'd, becauſe God has no delight in them. If this be not enough, view one Scripture more, Prov. 2. 18. 19. For her Houſe inclineth unto Death, and her Paths unto the Dead: None that go to her, return again, neither take they hold of the Paths of Life. Reader, if thou be a Perſon addicted to this Sin, go thy ways, and think ſeriouſly what a caſe thou art in. None return again (i. e.) a very few of many: The examples of ſuch as have been recovered, are very rare. Pliny tells us, the Mermaids are commonly ſeen in green Meadows, and have inchanting Voices; but there are always found heaps of dead Men's Bones lying by them. This may be but a fabulous Story: But I am ſure it is true of the Harlot, whoſe Syren-Songs have allured thouſands to their inevitable Deſtruction. It is a captivating Sin, that leads away the Sinner in triumph; they cannot deliver their Souls: Prov. 7. 22. He goeth after her ſtraitway, as an Ox goeth to the Slaughter; or as a [Fool] to the correction of the Stocks. Mark, a Fool; it dementates and befools Men, takes away their Underſtanding; the Septuagint renders it, ὥσπερ κύων ἐπὶ δέσμες, as a Dog to the Collar; or, like as we uſe to ſay, a Dog in a ſtring. I have read of one, that having by this ſin waſted his Body, was told by Phyſicians that except he left it, he would quickly loſe his Eyes; he anſwered, If it be ſo, then Vale mecum amicum, Farewel ſweet Light. And I remember Luther writes of a certain Nobleman in his Country who was ſo beſotted with the ſin of Whoredom, that he was not aſhamed to ſay, That if he might live here for ever, and be carried from one Stew to another, would never deſire any other Heaven. The greateſt Conquerors that have ſubdued Kingdoms, and ſcorned to be commanded by any, have been miſerably enſlaved and captivated by this Luſt. O think ſadly upon this Argument, God often gives them up to Impenitency, and will not ſpend a Rod upon them to reclaim them. Hoſ. 4. 14. Reveſ. 22. 11.

Arg. 7. And then in the 7*th* place, Thoſe that have been recovered by Repentance out of it, oh how bitter hath God made it to their Souls! I find it (ſaith Solomon) more bitter than Death, Eccleſ. 7. 26. Death is a very bitter thing; but what a ſtruggling and reluctance is there in Nature againſt it! But this is more bitter. David found it ſo, when he roared under the bloody Laſhes of Conſcience for it, in Pſalm. Ah! when the Lord ſhall open the poor Sinner's Eyes, to ſee the horrid Guilt he hath hereby contracted upon his own poor Soul, it will haunt him as a Ghoſt, day and night, and terrify his Soul with dreadful forms and repreſentations. O dear bought Pleaſure, if this were all it ſhould coſt! What is now become of the Pleaſure of Sin? O what Gall and Wormwood wilt thou taſte, when once the Lord ſhall bring thee to a ſight of it! the Hebrew Word for Repentance (Nachum) the Greek Word (Metamelia) the one ſignifyes a irking of the Soul, and the other ſignifyes, A Grief. Yea, it is called A renting of the Heart, if it were torn in pieces in a Man's Breaſt. O ſuch a poor Soul, what it thinks of ſuch Courſes now? Oh now it loaths, abhors it ſelf for them. Ask him, if he dare ſin in that kind again? he may as well ask me (will he anſwer me) whether I will thruſt my hand into the Fire. Oh it breeds an indignation in him againſt himſelf. That Word [ἀγανάκτησον] 2 Cor. 7. 11. ſingnifyes the riſing of the Stomach with very Rage, and being ſick with Anger. Religious Wrath is the fierceſt Wrath. Oh what a Furnace is the Breaſt of a poor Penitent! what Fumes, what Heats do abound in it, whilſt the Sin is even before him, and the ſenſe of guilt upon him? One Night of carnal Pleaſure will keep thee many Days and Nights upon the Rack of Horror, if ever God give thee Repentance unto Life.

Arg. 8. And if thou never repent, as indeed but few do that fall into this Sin, then con-how God will follow thee with eternal Vengeance. Thou ſhalt have flaming Fire for burning Luſt. This is a Sin that hath a ſcent of Fire and Brimſtone with it, wherever you meet with it in Scripture. The Harlot's Gueſts are lodged in the depths of Hell, Prov. 9. 18. No more perfumed Beds; they muſt now lye down in Flames. Whoremongers ſhall have their part in the Lake that burneth with Fire and Brimſtone; which is the ſecond Death, Rev. 21. 1. Such ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God and Chriſt, 1 Cor. 6. 9. No Dog ſhall come into the new Jeruſalem; there ſhall in no wiſe enter in any thing that defileth, or that worketh Abomination. You have ſpent your Strength upon Sin, and now God ſets himſelf a work to ſhew the glory of his Power in puniſhing, Rom. 9. 22. The Wrath of God is tranſacted upon them in Hell by his own immediate Hand, Heb. 10. 30. Becauſe no Creature is ſtrong enough to convey all his Wrath, and it muſt all be poured out upon them, therefore he himſelf will torment them for ever with his own immediate Power; now he will ſtir up all his Wrath, and ſinners ſhall know the price of their Pleaſures. The puniſhment of Sodom is a little Map of Hell, as I may ſay. Oh how terrible a day was that upon thoſe unclean Wretches! But that Fire was not of many days continuance; when it had conſumed them, and their houſes, it went out for want of matter; but here, the breath of the Lord, like a ſtream of Brimſtone, kindles it. The Pleaſure was quickly gone, but the Sting and Torment abide for ever. Who knoweth the Power of his Anger? Even according to his Fear ſo is his Wrath, Pſal. 90. 11. Oh conſider, how will his Almighty Power rack and torment thee! Think on this, when Sin comes with a ſmiling Face towards thee in the Temptation. Oh think! If the humane nature of Chriſt recoiled, when his Cup of Wrath was given him to drink; if he were ſore amazed at it, how ſhalt thou, a por Worm, bear and grapple with it for ever?

Arg. 9. Conſider further, how cloſely ſoever thou carrieſt thy Wickedneſs in this World, tho' it ſhould never be diſcovered here, yet there is a day coming when all will out, and that before Angels and Men. God will rip up thy ſecret Sins in the face of that great Congregation at the day of Judgment: Then that which was done in ſecret ſhall be proclaimed as upon the Houſe-top, Luke 12. 3. Then God will judge the (Secrets) of Men, Rom. 2. 16. the hidden things of Darkneſs will be brought into the open Light. Sinner, there will be no ſculking for thee in the Grave, no declining this Bar; thou refuſedſt indeed to come to the Throne of Grace, when God invited thee, but there will be no refuſing to appear before the Bar of Juſtice, when Chriſt ſhall ſummon thee. And as thou canſt not decline appearance, ſo neither canſt thou then palliate and hide thy Wickedneſs any longer; for then ſhall the Books be opened; and the Book of God's Omniſcience, and the Book of thine own Conſcience, wherein all thy ſecret Villany is recorded; for though it ceaſed to ſpeak to thee, yet it ceaſed not to write and record thy Actions. If thy ſhameful Sins ſhould be divulged now, it would make thee tare off thy Hair with indignation; but then all will be diſcovered. Angels and Men ſhall point at thee, and ſay, Lo, this is the Man, this is he that carried it ſo ſmoothly in the World: Mr. Thomas Fuller relates a Story of Ottocar King of Bohemia, who refuſing to do his Homage to Adulphus the Firſt, being at laſt ſorely chaſtiſed in War, condeſcended to do him Homage privately in a Tent; but the Tent was ſo contrived by the Emperor's Servant (ſaith the Hiſtorian) that by drawing one Cord it was taken all away, and ſo Ottocar preſented on his Knees, doing Homage to the Emperor, in the view of three Armies. O Sirs, you think to carry it cloſely, you wait for the Twilight, that none may ſee you; but alas! it will be to no end, this day will diſcover it; and then what Confuſion and everlaſting Shame will cover thee; Will not this work then?

Arg. 10. Laſtly, conſider but one thing more, and I have done. By this Sin thou doſt not only damn thine own Soul, but draweſt another to Hell with thee. This Sin is not as a ſingle Bullet that kills but one, but as a Chain-ſhot, it kills many, two at leaſt, unleſs God give Repentance. And if he ſhould give thee Repentance, yet the other Party may never repent, and ſo periſh for ever through thy Wickedneſs; and Oh, what a ſad conſideration will that be to thee, that ſuch a poor Soul is in Hell, or likely to go thither by thy means? Thou haſt made faſt a ſnare upon a Soul, which now thou canſt not untye; thou haſt done that which may be matter of Sorrow to thee as long as thou liveſt; but though thou canſt grieve for it, thou canſt not remedy it. In other Sins it is not ſo: If thou hadſt ſtollen another's Goods, reſtitution might be made to the Injured Party, but here can be none. If thou hadſt murthered another, thy ſin was thine own, not his that was murthered by thee; but this is a complicated Sin, defiling both at once; and if neither repent, then Oh what a ſad greeting will theſe poor Wretches have in Hell! how will they curſe the day that ever they ſaw each other's Face! O what an aggravation of their Miſery will this be! For look, as it will be matter of joy in Heaven, to behold ſuch there as we have been inſtrumental to ſave; ſo muſt it needs be a ſtinging Aggravation of the Miſery of the Damned, to look upon thoſe that have been the Inſtruments and Means of their Damnation. Oh, methinks, if there be any tenderneſs at all in thy Conſcience, if this ſin have not totally brawned and ſtupifyed thee, theſe Arguments ſhould pierce like a Sword through thy Guilty Soul. Reader, I beſeech thee, by the Mercies of God, if thou haſt defiled thy Soul by this abominable Sin, ſpeedily to repent. Oh get the Blood of ſprinkling upon thee; there is yet Mercy for ſuch a Wretch as thou art, if thou wilt accept the Terms of it. Such were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, 1 Cor. 6. 11. Publicans and Harlots may enter into the Kingdom of God, Matth. 21. 31. Though but few ſuch are recovered, yet how knoweſt thou but the hand of Mercy may pull thee, as a Brand out of the Fire, if now thou wilt return and ſeek it with Tears? Though it be a Fire that conſumeth unto Diſtruction, as Job calls it, Job 1. 12. yet it is not an unquenchable Fire, the blood of Chriſt can quench it.

And for you whom God hath kept hitherto from the contagion of it, O bleſs the Lord, and uſe all God's Means for the prevention of it. The ſeeds of this Sin are in thy nature; no thank to thee but reſtraining Grace, that thou art not delivered up to it alſo. And that thou mayeſt be kept out of this Pit, conſcionably practiſe theſe few Directions.

Direct. 1. Beg of God a clean Heart, renewed and ſanctifyed by ſaving Grace; all other endeavours do but palliate a Cure: The Root of this is deep in thy Nature; Oh get that mortifyed, Mat. 15. 9. Out of the Heart proceeds Fornication, Adulteries, 1 Pet. 2. 11, 12. Abſtain from fleſhly Luſt, —— having your Converſation honeſt. The Luſt muſt must first be subdued, before the Converſation can be honeſt.

Direct. 2. Walk in the fear of God all the day long, and in the ſenſe of his Omniſcient Eye that is ever upon thee. This kept Joſeph from this Sin, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this Wickedneſs and ſin againſt God? Conſider, the Darkneſs hideth not from him, but ſhineth as the Light. If thou couldſt find a Place where the Eye of God could not diſcover thee, it were ſomewhat: Thou dareſt not to act this Wickedneſs in the preſence of a Child, and wilt thou adventure to commit it before the Face of God? See that Argument, Prov. 5. 20. And why wilt thou, my Son, be raviſhed with a ſtrange Woman, and embrace the Boſom of a Stranger? For the ways of Man are before the Eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings.

Direct. 3. Avoid lewd Company, and the Society of unclean Perſons; they are but Panders for Luſt. Evil Communication corrupts good Manners. The Tongues of Sinners do caſt Fire-balls into the Hearts of each other, which the Corruption within is eaſily kindled and enflamed by.

Direct. 4. Exerciſe thy ſelf in thy Calling diligently. It will be an excellent means of preventing this Sin. It is a good Obſervation that one hath, That Iſrael was ſafer in the Brick-kilns in Egypt, than in the Plains of Moab, 2 Sam. 11. 2. And it came to paſs in the Even-tide, that David aroſe from off his Bed, and walked on the Roof of the King's Houſe; and this was the occaſion of his Fall. See 1 Tim. 5. 11. 13.

Direct. 5. Put a reſtraint upon thine Appetite: feed not to Exceſs. Fulneſs of Bread and Idleneſs were the Sins of Sodom, that occaſioned ſuch an exuberancy of Luſt. They are like fed Horſes, every one neighing after his Neighbour's Wife. When I had fed them to the full, then they committed Adultery, and aſſembled themſelves by Troops in the Harlot's Houſes, Jer. 5. 7, 8. This is a lawful Remedy: See 1 Cor. 7. 9. God ordained it, Gen. 21. But herein appears the Corruption of Nature, that Men delight to tread By-Paths, and forſake the way in which God hath appointed; as that Divine Poet Mr. Herbert ſaith.

Sine Cerere & Bacho friget Venus.

If God had laid all common, certainly,
Man would have been the cloſer; but ſince now
God hath impal'd us, on the contrary,
Man breaks the Fence, and every Ground will plow.
O what were Man, might he himſelf miſplace!
Sure, to be croſs, he would ſhift Feet and Face.

Stollen Waters are ſweeter to them, than thoſe Waters they might lawfully drink at their own Fountain: But withal know, it is not the having, but the delighting in a lawful Wife, as God requires you to do, that muſt be a Fence againſt this Sin. So Solomon, Prov. 5. 9. Let her be as the loving Hind, and pleaſant Roe; Let her Breaſts ſatisfy thee at all times, and be thou raviſh'd always with her love.

Direct. 7. Take heed of the running on in a courſe of Sin, (eſpecially Superſtition and Idolatry) in which caſes, and as a Puniſhment of which Evils God often gives up Men to theſe vile Affections, Rom. 1. 25, 26. Who changed the Truth of God into a Lye [worſhipped] and ſerved the Creature more than the Creator, who is Bleſſed for ever, Amen. [For this Cauſe] God gave them up to vile Affections, &c. They that defile their Souls by Idolatrous Practices, God ſuffers as a juſt Recompence, their Bodies alſo to be defiled with uncleanneſs, that ſo their Ruin may be haſtened. Let the admirers of Tradition beware of ſuch a judicial Tradition as this is. Woe to him that is thus delivered by the hand of an angry God: No Puniſhment in the World like this, when God puniſhes ſin with ſin. When he ſhall ſuffer thoſe κόσμος ἐννοίας, thoſe common notices of Conſcience to be quench'd, and all reſtraints to be moved out of the way of ſin, it will not be long e'er that Sinner come to his own place.

IV. CAUTION.

IN the next place I ſhall make bold to expoſtulate a little with your Conſcience concerning the precious Mercies you have received, and the ſolemn Promiſes you have bound your ſelves withal for the obtaining of thoſe Mercies. I fear God hath many Bankrupt Debtors among you, that have dealt ſlipperily and unfaithfully with him, that have not rendered to the Lord according to the great things he hath done for them, nor according thoſe good things they have vowed to the Mighty God of Jacob: But truly, if thou be a deſpiſer of Mercy, thou ſhalt be a Pattern of Wrath; God will remember them in Fury, who forget him in his favours. I will tell you what a grave and eminent Miniſter once told his People (dealing with them about this ſin of unthankfulneſs for mercy) and I pray God it may affect you duly: Let us all mourn (ſaith he) and take on; we are all behind-hand with God: The Chriſtian World is become Bankrupt, quite broke, makes no return to God for his Love. He is iſſuing out proceſs to ſeiſe upon Body, Goods and Life, and will be put off no longer: Bloody Bayliffs are abroad for bad Debtors all the World over. Chriſtians are broke, and make no return, and God is breaking all. He cannot have what he would have, what he ſhould have; he will take what he can get: For Money he will take Goods, Limbs, Arms, Legs; he will have his own out of your Skin, out of your Blood, out of your Bodies and Souls. He is ſetting the Chriſtian World as light and low as they have ſet his Love. Ah Lord! what a time do we live in? Long-ſuffering is at an end, Mercy will be ſlighted in Juſtice, Juſtice will have all behind, it will be paid to the utmoſt Farthing; 'twill ſet abroach your Blood, but 'twill have all behind, &c.

Mr. Lockyer on Col. 1. p. 113.

Do you hear, Souls? Is not this ſad news to ſome of you, who have received vaſt ſums of Mercy, and given God your Bond for the repayment of him in Praiſe and anſwerable Fruit, and yet forfeited all, and loſt your Credit with God? O how can you look God in the Face, with whom you have dealt ſo perfidiouſly? I am now come in the Name of God to demand his due of you; to call to remembrance the former Receipts of Mercy which you mind not, but God doth, and there is a Witneſs in your Boſom that doth, and will one day witneſs to your faces, that you have dealt perfidiouſly with your God? your Souls have been the Graves of Mercy, which ſhould have been as many Gardens where they ſhould have lived and flouriſhed. I am come now to open thoſe Graves and view thoſe Mercies that your unthankfulneſs hath killed and buried, to lay them before your Eyes, and ſee whether your ungrateful Hearts will bleed upon them. Buried Mercies are not loſt for ever; they ſhall as certainly have a day of * Reſurrection as thy ſelf: It were better for thee they ſhould have a Reſurrection in thy Heart, than to rise as Witnesses against thee, when thou shalt rise out of the Dust; that will be a terrible Resurrection indeed, when they shall come to plead against thy Soul: Nothing pleads more dreadfully against a Soul than abused Mercy doth. But I shall come to the Particulars upon which I interrogate your Consciences, and I pray deal truly and ingenuously in answering these Queries.

* There is a double reſurrection of Mercy: A reſurrection of Mercy in Mercy, and a reſurrection of Mercy in Wrath. I mean the firſt I now labour for, and that to prevent the ſecond.

Quer. 1. And first I shall demand of you, Whether you never had experience of the Power and Goodness of God, in restoring you to Health from dangerous Sickness and Diseases? Have you not sometimes had the sentence of Death in your selves? And that possibly when you have been in remote parts far from your Friends and Relations, and destitute of all Means and Accommodations. Did you not say in that condition, as Hezekiah did in a like case? Isa. 38. 10, 11, 12. I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the Gates of the Grave, I am deprived of the residue of my Years. I said, I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord in the Land of the Living; I shall behold Man no more with the Inhabitants of the World. Remember thy self, Man, canst not thou call to mind the day when the Arrows of Death came whisking by thee, and it may be hit those next thee; took away those that were as lively and as lusty as thy self, when you began your Voyage, and yet they were cast for Death, thou for Life, and that when there was but an Hairs breadth betwixt thee and the Grave? Tell me, Soul, what Friend was that stood by thee then, when thou wast forsaken of all Friends? When it may be thy Companions stood ready to throw thee overboard, Who was it that pitied and remembred thee in thy low Estate? Who was it rebuked thy Disease? or, (as one very aptly expresses it) restrained the Humours of thy Body, from overflowing and drowning thy Life? for when they are let out in a Sickness, they would overflow and drown it, as the Waters would the Earth, if God should not say to them, Stay you proud Waves. Who was it, Man, that when thy Body was brought low and weak, and like a crazy rotten Ship in a Storm, took in Water on all sides, so that all the Physicians in the World could not have stop'd those Leaks; consider, what hand was that which quieted and calmed the tempestuous Sea, careened and mended thy crazy Body, and launched thee into the World again, as whole, as sound, as strong, as ever? Was it not the Lord, that hath done all this for thee? Did not he keep back thy Soul from the Pit, and thy Life from perishing? Yea, when thou wast chastened with pain upon thy Bed (as Elihu speaks) Job 33. 19, 20, 21. and the multitude of thy Bones with strong Pains, so that thy Life abhorred Bread, and thy Soul dainty Meat; thy flesh consumed away that it could not be seen, and thy Bones that were not seen stuck out: Yet then as it is, verse 28. he delivered thy Soul from going down into the Pit, and caused thy Life to see the Light. Had the Lamp of Life been then extinguished, thou hadst gone down into endless darkness; Hell had shut her Mouth upon thee. Now tell me, Soul, what hast thou done with this precious Mercy? Hast thou walked before the Lord in a deep sense thereof, and answered his end therein, which was, to lead thee to Repentance? or hath thy stupid or disengenuous Heart forgotten it, and lost all sense of it, so that God's end is frustrated, and thy Salvation not a jot furthered thereby? O! if it be so, woe to thee; for the blood of this Mercy, which thy Ingratitude hath murthered, like the Blood of Abel, cries to God against thee. What a Wretch art thou thus to requite the Lord for such a Mercy! He saw thy Tears, and heard thy Groans, and said within himself, he shall not dye, but live: Alas, poor Creature, if I cut him off now, he is eternally lost: I will send him back a few Years more more into the World; I will try him once more, it may be he will bear some Fruits to me from this deliverance; and if so, well; if not, I will cut him down hereafter: He shall be set at liberty upon his good-Behaviour a little longer. And is all this nothing in thine Eyes? Wretch that thou art, dost thou forget and slight such a favour as this! Is it worth no more in thine Eyes? Well, it would be worth something in the Eyes of the poor Damned Souls, if they might have so many Years cut out of their Eternity, for a meer intermission of their Torments, much more as a time of Patience and Mercy. O consider, what Pity and Goodness thou hast abused.

Mr. Tho. Goodwin.

Quer. 2. Wast thou never cast upon miserable Streights and Extremities, wherein the good Providence of God relieved and supplyed thee? How many of you have been beaten so long at Sea, by reason of contrary Winds and other accidents, till your Provisions have been even exhausted and spent? To how short Allowance have you been kept? And what a Mercy would you have esteemed it, if you could but have satisfied Nature with a a full draught of Water? Certainly, this hath been the case of many of you. Oh what a Price and Value did you then set upon those common Mercies, which at other times have been slightly overlooked! and when you have seen no hopes of Relief, have you not looked sadly one upon another? and, it may be, said as that Widow of Zarephath did to the Prophet, 1 King. 17. 12. And she said, As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a Cake, but a handful of Meal in a Barrel, and a little Oyl in a a Cruse; and behold, I am gathering two Sticks that I may go in and dress it for me and my Son, that we may eat it, and dye. Even such hath been your case, yet hath that God, whose Mercies are over all his Works, heard your Sorrows, and provided Relief for you, either by some Ship, which Providence sent to relieve you in that Distress, or by altering the Winds, and sending you safe to the Land, before all your Provisions have been spent. And hast thou kept no Records of these gracious Providences? Yea, dost thou abuse the Creature, when thou art brought again to the full enjoyment of it? and possibly receivest the Creatures (whose worth thou so lately hast seen in the want of them) without Thanksgiving, or a sensible Acknowledgment of the goodness of God in them? I say, dost thou thus answer the expectations of God? Well, beware lest God teach such an unworthy Creature, by woeful Experience, that the opening of his hand to give thee a Mercy, is worth the opening thy Lips to bless him for it. Beware lest that unthankful Mouth that will not bless the Lord for Bread and Water, have neither the one nor the other to Bless him for. I can give you a sad Instance in the case, and I have found it in the Writing of an eminent Divine, who saith he had it from an Eye and Ear-witness of the Truth of it. A Young Man lying upon his Sick-bed, was always calling for Meat, but when the Meat he called for was brought unto him, he shook and trembled dreadfully at the sight of it, and that in every part of his Body; and so continued, until his Food was carried away. And thus he did, as often as any Food was brought into his presence; and not being able to eat one bit, pined away; but before his death, he freely acknowledged the Juſtice of God in this Puniſhment; For, ſaid he, in the time of my Health, I ordinarily received my Meat without Thankſgiving. O! let the Abuſers and Deſpiſers of ſuch Mercies, fear and tremble.

Quer. 3. Have you not been eminently protected and ſaved by the Lord, in the greateſt dangers and hazards of Life; in Fights at Sea, when Men have dropt down at your right Hand and at your Left, and yet the Lord hath cover'd your Heads in the day of Battle? And though you have been equally obnoxious to Death and Danger with others, yet your Name was not found among theirs in the Liſt of the Dead: Or in Shipwracks, ah, how narrowly have ſome of you eſcaped! A Plank hath been caſt in, you know not how, to ſave you, when your Companions, for want of it, have gone down to the bottom; or you have been enabled to ſwim to the Shore, when others have fainted in the way, and periſhed. In what a variety of ſtrange and aſtoniſhing Providences hath God walked towards ſome of you, and what returns have you made to God for it? Oh Sirs, I beſeech you, conſider but theſe two or three things that I ſhall now lay before you to conſider of.

Conſid. 1. An Heathen will do more for a Dunghill-Deity than thou, that calleſt thy ſelf a Chriſtian, wilt do for the true God, that made Heaven, and Earth, Dan. 5. 4. They praiſed the Gods of Silver, and of Gold, and of Braſs, of Iron, Wood, and Stone. When the Philiſtines were delivered from the hand of Sampſon, the Text ſaith, Judg. 16. 24. They praiſed their God, &c. Then Dagon muſt be extolled. O let the Shame cover thy Face!

Conſid. 2. That the abuſe of Mercy and Love is a Sin that goes near to the Heart of God. O! he cannot bear it. It is not the giving out of Mercy that troubles him, for that he doth with delight; but the recoiling of his Mercies upon him by the Creatures Ingratitude, this wounds. Be aſtoniſhed, O ye Heavens, at this, and be ye horribly afraid. And again, Hear O Heavens, and give ear O Earth, Iſa. 1. 2. q. d. O you innocent Creatures which inviolably obſerve the Law of your Creation, be you all aſtoniſhed and cloathed in Black, to ſee Nature caſt by Sin ſo far below it ſelf; and that in a Creature ſo much ſuperior to you as Man, who in the very Womb, was crown'd a King, and admitted into the higheſt Order of Creatures, and ſet as Lord and Maſter over you; yet doth he act not only below himſelf, but below the very Beaſts. The Ox knoweth his Owner, (i. e.) There is a kind of Gratitude in the Beaſts, by which they acknowledge their Benefactors that feed and preſerve them. Oh! What a pathetical Exclamation is that, Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh People, and unwiſe.

Conſid. 3. It is a Sin that kindles the Wrath of God, and will make it burn dreadfully againſt thee, unthankful Sinner; it ſtirs up the Anger of God, in whomſoever it be found, though in the Perſon of a Saint, 2 Chron. 32. 25. But Hezekiah rendred not again according to the Benefit done unto him; for his Heart was lifted up; therefore there was Wrath upon him, and upon Jeruſalem. And ſo you read, Rom. 1. That the Heathens, becauſe they were not thankful, were given up to vile Affections; the ſoreſt Plague in the World. It is a Sin that the God of Mercy ſcarce knows how to pardon, Jer. 5. 7. How ſhall I pardon thee for this? This forgetting of the God that ſaves us in our Extremities, is a Sin that brings Deſolation and Ruin, the effects of God's high diſpleaſure, upon all our Temporal Enjoyments. See that remarkable Scripture, Iſa. 17. 10, 11. Becauſe thou haſt [forgotten] the God of [thy Salvation] and haſt not been [mindful] of the Rock of [thy Strength:] Therefore ſhalt thou plant pleaſant Plants, and ſhalt ſet it with ſtrange ſlips; in the day ſhalt thou make thy Plant to grow, and in the Morning ſhalt thou make thy Seed to flouriſh, but the Harveſt ſhall be an heap in the day of Grief and deſperate Sorrow. The meaning is, that God will blaſt and curſe all thine Employments, and thou ſhalt be under deſperate Sorrow, by reaſon of the diſappointments of thy Hopes.

Conſid. 4. It's a Sin that cuts off Mercy from you in future Straits; if you thus requite the Lord for former Mercies, never expect the like in future Diſtreſſes. God is not weary of his Bleſſings, to caſt them away upon ſuch Souls that are but Graves to them. Mark what a Reply God made to the Iſraelites, when they cryed unto him for help, being invaded by the Amorites, Judg. 10. 11, 12, 13. Did not I deliver you from the Egyptians, and from the Amorites, from the Children of Ammon, and from the Philiſtines? The Zidonians alſo, and the Amalekites, and ye cryed unto me, and I delivered you out of their Hands; yet ye have forſaken me, and ſerved other Gods; wherefore I will deliver you no more. O ſad Word; It is (as if the Lord had ſaid) I have tryed what Mercy and Deliverance will do with you, and I ſee you are never the better for it: Deliverance is but Seed ſown upon the Rocks: I will caſt away no more favours upon you; now look to your ſelves, ſhift for your ſelves for time to come, wade through your Troubles as well as you can. O Brethren, there is nothing more quickly works the Ruin of a People than the abuſe of Mercy. O methinks this Text ſhould ſtrike terror in your Hearts. How often hath God delivered you? Remember thy eminent Deliverance at ſuch a Time, in ſuch a Country, out of ſuch a deep Diſtreſs: God was gracious to thy Cry then, thou haſt forgotten and abuſed this Mercy; what now, if God ſhould ſay, as in the Text, Therefore I will deliver thee no more. Ah poor Soul! What wouldſt thou do then, or to whom wilt thou turn? It may be thou wilt cry to the Creatures for help and pity; but alas, to what purpoſe? They will give as cold and comfortleſs an anſwer, as Samuel gave unto Saul, 1 Sam. 28. 15, 16. And Samuel ſaid unto Saul, Wherefore haſt thou diſquieted me, to bring me up? And Saul anſwered, I am ſore diſtreſſed; for the Philiſtines make War againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more, neither by Prophets, nor by Dreams; therefore have I called thee, &c. Then ſaid Samuel, Wherefore then doeſt thou ask of me, ſeeing the Lord is departed from thee, and become thine Enemy? O! thou wilt be a poor ſhiftleſs Creature, once by abuſing Mercy thou make it thy Enemy.

Secondly, For the breach of Vows made in diſtreſs to obtain theſe Mercies, and eaſily forgotten and violated by thee when thou haſt obtained thy Deſire: A Word or two to convince you what a further Evil lies in this, and how by this conſideration thy Sins come to be buoyed up to a great height, and aggravation of Sinfulneſs; and then have done with this Head.

A Vow, is a Promiſe made to God, in the things of God. The Obligation of it is by Caſuiſts judged to be as great as that of an Oath. It is a ſacred and ſolemn Bond, wherein a Soul binds it ſelf to God in lawful things; and being once bound by it, it is a moſt heinous Evil to violate it. It is a high piece of Diſhoneſty to fail in what we have promi-promiſed to Men, ſaith Dr. Hall; but to diſappoint God in our Vows, is no leſs than Sacriledge. The Act is free and voluntary; but if once a juſt and lawful Vow or Promiſe hath paſt your Lips (ſaith he) you may not be falſe to God in keeping it. It is with us for our Vows, as it was with Ananias and Saphira, for their ſubſtance: Whilſt it remained (ſaith Peter) was it not thine own? He needed not to ſell and give it? but if he will give, he may not reſerve; it is Death to ſave ſome: He lies to the Holy Ghoſt, that defalks from that which he engaged himſelf to beſtow. If thou have vowed to the mighty God of Jacob, look to it that thou be faithful in thy Performance, for he is a great and jealous God, and will not be mocked.

Caſe of Conſc.

Now I am confident, there be many among you, that in your former Diſtreſſes have ſolemnly engaged your Souls thus to God; that if he would deliver you out of thoſe Dangers, and ſpare your Lives, you would walk more ſtrictly, and live more holy Lives than ever you did. You have, it may be, engaged your Souls to the Lord againſt thoſe Sins, as Drunkenneſs, Lying, Swearing, Uncleanneſs, or whatſoever Evil it was that your Conſcience then ſmote you for; the Vows of God (I ſay) are upon many of you. But have you performed thoſe Vows that your Lips have urtered? Have you dealt truly with God? Or have you mocked him, and lied unto him with your Lips, and omitted thoſe very Duties you promiſed to perform, and returned to the ſelf-ſame Evils you promiſed to forſake. I only put the queſtion, let your Conſcience anſwer it. But if it be ſo indeed, that thou art a perſon that makeſt light of thy Engagements to God, as indeed Seamen's Vows, and Sick-men's Promiſes are, for the moſt part, deceitful and ſlippery things, being extorted from them by fear of Death, and not from any deep Reſentment of the Neceſſity and weight of thoſe Duties to which they binde their Souls: I ſay if this Sin lye upon any of your Souls, I adviſe you to go to God ſpeedily, and bewail it; humble your ſelf greatly before him, admire his Patience in forbearing you, and pay unto him what your Lips have promiſed. And to move you thereunto, let theſe Conſiderations, among many other, be laid to Heart.

Conſid. 1. Think ſeriouſly upon the Greatneſs of that Majeſty whom thou haſt wronged, by lying to him, and falſifying thy Engagements. O think duly on this: It is not Man whom thou haſt abuſed, but God; even that God in whoſe hand thy Life and Breath is. For although (as one truly obſerves) there be not in every Vow a formal Invocation of God, (God being the proper Correlate, and as it were a Party to every Vow, and therefore not formerly to be invoked for the Conteſtation of it) yet there is in every Vow an implicite calling God to witneſs; ſo that certainly the Obligation of a Vow is not one jot beneath that of an Oath. Now if God be as a Party to whom thou haſt paſt thy Promiſe, and its obligation on that ſcore found be ſo great, oh what haſt thou done? For a poor Worm to mock with the moſt glorious Majeſty of Heaven, and break Faith with God, what a dreadful thing is that? If it were but to thy Fellow-Creature, though the Sin would be great, yet not like unto this. Let me ſay to thee, as the Prophet Iſaiah 7. 13. Is it a ſmall thing for you to weary Men, but you will weary my God alſo? If you dare to deceive and abuſe Men, dare you do ſo to God alſo? Oh if the exceeding vileneſs of the Sin do not affect thee, yet methinks the danger of provoking ſo dreadful a Majeſty againſt thee ſhould. Conſid therefore conſider, Conſid. 2. Secondly, That the Lord will moſt certainly be avenged upon thee for theſe things except thou repent. O read and tremble at the word of God, Eccleſ. 5. 4. When thou voweſt a Vow unto God, defer not to pay it: For he hath no Pleaſure in Fools? Pay that which thou haſt vowed. But better it is that thou ſhouldeſt not vow, than that thou ſhouldeſt vow and not pay. Suffer not thy Mouth to cauſe thy Fleſh to ſin, neither ſay thou before the Angel, that it was an Error; wherefore [ſhould God be angry] at thy Voice, and [deſtroy] the works of thy Hands? Mark, God will be angry, and in that Anger he will deſtroy the Work of thy hand, (i. e.) ſaith Dirdate, bring thee and all thy Actions to nought, by reaſon of thy Perjury. Now the Anger of God, which thy breach of Promiſe kindles, as appears by this Text, is a dreadful Fire. O what Creature can ſtand before it! as Aſaph ſpeaks, Pſal. 76. 7. Thou, even thou, art to be feared; and who may ſtand in thy ſight when once thou art angry.

Conſid. 3. Conſider, Thirdly, that all this while thou ſinneſt againſt Knowledge and Conviction; for did not thy Conſcience plainly convince thee, when imminent danger opened its Mouth, that the matter of thy neglected Vow was a moſt neceſſary Duty: If not, why didſt thou binde thy Soul to forſake ſuch Practices, and to perform ſuch Duties? Thou didſt ſo look upon them then; by which it appears, thy Conſcience is convinced of thy Duty, but Luſt maſters and over-rules: And if ſo, poor Sinner, what a caſe art thou in, to go on from day to day ſinning againſt Light and Knowledge? Is not this a fearful rate of Sinning? and will not ſuch Sinners be plunged deeper into Hell than the poor Indians that never ſaw the Evil of their ways, as thou doeſt? Ponder but two or three Scriptures in thy thoughts, and ſee what a dreadful way of ſinning this is: Rom. 2. 9. Tribulation, Anguiſh and Wrath to every Soul of Man that doth Evil, to the [Jew firſt] and alſo to the Gentile. To the Jew firſt (i. e.) to the Jew eſpecially and principally; he had a precedency in means and light, and ſo let him have in Puniſhment. So Jam. 4. 17. To him that knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is Sin, (i. e.) Sin with a witneſs, horrid Sin, Sin that ſurpaſſes the deeds of the Wicked. So Luke 12. 47. And that Servant that knew his Lord's Will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his Will ſhall be beaten with many Stripes. Which is a plain alluſion to the Cuſtom of the Jews in puniſhing an Offender, who being convicted, the Judge was to ſee him bound faſt to a Pillar, his Cloaths ſtript off, and an Executioner with a Scourge to beat him with ſo many Stripes: But now thoſe Stripes came but from the Arm of a Creature: Theſe that the Text ſpeaks of, are ſet on by the Omnipotent Arm of God. Of the former there was a determinate number ſet down in their Law, as forty Stripes, and ſometimes they would remit one of that number too, in Mercy to the Offender, as you ſee in the Example of Paul, 2 Cor. 11. 24. Of the Jews I received forty Stripes ſave one, but in Hell no mitigation at all, nor allay of Mercy. The Arm of his Power ſupports the Creature in its Being, while the Arm of his Juſtice lays on eternally. Soul, conſider theſe things, do thou not perſiſt any longer then in ſuch a deſperate way of ſinning againſt the clear Conviction of thine own Conſcience, which in this caſe muſt needs give Teſtimony againſt thee.

Well then, go to God with the Words of David, Pſal. 66. 13, 14. and ſay unto him, I will pay thee my Vows which my Lips have uttered, and my Tongue hath ſpoken when I was in Trouble. Pay it Soul, and

and pay it ſpeedily unto God, elſe he will recover it by Juſtice, and fetch it out of thy Bones in Hell. O trifle not any longer with God, and that in ſuch ſerious matters as theſe are.

And now I have done my endeavour to give your former Mercies and Promiſes a Reſurrection in your Conſciences, O that you would ſit down and pauſe a while upon theſe things, and then reflect upon the paſt Mercies of your Lives, and on what hath paſt betwixt God and your Souls, in your former Straits and Troubles! Let not theſe plain Words work upon thy ſpleen, and make thee ſay, as the Widow of Sareptha did to the Prophet Elijah, 2 Kings 17. 18. What have I to do with thee, O thou Man of God? Art thou come to call my Sin to remembrance? But rather let it work kindly on thy Heart, and make thee ſay as David to Abigail, 1 Sam. 25. 32, 33. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, which ſent thee this day to meet me, and bleſſed be thy Advice.

V. CAUTION.

THE fifth and laſt Danger I ſhall warn you of, is, Your contempt and ſlighting of Death. Ah how light a matter do many of you (at leaſt in words) make of it? It ſeems you have little reverential fear of this King of Terrors; not only that you ſpeak ſlightly of it, but alſo becauſe you make no more preparation for it, and are no more ſenſible of your Preſervations and Deliverances from it. Indeed, the Heathen Phyloſophers did many of them profeſs a Contempt of Death upon the account of Wiſdom and Fortitude; and they were accounted the braveſt Men that moſt deſpiſed and ſlighted it: But alas, poor Souls, they ſaw not their Enemy againſt whom they fought, but skirmiſhed with their Eyes ſhut. They ſaw indeed its pale Face, but not its Sting and Dart. There is alſo a lawful Contempt of Death: We freely grant, that in two Caſes a Believer may contemn it; firſt, when it is propounded to them in a Temptation, on purpoſe to ſcare them from Chriſt and Duty, then they ſhould ſlight it; as Rev. 12. 11. They loved not their Lives to the Death. Secondly, When the natural Evil of Death is ſet in competition with the Enjoyment of God in Glory, then a Believer ſhould deſpiſe it, as Chriſt is ſaid to do, Heb. 12. 2. though his was a ſhameful Death. But upon all other Accounts and Conſiderations, it is the height of Stupidity and Security to deſpiſe it,

Now to the end that you might have right thoughts and apprehenſions of Death, which may put you upon ſerious Preparation for it; and that when ever your turn comes to conflict with this King of Terrors, under whoſe hand the Pompeys, Cæſars and Alexanders of the World, who have been the Terrors of Nations, have bowed down themſelves: I ſay that when your turn and time comes (as the Lord only knows how ſoon it may be) you may eſcape the ſtroke of its Dart and Sting, and taſte no more bitterneſs in Death, than the natural Evil of it: To this end I have drawn the following Queſtions and Anſwers, which, if you pleaſe, may be called The Seaman's Catechiſm. And Oh that you might not dare to launch forth into the Deeps, until you have ſeriouſly interrogated and examined your Hearts upon thoſe particulars! Oh that you would reſolve, before you go forth, to withdraw your ſelves a while from all clamours and diſtractions, and calmly and ſeriouſly Catechiſe your own ſelves in this manner.

Queſt. 1. What may the Iſſue of this Voyage be?

Anſw. Death. Prov. 27. 1. Boaſt not thy ſelf of t Morrow, for thou knoweſt not what a Day may bring forth. Jam. 4. 13, 14. Go to now, ye that ſay, T day, or to morrow, we will go into ſuch a City, an continue there a Year, and buy and ſell, and get gain Whereas you know not what ſhall be on the morrow for what is your Life? It is even a Vapour that ap peareth for a little time, and then vaniſheth away.

Queſt. 2. What is Death?

Anſw. Death is a ſeparation of Soul and Body till the Reſurrection, 2 Cor. 5. 1. We know that our Earthly Houſe of this Tabernacle be diſſolved. Jo 15. 10, 11, 12. read the Words.

Queſt. 3. Is Death to be deſpiſed and ſlighte if it be ſo.

Anſw. O no! It's one of the moſt weighty an ſerious things that ever a Creature went abou So dreadful doth it appear to ſome, that the fe of it ſubjects them to Bondage all their Lives, He 2. 15. And to deliver them who through fear of Dea were all their lives ſubject to Bondage. And in Scri ture it's called, The King of Terrors, Job 18. 1 Or the Black Prince, as ſome tranſlate. Ner had any Prince ſuch a Title before. To ſome hath been ſo terrible, that none might mention i Name before them.

Queſt. 4. What makes it ſo terrible and affrigh ing to Men?

Anſw. Several things concur to make it terrib to the moſt of Men: As firſt, its Harbingers an Antecedents, which are ſtrong Pains, Conflicts an Agonies. Secondly, its office and work it com about, which is to transfer us into the other Worl Hence Rev. 6. 8. it's ſet forth by a Pale Horſ An Horſe, for its uſe and office to carry you awa from hence into the upper or lower Regions of ternity; and a Pale Horſe, for its ghaſtlineſs an terror. Thirdly, But above all, it's terrible regard of its conſequence; for it's the Door Eternity, the parting Point betwixt the preſe World and that to come; the utmoſt Line an Boundary of all temporal things. Hence Heb. It's appointed for all Men once to dye, and after th the Judgment. Rev. 6. 8. And I looked, and beh a Pale Horſe, and his Name that was ſet on him w Death; and Hell followed him. Ah! it makes a ſu den and ſtrange alteration upon Mens condition to be pluck'd out of Houſe, and from among Friend and Honours, and ſo many Delights, and hurri in a moment into the Land of Darkneſs, to cloathed with Flames, and drink the pure Wra of the Almighty for ever. This is it that mak it terrible.

Queſt. 5. If Death be ſo weighty a matter, an prepared to dye?

Anſw. I doubt not; I am afraid I want ma things that are neceſſary to a due preparation for Queſt. 6. What are thoſe things wherein a d Preparation for Death conſiſteth?

Anſw. Many things are neceſſary. Firſt, ſpec and ſaving Union with Jeſus Chriſt. This is th diſarms it of its Sting; O Death where is thy Sti Thanks be to God who hath given [us] the Vict through [our] Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 55, So Joh. 11. 26. Whoſoever [liveth] and [believe in me, ſhall never dye. Whoſoever liveth (i. e.) quickned with a new ſpiritual Life and Princip and ſo puts forth the principal act of that Li viz. Faith, he ſhall never dye, (i. e.) eternall This Hornet, Death, ſhall never leave its Sti in his ſides. Secondly, To entertain Death co fortably, the evidence and knowledge of his Un is neceſſary, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we [know] that if earthly Houſe of this Tabernacle were diſſolved, have a building of God, &c. And then he cannot only be content, but groan to be uncloathed, ver. 2. A miſtake in the former will coſt me my Soul; and a miſtake here will loſe me my Peace and Comfort. Thirdly, In order to this Evidence, it's neceſſary that I keep a good Conſcience in all things, both towards God and Man, 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our rejoycing, even the Teſtimony of our Conſcience, that in Sincerity and godly Simplicity, not in fleſhly Wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Converſation in the World. This good Conſcience reſpects all and every part of our work and duty to be done, and all and every Sin to be renounced and denied: So that he that is early united unto Chriſt by Faith, hath the clear evidence of that Union; and the Evidence fairly gathered from the Teſtimony of a good Conſcience, witneſſing his faithfulneſs, as to all Duties to be done, and Sins to be avoided, he is fit to dye; Death can do him no harm; but alas, theſe things are not to be found in me.

Queſt. 7. But what if I dye without ſuch a Preparation as this is, what will the conſequence of that be?

Anſw. Very terrible; even the ſeparation of my Soul and Body from the Lord to all Eternity, John 3. 36. He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting Life; and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life; but the Wrath of God abideth on him. He ſhall not ſee Life; there's the privative part of his Miſery, ſeparation from the bleſſed God. And the [Wrath] mark it, not Anger, but Wrath; not the Wrath of Man, but of [God] at whoſe Rebukes the Mountains ſkip like frighted Men, and the Hills tremble: The Wrath of God not only flaſhes out upon him, as a tranſient flaſh of Lightening, but [abideth] dwells, ſticks faſt, there is no Power in the World can looſe the Soul from it. [Upon him] not the Body only, nor the Soul only, but on [him] (i. e.) the whole Perſon, the whole Man. Here is the principal poſitive part of that Man's Miſery.

Queſt. 8. Can I bear this Miſery?

Anſw. No: My Heart cannot endure, nor my Hand be ſtrong, when God ſhall have to do with me upon this Account. I cannot bear this Wrath; Angels could not bear it; it hath ſunk them into the depths of Miſery. Thoſe that feel but a few ſparks of it in their Conſciences here, are even diſtracted by it, Pſal. 88. 15. Chriſt himſelf had never born up under it, had he not been ſupported by the infinite Power of the divine Nature, Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my Servant whom I uphold. How then ſhall I live when God doth this? what will be done to the dry Tree? Oh! there is no abiding of it, it is inſufferable. The Sinners in Zion are afraid, trembling ſurpriſeth the Hypocrite; who among us ſhall dwell with the devouring Fire? Who can endure the everlaſting Burning? Iſa. 33. 14.

Queſt. 9. If it cannot be borne, is there any way to prevent it.

Anſw. Yes, there is hope in Iſrael concerning this thing. And herein I am in better caſe than the Damned: I have the [may-be's] of Mercy, and they have not. Oh what would they give for a poſſibility of Salvation! Iſa. 1. 16, 17, 18. Waſh ye, make ye clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine Eyes; ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well, &c. Come now, let us reaſon together; and though your Sins be as Scarlet, they ſhall be as Snow. Iſa. 55. 7. Let the Wicked forſake his way, and the Unrighteous Man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have Mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly Pardon. Though my Diſeaſe be dangerous, it is not deſperate, it doth not scorn a Remedy. Oh there is Balm in Gilead, and a Phyſician there. There is yet a poſſibility, not only of recovering my primitive Glory, but to be ſet in a better caſe than ever Adam was.

Queſt. 10. How may that be?

Anſw. By going to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus. Rom. 8. 33, 34. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? It is God that juſtifyeth, Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that dyed, yea, rather that is riſen again.

Queſt. 11. But what is it to go to Chriſt?

Anſw. To go to Chriſt, is to * embrace him in his a Perſon, and b Offices, and to reſt c intirely and cloſely upon him for d Pardon of Sin, and e eternal Life; being deeply f ſenſible of the want and worth of him. Joh. 1. 12. To as many as [received] him, he gave power to become the Sons of God, even to as many as believed on his Name. John 3. 36. He that believeth [on the Son] hath Life. 1 Cor. 1. 30. And of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there Salvation in any other, &c. Acts 13. 39. And by him all that believe are [Juſtifyed from all things] from which ye could not be Juſtifyed by the Law of Moſes. Iſa. 45. 22. Look unto me and be ye ſaved. Acts 2. 37. Now when they heard this, they were pricked to the Heart, &c.

* John 1. 12.
a John 3. 36.
b 1 Cor. 1. 30.
c Acts 4. 12.
d Acts 12. 29.
e Iſa. 45. 22.
f Acts 2. 37.

Queſt. 12. But will Chriſt receive me, if I go unto him?

Anſw. Yes, yes; He is more ready to receive thee, than thou art to come to him. Luk. 15. 20. And he aroſe and came to his Father. But when he was yet a great way off, his Father ſaw him, and had compaſſion on him, and ran and fell on his Neck and kiſſed him. The Son doth but go, the Father ran: If he had but received him into the Houſe, it had been much; but he fell on his Neck, and kiſſed him. He beſpeaks him much after that rate he expreſſed himſelf to returning Ephraim. My Bowels are troubled for him: I will ſurely have Mercy on him, Jerem. 31. 22. There is not the leaſt Parentheſis in all the Pages of Free-Grace, to exclude a Soul that is ſincerely willing to come to Chriſt.

Queſt. 13. But how may it appear that he is willing to receive me?

Anſw. Make Tryal of him thy ſelf. If thou did but know his Heart to poor Sinners, you would not queſtion it. Believe what he ſaith in the Goſpel; there thou ſhalt find that he is a willing Saviour; for therein thou haſt, Firſt his moſt ſerious Invitations, Matth. 11. 28. Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy laden, Iſa. 55. 1. Ho every one that thirſteth, come ye to the Waters. Theſe ſerious Invitations are, Secondly, backed and confirmed with his Oath, Ezek. 35. 11. As I live I deſire not the Death of a Sinner. Thirdly, amplifyed with pathetical Wiſhes, Sighs and Groans, Mat. 23. 29. Oh that thou hadſt known, at leaſt, in this thy laſt day. Fourthly, Yea, delivered to them in undiſſembled Tears, Matth. 23. 37, 38. He wept over it, and ſaid, O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem. Fifthly, Nay, he hath ſhed not only Tears, but Blood, to convince thee of his willingneſs. View him in his dying Poſture upon the Croſs, ſtretching out his dying Arms to gather thee, hanging down his bleſſed Head to kiſs thee; every one of his Wounds were a Mouth opened to convince thee of the abundant willingneſs of Chriſt to receive thee.

Queſt. 14. But my Sins are dyed in grain: I am a Sinner of the blackeſt hue; will he receive and pardon ſuch an one?

Answ. Yea, Soul, if thou be willing to commit thy self to him, Isa. 1. 18. Come, now let us reason together: Though your Sins be as Scarlet, I will make them as Snow; though they be Red like Crimson, I will make them as Wooll.

Quest. 15. This is comfortable News: But may I not delay my closing with him for a while, and yet not hazard my eternal Happiness, seeing I resolve to come to him at last?

Answ. No, there must be no delays in this case, Psal. 119. 60. I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy Commandments.

Quest. 16. Why may I not defer it, at least for a little while?

Answ. For many weighty Reasons this work can bear no delays. First, the Offers of Grace are made to the present time, Heb. 3. 15. Whilst it's said to day, harden not your Heart. There may be a few more days of God's Patience, but that is unknown to thee. Secondly, your Life is immediate uncertain; how many thousands are gone into Eternity since the last Night? If you can say to Sickness when it comes, go, and come again another time, it were somewhat. Thirdly, Sin is not a thing to be dallied with. Oh! who would be willing to lye down one Night under the Guilt of all his Sins? Fourthly, Delays increase the difficulty of Conversion: Sin still roots it self deeper, habits are the more strengthned, and the Heart still more hardned. Fifthly, There be thousands now in Hell, that perish through delays: Their Consciences often urged and pressed hard upon them, and many Resolutions they had, as thou hast now; but they were never perfected by answerable Executions, and so they perished. Sixthly, Thy way of sinning now is desperate; for every moment thou art acting against clear light and conviction; and that is a dreadful way of sinning. Seventhly, There can be no solid reason for one hours delay; for thou canst not be happy too soon: And be sure of it, if ever thou come to taste the sweetness of a Christian Life, nothing will more pierce and grieve thee than this, that thou enjoyest it no sooner.

Quest. 17. Oh, but the Pleasures of Sin engage me to it, how shall I break these Cords and Snares?

Answ. That Snare may be broken by considering solemnly these five things. First, that to take pleasure in sin, is an Argument of a most deplorable and wretched state of Soul. What a Poysonful Nature doth it argue in a Toad, that is sucking in nothing but Poyson and Filth wherever he crawls! Oh what an Heart hast thou! hast thou nothing to find Pleasure in but that which makes the Spirit of Christ sad, and the Hearts of Saints ake and groan; which digged Hell, and let in endless Miseries upon the World? Secondly, think that the Misery it involves thee in is infinitely beyond the Delights it tempts thee by: It doth but delight the sensual part, and that but with a brutish Pleasure, but will torment thy immortal Soul, and that for ever. The Pleasure will quickly go off, but the Sting will remain behind. I tasted but a little Honey on the top of my Rod (said Jonathan) and I must dye, 1 Sam. 14. 43. Thirdly, nay, that's not all; but the Lord proportions Wrath according to the Pleasures Souls have had in Sin, Rev. 18. 7. How much she hath lived deliciously, so much Torment and Sorrow give unto her. Fourthly, what dost thou pay, or at least, pawn for this Pleasure? Thy Soul, thy precious Soul, is laid to stake for it; and in effect thus thou sayest, when thou deferrest the closing with Christ upon the account of enjoying the Pleasures of Sin a little longer: Here, Devil, take my Soul into thy possession and power; if I repent I will have it again; if not, it is thine for ever. Oh dear-bought Pleasures!

What is the World? A great exchange of Ware,
Wherein all Sorts and Sexes cheapning are:
The Flesh, the Devils, sit and cry, what lack ye?
When most they fawn, they most intend to rack ye.
The Wares are Cups of Joy, and Beds of Pleasure;
There's goodly choice, down weight, and flowing measure.
A Soul's the Price, but they give time to pay
Upon the Death-bed, or the Dying-day.
Hard is the Bargain, and unjust the Measure,
When as the Price so much out-lasts the Pleasure.

Quarles.

Lastly, It's thy gross mistake to think thou shalt be bereven of all Delights and Pleasures, by coming under the Government of Christ: For one of those things in which his Kingdom consists, is joy in the Holy Ghost, Rom. 14. 17. Indeed, it allows no sinful Pleasures to the subjects of it, nor do they need it; but from the day thou closest in with Christ, all thy pure, real and eternal Pleasures and Delights begin and bear date. When the Prodigal was return'd to his Father, then, saith the Text, They began to be Merry, Luke 15. 24. See Acts 8. 5,6. No, no, Soul, thou shalt want no joy, for the Scripture saith, They shall be abundantly satisfyed with the fatness of thy House, and thou shalt make them drink the Rivers of thy Pleasures; for with thee is the fountain of Light, &c. Psal. 36. 8,9.

Quest. 18. But how shall I be able to undergo the severities of Religion? There are difficult Duties to be done, and an heavy cross to be taken up: these be the things that daunt me.

Answ. If Pain and Suffering daunt thee, how is it thou art not more out of love with Sin than with Religion? For it is most certain, that the Sufferings for Christ are nothing to Hell, the just Reward and certain Issue of Sin; the pains of Mortification are nothing to the pains of Damnation. There is no compare betwixt suffering for Christ and suffering from Christ, Matth. 5. 29. If thy right Hand or Eye offend thee, cut it off, and pluck it out: It is profitable for thee that one Member suffer, than that the whole Body be cast into Hell. Secondly, Thou seest the worst, but not the best of Christ. There be Joys and Comforts in those difficult Duties and Sufferings, that thou seest not. Col. 1. 24. Who now rejoyce in my Sufferings. Jam. 1. 2. My Brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers Temptations, &c. Thirdly, Great shall be thy assistance from Christ, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things through him that strengthens me. The Spirit helps our Infirmities, takes the other end of the burden, Rom. 8. 26. What meanest thou to stand upon such terms, when it is Heaven or Hell, eternal Life or Death, that lye before thee?

Quest. 19. But to what purpose will all my Endeavours to come to Christ be? unless I be elected all will be to no purpose.

Answ. True: If thou be not elected, thou canst not obtain him, or happiness by him: But yet that is no discouragement to strive. For in thy unconverted state, thy Election or Non-Election is a secret to thee; the only way to make it sure is by striving and giving all diligence in the way of duty, 2 Pet. 1. 10. And if you ponder the Text well, you will find, that Election is not only made sure in the way of diligence and striving; but Calling is put before it, and lies in order to it. First secure thy effectual Calling, and then thy Election.

Quest. 20. But I have no strength of my own me to Christ by; and is it not absurd to urge upon Impossibilities in order to my Salvation? Ans. First, Certainly you are more absurd in leading and pretending your Impotence against an duty; for you do think you have a power to me to Christ, else how do you quiet your Conience with Promises and Solves of Conversion reafter? Secondly, Though it be true, that no ving Act can be done without the Concurrence special Grace; yet this is as true, that thy inaility to do what is above thy power doth not cuse thee from doing what in thy power to Canst thou not forbear, at least, many exterl acts of Sin? And canst thou not perform, at ast, the external acts of Duty? Oh, if thou canst t come to Christ, yet, as the Blind Man, lye in e way of Christ; do what thou canst do, and nsels and bewail thine impotency that thou canst no more. Canst thou not take thy Soul aside secret, and thus bemoan it; My poor Soul, what lt thou do? Oh what wilt become of thee, thou Christless, Covenantless, Hopeless, and, which most sad, Senseless and Bowelless? Oh! thou nst not bear the infinite Wrath of the Eternal od, whose Almighty Power will be set on work torment such as thou art, and yet thou takest no rse to prevent it. Thou seest the busy diligence all others, and how the Kingdom of Heaven fers violence by them; and art not thou as deepengaged to look to thy own Happiness, as any the World? Will Hell be more tolerable to e than others? Oh what a composition of Stuity and Sloth art thou? Thou livest after such rte, as if there were neither Fire in Hell to ment thee, nor Glory in Heaven to reward thee. God and Christ, Heaven and Hell, were but eams and Fables, thou couldst not be less afed with them. Ah, my Soul! my Soul! my cious Soul! Is it easy to perish? Wilt thou dye a Fool dyeth? Oh that Men would but do thus, hey can do no more!

And now, Soul, you see what Death is, that you e made so slight of; and what is the only way t we, poor Sons of Death, have to escape its ng. You have here seen the vanity of all your as and Pretences against Conversion, and the y to Christ prepared and cast up for you. Now , I beg you in the name of God that made you; as if I made this request upon my bended es to you, that you will now without any more ys, yield your selves to the Lord. Soul, I beh thee, haste thee into the Chamber, shut thy r, and bespeak the Lord after such manner as before thou darest to launch out into the ps again.

dreadful and glorious Majesty! thou hast Bowof Mercy, as well as Beams of Glory: I have rd the sounding of these Bowels for me this Lord, I have now heard a representation of grim and ghastly Face of Death! Ah! I have seen it as the King of Terrors, as the door Eternity, as the Parting-Point, where Sinners their eternal Farewel of all their Delights. I e seen this black Prince mounted on his Pale se, and Hell following him. I have been conced this day that if he should come and fetch y my Soul in that condition it is, Hell would ow him indeed. Lord! I have now heard of the ce of Life also, in whose bleeding side Death left and lost its envenomed Sting; so that gh it may kill, yet it cannot hurt any of his nbers. To this glorious Redeemer I have now invited; all my Pretences against him have been confuted, and my Soul in his Name assured of welcome, if I come unto him, and and cast my self upon him. And now, Lord, I come, I come, upon thy Call and Invitation; I am unfeignedly willing to avouch thee, this day to be my God, and to take thee for my Portion. Lord Jesus, I come unto thee, thy Clay, thy Creature moves towards the Fountain of Pity, look hitherto: Behold a spectacle of Misery. Bowels of Mercy, hear, behold my naked Soul, not a rag of Righteousness to cover it; behold my starving Soul, not a bit of Bread for you to Eat; ah! it has fed upon Wind and Vanity hitherto: Behold my wounded Soul bleeding at thy foot; every part, Head and Heart, Will and Affections, all wounded by Sin. O thou compassionare Samaritan, turn aside, and pour thy sovereign Blood into these bleeding Wounds, which like so many opened Mouths plead for Pity. Behold a returning submitting Rebel, willing to lay down the Weapons of Unrighteousness, and to come upon the Knee for a Pardon. Oh I am weary of the Service of Sin: I can endure it no longer. Lord Jesus, thou wast anointed to preach glad Tydings to the Meek, and to proclaim Liberty to the Captives, and the opening of the Prison to them that are bound. Come now, and knock off those Fetters of Unbelief: Oh set my Soul at liberty that it may praise thee! For so many years Satan hath cruelly tyrannized over me, Oh that this might be the acceptable Year of the Lord, and the day of the Salvation of my God! Lord, thou wast lifted up to draw Men unto thee; and indeed thou art a drawing Saviour, a lovely Jesus. I have hitherto slighted thee, but it was because I did not know thee: Mine Eyes have been held by Unbelief, when thou wast opened in the Gospel; but now I see thee as the chiefest of ten Thousands thou art the glory of Heaven, the glory of Earth, the glory of Sion; and Oh that thou wouldst be the glory of my Soul. I confess, I am not worthy that thou shouldst look upon me; I may much rather expect to be trampled under the feet of Justice, than to be embraced in thine arms of Mercy; and that thou shouldst rather shed my polluted Blood, than sprinkle thine own upon me. But Lord, what Profit is there in my Blood? Wilt thou pursue a dryed Leaf? Shall it ever be said, that the merciful King of Heaven hanged up a poor Soul that put the Rope about its own Neck, and so came self-condemningly to him for Mercy? O my Lord! I am willing to submit to any terms, be they never so hard and ungrateful to the Flesh. I am sure whatever I shall suffer in thy Service, cannot be like to what I have suffer'd, or am like to suffer by Sin; henceforth be thou my Lord and Master; thy Service is perfect Freedom; be thou my Priest and Prophet, my Wisdom and Righteousness, I resign up my self unto thee; my poor Soul with all its Faculties, my Body with all its Members, to be living Instruments of thy glory. Let Holiness to the Lord be now written upon them all; let my Tongue henceforth plead for thee, my Hands be lifted up unto thy Testimonies, my Feet walk in thy ways. Oh let all my Affections, as willing Servants, wait upon thee, and be active for thee. Whatever I am, let me be for thee; whatever I have, let it be thine; whatever I can do, let me do for thee; whatever I can suffer, let me suffer for thee. O that I might say before I go hence, My Beloved is mine, and I am his! O that what I have begged on Earth, might be ratifyed in Heaven! My Spirit within me saith, Amen. Lord Jesus, say thou, Amen.

Seaman's Companion:

WHEREIN

The Myſteries of Providence relating to Seamen, are opened their Sins and Dangers diſcovered; their Duties preſſed and their ſeveral Troubles and Burdens relieved: In Si Practical and Suitable Sermons.

To all Maſters, Mariners and Seamen, eſpecially ſuch as belong to the Po of Dartmouth, and the adjacent Parts.

SIRS,

YOur ready Acceptation of my former Labours for you, hath encouraged this ſecond and laſt endeavour of mine this way to ſerve you. I have for many Years been convinced of the great uſe and need you have of the following Diſcourſes: But the Motives that quickned me to their Publication at this time, were eſpecially theſe two.

Firſt, The Hand of the Lord hath gone forth with Terror againſt you, this Winter, many of your Companions are gone down to the bottom. Such a doleful account of Shipwracks from every Coaſt, and ſuch ſad Lamentations as have been heard in almoſt every Maritime Town, cannot but deeply affect every Heart with Sorrow and Compaſſion, and hath engaged me in this Service for the Remnant that is left.

Secondly, The ſeaſonable and prudent care His Majeſty hath at this time manifeſted for the Regulation and preſervation of your Newland Trade, and encouragement of your honeſt Induſtry therein, hath alſo provoked me to haſten this Deſign, for the Regulation of your Lives and Manners, without which, all external means will ſignify but little to your true Proſperity.

This little Manual contains the ſum of your Duty in the ſeveral parts of your Employments, and faithfully diſcovers the Temptations and Dangers attending you in them all. Upon which Conſideration it is fitly intituled, The Seaman's Companion.

As God hath caſt my Lot among you, ſo he hath inclined my Heart ſtudiouſly to promote your Welfare. I have been by long Obſervation convinced, that one principal cauſe of your Miſcarriages, is the neglect of God in your Outſets. Did you pray more, you might expect to proſper better. Indeed, if that Epicurean Doctrine were true, That God concerns not himſelf about the Affairs of this lower World, but leaves all things to be ſwayed by the Power of Natural Cauſ your neglect of Prayer might be more excuſable: B whilſt Succeſſes and Diſappointments depend upon pleaſure, it cannot but be the moſt direct Courſe you c ſteer to Ruin all, to forget and neglect God in your E terpriſes. To cure this Evil, and prevent the ma fold Miſchiefs that follow it, the First Sermon is ſigned. And if the Lord ſhall bleſs it to your C viction and Reformation, I may then comfortably the Words of Moſes to you, Deut. 33. 18. Rejo Zebulun in thy going out.

You often hear the terrible Voice of God in t Storms; and are at your Wit's end; not knowing wh courſe to take, nor which way to turn for Safety Comfort: And yet, how ſoon are all thoſe Impreſſi worn off? And thoſe Mercies which (whilſt new) w ſo affecting; after a few days become ſtale and co mon. I have therefore in the Second Sermon labo ed not only to direct and ſupport you in thoſe ſtra but have alſo endeavoured to fix the Senſe of th Providences upon your Hearts, and inſtruct you how make due Improvements of them, by anſwering the veral aims and deſigns of them.

It hath been much upon my Heart, to what and many Temptations to Sin you are expoſed in Fore Countries, where lawful Remedies are abſent, allur Objects preſent, and Temptations exceedingly ſtreng ned upon you, by hopes of Secrecy and Concealme And indeed for a Man, whoſe Heart is not thorou ſeaſoned with Religion, and awed by the fear of G to converſe in ſuch Places, and with ſuch Comp and not be polluted with their Sins, is upon the ma as great a Miracle, as for the three Children to c out of the Fiery Furnace, without an Hair ſinged the ſmell of Fire upon their Garments. I have th fore prepared for you the beſt Preſervative from Temptations in the Third Sermon, which the ake an effectual Antidote to your Souls against the orruptions that are in the World through Lust.

I have frequently observed the mischievous Influence at Success and Prosperity have had upon some of . How the God of your Mercies hath been forgot- n, and his Mercies made instruments of Sin against m. How apt are Men to ascribe all to their own isdom, Care and Industry, as if God had no hand is. The Fourth Sermon therefore leads up your oughts to the Fountain of all your Good, and drops my very seasonable and necessary Cautions upon you, keep you humble and thankful under Prosperity.

And because Men will not own God in their Success, sacrifice to their own Net: God often teaches them evil of it by sad Losses and Disappointments. Yea, sappointments sometimes follow the best of Men, and in the most just and honest Employments. To ion the former sort, and support the latter, in h a case, I recommend the Fifth Sermon to your ous consideration, not doubting, if the Blessing of go forth with it, but it may prove a very seasonable useful discourse to you in that condition.

And lastly, Because it is so common for Seamen to forget the many Mercies they have received in a Voyage, when it is over, and God hath brought them to the Havens of Desire, and among their Relations, I have in the last Sermon instructed them in their duty, and laboured to work in such a Sense of Mercies upon their Hearts, as may engage them to a due and thankful acknowledgment of God in all.

You see by this brief account, how honest the design is in which I have engaged for you. But I am sensible, that the management is very defective, it being dispatched in haste, and when my hands were filled with other work, and my body clogged with many Infirmities. But such as it is, I heartily devote it to the special Service of your Souls, and remain

Yours,

SERMON I.

ACTS XXI, 5, 6.

And we kneeled down on the Shore, and prayed; and when we had taken our leave one another, we took Ship, and they returned home again.

THIS Scripture gives us an account of the manner of Paul's embarking at Tyre, in his Voyage for Jeruſalem; and therein an excellent Pattern for all that go down into the Seas, to do buſineſs in the great Waters. It is true, his buſineſs in that Voyage, was not to get an Eſtate, but to witneſs to the Truths of Jeſus Chriſt, with the hazard of his Life. Many diſcouragements he met with in this Voyage, and not the leaſt at Tyre, where he met with certain Diſciples that ſaid to him by the Spirit, That he ſhould not go to Jeruſalem, though, in that they followed their own Spirit; but he is not to be diſſuaded: Like that Noble Roman, and upon a more noble Account, he judged it neceſſary to go, but not to live. The Diſciples ſeeing his unalterable Reſolution, expreſs their Affections to him at parting, by bringing him to the Ship, and that with their whole Families, Wives and Children, Verſe 5. therein giving him the laſt mark of their dear Reſpects.

Neceſſe eſt ut eam, non ut vivam Cæſar.

In this Farewel, their Chriſtian Affections are mutually manifeſted by two ſorts of Actions,

Viz. { Sacred and Civil } in { Prayers and Salutations. }

1. Prayers; the beſt Office one Chriſtian can do for another. As Prayer is the beſt Preface, ſo certainly it is the beſt Cloſe to any Buſineſs or Enjoyment. In which Prayer we may note the Place, Poſture, and matter or ſcope.

Firſt, The Place, it was upon the Shore, the parting Place near to which the Ship rode, waiting for Paul: And this was no unuſual thing among them in thoſe days. Tertullian tells us, They ſent their Prayers to Heaven from every Shore; and elſewhere he calls them Orationes littorales, Shore-Prayers. So cuſtomary it was for holy Men in thoſe days, to be taken into the Ship or Boat from their Knees, not from the Tavern or Ale-houſe.

Per omne littus preces ad cælum mittunt. Tertul. de Jejun.

Secondly, The Poſture, they kneeled down. As all Places, ſo all Poſtures have been uſed in Prayer. Some have uſed one Poſture, and ſome another; but this is the common and ordinary Poſture, Knees when they can (as an Ingenious Author ſpeaks) then they muſt be bowed.

Thirdly, The matter and ſcope of the Prayer, which though it be not expreſſed, yet may with great probability be argued from the place and occaſion, to be as Eraſmus ſpeaks, Pro faustâ Navigatione, for a proſperous Voyage, and Divine Protection. He knew to what, and how many hazards of Life they are hourly expoſed, that bore ſo near unto Death, as Mariners and Paſſengers at Sea do; and therefore would not commit himſelf to the Sea, till firſt he had ſolemnly committed himſelf to God, whoſe Voice the Winds and Seas obey. Nor was he willing to take his leave of his dear Friends, until he had poured out his Heart to God with them, and for them, whoſe Faces he might never ſee again in this World, and engaged their Prayers alſo for him.

2. As their Affections were mutually manifeſted by this Sacred Action, Prayer; ſo by Civil or too, affectionate Embraces and Salutations. When we had taken our leave of one another. Salutations were uſed among the Jews, both at their meeting and parting. This latter conſiſted in Words and Geſtures; the uſual Words were, The Lord be with you, Ruth 2. 4. Peace be unto thee. Grace be with you, &c. The Geſtures were kiſſing each other. Theſe were Kiſſes which a Cato might give, and a Veſtal receive. In both theſe, viz. their Prayers for, and Salutations of each other, they manifeſted their Chriſtian Affections mutually, but eſpecially by their Prayers at parting. Hence note, Doctr. Thoſe that undertake Voyages by Sea, need not only to pray earneſtly themſelves, but to engage the Prayers of other Chriſtians for them.

They that part praying, may hope to meet again rejoycing; and thoſe deſigns which are prefaced with Prayer, cannot winde up without Bleſſing. There are two ſorts of Prayer, ſtated and occaſional.

Stated Prayer is our converſing with God, publickly, privately or ſecretly, at the conſtant ſeaſons allotted for it, in the returns of every day.

occasional, is the Christian Address to God at any time upon extraordinary emergencies, and calls of Providence; or, when we undertake any solemn Business, (and what more solemn than this?) and then the chief matter and scope of Prayer is to be suited to the present occasion, and design in hand; of this sort is that I am here to speak. Now in opening the Point, I will shew, (1.) What those special Mercies are that Seamen should pray for, when they are to undertake a Voyage.

(2.) What influence Prayer hath upon those Mercies, and how it must be qualifyed for that end.

(3.) What aid and assistance the Prayers of other Christians may contribute to the procurement of them.

And then make Application of all.

(1.) We will inform the Seamen, what those special Mercies are, he should earnestly pray for, when he undertakes a Voyage.

And amongst those Mercies to be earnestly requested of God by him; the first and principal is, The Pardon of Sin. A Mercy which must make a part of every Prayer; and at this time to be earnestly sued for. Guilt is that Jonah in the Ship for whose sake Storms, Shipwracks, and Ruin pursue it. It is said, Psal. 148. 8. That the stormy Winds fulfil God's Word. If the Word there spoken of, be the Word of God's threatning against Sin, as some expound it, then the stormy Winds, and lofty Waves, are God's Serjeants sent out with Commission to arrest Sinners upon the Sea, his Water-Bailiffs to execute the Threatnings of God upon them in the great Deeps. Hence those Expressions of Scripture, Numb. 32. 23. Be sure your Sin will find you out; and Gen. 4. 7. Sin lyeth at the Door. In both which places, the Spirit of God compares a Man's Guilt to a Blood-hound, that pursues and follows upon the Scent wherever a Man goes. And indeed our Sins are called Debts, Matth. 6. 12. Not that we owe them to God, or ought to sin against him; but metonimically, because as pecuniary Debts oblige him to suffer that hath not wherewith to pay, and expose him to the danger of Serjeants and Bayliffs wherever he shall be found; so do our Sins in reference to God, who hath reckoned with many thousands of Sinners upon the Sea, there arrested them by his Winds and Waves which he sent out after them, and laid their Bodies in the bottom of the Sea, and their Souls in the bottom of Hell. O, that is a dismal Storm, that is sent after a Man, to drive Soul and Body to destruction! With what Heart or Courage can that Man go down into the Deeps, and expose himself among the raging Waves and roaring Winds, that knows God hath a Controversy with him; and for ought he knows, the next Storm may be sent to hurry him to the Judgment-Seat of the great and terrible God? Certainly, Friends, it is your great concern to get a Pardon, and be at peace with God; a thing so indispensable, that you cannot have less; and so comprehensive, that you cannot desire more. If Sin be pardoned you are safe, you need fear no Storms within, whatever you find without: But woe to him that finds at once a raging Sea, and a roaring Conscience; Trouble without, and Terror within; Ship and Hope sinking together. You are privy to all the Evils and Wickedness of your Hearts and Lives. You know what treasures of Guilt you have been heaping up all your days; and think you when distresses and extremities come upon you, Conscience will be as quiet and still, as it is now? No, no, Guilt will fly in your Faces then, and stop your Mouths. O therefore humble your selves at the feet of God for all your Iniquities, apply your selves to the Blood of Sprinkling, pray, and plead with God for remission of sin, without which you are in a woeful case to adventure your selves at Sea, to those imminent perils of Life.

(2.) Another Mercy you are earnestly to pray for is, That the presence of God may go with you, I mean not his general presence, which fills the World; that will be with you, whether you pray for it or no; but his gracious special presence, which was that Moses so earnestly sued for in Exod. 33. 15. If thy presence go not with me, carry us not hence. He and the People were now in a waste howling Wilderness, but bound for Canaan, that Earthly Paradise; yet you see, he chuses rather to be in a Wilderness with God, than in a Canaan without him: And no wonder, for this gracious presence of God, as to comfort, is all that a gracious Soul hath, or desires to have in this World; and as to security and protection from Dangers, it is the only Asylum, Sanctuary and Refuge in the day of Trouble. If the presence God be graciously with us, it will guard the Heart against Terror in the most imminent distress, as you see, Psal. 23. 4. Yea, though I walk through the Valley of the shadow of Death (that is, through the most apparent and imminent dangers of Death) yet will I fear no Evil, for thou art with me. And indeed there is no room for fear; for with whomsoever God is in gracious and special manner present, these three matchless Mercies are secured to that Man.

First, That God's special Providence shall watch over him in all dangers: Psal. 91. 1, & 4. He shall abide under the Shadow of the Almighty; he shall cover thee with his Feathers, and under his Wings shalt thou trust. As the Hen gathers her Brood under her Wings, not only to cherish, but to defend them from all danger: So God takes his People under his Providential Wings for their security.

Secondly, He appoints for them a Guard of Angels, whose office is to watch over and minister to them in all their straits. So we read, Psal. 91. 11. He shall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. Many invisible services they do for us: Luther tells us the Angels have two Offices, Superius canere, & inferius vigilare: To sing above, and watch below. These are as a Life-guard to that Man with whom the Lord is.

Thirdly, He readily hears their cries in a day of distress, and is with them to save and deliver them. So Vers. 15. He shall call upon me and I will answer him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him, and honour him. O, what a matchless Mercy is this! How many times, when poor Seamen have seen Death apparently before their Eyes, have they cryed, Mercy! Mercy! how ordinary is it for their Eyes (on such occasions) to add Salt-water, where alas, there was too much before! But now to have God with you in such an hour of Straits, to hear, support, and deliver you; O you cannot estimate the worth of such a Mercy. Pray therefore, for it is a Mercy indispensably necessary for you; and say to him, as Moses, Lord if thy presence may not go with us, carry us not hence.

(3.) A third Mercy you are specially concerned to beg of God, is, That you may be kept from the temptations to sin, you will meet with, when you are abroad in the World. The whole World lies in wickedneſs, 1 John 5. 19. Every Place, every Employment, every Company hath its Snares and Temptations attending it. And you know you have corrupt natures, as much diſpoſed to cloſe with Temptations, as Tinder is to catch Fire: So that unleſs the preventing, reſtraining and mortifying Grace of God be with you, they will but touch and take. If there were no Devil to tempt you externally; yet ſuch a corrupt Heart meeting with a ſuitable temptation and occaſion, is enough to overcome you. Jam. 1. 14, Every Man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own Luſts and enticed. Alas, you know not what Hearts you have till Temptations prove them; and what comfort can you take in the Succeſs and Proſperity of your Affairs, be it never ſo great, if you return with Conſciences polluted and wounded with Sin. He that brings home a pack of fine Cloaths, infected with the Plague, hath no ſuch great Bargain of it, how cheap ſoever he purchaſed them. O therefore beg earneſtly of God, you may be kept from Sin, pray that you be not led into temptation.

(4.) Pray for Divine Protection in all the dangers and hazards to which you ſhall be expoſed. You know not how ſoon your Life and Eſtate ſhall be in jeopardy. This Night you may ſleep quietly in your Cabbin, to morrow you may be tugging at the Pump, and the next Night take up your Lodging upon a cold Rock. How ſmartly doth the Apoſtle James reprehend the ſecurity of Trading Perſons. Jam. 4. 13, 14. Go to now ye that ſay, to day or to morrow we will go to ſuch a City, and continue there a Year, and buy and ſell, and get Gain; whereas you know not what ſhall be on the morrow. For what is your Life? It is even a Vapour, that appears for a little time, and then vaniſheth away. How eaſily can God daſh all your deſigns, and hopeful Projects in one hour! You know you are every moment as near Death, as you are near the Water, which is but a remove of one or two Inches. How poor a Defence is the ſtrongeſt Ship againſt the lofty Seas, and lurking Rocks! How innumerable are the accidents and contingencies in a Voyage, which the moſt skilful Navigator cannot foreſee or prevent!

Rector in incerto eſt, nec quid fugiatve, petatve
Invenit: Ambignis ars ſtupet ipſa malis. Ovid.

They are, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, at their Wits end, Pſal. 107. 26. But O how ſecure and ſafe, amidſt all dangers, is that Man whom the Lord takes into his ſpecial Protection? And he will not ſhut out thoſe that ſincerely commit themſelves to him: The Winds and Seas obey his Voice; he can with a Word turn the Storm into a Calm, Pſal. 107. 29. Or order means for your Preſervation, when you ſeem loſt to the Eye of Senſe and Reaſon. I have read of a Young Man, that being in a great Storm at Sea, was obſerved to be very chearful, when all the reſt were as dead Men; and being asked the reaſon of his chearfulneſs, in a caſe of ſo much danger, he replyed, Truly I have no cauſe to fear, for the Pilot of the Ship is my Father. O, it is an unſpeakable comfort when a Man hath committed himſelf into the hands of God, as a Father, and truſted him over all.

(5.) Pray for Counſel and Direction in all your Affairs and Undertakements, and lean not to your own underſtandings. I know, O Lord, (ſaith the Prophet) that the way of Man is not in himſelf; neither is it in him that walks to direct his own ſteps, Jer. 10. 23. Undertake nothing without asking God's leave, and counſel. How many that have ſtronger heads than you, have miſerably ruined themſelves and their deſigns, by truſting to their own prudence? A Man's Heart (ſaith Solomon) deviſeth his way; but the Lord directeth his Steps. Prov. 16. 9. We muſt ſtill reſerve the Power of God's Providence (ſaith one) God would not have us too carnally confident. The Lord can blaſte your enterprize, though managed with never ſo much wiſdom and contrivance. You are not only to look to God as the Author of Succeſs; but as the Director and Guider of the Action. It is by his Conduct and Bleſſing, that all things come to paſs. If your deſigns ſucceed not, you are preſently ready to aſcribe it to ill fortune, and ſay, you had bad luck; when indeed you ruined it your ſelves in the firſt moulding of it by undertaking of it without asking counſel of God. In all thy ways acknowledge him, Prov. 3. 4.

Manton on Jude. It is robbery to uſe Goods without the Owners leave. We forget to bid our ſelves good ſpeed, when we do not acknowledge God's Dominion. This is but a piece of Religious Manners.

(6.) Pray for ſucceſs upon your lawful Employments and Deſigns, and own it to be from the Lord. You have an excellent pattern in Abraham's Servant. Gen. 24. 12. O Lord God of Abraham thy Servant, ſend me good ſpeed this day. He reverences the ſoveraignty of Providence, and acknowledges Succeſs to be a Flower of the Imperial Crown of Heaven, and the Bridle that God hath upon the reaſonable Creature, to diſpoſe of the Succeſs of Humane Affairs. I look on that Buſineſs or Deſign in a fair and hopeful way to proſper, wherein we have engaged God to be with us, by asking his counſel, and recommending the Succeſs to his Bleſſing. Theſe are the Mercies you are to pray for.

Secondly, Next I will ſhew you what influence Prayer hath into thoſe Mercies you are to pray for; and it hath much every way: To be ſhort, it hath a threefold influence into them.

(1.) It is a proper and effectual means to obtain and procure them. God will have every thing fetched out by Prayer, Ezek. 36. 37. I will yet for this be enquired of by the Houſe of Iſrael, to do it for them. God gives not our Mercies for our Prayers, nor will he give them without our Prayers. This is the ſtated method in which our Mercies are conveyed to us; and therein the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God are eminently diſcovered. His Wiſdom in making us to ſee the Author of every Mercy in the way of receiving it, and ſecuring his own glory in the diſpenſing of every Mercy: His Goodneſs to us, in ſweetning every Mercy this way to us, and raiſing its value in our eſtimation. Prayer coming between our wants and ſupplies is a ſingular means to raiſe the Price of Mercies with us, and engage us to due improvements of them. So that it is an idle pretence for any to ſay, God knows our wants, whether we pray or no; and if Mercies be decreed for us, we ſhall have them, though we ask them not; for though God knows our wants, yet he will have us know them too, and ſenſibly to feel the need of Mercy. And though Prayer be altogether needleſs to his Information, yet it is very neceſſary to teſtify our ſubmiſſion: And though it is true, if God have decreed Mercy for us, we ſhall have it; yet it is not true, that therefore we need not to pray for it: For Decrees exclude not the ſecond Means, nor render the Creatures duty unneceſſary. I know the though

I think, towards you, ſaith the Lord, thoughts of Peace, and not of Evil, to give you an expected end; then ſhall you call upon me, and you ſhall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you, Jer. 29. 11, 12. So that it is plain, Mercies muſt be expected in the way of Prayer, that being God's appointed way and ſtated method in the diſpenſing of them.

(2.) As Prayer hath an influence into the procuring of our Mercies, ſo it hath a ſingular Influence into the ſweetning of them: No Mercies ſo ſweet as thoſe that are received upon the Knee. There is a twofold ſweetneſs Men taſte in their Earthly Enjoyments: One is natural, and that thoſe that never eye God in them, may reliſh as much as others; the other is ſpiritual, and ſupernatural, reſulting from the conſideration of the way in which, and the end for which they are given. And I am confident, ſuch is the refreſhing ſweetneſs of Mercies coming in the way of Prayer, that they derive a thouſand times more ſweetneſs from the Channel, through which they come, than they have in their own natures. So that it was rightly obſerved by him that ſaid, A Believer taſtes more ſweetneſs in the common Bread he eats at his own Table, than another can do in the Conſecrated Bread he eats at the Lord's Table. And then

(3.) Prayer hath a ſanctifying influence upon all our Enjoyments; and therefore no wonder it makes them ſo ſweet. What you obtain this way, you obtain with a Bleſſing, and that is the ſweeteſt and beſt part of any Enjoyment. So you find, 1 Tim. 4. 5. every Creature is ſanctifyed by the Word of God and Prayer. One Mercy of this kind is better than ten Thouſand promiſcuouſly diſpenſed in the way of common Providence. By theſe no Man knows Love or Hatred; but theſe ſurely come from God's love to us, and end in the increaſe of our love to him. So that you ſee Prayer hath a manifold influence upon our Mercies. But it is not any kind of Prayer that doth thus procure, ſweeten and ſanctify our Mercies to us. Some Mens Prayers rather obſtruct than farther their Mercies; but if it be the fervent Prayer of a righteous Man, directed by the rule of the Word, to the Glory of God; we may ſay of ſuch Prayer as David ſaid of Saul's Sword, and Jonathan's Bow, it never returns empty.

Si bonum petant boni, bene ad bonum.

Thirdly, I ſhall ſhew you what aid and aſſiſtance the Prayers of others may give to the procurement of the Mercies we deſire: For you ſee this Inſtance in the Text, it was the united Joint-Prayers of the Diſciples with Paul, that on this occaſion was judged neceſſary.

Now conſidering Prayer according to its uſe, and end, as a means of obtaining Mercy from the Lord; the more diſpoſed, apt, and vigorous the Means are, the more ſurely and eaſily the Mercies are obtained which we pray for. There may be much zeal, fervency and ſtrength in the Prayer of a ſingle Saint, Jacob alone may wreſtle with God, and as a Prince prevail; but much more in the joint united force of many Jacobs. Vis unita fortior: If one man do much, many can do more. O what may not a bleſſed combination of holy and humble Spirits obtain from the Lord? If one Man's Heart be dead and out of tune, another's may be lively and full of Affection. Beſides, God delights in thoſe Acts of Mercy moſt, by which many are refreſhed and comforted; and where there is a common Stock of Prayers going, like a common Adventure in one Ship, there the return of Prayer, like the return of ſuch a Ship, makes many glad Hearts. Certainly it is of great advantage for the People of God, to engage as many as they can to pray for them. When Daniel was to obtain that ſecret from the God of Heaven, Dan. 1. 17, 18. he makes uſe of his three Friends to improve their acquaintance with God, and intereſt in God for him upon that occaſion. Then Daniel went to his Houſe, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah his Companions; that they would deſire Mercies of the God of Heaven concerning this Secret. Some Chriſtians have greater intimacies with God than others, they are ſpecial Favourites in the Court of Heaven; and what an advantage it is to be upon their Hearts, when they are with God, judge ye. I remember St. Bernard having ſpoken of the due frames and tempers that Chriſtians ſhould ſtrive to work their Hearts into, when they are engaged in this work of Prayer, concludes with this requeſt, Et quum talis fueris, memento mei. And when thy Heart (ſaith he) is in this temper, then remember me. O, it is a ſingular Mercy to be intereſted in their Prayers that are in ſpecial favour with God. It is true, Jeſus Chriſt is the great Favourite, for whoſe ſake all Prayers are heard; and without his Interceſſion, the Interceſſions of an Abraham, a Moſes, a Jacob, ſignify nothing; but in the virtue of his Interceſſion, the Interceſſion of others may be ſingularly advantageous to us. Job's Friends were good Men, but yet they muſt go to Job, and get his Prayers for them, before God would be intreated for them, Job 42. 8.

And indeed, upon the contrary, it is a ſad ſign that God deſigns not to give us that Mercy which he takes off our own heart, or the hearts of others from praying for. When he ſaith, Pray not for ſuch a Man, or for ſuch a Mercy for him, the caſe then becomes hopeleſs, the Mercy is ſet, and there is no moving it, Jer. 14. 11. But if once a Spirit of Prayer be poured upon you, and upon others too, in your behalf, you may look upon the Mercy as even at the door, and count it as good as if it were in your hand. And thus you ſee what the Mercies are you ſhould pray for, what influence Prayer hath upon them, and what aſſiſtance the Prayers of other Chriſtians may contribute to the obtaining of them; that ſo your Hearts may be excited and encouraged, not only to pray for your ſelves, but to engage as many as you can, to ſeek the Lord for you, as you ſee Paul here did, when he was undertaking his dangerous Voyage. In the next place I ſhall apply it.

Uſe. 1. And firſt, this may ſerve ſharply to reprove the generality of our Seamen, who mind every thing neceſſary to their Voyage, except Prayer, the principal thing; who go out in Voyages without asking God's Leave or Bleſſing. And here three ſorts of Perſons fall under conviction, and juſt Rebuke.

Firſt, Such as do but mock God, and delude themſelves by heartleſs, dead and empty Formalities. Some there be that dare not altogether ſlight and neglect Prayers, but pro forma, they will do ſomething themſelves; and it may be as a complement, or at moſt, as a cuſtomary thing, will deſire the Prayers of others: But alas! There is no heartineſs or ſincerity in theſe things. They are no way affected with the ſenſe of their own Wants, Sins or Dangers; they never underſtood the Uſe, Nature or End of Prayer. We blame the blinde Papiſts, and that juſtly, for their blinde Devotions, who reckon their Prayers by number, and not by weight; and truly, there is but little difference betwixt theirs, and ſome of our Devotions. It is St. Auguſtine's 's Counſel, Do you learn to have in your Hearts what every one hath in his Lips. O that you would once learn to be in earneſt with God, to pray as Men that underſtand with whom you have to do; and what great things you have to tranſact with God! Ah my Friends, you may believe it, that if ever you had felt the weight of ſin upon your Conſciences, and had had ſuch ſick days and nights for it, as ſome have had, you would not ask a Pardon ſo coldly and indifferently, as you do. If you did but know the benefit of God's Preſence with you in troubles, how ſweet it is; or could but apprehend how terrible a thing it is to be left of God (as Saul was) in a day of Diſtreſs, you would weep and make ſupplication for his gracious Preſence to go forth with you, and would ſay with Moſes, If thy Preſence may not go with me, then carry me not hence. But alas, theſe things appear not to you in their reality and importance. And hence is all that wretched formality and deadneſs of Spirit.

Diſcite habere in corde, quod omnes homo habet in lingua. Aug. in Pſ. 32.

Secondly, It rebukes much more ſuch as wholly ſlight and neglect Prayer, as a uſeleſs and vain thing; who undertake deſigns without Prayer, not at all acknowledging God in any of their ways. And it is juſtly to be ſuſpected, there are multitudes of ſuch practical Atheiſts among Sea-men, as well as other orders of Men. Poor Men! My Heart mourneth over you; you are certainly a forlorn ſort of Men, who live without God in the World.

Qui neſcit orare, deſcat Navigare.

It was anciently ſaid, He that would learn to pray, let him go to Sea: But now how long may a Man be at Sea, before he hear a praying Seaman? Let your Families, from which you part, witneſs what conſcience you have made to ſeek God (as you have been here directed) before your out-ſet: It is ſaid, Deut. 22. 18. to the Tribe of Seamen, Rejoyce Zebulun in thy goings out; but in this caſe we may invert the Words, and ſay, Mourn, O ye Seamen, for your going out. How deplorable a caſe is this? Let your Cabbins witneſs what Conſcience you make of the duty of Prayer? You can talk and ſleep there, but when did you pray there? You there hear the voice of God in the roaring Seas; but when did God hear your voice in Prayer? You ſee the wonders of God in the Deeps, wonders of Creation, and wonders of Preſervation, but mean time you your ſelves are the greateſt wonders that are to be ſeen in the Sea. Men immediately depending upon God for their Lives, Liberties, and Eſtates, every moment, and not once owning or acknowledging him by Prayer.

Ἀλλὰ πῶς χρὴ λέγειν, Cui reſpondet Socrates. Ὅτι ἐὰν Θεὸς ἐθέλῃ. Plato in Timeo.

The very Heathens will riſe up in judgment againſt you, and condemn you. I remember Plato brings in Alcibiades asking Socrates, How he ought to expreſs his Reſolutions and Purpoſes; to whom he thus anſwereth, Before every Undertakement thou muſt ſay, If God will. And we know the Eaſtern Nations would undertake nothing of moment, without firſt acknowledging God by Prayer. The Greeks σὺν Θεῷ, by the leave or bleſſing of God is known to all. The Turks will condemn ſuch as you are, for they fail not to pray five times a day, how urgent ſoever their Buſineſs be. The blinde and ſuperſtitious Papiſts will condemn you, with whom it is a Proverb, Maſs and Meat hinder no Man. O, whither will you turn? And, who ſhall comfort you, when trouble comes upon you? Wonder not at croſſes and diſappointments in your buſineſs? how can you expect it ſhould be otherwiſe, as long as God is neglected, yea, diſowned? Say not, this is the fruit of ill-luck, but of your prophane neglects. If the Succeſs of all your buſineſs depends upon God, (as none but Atheiſts dare deny) then certainly the directeſt and readieſt courſe a Man can take to deſtroy all, is to diſengage God by a ſinful neglect of him. The moſt compendious way to ruin, it to forget God, and caſt off Prayer. Pour out thy fury (ſaith the Prophet) upon the Heathen that know thee not, and upon the Families that call not upon thy name, Jer. 10. 25. Will nothing leſs than extremity make you cry to God? Wonder not then, if God bring you into that extremity which your profaneneſs makes neceſſary for your awakening.

Thirdly and laſtly, How much ſadder, and more deplorable is the caſe of thoſe that not only neglect to call upon the Name of God by Prayer, but do alſo wound his Name through and through by their curſed Oaths and Blaſphemies, who inſtead of going on Board praying, as Paul here did, go on board curſing, ſwearing and blaſpheming his great and dreadful Name; not going from their bended Knees, but drunken Ale-Benches to the Ship.

O the admirable Patience of God! O the Power of his long-ſuffering! That ever that Ship ſhould ſwim one hour above Water, that carries ſuch loads of Sin and Guilt within it. It is noted in Gen. 4. 26. in the days of Seth, That then Men began to call upon the Name of the Lord. Some tranſlate the word Invocation, or Prayer, and ſome חלל prophanation; then began prophaneneſs in calling upon the Name of the Lord. In a mournful feeling of this diſhonour done to God by it Seth calls the Son that was born to him in thoſe times, Enoſh, or Sorrowful. Sure I am, however the word be here to be tranſlated, there is a vile Generation in our days, that inſtead of calling upon the Name of the Lord by Prayer, do call upon it prophanely, rending and tearing that great and terrible Name with the language of Hell. Poor Man! With what hope or encouragement can thoſe Lips of thine, in the day of thy extremity, cry Mercy! Mercy! that have ſtruck through the ſacred Name of God ſo many times with Blaſphemy? O that you would lay it to Heart: O that this day God would ſet your ſins in order before you.

Is this a beginning that promiſes a comfortable Iſſue? Do you thus prepare your ſelves to meet Death and Danger? O my Soul, come not thou into their ſecrets. O let God rather ſtrike me perfectly Dead whilſt I live, than afflict my Soul through my Ears with theſe dreadful Dialects of the damned.

Uſe 2. In the next place this point is exceeding uſeful by way of Exhortation, to perſuade all Men, and particularly Seamen, to be Men of Prayer; to imitate that noble Pattern in the Text, and no longer to live in the neglect of a duty ſo neceſſary, ſo ſweet, and ſo beneficial to them, as the duty of Prayer is. O that you did but know the excellency of this duty! How would you give your ſelves unto Prayer! As David ſpeaks, Pſal. 109. 4. Now to perſuade you to be praying Men, and no longer to live in the neglect of ſo excellent a duty, I will offer theſe Motives to your conſideration.

Motive 1. God hath ſtiled himſelf a God hearing Prayer. For your encouragement to this Duty, he hath aſſumed this title to himſelf, Pſal. 65. 2. thou that heareſt Prayer, unto thee ſhall all Fleſh come.

You cry not as the Heathens do, to Stocks and Stones, that cannot help or hear them that seek to them; but to the living and true God, by whom never did any upright Soul lose a Prayer. And to come home to your case more fully, he is a God that hears the Prayers of poor distressed Men upon the Seas, when all hope and humane help hath utterly failed them. So you read in Psal. 107. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. They that go down into the Sea in Ships, that do business in great Waters; these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the Deep: for he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy Wind which lifteth up the Waves thereof. They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the Depths; their Soul is melted, because of Trouble. They reel to and fro and stagger like a Drunken Man, and are at their Wit's end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their Trouble, and he bringeth them out of their Distress. So that what the Psalmist elsewhere speaks of the mystical Depths of trouble, is true here, even in a proper literal sense. Out of the Depths have I cryed unto thee, O Lord, hear my Voice, Psal. 130. 1, 2. Many a Prayer hath been heard, and miraculously answered upon the Sea. There have Men been convinced and fully satisfyed, that it is not in vain to cry to the Lord. So evident and clear have been the Appearances of God at the cry of the poor distressed Creatures, that they have sensibly and thankfully acknowledged him according to his name, The hope of the ends of the Earth, and the confidence of them that are afar off upon the Sea, Psal. 65. 5. Who is there among you, that hath not either heard of, or himself been an Example, and Instance of this Truth? I might here insert many famous Examples to confirm it, but the case is too plain to need them, and it would be too great a digression.

Motive 2. Prayer is certainly the best relief to the Distressed. We may say of it, as David said of the Sword of Goliah; give me that, for there is none like it. You that are Seamen, know what the use of the Pump is, when the Waters leak into your Ship, and of what use the Scupper-holes are to you, when Waves break and dash over your Decks: Why of the same use is Prayer, when Sorrow leaks into your Hearts, and Distresses are ready to overwhelm your Souls. This gives a vent to that which else would quickly sink you. Your Hearts shall live that seek the Lord, Psal. 69. 32. Prayer will buoy up your fainting Spirits; it will sensibly ease an oppressed Heart. No fear of fainting, while a Man continues praying. Luther was wont to call Prayers the Leeches of his Cares and Troubles. And but if Troubles come in upon a Man every way, and he have no vent, no outlet for them; when the ordinary vents of Reason, Courage and Resolution, are all choaked (as sometimes they are) and there is no Succour or Relief coming in from Heaven: What a wretched forlorn condition is such a poor Creature in? O therefore get acquaintance with this excellent Duty.

Motive 3. All secondary means of deliverance and comfort, necessarily depend upon the will and pleasure of God, and signify nothing without him. What the Psalmist saith of an Horse, I may say of a Ship, Psal. 33. 17. That it is a vain thing for safety. Alas! What a poor Defence is it against those Giant-like Waves of the Sea? And that Men (especially Seamen) may be convinced of this, God hath many times caused those stately and strong built Ships to perish, and be dashed all to pieces, and preserved those that were not safe in them, upon a Plank or broken piece of the Ship, Acts 27. 44. which have carried them more safely to the Shore than it could do. And will you not yet see that means signify nothing without God, and that your dependance upon him is necessary in every condition, and the acknowledgment thereof so too? I am perswaded there would not be half so many Shipwrecks and Disappointments as there are, if your carnal confidence in the means were less, and your relyance upon the Lord more. Therefore it is you so often receive the Sentence of Death in your selves, that you may learn not to trust in your selves, but in God. O were but your Sails filled by Prayer, how prosperous would your designs be?

Motive 4. Whatever deliverances from Dangers, or success in Business you receive out of the way of Prayer, can yield but little comfort, for they are not sanctifyed to you. You may be delivered, though you pray not, and Success may follow those that seek not God for it; but that which you call Deliverance, is rather a reservation to future Misery; and that you call Success, is but a snare to your Souls. You have the things, but not the comfort and blessing of them. God may give your desire to your ruin: Your Lives may be rescued for a time from death, that you may fill up the measure of your Iniquities. Your Affairs may prosper, and that Prosperity may destroy you, Prov. 1. 32. At best it is but an effect of common Providence, and of such Deliverances you can never say as Hezekiah said of his; and every one that receives the like Mercy in the way of Prayer, may say of his, Isa. 38. 17. But thou hast, in love to my Soul, delivered it from the Pit of Corruption; for thou hast cast all my Sins behind thy Back. I deny not, but a Deliverance by the hand of common Providence, is a Mercy in it self; and it may prove a very great Mercy to you in the event, if time thereby added to your Life be a space of Repentance; else it is but a short reprieval of your Damnation, and leaves you to perish under greater Guilt, than was upon you before. But on the contrary, how sweet are those Mercies that come in the way of Prayer, that discover God's love to you, and inflame yours to him? One such Mercy is worth a thousand of the former.

Motive 5. Consider all you that go out without Prayer, how soon you may be out of a capacity of Prayer. Now you will not, and shortly you may not, have one opportunity to pray for evermore: Now unbelief shuts your Mouths, and shortly death may do it. How soon may you be past Prayers, both your own and others, and be fixed by death in your unalterable condition? O seek the Lord therefore whilst he may be found, call upon him whilst he is yet near. Now is your Praying season, hereafter there will be no use of Prayer. For this (saith the Psalmist) shall every one that is godly pray unto thee, in a time when thou mayest be found: Surely in the floods of great Waters they shall not come nigh unto him. Psal. 32. 6. (i. e.) Saith Deodate upon the place, in the time of the general destruction of Sinners, as it was in the Deluge; then there is no coming nigh to God by Prayer, nor canst thou come nigh him in the day of thy particular Destruction, by the Floods of great Waters. O therefore live not a day longer in the prophane and sinful neglect of this great duty of Prayer.

Object. Why, but I observe those that pray not, generally escape as well as they that do.

Answ. This Objection was once made by a Soldier in the time of Fight, when he was pressed by his Companion to pray; and God quickly stopped his his blaſpeming Mouth with a mortal Bullet. Have a care of ſuch bold Atheiſtical Pleas; they greatly provoke the Lord againſt you: I had rather dye praying, than live prayerleſs.

Object. But to what purpoſe is it for me to pray, if I am unregenerate? God hears not ſuch Prayers, if I make them; and beſides, the Prayers of the Wicked are an abomination to the Lord.

Anſw. Labour therefore to get into a regenerate ſtate, and be not perſuaded to reſt a day longer in ſo ſad a condition. However in the mean time, you muſt know, that Prayer being a part of Natural Worſhip, all Men, even the Unregenerate, are obliged to it by the Light and Law of Nature; otherwiſe, the neglect of it could not be their Sin.

Object. But many pray, and receive not: I my ſelf have often done ſo.

Anſw. You ask and receive not, becauſe you ask amiſs, Jam. 4. 3. If we were diſpoſed to receive, as God is to give, we ſhould not be long without the anſwer of our Prayers.

If (1.) your Perſons were accepted through Chriſt, your Prayers ſhould be accepted too, Gen. 4. 4. But you are in a ſtate of Nature, deſtitute of the Spirit, Joh. 15. 7. And ſo your voice is to God not the voice of a Child, but a ſtranger.

(2.) If your Prayers were regulated by the Will of God, they could not miſs of the deſired Succeſs. 1 Joh. 5. 14. If we ask any thing according to his Will, he heareth us.

(3.) If your Prayers had more faith and fervency, they would not return empty, See Jam. 1. 6. and 5. 16. Well then, object no more againſt your duty, but in the fear of God apply your ſelves to it, and dare not to go forth in any deſign, until thou haſt by Prayer recommended thy ſelf, and thy affairs to God. Go alone, my Friends, retire from the World; and ſay not, you cannot ſpare time for Prayer: Better any thing elſe were neglected than this. Tell the Lord, thou art now launching forth into the Ocean, and knoweſt not what this Voyage may bring forth. Poſſibly thou mayeſt never return to the Land of thy Nativity any more; but however it ſhall pleaſe him to diſpoſe the event, beſeech him with all Earneſtneſs, that thou mayeſt have the pardon of Sin ſealed to thee before thou go. O beg him to ſepa... from thy Perſon, before thou be ſeparated ... Habitation and Relations; leſt that Stro... ſhall ſeparate thy Soul from thy Body, that I... nally ſeparate both Soul and Body from God.

Deſire of the Lord that his Preſence may go with thee where-ever thou ſhalt go. Tell him, it is the Fountain, both of thy ſafety and comfort; Deſire him, if his Preſence may not go with thee, not to carry thee hence. All the relief thou hast againſt trouble, is wrap'd up in that Promiſe of his, I will be with him in trouble. Tell him, thoſe will be taſteleſs Comforts, and ſuccourleſs Troubles, in which he is not.

Intreat the Lord with importunity, to keep thee by his fear from the Sins and Temptations that are in the World. Tell him, thou art fearfully affected with the danger, which thy own corrupt Heart will every were expoſe thee to: Sins in Buying and Selling, into which thou mayeſt eaſily be drawn by an earthly covetous Heart: Sins in Drinking, wherein thou mayeſt be entangled (except he keep thee) by evil Company and an irregular Appetite: Sins of Uncleanneſs, by which thou mayeſt be overcome in the abſence of lawful Remedies, and preſence of alluring Objects, except his fear quench the Temptation, and break the Snare.

Be earneſt alſo with the Lord for his gracious Protection of thee in all thy Dangers. Tell him, thou canſt not be in ſafety any where, but under the ſhadow of his Wings. Tell him, at what time thou art afraid, thou wilt truſt in him; and beſeech him, that when thy Heart ſhall be overwhelmed with Fears and Troubles, he will lead thee to the Rock that is higher than thee. Beſeech him alſo to give thee counſel in all the Straits and Difficulties, that thou mayeſt not lean to thine own Underſtanding, but that he will make thy way plain before thee.

And if it be his good Pleaſure, that he would bleſs thy juſt and honeſt enterpriſes with Succeſs and Proſperity. Which if he ſhall do, tell him it is thy deſire, and beg the aſſiſtance of his Grace that thou mayeſt improve all thy Mercies to his praiſe. If thus you ſet forth in the fear of God, you may expect a ſweet Succeſs, and happy Iſſue

THE SEAMAN in a Storm.

SERMON II.

PSAL. CVII. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27.

They that go down to the Sea in Ships, that do buſineſs in great Waters: Theſe ſee the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep. For he commandeth and raiſeth the Stormy Wind which lifteth up the Waves thereof. They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the Depths; their Soul is melted becauſe of trouble. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a Drunken Man, and are at their Wits end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he brings them out of their diſtreſs.

THIS Pſalm contains an excellent account of the myſterious and admirable effects of Providence. And this Paragraph contains that Vein or Branch of Divine Providence which reſpects Seamen; a ſort of Men more immediately depending upon the favour of Providence than any Men in the World; though all do neceſſarily, and continually depend upon it.

In theſe Verſes we have a deſcription, both (1.) of the Perſons, (2.) of the Danger, (3.) of the Deliverance; by the wonderful working of Divine Providence for them.

First, A deſcription of the Perſons about whom this wonderful Providence is exerciſed. They that go down to the Sea in Ships; that do buſineſs in great Waters; the Periphraſis of a Seaman. Theſe are ſaid to go down to the Sea in Ships, not becauſe the Sea is lower than the Land, but becauſe it is lower than the Shore, which is the Rampire raiſed by Providence againſt its Inundations. And their end or deſign in going down into the Sea, is not for Pleaſure and Recreation, but to do Buſineſs, (i. e.) to Export and Import ſuch Wares and Commodities as are neceſſary, if not to the being, at leaſt, to the well-being of the ſeveral Kingdoms and Countries of the World. Theſe are the Men here ſpoken of, who ſee (more than any) the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deeps. Works and Wonders by an ἐν διὰ δυοῖν, uſual Figure, is as much as his wonderful Works; namely, of Creation, in the ſtrange and monſtrous productions of the Sea, and of Preſervation, with reſpect to themſelves, in the dreadful Dangers they there encounter. Thus the Perſon or Subject is deſcribed.

Secondly, The Danger is likewiſe deſcribed, in which theſe Sea-faring men are ſometimes involved: and indeed the Pſalmiſt here gives us a very rhetorical and elegant deſcription of their condition in the ſtormy Sea; and ſhews us how deplorable their ſtate and condition is at ſuch a time. Where we are to note both the Cauſes and Effects of theſe Tempeſts.

1. The Cauſes; and they are twofold.

First, The principal Cauſe, the Will and Pleaſure of God. He commandeth and raiſeth the ſtormy Winds. This is God's Prerogative, none can raiſe Winds but himſelf; and if Devils or Witches do it at any time, yet it is ſtill by his permiſſion; as you ſee in Job. 1. 12. 19. The Lord is ſaid to hold the Wind in his Fiſts, Prov. 30. 4. As a Man holds a wilde fierce Beaſt in a Chain, or by a Collar: And when they blow he brings them out of his Treaſuries, Pſal. 135. 7. There is indeed a natural Cauſe of Winds, of which Philoſophers give us this rational account, That it is a hot and dry Exhalation raiſed from the Earth, by the power of the Heavenly Bodies, which being repelled or forced back by the coldneſs of the middle Region, moves obliquely or ſlantingly, and ſometimes very violently through the Air. But though this be the natural Cauſe of the Wind, yet this doth not at all reſtrain the abſolute Soveraignty of God over them. It is he that commands and raiſeth them, as the Text ſpeaks; and though it be ſaid, Joh 3. 8. The Wind blows where it liſteth! yet that Expreſſion makes it not an arbitrary Creature: But the meaning is either thus, It blows where it liſteth, for any oppoſition that Man can make to it, though it cannot blow where it liſteth in reſpect to God. Or thus, Such is the great variableneſs and inſtability of the Winds, blowing now this way, now that, that it ſeems to move with a kind of ſpontainety, as a Bird doth in the Air; though indeed it doth but ſeem ſo, for all its motions are ordered of the Lord. And you cannot ſay in this ſenſe, as 1 Kings 9. 11. That God is not in the Wind. Now when it pleaſeth the Lord to ſhew his Power upon the great Deeps, he ſends forth theſe Winds out of his Treaſure. This is the principal Cauſe. Then next,

2. We have the inſtrumental, ſubordinate and next Cauſe of the Storm, and that is, the Winds lifting up the Waves of the Ocean. There is naturally in the Sea a continual agitation, and rolling of its Waters hither and thither; it cannot reſt, as the Prophet ſpeaks it; but when a violent Wind blows upon it, the Ocean is incenſed and enraged; and the Winds roul, moving Mountains of Water before them. Then, like Wilde Beaſts, the Waves seem to break looſe and rage, not only to be latrantes undas, as Virgil calls them, barking Waves; but κύματα ἄγρια, raging Waves, as Jude ſpeaks, Verſe 13. Yea, roaring Waves, as our Saviour ſtiles them, Luke 21. 25. Thus of the Cauſes of the Storm Principal and Subordinate. Next we have,

Undamaris efferens. Beza.

Secondly, The terrible Effects of the Tempeſts, and that upon both their Bodies and their Minds.

(1.) External upon their Bodies, it toſſes them up and down in a dreadful manner, which the Pſalmiſt elegantly expreſſes in the Text, They mount up to Heaven, they go down to the Depths, a lofty hyperbolical Expreſſion; very near unto it is that of Virgil.

Tollimur in cœlum, curvato gurgite; & iidem.
Subductâ, ad manos imos deſcendimus, undâ!
Æn. 3.

They ſeem to mix with the very Clouds, and then, open deep Graves for them in the bottom Sands. Yea, it moves them not only perpendicularly, lifting them up, and caſting them down, but obliquely and circularly alſo. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken Man, or as ſome tranſlate, agitantur in gyrum, they run round: They are indeed moved according to the unſtable motion of the Waves, on whoſe proud backs they are mounted. This is the External Effect of the Storm upon their Bodies.

(2.) The internal Effect of it upon their Minds, which is far more terrible. For it is ſaid here, Their Soul is melted becauſe of Trouble, and they are at their Wits end. Both which Expreſſions do import a greater commotion, and ſtorm in the Paſſions of the Mind, than that is in the Waves of the Sea. The ſtouteſt Spirit quails and melts when it comes to this; and the wiſeſt Artiſt is at his Wits end. Thus you have the deſcription of the Perſons, and of their danger, both in the Cauſe and Effects upon the Body and Mind. Next,

(3.) We have their deliverance by the wonderful hand of Divine Providence, in Verſ. 27. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he brings them out of their diſtreſs. Their uſual cry in ſuch extraordinary exigencies is Mercy! Mercy! Now they can pray, that could not pray before. Extremity drives them to their Knees, not only with cries, but vows to the Lord. And he delivers them out of their diſtreſs: Some delivered one way, and ſome another, but all in a ſtupendious way, which cannot but aſtoniſh them that are ſo delivered, and make them acknowledge the Finger of God was in it.

From all this we obſerve,

Doctr. That the Preſervations and Deliverances of Seamen in the dreadful Storms and Tempeſts at Sea, is the wonderful Work of Divine Providence.

The Works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein. Pſal. 111. 2. And among his Providential Works none greater, and more admirable, than thoſe which Seamen dayly behold in their great and marvellous Protections upon the Sea.

Now the Glory of Divine Providence towards Seamen, ſhines and diſplays it ſelf in three things. Eſpecially firſt, in making the Ocean navigable for them at any time. Secondly, In preſerving them from Shipwracks in the fury and ſtreſs of Weather. Thirdly, In finding out ways, and ſtrangely providing means of ſafety when their Ships are loſt, and broken upon the Sea.

1. It is a wonderful Providence of God, to make the Ocean navigable for Men at any time; that ſuch a fluid Body as Water is, which cannot ſupport a Stone or Bullet of an ounce weight, ſhould yet by reaſon of its own Saltneſs, and the innate property of Timber, be able to ſupport Ships of ſuch vaſt Burthen, which are carried dayly from place to place, being mounted on the backs of its proud Waves. Who can but acknowledge a moſt wiſe Providence, in gratifying the natural wit and deſire of Man, which fits him for Converſe and Traffick with Foreign Nations, with Inſtruments and Materials ſo fit for his purpoſe; as Timber, Iron, Hemp, Pitch, the Loadſtone, and whatever elſe is neceſſary for his purpoſe, I cannot open the Wiſdom of God's Providence in this reſpect to better advantage than I find it done by the learned Pen of Dr. More in his Antidote againſt Atheiſm pag. 58. Navigation (ſaith he) being of ſo great conſequence to the delight, and convenience of Humane Life; and there being both Wit and Courage in Men to attempt the Seas, were he but fitted with right materials, and other advantages requiſite; when we ſee there is ſo pat a Proviſion made for him to this purpoſe, in large Timber for the building of his Ship, thick Sea-water to bear the Ship's Burthen; in the Magnet or Loadſtone for his Compaſs; in the ſtedfaſt and parallel Direction of the Axis of the Earth to his Cynoſura: And then obſerving his natural Wit and Courage to make uſe of them, and how that ingenite deſire of Knowledge and Converſe, and of improving of his own Parts and Happineſs, ſtir him up to ſo notable a Deſign. We cannot but conclude from ſuch a train of Cauſes, ſo fitly and congruously complying together, that it was really the counſel of an Univerſal and Eternal Mind, that hath the care, foreſeeing and guidance of it, &c.

2. But (to come home to the caſe before us) that Men ſhould be preſerved at Sea from immediate ruin in the dreadful Tempeſts that befall them there, this is a myſterious and admirable Work of God; that a poor Ship ſhould not be ſwallowed up by the furious Ocean, when Mountains of Water come rouling towards it with horrid noiſe, and give it ſuch dreadful Strips when Seas roul over it, and ſo cover it with Waves, that for a time they know not whether they ſink or ſwim; to ſee it emerge out of all fatal dangers, keep up its head, and mount upon the backs of thoſe lofty Seas that threaten immediately to overwhelm it. O how great is the power and care of Providence in ſuch a caſe! Especially, if you conſider theſe following Particulars, among many others, which threaten ruin on every ſide: And ſhould but one of theſe mere contingencies befal them, in the Eye of Reaſon they are loſt Men.

1. Of how many parts comparted together is a Ship conſiſt? Theſe parts indeed are faſtened together with Bolts of Iron; but being in ſo many Planks, what a wonder is it that none ſprings, no Balt gives way, or Seams open, whilſt every Sea works with ſuch violence, and ſo great a ſtreſs of Weather lyes upon it. Should ſuch a thing fall (as it is a wonder it ſhould not) how ſoon would the Ship ſwim within as well as without?

2. How often are they put from their courſe by ſtreſs of Weather, and know not where they are, not being able for many days to take any Obſervation? So that they muſt go whither Winds and Waves will drive them? For there is no dropping Anchors in the Main, nor reſiſting the Courſe of the Seas, to which they can make no more reſiſtance than a Child to a Gyant. And how is it are not dashed upon the Rocks, or foundered in the Sands, seeing the Winds shape their Course, and not Art? But there is a God that steers your Course for you, when you cannot.

2. How often are you even fallen upon Rocks and Shore before you see them, and are almost past hope before you begin to fear? Sometimes almost imbayed, and as much as ever you can do to weather a Rock, or Head-Land, which you discerned not till it was almost too late?

I remember Doctor Johnson, in that ingenious and wonderful Narrative of his Voyage to the Sound, when he had survived two Shipwracks, and was embarked in the third Ship, We had not (saith he) been above two or three hours at Sea, but there was a sad Distraction amongst us in the Ship, and the Mariners crying Mercy! Mercy! for we had almost fallen foul on a Rock, which lay so cunning in the Water, that we did not espy it till we were upon it; but by the goodness of God we sailed close by it, and so escaped it: The least touch of it had been our Ruin.

3. How often do you ride at Anchor in furious Weather, near Rocks and Shores? Your Lives, under God, every moment depending upon a Cable and Anchor; if the one break, or the other come home, you are lost Men, And how wonderful is it they do not: What is a Cable in a Storm? But as the new Cords with which the Philistines bound Samson, and as easily would they be snapt asunder as a Thread of Tow, were it not for the care of Providence over you? These, and an hundred other Accidents which hourly threaten you, might, and would send you down to the Bottom, but that the Lord permits it not so to be.

3. And yet more wonderful than all this, how often doth God suffer Ships to founder and sink under you, and to be dashed to pieces against the Rocks, and yet preserve you when the ordinary Means of Preservation are cut off and gone? Who, like these see the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep?

For First, Sometimes a small Boat shall save them, when a stout Ship could not. Thus many of them have been wonderfully preserved; and thus the forementioned Author relates the manner of his wonderful Preservation: Our Ship (saith he) had sprung a Leak, or rather a Plank, and was ready to sink; O, how the Face of every Man was changed with this Affrightment! One was at his Prayers, another wringing his Hands, a third shedding Tears, when we had no need of more Salt-Water. After this Fit they fell to work, and (as it is usual in such Extreams) were all busy in doing of nothing, and did we know not what. The Master's Mate, whom we sent down to search out the Leak, quickly return'd to us with a pale Countenance, trembling Hands, and gnashing of Teeth, a Quivering Tongue, and Words half spoken, signifying unto us, that the Wound was incurable. Here was now no room for Counsel, neither had we time to tell one another what was best to be done; but we presently cast out our Long-Boat, and shot off Eight or Nine Guns, which seem'd to me to be so many Tolls for a Passing-Bell before our Death. I leaped into the Boat, but leaped short; one Leg in the Boat, Alterum Charontis cymba. Now were we left in the North Seas, which seldom wear a smooth Brow; but at this time contending with the Wind, swelled into prodigious Mountains. It blew half a Storm, and we were now in a small Vessel: What credit could we give to our selves in a small and open Shalop, when so stately a Vessel of Wood, which we but now lost, could not defend it self against the Insolency of the Waves? We were many Leagues from any Shore, having no Compass to guide us, nor Provisions to sustain us, and the Night grew black upon us ——— Nothing but a Miracle could preserve us, being out of the reach of Humane Help. ——— We fell to Prayer, and our Extremity pleaded for us; ——— For in this moment of Death, when we were without the least Expectation of Deliverance, he sent a Ship to us, which we must needs confess to be the Finger of God, &c. Thus he ——— And this hath been the wonderful Door opened in Extremity to multitudes more for their escape. But O how astonishing are these ways of the Lord! Well may we say, His ways are in the Sea, and his Paths in the great Deep, and his Footsteps are not known, Psal. 77. 19.

Secondly, Sometimes they shall be cast upon a Rock in the Sea, where they shall be preserved till some other way of deliverance come; yea, preserved strangely, God blessing a small matter of Provision which they saved to sustain them; though they said of it as the Widow of Sarepta to the Prophet, 1 Kings 17. 12. I have but an handful of Meal, and a little Oyl, and I am gathering two Sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my Son, that we may eat it and dye. Or if they could save nothing, yet a few Muscles or Bird's Eggs, with God's Blessing, have sustained them till the time of Mercy came. This hath been the case of many. Think upon this, you that abuse the good Creatures of God by Drunkenness; how sweet would a Cup of fresh Water be to you when reduc'd to such Extremity! O, if your Hearts be not harder than the Rocks you lay upon, how would such extraordinary Mercies melt you into Love and Thankfulness.

Thirdly, Sometimes they have been wafted to the Shore safely upon the Wrack, or by making a Raft of the broken Pieces of the Ship, and torn Sails, and Ropes; and upon this (God knows, a poor security against the boisterous Waves) have they ventur'd themselves. A sinking Man (as we say) will catch at a Bullrush. Paul and those that suffer'd Shipwrack with him were thus saved, The Centurion commanded, That they which could swim, should cast themselves first into the Sea, and get to Land. And the rest, some on Boards, and some on broken pieces of the Ship; and so it came to pass that they escaped all safe to Land, Acts 27. 43, 44. Tabula post Naufragium.

O the miraculous Works of the Lord! to save by such contemptible and improbable means! Who can but with great joy see and acknowledge the Finger of God to be here? Lo, these are part of his ways; but how small a portion is heard of him? Job 26, 14.

1. Use of Reproof. If your Preservation in Storms at Sea, be the wonderful Works of Divine Providence, then divers of you deserve to be sharply reproved from this Truth. And I beseech you suffer the Word of Reproof meekly and penitently. I shall speak nothing to reproach you; no, it is not to reproach, but to reform you: And if you hate Reproof, and mock at Counsel, God may shortly speak in such Thundering Language to your Consciences, as will be terrible for you to bear. I remember it is said of St. Bernard, That whilst he was seriously reproving the Prophaneness of one (and if I misremember not, it was his own Brother) who was a Soldier, and observing how he slighted his holy and serious Counsel, his Spirit was greatly grieved at it, and he told him, Brother, God, I fear, will shortly make way to your Heart with a Sword, to which my Words can find no access; and the Event soon verifyed the sad Prediction.

I pray God none of you may be taught by Captivities and Shipwracks, what it is to reject Faithful Reproofs, and wholesome Counsel, seasonably given for your good. You that read these Lines seriously ask your own Consciences these following Questions.

(1.) Have you not soon forgotten the Works and Wonders of the Lord, which your Eyes have seen? It may be, for the present, you have been sensibly affected with your Danger, and the Mercy of God in your Deliverance, but hath it remained upon your Hearts? I doubt these Mercies have been written in the Dust, which should have been ingraven, as in the Rock for ever. Thus it was with Israel, a People that saw as many Wonders wrought for them by the immediate Finger of God, as ever did any People in the World; and yet it is said of them, even after the Red-Sea Deliverance, in which God divided the Sea for them, when the Waves thereof roared, Isa. 51. 15. And with which, for the present, their Hearts are greately affected; for it is said, Psal. 106. 12. That they believed his Word, and sang his Praises. But in the next Verse you read, that a little time easily wiped out the sense of this Mercy; for it is said, Ver. 13. They soon forgot his works, and waited not for his counsels. I doubt this was not the Sin of Israel only, but is the case of many of you at this Day. Well, God did not forget you in the Time of Extremity, though you so quickly forgot him. Think not to excuse yourselves from this guilt, by saying, you do still remember the Thing: You may do so, and yet be said to forget his Mercy. For a Deliverance may be remembered by him that received it two ways; namely, speculatively, and affectingly. A speculative remembrance is only to call to mind the Stories of such a Danger, and Preservation: This you may do, and yet God account himself forgotten, except you so remember it, as still to feel the Powerful Impressions thereof upon your Hearts, softning and melting them into Thankfulness, Love and Dependance upon the God of your Salvations.

(2.) Have you not walked very unanswerably to your Deliverances, yea, and to the Solemn Engagements you made to God in the Day of your Distress? I fear some of you have walked, after God hath rescued you by a wonderful immediate Hand from the Jaws of Death; as if you had been delivered to commit all these Abominations. As it is Jer. 7. 10. It may be the last Week or Month you were reeling to and fro upon the stormy Sea, and staggering like drunken Men; and this reeling and staggering along the Streets really drunken. O horrid Abomination! Do ye thus requite the Lord, who pitied you in your distress, and, being full of Compassion, saved you, when you cryed to him? Is this the Fruit of your wonderful Salvation? If a Man should have told you in that Day, it would have been thus, you your selves could not have believed it, but would have answer'd as Hazael did to the Prophet, 2 Kings 8. 13. What! is thy Servant a Dog, that he should do such things? Yet so it was, and so it is still: The Lord humble you for this great Wickedness. If this be all the Fruit of Mercy and Deliverance, it had been better for you that you had gone down to the bottom then, rather than to live only to treasure up more wrath against the day of wrath, and fill up your measure.

(3.) Are there not a sort of Atheistical Sea-men who own not Providence at all, either in the raising of these horrid Tempests, or in their marvelous Preservation in them? but look on all as coming in a Natural way, and their escape to be only by good Fortune, and Chance. How wonderful a thing is it, in the Eyes of all considering Men, that Providence should take any notice of them in a way of Favour, that so wickedly disown it, and so directly disoblige it? How can you possibly shut your Eyes against such clear light, and stop your Ears against such loud and plain Language, whereby the Power and Goodness of God proclaims itself to you in these Providences! Ah! methinks you should most readily and thankfully subscribe that great Truth, Psal. 68. 20. He that is our God, is the God of Salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from Death. But though Men see Signs and Wonders, they will not believe, yea, though themselves become Wonders to the World by their Miraculous Deliverances; yet so brutish and stupid are they, that they will not see the Hand that saves them. Take heed what you do: You set yourselves in the direct way to distruction by this, and highly provoke the Lord to abandon and cast you out of the care of his Providence; and if he once do so, you are lost Men.

(4.) And yet more vile (if more vileness can be in Sin) than all this. Are there not a Generation of Wretched Men among you, that fall swearing, cursing, and blaspheming God, even when he is uttering his Terrible Voice in the Tempest, and every moment threatning to intomb them in the Deep? When you should be upon your Knees bewailing your Sins, and pleading with God for Mercy (as I doubt not but some of you do) to be yet more and more provoking him, daring him to his Face; and yet more incensing his Indignation, which is already kindled against you? who, that hears this, can chuse but admire the riches of God's Patience and Forbearance toward such Men? The very Heathen Mariners in a Storm called every Man upon his God, Jonah 1. 5. When Extremity will cause the worst of Men to pray and compose the Vainest Spirit unto Seriousness, but it seems by you, it will not. Is this the Frame and Temper you will meet Death in? Will you speaking the language of Devils and damned Spirits before you come among them? Hasting on your own Ruin, as if it were too slack and lingering in Motion? The Lord open the Eyes of these miserable Creatures, and convince them, that they are not only going to Hell as others are, but that they are the Forlorn of all that Wretched Crew that are bound thither; and proportionable will be their Misery, except they repent.

2. Use of Exhortation. This Point is yet farther improvable for you by way of Exhortation, serving to press you to those proper Duties which it calls you to by his Terrible Providential Voice in the Storms, and by your wonderful Deliverance.

1. And the first Lesson you are to learn hence is, To adore the Power of God. O what Manifestation of Divine Power is here! You the Men that see more than others the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep. One of God's ends, in shewing you these Works, To make his mighty Power known, Psal. 106. 8. what a Terrible Voice doth God utter upon the Seas, when the Heavens are black above you, furious Winds and dreadful Thunders rattling about you, the Sea and Waves roaring beneath! Is not this Voice of the Lord full of Majesty? Doth it not awe your Hearts and make them tremble? In three things his Infinite Power is discovered to you,

First, In raiſing theſe Terrible Tempeſts, and that from ſo ſmall and weak a beginning as a thin Vapour from the Earth is: This is the Wonderful Work of God, Pſal. 135. 7. He cauſeth the Vapours to aſcend from the ends of the Earth; he maketh Lightnings for the Rain, he bringeth Wind out of his Treaſure.

Secondly, In limiting and bounding their Force and Power: What prodigious Effects elſe would follow? The Wind is a fierce and boiſterous Creature, and would (if God did not by his Providence reſtrain) deſtroy, and overturn all, both by Sea and Land; or if Satan, who is ſtyled The Prince, or Power of the Air, were left at liberty to execute his Malice by ſuch an Inſtrument, not a Ship ſhould croſs the Seas, nor a Houſe be ſafe at Land; as is evident enough by the furious haſte he made to overturn the Houſe with an horrible Tempeſt upon Job's Children, as ſoon as he had received a permiſſion from Heaven to do it.

And, Thirdly, No leſs viſible is the Power of God in calming and appeaſing the ſtormy Winds, and remanding them into his Treaſures, Pſal. 107. 29. He maketh the Storm a Calm: Yea, he doth ſo in the very nick of time, when all is concluded loſt. Thus you read in Mark 4. 39. When the Waves beat into the Ship, ſo that it was now full, and the Diſciples cryed unto the Lord, Maſter, careſt thou not that we periſh? He aroſe and rebuked the Wind, and ſaid to the Sea, Peace, be ſtill; and the Wind ceaſed, and there was a great calm. Juſt as one would huſh a Child, Peace, be ſtill; O the Sovereign Power of God! How ſhould it be reverenced and adored by all that behold it, in theſe marvelous effects of it?

2. The ſecond Leſſon you are taught by this Doctrine, is, To admire the Mercy of God. Mercy is no leſs diſcovered than Power; yea, the Power of God is put forth to give his Mercy a fair occaſion to ſhine forth in your Deliverance. God ſometimes permits your dangers to grow to an Extremity, and delays your Deliverances to the laſt moment, till all hopes of ſafety are gone, upon the like reaſon, that Lazarus's Reſurrection was deferred; that the Work of God in your Preſervation may commend it ſelf to you under the greateſt Advantage.

O that you would view theſe Mercies in all their endearing Circumſtances. I can only hint your Duty generally in this Caſe; you may enlarge upon it, if you have Hearts fit for ſuch a bleſſed Work. And mark particularly the multitudes of Mercies that are complicated and involved in one Deliverance. Obſerve the Seaſon when, the manner how, the means by which your Salvation was wrought. It is a thouſand pities that ſo much of God's Glory and your Comfort, as any one, even the ſmalleſt Circumſtance may contain, ſhould ever be loſt.

3. Laſtly, and above all. See that you anſwer God's ends in your Deliverance. If that be loſt, God may ſay concerning you as David did of Nabal: 1 Sam. 25. 21. Surely, in vain have I kept all that this Fellow hath in the Wilderneſs; ſo that nothing was miſſed of all that pertained to him; and he hath requited me evil for good. So here in vain have I kept this Fellow upon the Sea, when I ſuffered others to ſink: In vain have I preſerved his Life, Liberty and Eſtate; ſo often by an out-ſtretched Arm of Power and Mercy to him, ſeeing he requites me evil for good.

O let me intreat you to be careful to comply with the Deſigns and Ends of God in theſe your wonderful Preſervations. If you enquire what God's Ends and Deſigns in your Deliverance are, I anſwer,

First, It is to lead you to Repentance. The goodneſs of God (ſaith the Apoſtle) leadeth thee to Repentance, Rom. 2. 4. Doſt thou not know the Voice of Mercy? Why, it beſpeaks thy Return to God. It may be thou haſt ſpent all thy Life, to this Day, in the ſervice of Sin: Thou never redeemeſt one of all thy precious Hours to conſider thine own Eſtate, to bewail thy Sin and Miſery, to ſeek after an Intereſt in Chriſt. Why, now here is a Providence fall'n in that doth, as it were, take thee by the Hand, and lead the to this great and neceſſary Work. The End of God in raiſing this Storm, was to deliver thee from the more dreadful Tempeſt of his Wrath, which, without Repentance, muſt ſhortly overtake thy Soul in the blackneſs of Darkneſs for ever. Now God hath awakened thy Conſcience by this Fright, made it charge home thy Sins upon thee, terrifyed thee with diſmal Apprehenſions of Death and Hell. O what a fair opportunity and advantage hath he now put into thy hand for Repentance, Reformation, and gaining an Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt. If this Seaſon be loſt, Conſcience ſuffered again to fall into any dead Sleep, and thy Heart be again hardened be the deceitfulneſs of Sin, thou mayeſt never have ſuch an opportunity for Salvation opened to thee any more.

Secondly, If this End be anſwered, then a farther deſign God hath in thy Deliverance, is to engage and incourage thy Soul to a dependance upon God, in future Straits and Dangers. This is Food for Faith, and now you are furniſhed with experience of the Power, Mercy and Goodneſs of God, to inable you to ron your ſelves upon him when new Exigencies befal you. If God exerciſe you with ſuch Extremities another time you may ſay with the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 1. 10. Who delivered us from ſo great a Death, and doth deliver, in whom we truſt he will yet deliver us.

If your firſt Deliverance were a Deliverance without a Promiſe, when you were without Chriſt, what incouragement have you to depend upon him, when his End is anſwered in your Repentance and Converſion; and being in Chriſt, are intituled to all the Promiſes.

Thirdly and laſtly, God's End in your marvelous Preſervations and Deliverances, is, to furniſh you for, and to engage you to a Life of Praiſe. O how ſhould the high Praiſes of God be ever in your Mouths! You have ſeen his Works and Wonders in the Deeps. And this is it which the Pſalmiſt preſſes upon you as a becoming Return for your Mercies, in the Words following my Text; O that Men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the Children of Men.

Oh with what warm and inlarged Affections ſhould you expreſs your Thankfulneſs to the God of your Salvation! and ſay as David, What am I, O Lord God, and what is my Father's Houſe, that thou ſhouldſt do ſuch great things for me? Was ſuch a Life as mine worth the working of ſo many Wonders to ſave it; O Lord thou knoweſt it has been a Life ſpent in Vanity. Thy Glory hath not been precious in mine Eyes, but my Life hath been precious in thine Eyes. Many more uſeful, and leſs ſinful than my ſelf, have periſhed, and I am ſaved. O Lord ſhew me the deſigns and gracious ends of theſe Deliverances. Surely there is ſome great thing to be done by me, or elſe ſo great a Salvation had not been wrought for me. The Lord ſaw in what a ſad caſe my poor Soul was, to be ſummoned immediately before his Judgment Seat; that if I had gone down under all my guilt,

I had ſunk to the bottom of Hell: But thou, in love to my Soul, haſt delivered it from the Pit of Corruption, that I might yet enjoy a Seaſon for Salvation; and be once more intruſted with the precious Talents of Time and Means. O that I may not reject or abuſe the Grace of God in this new Inſtrument, as I have too often done in the former! Let me not live as one delivered to commit all theſe Abominations.

And now after all that is come upon me for my Evil, ſeeing thou, my God, haſt puniſhed me ſo much leſs than my Iniquities deſerve; and haſt given me ſuch a Deliverance as this, ſhould I again dare to break thy Commandments? Ezra 9. 13, 14. O let this new Mercy produce a new Heart and Life!

SERMON III.

Pſalm. CXXXIX. 9. 10.

If I take the Wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the Sea, even there ſhall thy right hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me.

IN this Pſalm the Omnipreſence and Omniſcience of God are the ſubjects of the Pſalmiſt's Meditation; and theſe Attributes are here promiſcuouſly diſcourſed, not only becauſe of the near affinity that is betwixt their Natures, but becauſe the one is the demonſtration of the other: It is evident God knows all things, becauſe he fills all places. Touching the Omniſcience of God, he diſcovers the infinite Perfection of that Attribute by the particular and exact notice it takes of all our ways: Verſe 3. Thou compaſſeſt my Paths, and art acquainted with all my ways. Of all our words, Verſe 4. There is not a Word in my Tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knoweſt it altogether. Yea, of all our Thoughts; and that not only in the Inſtant of their Conception, but long before they were conceived, Verſe 2. Thou underſtandeſt my Thoughts afar off, even from Eternity. Thus he diſplays the Omniſcience of God: And then to make demonſtration of the Truth and Certainty of this Doctrine of God's Omniſcience, he proves it from his Omnipreſence: q. d. He that fills all things cannot but know all things. Now God's Preſence fills Heaven, yea, and Hell too, Verſe 8. and all parts of the Earth and Sea, even the remoteſt, Verſe 9, 10. And therefore no Creature, nor Action of any Creature, can eſcape his cogniſance. It is not here as among Men; if a Malefactor be condemned by the Laws of one Kingdom, he may eſcape by flying into another; but it is far otherwiſe here, for, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, (perſonating a guilty Fugitive, endeavouring to make an Eſcape from the Arreſt of God's Juſtice) If I take the Wings of the Morning, and flee into the uttermoſt parts of the Sea, even there ſhall thy Hand lead me, and thy right Hand ſhall hold me.

In which Words you have theſe two things mainly remarkable.

1. The greateſt Security and Encouragement a Sinner ſuppoſed.

2. That ſuppoſed Security and Encouragement utterly deſtroyed.

1. The greateſt Security and Encouragement to a Sinner ſuppoſed; If I take the Wings of the Morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the Sea. Where two things ſeem to offer towards his Protection.

Alludit ad lenimam rerum ſolis exitum, qui mane ab oriente ad occidentem pervenit. Calvin.

Firſt, The Place; the remoteſt part of the Sea, by which you are to underſtand the moſt obſcure Nook in the Creation; fartheſt removed from any inſpection or obſervation.

And Secondly, His ſwift and ſpeedy Flight after the commiſſion of Sin, to this ſuppoſed Refuge and Sanctuary: It is here ſuppoſed, that a Sinner ſhould fly as ſwift as the Light of the Sun, which in a moment ſhines from the Eaſt to the Weſt; and ſo the meaning is, Could I flee with a celerity equal to the Sun, or his Beams of Light, which breaking forth in the Morning, do in an Inſtant enlighten the remoteſt part of the Hemiſphere; Could I as ſwiftly flee to the moſt obſcure, remote, ſolitary Place in all the World. Thus the Sinner's Security is ſuppoſed.

2. This ſuppoſed Security and Encouragement is utterly deſtroyed. Even there ſhall thy Hand lead me, and thy right Hand ſhall hold me. The leading-Hand of God is not here to be underſtood, as a directing or guiding Hand, to ſhew the fugitive Sinner the way of his Eſcape; but contrarily, Thy Hand ſhall lead me, as a Keeper leads his Priſoner to the place of Cuſtody, from which he endeavoured ed an Escape. And the following Clause is exegetical; Thy right Hand shall hold, or detain me, viz. in strict Custody. So that the Sum of all is this:

Doct. That the whole World affords no Place of Secrecy or Security for a Sinner to escape the observing Eye, and righteous Hand of God.

Jonah fled from the Lord to Tarshish, but could he escape so? No, the Lord sent a Storm after him, which brought back the Fugitive, Jonah 1. 3. We read, Isa. 29. 15. of such as dig deep, to hide their Counsels from the Lord, (i. i.) They plot, contrive and study to conceal their wicked designs, to sin with greatest Secrecy and Security. But, what can possibly be a covering from him, to whose sight all things are naked and manifest? Where can a Sinner be hid from him whose Presence fills Heaven and Earth? Jer. 23. 24. The Scripture gives full Proof to this great Truth. It is clear from Prov. 15. 3, The Eyes of the Lord are in every Place, beholding the Evil and the Good. And again, Job 34. 21, 22. For his Eyes are upon the ways of Man, and he seeth all his goings; there is no darkness, nor shadow of Death where the workers of Iniquity may hide themselves. Whoever goes about to conceal a Sin in secret, attempts a foolish and impossible Design, Psal. 44. 21. Shall not God search this out? For he knoweth the Secrets of the Heart. For the Eyes of the Lord run to and fro, through the whole Earth, 2 Chron. 16. 9.

Now in the handling of this Point, I purpose to shew you.

1. That Men are often induced to sin upon hopes of Secrecy and Concealment.

2. That to sin upon these Encouragements, strongly argues their natural Atheism: They think they are safe if Men know it not; they reckon not upon God's discovery of them.

3. That these Encouragements to sin are vain things, it being impossible any place can hide a Sinner from God; and how it appears that the Eye of God is, and must needs be upon us, and our Actions, where-ever we are, and how closely soever we endeavour to hide them. And then apply it.

First, Men are often induced to commit Sin upon the hopes of Secrecy and Concealment. Sin (especially some sorts of sin) carry so much shame and odium in them, that it restrains Men from the open Practice of them; but if Satan can perswade them they shall never be divulged to their reproach, they will venture upon them. See that Text, The Eye of the Adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, No Eye shall see me, and disguiseth his face, Job 24. 15. reckoning himself secure, if he can carry his Wickedness under a veil of Darkness, not caring what Wickedness he doth, so he may do it undiscerned. It is not the acting of sin, but the discovery of it that puts them into Terrors. So it is added with respect both to the Adulterer and the Thief, Ver. 17. The Morning is to them as the shadow of Death, if one know them; they are in the terrors of the shadow of death. i. e. If a Man (especially a Man in Authority, a Magistrate meet them, it is as if the Image of Death passed before them in a Vision. So those Idolaters, Ezek. 8. 12. Son of Man, hast thou seen what the Antients of the House of Israel do in the dark, every Man in the House of his Imagery? For they say, the Lord seeth not. They conclude all is well, if nothing appear. This encouragement of Secrecy is the great Argument by which Satan prevails with Men to commit any Sin that hath Shame or Danger attending it. But his promises of Concealment are usually made good, as his promises of great wealth are to Witches. This is the Encouragement.

Secondly, Next I will make it evident to you, that to sin upon this Encouragement argues Atheism in him that commits it. This is plain, for did Men believe the Omnipresence and Omniscience of God, such an encouragement to sin as secrecy could have no force with them. Thus when the Antients of Israel practised their Idolatry in the dark, it is plain they thought God saw them not, Ezek. 8. 12. For they say, the Lord seeth us not, the Lord hath forsaken the Earth. (i. e.) They did not really believe God's Omnipresence and Omniscience. And Job tells us, Chap. 31. 26, 27, 28. That if he had beheld the Sun in his brightness, (i. e.) to admire and worship it as a God: Or, his Heart been secretly enticed, he should have denied the God that is above. Every one that is inticed to sin upon the encouragement of Secrecy, doth so far deny the God that is above. If such a Man did really believe there is a God that sees him, whose Eyes are as Flames of Fire, Revel. 1. 14. To whom the Darkness and the Light are both alike, Psal. 139. 12. It were impossible he should be so terrifyed at the discovery of a Creature, and so secure and wholly unconcerned at the discovery of God: It could not be, that the observation of the great God should not so much trouble them, as the observation of a little Child.

Thus we find the inward Thoughts of Mens Hearts, concerning God, discovered by their bold Attempts upon secret Sins, Isa. 29. 15. Woe to them that seek deep to hide their Counsel from the Lord, and their Works are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us, and who knoweth us? They think if their Works are shrowded under a veil of Darkness, they are safe enough; if they can escape the Bar of an Earthly God (a Magistrate) they shall never be accountable at any other Bar. We have another sad instance of the same Impiety in Psal. 73. 11. And they say, How doth God know? And is there knowledge in the most High? If Men did not fancy to themselves there is no God, or (which is all one) that he is like unto themselves, one that cannot see in darkness, they could never encourage themselves as they do to sin upon such a foolish Pretence.

Thirdly, But my proper business in this place, is to prove, That these encouragements to sin are vain things; that no Sinner can hide himself from the Eye of God. This is plain both from Scripture and Reason.

The Scriptures speak full home to this Truth. Prov. 5. 21. The ways of a Man are before the Lord, and he pondereth all his Paths. To ponder or weigh our Paths, is more than simply to observe and see them. He not only sees the Action, but puts it into the Ballances, with every circumstance belonging to it, and tries how much every ingredient in the Action weighs, and what it comes to. So that God hath not only an universal Inspection upon every Action, but he hath a critical Inspection into it also. The Lord is a God of Knowledge, and by him Actions are weighed, 1 Sam. 2. 3. So Jer. 13. 25, 27. Thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in Falshood. I have seen thy Adulteries, and thy Neighings, the lewdness of thy Whoredoms and Abominations. q. d. Thou forgettest there is a God in the Heavens that beheld thee, and didst verily believe all was safe, because secret from Man. In this falshood or cheat put upon thee, by the Devil, and thine own Atheistical Heart, thou didst trust. But I have seen thee and all thy secret Lewdness. It is a Proverb among Sinners, Si non caste, tamen caute. Carry the matter, if not honestly, yet warily: If thou have a mind to sin, yet order it so, that the World may be never the wiser. But how vain a thing is this? If Men do not, the Lord doth see it, I know, and am a Witness, saith the Lord, Jer. 29. 23. Thus the Scripture speaks roundly and fully to the point in hand.

But because the Atheism of the World is so great, and it is a hard thing to convince Men of this great Truth, so as to over-awe them from any secret sin by it, I will by rational Arguments demonstrate the Truth to every Man's Conscience, and give you plain and full Evidence, that how secretly soever Man carry their sinful Designs yet the Lord must needs be privy to them; and it is impossible they should escape his cognisance.

1. For First, He that formed all, cannot but know all. The Workman cannot be supposed to be ignorant of any part of his own work. Now God is the Former of all things; every Place, and every Person he hath made. Where then shall the workers of Iniquity hide themselves? You have the folly of Sinners, in thinking to conceal themselves from the Eye of God, convinced and reproved by this very Argument, Isa. 29. 15, 16. Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their Counsels from the Lord, and their Words are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us? And who knoweth us? Surely, your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the Potter's Clay. For shall the Work say to him that made it, he made me not? Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he hath no Understanding? q. d. Think ye by deep-laid Designs, by the advantage of Darkness, by the moulding and new moulding your crafty designs in your Heads, as the Clay is moulded now into this, then into that shape by the Potter's hands, to hide it from me? O brutish Creatures, and without understanding! Am not I the God that formed you? And can it be supposed I should not know the most secret Thoughts, Plots and Designs of mine own Creatures, who cannot contrive a Design, nor conceive a Thought without me? How absurd is this? Find out a Place which God made not, or a Creature which he formed not; and then your Pretences to that Creatures concealment from God in such a place, may have some colour. And this Argument is again urged to convince the brutish Atheist, Psal. 94. 8, 9, 10. Understand ye brutish among the People, and ye Fools, when will ye be wise? He that planted the Ear shall he not hear? He that formed the Eye, shall he not see? He that chastneth the Heathen, shall he not correct? He that teacheth Man Knowledge shall he not know? The Lord knoweth the Thoughts of Man, that they are vanity. So that it is the vainest of all Vanity in the World, to think of hiding your sins from the Lord.

2. He that sustains all, cannot but know, and discern all. You that seek to hide counsel from the Lord, know ye not, That in him you live, move, and have your Being? Acts 17. 28. Do not you derive that very power from him, which you abuse to sinning against him? And do you depend necessarily and continually upon God for all? Must he give you the power to move, and by that power can you move beyond him, and get out of his reach? You cannot think a Thought without him, and yet can exclude him from those very thoughts which you had no power to conceive, but from him? Exercise but common Reason in the case, and it will hiss at your absurd designs.

3. He that governs all, can be ignorant of nothing. There is a perpetual Influence of Providence, swaying and governing all the Creatures, and all their Actions; else the very ligaments of Nature would crack, and the World break up and disband. This Providence extends it self to the least and lowest of Creatures, and their Actions. Luke 12. 6. A Sparrow falls not to the Ground without it. The great God hath something to do about the most minute and inconsiderable things, yea, the most contingent and uncertain things, as is the disposal of a Lot, Prov. 16. 33. And indeed, Omniscience of God is that which is necessary to his universal Government. How shall he rule that Person, or in that Place, which he knows not? Indeed Earthly Governors may do so: It is not necessary they have a personal immediate cognisance of each Place and Person in their Dominions; it is enough that they be virtually and mediately governed by them; but it is not so with God. It is necessary his Eye should immediately see all the parts of his Dominion. He could not rule the World if he were not an Omniscient God. Psal. 66. 7. He ruleth by his Power for ever, his Eyes behold the Nations: Let not the Rebellious exalt themselves.

Deus maximus in minimus.

4. He that hath set a Spy to observe and note what every Man doth, cannot but know his Actions, how secret soever they be. Now so it is here, God sends a Spy with you to observe and record your most secret Actions and Thoughts, in every place, I mean your own Consciences, from whose observation none of your ways can possibly be exempt. The sense of this made the Heathen say, Turpe quid ausurus, te sine teste time. When thou art attempting a sinful act, fear thy self without any other witness, Conscience is privy to your most secret designs and thoughts, 1 Kings 2. 4. Thou knowest all the Wickedness which thy Heart (i.e. thy Conscience) is privy to. And if Conscience know all, God must needs see and know it. So the Apostle reasons, from the lesser to the greater, John 3. 20. If our Heart condemn us, (which is then put for our Conscience) God is greater than our Hearts, and knoweth all things. If the Spirit of Man knows the things of a Man, much more he that formed that Spirit, and endowed Man with it.

5. He that knows things more secret and unsearchable than our most secret actions can be, must needs know them how secret soever they be. Now there are many things more close and secret than any action of ours can possibly be, and yet God knows them. The Thoughts of the Heart are more secret than any external Action, so secret that no Creature can search them; the Devil himself hath but a conjectural Guess at them. But the Lord telleth unto Man what is his thought, as Amos 4. 13. So Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord, search the Heart, I try the Reins; i. e. The most obscure, inward and deep secrets lodged in the Heart: Nay, which is more, he not only knows our Thoughts when they are formed, and conceived in the Heart, but long before their conception, Psal. 139. Thou knowest my Thoughts afar off. Divines generally interpret it from Eternity; even so long before they were actually thought, he foreknew every Thought we would think; and what can be imagined more secret, and undiscernable, than future Thought.

N

Now if this be known to him, how much more our Thoughts formed into Projects and Designs, and these executed by external Actions? O deceive not your selves with hopes of Secrecy; nothing can be a Secret to him that knows the Counsels of all Hearts.

6. He that providentially brings to light the most secret contrivances of Men, and publishes them before all Israel, and before the Sun, must needs see them, and know them. How closely had Achan covered his Wickedness? He never suspected a Discovery, yet God brought it to light. With how much contrivance was the Sin of David covered, yet God discovered it, Thou didst this thing secretly, but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the Sun, 1 Sam. 12. 12. Histories abound with Examples of God's bringing to light Murders, so secretly committed that it was impossible they should ever be revealed in this World, without a Miracle of Providence; and yet so they have been brought to light. Bessus having committed such a Murder, fancied the Swallows that were chattering in the Chimney, had said, Bessus killed a Man, and thereupon confessed the Fact. How secure were the Contrivers of the Popish Powder-Plot, that Catholick Villany, in a double sense having sworn all their Accomplices to secrecy, and managed the whole design so closely, that Guy Fawx upon the discovery of it, said, The Devil must needs be the Discoverer of it: How easy were it to expatiate upon this Theme? But I will not be tiresome in Instances: All Ages are the witnesses of this Truth. Who then can deny or question that great and confessed Truth, Dan. 2. 28. There is a God in Heaven that reveals Secrets: And if he reveals them, he must needs know them.

7. He that will judge all Secrets, cannot but know them. Now God will judge the Secrets of Men in that great day. Rom. 2. 16. God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil, Eccl. 12 ult. The Judge of the whole Earth will not judge at random, his Judgment will be infallible, because his Omniscience is so. His Eyes are upon the ways of Man, and he seeth all his goings; for he will not lay upon Man more than right, that he should enter into Judgment with God, Job 34. 21. 23.

So that the truth of this point is beyond all controversy and contradiction, That the whole World affords no place of secrecy or security for a Sinner, to escape the observing Eye, and righteous Hand of God.

The Uses follow in these Inferences.

1. Infer. If this be so, then Time, Place and Opportunity, how much soever they seem to promise secrecy and concealment, should never further a Temptation to sin.

Suppose all circumstances concurring, so that the Eye of Reason you seem secured from the dreadful consequences of sin; yet methinks the consideration of this truth should sufficiently deter you from a wicked purpose. Prov. 5. 20. And why will thou, my Son, be ravished with a strange Woman, and embrace the bosom of a Stranger? For the ways of Man are before the Eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. There be four things which strengthen temptations to sin, and particularly the sin of uncleanness upon Seamen. First, The absence of lawful Remedies. Secondly, The presence of alluring Objects. Thirdly, The instigation of wicked Examples. Fourthly, And the Arts of Concealment, being remote from their acquaintance; so that their Sins, in probability, shall never disgrace them. This last circumstance is not the least: O how many hath it prevailed upon! But I hope you will never yield to this temptation, whose Heart and Strength is broken by this consideration of the Eye of God upon you. A chaste Woman being once sollicited to folly, told him that sollicited her, She could never yield to the Motion, till he could find a place where God should not see.

Nay, my Friends, it should do more than restrain you from the gross acts of Sin, it should powerfully curb the very thoughts and first motions of Sin in your Hearts. That was the use holy Job made of this truth, Job 31. 1. 4. I have made a Covenant with mine Eyes, why then should I think upon a Maid? Doth he not see my ways, and count all my steps.

Suppose you should carry your Wickedness so close, that none on Earth should know it; yet the Lord sees it, and will bring it into judgment, and your own Conscience is privy to it. I pray, Sirs, tell me, is it not a great comfort to a Malefactor, that he acted his Crime so closely that none but the Judge, and one Authentick Witness more, (whose testimony is as good as a thousand) beheld it? Why this is the case of all secret Sinners. But to press home this great and necessary truth more particularly, I beseech you to consider.

1. God doth not only behold you, but beholds you with detestation and abhorrence in your ways of Iniquity: It is a sight that grieves him to the Heart, Gen. 6. 5, 6. And the Lord saw the Wickedness of Man was great on the Earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his Heart was only evil continually. Here was wickedness, great wickedness, breaking out externally, and evil, only evil, and that continually working internally. So that both Heart and Life were evil extensively, intensively and protensively. This the Lord saw, and how it affected him, the sixth Verse tells you, And it repented the Lord he had made Man on the Earth, and it grieved him at the Heart. Ah it cuts him to the Heart, to see your sinful Hearts and Courses. Nothing can be so contrary to the pure and holy Nature of God as this is. This made the Prophet admire how his Patience could endure such a sight. Hab. 1. 13. Thou art of purer Eyes than to behold Evil, and canst not look upon Iniquity; wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously? &c. And if he should say, Lord how canst thou behold thy self affronted by vile Creatures, and hold thy hands from avenging it? O the stupendious Patience of God!

2. It doth not only grieve him to the Heart, but it puts his Patience to the greatest Tryal and Exercise in beholding it. Therefore he is said, to endure with much long-suffering, Rom. 9. 22. It doth, as it were, create a Conflict betwixt his Patience and Justice. He is so provoked by your sin, that he expresses it as a difficulty to bear it, Amos 2. 13. I am pressed under you, as a Cart is pressed that is full of Sheaves: Burdened till the Axle-tree of infinite Patience be ready to crack under the weight.

Nay Thirdly, He doth not only see your Evils, but he registers and records them, in order to a day of Reckoning with you for all together, except ye repent. Deut. 32. 34. Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my Treasures? A Metaphor taken from the Clerk of the Assize, who seals up the Bag of Indictments, against the time of Tryal. You think if you can blinde the Eyes of Men, all is well, you shall hear no more of it: Ah but it is sealed up among God's Treasures, i. e. the things he records and reserves for the day of Account.

4. God doth not only see you, but he will also one day make you see your selves, and your ways, and that with Horror and Consternation. You think you shall taste nothing but the sweet and pleasure of Sin; but how are you deceived? The days are coming, when Sin, that is now pleasant, shall be turned into Wormwood and Gall. You will not see the Evil of it, and because you see it not, you think God doth not. These things (saith God) hast thou done, and I kept silence; and thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thy self; but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine Eyes, Psal. 50. 21. God sees them now, and he will make you see them too, by opening your Eyes in this World graciously, or in that to come judicially.

5. God doth not only see your ways, but he will make all the World see them too. For, there is nothing hid that shall not be revealed, nor covered that shall not be made known, Matt. 10. 26. There is a day when God will make manifest the hidden counsels of the Heart, 2 Cor. 4. 5. When that which hath been spoken in darkness, shall be heard in light; and that which ye have spoken in the Ear in Closets, shall be proclaimed upon the house tops, Luke 12. 3. Well then, whenever the occasions and opportunities of Sin are presented to you, under this encouragement of Secrecy, I beseech you remember this truth, that no place can hide you from the Eye of God. He sees all your ways, yea, he sees them with abhorrence; the sight of them is the greatest Exercise of his Patience: His sight of them is not a transient Glance, but he sees and records your Evils, they are sealed up among his Treasures: He sees, and will make you see them too, with Horror, when he shall set them in order before you. He sees them, and will make Angels and Men see them in the great day. O then, never let Secrecy any more encourage you to sin.

2. Inference. What prodigious Sinners must they be, that seek no covert for their Sin in darkness, but with an impudent Face declare, yea, glory in their Shame? Who are not ashamed to sin openly with a bare Face, and a Whore's Forehead? These are Sinners of the first magnitude. They declare their Sin as Sodom, and hide it not, Isa. 3. 9. It is natural to Man to endeavour to hide his Sin as Adam; and you see from the Text, guilty Sinners fain would (if it were possible) fly to any obscure corner from the observation of God and Men; and it is a Mercy God hath planted such an Affection, as shame is, the Soul of Man, to be a Bridle to restrain his exorbitant Lusts. But yet there is a Generation of monstrous Sinners, who have so far unmanned themselves, That they are not at all ashamed when they commit Abominations, neither can they blush, Jer. 6. 15. If there be any remains of shame left in them, they exercise it upon a wrong Object: They are ashamed of that which would be their glory, and glory in that which is their shame; they add Impudence to their Sin, and blush not to proclaim that which others study to conceal.

Such a vile Temper as this, shews a Man even ripe for Wrath; he hath even filled up his measure, and is come to the very culminating point and top of Wickedness. There be some Men arrived to such a degree of Holiness, that all that converse with them, judge them even ripe for Heaven: They speak the Dialect, and have the very favour of Heaven upon them. Others are come to such a prodigious height of Impiety, that understanding Men cannot but conclude they are nigh unto Damnation; they speak the very Language, and have the very scent of Hell upon them. Such are they that openly declare their Sin as Sodom, and glory in their shame.

Thus we see some Drunkards will glory in their Strength, to pour down Wine and strong Drink, and can boast of the number of their Cups: Some Adulterers can glory in their acts of Wickedness, not sufficing themselves to damn their own Souls, but labouring to infect and corrupt as many as they can by their filthy Tongues, that they may draw them into the same Misery. We can hardly tell how to screw up Sin one Peg higher than this. First to practise Sin, then defend it, then boast of it. Sin is first a Man's Burden, next his Custom, next his Delight, and then his Excellency. Lord, whither is Man fall'n that Holiness should ever be his disgrace, and sin yea the vilest of sins, his Glory! O the power of Divine Patience!

3. Inference. If the Eye of God searches every obscure corner in the World, to behold the Evil that is committed there, then certainly the Eye of God cannot but look into every secret place in the World, to see the good that is done there. The Eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the Evil and the Good, Prov. 15. 3. The Good as well as the Evil; yea, he beholds with delight the Good done in secret.

As some Sinners seek corners to act the Wickedness in, and cannot satisfy themselves to commit Sin in the light, (for as our Saviour saith Joh. 3. 20. He that doth evil hateth the light) so on the contrary, a truly godly Man seeks Corners to pray in, to meditate in, and to examine his own Heart in, and thinks these Duties of Godliness can never be managed with too great a privacy; not that he is in the least ashamed of his Duty; for that is not the reason, but he is afraid of Hypocrisy, when Duties lye too open, and exposed to the Eyes of Men. A Sinner takes his full liberty to vent his corruptions, when he can do it in secret; and a Saint takes his full liberty to work and exercise his Graces, when no Eye but the Eye of God sees him. Thou, when thou prayest (saith our Saviour) enter into thy Closet, and shut thy Door, and Pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father (which seeth in secret) shall reward thee openly. O how much better is it, both as to our present comfort, and future account, to get into a Corner to Pray, than to Whore or Drink? To pour out your Souls to God graciously than to pour out your Lusts against God so wickedly? How contrary are the Principles of Grace and Corruption? The study of Sinners is to hide their Evils from the Eyes of Men, the study of a Saint is to hide his Duties from the Eyes of Men. The Sinner would not have the World suspect what he hath been about, nor would the Saint have the World know what he hath been about. The way of an Adulterer is as the way of an Eagle in the Air, or as a Serpent upon a Rock; i. e. a secret way, where they leave no prints or tracks behind them: So is the way of an adulterous Woman, she eateth and wipeth her Mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness, Prov. 30. 19, 20. By wiping the Mouth, is there meant, preventing all suspicion, suffering no sign of the Action to remain behind them: So contrarily, a gracious Person that hath been with God in secret Prayer, or Fasting, is Duty is ended, he labours to avoid all Oſten-ations. And therefore you have the caution from Chriſt, Matth. 6. 17, 18. But thou, when thou faſteſt nointhy head, and waſh thy face; that thou appear ot unto Men to faſt, but unto thy Father which is in ecret. The meaning is, carry thy private Duties o cloſe, that none may know what paſſeth between God and thee: When thou haſt been entertained n ſecret with hidden Manna, a Feaſt of fat things, wipe thy Mouth in a Holy ſenſe, i. e. wipe off all uſpicion of Hypocriſy and Vanity by a prudent and humble concealment. Religion doth not lay all open, as we ſay: As Sinners have their ſecret Plea-ſures, their ſtoll'n Waters which are weet to them; ſo the Saints have their ſecret elights in God, their hidden Manna, which no lan knows bnt he that eateth of it. And as the ye of God vindictively beholds the one, ſo it de-ightfully beholds the other; and ſo you find it, ant. 2. 14. O my Dove, (ſaith Chriſt to the Church) Thou art in the Clifts of the Rocks, in the ecret places of the Stairs: Let me ſee thy Counte-ance, let me hear thy Voice; for ſweet is thy Voice, nd thy Countenance comely. Let this encourage ou to ſecret Duties; let not others find more leaſure in ſecret Luſts, than you can do in God nd ſecret Duties.

Non eſt Reli-gio ubi omnia patent.

4. Inference. Doth the Eye of God ſee all the vil and Wickedneſs that is committed in all the ecret corners of the World, how admirable then the Patience of God towards the World! who an imagine how much Wickedneſs is ſecretly ractiſed in a Town or City every day? Or, if ll the Villanies that are perpetrated in a ſmall ircumference in one day, were known to us, we ould admire that God doth not make us, like odom, for Judment and Deſolation, before the ext day: What then are the innumerable ſwarms f Sin, which are as the Sand upon the Sea-ſhore, rom all the parts and corners of the Earth! Alas, here is not the ten thouſandth part of the groſ-er ſort of Wickedneſſes committed in the World, hat ever comes to our Eye or Ear; and if it did, e cannot eſtimate the evil of Sin, as God doth; or feel with that reſentment the Burden of it, s he doth; and yet the long-ſuffering God for-ears it with infinite Patience. Surely his Power as not more diſcovered in making the World, an it is in forbearing to deſtroy it again, for e Wickedneſs that is in it. But the World ands for the Churche's ſake that is in it. And ere it not that the Lord of Hoſts had left unto us ſmall remnant, we had been as Sodom, we had en like unto Gomorrah, Iſa. 1. 9. There is alſo elect Remnant to be called and gathered by e Goſpel out of it, in their ſeveral Generati-ns; and when that number ſhall be accompliſh-d, God will ſet fire to the four Quarters of it, nd it ſhall lye in white Aſhes; till then, the long-ffering of God waiteth.

5. Inference. If God ſee all the ſecret Wickedneſs hat is committed in every corner of the World; ow clear is it, that there is a Judgment to come, nd that this Judgment will be exact?

That there is a Judgment to come is by this ma-feſt, that there is abundance of Sin committed the World, which never comes to light here, r never will in this World. It is true, ſome ens Sins are open, and the Judgments of God on them are as open, but it is not ſo with all. he Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Tim. 5. 24. Some Mens Sins e open before-hand, going before-hand to Judgment, and ſome Mens they follow after. Some Mens Sins are written, as it were, in their Foreheads, every one ſees them, but others follow after, are not diſ-covered till the day of the revelation of the Secrets of all Hearts, and then that which is now done in Cloſets ſhall be proclaimed as upon Houſe-tops: Though they were never put to ſhame for their Sins, in the places where they committed them, yet God will ſhame them, before Men and Angels. This is the day to judge Secrets, 1 Cor. 4. 5.

And, as it is certain there will be ſuch a Judg-ment, ſo it is certain this Judgment will be exact; for the Judge of all hath ſeen all: Whatever he charges any Man with, hath been acted before his Face, Pſal. 90. 8. Thou ſetteſt our ſecret Sins in the light of thy Countenance. Here can be no mi-ſtake, the Omniſcient God will judge for what he hath ſeen; For his Eyes are upon the ways of Man, and he ſeeth all his goings, for he will not lay upon Man more than right that he ſhould enter into Judg-ment with God. The meaning is, he cannot mi-ſtake in his Judgment, being Omniſcient, and having ſeen all the ways of Man; ſo that there can be no Plea offered by any Man for a reverſe of his ſentence.

O then let us be exact and careful, as well in our ſecrets as in our open Actions; for God ſhall bring every work into Judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Eccl. 12. ult.

6. Inference. Laſtly, If the Eye of God be in e-very place upon us, and all our Actions: Then let thoſe whoſe condition of Life hath ſent them out of the Eyes and Obſervations of their Parents and Maſters, keep the ſenſe of God's Eye upon their Hearts, as ever they would eſcape Sin and Ruin.

It is no ſmall advantage to young unprincipled Perſons, to live under the Diſcipline of pious and careful Governors; but it often falls out, that they are early tranſplanted into another Soil, ſent into Foreign Countries in order to their Education or Employment; and as often are there corrupt-ed and debauched by the evil Examples of the pla-ces where they reſide; they learn another Lan-guage, or drive another Trade than that their Pa-rents or Maſters deſigned them for. But if the ſenſe of this great Truth might accompany them where-ever they are, O what a Soveraign Anti-dote would it prove againſt thoſe deadly Poyſons of Temptations! This alone would be a ſufficient Preſervative. If our Children and Servants have but the awful ſenſe of God's Eye upon them, we may turn them looſe in the wide World without Fear.

If Providence ſhall direct this diſcourſe to your hands, my Hearts deſire and prayer for you is, That the Spirit of the Lord would imprint this great Truth upon your Hearts. And I am the more moved to endeavour your Preſervation, up-on the conſideration of the apparent danger you are in, and the manifold diſappointments and miſ-chiefs that muſt unavoidably follow the corrupting of your tender Years. The danger you are in is great, whether you conſider, Firſt, The infecting, catching nature of Sin. No Plague is more infectious and inſinuating than Sin is. Many are the Wiles, Devices, Stratagems, and Baits, Satan lays to draw you into Sin, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Or,

Secondly, The proneneſs that is in your own Na-ture, to cloſe with the offers and temptations that you are tryed with; it is as great a wonder if you eſcape, as that one that lives in a Peſt-houſe, should remain healthy; or that dry Tinder should not catch, when thousands of Sparks fly about it, and light upon it, Or,

Thirdly, The absence of all those means by which you have formerly been preserved from sin. You are now without the Ordinances of God, the Family Duties, the Admonitions, Counsels, Examples and Observations of your Parents, Masters and Friends: All which have been of great use to keep you from Sin, and repress the Vanities of Youth. Or lastly, Fourthly, The manifold furtherances to Temptations which your Age affords; Childhood and Youth are vanity. Inconsiderateness, Rashness, Injudiciousness, and the want of Experience, do all cast you into the very Snare. See how the Holy Ghost hath signifyed the danger of Persons at your age, in Prov. 7. 7.

All these things do greatly endanger you. And if any, or all of them together, prevail to the vitiating and corrupting of you, then what a train of sad consequences will follow upon it! For,

1. The Great God will be dishonoured and reproached by you, even that God whose distinguishing Mercies are now before your Eyes, and should be admired by you, that caused you to spring up in a better Soil, and not from Idolaters in a Land of Darkness.

2. Conscience will be wounded and polluted with guilt; and though at present you feel not the remorse and gnawings of it, yet now you are preparing for it. The sins of Youth, are Complaints and Sorrows of old Age, Job 13. 26.

3. The Hearts of your Friends (if Godly) will be grieved and greatly troubled, to find their expectations and hopes disappointed; and all those Prayers for you, and Counsels bestowed on you, to come to nothing. If an unequal match by Esau was such a grief of Heart to Isaac and Rebecca, what will prophaneness and uncleanness be to your Parents? Gen. 26. 34.

4. The serviceableness and comfort of your whole Life, will, in all probability, be destroyed by the corruption of your Youth. If Blossoms be withered, and Buds nipt, what Fruit can be expected? To conclude,

5. Your precious and immortal Souls are hazarded to all Eternity. And what shall it profit a Man to gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? Or what shall a Man give in exchange for his Soul? Mat. 16. 26.

All this mischief may be happily prevented by the serious consideration of this point, you have now been reading. For if God shall fix that Truth in your Hearts by Faith, then

First, Instead of running with others into the same excess of Riot, you will keep your selves pure and unspotted in an unclean defiling World. You will answer all temptations to Sin, as Joseph did, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this great Wickedness, and sin against God?

Secondly, Instead of joyning with others in sin, you will mourn for the Sins of others. You will say with David, Psal. 120. 5. Woe is me, that I sojourn in Meshec, that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar. Your Soul, like Lot's, will be vexed from day to day with the filthy Conversations of the Wicked. 2 Pet. 1. 17, 18.

Thirdly, Instead of returning to your Country with a wounded Name and Conscience, you will return full of inward Comfort and Peace, and the joy of all your Friends and Relations.

Fourthly, To conclude, you will give fair Encouragements to the expectations of all that know you, of becoming useful Instruments for the Glory of God, and benefit of the World in your Generation. O therefore beg of God, that this Truth may be deeply engraven upon your Hearts.

SERMON IV.

DEUT. VIII. 17, 18.

And thou say in thy heart, my Power, and the might of mine Hand hath gotten me this Wealth: But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee Power to get Wealth.

THIS Context contains a necessary and very seasonable Caution to the Israelities, who were now passing out of their Wilder-ss-straits into the rich and fruitful Land of Ca-, which abounded with all Earthly Blessings d Comforts. Now when the Lord was about give them possession of this good Land, he first rns them some wholesome Caveats to prevent e abuse of these Mercies. He knew how apt ey were to forget him in a prosperous Estate, d ascribe all their comfortable fruitions to their n Prudence and Valour; to prevent this he re-nds them of their former estate, and warns them out their future Estate. He reminds them of eir former condition whilst they subsisted upon s immediate care in the Wilderness. Verse 15, 16. o led thee through the great and terrible Wilder-ss, wherein were fiery Serpents, and Scorpions, and rought, where there was no Water; here were their angers and Wants. Who brought thee forth Wa-r out of the Rock of Flint, who fed thee in the Wil-rness with Manna, which thy Fathers knew not; here re their supplies in these straits. That he might mble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee d at thy latter end: Here was the wise and gra-us design of God in all this.

But wherein did God humble them by feeding m with Manna? Were they not shrewdly hum-d (saith Mr. Gurnal, Vol. 2. p. 345. an ingeni-Author) to be fed with such a dainty Dish, ch had God for its Cook, and was called Angels d for its delicacy? It was not the meanness of Fare, but the manner of having it, by which d intended to humble them. The Food was ellent, but they had it from hand to mouth; hat God kept the Key of their Cupboard, they d to his immediate Allowance. This was an bling away. But now the dispensation of Pro-ence was just upon the change, they were going Land, where they should eat Bread without scarce-, Verse 9. and have their comforts in a more ural stated and sensible way; and now would the danger. Therefore, e not only reminds them of their former E-e, but in this Text cautions them about their re Estate, Say not in thy Heart, my Power, or might of my Hand, hath gotten me this Wealth,

In this Caution we have these two things es-ially to observe:

The false cause of their Prosperity removed.

The true and proper Cause thereof asserted.

The false Cause removed: Not their Power, or the might of their hand. That is said to be got-ten by the hand, that is gotten by our Wisdom, as well as Labour: Head-work and Wit-work, is Hand-work in the sense of this Text. It cannot be denyed, but they were a great People, Prudent, Industrious, and had an excellent Polity among them: But yet, tho' they had all these natural ex-ternal means of enriching themselves in that fer-tile Soil, God will by no means allow them to ascribe their Succes and Wealth to any of these Causes: For alas, what are all these without his Blessing?

2. The true and proper cause asserted: It is the Lord that gives thee power to get Wealth. i. e. All thy Care, Labour, Wisdom, Strength, signifyes no-thing without him; it is not your Pains, but his Blessing that makes your Designs to prosper: And therefore in all your Prosperity, still acknowledge him as the Author of all. Hence note, Doct. That the Prosperity and Succes of our Af-fairs, is not to be ascribed to our own Abilities, but to the Blessing of God upon our lawful endea-vours.

We find two Proverbs in one Chapter that seem to differ in the account they give of this matter; and indeed they do but seem so. It is said in Prov. 10. 4. The hand of the diligent maketh Rich; ascri-bing Riches and Prosperity to humane diligence. And Verse 22. The Blessing of the Lord it maketh Rich. But these two are not really opposed to each other, but the one subordinated to the other. The diligent Hand, with God's Bles-sing upon it, makes Rich; neither of them alone, but both conjoyned. A diligent Hand cannot make rich without God's Blessing; and God's Blessing doth not ordinarily make rich without a diligent Hand. And these two are put together in their proper places, 1. Chron. 22, 16. Up and be doing, and the Lord be with you. It is a vain pre-tence for any Man to say, If the Lord be with me, I may sit still, and do nothing; and a wicked one to say, If I am up and doing, I shall prosper whe-ther God be with me or no. The Sluggard would fain prosper without diligence; and the Atheist hopes to prosper by his diligence alone: But Chri-stians expect their Prosperity from God's Blessing, in the way of honest diligence.

Faith must not stifle Industry, nor Industry blind Faith.

It is a common thing for Men to benumb their own Arms, and make them as dead and useless by leaning too much upon them: So it is in a Moral, as well as Natural way. All the Prudence and Pains in the World avail nothing without God. So saith the Psalmist, in Psal. 127. 2. It is in vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the Bread of Sorrow, for so he giveth his Beloved sleep.

A Man would think he that rises betimes, fares hard, works hard, sits up late, cannot but be a thriving Man; and probably he would be so, if God's Blessing did second his diligence and frugality. But the Psalmist intends it of diligence in a separate sense; a diligent Hand working alone, and then it is all in vain, and serves only to confirm the common Proverb, Early up, and never the nearer. Labour without God cannot prosper; and labour against God will not only destroy it self, but the Labourer to boot.

Now, that this is really so as the Doctrine states it, I shall endeavour to make evident.

1. By a General Demonstration of the whole matter.
2. By a particular Enumeration of the ordinary Causes and Means of all Success; which are all dependent things upon the Lord's Blessing.

First, That Success in Business is not in the power of our Hand, but in the Hand of Providence to dispose it as he pleases, and to whom he pleases, appears by this, That Providence sometimes blasts and frustrates the most prudent and well-laid designs of Men; and in the mean time succeeds and prospers more weak and improbable ones. What is more common in the Observation of all Ages than this? One Man shall toyl as in the Fire, for very Vanity; run to and fro, plot and study all the ways in the World to get an Estate, deny Back and Belly, and all will not do: He shall never be able to attain what he strives after, but his designs shall be still fruitless. Another hath neither a Head to contrive, nor a Hand to labour as the former hath; nor doth he torture his Brains about it, but manages his Affairs with less judgment, and spends fewer thoughts about it, and yet Success follows it. It shall be cast in upon some, who as they did not, so (considering the weak management of their business) had little rational Encouragement to expect it; and fly from others, who industriously pursue it in the prudent choice and diligent use of all the proper means of attaining it. And this is not only an Observation grounded upon our own experience, but confirmed by the wisest of Men; Eccles. 9. 11. I returned, and saw under the Sun, that the Race is not to the swift, nor the Battel to the Strong; neither yet Bread to the Wise, nor yet Riches to Men of Understanding, nor yet favour to Men of Skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all. If two Men run for a Prize, Reason gives the Prize to the swiftest; if two Armies joyn Battel, Reason gives the Victory to the Strongest; if two Men undertake a Design to get Wealth, Reason gives the Riches to the Wisest; yea, but Providence sometimes disposes it quite contrary to the verdict of Reason, and the Prize is given to the Slowest, the Victory to the Weakest, the Estate to the more shallow Capacity: So that these Events seem to fall out rather casually, than answerably to the means employed about them. And who that observes this, can doubt but it is the Hand of God's Providence, and not our Diligence, that disposes the issues of these things? For why doth God so often step out of the ordinary way, and cross his hands, as old Israel did, laying the right hand upon the Younger, and the left upon the Elder; I mean give Success to the Weak, and Disappointments to the Strong, but to convince us of this great truth which I here bring it to confirm? And because Men are so apt to ascribe to their own Prudence, and disown Providence, therefore it sometimes makes the case much plainer than so: It denies Riches to the Industrious, that live for no other end but to get them, and casts them in upon those that seek them not at all, and indeed are scarcely competent for Business. Aristides, one of the wisest Men of his Age, was yet still so poor, that Plutarch said, it brought a Slur upon Justice it self, as if she were not able to maintain her Followers. Socrates, one of the prime Grecian Sages, was so exceeding poor, that Apuleius could not but note, That Poverty was become an Inmate with Philosophy; when in the mean time, the empty, shallow and foolish, shall come up with it, and overtake it without any pains at all, which others prosecute in the most rational Course of their Life, and all to no purpose. Thus it is noted of Pope Clement the Fifth, None more Rich, none more Foolish. And this is the ground of that Proverb, Fortuna favet fatuos; Fortune favours Fools. Though the Author of that Proverb, in nicknaming Providence, shewed as little Wisdom as he that is the subject of it.

Pauperrima Philosophia Vernacula.

Epitom. Hist. Gallic.

By all which, this point is in the general made good; it is not Industry but Providence, that directs and commands the Success of Business: being much in the attaining of Riches, as the Apostle saith it is in the obtaining of Righteousness, The Gentiles which followed not after Righteousness have attained to Righteousness; but Israel which followed after the Law of Righteousness, hath not attained to the Law of Righteousness, Rom. 9. 30. 31. it is here, for the Vindication of the Honour of Providence, which Men would scarcely own, if it did not thus baffle them sometimes: They that follow the World cannot obtain it; and they attain it that follow it not; that all Men may see that good is not in their own hand; and lest Man, who is not only a coveteous Creature, and would engross all to himself, but as Proud as Covetous, should ascribe all to himself. But this will farther appear Secondly, By a particular Enumeration of the ordinary Causes and Means of all Success in Business, which are all dependent things upon a higher Cause.

Now, if we proceed upon a rational account we shall find five things required to the Success of our Affairs; and that I may speak to your capacity, I will instance in that affair of Merchandizing in which you are employed, as the Hands that execute what the Heads of your Merchants contrive; and will shew you, that neither their Wisdom in contriving, nor your Skill and Industry in managing their designs, can prosper without the leave and blessing of Divine Providence. Let us therefore consider what is necessary to the raising of an Estate in that way of Employment; and you will find that in a rational and ordinary way, Success cannot be expected, unless,

1. The Designs and Projects be prudently laid and moulded with much consideration and foresight. An Error here is like an Error in the first Concoction, which is not to be rectifyed afterwards. The Wisdom of the Prudent (saith Solomon) is to understand his way; that is, to understand thoroughly to consider the particular Designs of Business in which he is to engage. Rashness and Inconsiderateness here hath been the Ruin of many thouthousand Enterprises. And if a Design be never so well laid, yet,

2. No success in Business can be rationally expected, except there be an Election of proper Instruments to manage it. The best laid Design in the World may be spoyled by an ill-management. If the Persons employed, be either uncapable or unfaithful, what but Trouble and Disappointment can be expected? He that sendeth a Message (saith Solomon) by the hands of a Fool, cutteth off the Legs, and drinketh damage. It is as if a Man should send him on his Business that hath no Legs to go (i. e.) one that is incompetent for the business he is employed about. All that a Man shall reap from such a design, is damage. And if the Instrument employed be never so capable, yet if he be not also faithful to the Trust committed to him, all is lost: And such is the depth of Deceit in the heart of Man, that few or none can be secured against it. Solomon was the wisest of Men, and yet fatally miscarried in this matter. He seeing the young Man (Jeroboam) that he was a mighty Man of Valour, and that he was industrious, made him Ruler over all the charge of the House of Joseph, 1 King. 11. 28. And this was the Man that rent the Kingdom from his Son, even ten Tribes from the House of David. And yet,

3. Let Designs be projected with the greatest Prudence, and committed to the Management of the fittest Instruments; all is nothing as to Success, without the concurrence of Health, Strength, favourable Winds, security from the hands of Enemies, and perils of the Deep. If any of these be wanting, the Design miscarries, and all our Projects fail. How often are hopeful and thriving Undertakings frustrated by the failure of any one of these Perquisites? Go to now, ye that say, To day or to morrow we will go unto such a City, and remain there a Year, and buy and sell, and get gain; whereas ye know not what shall be on the Morrow; for what is your Life? It is even a Vapour that appears for a little while, and then vanisheth away, Jam. 4. 13, 14. How soon are the purposes of Men's Hearts broken off, and their Thoughts perish in one day? They think to send or go to such a place, and there enrich themselves, and return prosperous; but sometimes Death, sometimes Captivity, sometimes cross Winds, dash all their hopes.

4. Proper Seasons must be nickt, and hit, else all Success and expectation of Encrease is lost. There (saith Solomon) a season for every thing, and a time to every purpose under the Sun, Eccles. 3. 1. This being taken, gives facility and speedy dispatch to a Business; and therefore he gives this reason, why Man miscarries so frequently, and is disappointed in his Enterprises, because he knows not the time. Eccles. 9. 11. He comes (as one saith) when the Bird is flown. It is a wise and weighty Proverb with the Greeks, That there is [illegible] time in a short opportunity: That is, a Man hitting the season of a Business, may do more in a day, than losing it, he may be able to do in a year. This is of a special consideration in all Humane Affairs, and is the very Hinge upon which Success turns: So that to come before, is to pluck Apples before they are ripe, and to come after it, is to pick them when they are fallen and perished.

5. Lastly, In getting Wealth, the Leaks in our Estates must be stopped; else we do but put it into a Bag with Holes, as the Prophet's Phrase is in Hag. 1. 6. If a Man lose as much one way as he gains another, there can be no Increase. Hence it is, that many are kept low and poor all their days: If one Design prospers, yet another miscarries; or, if all succeed well abroad, yet there is a secret Consumption of it at home, by Prodigality, Riot, Luxury, or a secret Curse upon it, which the Scripture calls God's blowing upon it, Hag. 1. 9. If therefore by any of these ways, our gains moulder away, we do but disquiet our selves in vain, and labour in the Fire for very vanity. Thus you see what things are requisite to the advancement of an Estate, upon a prudential Account.

Now let us particularly observe what a dependence here is upon Providence in all these things; and then it will be clear that our Good is not in our hand, nor Success at our beck, but it is the Lord that gives us power to get Wealth. For,

As to the moulding and projecting of a Design, we may say both of the prudent Merchant and ingenious Seaman, what the Prophet doth of the Husbandman, Isa. 28. 16. It is his God that instructs him to discretion, and teacheth him: There is indeed a Spirit in Man, But it is the Inspiration of the Almighty that giveth Understanding, Job 32. 8. The Faculty is Man's, but the Light of Wisdom, whether natural or spiritual, is God's: And the natural Faculty is of it self no more capable of directing us in our Affairs without his teaching, than the Dyal is to inform us of hours without the Sun's shining upon it. And because Men are so dull in apprehending, and backward in acknowledging it, but will lean to their own understandings; thence it is, that prudent Designs are so often blasted, and weaker ones succeeded.

And no less doth Providence manifest it self in directing to, and prospering the means and instruments employed in our business. It is of the Lord, that they prove ingenious, active and faithful Servants to us; that your Factors abroad prove not Malefactors to you; that every design is not ruined by the Negligence, Ignorance, or Treachery of them that manage it. If God qualify Men to be fit instruments to serve you, and then providentially direct you to them, his Hand is thankfully to be owned in both. It was no small Mercy to Abraham, that he had so discreet, pious, and faithful a Servant to manage even his weightiest Affairs, so prudently and prosperously for him. Laban, Pharaoh and Jethro, never prospered, as when Jacob, Joseph and Moses, had the charge of their business. Laban ingenuously acknowledged, That he had learned by experience the Lord hath blessed him for Jacob's sake, Gen. 30. 27. A Heathen you see is more ingenuous in owning the Mercy of God to him in this case, than many professed Christians are, who sacrifise all to their own Net, and burn Incense to their Drag, (i. e.) Idolise the means and instruments of their Prosperity, and see nothing of God in it.

And then as to the preservation of those that go down into the Sea, to do our business in the great Waters; who can but acknowledge this to be the peculiar Work of God? Doth not dayly Experience shew how often poor Seamen are cut off in the prosecution of our Designs? Sometimes by Sickness, sometimes by Storms, and sometimes by Enemies, to whom they become a Prey. If they escape all these, yet how often do they lye Windbound, or hindered by cross Accidents, till the proper Season be over, and the Design lost? Certainly, if Providence shall so far favour Men, as to prevent all these, to command Winds fit for their purpose, restrain Enemies, preserve Life, and carry them safely and seasonably to their Ports, it deserves a thankful acknowledgment; and those that do not acknowledge Providence, do disoblige it.

Lastly, Who is it that stops the Leaks in your Estates, prevents the wasting of your Substance, and secures to you what you possess? Is it not the Lord? How many fair Estates moulder away insensibly, and come to nothing? Certainly, as there is a secret Blessing in some Families, so that themselves can scarce give any account how they are provided for, so there is a secret Blast and Consumption upon others, which brings Poverty upon them like an armed Man. And this is the sense of that Scripture, Hag. 1. 6. Ye have sown much, and bring in little Ye eat, but ye have not enough: Ye drink, but are not filled with drink: Ye clothe you, but are not warm: And he that earneth Wages, earneth Wages to put it into a Bag with holes; or, as in the Hebrew, a Bag pierced, or bored through; what goes in at one end, goes out at another, and so all labour is lost; nothing stays with them to do them good. So that it is an undeniable Truth, That Prosperity and Success is not to be ascribed to our Abilities, but to the Blessing of God upon our lawful Endeavours.

1. Inference. And if so, how are they justly reprovable, that wholly depends upon means in the neglect of Providence; that never eye God, or acknowledge him in any of their ways! This is a very great evil, and highly provoking to the Lord: It is the fruit and discovery of the natural Atheism of the Hearts of Men. How confident are Men of Success and Prosperity, when second Causes lye fair for it, and smile upon them! And on the contrary, how dejected and heartless, when they seem to lye cross to their hopes! O how few consider and believe that great Truth, Eccl. 9. 1. That the Righteous, and the Wise, and their Works are in the hand of God. To be in the hand of God, noteth both their subjection to his Power, and to his directive Providence. Whether your Works be in your hand, or put out of your hand, they always are in God's hand, to prosper or frustrate them at his Pleasure.

Foolish Man decreeth Events, without the leave of Providence; as if he were absolute Lord of his own Actions, and their Success. Indeed you may then speak of Success, when you have asked God's leave. Job 22. 28. Acquaint thy self with God, then shalt thou decree a thing and it shall be established. But your confidence in the means, whilst God is neglected, will surely be followed either with a Disappointment or a Curse. For what is this, but to labour without God, yea, to labour against God? For so do all they, that give the Glory of God to the Creature, that set the instrumental and subordinate in the place of the principal efficient Cause. It is just with God to deny you your comfort in those things, wherein you rob him of his Glory.

2. Inference. How vain and unreasonable are the proud boasts of Men, in the midst of their Successes and Prosperity? If God be the sole Author of it, and it is not in your power, nor the might of your hand, that hath gotten you this Wealth? why do you glory in it, as if it were the effect and fruit of your own Prudence and Industry? How soon do the Spirits of Men rise with their Estates? How haughtily do they look? How proudly do they speak? What a sensible change of Temper doth a small change of Condition work? It is an exceeding hard thing to keep down the Heart, when Providence exalteth a Man's Estate. Magna felicitatis est, a felicitate non vinci, saith Ambr. It is a great Felicity not to be overcome by Felicity. That Man is surely rich in Grace, whose Graces suffer no eclipse by his Riches. It is as hard to be prosperous and humble, as to be afflicted and chearful. But to keep down thy heart in times of Success and Prosperity, I will offer thee, Reader, some few humbling Considerations about this Matter.

1. And the first is this, Though Providence do succeed and prosper thy Earthly designs, yet this is no Argument at all of the Love of God to thy Soul: Thou mayest be the object of his Hatred and Wrath for all this. No Man knows either love or hatred by all that is before him, Eccles. 9. 1. How weak an evidence for Heaven must that be, which millions now in Hell have had in a greater measure than you have? The least dram of Grace is a better pledge of Happiness, than the greatest Sum of Gold and Silver that ever lay in any Man's Treasury. Externals distinguish not Internals; you cannot so much as guess what a Man's Spiritual estate is, by the view of his Temporal. Ishmael was a very great Man, the Head of a Princely Family, but for all that excluded from the Covenant, and all its Spiritual Blessings, Gen. 17. 20, 21. He that reads the 73d Psalm, and the 21st of Job will plainly see how wretched a case that Man is in, who hath no better evidence for the Love of God than this amounts to.

2. Be not proud of outward Prosperity and Success; for Providences are very changeable in these things; yea, it dayly rings the Changes all the World over. Many a greater Estate than yours and every way as well, yea, far better secured to the eye of Reason, hath he scattered in a moment. It is the saying of a Philosopher, speaking of the Estates of Merchants and Seamen, Non amo fœlicitatem e funibus pendentem; I like not that Happiness that hangs upon Ropes. I need not here cite Histories to confirm this Truth: There is none but can abundantly confirm it your selves, if you will but recollect those Instances and Examples which have fallen within your time and remembrance. It is a poor Happiness that may leave a Man more miserable to morrow, than he that never arrived to what you have, can be.

3. Pride not your selves in your Success; for as Providences are very changeable, so the change seems very nigh to you, when your Heart is the most lifted up, especially if you be such, to whose eternal Happiness God hath any special regard. He will be sure, he will pull down that proud Heart, and quickly order Humbling Providences to that end. He looketh upon every one that is proud, to abase him. Job 40. 11. The Heart of good Hezekiah was tickled with vain-glory, and he must needs shew the King of Babylon's Servants all his Treasures, his precious things; and at that very time came the Prophet Isaiah to him with a sad Message from the Lord, That all these Treasures in which he gloryed must be carryed to Babylon, Isa. 39. If we hope comfortably to enjoy the good of Providence, provoke it not by such vain Ostentations. I like an ingenious note, even of an Heathen,

Tu quoque fac timeas, & que tibi læta videntur
Dum loqueris, fieri tristia posse, puta.

Exercise Fear in Prosperity, and think with thy self, when thy Heart is most affected with it; whilst the boast is in thy Lips, the Scene may alter, and thy Happiness be turned into Sorrow. Whilst that proud Boast was in the mouth of Nebuchadnezzar, the Voice from Heaven told him, His Kingdom was departed from him, Dan. 4. 30, 31. Pride shews that Prosperity which feeds it, to be at its Vertical Point.

3. Inference. If Success in Business be from the Lord, then certainly the true way to Prosperity is to commend our Affairs to God by Prayer. He takes the true way to thrive, that engages God's Blessing upon his endeavours. Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass, Psal. 37. 4. It is a vile thing for any Man to grudge that time that is spent in Prayer, as so much time lost in his Business. But having pressed this Point before, I shall add no more here.

4. Inference. Doth all Success and Prosperity depend upon, and come from God? Then let it be faithfully employed to his Glory. If it be of him, and through him, then it's all the reason in the World it should be to him, Rom. 11. 36. You do but give him of his own, as David speaks. All this store cometh of thine hand, and is thine own, 1 Chron. 29. 16. He never intended your Estates for the gratifying of your Lusts, but to give you a larger capacity thereby of honouring him in the use of them. O consider, when God hath prospered your Estates abroad, and you return successfully home, now you have an opportunity of honouring God, and evidencing your sense of his goodness to you, by relieving of the Poor with a liberal and chearful Charity; by encouraging the Gospel, and making them partakers of your good things, who labour for your Souls, and dispence better things to you than you can return to them. I would not here be mis-interpreted, as though I pleaded my own Interest, under a pretence of pleading God's; no, God forbid, I am well satisfyed with a capacity of doing any good, how little soever I receive; nor can many of you reap the fruit of my labours. But I would not leave you ignorant, or regardless of so great and plain a duty as this is. You are bound to this retribution by a plain and positive Precept; Gal. 6. 6. Let him that is taught in the Word, communicate to him that teacheth in all good things. You are obliged to do it, proportionably to the Success God gives you in your Trade, 1 Cor. 16. 2. And when you have so done, not to think it any great matter, 1 Cor. 9. 11. but the discharge of a plain and necessary duty.

5. Inference. Let not your Hearts be satisfyed with all the Success and Increase in the World, except your Souls thrive as well as your Bodies, and your eternal Concerns prosper as well as your temporal. It was a pious Wish of St. John for Gaius his Host, That he might prosper, and be in health, even as his Soul prospered, 3*d. Epist. Joh. Vers.* 2. But it were to be wished, that your Souls did but prosper, as your Bodies and Estates do. It is a poor Comfort to have an increasing Estate, and a dead or declining Soul. When a considerable Present was sent to Luther, he earnestly protested, God should not put him off with those things. O Friends, I beseech you take not up in these Enjoyments.

6. Inference. Lastly, If God be the Author of all your Success, how prodigious an Evil is it, to make your Prosperity an instrument of dishonouring him that gave it, to abuse the Estates Providence gives you, to Rioting and Drunkenness? Do you thus requite the Lord? Is this the thanks you give him for all his care over you, and kindness to you? You would never be able to bear that from another, which God bears from you. If God do you good, O do not return him evil for it.

The Disappointed SEAMAN.

SERMON V.

Luke 5. Vers. 5.

Master, we have toiled all the Night, and have taken nothing.

THese Words are the Reply made by Peter unto Christ, who in the former Verse had commanded him to Launch out into the Deep, and let down the Nets for a Draught. Peter is discouraged as to any farther attempt at that time; having already taken so much pains to so little purpose: We have (saith he) toiled all the Night, and taken nothing. In which Reply we note these two things.

1. The great Pains he and his Company had taken in their honest Calling and Employment, to get a livelyhood. We have toiled all Night. No calling more lawful, no diligence in an honest Employment could be greater; not only to spend the Night when other Labourers take their rest, in watching but in toiling. The word κοπιάσαντες comes from a Verb that signifyes wasting, tiring, spending, labour. Here was great diligence, even to the wearying and wasting of their Spirits. They toiled, and that all the Night.

κοπιάω, quando quis consumpto labore, fessus succumbit.

2. The unsuccessfulness and fruitlessness of their Labours, they caught nothing. Though there Design was honest, and their Industry great, yet it succeeded not according to their Desires and Expectations: It proved but lost labour, and pains to no purpose. Hence the note will be,

Doct. That God sometimes frustrates and blasts the most diligent Labours of Men, in their just and lawful Callings.

What Employment more honest or laborious than that of the Husbandman, who eats his Bread in the sweat of his Brows, and sustains all that spending toil and labour by an expectation of Fruit in the Season? And yet sometimes it so falls out, that after all his labours and hopes, he reaps nothing but Shame and Disappointment. Joel 1. 11. Be ye ashamed, O ye Husbandmen; howl O ye Vine dressers for the Wheat, and for the Barley, because the Harvest of the Field is perished.

The Employment of the Mariner is as lawful as it is beneficial. What he gets is gotten with eminent hazard of Life and Liberty, as well as Watchings and Labours; and yet it so falls out, sometimes, that they labour but for the Wind, and spend their Strength for very Vanity: God cuts off their Expectations and Lives together. There is a time when they return Rich and Prosperous; and a time when they either return empty, or return no more. So it was with Tyre, that renowned Mart and famous Empory; the flourishing and fall of whose Trade you have in Ezek. 27. 33, 34. When thy Wares went forth out of the Seas, thou filledst many People, thou didst enrich the Kings of the Earth with the multitude of thy Riches, and of thy Merchandise. Here was their Prosperity and Success: But will this day always last? Shall the Sun of their Prosperity never set? No, no, the change was at hand; for in the next Verse the Scene alters, In the day when thou shalt be broken by the Seas, in the depths of the Waters thy Merchandise, and all thy Company in the midst of thee shall fall.

Now if we search into the Grounds and Reasons of these disappointments by the hand of Providence, we shall find them reducible to a threefold Cause and Reason.

1. The soveraign Pleasure of God so disposes it.
2. The good of the People of God requires it.
3. The manifold Sins of Men in their Callings, provoke it.

First, The soveraign Pleasure of God so disposes it. He is the Rector of the Universe, and as such will still assert his Dominion. It is his pleasure to establish this order in the World, to exalt some and depress others; to set some above, and others below: All must not be Rich and Great, but some must be poor and low, and to these ends Providences are suited: On some it smiles, on others it frowns. 1 Sam. 2. 7. The Lord maketh Poor and maketh Rich; he bringeth low, and lifteth up. And certainly there is much of Divine Wisdom shining forth in this ordination and disposition of Persons and their Conditions. If Providence had alike prospered every Man's Designs, and set them upon a level, there had been no occasion to exercise the Rich Man's Charity, or the Poor Man's Patience. Nay, without frequent Disappointments, it self would scarcely be owned in Successes, nor those Successes be half so sweet to them that receive them, as now they are. The very Beauty of Providence consists much in these various and contrary Effects: So that with respect to the infinite Wisdom which governs the World, it is necessary some should be crossed, and others prospered in their Designs.

Secondly, And if we consider the gracious ends and designs of God towards his own People, it appears needful that all of them, in some things, and many of them in most things (relating to their outward condition in this World) should be frustrated in their expectations and contrivements. For, if all things here should succeed according to their Wish, and a constant tide of Prosperity should attend them.

1. How soon would Sensuality and Earthlinesse invade their Hearts and Affections? Much Prosperity, like the pouring in of much Wine, intoxicates, and overcomes our weak Heads and Hearts. Earthly as well as Heavenly Objects have a transforming Efficacy in them. There cannot but be much danger in those Earthly things that give or promise us much delight. Can a Christian keep his Heart as loose from the smiling, as from the frowning World? We little think how deeply it insinuates into our Affections in the day of Prosperity; but when Adversity comes, then we find it.

Luxuria animi rebus plerumque secundis.

2. How soon would it estrange them from their God, and interrupt their communion with him. He is certainly a very mortifyed and heavenly Christian, whose walk with God suffers no interruption by the multitude of Earthly Affairs, especially when they are prosperous. When Israel was settled in the midst of the Riches and Delights of Canaan, then say they, (even to their Benefactor the Author, of all their Prosperity) We are Lord, we will come no more to thee, Jer. 2. 31. Or, if they do not wholly interrupt their communion, yet they secretly destroys and wastes the Vigour, Life and Sweetness of it. So that Divine Wisdom sees it necessary to cross and disappoint them in this World, to prevent the mischievous Influences that Prosperity would have upon their duties. He had rather you should miss your desired comforts in these things, than that he should miss that delightful Fellowship with you, which he so desires.

3. How loth should we be to leave this, if constant Success and Prosperity should follow our affairs and Designs here? We see that notwithstanding all the Cares, Fears, Sorrows, Crosses, Wants and Disappointments we meet with from year to year, and from day to day; yet we are apt to hug the World in our Bosoms. As bitter as it is, we court it, admire it, and zealously prosecute it. We cling to it, and are loth to leave it, though we have little rest or comfort in it. What would we do then, if it should answer our expectation and Desires? If we grasp with pleasure a Thorn that pierces and wounds us; what would we do, if it were a Rose that had nothing but delight and Pleasure in it?

Thirdly, And as Disappointments fall out as the effects of Soveraign Pleasure, and are ordered as preventive means of much Mischief, which Prosperity would occasion to the People of God; so it comes as a righteous Retribution and Punishment of the many evils that are committed in our trading and dealings with Men. It is a hard thing to have much business pass through our hands, and no Iniquity cleave to them, and defile them. God be provoked by our Iniquities against us, wonder not, that things go cross to our desires and hopes. God may suffer some Men to prosper in their Wickedness, and others to miscarry in their just and righteous Enterprises; but ordinarily we find, that crying Sins are remarkably punished sooner or later with visible Judgments. And that if others do not, yet we our selves may observe the Relation that such a Judgment bears to such a Sin.

And from among many, I will here select these following Evils, which have destroyed the Estates and Hopes of many.

(1.) Irreligious and Atheistical neglect and contempt of God and his Worship, especially in those that have been enlightned, and made profession of Religion. This was the Sin which brought that blasting Judgment upon the Estates and Labours of the Jews, as the Prophet Haggai tells them, Chap. 1. Vers. 2. 4. 6. 9. compared; They neglect the House of God, i. e. were careless and regardless of his Worship, and in the mean time were wholly intent upon their own Houses and Interests; as he tells them in Vers. 2. 4. And what was the issue of this? Why, ruin to all their Earthly Comforts and Designs; so he tells them, Vers. 6. 9. Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm: And he that earneth Wages, doth it to put it into a Bag with holes. Ye looked for much, and lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it. Why saith the Lord of Hosts? Because of mine House that is waste, and ye turn every Man unto his own House. Here are great and manifold Disappointments of their Hopes, a Curse, a Blast upon all they took in hand; and the procuring cause of all this, was their eager Prosecution of the World, in a careless disregard of God, and his Service.

(2.) Injustice and Fraud is a blasting Sin. A little unjust Gain mingled with a great Estate, will consume it like a Moth. The Spirit of God hath used a very lively similitude to represent to us the mischievous Effects of this Sin upon all Humane diligence and industry; Jer. 17. 11. As the Partridge sitteth upon Eggs and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth Riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a Fool.

Unjust Gain, how long soever Men sit brooding upon it, shall after all their Sedulity and Expectation, turn to no other account than a Fowl's sitting upon a Nest of Addle-Eggs uses to do: If she sit till she have pined away her self to Death, nothing is produced.

You think you consult the interest of your Families herein; but the Lord tells you, That you consult shame to your Houses, Hab. 2. 10. This is not the way to Feather, but to Fire your Nest. A quiet Conscience is infinitely better than a full purse. One Dish of wholesome, though coarser food, is better than an hundred delicate, but poisoned Dishes. If a Man have eaten the best food in the World, and afterwards sips but a little poyson, he loseth not only the benefit and comfort of that which was good, but his Life or Health to boot. It may be you have gotten much honestly, what pity is it all this should be destroyed for the sake of a little gotten dishonestly? This is the reason why some Men cannot prosper.

(3.) Oppression is a blasting Sin to Mens Estates and Employments. It is a crying sin in the Ears of the Lord, and ordinarily intails a visible Curse upon Mens Estates. This, like a Moth, will suddenly fret and consume the greatest Estate. Jam. 5. 2. 4. Your Riches are corrupted, and your Garments Moth-eaten: (i. e.) The secret of God wastes and destroys what you get. And what was the cause, he tells us, Vers. 4. Behold the hire of the Labourers, that have reaped down your Fields, which is of you kept back by Fraud, cryeth; and the cries of them which have reaped, are entered into the Ears of the Lord of Sabbath.

The Oppression of poor Labourers doth more mischief to the Oppressors, than it doth to them that are oppressed. It is noted by one upon this Scripture, that it is twice repeated in this Text, Which have reaped your Fields, and then again, The cry of them which have reaped; and the reason is, because it is their Life, and so an Act of the greatest unmercifulness. And besides, they are disappointed of the solace of their Labours. Deut. 24. 14, 15. He hath set his Heart upon it; (i. e.) He comforts himself in the toils and labours of the day, by reckoning upon his Wages at the end of the day. Manton in loc.

I wish those that are Owners and Employers of poor Seamen may seasonably consider this Evil. What a Woe is denounced upon him, that useth his Neighbour's Service without Wages! Jer. 22. 13. Or, that by crafty Pretences defraud them of any part thereof, or by tiresome delays wear out their patience, and cast them upon manifold sufferings and inconveniences while they wait for it. God hath not only threatned to be a swift Witness against those that oppress the hireling in his Wages, but hath strictly forbidden the detaining of their wages. The Jews were commanded to make payment before the Sun-set, Deut. 24. 14, 15. Levit. 19. 30. Be just in all your dealings and contracts, or never expect the Righteous God should smile upon your Undertakings. Minus solvit, qui minus tempore solvit.

(4.) Falshood and Lying is a blasting Sin to our Employments: A Sin which tends to destroy all Converse, and disband all civil Societies. And though by Falshood Men may get some present advantages; yet hear what the Holy Ghost saith of Riches gotten this way: The getting of Riches by a lying Tongue, is a Vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death, Prov. 21. 6. Some trade in Lyes, as much as in Wares; yea, they trade off their Wares with Lyes. And this proves a gainful Trade (as some Men count Gain) for the present; but in reality, it is the most unprofitable Trade that any Man can drive. For it is but the tossing of a Vanity to and fro: A Phrase importing labour in vain, it profits nothing in the end; and as it profits nothing so it hurts much. They seek Profit intentionally, but Death eventually; i. e. it will bring Destruction and Ruin, not only upon our Trades, but our Souls. The God of Truth will not long prosper the way of Lying. One Penny gotten by a laborious Hand, is better than great Treasures gotten by a Lying Tongue. Take heed you seek not Death, in seeking an Estate this way. It is a Sin destructive to Society; for there is no Trade where there is no Trust, nor no Trust where there is no Truth; and yet this cursed Trade of Lying creeps into all Trades, as if there were no living (as one speaks) without lying; but sure it is better for you to be Losers than Lyars. He sells a dear bargain indeed, that sells his Conscience with his Commodity.

(5.) Perjury or False-Swearing is a blasting Sin. The Man cannot prosper that lies under the guilt thereof. It is said, Mal. 3. 5. That God will be a swift Witness against the false Swearer, i. e. It shall not be long before God by one remarkable Stroke of Judgment or another witnesseth against so great and horrid an Evil. And again, Zach. 5. 4. the Curse, yea, the Roll of Curses, shall enter into the House of the false Swearer, and shall remain in the midst of his House, and shall consume it, with the Timber thereof, and the Stones thereof. This is a Sin that hath laid many Houses waste, even great and fair; without Inhabitant. The Ruines of many that were once flouriſhing and great Men, are at this Day left to be the laſting Monuments of God's righteous Judgments, and dreadful warnings to Poſterity.

And thus I have ſhewed you what are thoſe common Evils in Trade, which are the cauſes of thoſe Blaſts and Diſappointments upon it. It now remains that we apply it.

1. Inference. Doth God ſometimes diſappoint the moſt diligent Labours of Men in their lawful Callings? Then this teacheth you Patience and Submiſſion under your Croſſes and Diſappointments; for it is the Lord that orders it to be ſo. Events are in his hand, and it is a Sin of great aggravation to fret and murmur at them, when they fall out croſs to your deſires and hopes. Behold, is it not of the Lord of Hoſts, that the People ſhall labour in the very Fire, and the People ſhall weary themſelves for very vanity? Hab. 2. 13.

To labour in the very Fire, notes intenſe Labour, ſuch as exhauſts the very ſpirits of Men, whilſt they are ſweltering and toiling at it; and yet all is to no purpoſe, they labour but for vanity: And whence is it, that ſuch vigorous endeavours are blaſted and miſcarry? Is it not of the Lord? And if it be of the Lord, why do we fret and quarrel at his diſpoſals? Indeed many dare not openly and directly charge God, but ſeek to cover their Diſcontent at Providence, by a groundleſs quarrel with the Inſtruments, who, it may be, are chargeable with nothing; but that after they have done all they could. in the uſe of proper means, they did not alſo ſecure the Event. It is true, the Dominion of Providence doth not excuſe the negligence of Inſtruments; and in many caſes, theſe may be juſtly reproved, when Providence is duly honoured and ſubmitted to: But when Men groundleſly quarrel with Inſtruments, becauſe they are croſſed in their Expectations, the Quarrel is commenced againſt God himſelf; and our diſcontents with Men, are but a covert for our diſcontents with God.

Now this is a ſore Evil, a Sin of great and dreadful Aggravations. To be given over (ſaith a grave Author) to a contradicting Spirit, to diſpute againſt any part of the Will of God, is one of the greateſt Plagues that a Man can be given up to. Who art thou that replyeſt againſt God? Rom. 11. It may be thou haſt loſt an Eſtate, thy Friends fail, thy Hopes are fallen; God hath blown upon all the Projects that thy Heart did fancy to it ſelf. Poſſibly in one day, the deſigns, labours, and hopes of many years are deſtroyed: Well, be it ſo, yet repine not againſt the Lord. Conſider, he is the Soveraign and only Lord, who may do whatever he pleaſeth to do, without giving thee any account of his matters. Who can ſay to him, What doſt thou? Beſide, if thou be one that God delights in, even theſe Diſappointments are to be numbred with thy beſt Mercies. Theſe things are permitted to periſh, that thou mayeſt not periſh for ever; and it ſhould trouble thee no more, than when thy Life is preſerved by caſting out the Wares and Goods of the Ship. It is better that theſe periſh, than that thou ſhouldſt periſh: But if thou be one that haſt mingled Sin (eſpecially ſuch as were beforementioned) with thy Trade, and ſo haſt pulled down Miſery upon thine own head, by provoking the Lord againſt thee: With what Face canſt thou open thy Mouth to complain againſt him? Will you lay a train to blow up all your Succeſs, and then fret againſt God, when you ſee the Iſſue? O how unreaſonable is this!

Maſter Strong of the Will of God, p. 242.

But becauſe Diſappointments fall out ſo frequently, and it is ſo hard to bring our Hearts to a quiet ſubmiſſion to the Will of God under them, I will not diſmiſs this Point, until I have offered you ſome proper and weighty Conſiderations, to work your Hearts into a calm and meek ſubmiſſion to the Will of God; and I ſhall account it a great Mercy if they may prevail.

1. Conſideration. And in the firſt place, if thou be one that feareſt God, conſider, That Diſappointments in earthly things fix no mark of God's Hatred upon thee. He may love thee and yet croſs thee: Eccleſ. 9. 1, 2. No Man knows either Love or Hatred by all the things that are before him. All things come alike to all; there is one event to the Righteous, and to the Wicked. Yea, we often ſee Succeſs and Proſperity following the Wicked whilſt the Rod of God is upon the Tabernacle of the Righteous. Theſe are the Ungodly that proſper in the World (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) whilſt in the mean time he was plagued all the day long, and chaſtened every Morning, Pſal. 73. 12. 14. We then, if you have no other ground than this, you cannot infer the want of Love, from the want of Succeſs. A Man may be proſpered in Wrath and croſſed in Mercy.

2. Conſideration. And what though your Projects Hopes and Expectations of enlarging your Eſtate fail; yet you may live as happily and comfortably in the condition you are, (if God give you a Heart ſuitable to it) as if you had enjoyned all that Succeſs you ſo fancied and deſired.

It is not the increaſe of an Eſtate, but the bleſſing of God upon a competency, that makes our condition comfortable to us. As the Eſtate enlarges, ſo doth the Heart. The Prophet Habakkuk ſpeaking of the Chaldean Prince, Hab. 2. 6. ſaith, He keeps not at home, he enlarges his deſire as Hell, and is as Death, and cannot be ſatisfyed, but gathereth unto him all Nations, and heapeth unto him all People. And this is the nature of every Man's Heart, to enlarge its deſire under the greateſt enlargements of Providence. Still the Heart is projecting for ſome farther Comfort and Content, in ſome new Acquiſition; when indeed a Man is as near it in a lower condition, as in the higeſt Exaltation.

It is ſtoryed of Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, that having enlarged his Dominions by the Conqueſt of Macedonia, he thirſted after Italy; and demanding the Advice of Cineas his great Counſellor, he asked the King, What he meant to do when he had conquered Italy? Why then, ſaid he, I mean to get Sicily, which is near, rich, and powerful. When you have gotten Sicily (ſaid Cineas) what then? Afric, ſaid the King is not far off, and there be many goodly Kingdoms, which by my Fame, and the Valour of my Soldier's I may ſubdue. Be it ſo, ſaid Cineas: When you have Afric, and all in it, what will you do then? Why then, ſaid the King, thou and I will be merry and make good chear. Cineas replyed, Sir, if this be the end you aim at, what need you venture your Kingdom, Perſon and Honour, to purchaſe what you have already? Surely Epirus and Macedonia are ſufficient to make you and me merry; and had you all the World, you could not be more merry than you may now be.

Plutarch in Pyrrho.

Reader, I adviſe thee under all Diſappointments of thy Expectations, to bleſs God for any comfortable Enjoyment thou haſt. If God give a ſmaller Eſtate, and a contented Heart; it is as well, yea, better, than if thou hadſt enjoyed thy deſire. The Bee makes a ſweeter Meal upon two or three Flowers than the Ox that hath ſo many Mountains to graze upon.

3. Conſideration. And what if by theſe Diſappointments, God be carrying on the great deſign of his eternal love upon thy Soul? This may be the deſign of theſe Providences; and if ſo, ſure there is no cauſe for thy deſpondencies. There is a double aim of theſe Providences; ſometimes they are ſent to awaken and rouze the dull decayed habits of Grace, which under proſperous Providences fall aſleep, by the intermiſſion of acts, and remiſſion of wonted vigour and activity? And ſhould the Lord permit things to run on at this rate, what a deplorable caſe would this grow to?

Mr. Steel. Let a Man live (ſaith one) but two or three years without affliction, and he is almoſt good for nothing; he cannot pray, nor meditate, nor keep his heart fixed upon Spiritual things: But let God ſmite him in his Health, Child or Eſtate; now he can find his Tongue and Affections again; now he awakes and falls to his Duty in earneſt; now God hath twice as much honour from him as he had before. Now, ſaith God, this amendment pleaſeth me; this rod was well beſtowed: I have diſappointed him to his great benefit and advantage. And thus God chides himſelf friends with his people again.

And ſometimes they prove the bleſſed occaſions to work Grace. If they be bound in fetters, and holden in cords of affliction, then he ſheweth them their works, and their tranſgreſſion, that they have exceeded: He openeth alſo their ear to diſcipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity, Job 36. 8, 9, 10.

And if this be the fruit of it, you will bleſs God through Eternity for theſe happy Diſappointments. Then theſe things periſhed that thy Soul might not periſh.

4. Conſideration. Be patient under Diſappointments; for if you meekly ſubmit, and quietly wait upon God, he can quickly repair all that you have loſt, and reſtore it by other Providences double to you. Have you not heard after all Job's deprivations, and the fruſtrations of all his earthly hopes, and his admirable patience under all, what a gracious end the Lord made with him? And why may not you hope for ſuch a comfortable change of Providence towards you, if you alſo carry it under Diſappointments as he did? Certainly, ſad Providences are near their change, when the heart is calmed in the Will of God, and corrected time to him.

5. Conſideration. And why ſhould it ſeem ſo hard and grievous to you, for God to diſappoint your hopes and purpoſes, when you cannot but know, that you have diſappointed his expectations from you ſo often, and that in greater and better things than theſe?

He hath looked for fruit (as it is Iſai. 5. 4.) for obedience, reformation, and renewed care of duty from you many times; he promiſed himſelf, made account of a good return of his afflictions and mercies, and you promiſed him as much, yet have failed his expectation: And is it then ſtrange that you ſhould fail of your hopes, who have failed God ſo often?

Then ſee that you be quiet in the Will of God, and not at the defeating of your hopes; wreak not diſcontent upon innocent inſtruments; but to the juſt, and holy, and good Will of God in all things. The Wife is ſometimes angry with the Servant for what he hath done, till he tells her that it was his Maſter's Order, and then ſhe is quiet.

Is a Ship miſcarryed, a Voyage loſt, a Relation dead, an Eſtate gone, a Friend carryed into captivity, whoſe return was expected with ſo much delight and comfort? Why, if it be ſo, it is the Lord hath done it, and be thou ſilent before him. Your repining will not make it better; ſin is no proper cure for affliction. A quiet and ſubmiſſive ſpirit is well pleaſing to God, as well as profitable for you.

2. Inference. Doth God ſometimes diſappoint the expectations of Men in their Employments? then never ſet your hearts immoderately upon Earthly things, nor raiſe up to your ſelves too great expectations from theſe things. The ſtronger your expectations, the heavier God's diſappointments will be.

There is a double evil in over-reckoning our ſelves, and over-acting our confidence about worldly things: It provokes God to diſappoint us, and then makes the Diſappointment much more grievous when it comes.

It provokes a Diſappointment, eſpecially to the Godly. The Lord is jealous of their affections, and will not indure that any thing ſhould be a corrival or competitor with him for their hearts: Yea, it is ſo uſual with God to daſh, and remove whatever ingroſſes too much of the heart, that a gracious Soul cannot but reckon that Comfort in great danger to be loſt, which he finds to be overloved.

If David ſet his heart upon Abſolom, God will not only ſmite him, but ſmite David by him, and make him firſt the inſtrument of his Sorrow, and then the object of it. Jonah did but take a little too much comfort in his Gourd, and you know the next News we heard was, That God had prepared a Worm to ſmite it, and cauſe it to wither away.

And when your inordinate hopes are croſſed (as it is very probable they will be) how will your ſorrows be aggravated in proprotion to them? Thoſe things that ſeemed to promiſe us moſt Comfort, are the things that give us moſt Sorrow. Strong affections make ſtrong afflictions. Our Sorrows uſually riſe from what was our hope, and our Comforts from that which was the leaſt regarded.

3. Inference. If it be ſo, then labour to make ſure things eternal, leſt you be eternally diſappointed there alſo. O what a ſad caſe is that Man in, whoſe expectations fail from both Worlds! If your hopes from this World fail, yet you may bear it comfortably, if you fail not in your better hopes: But if this fail too, you are of all Men the moſt miſerable. You know by experience, how ſad it is to have your hopes cut off in theſe ſmaller concerns; to go forth in expectation of a profitable Voyage, and to return in a worſe caſe than you went out: It may be you thought to get an Eſtate, but the iſſue is, to loſe that little you had. You thought to go to ſuch a Place, and there meet with a good Market, and poſſibly your ſelves may be carryed as Slaves to be ſold in the ſame Market. Theſe diſappointments are very ſad and cutting things, but nothing to an Eternal Diſappointment in your great Concern.

For a Man to hope he is in Chriſt, and a pardoned ſtate, and at laſt find himſelf deceived, and that all the ſins of his Nature, Heart, and Practice, lie upon him: To hope for admiſſion into Heaven, when he is turned out of this World by death, and find the door ſhut againſt him; to cry with thoſe poor diſappointed Wretches, Matth. 7. 22. Lord, Lord, open to us; and receive ſuch an unexpected return from Chriſt, as they did, Depart from me, I know you not: Lord, how intollerable is ſuch a defeat of hope is this! O, who can think of it without horror!

The things about which your expectations are fruſtrated in this World, are ſmall things; you may be happy in the want of them: But the fruſtration of your hopes from the World to come, is in things of infinite weight. Theſe Diſappointments are but for a little while? but this will be for ever. O therefore be provoked, even by theſe things, to a diligent and ſeaſonable prevention of a far greater miſery.

Since theſe things cannot be ſecured, labour to ſecure thoſe things that may. O that you were but as full of Thoughts, Cares and Fears for Heaven as you are for the World! You have ſpent many thouſand thoughts about theſe things to no purpoſe. All your thoughts about them are come to nothing; but had they been ſpent for your Souls, to what a comfortable account would they now have turned? Friends, I beſeech you make ſure for eternity, and let theſe Croſſes and Loſſes in the World, be the happy occaſions to awaken you to an earneſt and ſerious diligence for your everlaſting intereſts. Then you are no loſers by your Loſſes; nay, you will have great cauſe to call them proſperous Diſappointments, and gainful Loſſes to you.

4. Inference. Then as you would not have the works and labours of your hands blaſted, beware of thoſe ſins that provoke God to blow upon them. Think not that Injuſtice, Oppreſſion, Deceit and Perjury, ſhall ever profit you. God hath curſed all the ways of ſin, and you cannot proſper in them. Above all, beware of Atheiſm and Irreligion: God will not own them that diſown him, and ſlight his Worſhip. I doubt your profanation of the Lord's day, by Drunkenneſs, Idleneſs, and Worldly Employments, is not the leaſt cauſe of thoſe Diſappointments and Loſſes that have befall'n you: The firſt day of the Week, like the firſt fruits of the Jews Harveſts, might ſanctify the whole lump.

And let none pretend that multiplicity of Buſineſs will not allow them time and diſpoſition for Sabbath work. If you be too buſy to attend the Lord's ſervice, he can quickly give you a Writ of Eaſe, and make you keep more reſting days from your labours than you are willing to do. The Lord would not excuſe the Iſraelites, no, not in their buſieſt Seaſons, the times of Earing and Harveſt, and the very building the Tabernacle; but all muſt give way to the Sabbath. And am ſure, the promiſe of Bleſſing and Succeſs is made to the conſcionable obſervation of it: Iſai. 58. 13, 14. If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleaſure upon my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, and honourable; and ſhalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleaſures, nor ſpeaking thine own words: Then ſhalt thou delight thy ſelf in the Lord: There is a recompence to the Soul. And he ſhall cauſe thee to ride on the high places of the Earth: There is a Reward to the Body. Godlineſs is profitable to all things.

The SEAMAN's Return.

SERMON VI.

DEUT. XXXIII. 19.

They ſhall call the People unto the Mountain, there they ſhall offer Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs: For they ſhall ſuck of the abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sand.

THIS Scripture is part of the laſt words of Moſes: A Man that in his life was a great Bleſſing to Iſrael; and when he was to be ſeparated from them by death, he pronounces diſtinct and ſuitable Bleſſings upon all the Tribes. As Chriſt parted from the Diſciples, bleſſing them, ſo doth Moſes from his People; only with this difference, Moſes as God's Mouth pronounced, but the great God of Heaven and Earth alone could confer the Bleſſing. Moſes bleſſed them authoritatively, but could not bleſs them poteſtatively as Chriſt did. Now theſe words contain the bleſſing of the Tribe of Zebulun, which was the Tribe of Sea-men. And in them we ſhall conſider theſe two parts, viz.

1. Their Priviledge.
2. Their Duty.

First, Their Priviledge, That they ſhould ſuck of the abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sands. To ſuck the abundance of the Sea, is a metonymical expreſſion, ſignifying as much as to be enriched and ſtored with the Wares and Merchandiſe imported by Sea to them. Geographers attribute to the Sea, Arms and Boſoms; and to the Scripture, Breaſts. The Sea, like an indulgent Mother, embraces thoſe that live upon it in her Boſom, and with full flowing Breaſts nouriſheth them, and feeds them, as a Mother doth the ſant that ſucks, and depends for its livelihood upon her Breaſts.

Referunt ad ea quæ evenire ſolent maria, ſcil. ad auri ſolinas. Effodient e terra arenoſa aurum. Pol. Synop. in Loc.

And theſe Breaſts do not only afford thoſe that hang upon them the neceſſaries of Life, Bread, Rayment, &c. but the Riches, Ornaments and Delights of Life alſo. The Treaſures hid in the Sand; as Gold, Coral, Ambergreece, and ſuch like precious and rich Treaſures which it yields. This was the Bleſſing and Priviledge of the Tribe of Zebulun, whoſe Cities and Villages were commodiouſly ſituated upon the Sea-ſhore, for Merchandiſe and Traffick: As you may ſee, Joſ. 19. 11.

Secondly, Their Duty, to which theſe Mercies and Priviledges obliged them: They ſhall call the People to the Mountain, there they ſhall offer Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs. By the Mountain, we are here to underſtand the Temple, which Moſes by the Spirit of Prophecy foreſaw to be built upon Mount Sion, and Mount Moriah; which two were as the Shoulders that ſupported it, Verſ. 12. Here was the Worſhip of God; the Sacrifices were here offered up to him. And hither Zebulun, in the ſenſe of God's Mercies to them, ſhould call the People, i. e. ſay ſome, their own People, their Families, and Neighbours; or as others, the Strangers that were among them for Traffick; ſaying as Iſa. 2. 3. Come, let us go up to the Houſe of the Lord, to the Mountain of the God of Jacob. And here they ſhall offer the Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs. By which we are to underſtand their Thank-offerings for the Mercies they had received of the Lord. The Jews had not only Expiatory Sacrifices to procure the Pardon of Sins committed, but Euchariſtical Sacrifices, or Thank-offerings, to teſtify the ſenſe they had of Mercies received. Theſe Sacrifices typifyed Moral Duties; and when theſe Types were aboliſhed, the Apoſtle ſhews, that the Calves of our Lips, the Sacrifices of Praiſe, are in the ſtead of them, Heb. 13. 15.

So then the ſum of all is this, That when they returned from Sea, or had received the Bleſſings thereof, from the Hand of God, they ſhould repair to the place of his Worſhip, and there acknowledge and praiſe the God of their Mercies. So that the whole Verſe thus explained, caſts it ſelf into this Doctrinal Obſervation.

Doct. That it is the ſpecial duty of Seamen, when God returns them to their Habitations in Peace, thankfully to acknowledge and bleſs his Name, for all the Preſervations and Mercies they have received of his Hand.

Theſe are Mercies indeed, which are obtained from God by Prayer, and returned to him again by Praiſe. When we have received our Mercies, God expects his Praiſes: After the Pſalmiſt had opened the hazards and fears of Seamen upon the ſtormy Ocean, and the goodneſs of God in bringing them to their deſired Haven, Pſal. 107. 30. he preſently calls upon them for this duty, Verſ. 31. O that Men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful Works to the Children of Men!

O that Men would! Why how is it imaginable they ſhould not? He hath the Heart of a Beaſt, not of a Man, that will not. Did I ſay the Heart of a Beaſt? Give me that Word again. There is a kind of Gratitude, even in Beaſts, to their Benefactors. The Ox knoweth his Owner, and the Aſs his Maſter's Crib, Iſa. 1. 3.

Now the method into which I will caſt the Diſcourſe, ſhall be,

First, To open the nature of the Duty, and to ſhew you what it is to praiſe God for his Mercies.

Secondly, To give you the Grounds and Reaſons of the Duty, why God expects it, and you ought to give it him. And then, Thirdly, To apply it in the ſeveral Uſes it is improveable unto.

1. The nature of the Duty needs opening, for few underſtand what it is. Alas, it is another manner of thing than a cuſtomary formal cold God be thanked. Now, if we ſearch into the nature of this duty, we ſhall find that whoever undertakes this Angelical work, muſt,

First, Be a heedful Obſerver of the Mercies he receives. This is fundamental to the Duty. Where no Obſervations of Mercies have been made, no Praiſes for them can be returned. God was never honoured by his unobſerved Mercies. When David had opened the Providences of God to the ſeveral degrees and orders of Men, in its various adminiſtrations, and called upon them diſtinctly to praiſe God for them; he adds in the cloſe of all, Whoſo is Wiſe, and will obſerve theſe things, even they ſhall underſtand the loving kindneſs of the Lord, Pſal. 107. ult. It is God's charge againſt Iſrael, Hoſea 2. 8. She did not know that I gave her Corn, and Wine, and Oyl, and multiplyed her Silver: i. e. She did not obſerve and take notice of theſe Mercies, as coming from my hand; but only look'd at the next cauſe. Thus it is with many, they think not upon their own Mercies; others can obſerve them, but they cannot; they can quickly obſerve what troubles befal them, but take little notice of their own Mercies. Such Men can never be thankful.

Secondly, The thankful Man muſt not only obſerve what Mercies he hath, and from whom they come; but muſt particularly conſider them in their natures, degrees, ſeaſons and manner of conveyance. There is much of God's Glory, and our Comfort loſt for want of this. The Works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all that have pleaſure therein, Pſal. 111. 2. And indeed, there is no employment in all the World, that yields more pleaſure to a gracious Soul, than the Anatomiſing of Providences doth. How ſweet is it to obſerve the mutual Reſpects, Coincidencies and introductive Occaſions of our Mercies! Every minute circumſtance hath its weight and value here. He hath little pleaſure in his Meat, that ſwallows it whole without chewing.

Thirdly, The thankful Perſon muſt duly eſtimate and value his Mercies. It is impoſſible that Man can be thankful for Mercies he little eſteems. Iſrael could not praiſe God for that Angels Food with which he fed them, whilſt they deſpiſed it in ſaying, There is nothing but this Manna.

And ſurely it ſhews the great corruption of our nature, That thoſe things which ſhould raiſe the value of Mercies with us, cauſe us the more to ſlight them; yet thus it falls out. The commonneſs, or long continuance of Mercies with us, which ſhould endear them the more, and every day increaſe our obligation to God, cauſes them to ſeem but cheap and ſmall things. And therefore doth God ſo often threaten them, yea, and remove them; that their Worth and Excellency may thereby be acknowledged.

Fourthly, The thankful Perſon muſt faithfully record his Mercies, elſe God cannot have his due praiſe for them. Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his Benefits. Pſal. 103. 2. Forgotten Mercies bear no fruit: A bad Memory in this caſe, makes a barren Heart and Life.

I confeſs the Mercies of God are ſuch a multitude, that a memory of Braſs cannot retain them. I will come before thee in the multitude of thy Mercies, ſaith David, Pſal. 5. 7. They are called Showers of Bleſſings, Ezek. 34. 26. And as impoſſible it is diſtinctly to recount all our Mercies, as to number the drops of Rain that fall in a Shower. Nevertheleſs, it hath been the pious care and endeavour of the People of God, to preſerve and perpetuate his Mercies, by uſing all the helps to Memory they could. Therefore they have kept Regiſters, Exod. 17. 14. endited Pſalms, to bring to remembrance, Pſal. 70. Title; denominated Places from the Mercies received there. Thus Jacob called the place where he found ſo much Mercy, Bethel. Hagar named the Well, where God unexpectedly relieved her, Beerlahairoi, the Well of him that liveth and looketh upon me, Gen. 16. 13, 14.

They have ſtamped the Mercies upon the Days in which they received them. Thus the Jews called thoſe days in which God wrought their Deliverance Purim, after the name Pur, ſignifying the Lot Haman had caſt for their Lives; Eſth. 9. 26. Yea, they have called their Mercies upon their Children, 1 Sam. 1. 20. Thus thankful Souls have ſtriven to recogniſe their Mercies, that God might not loſe the Praiſe, nor themſelves the Comfort of them.

Fifthly, The thankful Perſon muſt be ſuitably affected with the Mercies he receives. It is not a ſpeculative, but an affectionate Remembrance that becomes us: Then God hath his Glory, when the ſenſe of his Mercies melts our Hearts into holy joy, love and admiration. Thus David ſits down before the Lord like a Man aſtoniſhed at his goodneſs to him; 2 Sam. 7. 20. And what can David ſay more? For thou Lord knoweſt thy Servant. The Mercies of God have made the Saints Hearts leap for joy within them: Pſal. 92. 4. Thou Lord haſt made me glad, through thy Works; therefore will I triumph in the Works of thy hands. Mercies are not Mercies, Deliverances are no Deliverances to us, if we that receive them, are not glad of them.

Sixthly, The thankful Perſon muſt order his Converſation ſuitable to the engagements that his Mercies have put him under. When we have ſaid all, it is the life of the Thankful, that is the very life of thankfulneſs. Obedience and Service are the only real manifeſtations of Gratitude. He that offereth Praiſe, glorifyeth me; and to him that ordereth his Converſation aright will I ſhew the Salvation of God, Pſal. 50. 23. Set down this for an everlaſting Truth, That God was never praiſed and honoured by an abuſed Mercy. God took it ill from Hezekiah, That he rendred not again according to the Benefit done unto him, 2 Chron. 32. 25. He that is truly thankful, will ſay as David, Pſal. 116. 12. What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his Benefits? We then glorify God with his Mercies, when we employ them to right ends, when we thankfully take our own ſhare of comfort from receiving them with Thankſgiving, as from the hand of a Father. Mr. Swinock tells of a young Man, who lying upon his ſick Bed, was always calling for Meat; but as ſoon as it was brought him, he ſhook and trembled dreadfully at the ſight of it, and ſo continued till it was taken away; and before his Death, acknowledged God's Juſtice, for that in his Health he ordinarily received his Meat without thankſgiving.

Swinock's Chriſtian Man's Calling, pag. 409.

Uſe all God's Mercies with thankfulneſs: God will remember them in fury, who forget him in his favours.

And think not what God beſtows upon you, is wholly for your own uſe: But honour God with your Mercies, by clothing the Naked, and feeding the Hungry, eſpecially ſuch as are Godly. This is a due Improvement of your Eſtates; thus you may make to your ſelves Friends of the Mammon of Unrighteouſneſs. Ah, how little do we conſider, what praiſe, what glory we may occaſion this way from others to the Name of God! It is ſtoryed of Dyoniſius, the Syracuſian Tyrant; that when he ſaw what heaps of Gold and Silver his Son hoarded up in his Cloſet, he asked him, what he meant to let it lye there, and not to make Friends with it, to get the Kingdom after his Death? O Son (ſaid he) thou haſt not a Spirit capable of a Kingdom. Thus honour the Lord with your Subſtance; look upon all you have as your Maſter's Talents, for which you muſt give an account: And ſo uſe and employ them for God that you may give up your account with joy; and then you will ſhew your ſelves thankful indeed. Thus you ſee what is included in real thankfulneſs. O, it is another matter than we take it to be.

Juſtin. Lib. 51

2. Next I promiſed to give you the Ground and Reaſons of this Duty: Why you are obliged after the receit of Mercies, to ſuch a thankful return of Praiſes. And among many I will only ſingle out theſe three, and briefly open them.

Firſt, God requires and expects it. It is ſo ſpecial and peculiar a part of his glory, as he will never part with it. As great Landlords oblige their Tenants to a Homage and Service, when they make over their Eſtates to them, and reſerve a Quit-rent to themſelves, which they value at a high rate; ſo God, when he beſtows Deliverance of Mercies upon us, ſtill reſerves an acknowledgment to himſelf: And this is dear to him, he will not endure to be defrauded of it; much leſs, that it be given to another. You find this reſervation of Praiſe expreſly made by him in Pſal. 15. 1. Call upon me in the day of Trouble, I will deliver thee, and thou ſhalt glorify me. Where you have the Requeſt, the Grant, and the Reſervation in the Grant, q. d. When I have granted thee thy deſire, ſee thou do not defraud me of my glory. There be three things in every Mercy, the matter of it, the comfort of it, and the glory of it. The two firſt God makes over freely to us, he gives the Mercies themſelves, he allows us to ſuck out the lawful Pleaſure and Delight that is in them; but the third he reſerves to himſelf, and will never part with to any other. If an Hezekiah himſelf render not to God due acknowledgments, as well as God loves him: there ſhall be great wrath upon him, and Judah, for the default, 2 Chron. 32. 26.

Secondly, You are under manifold Engagements to render it to the Lord.

(1.) Common Ingenuity obliges to a due acknowledgment of Favours freely received; and thankfulneſs on that ſcore, is the odium of Mankind. Ingratum ſi dicas, omnia dixeris. You can give a Man a more odious Character among Men than to ſay, He is an ungrateful Man.

(2.) The Examples of the very Heathens condemn you. They praiſed their Gods, who yet were no Gods, when they received any deliverance, Judg. 16. 24. Shall Idols, Dunghil-Deities, receive their Sacrifices and Praises, whilst the true God is forgotten?

Nay (3.) many of you have formally and expresly obliged your Souls to it, by solemn Vows and Promises in the day of your distress: And yet will you deal perfidiously with God? Will you not pay the Vows which your Lips have uttered? Certainly, you can never free your Souls from the guilt of Perfidiousness against God, whilst you give him not the glory due to his Name.

3. Lastly, Your Ingratitude is the ready way to deprive you of the Mercies you have, and to withhold from you the Mercies you might have in your future Distresses and Wants. He that is ungrateful for Mercies received, provokes God to remove them. Thus it fell out with ungrateful Israel: Hos. 2. 5. 8. 9. She did not know, (i. e.) She did not with Consideration and Thanks duly acknowledge) That I gave her Corn, and Wine, and Oyl. Therefore will I return, and take away my Corn in the time thereof, and my Wine in the season thereof: And will recover my Wooll, and my Flax. Thus they suffered their Mercies to lapse into the Lord's hand for non-payment of their Duties. If you be weary of your Mercies, and willing to be rid of them, you cannot take a more effectual Course, than to forget from whom you had them, and with-hold his Praise for them.

And then, for future Mercies and Deliverances, you have no ground to expect any more from God, whom you have thus requited for former favours. He that gives no thanks for one Mercy, hath little ground to expect another. It was a sad Word which God spake unto this very provocation, Judg. 10. 11, 12, 13. When a new distress befel Israel by the Ammonites, and they cryed to the Lord for help; he tells them, That he had many times delivered them from ther Enemies: Yet, saith he, have you forsaken me, and served other Gods. Wherefore I will deliver you no more; go and cry to the Gods which ye have chosen, and let them deliver you in the time of your Tribulation. q. d. With what face can you come to me for new Mercies and Deliverances, when your selves know how former Mercies have been abused! Think ye that I am weary of my Mercies to cast them away upon such unthankful Wretches? No, no, expect no more Mercies from me, I will deliver ye no more. One of the Fathers calls Ingratitude, Obex Infernali, An Hellish Stop; which interrupts the Course and Current of all God's Mercies. Mercy is not only a precious thing, too good to be cast away, but it is a very tender thing, and God deeply resents the abuses of it. Thus you see the Grounds and Reasons of your duty; it now remains that we apply it.

1. Use. Is it your unquestionable Duty to return Praises upon every receit of Mercies? Then in the first place bear your Shame and just Reproof for your manifest unthankfulness. You dare not say, but you have received many signal and eminent Mercies from the Hands of God. If you could deny that, I need go no farther to prove you prodigiously ungrateful. But it is too manifest to be denyed: You have found God a very present help in Trouble; his Mercy hath often rescued you out of the very jaws of Death. Some of you have been in dangers in the Deeps; in Baths oft. You have been put to your Wits end; when visible hope and help failed. You might have said with the Psalmist, Psal. 142. 4. I looked upon my right hand, and there was none; and upon the left, but refuge failed. You have seen your Companions intombed before your Eyes in the Seas, and concluded in your own thoughts, your turn was next. You have been in danger by barbarous Enemies, that have chased you upon the Sea, to make you a Prey: Yea, it may be you have been a Prey to them, and never thought to have seen the Land of your Nativity, your Houses, Wives and Children any more. You have languished under dangerous Diseases, and that remote from Friends, and necessary Accommodations. You have lost your Estates, and been reduced to a low ebb, and never thought to have seen a day of Prosperity any more. Yet hath the Lord delivered you out of all your Troubles: He hath provided unexpected means of Preservation, when the proud Waters were ready to go over your Souls. And though others went down before your Eyes, you were marked out for Deliverance. God spake to the raging Waves, saying, Touch not this Man, I will not deliver him up, though I have done so by others. When cruel Enemies chased you, he delivered you, causing the darkness of the Night to interpose seasonably betwixt you and them; as the dark side of the Cloud shadowed Israel from the Egyptians that pursued them, Exod. 14. 20. Sometimes giving you a favourable gale, which blew Mercy and Deliverance to you: Sometimes by strengthning you to resist their furious Attacks, and delivering you from their rage; or, if he delivered you into their hands, yet there he preserved you, enabling you to endure their severities, or causing the Enemy to treat you well; and finding out a way which you knew not, to bring you at last out of the House of Bondage.

He pitied you under your dangerous Diseases: and though necessary accommodations and means might be wanting, he was your Physician, and healed you; he recovered you immediately without means, or blessed weak and small means to your good. When you were reduced by Losses, and Captivities to a low ebb, so that you might say as the Church, Lam. 3. 17. I forgat Prosperity; he hath not only recruited thy Strength, but thy Estate also: And when both thy Body and Estate, like an old leaky Ship, have been ready to sink, he hath stopped the Leaks in both, careened, repaired, and launched thee into the World again, as whole, as sound, and strong as ever.

And now, Reader, suffer me to account and expostulate a little with thy Conscience. What hath the fruit of all these Mercies been to thee? And how hast thou carried it since those days towards the God of thy Mercies? Hast thou indeed been melted by the sense of all this kindness into love, thankfulness, and new obedience? Have these favours engaged thee to more strictness in thy duties, and greater watchfulness against Sin? Hast thou said with that good Man, Ezra 9. 13, 14, And now, my God, seeing thou hast punished me less than mine Iniquities deserve, and hast given me such Deliverances as these, should I again break thy Commandments? If it be so, surely Mercy and Goodness shall follow thee all the days of thy Life. The Lord then reckons all these Mercies well bestowed, and will never repent that he hath done thee good.

But I fear this is not thy case. Sure I am, there are some among you that have quickly forgotten the God that delivered you. Some that have abused him to his face, by ascribiug his Mercies to good luck, chance, and fortune; not once owning him as your Deliverer. And some that have made his Mercies Weapons of Sin, to wound him withal, waſting your Eſtates by Prodigality, which were given to refreſh your Families, and God's Poor; yea, abuſing them to Drunkenneſs and Luxury. And is this the thanks you return him? For which of all my good Works (ſaith Chriſt to the Jews) do you ſtone me? So ſay I, for which of all God's Kindneſſes to you, do you thus diſhonour and abuſe him? O let Shame cover your faces this Day? Go, Reader, fold down this Leaf, and get thee to thy Knees, and ſay, I am the Man to whom this Reproof is ſent. I have abuſed the God of my Mercies, I have turned his Grace to Wantonneſs. Smite with Ephraim upon thy Thigh, and ſay, What have I done? Mourn heartily for thy unkindneſs to thy beſt Friend, The God that hath done thee good all thy Life long, and deſerves other returns from thee than theſe.

2. Uſe. Laſtly, It calls upon you all to be thankful for your Mercies. Chryſoſtom once wiſhed for a Voice like Thunder, that all Men might hear him. O that I could ſo call you to this Duty, that ſome of you might effectually hear God's Call in this Exhortation!

Will you own the Hand that delivers you, that feeds, clothes and heals you? Will you reſolve to live the life of praiſe? and render to the Lord according to the benefits you have received? Will you indeed walk humbly and thankfully under all your Deliverances and Succeſſes, and glorify God by that wherewith he hath comforted and refreſhed you? If there be any ſaving knowledge of God, and ſpiritual ſenſe of his love in your Souls, methinks I ſhould prevail with you; for do but weigh theſe following Arguments ſeriouſly, and they will engage you to it.

1. Argument. How freely have all your Mercies ſtreamed to you from the Fountain of Grace? There was nothing in you to engage it. The very notion of Mercy includes freeneſs; they are all beſtowed upon us, not only as we are immerentes, but male merentes, undeſerving, but ill deſerving Creatures; not only without our merits, but againſt our merits. And what though there be a concurrence of your Abilities, Head-work and Hand-work in the procurement of ſome of your Mercies, yet ſtill thoſe Mercies are the pure effects of Free-grace: For all thoſe endeavours of yours had ſignifyed nothing to their procurement, without God's Bleſſing; yea, and that Wiſdom and Induſtry which you have uſed, are themſelves the Free-gifts of God. You know there be thouſands in the World as induſtrious and wiſe as you, and ſuch as never provoked God by ſuch ſins as you have; who yet are denyed the Mercies you enjoy. O, how ſhould this endear you to God!

2. Argument. How ſeaſonably your Mercies have been beſtowed upon you, in the very nick of extremity and danger. God hath on purpoſe ſuffered it to grow to an extremity, that thereby he might commend his Mercy to you with greater advantage. In the Mount of the Lord it hath been ſeen, Gen. 22. 14. Without this God ſaw his Mercies would have been ſlighted and low priſed by you. But God hath watched the opportunity of beſtowing his goodneſs upon you, for no other end but to magnify his Mercies in your eyes, and make the deeper and more laſting impreſſions upon your hearts. Shall ſuch Mercies, which at firſt were of amaſing, and overwhelming to you, at the receit whereof, you were like Men that dreamed, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 126. 1. ſo ſoon grow ſtale and common? God forbid.

3. Argument. How ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing have ſome of your Mercies been? God hath not dealt with every one as he hath with you. Are not ſome that went out with you found wanting at your return? They are among the dead, it may be among the damned, and you among the living, yet enjoying the capacity and the means of Salvation. God hath proſpered your Voyage, and returned you with ſucceſs; you have ſucked the abundance of the Sea, and the Treaſures hid in the Sand, as the Text ſpeaks; but others may ſay as Naomi, Ruth 1. 21. I went out full, and am come back empty. I went out full of hopes, and am come back with ſad diſappointments. And is not this a ſtrong tye to Thankſgiving?

4. Argument. Did not your Mercies find you under great guilt? You know what your own tranſgreſſions againſt the Lord were; and yet ſuch was the ſtrength of Mercy, that it brake through all your great provocations, and made its way to you through a multitude of Iniquities. It came triumphing over all your great unworthineſs; and is not ſuch Mercy worthy to be admired and recorded for ever! O what will affect and melt your hearts, if this will not? Surely ſuch Mercies have a conſtraining power in them, upon all ſenſible Souls.

5. Argument. To conclude; if all the goodneſs of God, which hath paſſed before your eyes, do indeed prevail upon you to love the Lord, and fear to offend him; if they really conſtrain you to give up your ſelves, and all you have, to him; then all theſe are but the beginnings of Mercies, and you ſhall ſee yet greater things than theſe. God hath more Mercies yet behind, and thoſe of higher kind, and more excellent nature than the Temporal Mercies are. You are now delivered from the dangers of the Sea, and have eſcaped thoſe perils: O but what is this to deliverance from wrath to come? You have been preſerved from, or delivered out of Turkiſh ſlavery: But what is that to a deliverance from the curſe of the Law, the bondage of your Luſts, and the power of Satan: Happy Souls if theſe Deliverances do in any meaſure prove introductive to the great Salvation.

The Concluſion.

Thus I have, as the Lord hath enabled me, endeavoured to chuſe and improve proper ſubjects for your Meditation in every condition that befals you. I cannot carry theſe Truths one degree farther; it is the Lord only that can make them effectual to your Souls. But it is my earneſt requeſt to you, Maſters, that have the overſight and muſt give an account for your Companies, That you will not only read and conſider theſe things your ſelves, but that you will at fit ſeaſons, eſpecially upon the Lord's Day, read and inculcate them unto your Servants and Company, that, as thoſe who muſt give an account. Will this be a better expence of that precious and allowed time than to ſpend it in ſleeping in Cabins, or drinking in Tipling Houſes? And the ſin of theirs which you may prevent, and do, becomes your own ſin. And have you not perſonal ſins enough already, but you muſt draw guilt of their ſins upon you alſo? I beſeech you, and it is my laſt requeſt, That you will fail not labour, that you and your Companies may be the Lord.

A Saint indeed:

OR,

The Great Work of a Christian Open'd and Press'd, from Proverbs IV: 23.

The Epistle Dedicatory.

To my dearly beloved and longed for, the Flock of Jesus Christ in Dartmouth, over whom the Holy Ghost hath made me an Overseer: Sound Judgment, True Zeal, and Unstained Purity, is heartily wished.

My Dear Friends,

THere are three sad Sights with which our Eyes should continually affect our Hearts: The (1.) Is to behold in every place, so many prophane and dissolute ones, who bear the very Image of Satan; the face of whose Conversation plainly discovers what they are, and whither they are going, Philip 3. 18, 19. These look like themselves, the Children of Wrath. The (2.) Is to see so many cursed Hypocrites artificially disguising themselves, and with marvellous dexterity acting the parts of Saints, so that even a judicious Eye may sometimes mistake the Similar Workings of the Spirit on them, for his Saving Workings on others: To hear such a Person conferring, praying, bewailing his Corruptions, and talking of his Experiences; would easily perswade a Man to believe that he hath the Heart, as well as the Face, of a sincere Christian: For,

Sic occulus, sic ille manus, sic ora ferebat.

So the People of God do speak, so they pray, and even so they open their conditions: These look like Saints, but are none. The (3.) Is to see so many real Saints, in whom the Spirit of Truth is, who yet through the impetuous workings of their Corruptions, and neglecting of the Watch over their Hearts, do often fall into such scandalous Practices, that they look like Hypocrites, though they are not so.

These are three sad Sights indeed, and O that my Head were Waters, and mine Eyes Fountains of Tears, that I might weep abundantly over them all!

For the first I would mourn heartily, considering that they (so continuing) must be damned eternally, 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 6. 9.

For the second, I would both weep and tremble, considering that they (so abiding) must be damned doubly, Matth. 24, 51.

And for the third, no less than any of the rest, because, though they themselves may and shall be saved, yet they themselves make fast the Bonds of Death upon both the former, Matth. 18. 7. 2 Sam. 12. 13, 14.

Alas! that ever they should shed the Blood of others souls, for whom Christ shed his own Blood! That ever they should be Cruel to others, who have found Christ Kind to them! I know they dare not do it directly and intentionally, but so it proves occasionally and eventually. Suffer me here to digress a little, and expostulate with these prejudiced and hardned Souls I will presently return to you again. O why do you mischief your own Soul by other Mens Examples? Because they stumble and break their Shins will you fall and break your Necks? I desire all such as harden themselves by these things, and take up a good Opinion of their own deplorable Condition, that they would soberly consider, and answer these three Queries:

Query. 1. Doth Religion any way countenance or patronise the sinful Practices of its Professors? Or doth it not rather impartially and severely condemn them? It is the Glory of the Christian Religion, that it is pure and undefiled, Jam. 1. 27. No Doctrine so holy Psal. 19. 8. Nor doth any make more provision for an holy Life, Tit. 2. 11, 12. Indeed there is a Case wherein we may charge the evil Practices of Man upon their Principles, but that is, when their Practices naturally flow from, and necessarily follow their Principles: As for Example, if I see a Papist sin boldly, I may charge it upon his Principles, for they set Pardons to sale, and so make way for Looseness. If I see an Arminian slight the Grace of God, and proudly advance himself, I may cry shame upon his Principles, which directly lead to it: But can I do so where such Practices are condemned, and provided against by their own avowed Principles that commit them?

Quer. 2, Is it not a most irrational thing to let fly at Religion because of the scandalous ways of some, whilst in the mean time you wholly slight and over-look the holy and heavenly Conversation of many others? Are all that profess Godliness loose and careless in their Lives? No, some are an Ornament to their Profession, and the Glory of Christ: And why must the Innocent be condemned with the Guilty? Why the Eleven, for one Judas?

Quer. 3. If you condemn Religion because of the scandalous Lives of some that profess it, must you not then cast off all Religion in the World, and turn downright Atheists? Surely this is the Consequent of it: For what Religion is there, but some that profess it walk contrary to their Profession? And then, as Constantine told the Novation, you must set up your Ladder, and go to Heaven by your self.

But alas! Is it not our printed Apologies for Religion, ligion, but the visible Reformations of its Professors that must both salve its Honour, and remove those fatal Stumbling-blocks at which the Blinde World strikes, and falls into Eternal Perdition.

Now there are two ways by which this may be effected: First, By convincing the Consciences of Professors of their Miscarriages, and the Evil and Aggravations of them. Secondly, By Meditating the Heart, and cleansing the Fountain whence they proceed. In the first of these, a worthy and eminent Servant of Christ hath lately laboured, holding a clear Gospel-Glass before the Faces of Professors, which truly represents their Spots and Blemishes: If he that reads it will consider, apply and practise, it shall doubtless turn to his Salvation; but if it turn to no good Account to him that reads it, I know it shall turn to a Testimony for him that wrote it. The second is a principal Design of this small Treatise, the Subject whereof is exceeding weighty, and of dayly use to the People of God, though the manner of handling it be attended with many Defects and Weaknesses: Every one cannot be Excellent, who yet may be Useful.

See Gospel-Glass.

I will exercise your Patience no longer than whilst I tell you.

1. Why I publish it to the View of the World.
2. Why I direct it particularly to you.

First, For the Publication of it, take this sincere and brief Account, That as I was led to this Subject by a special Providence, so to the Publication of it by a kind of Necessity: The Providence at first leading me to it, was this: A dear and choice Friend of my intimate Acquaintance being under much inward trouble, upon the account of some special Heart-Disorder, open'd the case to me; and earnestly requested some Rules and Helps in that particular; whilst I was bending my thoughts to that special Case, divers other Cases of like Importance (some of which were dependent upon that Consideration) occurred to my thoughts, and this Scripture which I have insisted upon, presented it self, as a fit Foundation for the whole Discourse; which being lengthen'd out to what you see, divers Friends requested me to transcribe for their use, divers of the Cases here handled, and some others, begg'd me to publish the whole, to which I was in a manner necessitated, to save the pains of transcribing, which to me is a very tedious and tiresome Work: And just as I had almost finished the Copy, an opportunity presented (and that somewhat strangely) to make it publick. So that from the first to last I have been carryed beyond my first Intentions in this thing.

Object. If any say the World is even cloyed with Books, and therefore though the Discourse be necessary, yet the Publication is needless.

Sol. 1. I answer, There are multitudes of Books indeed, and of them many concern not themselves about Root-Truths, and Practical Godliness, but spend their Strength upon impracticable Notions and frivolous Controversies: Many also strike at Root-Truths, and endeavour to undermine the Power of Godliness: And some there are that nourish the Root, and tend to clear and confirm, to prepare and apply the great Truths of the Gospel, that they may be Bread for Souls to live and feed on: Now, though I could wish, that those who have handled the Pen of the Scribe, had better employed their time and pains than to obtrude such useless Discourses upon the World, yet for Books of the latter Rank, I say, that when Husbandmen complain of too much Corn, let Christians complain of too many such Books.

2. And if you be so highly conceited of your own Furniture and Ability, that such Books are needless to you: If you let them alone, they will do you no hurt, and other poor hungry Souls will be glad of them, and bless God for what you despise and leave.

Object. If it be said that several of the cases here handled touch not your condition, I answer,

Sol. 1. That which is not your condition may be another's condition. If you be placed in an easy, full and prosperous state, and so have no need of the helps here offered to support your Heart under pinching Wants, others are forced to live by Faith for every days provision: If you be dandled upon the Knees of Providence, some of your Brethren are under its feet. If you have inward peace and tranquility of Spirit, and so need not the Counsels here given, to ward off those desperate Conclusions that poor afflicted Souls are ready to draw upon themselves at such a time; yet it may be a Word in season to them, and they may say as David to Abigail, Blessed be thou of the Lord, and blessed be thy Advice.

2. That may be your condition shortly, which is not your condition at present: Say not thy Mountain stands strong, thou shalt never be moved: There are changes in the Right Hand of the most High, and then those Truths which are little more esteemed than Hedge fruits, will be as Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver. In Jer. 10. 11. The Prophet there teaches the Jews (who then dwelt in their own Houses) how to defend their Religion in Babylon, and what they should say to the Caldeans there, and therefore that Verse is written in Caldee. So much for the reasons of the Publication: Next for the Dedication of it to you, I was induced thereto by the Consideration,

1. Of the relation I have to you above all the People in the World: I look upon my Gifts as yours, my Time as yours, and all the Talents I am intrusted with, as yours: It is not with you as with a Woman whose Husband is dead, and so is freed from the Law of her Husband, the relation still continues, and so all the mutual Duties of it.

2. By the consideration of my necessitated absence from you, I would not that personal absence should by insensible degrees untwist (as usually it doth) the Cords of Friendship; and therefore have endeavoured (as absent Friends use to do) to preserve and strengthen it by this small remembrance. It was Vespasian's Answer to Apollonius when he desired access for the Phylosophers, My Doors (said Vespasian) are alwayes open to Phylosophers, but my very Breast is open to thee. I cannot say with him, my Doors are open for the free access of Friends, being by a sad Providence shut against my self; but this I can say, my very Breast is still open to you; you are as dear to me as ever.

3. Another inducement (and indeed the main) is the perpetual usefulness and necessity of these Truths for you, which you will have continual need of. And I know few of you have such happy Memories to retain, and I cannot be always with you to inculcate these things, but litera scripta manet; I was willing to leave this with you as a Legacy, as a Testimony of sincere love for, and care over you: This may counsel and direct you when I cannot: I may be rendred useless to you by a civil or natural Death; but this may out-live me, and Oh that it may serve your Souls when I am silent in the dust.

To hasten now to a Conclusion, I have only three Requests to you, which I earnestly beseech you not to deny me; yea, I charge you, as ever you desire to appear with comfort before the great Shepherd, dare not to slight these Requests.

1. Above all other studies in the World, study your own Hearts: Waste not a minute more of your precious time about frivolous and sapless Controversies (as it is reported even of Bellarmine (how truly I exa-

not) Quod a studiis scholastica Theologiæ averteretur fere nauseabundus, liquide pietatis, (i. e.) he turned with loathing from the study of School-Divinity, because it wanted the sweet juice of Piety; I had rather it should be said of you as one said of * Swinkfeldius, (He wanted a regular Head, but not an honest Heart) than that you should have regular Heads, and irregular Hearts: My dear Flock, I have, according to the Grace given me, laboured in the course of my ministry among you to feed you with the Heart-nourishing Bread of Practical Doctrine, and I do desire you, it is far better you should have the sweet and saving impressions of the Gospel-Truths, feelingly and powerfully conveyed to your Hearts, than only to understand them by a bare ratiocination, or dry syllogistical inference. Leave trifling Studies to such as have time lying on their hands, and know not how to employ it: Remember you are at the door of Eternity, and have other work to do; those Hours you spend in Heart-work in your Closets, are the golden Spots of your time, and will have the sweetest Influence in your last Hour: Never forget those Sermons I preached to you upon that subject, 2 Kings 20. 2. 3. Heart-work is weighty and difficult work; an Error in it may cost you your Souls: I may say of it as Austine speaks of the Doctrine of the Trinity, Nihil facilius aut periculosius erratur; A Man can err in nothing more easily or more dangerously: O then, look to your Hearts.

My next request is, That you will carefully look to your Conversations, and be accurate in all your ways, walking forth the Word of Life: Be sure by the strictness and holiness of your Lives to settle your selves in the very Consciences of your Enemies. Remember that your Lives must be produced in the great Day, when you judge the World, 1 Cor. 6. 2. O then what manner of Persons ought you to be! You have many Eyes upon you, the Omniscient Eye of God, that searches the Heart and Reins, Rev. 2. 23. The vigilant Eye of Satan, Job 1. 7, 8. The envious Eyes of Enemies, that curiously observe you, Psal. 5. 8. The quick and pregnant Eye of Conscience, which none of your Actions escape, Rom. 9. 1.

Oh then be precise, and accurate in all manner of conversation: Keep up the power of Godliness in your Closets and Families, and then you will not let it fall in your more publick Employments and Converses in the World: I have often told you that it is the honour of the Gospel, that it makes the best Parents and Children; the best Masters and Servants; the best Husbands and Wives in the World.

My third and last Request is, That you pray for me: I hope I can say, and I am sure some of you have acknowledged, that I came at first among you, as the return and answer of your Prayers: And indeed so it should be, see Luke 10. 2. I am perswaded also, I have been carryed on in my Work by your Prayers; 'tis sweet when 'tis so; see Ephes. 6. 18, 19. And I hope by your Prayers to receive yet a farther Benefit, even that which is mentioned, Heb. 13. 18, 19. Philem. 22. And truly 'tis but equal you should pray for me me, I have often prayed for you: Let the Pulpit, Family and Closet witness for me: And God forbid I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you.

Yea, Friends, your own Interest may perswade to it: What Mercies you obtain for me redound to your own Advantage; if God preserve me it is for your Use and Service: The more Gifts and Graces a Minister hath, the better for them that shall wait on his Ministry: The more God gives in to me, the more I shall be able to give out to you. I will detain you no longer, but to intreat you to accept this small Testification of my great Love, and have recourse to it, according as the exigencies of your condition shall require: Read it considerингly and obediently; judge it not by the Dress and Style, but by the Weight and Savour of what you read. 'Tis a good Rule of Bernard, In legendis libris, non quæramus scientiam sed saporem, (i. e.) In reading Books regard not so much the Science as the Savour; That it may prove the Savour of Life unto Life to you, and all those into whose Hands it shall come, is the hearty desire of

A SAINT INDEED, &c.

Prov. IV. 23.

Keep thy Heart with all diligence, for out of it are the Issues of Life

THE Heart of Man is his worst part before it be Regenerate, and the best afterwards; It is the Seat of Principles, and Fountain of Actions. The Eye of God is, and the Eye of the Christian ought to be principally fixed upon it.

The greatest difficulty in Conversion, is to win the Heart to God; and the greatest difficulty after Conversion, is to keep the Heart with God. Here lies the very pinch and stress of Religion; here's that that makes the way to Life a narrow Way, and the Gate of Heaven a strait Gate. Direction and Help in this great Work, is the scope and sum of this Text; wherein we have,

1. An Exhortation, Keep thy Heart with all diligence.

2. The Reason or Motive inforcing it, For out of it are the Issues of Life.

In the Exhortation I shall consider,

1. The Matter of the Duty.

2. The Manner of performing it.

1. The Matter of the Duty, Keep thy Heart. Heart is not here taken properly for that noble part of the Body which the Phylosophers call the primum vivens, & ultimum moriens; the first that lives, and the last that dyes; but by Heart in a Metaphor, the Scripture sometimes understands some particular noble faculty of the Soul: In Rom. 1. 21. It is put for the understanding part, their foolish Heart, (i. e.) their foolish Understanding was darkned. And Psal. 119. 11. It is put for the Memory, Thy Word have I hid in my Heart. And 1 John 3. 10. it is put for the Conscience, which hath in it both the light of the Understanding, and the recognitions of the Memory: If our Heart condemn us, (i. e.) if our Conscience, whose proper Office it is to condemn. But here we are to take it more generally for the whole Soul, or inner Man; for look what the Heart is to the Body, that the Soul is to the Man; and what Health is to the Heart, that Holiness is to the Soul: Quod sanitas in corpore id sanctitas in corde. The state of the whole Body depends upon the soundness and vigour of the Heart, and the everlasting state of the whole Man upon the good or ill condition of the Soul.

And by keeping the Heart, understand the diligent and constant use and improvement of all holy Means and Duties, to preserve the Soul from Sin, and maintain its sweet and free communion with God, * Lavator in loc. will have the word taken from a besieged Garrison, begirt by many Enemies without, and in danger of being betrayed by treacherous Citizens within, in which danger the Soldiers upon pain of Death are commanded to watch; and whereas the expression, (keep thy Heart) seems to put it upon us as our Work; yet it doth not imply a sufficiency or ability in us to do it; we are as able to stop the Sun in its course, or make the River run backward, as by our own skill and power rule and order our Hearts: We may as well be our own Saviours, as our own Keepers, and yet Solomon speaks properly enough, when he saith, Keep thy Heart; because the duty is ours, though the power be God's. A Natural Man hath no power, a Gracious Man hath some, though not sufficient, and that Power he hath, depends upon the exciting and assisting strength of Christ; Gratia gratiam postulat, Grace within us is beholding to Grace without us, John 15. 5. Without me ye can do nothing. So much of the Matter of Duty.

2. The Manner of performing it is, With diligence; the Hebrew is very emphatical, cum omni custodia, keep with all keeping, q. d. keep, keep; set double guards, your Heart will be gone else. And this vehemency of expression with which the duty is urged, plainly implies how difficult it is to keep our Hearts, how dangerous to let them go.

2. The Reason, or Motive quickning to the Duty, is very forcible and weighty: For out of it are the issues of Life. That is, it is the Source or Fountain of all vital Actions and Operations. Hinc Fons boni & peccandi origo, saith Jerom, it is the spring and original both of Good and Evil, as the spring in a Watch that sets all the Wheels in motion. The Heart is the Treasury, the Hands and Tongue but the Shops, what is in them must come from thence; the Hand and Tongue in their ways begin where the Heart ends. The Heart contrives, and the Members execute, Luke 6. A good Man out of the good Treasury of his Heart bringeth forth good things, and an evil Man out of the evil Treasury of his Heart bringeth forth evil things; for out of the abundance of his Heart his Mouth speaketh. So then, if the Heart err in its Work, these must needs miscarry in their's: Heart Errors are like the Errors of the first Impression, which cannot be rectifyed afterwards, like the misplacing and inverting of the figures and letters in the Press, which must needs make so many Erratas in all the Copies that are printed off. O then! how important a Duty is that which is contained in the following Propositions.

Doct. That the keeping and right managing of the Heart in every condition, is the great business of a Christian's Life.

What the Phylosopher saith of Waters, is properly applicable to Hearts, Suis terminis vix cile continentes; 'tis hard to keep them within their bounds; God hath set bounds and limits to them, yet how frequently do they transgress, not only the bounds of Grace and Religion, but even those of Reason and common Honesty? Hic labor

* I say constant, for the reason added in the Text, extends the duty to all the states and conditions of a Christian's Life, and makes it binde ad semper: If the Heart must be kept because out of it are the issues of Life, then as long as these issues of Life do flow out of it, we are obliged to keep it.

eſt, this is that which affords the Chriſtian matter of labour, fear and trembling to his dying-day. 'Tis not the cleanſing of the hand that makes a Chriſtian, for many a fair Hypocrite can ſhew as fair a hand as he, but the purifying, watching, and right ordering of the Heart; this is the thing that provokes ſo many ſad Complaints, and coſts ſo many deep Groans and briniſh Tears. 'Twas the Pride of Hezekiah's Heart that made him lye in the Duſt mourning before the Lord, 2 Chron. 32. 26. 'Twas the fear of Hypocriſy invading the Heart, that made David cry, Let my Heart be ſound in thy Statutes, that I be not aſhamed, Pſal. 119. 80. 'Twas the ſad Experience he had of the Diviſions and Diſtractions of his own Heart in the Service of God, that made him pour out that Prayer, Pſal. 86. 1. Unite my Heart to fear thy Name.

The Method in which I ſhall improve the Point, ſhall be this.

1. Firſt, I ſhall enquire what the keeping of the Heart ſuppoſes and imports.

2. Secondly, Aſſign divers Reaſons, why Chriſtians muſt make this the great work and buſineſs of their Lives.

3. Thirdly, Point at thoſe ſpecial ſeaſons which eſpecially call for this diligence in keeping the Heart.

4. Fourthly and laſtly, Apply the whole in ſeveral Uſes.

1. What the keeping of the Heart ſuppoſes and imports.

To keep the Heart neceſſarily ſuppoſes a previous Work of Sanctification, which hath ſet the Heart right, by giving it a new ſpiritual Bent and Inclination; for as long as the Heart is not ſet right by Grace, as to its habitual frame, no Duties or Means can keep it right with God. Self is the Poiſe of the unſanctifyed Heart, which byaſſes and moves it in all its Deſigns and Actions; and as long as it is ſo, it is impoſſible that any external means ſhould keep it with God.

Man, by Creation, was of one conſtant, uniform frame and tenor of Spirit, held one ſtrait and even Courſe; not one Thought or Faculty ravell'd or diſorder'd, his Mind had a perfect Illumination to underſtand and know the Will of God, his Will a perfect complyance therewith; his ſenſitive Appetite and other inferiour Powers, ſtood in a moſt obedient ſubordination.

Man, by Degeneration, is become a moſt diſordered and rebellious Creature, conteſting with, and oppoſing his Maker, as the firſt Cauſe, by ſelf-dependance, as the chiefeſt Good, by ſelf-love; as the higheſt Lord, by ſelf-will; and as the laſt End, by ſelf-ſeeking; and ſo is quite diſordered, and all his Acts irregular: His illuminated Underſtanding is clouded with Ignorance, his complying Will full of Rebellion and Stubborneſs; his ſubordinate Powers, caſting off the dominion and government of the ſuperiour Faculties.

But by Regeneration this diſordered Soul is ſet right again; Sanctification being the rectifying and due framing, or as the Scripture phraſes it, the renovation of the Soul after the Image of God; Eph. 4. 24. in which, ſelf-dependance is removed by Faith; ſelf-love, by the love of God; ſelf-will, by ſubjection and obedience to the Will of God; and ſelf-ſeeking by ſelf-denyal. The darkned Underſtanding is again illuminated, Eph. 1. 18. the refractory Will ſweetly ſubdued, Pſal. 110. 3. the rebellious Appetite, or Concupiſcence, gradually conquered, Rom. 7. 6. 7. per tot. And thus the Soul which Sin had univerſally depraved, is again by Grace reſtored and rectifyed.

This being preſuppoſed, it will not be difficult to apprehend, what it is to keep the Heart, which is nothing elſe but the conſtant care and diligence of ſuch a renewed Man, to preſerve his Soul in that holy frame to which Grace hath reduced it, and daily ſtrives to hold it.

For though Grace hath in great meaſure rectifyed the Soul, and given it an habitual and heavenly temper; yet Sin often actually diſcompoſes it again; ſo that even a gracious Heart is like a muſical Inſtrument, which though it be never ſo exactly tuned, a ſmall matter brings it out of tune again; yea, hang it aſide but a little, and it will need ſetting again, before you can play another Leſſon on it; even ſo ſtands the caſe with gracious Hearts; if they are in frame in one duty, yet how dull, dead and diſordered, when they come to another? And therefore every Duty needs a particular preparation of the Heart, Job 11. 13. If thou prepare thine Heart, and ſtretch out thine Hands towards him. Well then, to keep the Heart, is carefully to preſerve it from Sin, which diſorders it; and maintain that ſpiritual and gracious frame which fits it for a Life of Communion with God: And this includes theſe ſix Acts in it.

1. Firſt, Frequent obſervation of the frame of the Heart, turning in and examining how the caſe ſtands with it, this is one part of the Work: Carnal and Formal Perſons take no heed to this, they cannot be brought to confer with their own Hearts; there are ſome Men and Women that have lived forty or fifty years in the World, and have ſcarce had one hours Diſcourſe with their own Hearts all that while: 'Tis a hard thing to bring a Man and himſelf together upon ſuch an account; but Saints know thoſe Soliloquies and Self-conferences to be of excellent uſe and advantage. The Heathen could ſay, Anima ſedendo & quieſcendo fit ſapiens, the Soul is made Wiſe by ſitting ſtill in quietneſs; though Bankrupts care not to look in their Books of Accompt, yet upright Hearts will know whether they go backward or forward, Pſal. 77. 6. I commune with mine own Heart: The Heart can never be kept, until its caſe be examined and underſtood.

2. It includes deep Humiliation for heart-evils and diſorders; thus Hezekiah humbled himſelf for the Pride of his Heart, 2 Chron. 32. 26. Thus the People were ordered to ſpread forth their hands to God in Prayer, in a ſenſe of the Plague of their own Hearts, 1 Kings 8. 38. Upon this account many an upright Heart had been laid low before God: O what an Heart have I? They have in their Confeſſions pointed at the Heart, the pained place, Lord here is the Wound, here is the Plague-ſore. It is with the Heart well kept, as it is with the Eye, which is a fit Emblem of it, if a ſmall Duſt get into the Eye, it will never leave twinkling and watering till it have wept it out: So the upright Heart cannot be at reſt till it have wept out its troubles, and poured out its complaints before the Lord.

3. It includes earneſt Supplications and inſtant Prayer for heart purifying and rectifying Grace, when Sin hath defiled and diſorder'd it, ſo Pſal. 119. 12. Cleanſe thou me from ſecret Faults; and Pſal. 86. 11. Unite my Heart to fear thy Name. Saints have always many ſuch Petitions depending before the Throne of Grace; this is the thing which is moſt pleaded by them with God: When they are praying for outward Mercies, happily their their Spirits may be more remiss, but when it comes to the Heart case, then they extend their Spirits to the utmost, fill their Mouths with Arguments, weep and make supplication: Oh, for a Heart to love God more! To hate Sin more, to walk more evenly with God: Lord deny not to me such a Heart, whatever thou deny me; Give me an Heart to fear thee, love and delight in thee, if I beg my Bread in desolate places. 'Tis observed of holy Mr. Bradford, that when he was confessing Sin, he would never give over confessing until he had felt some brokenness of Heart for that Sin; and when praying for any spiritual Mercy, would never give over that suit, till he had got some relish of that Mercy; that's the third thing included in keeping the Heart.

4. It includes the keeping of strong Engagements and Bonds upon our selves to walk more accurately with God, and avoid the occasions whereby the Heart may be induced to Sin: Well composed, advised and deliberate Vows, are in some cases of excellent use to guard the Heart, against some special Sin; so Job. 31. 1. I made a covenant with mine Eyes; by this means, holy ones have over-awed their Souls, and preserved themselves from defilement by some special Heart-corruptions.

5. It includes a constant holy Jealousy over our own Hearts; quick-sighted self-jealousy is an excellent preservative from Sin, he that will keep his Heart, must have the Eyes of his Soul awake and open upon all the disorderly and tumultuous stirrings of his Affections; if the Affections break loose, and the Passions be stirred, the Soul must discover and suppress them before they get to an heigth: O, my Soul, dost thou well in this? My tumultuous Thoughts and Passions, where is your Commission? State viri, quæ causa via? quive estis in armis. Virg.

Happy is the Man that thus feareth always, Prov. 28. 14. By this fear of the Lord it is that Men depart from evil, shake off security, and preserve themselves from Iniquity; he that will keep his Heart must feed with Fear, rejoyce with Fear, and pass the whole time of his sojourning here in Fear, and all little enough to keep the Heart from Sin.

6. And lastly, to add no more, It includes the realliſing of God's Presence with us, and setting the Lord always before us: This the People of God have found a singular means to keep their Hearts upright, and awe them from Sin; when the Eye of our Faith is fixed upon the Eye of God's Omniscience, we dare not let out our Thoughts and Affections to vanity: Holy Job durst not suffer his Heart to yield to an impure, vain thought; and what was it that moved him to so great a Circumspection? Why, he tells you, Job 31. 4. Doth he not see my ways, and count all my steps? Walk before me (saith God to Abraham) and be thou perfect, Gen. 17. 1. Even as Parents use to set their Children in the Congregation before them, knowing that else they will be toying and playing; so would the Heart of the best Man too, were it not for the Eye of God.

In these, and such like particulars, do gracious Souls express the care they have of their Hearts; they are as careful to prevent the breaking loose of their Corruptions in times of Temptation, as Seamen are to binde fast the Guns, that they break not loose in a Storm; as careful to preserve the sweetness and comfort they have got from God in any duty, as one that comes out of an hot Bath, or great Sweat, is of taking Cold, by going forth into the chill Air. This is the work, and of all works in Religion it is the most difficult, constant and important work.

1. 'Tis the hardest work; Heart-work is hard work indeed: To shuffle over Religious Duties with a loose and heedless Spirit, will cost no great pains; but to set thy self before the Lord, and tye up thy loose and vain Thoughts to a constant and serious attendance upon him; this will cost thee something: To attain a facility and dexterity of Language in Prayer, and put thy meaning into apt and decent Expressions, is easy; but to get thy Heart broken for Sin, whilst thou art confessing it; melted with free Grace, whilst thou art blessing God for it; to be really ashamed and humbled through the apprehensions of God's infinite Holiness, and to keep thy Heart in this frame, not only in, but after Duty, will surely cost thee some groans and travailing pains of Soul: To repress the outward acts of Sin; and compose the external part of thy Life in a laudable and comely manner, is no great matter, even carnal Persons by the force of common Principles can do this; but to kill the root of Corruption within, to set and keep up an Holy Government over thy Thoughts, to have all things lye strait and orderly in the Heart, this is not easy.

2. 'Tis a constant work; the keeping of the Heart is such a work, as is never done till Life be done; this Labour and our Life, end together: It is with a Christian in this Business, as it is with Seamen that have sprung a Leak at Sea, if they tug not constantly at the Pump, the Water encreases upon them, and will quickly sink them: 'Tis in vain for them to say the Work is hard, and we are weary: There is no time or condition in the Life of a Christian, which will suffer an intermission of this work. It is in the keeping watch over our Hearts as it was in the keeping up of Moses his hands, whilst Israel and Amalek were fighting below, Exod. 17. 12. No sooner do Moses his hands grow heavy and sink down, but Amalek prevails. You know it cost David and Peter many a sad Day and Night for intermitting the watch over their own Hearts but a few minutes.

3. 'Tis the most important Business of a Christian's Life; without this we are but Formalists in Religion: All our Professions, Gifts and Duties signify nothing: My Son, give me thine Heart, Prov. 23. 26. God is pleased to call that a Gift, which is indeed a Debt; he will put this honour upon the Creature to receive it from him in the way of a Gift; but if this be not given him, he regards not whatever else you bring to him: There is so much only of worth and value in what we do, as there is of Heart in it. Concerning the Heart, God seems to say, as Joseph of Benjamin, If you bring not Benjamin with you, you shall not see my Face. Among the Heathens, when the Beast was cut up for Sacrifice, the first thing the Priest look'd upon was the Heart, and if that were unsound and naught, the Sacrifice was rejected. God rejects all duties (how glorious soever in other respects) offered him without a Heart. He that performs duty without a Heart, viz. heedlesly, is no more accepted with God, than he that performs it with a double Heart, viz. hypocritically, Isa. 66. 3. And thus I have briefly open'd the nature of the Duty, what is imported in this Phrase, Keep thy Heart.

2. Next, I shall give you some rational Account why why Christians should make this the great business of their Lives to keep their Hearts.

The importance and necessity of making this our great and main business will manifestly appear in that, 1. The Honour of God. 2. The Sincerity of our Profession. 3. The Beauty of our Conversation. 4. The Comfort of our Souls. 5. The Improvement of our Graces: And, 6. Our stability in the hour of Temptation, are all wrapt up in, and dependent on our Sincerity and Care in the management of this work.

1. The Glory of God is much concerned therein; Heart-evils are very provoking Evils to the Lord. The Schools do well observe, that outward Sins are majoris infamiæ, Sins of great Infamy, but Heart-sins are majoris reatus, Sins of deeper Guilt. How severely hath the great God declared his Wrath from Heaven against Heart-wickedness; The great Crime for which the old World stands indicted, Gen. 6. 5, 6, 7. is Heart-wickedness: God saw that every Imagination (or Fiction) of their Heart was only evil, and that continually: for which he sent the dreadfullest Judgment that was ever executed since the World began: And the Lord said, I will destroy Man whom I have created from the Face of the Earth, both Man and Beast, and the creeping things, and the Fowls of Heaven, for it repenteth me that I have made Man, vers. 7. We find not their Murders, Adulteries, Blasphemies, (though they were defiled with these) particularly alledged against them; but the Evils of their Hearts: Yea, that which God was so provoked by, as to give up his peculiar Inheritance into the Enemies hand, was the evil of their Hearts, Jer. 4. 14. O Jerusalem, wash thine Heart from wickedness, that thou mayst be saved; how long shall vain Thoughts lodge within thee? The wickedness and vanity of their Thoughts God took special notice of; and because of this the Chaldean must come upon them as a Lyon from his Thicket, vers. 7. and tear them to pieces. For the very sin of thoughts it was that God threw down the fallen Angels from Heaven, and keeps them still in everlasting chains to the Judgment to which they are reserved; as Prisoners that have most Irons laid upon them, may be supposed to be the greatest Malefactors; and what was their Sin? Why only spiritual Wickedness, for they having no bodily Organs, could act nothing externally against God. Alas, meer Heart-evils are so provoking, that for them he rejects with indignation all the Duties that some Men perform unto him, Isa. 66. 3. He that killeth an Ox, is as if he slew a Man; he that sacrificeth a Lamb, as if he cut off a Dog's Neck; he that offereth an Oblation, as if he offered Swine's blood; he that burneth Incense, as if he blessed an Idol. In what Words could the abhorrence of a Creatures Actions be more fully expressed by the Holy God? Murder and Idolatry are not more vile in his account than their Sacrifices, though materially such as himself appointed: And what made them so? The following Words inform us, Their Soul delighteth in their Abomination.

To conclude, such is the vileness of meer Heart-evils, that the Scriptures sometimes intimate the difficulty of Pardon for them. So in the case of Simon Magus, Acts 8. 21. his Heart was not right, he had vile thoughts of God, and the things of God, the Apostle bids him repent and pray, if perhaps the thoughts of his Heart might be forgiven him. Then never slight Heart-Evils! for by these God is highly wronged and provoked, and for this reason let every Christian make it his work to keep his Heart with all diligence.

2. The sincerity of our Profession much depends upon the Care and Conscience we have in keeping our Hearts; for it's most certain, that a Man is but an Hypocrite in his Profession, how curious soever he be in the externals of Religion, that is heedless and careless of the frame of his Heart; you have a pregnant Instance of this in the case of Jehu, 2 Kings 10. 31. But Jehu took no heed to walk in the ways of the Lord God of Israel with his Heart. That Context gives us an Account of the great Service perform'd by Jehu against the House of Ahab and Baal, as also of a great temporal Reward given him by God for that Service, even that his Children to the fourth Generation should sit upon the Throne of Israel. And yet in these words Jehu is censured for an Hypocrite; though God approved and rewarded the Work, yet he abhorred and rejected the Person that did it as hypocritical: And wherein lay his Hypocrisy, but in this, that he took no heed to walk in the ways of the Lord with his Heart, (i. e.) he did all insincerely and for self-ends: And though the work he did were materially good, yet he not purging his Heart from those unworthy Self-designs in doing it, was an Hypocrite: And Simon, of whom we spake before, though he appeared such a Person that the Apostle could not regularly refuse him, yet his Hypocrisy was quickly discovered: And what discovered it but this, that though he professed and associated himself with the Saints, yet he was a Stranger to the Mortification of Heart-sins? Thy Heart is not right with God, Acts 8. 21.

——'Tis true, there is a great difference among Christians themselves, in their diligence and dexterity about Heart-work; some are more conversant and successful in it than others are; but he that takes no heed to his Heart, that he is not careful to order it aright before God, is but a Hypocrite, Ezek. 33. 31, 32. And they come unto me as the People cometh, and sit before thee (as my People) and they hear thy Words, but they will not do them; for with their Mouth they shew much love, but their Heart goes after their covetousness. Here were a Company of formal Hypocrites, as is evident by that expression (as my People) like them, but not of them. And what made them so? Their outside was fair, here were reverent Postures, high Professions, much seeming joy and delight in Ordinances, Thou art to them as a lovely Song; yea, but for all that they kept not their Hearts with God in those Duties, their Hearts were commanded by their Lusts, they went after their Covetousness; had they kept their Hearts with God, all had been well; but not regarding which way their Heart went in duty, there lay the core of their Hypocrisy.

Object. If any upright Soul should hence infer, that I am an Hypocrite too, for many times my Heart departs from God in Duty, do what I can, yet I cannot hold it close with God.

Sol. To this I answer, The very Objection carries in it its own Solution: Thou sayest, do what I can, yet I cannot keep my Heart with God. Soul, if thou dost what thou canst, thou hast the blessing of an upright, though God sees good to exercise thee under the affliction of a discomposed Heart. There remains still some wildness in the Thoughts and Fancies of the best to humble them; but if you find a care before to prevent them; and opposition against them when they come, grief and sorrow afterwards; you will find enough to clear you from reigning Hypocrisy.

119. 11. Thy Word have I hid in mine Heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee: Partly in our endeavours to engage our Hearts to God, Jer. 30. 21. and partly in begging preventing Grace from God in our onſets upon duty, Pſal. 119. 36, 37. 'tis a good ſign where this care goes before a Duty.

And (2.) 'tis a ſweet ſign of uprightneſs to oppoſe them in their firſt riſe, Pſal. 119. 113. I hate vain thoughts, Gal. 5. 17. The Spirit luſteth againſt the Fleſh.

And, (3.) Thy after-grief diſcovers thy upright Heart; if with Hezekiah thou art humbled for the evils of thy Heart, thou haſt no reaſon from thoſe diſorders to queſtion the integrity of it; but to ſuffer Sin to lodge quietly in the Heart, to let thy Heart habitually and uncontrolledly wander from God, is a ſad and dangerous Symptom indeed.

3. The Beauty of our Converſation ariſes from the heavenly frames, and holy order of our Spirits; there is a ſpiritual Luſtre and Beauty in the Converſation of Saints, The Righteous is more excellent than his Neighbour, they ſhine as the lights of the World; but whatever Luſter and Beauty is in their Lives, comes from the excellency of their Spirits; as the Candle within puts a Luſtre upon the Lanthorn in which it ſhines. It is impoſſible that a diſordered and neglected Heart, ſhould ever produce a well-ordered Converſation; and ſiuce (as the Text obſerves) the iſſues or ſtreams of Life flow out of the Heart as their Fountain, it muſt needs follow, that ſuch as the Heart is, the Life will be; hence 1 Pet, 11. 12. Abſtrain from fleſhly Luſts —— having your Converſation honeſt * or beautiful, as the Greek word imports. So Iſa. 55. 7. Let the Wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous Man his thoughts. His way notes the courſe of his Life, his thoughts the frame of his Heart; and therefore ſince the way and courſe of his Life flows from his thoughts, or the frame of his Heart, both or neither will be forſaken: The Heart is the womb of all Actions, theſe Actions are virtually and ſeminally contained in our Thoughts, theſe Thoughts being once made up into Affections, are quickly made out into ſuitable Actions and Practices. If the Heart be wicked, then as Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 15. 19. Out of the Heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, &c. Mark the order, firſt wanton, or revengeful Thoughts, then unclean or murderous Practices.

And if the Heart be holy and ſpiritual, then as David ſpeaks from ſweet experience in Pſal. 45. 1. My Heart is (inditing) a good matter, I ſpeak of the things which (I have made) my Tongue is as the Pen of a ready Writer. Here's a Life richly beautifyed with good works; ſome ready made; I will ſpeak of the things which I have made: Others upon the Wheel making, my Heart is inditing, but both proceeding from the heavenly frame of his Heart.

Put but the Heart in frame, and the Life will quickly diſcover that it is ſo. I think it is not very difficult to diſcern by the Duties and Converſes of Chriſtians, what frames their Spirits are under; take a Chriſtian in a good frame, and how ſerious, heavenly and profitable will his Converſes and Duties be! What a lovely Companion is he during the continuance of it! 'Twould do any one's Heart good to be with him at ſuch a time, Pſal. 37. 30, 31. The Mouth of the Righteous ſpeaketh Wiſdom, and his Tongue talketh of Judgment, the Law of his God is in his Heart.

When the Heart is up with God, and full of God, how dexterouſly and ingeniouſly will he winde in ſpiritual Diſcourſe, improving every occaſion and advantage to ſome heavenly purpoſe? Few Words run then at the waſte ſpout.

And what elſe can be the reaſon, why the Diſcourſes and Duties of many Chriſtians are become ſo frothy and unprofitable, their Communion both with God, and one another, become as a dry ſtalk but becauſe their Hearts are neglected? Surely this muſt be the reaſon of it, and verily it is an Evil greatly to be bewailed; for want of this Chriſtian-fellowſhip it became a ſapleſs thing, ſo the attracting Beauty that was wont to ſhine from the Converſations of the Saints upon the Faces and Conſciences of the World, (which it did not allure, and bring them in love with the ways of God; yet at leaſt left a Teſtimony in their Conſciences of the excellency of thoſe Men and their way) this is in a great meaſure loſt, to the unſpeakable detriment of Religion.

Time was when Chriſtians did carry it at ſuch a rate, that the World ſtood at a gaze at them, as that Word ξενίζονται, 1 Pet. 4. 4. imports; their Life and Language was of a different ſtrain from others, their Tongues diſcovered them to be Galileans wherever they come; but now ſince vain Speculations, and fruitleſs Controverſies have ſo much obtained, and Heart-work, Practical godlineſs ſo much neglected among Profeſſors, the caſe is ſadly altered, their diſcourſe is become like other Mens: If they come among you now, they may (to allude to that, Acts 2. 6.) Hear every Man ſpeak in his own Language. And truly I have little hope to ſee this Evil redreſſed, and the credit of Religion again repaired; till Chriſtians fall to their old work, till they ply Heart-work closer: When the Salt of heavenly mindedneſs is again caſt into the Spring, the Streams will run clearer and ſweeter.

4. The comfort of our Souls doth much depend upon the keeping of our Hearts, for he that is negligent in attending his own Heart, is (ordinarily) a great ſtranger to aſſurance, and the ſweet comforts flowing from it.

Indeed, if the Antinomian Doctrine were true which teaches you to reject all marks and ſigns for the tryal of your conditions, telling you it is only the Spirit that immediately aſſures you by witneſſing your Adoption directly without them, that you might be careleſs of your Hearts, yea, ſtrangers to them, and yet no Strangers to comfort. But ſince both Scripture and Experience do confute this dotage, I hope you will never look for comfort in that unſcriptural way. I deny not but it is the work and office of the Spirit to aſſure you, and yet do confidently affirm, that if ever you attain Aſſurance in the ordinary way where God diſpenſes it, you muſt take pains with your own Hearts; you may expect your comforts upon eaſier terms; but I am miſtaken, if ever you enjoy them upon any other: Give all diligence, prove your ſelves: This is the Scripture way. I remember Mr. Roberts in his Treatiſe of the Covenant tells us, That he knew a Chriſtian who in the Infancy of his Chriſtianity, ſo vehemently panted after the infallible Aſſurance of God's Love, that for a long time together he earneſtly deſired ſome Voice from Heaven; yea, ſometimes walking in the ſolitary Fields, earneſtly deſired ſome miraculous voice from the Trees and Stones then: this, after many deſires and longings were granted him: But in time a better was afforded him, the ordinary way of ſearching the Word, and his own Heart. An inſtance of the like nature

Learn

Learned Gerſon gives us of one that was driven by Temptation upon the very borders of Deſperation; at laſt being ſweetly ſettled and aſſured, one asked him, how he attained it? He anſwered, Non ex nova aliqua revelatione, &c. Not by any extraordinary Revelation, but by ſubjecting his underſtanding to the Scriptures, and comparing his own Heart with them. The Spirit indeed aſſures by witneſſing our Adoption; and he witneſſeth two ways.

(1.) Objectively, (i. e.) by working thoſe Graces in our Souls which are the Conditions of the Promiſe, and ſo the Spirit and his Graces in us are all one; the Spirit of God dwelling in us, is a mark of our Adoption. Now the Spirit cannot be diſcerned in his Eſſence, but in his Operations; and to diſcern theſe, is to diſcern the Spirit; and how theſe ſhould be diſcerned, without ſerious ſearching, and diligent watching of the Heart, I cannot imagine.

(2.) The other way of the Spirits witneſſing is effectively, (i. e.) by irradiating the Soul with a Grace-diſcovering Light, ſhining upon his own work; and this in order of Nature follows the former work: He firſt infuſes the Grace, and then opens the Eye of the Soul to ſee it. Now ſince the Heart is the ſubject of that infuſed Grace, even this way of the Spirit's witneſſing alſo includes the neceſſity of keeping carefully our own Hearts: for,

(1.) A neglected Heart is ſo confuſed and dark, that the little Grace which is in it, is not ordinarily diſcernable: The moſt accurate and laborious Chriſtians, that take moſt pains, and ſpend moſt time about their Hearts, do yet find it very difficult to diſcover the pure and genuine workings of the Spirit there: How then ſhall the Chriſtian which is (comparatively) negligent and reciſs about heart-work, be ever able to diſcover it? Sincerity, which is the quæſitum, the thing ought for, lies in the Heart like a ſmall piece of old in the bottom of a River, he that will find must ſtay till the Water be clear and ſettled, nd then he ſhall ſee it ſparkling at the bottom; nd that the Heart may be clear and ſettled, How uch pains and watching, care and diligence will coſt?

(2.) God doth not uſually indulge lazy and negent Souls with the Comforts of Aſſurance, he ll not ſo much as ſeem to patroniſe ſloth and eleſsneſs; he will give it, but it ſhall be in his n way: His command hath united our care and nfort together; they are miſtaken that think beautiful Child of Aſſurance may be born hout pangs: Ah, how many ſolitary Hours e the People of God ſpent in heart-examinan? How many times have they looked into the rd, and then into their Hearts? Sometime y thought they diſcovered Sincerity, and were n ready to draw forth the triumphant concluof Aſſurance; then comes a doubt they canreſolve, and daſhes all again; many hopes fears, doubtings and reaſonings they have in their own breaſts, before they arrived at mfortable ſettlement.

o conclude, Suppoſe it poſſible for a careleſs ſtian to attain Aſſurance, yet its impoſſible ould long retain it; for it is with thoſe whoſe rts are big with the joys of Aſſurance, as with egnant Woman ſubject to Miſcarriages; if ordinary care be not uſed, it is a thouſand e if ever ſhe embrace a living Child: So 'tis a little pride, vanity, careleſsneſs, daſhes all that for which thou haſt been labouring a long time in many a weary Duty. Since then the joy of our Life, the comfort of our Souls, riſes and falls with our diligence in this work, keep your Hearts with all diligence.

5. The Improvement of our Graces depends on the keeping of our Hearts; I never knew Grace thrive in a negligent and careleſs Soul; the habits and roots of Grace are planted in the Heart; and the dependency is radicated there, the more thriving and flouriſhing Grace is: In Eph. 3. 17. We read of being rooted in Grace: Grace in the Heart is the root of every gracious Word in the Mouth, and of every holy work in the hand, Pſal. 116. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 13. 'Tis true, Chriſt is the root of a Chriſtian; but Chriſt is Origo originans, the originating Root, and Grace Origo originata, a root originated, planted and influenced by Chriſt; according as this thrives under Divine Influences, ſo the acts of Grace are more or leſs fruitful or vigorous: Now in a Heart not kept with care and diligence, theſe fructifying influences are ſtopt and cut off, multitudes of Vanities break in upon it, and devour its ſtrength; the Heart is, as it were, the Paſture, in which multitudes of thoughts are fed every Day; a gracious Heart diligently kept, feeds many precious thoughts of God in a Day, Pſal. 139. 17. How precious are thy thoughts to me, O God! How great is the ſum of them? If I ſhould count them, they are more in number than the Sand; and when I awake, I am ſtill with thee. And as the gracious Heart feeds and nouriſhes me, ſo they refreſh and feaſt the Heart, Pſal. 63. 5, 6. My Soul is filled as with marrow and fatneſs whilſt I think upon thee, &c. But in the diſregarded Heart, ſwarms of vain and fooliſh thoughts are perpetually working, and juſtle out thoſe ſpiritual Ideas and thoughts of God, by which the Soul ſhould be refreſhed.

Beſides, the careleſs Heart makes nothing out of any Duty or Ordinance it performs or attends on, and yet theſe are the Conduits of Heaven from whence Grace is watered and made fruitful: A Man may go with an heedleſs Spirit from Ordinance to Ordinance, abide all his Days under the choiceſt teaching, and yet never be improved by them; for Heart-neglect is a leak in the bottom, no heavenly influences, how rich ſoever, abide in that Soul, Matth. 13. 3, 4. The Heart that lies open and common, like the Highway, free for all Paſſengers, when the Seed fell on it, the fowls came and devoured it. Alas! it is not enough to hear, unleſs we take heed how we hear: A Man may pray, and never be the better, unleſs we watch unto Prayer. In a word, all Ordinances, Means and Duties are bleſſed unto the improvement of Grace, according to the care and ſtrictneſs we uſe in keeping our Hearts in them.

6. Laſtly, The ſtability of our Souls in the hour of Temptation, will be much according to the care and conſcience we have of keeping our Hearts; the careleſs Heart is an eaſy Prey to Satan in the hour of Temptation, his main Batteries are raiſed againſt that Fort-Royal, the Heart; if he wins that, he wins all, for it commands the whole Man; and alas! how eaſy a conqueſt is a neglected Heart? 'Tis no more difficult to ſurpriſe it, than for an Enemy to enter that City, whoſe Gates are open and unguarded; 'tis the watchful Heart that diſcovers and ſuppreſſes the Temptation before it comes to its ſtrength. Divines obſerve this to be the Method in which Temptations are ripened and brought to their full ſtrength.

There

There is (1.) The irritation of the Object, or that power it hath to work upon and provoke our corrupt Nature: which is either done by the real presence of the Object, or else by Speculation, when the Object, (though absent) is held out by the Phantasy before the Soul. ὄρεξις.

(2.) Then follows the motion of the sensitive Appetite, which is stirred and provoked by the Phantasy, representing it as a sensual good, as having profit or pleasure in it. ὄρεξις.

(3.) Then there is a consultation in the Mind about it, deliberating about the likeliest means of accomplishing it. βούλησις.

(4.) Next follows the election or choice of the Will. ἔκρησις.

(5.) And lastly, The desire or full engagement of the Will to it; all this may be done in a few moments, for the debates of the Soul are quick, and soon ended: When it comes thus far, then the Heart is won, Satan hath entred victoriously, and displayed his Colours upon the Walls of that Royal Fort; but had the Heart been well guarded at first, it had never come to this height; the Temptation had been stopt in the first or second act; and indeed there it's stopt easily; for it is in the motions of a tempted Soul to Sin, as in the motion of a Stone falling from the Brow of an Hill, its easily stopt at first, but when once it's set a going, Vires acquirit eundo: And therefore it's the greatest Wisdom in the World to observe the first motions of the Heart, to check and stop Sin there: The motions of Sin are weakest at first; a little care and watchfulness may prevent much mischief now, which the careless Heart not heeding, is brought within the power of Temptation; as the Syrians were brought blindfold into the midst of Samaria, before they knew where they were. βούλημα.

By this time, Reader, I hope thou art fully satisfyed how consequential and necessary a work the keeping of the Heart is, it being a Duty that wraps up so many dear Interests of the Soul in it.

3. Next, according to the method propounded, I proceed to point out those special Seasons in the Life of a Christian, which require and call for our utmost diligence in keeping the Heart: For though (as was observed before) the Duty bindes ad semper and there be no time or condition of Life in which we may be excused from this work; yet there are some signal Seasons, critical Hours, requiring more than a common vigilance over the Heart.

And the first,

1. Season. "Is the time of Prosperity, when "Providence smiles upon us, and dandles us upon her Knee. Now Christian, keep thy Heart "with all diligence; for now 'twill be exceeding "apt to grow secure, proud and earthly, Rara "virtus est humilitas honorata, (saith Bernard) to "see a Man humble under Prosperity, is one of "the greatest Rarities in the World. Even a "good Hezekiah could not hide a vain-glorious "Temper under his Temptation, and hence that "Caution to Israel, Deut. 6. 10. 11, 12. And it "shall be when the Lord thy God shall have brought "thee into the Land which he sware to thy Fathers, "to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to give thee great "and goodly Cities which thou buildest not, and Hou-"ses full of all good things which thou fillest not, "&c. Then beware lest thou forget the Lord: And "indeed so it fell out, for Jesurun waxed fat and "kicked, Deut. 32. 15.

Now then, the first Case will be this, viz.

1. Case. How a Christian may keep his Heart from Pride and carnal Security, under the smiles of Providence, and confluence of Creature-comforts?

There are seven choice helps to secure the Heart from the dangerous Snares of Prosperity; the first is this.

1. To consider the dangerous insnaring Temptations attending a pleasant and prosperous condition; few, yea, very few of those that live in the pleasures and prosperity of this World, escape everlasting perdition, Matth. 19. 24. 'Tis easier (saith Christ) for a Camel to pass through the Eye of a Needle, than for a Rich Man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, and 1 Cor. 1. 26. Not many Mighty, not many Noble are called. It might justly make us tremble when the Scripture tells us in general, that few shall be saved; much more when it tells us, that of that rank and sort of which we are, but few shall be saved. When Joshua called all the Tribes of Israel to Lot upon them for the discovery of Achan, doubtless Achan feared; when the Tribe of Judah was taken his fear increased; but when the Family of the Zarhites was taken, it was time then to tremble. So when the Scripture comes so near as to tell us that of such a sort of Men very few shall escape, 'tis time to look about; miror si potest servari aliquis rectorum, saith Chrysostom; I should wonder if any of the Rulers be saved. Oh how many have been Coached to Hell in the Chariots of earthly Pleasures, which others have been Whipt to Heaven by the Rod of Affliction? How few, like the Daughter of Tyre, come to Christ with a Gift! How few among the Rich intreat his Favour!

2. It may yet keep us more humble and watchful in Prosperity, if we consider that among Christsans many have been much the worse for it. How good had it been for some of them if they had never known Prosperity! When they were in a low condition how humble, spiritual and heavenly were they; but when advanced, what an apparent alteration hath been upon their Spirits? 'Twas so with Israel when they were in a low condition in the Wilderness, then Israel was Holiness to the Lord, Jer. 2. 23. But when they came into Canaan, and were fed in a fat Pasture, then, We are Lords, we will come no more unto thee, vers. 31. Outward Gain are ordinarily attended with inward Losses, as in a low condition, their civil Employments were wont to have a tang and savour of their Duties, so in an exhalted condition their Duties commonly have a tang of the World. He indeed is rich in Grace, whose Graces are not hindred by Riches; there are but few Jehosophats in the World, of whom it is said, 2 Chron. 17. 5, 6. had Silver and Gold in abundance, and his Heart was lifted up in the way of God's Commands: Will not this keep thy Heart humble in Prosperity, to think how dear many godly Men have paid for their Riches, that through them they have lost that which all the World cannot purchase? Then in the next place,

3. Keep down thy vain Heart by this Consideration, That God values no Man a jot the more for these things. God values no Man by outward Excellencies, but by inward Graces, they are inte internal Ornaments of the Spirit which are of great price in God's Eyes, 1 Pet. 3. 4. he despises all worldly Glory, and accepts no Man's Person, but in every Nation, he that feareth God and worketh Righteousness is accepted of him, Acts. 10. 35. Indeed if the Judgment of God went by the same Rule that Man's doth, we might value our selves by these things, and stand upon them. But as one said (when dying) I shall not appear before God as a Doctor, but as a Man; tantus quisquis est, quantus est apud Deum. So much every Man is, and no more as he is in the Judgment of God. Doth thy Heart yet swell? And will neither of the former Considerations keep it humble.

4. Then Fourthly, Consider how bitterly many Persons have bewailed their Folly when they came to dye, that ever they set their Hearts upon these things, and heartily wish that they had never known them. What a sad Story was that of Pius Quintus, who dying, cryed out despairingly, When I was in a low condition, I had some hopes of Salvation, but when I was advanced to be a Cardinal, I greatly doubted it, but since I came to the Popedom, I have no hope at all. Mr. Spencer also tells us a real, but sad Story, of a Rich Oppressor, who had scraped up a great Estate for his only Son; when he came to dye he called his Son to him, and said, Son, do you indeed love me? The Son answered, That Nature, besides his paternal Indulgence, obliged him to that; then said the Father, Express it by this, hold thy Finger in the Candle as long as I am saying a Pater Noster; the Son attempted, but could not endure it; upon that the Father brake out into these Expressions, Thou canst not suffer the burning of thy Finger for me, but to get this Wealth, I have hazarded my Soul for thee, and must burn Body and Soul in Hell for thy sake; thy pains would have been but for a moment, but mine will be unquenchable Fire.

5. The Heart may be kept humble, by considering of what a clogging nature earthly things are to a Soul heartily engaged in the way to Heaven, they shut out much of Heaven from us at present, though they may not shut us out of Heaven at last. If thou consider thy self under the notion of a Stranger in this World, travelling for Heaven, and seeking a better Country, thou hast then much reason to be taken and delighted with these things, as a weary Horse hath with a heavy load-back: There was a serious truth in that Atheistical Scoff of Julian, when he took away the Christians Estates, and told them, it was to make them fitter for the Kingdom of Heaven.

6. Is thy Spirit for all this flatulent and lofty, then urge upon it the consideration of that awful day of Reckoning, wherein according to our receipts Mercies shall be our accompts for them: And methinks this should awe and humble the vainest heart that ever was in the Breast of a Saint. Know for certain, that the Lord records all the Mercies that ever he gave thee, from the beginning to the end of thy Life, Mic. 6. 4. Remember my People, from Shittim unto Gilgal, &c. Yea, they are exactly numbred, and recorded in order to an account; and thy account will be suitable, Luke 12. 48. To whomsoever much is given, of him shall be required. You are but Stewards, and our Lord will come to take an account of you; and what a great account have you to make who have much of this World in your hands? What dismal Witnesses will your Mercies be against you, if they be the best Fruits of them?

7. It is a very humbling Consideration, That the Mercies of God should work otherwise upon my Spirit than they use to do upon the Spirits of others, to whom they come as sanctifyed Mercies from the Love of God. Ah Lord! What a sad consideration is this? Enough to lay me in the Dust: When I consider,

(1.) That their Mercies have greatly humbled them; the higher God have raised them, the lower they have laid themselves before God. Thus did Jacob when God had given him much substance, Gen. 22. 5. 10. And Jacob said, I am not worthy of the least of all thy Mercies, and all the Truth which thou hast shewed thy Servant; for with my Staff I passed over this Jordan, and am now become two Bands. And thus it was with holy David, 2 Sam. 7. 18. When God had confirmed the Promise to him, to build him a House, and not reject him as he did Saul, he goes in before the Lord, and saith, Who am I? And what is my Father's House, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And so indeed God required, Deut. 26. 5. when Israel was to bring to God the first Fruits of Canaan A Syrian ready to perish was my Father, &c. Do others raise God the higher for the raising them? And the more God raises me, the more shall I abuse him and exalt my self? Oh what a sad thing is this!

(2.) Others have freely ascribed the Glory of all their Enjoyments to God, and magnifyed not themselves but him, for their Mercies: So David, 2 Sam. 7. 26. Let thy Name be magnifyed, and the House of thy Servant be established. He doth not fly upon the Mercy, and suck out the sweetness of it, looking no farther than his own comfort; no, he cares for no Mercy except God be magnifyed in it. So Psalm. 18. 2. when God had delivered him from all his Enemies, The Lord (saith he) is my Strength, and my Rock, he is become my Salvation. They did not put the Crown upon their own Heads, as I do.

(3.) The Mercies of God have been melting Mercies unto others, melting their Souls in love to the God of their Mercies. So Hannah, 1 Sam. 2. 1. when she received the Mercy of a Son, My Soul (saith she) rejoyceth in the Lord, not in the Mercy, but in the God of the Mercy: And so Mary, Luke 1. 46. My Soul doth magnify the Lord, my Spirit rejoyceth in God my Saviour; the Word signifyes, to make more room for God: Their Hearts were not contracted, but the more enlarged to God.

(4.) The Mercies of God have been mighty restraints to keep others from Sin. So Ezra 9. 13. Seeing thou, our God, hast given us such a Deliverance as this, should we again break thy Commandments? Ingenuous Souls have felt the force of the Obligations of Love and Mercy upon them.

(5.) To conclude, the Mercies of God to others have been as Oyl to the Wheels of their Obedience, and make them fitter for service, 2 Chron. 17. 5. Now if Mercies work contrarily upon my Heart, what cause have I to be afraid that they come not to me in love? I tell you, this is enough to damp the Spirit of any Saint, to see what sweet effects they have had on others, and what sad effects on him.

2. Season. "The second special Season in the "Life of a Christian, requiring more than a com-"mon diligence to keep his Heart, is the time of "adversity; when Providence frowns upon you, "and blasts your outward Comforts, then look to "your Hearts, keep them with all diligince from "repining against God, or fainting under his "hand; for Troubles, though sanctifyed are

" Trouble ſtill; even Sweet-bryar, and holy Thiſtle
" have their prickles. Jonah was a good Man,
" and yet how pettiſh was his Heart under Affli" ction? Job was the Mirror of Patience, yet how " was his Heart compoſed of Trouble: You will " find it as hard to get a compoſed Spirit under
" great Afflictions, as it is to fix Quickſilver: Oh
" the Hurries and Tumults which they occaſion
" even in the beſt Hearts! Well then, the ſecond
" Caſe will be this.

2. Caſe. How a Chriſtian under great Afflictions may keep his Heart from repining or deſponding under the Hand of God? Now there are nine ſpecial helps I ſhall here offer, to keep thy Heart in this condition; and the firſt ſhall be this, To work upon your Hearts this great Truth.

1. That by theſe croſs Providences, God is faithfully purſuing the great deſign of effecting Love upon the Souls of his People, and orders all theſe Afflictions as means ſanctifyed to that end.

Afflictions fall not out by Caſualty, but by Counſel, Job. 5. 6. Eph. 1. 11. by this Counſel of God they are ordained as means of much ſpiritual good to Saints, Iſa. 27. 9. By this ſhall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged, &c. Heb. 12. 10. But he for our Profit, &c. Rom. 8. 38. All things work together for good; they are God's Workmen upon our Hearts, to pull down the Pride and carnal Security of them, and being ſo their Nature is changed; they are turned into Bleſſings and Benefits, Pſal. 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted. And ſure then, thou haſt no reaſon to quarrel with, but rather to admire that God ſhould concern himſelf ſo much in thy good, to uſe any means for the accompliſhing of it, Philip 3. 11. Paul could bleſs God, if by any means he might attain the Reſurrection of the Dead. My Brethren (ſaith James) count it all joy when you fall into divers Temptations, Jam. 1. 2, 3. My Father is about a deſign of Love upon my Soul, and do I well to be angry with him? All that he doth is in purſuance of, and reference to ſome eternal Glorious Ends upon my Soul. O 'tis my Ignorance of God's deſign, that makes me quarrel with him! he ſaith to thee in this caſe, as to Peter, What I do thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou ſhalt know it.

2. Help. Though God hath reſerved to himſelf a liberty of Afflicting his People, yet he hath tyed up his own hands by Promiſe, never to take away his loving kindneſs from them. Can I look that Scripture in the face with a repining diſcontented Spirit, 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be his Father, and he ſhall be my Son; if he commit Iniquity, I will chaſten him with the Rod of Man, and with the Stripes of the Children of Men: Nevertheleſs my Mercy ſhall not depart away from him. O my Heart, my haughty Heart, doſt thou well to be diſcontented; when God hath given thee the whole Tree, with all the cluſters of Comfort growing on it, becauſe he ſuffers the Wind to blow down a few Leaves? Chriſtians have two ſorts of Goods, the Goods of the Throne, and the Goods of the Foot-ſtool; Moveables and Immoveables: If God have ſecured theſe, never let my Heart be troubled at the loſs of thoſe; indeed if he had cut off his Love, or diſcovenanted my Soul, I had reaſon to be caſt down; but this he hath not, he cannot do.

3. Help. It is of marvellous efficacy to keep the Heart from ſinking under Affliction, to call to mind, that thine own Father hath the ordering of them: Not a Creature moves Hand or Tongue againſt thee, but by his permiſſion. Suppoſe the Cup be a bitter Cup, yet 'tis the Cup which thy Father hath given thee to drink; and canſt thou ſuſpect Poyſon to be in that Cup which he delivers thee? Fooliſh Man, put home the caſe to thine own Heart, conſult with thine own Bowels; canſt thou find in thy heart to give thy Child that which would hurt and undo him? No, thou wouldſt as ſoon hurt thy ſelf as him; If thou then being evil knoweſt how to give good Gifts to thy Children, how much more doth God? Matth. 7. 11. The very conſideration of his Nature, a God of Love, Pity and tender Mercies, or of his relation to thee, as a Father, Husband, Friend, might be ſecurity enough, if he had not ſpoken a word, to quiet thee in this caſe; and yet you have his word too, Jer. 25. 6. I will do you no hurt. You lye too near his Heart to hurt you, nothing grieves him more than our groundleſs and unworthy ſuſpicions of his Deſigns do; would it not grieve a faithful tender-hearted Phyſician, when he hath ſtudyed the Caſe of his Patient, prepared the moſt excellent Receipts to ſave his Life, to hear him cry out, O he hath undone me! he hath poyſoned me; because it gripes and pains him in the Operation? O when will you be ingenuous!

4. Help. God reſpects you as much in a low, as in a high condition; and therefore it need not ſo much trouble you to be made low; nay, to ſpeak honeſtly, he manifeſts more of his Love, Grace, and Tenderneſs, in the time of Affliction than Proſperity. As God did not at firſt chuſe you becauſe you were high, ſo he will not forſake you becauſe you are low: Men may look ſhy upon you, and alter their reſpects, as your condition is altered: When Providence hath blaſted your Eſtates, your Summer Friends may grow ſtrange, as fearing you may be troubleſome to them; but will God do ſo? No, no, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee, Heb. 13. 5. Indeed if Adverſity and Poverty could bar you from acceſs to God, it were a ſad condition; but you may go to God as freely ever, My God (ſaith the Church) will hear me, Mic. 7. Poor David, when ſtript out of earthly Comforts, could encourage himſelf in the Lord his God, and why cannot you? Suppoſe your Husband or Child had loſt all at Sea, and ſhould come to you in Rags, could you deny the Relation, or refuſe to entertain him? If you would not, much leſs will God: Why then are you ſo troubled: Though your condition be changed, your Father's Love and Reſpects are not changed.

5. Help. And what if by the loſs of outward Comforts, God will preſerve your Souls from the ruining power of Temptation? Sure then, you have little cauſe to ſink your Hearts by ſuch ſad Thoughts about them. Are not theſe Earthly Enjoyments the things that make Men ſhrink and warp in times of Tryal? For the love of theſe many have forſaken Chriſt in ſuch an hour, Matth. 19. 22. He went away ſorrowful, for he had great Poſſeſſions. And if this be God's deſign, what have I done in quarrelling with him about it? We ſee Mariners in a Storm can throw over-board rich Bales of Silk, and precious things, to preſerve the Veſſel and their Lives with it, and every one ſaith they act prudently; we know 'tis uſual for Soldiers in a City beſieg'd, to batter down or burn the faireſt Buildings without the Walls, in which the Enemy may ſhelter in the Siege, and no Man doubts but 'tis wiſely done. Such as have gangreened Legs or Arms can willingly ſtretch them out to be cut off, and not only thank, but pay the Chyrurgion for his pain; and muſt God only be repined at, for caſting over what will ſink you in a Storm? For pulling down that which would advantage your Enemy in the Siege of Temptation? For cutting off what would endanger your everlaſting Life? O inconſiderate, ingrateful Man! Are not theſe things for which thou grieveſt, the very things that have ruined thouſands of Souls? Well, what Chriſt doth in this, thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou mayeſt.

6. Help. It would much ſtay the Heart under adverſity, to conſider, That God by ſuch humbling Providences, may be accompliſhing that for which you have long prayed and waited: And ſhould you be troubled at that? Say Chriſtian, haſt thou not many Prayers depending before God upon ſuch accounts as theſe; that he would keep thee from Sin, diſcover to thee the emptineſs and inſufficiency of the Creature; that he would kill and mortify thy Luſts, that thy Heart may never find reſt in any enjoyment but Chriſt? Why now, by ſuch humbling and impoveriſhing ſtrokes, God may be fulfilling thy deſire: Wouldſt thou be kept from Sin? Lo, he hath hedged up thy way with thorns. Wouldſt thou ſee the Creatures Vanity? Thy Affliction is a fair Glaſs to diſcover it; for the Vanity of the Creature is never ſo effectually and ſenſibly diſcovered, as in our own experience of it: Wouldſt thou have thy Corruptions mortified? This is the way: Now God takes away the Food and Fewel that maintained them; for as Proſperity begat and fed them, ſo adverſity, when ſanctifyed, is a means to kill them. Wouldſt thou have thy Heart to reſt no where but in the boſom of God? What better way canſt thou imagine Providence ſhould take to accompliſh thy deſire, than by pulling from under thy Head, that ſoft Pillow of Creature-delights on which thou reſtedſt before? And yet you fret at this, peeviſh Child, how doſt thou exerciſe thy Father's patience? If he delay to anſwer thy Prayers, thou art ready to ſay he regards thee not; if he do that which really anſwers the ſcope and main end of them, but not in the way thou expectedſt, thou quarrelleſt with him for that; as if inſtead of anſwering, he were croſſing all thy hopes and aims; Is this ingenuous? Is it not enough that God is ſo gracious to do what thou deſireſt, but thou muſt be ſo impudent to expect he ſhould do it in the way which you preſcribeſt.

7. Help. Again, It may ſtay thy Heart, if thou conſider; That in theſe troubles, God is about that work, which if thou didſt ſee the deſign of, thy Soul would rejoyce. We poor Creatures are bemiſted with much ignorance, and are not able to diſcern how particular Providences work towards God's end; and therefore, like Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, are often murmuring, becauſe Providence leads us out in a howling Deſart, where we are expoſed to ſtraits; though yet, then he led them, and is now leading us, by the right way, to a City of Habitations: If you could but ſee how God in his ſecret Counſel hath exactly laid the whole plot and deſign of thy Salvation, even to the ſmalleſt turns and circumſtances, this way, and by theſe means, ſuch a one ſhall be ſaved, and by no other; ſuch a number of afflictions I appoint for this Man, in this time, and in this order; they ſhall befal him thus, and thus they ſhall work for him; could you but ſay, but diſcern the admirable harmony of theſe Diſpenſations, their mutual relations to each other; together with the general reſpect and influence they all have into the laſt end; of all the conditions in the World, you would chuſe that you are now in, had you liberty to make your own choice. Providence is like a curious piece of Arras, made up of a thouſand ſhreds; which ſingle we know not what to make of, but put together and ſtitched up orderly, they repreſent a beautiful Hiſtory to the Eye: As God works all things according to the Counſel of his own Will, ſo that Counſel of God hath ordained this, as the beſt way to bring about thy Salvation: Such a one hath a proud Heart, ſo many humbling Providences I appoint for him, ſuch a one an earthly Heart, ſo many impoveriſhing Providences for him: Did you but ſee this, I need ſay no more to ſupport the moſt dejected Heart.

8. Help. Farther, It would much conduce to the ſettlement of your Hearts, to conſider, That by fretting and diſcontent, you do your ſelves more injury than all the afflictions you lye under could do; your own diſcontent is that which arms your troubles with a ſting, 'tis you that makes your burthen heavy, by ſtruggling under it: Could you but lye quiet under the hand of God, your condition would be much eaſier and ſweeter than it is: Impatiens ægrotus crudelem facit Medicum. This makes God lay on moſt ſtrokes, as a Father will upon a ſtubborn Child that receives not Correction.

Beſides, it unfits the Soul to pray over its troubles, or take in the ſenſe of that good which God intends by them: Affliction is a Pill, which being wrapt up in Patience, and quiet Submiſſion, may be eaſily ſwallowed; but Diſcontent chews the Pill, and ſo imbitters the Soul: God throws away ſome comfort which he ſaw would hurt you, and you will throw away your Peace after it; he ſhoots an Arrow which ſticks in your Cloaths, and was never intended to hurt, but only to fright you from Sin: And you will thruſt it onward to the piercing of your very Hearts, by deſpondency and diſcontent.

9. Help. Laſtly, if all this will not do, but thy Heart (like Rachel) ſtill refuſes to be comforted, or quieted, then conſider one thing more, which if ſeriouſly pondered, will doubtleſs do the work, and that is this, Compare the condition thou art now in (and art ſo much diſſatisfyed with) with that condition others are, and thy ſelf deſerveſt to be in: Others are roaring in Flames, howling under the ſcourge of Vengeance, and amongſt them I deſerve to be. O my Soul! Is this Hell? Is my condition as bad as the Damned? O what would thouſands now in Hell give, to change conditions with me! It is a famous inſtance which Dr. Taylor gives us of the Duke of Conde, I have read (ſaith he) that when the Duke of Conde had entred voluntarily into the incommodities of a religious Poverty, he was one Day eſpied and pitied by a Lord of Italy, who out of tenderneſs, wiſhed him to be more careful and nutritive of his Perſon. The good Duke anſwered, Sir, be not troubled, and think not that I am ill provided of Conveniencies, for I ſend an Harbinger before me, who makes ready my Lodgings, and takes care that I be Royally Entertained. The Lord asked him who was his Harbinger? He anſwered, The knowledge of my ſelf, and the conſideration of what I deſerve for my Sins, which is Eternal Torments; and when with this knowledge I arrive at my Lodging, how unprovided ſoever I find it, methinks it is ever better than I deſerve. Why doth the living Man complain? And thus the Heart may be kept from deſponding or repining under Adverſity.

Great Exemp. p. 310.

3. Seaſon. "The third Seaſon calling for more "than ordinary diligence to keep the Heart, is "the time of Sion's trouble: When the Church,

"like

" like the Ship in which Christ and his Disciples " were, is oppressed and ready to perish in the " waves of Persecution, then good Souls are ready " to sink, and be shipwrackt too upon the Billows " of their own fear. I confess most Men rather " need the Spur, than the Reins in this case, and " yet some sit down as over-weighed with the " Sense of the Churche's Troubles; the loss of the " Ark cost old Eli his Life, the sad posture Jeru- " salem lay in, made good Nehemiah's Countenance " change in the midst of all the Pleasures and Ac- " commodations of the Court, Neh. 2. 2. Ah this " goes close to honest Hearts.

" But though God allow, yea, command the " most awakened Apprehensions of these Calami- " ties, and in such a Day calls to mourning, weeping, " and girding with sackcloth, Isa. 22. 12. and se- " verely threatens the insensible, Amos 6. 1. yet " it will not please him to see you sit like pensive " Elijah under the Juniper-tree, 1 Kings 19. 4. " Ah Lord God! it is enough, take away my Life " also: No, Mourners in Sion, you may, and ought " to be, but self-tormentors you must not be: " Complain to God you may, but to complain of " God (though but by an unsuitable Carriage and " the Language of your Actions) you must not.

3. Case. The third Case that comes next to be spoken to is this, How publick and tender Hearts may be relieved and supported when they are even over-weighed with the burdensome sense of Sion's Troubles? " I grant, it is hard for him that pre- " ferreth Sion to his chief joy, to keep his Heart " that it sink not below the due sense of its trou- " bles; and yet this ought and may be done by " the use of such Heart-establishing Directions as " these.

1. Direct. Settle this great Truth in your Hearts, that no Trouble befalls Sion, but by the permission of Sion's God; and he permits nothing out of which he will not bring much good at last to his People.

There is as truly a principle of quietness in the permitting, as in the commanding Will of God. See it in David, 2 Sam. 16. 10. Let him alone, it may be God hath bidden him: And in Christ, John 19. 11. Thou couldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above; it should much calm our Spirits that it is the Will of God to suffer it; and had he not suffered it, it could never have been as it is.

This very Consideration quieted, Job, Eli, David and Hezekiah; that the Lord did it, was enough to them, and why should it not be so to us? If the Lord will have Sion plowed as a Field, and her goodly Stones lye in the dust; if it be his pleasure that Antichrist shall rage yet longer, and wear out the Saints of the most high; if it be his Will, that a day of Trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity by the Lord God of Hosts shall be upon the Valley of Vision, that the Wicked shall devour the Man that is more Righteous than he, what are we that we should contest with God? Fit it is that we should be resigned up to that Will whence we proceeded, and he that made us should dispose of us as he pleaseth: He may do what seemeth him good without our consent: Doth poor man stand upon equal ground, that he should capitulate with his Creator, or that God should render an account of any of his matters? It's every way as reasonable we be content however God dispose of us, as that we be obedient to whatever he commands us.

But then, if we pursue this Argument further, by considering that God's permissions do all meet at last in the real good of his People, this will much more quiet our Spirits. Do the Enemies carry away the good Figs, even the best among the People into Captivity? This looks like a sad Providence: But yet God sends them thither for their good, Jer. 24. 5. Doth God take the Assyrian as a Staff in his Hand to beat his People with? Those Blows are smart, and make them cry; but the end of his so doing is, That he may accomplish his whole Work upon Mount Sion, Isa. 10. 12. If God can bring much good out of the worst and greatest evil of Sin, much more out of temporal Afflictions; and it is as evident that he will, as that he can do so. For it is inconsistent with the Wisdom of a common Agent, to permit any thing (which he might prevent if he pleased) to cross his great design and end; and can it be imagined that the most Wise God should do so?

Well then, as Luther told Melancthon, Desinat Phillippus esse rector mundi: So say I to you, let Infinite Wisdom, Power and Love alone, for by these all Creatures are swayed, and Actions guided, in reference to the Church. It's none of our work to rule the World, but to submit to him that doth, non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ, the motions of Providence are all judicious, the Wheels are full of Eyes: It is enough that the Affairs of Sion are in a good Hand.

2. Direct. Ponder this Heart-supporting Truth in reference to Sion's Trouble. That how many Troubles soever are upon her, yet her King is in her.

What? Hath the Lord forsaken his Churches? Hath he sold them into the Enemies Hand? Doth he not regard what Evil befals them? That our Hearts sink at this rate? Is it not too shameful an undervaluing of the great God? And too much magnifying of poor impotent Men, to fear and tremble at Creatures, whilst God is in the midst of us? The Church's Enemies are many and mighty, let that be granted; yet that Argument with which Caleb and Joshua strove to raise their own Hearts, is of as much force now as it was then, The Lord is with us, fear them not, Numb. 14. The Historian tells us, that when Antigonus overheard his Soldiers reckoning how many their Enemies were, and so discouraging one another, he suddenly steps in among them with this Question, And how many (said he) do you reckon for? Discouraged Souls, how many do you reckon the Lord for? Is he not an over-match for all Enemies? Is not one Almighty more than many Mighties? Doth his presence stand for nothing with us? If God be for us, who can be against us? Rom. 8. 31. What think you was the reason that great Exploration Gideon made in Judges 6. He questions, vers. 12, 13. he desires a Sign, vers. 17. and after that another, vers. 36. and was the end of all this? But that he might write this Motto upon his Ensign, The Sword of the Lord, and of Gideon. So then, if you can be well assured, the Lord is with his People, you get thereby above all your discouragements: And that he is so, you need not (with him) desire a Sign from Heaven, lo, you have a Sign before you, even their marvellous preservation amidst all their Enemies. If God be not with his People, how is it they are not swallowed up quick? Do the Enemies want Malice, Power or Opportunity? No, but there is an invisible Hand upon them. Let then, as it is, Exod. 33. 14. Let his Presence be us rest; and though the Mountains be hurled into the Sea, though Heaven and Earth mingle together, fear not, God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved.

3. Di

3. Direct. Ponder the great Advantages attending e People of God in an afflicted condition. If a low nd an afflicted ſtate in the World be really beſt r the Church, then your dejections are not only rational but ungrateful; indeed, if ye eſtimate e happineſs of the Church by its worldly Eaſe, lendor and Proſperity, then ſuch times will em bad for it; but, if you reckon its Glory to nſiſt in its Humility, Faith, Patience and Hea-nly-mindedneſs, no condition in the World ounds with advantages for theſe, as an afflicted ndition doth. It was not Perſecutions and Pri-ns but Worldlineſs and Wantonneſs, that was e Poyſon of the Church; neither was it the earth-Glory of its Profeſſors, but the Blood of its artyrs, that was the Seed of the Church. The wer of Godlineſs did never thrive better than Affliction, and never ran lower than in times of. ateſt Proſperity; when we are left a poor and fflicted People, then we learn to truſt in the Name the Lord, Zeph. 3. 12. What ſay ye, Sirs? Is ndeed for the Saints advantage to be weaned m the Loves and Delights of enſnaring worldly nities? To be quickned and prickt forward with e haſte to Heaven, to have clearer diſcoveries their own Hearts, to be taught to Pray more rently, frequently, ſpiritually; to look and long the Reſt to come, more ardently? If this be their advantages, experience teacheth us that condition is ordinarily bleſt with ſuch Fruits theſe, like an afflicted Condition.

And is it well done then to repine and droop, auſe your Father conſults more the advantage your Souls, than the pleaſing of your humours? auſe he will bring you a nearer way to Heaven n you are willing to go? Is this a due requital his Love, who is pleaſed ſo much to concern ſelf in your Welfare? Which is more than he do for Thouſands in the World, upon whom will not lay a Rod, or ſpend an Affliction for r good, Hoſ. 4. 17. Mat. 15. 14. But alas! judge by ſenſe, and reckon things good or evil, rding to what we for the preſent can taſte feel in them.

4. Direct. Take heed that you overlook not the many ious Mercies which the People of God enjoy amidſt heir trouble.

'Tis pity that our Tears upon the account of Troubles, ſhould ſo blear and blinde our Eyes, we ſhould not ſee our Mercies and Grounds omfort. I will not inſiſt upon the Mercy of ng your Lives given you for a Prey, nor yet the many outward Comforts, temporal Con-ences and Accommodations, which you enjoy above what Chriſt and his precious Servants, hom the World was not worthy, ever had.

ut what ſay you to pardon of Sin? Intereſt hriſt? The Covenant of Promiſe? And an nity of Happineſs in the preſence of God after days are over? O that ever a People inti-d to ſuch Mercies as theſe, ſhould droop un-any temporal Affliction, or be ſo much con-ed for the frowns of Men, and loſs of Trifles! have not the ſmiles of great Men, but you the favour of the great God: You are it be caſt back in your Eſtates, but thereby far-ed in Spirituals. You can live ſo bravely, ifully and eaſily as before, but ſtill you may as holy and heavenly as ever. Will you then e ſo much for theſe Circumſtantials, as to t your Subſtantials? Shall light Troubles you forget weighty Mercies? Remember the che's true Riches are laid out of the Reach of all its Enemies: They may make you Poor, but not Miſerable. What though God do not diſtinguiſh in his outward Diſpenſations betwixt his own and others: Yea, what though his Judgments ſingle out the beſt, and ſpare the worſt? What though an Abel be killed in Love, and a Cain ſurvive in Hatred, a bloody Dyoniſius dye in his Bed, and a good Joſiah fall in Battel? What though the Belly of the Wicked be filled with hid Treaſures, and the Teeth of the Saints broken with Gravel-ſtones, yet ſtill here is much matter of Praiſe: For electing Love hath diſtinguiſhed, though common Providence did not; and whilſt Proſperity and Impunity ſlay the Wicked, even Slaying and Adverſity ſhall benefit and ſave the Righteous.

5. Direct. Believe that how low ſoever the Church be plunged under the Waters of Adverſity, it ſhall aſſuredly riſe again. Fear not, for as ſure as Chriſt aroſe the third day, notwithſtanding the Seal and Watch that was upon him, ſo ſure the Church ſhall ariſe out of all her Troubles, and lift up its victorious Head over all its Enemies: There's no fear of ruining that People that thrive by their Loſſes, and multiply by being diminiſhed. O be not too quick to bury the Church before ſhe be dead! Stay till Chriſt hath tryed his skill, before you give it up for loſt; the Buſh may be all in a Flame, but ſhall never be conſumed, and that becauſe of the good Will of him that dwelleth in the Buſh.

6. Direct. Record the famous Inſtances of God's care and tenderneſs over his People in former ſtraits. Chriſt hath not ſuffered it to be devoured yet; for above theſe 1700 Years the Chriſtian Church hath lived in Affliction, and yet it is not conſumed: Many a Wave of Perſecution hath gone over it, and yet it is not drowned; many Deſigns to ruin it, and hitherto none hath proſpered: This is not the firſt time that Hamans and Achitophels have plotted its ruin; that an Herod hath ſtretched out his hand to vex it. Still it hath been preſerved from, ſupported under, or delivered out of all its Troubles: And is it not as dear to God as ever? Is he not as able to ſave it now as formerly? Though we know not whence deliverance ſhould ariſe, Yet the Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of Temptations, 2 Pet. 2. 9.

7. Direct. If you can fetch no comfort from any of the former Arguments, then in the laſt Place, Try whether you cannot draw ſome Comfort out of your very Trouble. Surely this Trouble of yours is a good Argument of your Integrity; Union is the ground of Sympathy, if you had not ſome rich Adventure in that Ship, you would not tremble as you do when it is in danger: Beſides, this frame of Spirit may afford you this Argument, that if you be ſo ſenſible of the Churche's Troubles, Jeſus Chriſt is much more ſenſible of, and ſolicitous about it than you can be; and he will caſt an Eye of favour upon them that mourn for it, Iſa. 57. 18.

4. Seaſon. "The fourth ſpecial Seaſon of ex-"preſſing our utmoſt diligence in keeping our "Hearts, is the time of danger and publick di-"ſtraction: In ſuch times the beſt Hearts are but "too apt to be ſurpriſed by ſlaviſh Fear, it is not "eaſy to ſecure the Heart againſt Diſtractions in "times of common Deſtruction: If Syria be Con-"federate with Ephraim, how do the Hearts of "the Houſe of David ſhake; even as the Trees "of the Wood which are ſhaken with the Wind, "Iſa. 7. 2. When there are ominous Signs in the "Heavens, on the Earth diſtreſs of Nations, with " perplexity; the Sea and Waves roaring, then " the Hearts of Men fail for fear, and for looking " after thoſe things which are coming on the " Earth, Luke 21. 25, 26. Even a Paul himſelf " may ſometimes complain of Fightings within, when " there are Fears without, 2 Cor. 7. 5.

But my Brethren, theſe things ought not to be ſo, Saints ſhould be of a more raiſed Spirit: So was David when his Heart was kept in a good frame, Pſal. 27. 1. The Lord is my Light and my Salvation, whom ſhall I fear? The Lord is the ſtrength of my Life, of whom ſhall I be afraid? Let none but the Servants of Sin be the Slaves of Fear, let them that have delighted in Evil, fear Evil, impius tantum metuit, quantum nocuit. O let not that which God hath threatned as a Judgment upon the Wicked, ever ſeiſe upon the Breaſts of the Righteous; I will ſend (ſaith God) faintneſs into their Hearts in the Land of their Enemies, and the ſound of a ſhaking Leaf ſhall chaſe them, Lev. 26. 36. O what poor ſpirited Men are theſe to fly at a ſhaking Leaf! which makes a pleaſant, and not a terrible Noiſe, and is in it ſelf a kind of natural Muſick; but to a guilty Conſcience, the whiſtling Leaves are Drums and Trumpets: But God hath not given us the Spirit of Fear, but of Love, and of a ſound Mind, 2 Tim. 1. 7. A ſound Mind as it ſtands there in oppoſition to the Spirit of Fear, is an unwounded Conſcience, not infirm'd by Guilt: And this ſhould make a Man as bold as a Lyon. I know it cannot be ſaid of a Saint, what God ſpake of Leviathan, that he is made without Fear: There is a natural Fear in every Man, and it is asimpoſſible to be wholly put off, as the Body it ſelf is: 'Tis a perturbation of the Mind, riſing from the apprehenſion of approaching Danger; and as long as Dangers can approach us, we ſhall find ſome perturbations within us. 'Tis not my purpoſe to commend to you a Stoical Apathy, nor yet to take you off from ſuch a degree of cautional preventive Fear as may fit you for Trouble, and be ſerviceable to your Souls. There is a provident Fear that opens our Eyes to foreſee Danger, and quickens to a prudent and lawful uſe of means to prevent it: Such was Jacob's Fear, Gen. 32. 7. 9, 10, &c. But it is the fear of Diffidence, I perſwade you to keep your Heart from that Tyrannical Paſſion which invades the Heart in times of Danger, diſtracts, weakens, and unfits the Heart for Duty; drives Men upon unlawful means, and brings a Snare with it. Well then, the fourth Caſe will be this.

4. Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from diſtracting and tormenting Fears in times of great and threatning Dangers.

Now there are fourteen excellent Rules or Helps for the keeping of the Heart from ſinful fear when imminent Dangers threaten us: And the firſt is this,

1. Rule. Look upon all the Creatures as in the Hand of God, who manages them in all their motions; limiting, reſtraining and determining them all at his pleaſure.

Get this great Truth well ſettled by Faith in your Hearts, it will marvellouſly guard them againſt ſlaviſh Fears; the firſt of Ezekiel contains an admirable Scheme or Draught of Providence; there you may ſee the Living Creatures who move the Wheels, viz. the great Affairs and turnings of things here below, coming unto Chriſt, who ſits upon the Throne to receive new Orders and Inſtructions from him, verſ. 24. 25, 26. And in Rev. 6. you read of white, black and red Horſes, which are nothing elſe but the Inſtruments which God employs in executing his Judgments in the World, as Wars, Peſtilence and Death; but when theſe Horſes are prancing and trampling up and down the World? Here is that may quiet our Hearts, that God hath the Reins in his Hand. Wicked Men are ſometimes like mad Horſes, they would ſtamp the People of God under their Feet, but that the Bridle of Providence is in their Lips, Joh. 12. 11, 12. A Lyon at liberty is terrible to meet; but who is afraid of the Lyon in the Keeper's hand?

2. Rule. Remember that this God in whoſe Hand all the Creatures are is your Father, and is much more tender over you, than you are, or can be, over your ſelves: He that toucheth you, toucheth the Apple of mine Eye, Zech. 2. 8. Let me ask the moſt timerous Woman, whether there be not a vaſt difference between the ſight of a drawn Sword in the hand of bloody Ruffian, and the ſame Sword in the hand of her own tender Husband? As great a difference there is in looking upon Creatures by an Eye of Senſe, and looking on them as in the hand of your God by an Eye of Faith; that is a ſweet Scripture to this purpoſe, Iſa. 54. 5. Thy Maker is thine Husband, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name; he is Lord of all the Hoſts of Creatures in the World: Who would be afraid to paſs through an Army, though all the Soldiers ſhould turn their Swords and Guns towards him, if the General of that Army were his Friend or Father? I have met with an excellent Story of a Religious young Man who being at Sea with many other Paſſengers in a great Storm, and they being half dead with fear, he only was obſerved to be very chearful, as if he had been but little concerned in that danger; one of them demanding a reaſon of his chearfulneſs, Oh, ſaid he, 'tis becauſe the Pilot of the Ship is my Father. Conſider Chriſt, firſt as the King and ſupream Lord over the Providential Kingdom, and then as your Head, Husband and Friend, and thou wilt quickly ſay, Return unto thy Reſt, O my Soul. This truth will make you ceaſe trembling and fall a ſinging in the midſt of Dangers, Pſal. 47. 7. The Lord is King of all the Earth, ſing Praiſe with underſtanding, or as the Hebrew word is, Every one that hath Underſtanding, viz. of this Heart-reviving and eſtabliſhing Doctrine of the Dominion of our Father over all the Creatures.

3. Rule. Urge upon your Hearts the expreſs prohibitions of Chriſt in this Caſe; and let your Hearts ſtand in awe of the violations of them.

He hath charged you not to fear, Luke 21. When ye ſhall hear of Wars and Commotions, ſee that ye be not terrifyed. And Phil. 1. 28. In nothing terrifyed by your Adverſaries: Yea, in Mat. 10. 28. 31. and within the Compaſs of ſix Verſes, the Saviour commands us thrice, not to fear Man. Do every big Word of proud Duſt and Aſhes make thee afraid? Doth the Voice of a Man make thee tremble, and ſhall not the Voice of God? If thou art of ſuch a fearful and timerous Spirit, how is it that thou feareſt not to diſobey the ſtated Commands of Jeſus Chriſt? Methinks the command of Chriſt ſhould have as much power to calm, as the voice of a poor Worm to terrify thy Heart, Iſa. 51. 12, 13. I, even I, am he that comforteth you. Who art thou, that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of Man that ſhall dye, and of the Son of Man, that ſhall be made as the Graſs, and forgetteſt the Lord thy Maker? We cannot fear Creatures ſinfully, but we have forgotten God; did we remember what he is, and what he hath ſaid, we ſhould not ſuch feeble Spirits: Bring thy Heart then to this Dilemma in times of Danger; if I let into my Heart the ſlaviſh fear of Man, I muſt let out the reverential awe and fear of God; and dare I caſt off the fear of the Almighty for the frowns of a Man? Shall I lift up proud Duſt above the great God? Shall I run upon a certain Sin, to ſhun a probable danger? Oh keep thy Heart by this Conſideration.

4. Rule. Remember how much needleſs trouble your vain fears have brought upon you formerly, and how you have diſquieted your ſelves to no purpoſe.

Iſa. 51. 13. And haſt feared continually becauſe of the Oppreſſor, as if he were ready to devour; and where is the Fury of the Oppreſſor? He ſeem'd ready to devour, but yet you are not devoured: I have not brought upon you the thing that ye feared; you have waſted your Spirits, diſordered your Souls, and weakned your Hands, and all this to no purpoſe. You might have all this while enjoyed your Peace, and poſſeſſed your Souls in Patience. And here I cannot but obſerve a very deep Policy of Satan managing a Deſign againſt the Soul by theſe vain Fears: I call them vain, in regard of the fruſtration of them by Providence; but certainly they are not in vain, as to the end Satan aims at in raiſing them, for herein he acts as Soldiers uſe to do in the Siege of a Garriſon, who on purpoſe to wear out the Beſieged by conſtant Watchings, and thereby unfit them to make reſiſtance when they ſtorm it in earneſt, do every Night give them falſe Alarms, which though they come to nothing, yet doth notably ſerve this further deſign of the Enemy. O when will you beware of Satan's Devices?

5. Rule. Conſider Solemnly, That though the things you fear ſhould really fall out, yet there is more evil in your own fear, than in the thing feared.

And that not only as the leaſt evil of Sin, is worſe than the greateſt evil of ſuffering; but as this ſinful fear hath really more torment and trouble in it, than is in that condition you are ſo much afraid of, Fear is both a multiplying and a tormenting Paſſion; it repreſents troubles much greater than they are, and ſo tortures and wracks the Soul much worſe than when the ſuffering it ſelf comes. So it was with Iſrael at the Red Sea, they cryed out, and were ſore afraid till they put Foot into the Water, and then a Paſſage was opened through thoſe Waters which they thought would have drowned them. Thus it is with us, we looking through the Glaſs of carnal Fear, upon the Waters of Trouble, the Swellings of Jordan, cry out, Oh they are unfordable! We muſt needs periſh in them: But when we come into the midſt of thoſe Floods indeed, we find the Promiſe made good, God will make a way to eſcape, 1 Cor. 10. 13. Thus it was with bleſſed Bilney, when he would make a Tryal by putting his Finger to the Candle, and not able to endure that he cryed out, What, cannot I bear the burning of a Finger? How then ſhall I be able to bear the burning of my whole Body to morrow? And yet when that Morrow came, he could go chearfully into the Flames, with that Scripture in his Mouth, Iſa. 43. 1, 2, 3. Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy Name, thou art mine; when thou paſſeſt through the Waters, I will be with thee; when thou walkeſt through the Fire thou ſhalt not be burnt.

6. Rule. Conſult the many precious Promiſes which are written for your ſupport and comfort in all dangers.

Theſe are your Refuges to which you may fly and be ſafe: When the arrows of Danger fly by Night and Deſtruction waiteth at Noon-day. There are particular Promiſes ſuited to particular Caſes and Exigences, and there are general Promiſes, reaching all Caſes and Conditions; ſuch are theſe, Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for Good, &c. And Eccl. 8. 12. Though a Sinner do Evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet it ſhall be well with them that fear the Lord, &c. Could you but believe the Promiſes, your Hearts ſhould be eſtabliſhed, 2 Chron. 20. 29. Could you but plead them with God, as Jacob did, Gen. 32. 22. Thou ſaidſt, I will ſurely do thee good, &c. they would relieve you in every diſtreſs.

Object. But that Promiſe was made perſonally, and by name to him, ſo are not theſe to me.

Anſw. If Jacob's God be your God, you have as good an Intereſt in them as he had. The Church a thouſand Years after that Tranſaction betwixt God and Jacob, applyed that which God ſpake to him, as if it had been ſpoken to themſelves, Hoſ. 12. 1. He found him in Bethel, and there he ſpake with us.

7 Rule. Quiet your trembling Hearts by recording and conſulting your paſt experiences of the care and faithfulneſs of God in former Diſtreſſes.

Theſe Experiences are Food for your Faith in a Wilderneſs Condition, Pſalm 74. 14. By this David kept his Heart in time of Danger, 1 Sam. 17. 37. and Paul his, 2 Cor. 1. 10. It was ſweetly anſwered by Silentiarius, when one told him, that his Enemies way-laid him to take away his Life, Si Deus mei curam non habet, quid vivo? If God take no care of me, how have I eſcaped hitherto? You may plead with God old experiences to procure new ones, for it is in pleading with God for new Deliverances, as it is in pleadiug for new Pardons. Now mark how Moſes pleads on that account with God, Numb. 14. 19. Pardon, I beſeech thee, the iniquity of this People, as thou haſt forgiven them from Egypt until now. He doth not ſay as Men do, Lord this is the firſt fault, thou haſt not been troubled before to ſign their Pardon: But Lord, becauſe thou haſt pardoned them ſo often, I beſeech thee pardon them once again. So in new ſtraits, Lord, thou haſt often heard, helped and ſaved, in former fears, therefore now help again, for with thee there is plenteous Redemption, and thine Arm is not ſhortned.

8 Rule. Be well ſatisfyed that you are in the way of your Duty, and that will beget holy Courage in times of danger.

Who will harm you, if you be followers of that which is good? 1 Pet. 3. 13. Or, if any dare attempt it, you may boldly commit your ſelves to God in well-doing, 1 Pet. 4. 19. 'Twas this conſideration that raiſed Luther's Spirit above all fear: In the cauſe of God (ſaid he) I ever am, and ever ſhall be ſtout; herein I aſſume this Title, Cedo nulli, a good cauſe will bear up a Man's Spirit bravely. Hear the ſaying of a Heathen, to the ſhame of cowardly Chriſtians: "When the Em"peror Veſpaſian had commanded
"Fluidius Priſcus not to come to the Char. of Wiſ-
"Senate, or if he did, to ſpeak no- dom, p. 358.
"thing but what he would have "him; the Senator return'd this noble Anſwer,
"That as he was a Senator, it was fit he ſhould
"be at the Senate; and if being there he were "required to give his advice, he would ſpeak
"freely that which his Conſcience commanded
"him; the Emperor threatning, that then he "ſhould dye; he anſwered, Did I ever tell you "that

" that I was immortal? Do you what you will,
" and I will do what I ought; it is in your power
" to put me to Death unjuſtly, and in me to dye
" conſtantly.

Righteouſneſs is a Breſt-plate, the Cauſe of God will pay all your Expences, let them tremble whom danger finds out of the way of Duty.

9 Rule. Get your Conſciences ſprinkled with the Blood of Chriſt from all guilt, and that will ſet your Hearts above all fear.

'Tis guilt upon the Conſcience that ſoftens and cowardiſes our Spirits: The Righteous is bold as a Lion, Prov. 28. 1. 'Twas guilt in Cain's Conſcience that made him cry, Every one that meets me will ſlay me, Gen. 4. 14. A guilty Conſcience is more terrifyed with conceited dangers, than a pure Conſcience is with real ones. A guilty Sinner carries a Witneſs againſt himſelf in his own Bowels. 'Twas guilty Herod cryed out, John Baptiſt is riſen from the dead. Such a Conſcience is the Devil's Anvil, on which he fabricates all thoſe Swords and Spears, with which the guilty Sinner pierces and wounds himſelf, Guilt is to Danger, what Fire is to Gun-powder; a Man need not fear to walk among many Barrels of Powder, if he have no Fire about him.

10 Rule. Exerciſe holy truſt, in times of great diſtreſs.

Make it your Buſineſs to truſt God with your Lives and Comforts, and then your Hearts will be at reſt about them. So did David, Pſal. 57. 3. At what time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee; q. d. Lord, if at any time a Storm riſe, I will make bold to ſhelter from it under the Covert of thy Wings. Go to God by acts of Faith and Truſt, and never doubt but he will ſecure you, Iſa. 62. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect Peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee; God takes it well when thou comeſt to him thus; Father, my Life, my Liberty, or Eſtate, are hunted after, and I cannot ſecure them; O let me leave them in thy Hand: The poor leaveth himſelf with thee; and doth his God fail him? No, Thou art the helper of the fatherleſs, Pſal. 10. 14. that is, thou art the helper of the deſtitute one, that hath none to go to but God. And that is a ſweet Scripture, Pſal. 112. 7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tydings, his Heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord; he doth not ſay, his Ear ſhall be priviledged from the report of evil tydings, he may hear as ſad tydings as other Men; but his Heart ſhall be priviledged from the terror of thoſe tydings, his Heart is fixed.

11 Rule. Conſult the honour of Religion more, and your perſonal ſafety leſs.

Is it for the honour of Religion, (think you) that Chriſtians ſhould be as timerous as Hares, to ſtart at every ſound? Will not this tempt the World to think, that whatever you talk, yet your Principles are no better than other Mens? O what miſchief may the diſcoveries of your fears before them do? 'Twas a Noble ſaying of Nehemiah, Chap. 6. 11. Should ſuch a Man as I flee? And who being as I am would flee? Were it not better you ſhould dye, than that the World ſhould be prejudiced againſt Chriſt by your Example? For alas! how apt is the World (who judge more by what they ſee in your Practices, than by what they underſtand of your Principles) to conclude from your timerouſneſs, that how much ſoever you commend Faith, and talk of Aſſurance, yet you dare truſt to theſe things no more than they, when it comes to the tryal. O let not your fears lay ſuch a ſtumbling-block before the blinde World.

12 Rule. He that will ſecure his Heart from fear, muſt firſt ſecure the Eternal Intereſt of his Soul in the hands of Jeſus Chriſt.

When this is done, then you may ſay, Now World do thy worſt. You will not be very ſolicitous about a vile Body, when you are once aſſured it ſhall be well to all Eternity with your precious Souls. Fear not them (ſaith Chriſt) that can kill the body, and after that, have no more that they can do. The aſſured Chriſtian may ſmile with contempt upon all his Enemies, and ſay, Is this the worſt that you can do? What ſay you Chriſtians? Are you aſſured that your Souls are ſafe; that within a few moments of your diſſolution, they ſhall be received by Chriſt in Everlaſting Habitation? Well, if you be ſure of that, never trouble your ſelves about the inſtruments and means of your diſſolution.

Object. O, but a violent Death is terrible to Nature?

Anſw. But what matter is it, when thy Soul is in Heaven; whether it were let out at thy Mouth, or at thy Throat? Whether thy familiar Friends, or barbarous Enemies ſtand about thy dead Body, and cloſe thine Eyes? Alas, it is not worth the making ſo much ado about, Nihil corpus ſentit in nervo cum anima ſit in cœlo, thy Soul ſhall not be ſenſible in Heaven how thy Body is uſed on Earth; no, it ſhall be ſwallowed up in Life.

13. Rule. Learn to quench all ſlaviſh Creature Fears, in the reverential fear of God.

This is a Cure by diverſion: 'Tis a rare piece of Chriſtian Wiſdom to turn thoſe Paſſions of the Soul which moſt predominate, into ſpiritual Channels; to turn natural Anger into ſpiritual Zeal, natural Mirth into holy Chearfulneſs, and natural Fear into an holy Dread and Awe of God. This method of Cure Chriſt preſcribes in that 'foremention'd place, Mat. 10. like to which is that in Iſa. 1. 12, 13. Fear not their fear; but how ſhall we help it? Why, ſanctify the Lord of Hoſts himſelf, and let him be your fear and your dread. Natural Fear may be allayed for the preſent by natural Reaſon, or the removal of the occaſion, but then 'tis but like a Candle blown out with a puff of breath, which is eaſily blown in again; but if the fear of God extinguiſh it, then 'tis like a Candle quencht in Water, which cannot eaſily be rekindled.

14. Rule. Laſtly, Pour out thoſe fears to God in Prayer, which the Devil and your own Unbelief, pour in upon you in times of Danger.

Prayer is the beſt outlet to Fear; where is the Chriſtian that cannot ſee his Probatum eſt to this direction? I will give you the greateſt Example in the World to encourage you in the uſe of it, even the Example of Jeſus Chriſt, Mark 14. 22. When the hour of his Danger and Death drew nigh, he gets into the Garden, ſeparates from the Diſciples, and there wreſtles mightily with God in Prayer, even unto an Agony: In reference to which the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 5. 7. Who in the days of his Fleſh, when he had offered up Prayers and Supplications, with ſtrong Cries and Tears, to him that was able to ſave him from Death, and was heard in that he feared. He was heard as to Strength and Support to carry him through it, though not as to Deliverance, or Exemption from it.

Now, O that theſe things might abide with you, and be reduced to practice in theſe evil days, that many trembling Souls may be eſtabliſhed by them.

5. Seaſon. " The Fifth Seaſon to exert this " diligence

« diligence in keeping the Heart, is the time of « ſtraits and outward pinching Wants; although « at ſuch times we ſhould complain to God, and « not of God, (the Throne of Grace being erect- « ed for a time of need, Heb. 4. 16.) yet when « the Waters of Relief run low, and Want begins « to pinch hard, how prone are the beſt Hearts to « diſtruſt the Fountain! when the Meal in the « Barrel, and the Oyl in the Cruiſe are almoſt « ſpent, our Faith and Patience are almoſt ſpent « too. Now 'tis difficult to keep down the proud « and unbelieving Heart in an holy quietude and « ſweet ſubmiſſion at the foot of God. 'Tis an eaſy « thing to talk of truſting God for dayly Bread « while we have a full Barn or Purſe; but to ſay, « as the Prophet, Hab. 3. 17. Though the Fig-tree ſhould not bloſſom, neither Fruit be in the Vine, &c. yet will I rejoyce in the Lord: Surely this is not eaſy. The fifth Caſe therefore ſhall be this.

5. Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from truſting God, or repining againſt him, when outward Wants are either felt or feared.

This Caſe deſerves to be ſeriouſly pondred, and eſpecially to be ſtudyed now, ſince it ſeems to be the deſign of Providence to empty the People of God of their Creature-fulneſs, and acquaint them with thoſe ſtraits which hitherto they have been altogether Strangers to.

Now, to ſecure the Heart from the 'foremen-tioned dangers attending this condition, theſe following Conſiderations, through the Bleſſings of the Spirit, may prove effectual. And the firſt is this,

1. Conſid. That if God reduce you to ſtraits and neceſſities, yet he deals no otherwiſe therein with you, than he hath done with ſome of the choiceſt and holieſt Saints that ever lived.

Your condition is not ſingular; though, you have hitherto been Strangers to Wants, other Saints have dayly converſed, and been familiarly acquainted with them. Hear what bleſſed Paul ſpeaks, not of himſelf only, but in the Names of other Saints reduc'd to like Exigencies, 1 Cor. 4. 11. Even unto the preſent hour we both hunger and thirſt, and are naked and buffetted, and have no certain dwelling place. To ſee ſuch a Man as Paul going up and down the World with a naked Back, and empty Belly, and not a Houſe to put his Head in, one that was ſo far above thee in Grace and Holineſs, and that did more Service for God in a day, than perhaps thou haſt done in all thy days, and yet canſt repine as if hardly dealt with! Have you not what neceſſities and ſtraits even a David himſelf ſuffered? How great were his ſtraits and neceſſities? 1 Sam. 25. 8. Give I pray thee (ſaith he to Nabal) whatſoever cometh to thy hand, to thy ſervants, and to thy Son David. Renowned Muſculus was forced to dig in the Town-ditch for a ſubſtenance. Famous Ainſworth (as I have been credibly informed) was forced to ſell the Bed he lay on to buy Bread. But what ſpeak I of theſe? Behold a greater than any of them, even the Son of God, who is the Heir of all things, and by whom the Worlds were made. Yet ſometimes would have been glad of any thing, having nothing to eat, Mark 11. 12. And on the Morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry; and ſeeing a fig-tree afar off, having Leaves, he came if happily he might find [any thing] thereon.

Well then, hereby God hath ſet no mark of hatred upon you, neither can you infer the want of love from the want of Bread. When thy repining Heart puts the Queſtion, Was there ever any Sorrow like unto mine? Ask theſe Worthies, and they will tell thee, though they did not complain and fret as thou doſt, yet they were driven to as great ſtraits as thou art.

2. Conſid. If God leave you not in this neceſſitous condition without a Promiſe, you have no reaſon to repine or deſpond under it.

That is a ſad condition indeed, to which no Promiſe belongs. I remember Mr. Calvin upon thoſe Words, Iſa. 9. 1. Nevertheleſs the dimneſs ſhall not be ſuch as was in her vexation, &c. ſolves the Doubt, in what ſenſe the darkneſs of the Captivity was not ſo great, as the leſſer Incurſions made by Tiglath Pileſer. In the Captivity the City was deſtroyed, and the Temple burnt with Fire, there was no compariſon in the Affliction; but yet the Darkneſs ſhould not be ſuch, and the reaſon (ſaith he) is this, Huic certam promiſſionem eſſe additam, cum in prioribus nulla eſſet; (i. e.) there was certain a Promiſe made to this, but none to the other.

'Tis better be as low as Hell with a Promiſe, than in Paradice without one. Even the darkneſs of Hell it ſelf would be comparatively no darkneſs at all, were there but a Promiſe to enlighten it. Now God hath left many ſweet Promiſes for the Faith of his poor People to feed on in this condition, ſuch are theſe: Pſal. 34. 9, 10. O fear the Lord, ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that fear him; the Lyons do lack and ſuffer hunger, but they that fear the Lord ſhall want nothing that is good: Pſal. 33. 18, 19. The Eye of the Lord is upon the Righteous, to keep them alive in Famine. Pſal. 84. 11. No good thing will he with-hold from them that walk uprightly. Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things. Iſa. 41. 17. When the Poor and the Needy ſeek Water and there is none, and their Tongue faileth for Thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them. Here you ſee, firſt, their extream Wants, Water being put even for the Neceſſaries of Life, (2.) their certain Relief, I the Lord will hear them; in which it is ſuppoſed that they cry unto him in their ſtraits; and he hears their cry.

Having therefore theſe Promiſes, why ſhould not your diſtruſtful Hearts conclude like David's, Pſal. 23. 1. The Lord is my Shepherd, I ſhall not want.

Obj. But theſe Promiſes imply Conditions; if they were abſolute, they would afford more ſatisfaction.

Sol. What are thoſe tacit conditions you ſpeak of, but theſe: (1.) That either he will ſupply or ſanctify your Wants: (2.) That you ſhall have ſo much as God ſees fit for you. And doth this trouble you? Would you have the Mercy whether ſanctifyed or no? Whether God ſees it fit for you or no? Methinks the Appetites of Saints after earthly things ſhould not be ſo ravenous, to ſeiſe greedily upon any enjoyment, not caring how they have it.

But Oh, when Wants pinch, and we ſee not whence ſupplies ſhould come, then our Faith in the Promiſe ſhakes, and we, like murmuring Iſrael, cry, He gave Bread, can he give Water alſo? O unbelieving Hearts! When did his Promiſe fail? Who ever truſted them, and was aſhamed? May not God upbraid thee with thine unreaſonable Infidelity; as Jer. 2. 31. Have I been a Wilderneſs unto you? &c. Or as Chriſt ſaid to the Diſciples, Since I was with you, lacked ye any thing? Yea, may you not upbraid your ſelves, may you not ſay with good old Polycarp, Thus many Years I have ſerved Chriſt, and found him a good Maſter? Indeed he may deny what your Wantonneſs, but not what your real Wants call for. He will not regard the cry of your Luſts, nor yet deſpiſe the cry of your Faith; though he will not indulge and humour your wanton Appetites, yet he will not violate his own faithful Promiſes. Theſe Promiſes are your beſt ſecurity for eternal Life; and 'tis ſtrange if they ſhould not ſatisfy you for dayly Bread: Remember ye the words of the Lord, and ſolace your Hearts with them amidſt all your wants. 'Tis ſaid of Epicurus, that in the dreadful fits of the Collick, he often refreſhed himſelf, Ob memoriam inventorum, by calling to mind his Inventions in Phyloſophy: And of Poſſidonius the Phyloſopher, that in a great Fit of the Stone he ſolaced himſelf with Diſcourſes of Moral Vertue: And when the Pain twinged him, he would ſay, Nihil agis dolor quamvis ſis moleſtus nunquam confitebor te eſſe malum: O Pain, thou doſt nothing; thou thou art a little troubleſome, I will never confeſs thee to be evil. If upon ſuch grounds as theſe they could ſupport themſelves under ſuch grinding and racking Pains, and even delude their Diſeaſes by them, how much rather ſhould the precious Promiſes of God, and the ſweet Experiences, which have gone along ſtep by ſtep with them, make you to forget all your wants, and comfort you over every ſtrait.

3. Conſid. If it be bad now, it might have been worſe; hath God denyed thee the comforts of this Life? He might have denyed thee Chriſt, Peace and Pardon alſo, and then thy Caſe had been woful indeed. You know God hath done ſo to millions in the World: How many ſuch wretched Objects may our Eyes behold every day, that have no comfort in hand, nor yet in hope, are miſerable here, and will be ſo to eternity; that have a bitter Cup, and nothing to ſweeten it; no, not ſo much as any hope that it will be better. But it is not ſo with you, though you be poor in this World, yet rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom which God hath promiſed, Jam. 2. 5. O learn to ſet ſpiritual Riches over againſt temporal Poverty. Ballance all your preſent Troubles with your ſpiritual Priviledges. Indeed if God had denyed your Souls the Robes of Righteouſneſs to cloath them, the hidden Manna to feed them, the heavenly Manſions to receive them; if your Souls were left deſtitute, as well as your Bodies, you might well be penſive; but this conſideration hath enough to bring the conſidering Soul to reſt under any outward ſtrait. 'Twas bravely ſaid by Luther, when Want began to pinch him, Let us be contented with our hard Fare (ſaid he) for do we not Feaſt with Angels upon Chriſt the Bread of Life? And bleſſed be God (ſaid Paul) who hath abounded to us in all ſpiritual Bleſſings, Epheſ. 1. 3.

4. Conſid. This Affliction, though great, is not ſuch an Affliction, but God hath far greater, with which he chaſtiſes the dearly beloved of his Soul in this World; and ſhould he remove this, and inflict thoſe, you would account your preſent ſtate a very comfortable ſtate, and bleſs God to be as now you are.

What think ye, Sirs? Should God remove your preſent Troubles, ſupply all your outward Wants, give you the deſire of your Hearts in Creature-comforts, but hide his Face from you, ſhoot his Arrows into your Souls, and cauſe the Venom of them to drink up your Spirits? Should he leave you but a few days to the buffeting of Satan, and his blaſphemous Injections: Should he hold your Eyes but a few Nights waking with horrors of Conſcience, toſſing to and fro till the dawning of the day: Should he lead you through the Chambers of Death, ſhew you the viſions of darkneſs, And make his Terrors ſet themſelves in array againſt you? Then tell me if you would not count it a choice Mercy to be back again in your former neceſſitous condition, with Peace of Conſcience and count Bread and Water, with God's Favour a happy State? O then! take heed of repining. Say not God deals hardly with you, leſt you provoke him to convince you, by your own ſenſe and feeling, that he hath worſe Rods than theſe for unſubmiſſive and froward Children.

4. Conſid. If it be bad now it will be better ſhortly.

O keep thy Heart by that conſideration: The Meal in the Barrel is almoſt ſpent; well, be it ſo, why ſhould that trouble me, if I am almoſt beyond the need and uſe of all theſe things. The Traveller hath ſpent almoſt all his Money, but a ſhilling or two left: Well (ſaith he) though my Money be almoſt ſpent, yet my Journey is almoſt finiſh'd too; I am near home, and then ſhall be fully ſupply'd. If there be no Candles in the Houſe, yet 'tis a comfort to think that it's almoſt day, and then there will be no need of Candles. I am afraid, Chriſtian, thou miſreckoneſt thy ſelf when thou thinkeſt my Proviſion is almoſt ſpent, and I have a great way to travel; many years to live, and nothing to live upon; it may be but half ſo many as thou ſuppoſeſt; in this be confident, if thy Proviſion be ſpent, either freſh Supplies are coming (though thou ſeeſt not from whence) or thou art nearer thy Journey's end than thou reckoneſt thy ſelf to be. Deſponding Soul, doth it become a Man or Woman travelling upon the Road to that Heavenly City, and almoſt arrived there, within a few days Journey of their Father's Houſe, where all his Wants ſhall be ſupplyed, to take on thus about a little Meat, Drink or Cloaths, which he fears he ſhall want by the way? It was a noble Saying of the forty Martyrs famous in the Eccleſiaſtical Story, when turned out naked in a froſty Night to be ſtarved to death, with theſe Words they comforted one another, Δείμμυς ὁ χείμων, &c. The Winter indeed is ſharp and cold, but Heaven is warm and comfortable; here we ſhiver for cold, but Abraham's Boſom will make amends for all.

Obj. 1. But I may dye for want.

Sol. (1.) Who ever did ſo? Where were the Righteous forſaken? (2.) If ſo, your Journey is ended, and you fully ſupplyed.

Obj. 2. But I am not ſure of that, were I ſure of Heaven it were another matter.

Sol. Are you not ſure of that? Then you have other Matters to trouble your ſelves about than theſe; Methinks this ſhould be the leaſt of all your Cares: I do not find that Souls perplexed and troubled about the want of Chriſt, pardon of Sin, &c. are uſually very anxious, or ſolicitous about theſe things. He that ſeriouſly puts forth Queſtions as theſe, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? How ſhall I know my Sin is pardon'd? Doth he uſually trouble himſelf with, What ſhall I eat, what ſhall I drink, or wherewith ſhall I be cloathed?

6. Conſid. Doth it become the Children of ſuch a Father to diſtruſt his All-ſufficiency, or repine against any of his Diſpenſations?

Do you well to queſtion his care and love upon every new Exigence? Say, have you not been aſhamed of this formerly? Hath not your Father made ſeaſonable Proviſions for you in former ſtraits, you to the bluſh, and made you reſolve never to queſtion his love and care any more, and yet will you renew your unworthy ſuſpicions of him again? Diſ-ingenuous Child! reaſon thus with thy ſelf; If I periſh for want of what is good and needful for me, it muſt either be becauſe my Father knows not my Wants, or hath not wherewith to ſupply them: Or elſe regards not what becomes of me. Which of theſe ſhall I charge upon him? Not the firſt; for, Mark 6. 32. My Father knows what I have need of, my condition is not hid from him: Nor the ſecond, For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulneſs of it, Pſal. 24. 1. His Name is God All-ſufficient, Gen. 17. 1. Not the laſt, for, as a Father pities his Children, ſo the Lord pities them that fear him, Pſal. 103. 13. The Lord is exceeding pitiful, and of tender mercy, Jam. 5. 11. He hears the young ravens when they cry, Job. 38. 41. And will he not hear me? Conſider (ſaith Chriſt) the fowls of the Air, Matth. 6. 26. Not the Fowls at the Door, that are every Day fed by hand, but the Fowls of the Air, that have none to provide for them. Doth he feed and clothe his Enemies, and will he forget his Children? He heard the very cry of Iſhmael in diſtreſs, Gen. 21. 17. O my unbelieving Heart! doſt thou yet doubt? Remember Hagar and the Child.

7. Conſid. Your Poverty is not your Sin, but your Affliction only! if by ſinful means you have not brought it upon your ſelves; and if it be but an Affliction, it may be born the eaſier for that.

'Tis hard indeed to bear an Affliction coming upon us as the fruit and puniſhment of Sin, when men are under trouble upon that account; they uſe to ſay, O! if it were but a ſingle Affliction coming from the Hand of God by way of tryal, I could bear it, but I have brought it upon my ſelf by Sin, it comes as the puniſhment of Sin; the marks of God's Diſpleaſure are upon it; 'tis the guilt within that troubles and galls more, than the want without.

But it is not ſo here, and therefore you have no reaſon to be caſt down under it.

Object. But though there be no ſting of guilt, yet the condition wants not other ſtings: At firſt, the diſcredit of Religion; I cannot comply with mine engagements in the World, and thereby Religion is like to ſuffer.

Sol. 'Tis well you have an Heart to diſcharge every Duty, yet if God diſable you by Providence, 'is no diſcredit to your Profeſſion, becauſe you do not that which you cannot do, ſo long as it is your deſire and endeavour to do what you can and ought to do; and in this caſe God's Will is, that mercy and forbearance be exerciſed towards you, Matt. 24. 12, 13.

2. Object. But it grieves me to behold the Neceſſities of others whom I was wont to relieve and refreſh, now cannot.

Sol. If you cannot, it ceaſes to be your Duty, and God accepts the drawing out of your Soul to be hungry in compaſſion and deſire to help them, though you cannot draw forth a full Purſe to relieve and ſupply them.

3. Object. But I find ſuch a condition full of temptations, a ſore clog in the way to Heaven.

Sol. Every condition in the World hath its clogs and attending temptations; and were you in a proſperous condition, you might there meet with more temptations and fewer advantages than you now have: For though I confeſs Poverty hath its temptations as well as Proſperity, yet I am confident Proſperity hath not thoſe excellent Advantages that Poverty hath: For here you have an opportunity to diſcover the Sincerity of your love to God, when you can live upon him, find enough in him, and conſtantly follow him, even when all external inducements and motives fail. And thus I have ſhewed you how to keep your Hearts from the Temptations and Dangers attending a poor and low condition in the World, when want pinches, and the Heart begins to ſink, then improve and bleſs God for theſe helps to keep it.

6. Seaſon. "The ſixth Seaſon of expreſſing "this diligence in keeping the Heart, is the Sea-"ſon of Duty; when we draw nigh to God in "publick, private, or ſecret Duties, then 'tis "time to look to the Heart; for the Vanity of the "Heart ſeldom diſcovers it ſelf more than at ſuch "times. How oft doth the poor Soul cry out, "O Lord, how fain would I ſerve thee, but vain "thoughts will not let me; I came to open my "Heart to thee, to delight my Soul in commu-"nion with thee, but my Corruptions have ſet "upon me: Lord, raſe off theſe vain thoughts, "and ſuffer them not to proſtitute the Soul, "which is eſpouſed to thee, before thy face. The "ſixth Caſe then is this.

6 Caſe. How the Heart may be kept from Diſtractions by vain Thoughts, in the time of Duty.

There is a twofold diſtraction or wandring of the Heart in Duty: (1.) Voluntary and habitual, Pſal. 78. 8. They ſet not their Hearts aright, and their Spirit was not ſtedfaſt with God. This is the caſe of Formaliſts, and it proceeds from the want of an holy bent and inclination of the Heart to God; their Hearts are under the Power of their Luſts, and therefore 'tis no wonder they go after their Luſts, even when they are about holy things, Ezek. 33. 31. (2.) Involuntary and lamented Diſtractions, Rom. 7. 21. 24. I find then a Law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me; O wretched Man that I am, &c. This proceeds not from the want of a holy bent and aim, but from the weakneſs and imperfection of Grace. And in this caſe the Soul may make the like complaint againſt its own Corruptions that Abijah did againſt Jeroboam, 2 Chr. 13. 6, 7. Yet Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat is riſen up againſt his Lord, when Jeroboam was young and tender-hearted, and could not withſtand them, and there are gathered unto him vain Men, the Children of Belial; Grace hath a dominion, but Luſts are mutinous and ſeditious, during the infancy thereof. But it is not my buſineſs to ſhew you how theſe Diſtractions come into the Heart, but rather how to get and keep them out of the Heart; in order whereto take theſe ten following Helps.

1 Help. Sequeſter your ſelves from all earthly Employments, and ſet apart ſome time for ſolemn Preparation to meet God in Duty: You cannot come reeking hot out of the World into God's Preſence, but you will find a tang of it in your Duties: It is with the Heart a few minutes ſince plunged in the World, now at the feet of God, juſt as with the Sea after a Storm, which ſtill continues working, muddy, and diſquiet, though the Wind be laid, and Storm over: Thy Heart muſt have ſome time to ſettle. There are few Muſicians that can take down a Lute or Viol, and play preſently upon it, without ſome time to tune it; there are few Chriſtians can preſently ſay, as Pſal. 57. 7. O God, my Heart is fixed, it is fixed. O when thou goeſt to God in any Duty, take thy Heart aſide, and ſay, O my Soul, I am now addreſſing my ſelf to the greateſt work that ever a Creature was employed about: I am going into the awful presence of God about business of everlasting Life.

Creature

Oh my Soul, leave trifling now, be composed, watchful, serious, this is no common Work; 'tis God-work, Soul-work, Eternity-work, I am now going forth bearing Seed, which will bring forth fruit to life or death in the World to come; pause a while upon thy Sins, Wants, Troubles; steep thy thoughts a while in these before thou address thy self to Duty. David first mused, and then spake with his Tongue, Psal. 39. 3, 4. So Psal. 45. 1. My Heart is inditing, &c

2 Help. Having composed thy Heart by previous Meditation, presently set a guard upon thy Senses: How often are poor Christians in danger of losing the eyes of their mind by those of their body, for this David prayed, Psal. 119. 37. Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken thou me in thy way. This may serve to expound that mystical Arabian Proverb, which advises to shut the Windows, that the house may be light: 'Twere excellent if you could say in your Onsets upon Duty, as an holy Man once did, when he came off from Duty: Claudimini oculi mei claudimini, &c. Be shut, O mine eyes, be shut: For it is impossible you should ever see such beauty and glory in any Creature, as I have now seen in God. You had need avoid all occasions of Distraction from without, for be sure you will meet enough from within, intention of Spirit in the work of God, locks up the Eye and Ear against Vanity. When Marcellus entred the Gates of Syracuse, Archimedes was so intent about his Mathematical Scheme, that he took no notice of the Soldiers when they entred his very Study with drawn Swords; a fervent cannot be a vagrant Heart.

3 Help. Beg of God a mortified Fancy. A working Fancy (saith one) how much soever it be extoll'd among Men, is a great snare to the Soul; except it work in Fellowship with right Reason, and a sanctified Heart: The phantasy is a power of the Soul placed between the Senses and the Understanding, 'tis that which first stirs its self in the Soul, and by its motion the other powers are stirred; 'tis the common Shop where Thoughts are first forged and framed, and as this is, so are they; if Imaginations be not first cast down, 'tis impossible that every thought of the Heart should be brought into obedience to Christ, 2 Cor. 10. 5. This Fancy is naturally the wildest and most untameable power in the Soul. Some Christians (especially such as are of hot and dry Constitutions) have much to do with it.

And truly, the more spiritual the Heart is, the more 'tis troubled about the vanity and wildness of it. O what a sad thing it is! that thy nobler Soul must lackey up and down after a vain roving Fancy, that such a Beggar should ride on Horseback, and such a Prince run after it on Foot; that it should call off the Soul from atteudance upon God, when it is most sweetly engaged in Communion with him, to prosecute such Vanities as it will start at such times before it! Beg earnestly of God that the power of Sanctification may once come upon it. Some Christians have attained such a degree of Sanctification of their Fancies, that they have had much sweetness left upon their Hearts by the spiritual working of it in the Night Season: When thy Fancy is more mortified, thy Thoughts will be more orderly and fixed.

4 Help. If thou wouldst keep thy Heart from those vain excursions, realise to thy self by faith, the holy and awful presence of God in duties.

If the presence of a grave Man will compose us to seriousness, how much more the presence of an holy God? Thinkest thou, thy Soul durst be so gay and light, if the Sense of a Divine Eye were upon it? Remember the place where thou art, is the place of his feet, Isa. 60. 13. act faith upon the Omniscience of God, All the Churches shall know that I am he that searcheth the heart, and tryeth the reins, and I will give to every one of you according to your works, Rev. 2. 23. All things are naked and open to the Eyes of him with whom we have to do. Heb. 4. 12. Realise his infinite Holiness; into what a serious composed frame did the sight of God in his Holiness put the spirit of the Prophet? Isa. 6. 5. Labour to get also upon thy Heart due apprehensions of the greatness of God, how tender he is over his Worship, Lev. 10. 3. And Moses said unto Aaron, This is that the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctifyed in them that come nigh me, and before all the People I will be glorifyed.

" A Man that is praying (saith Bernard) should " behave himself as if he were entring into the " Court of Heaven, where he sees the Lord upon " his Throne, surrounded with Ten Thousand " of his Angels and Saints ministring unto him. When thou comest from a Duty in which thy Heart hath been toying and wandring, thou mayest say, Verily God was in this place, and I knew it not. Suppose all the Impertinences and Vanities which have past through thine Heart in a duty were written out, and interlined with thy Petitions, could'st thou have the face to present it to God? Should thy Tongue but utter all the thoughts of thy Heart in Prayer, would not Men abhor thee? Why, thy thoughts are vocal to God, Psal. 139. 2. If thou wert petitioning the King for thy Life, would it not provoke him to see thee playing with thy Band-strings, or catching every Fly that lights upon thy Cloaths whilst thou art speaking to him about such serious Matters? think sadly upon that Scripture, Psal. 87. 7. God is greatly to be feared in the Assemblies of his Saints and to be had in reverence of all that are round about him. Why did God descend in Thundrings and Lightnings, and dark Clouds upon Sinai? Exod. 19. 16. 18. Why did the Mountains smoak under him? The People quake and tremble round about him, yea Moses himself not exempted, but to teach the People that Great Truth, Heb. 12. 28, 29. Let us have grace, whereby we may serve him acceptable with reverence and godly fear, for our God is a consuming fire? Present God thus before thee, and thy vain Heart will quickly be reduced to a more serious frame.

5. Help. Maintain a praying frame of Heart in the intervals of duty: What is the Reason our Hearts are so dull, careless and wandring, when we come to hear or pray, but because there have been such long intermissions in our communion with God; by reason whereof the Heart is out of a praying frame? If that spiritual warmth, the holy impressions we carry from God in one duty were but preserved to kindle another duty, it would be of marvellous advantage to keep the Heart intent and serious with God.

To this purpose those intermediate Ejaculations, betwixt stated and solemn Duties, are of most sweet and excellent use; by these, one duty is, as it were, linked to another, and so the Soul, as it were, wraps up it self in a chain of duties. The Christian seldom misses his mark in solemn du-that ſhoots up many of theſe darts in the intervals of duty; 'tis an excellent condemnation Chriſt beſtows upon the Spouſe, Cant. 4. 11. Thy Lips, O my Spouſe, drop as the Honey-comb: Upon which Text one gives this ſweet note, the Honey-comb drops actually but ſometimes, but it always hangs full of ſweet drops ready to fall; if our Ejaculations were more, our Lamentations upon this account would be fewer.

6. Help. Endeavour to engage and raiſe thy Affections to God in duty, if thou wouldſt have thy Diſtractions cured.

A dropping Eye, and a melting Heart, are ſelꝺom troubled as others upon this account: When the Soul is intent upon any work, it gathers in its ſtrength, and bends all the thoughts about it; and when it is deeply affected, it will be intent, the Affections command the Thoughts to go after them, Deadneſs cauſes Diſtraction, and Diſtraction increaſes Deadneſs; could you but look upon duties as the Galleries of Communion in which you walk with God, where your Souls may be filled with thoſe raviſhing and matchleſs Delights that are in his preſence, your Soul would not offer to ſtir from thence.

It is with the Heart in duty, as it with thoſe that dig for Gold Ore; they try here, and finding none, try there; and ſo go from place to place, till at laſt they hit upon the rich Vein, and there they ſit down. If thy Heart could but once hit the rich Vein in duty, it would dwell and abide there with delight and conſtancy. O how I love thy Law, it is my Meditation day and night! Pſal. 119. 97. The Soul could dwell day and night upon its Knees, when once its Delights, Loves, and Deſires are engaged. What's the reaſon your Hearts are ſo ſhuffling, eſpecially in ſecret duties? why are you ready to be gone almoſt as ſoon as you are come into the preſence of God, but becauſe your Affections are not engaged?

7. Help. Mourn over the matter to God, and call for Aſſiſtance from Heaven, when vain Thoughts aſſault the Heart in duty.

When the Meſſenger of Satan buffeted Paul by vile Injections, as is ſuppoſed, he goes to God, and mourns over it before him, 2 Cor. 12. 8. neither wandring thoughts in duty as ſmall matters, follow every vain Thought with a deep Sigh, and ſay thee to God with ſuch Words as theſe, Lord I came hither to ſpeak with thee, and here a buſy World, and a vain Heart conſpiring together have fallen upon me. O my God! what an Heart have I! ſhall I never wait upon thee without Diſtraction? When ſhall I enjoy an hour of free Communion with thee? Help me, my God, this once; do but diſplay thy glory before mine Eyes, and my Heart ſhall quickly be recovered: Thou knoweſt I came hither to enjoy thee, and ſhall I go away without thee? See, how the Heart of thy poor Child works towards thee! Strives to get near thee, but cannot: My Heart is aground, come thou South-wind, blow South-wind: O for a freſh Gale from thy Spirit, to ſet my Affections afloat! Could I but thus affectionately bewail thy Diſtractions to God, thou mighteſt obtain help and deliverance from them: He would ſay to Luſts, and thine imperious Luſts, as Ahaſhuerus to Haman, What, Will he force the Queen before my Face? Who are theſe, that ſet upon my Soul in my work, and preſence?

8. Help Look upon the Succeſs and Sweetneſs of thy Duties as very much depending upon the keeping of your Hearts cloſe with God in them.

These two things, the ſucceſs and ſweetneſs of duty, are as dear to a Chriſtian as his two Eyes; and both of theſe muſt neceſſarily be loſt, if the Heart be loſt in duty, Job 25. 13. Surely God heareth not vanity, neither doth the Almighty regard it. The Promiſe is made to an Heart engaged, Jer. 29. 13. Then ſhall ye ſeek me and find me, when ye ſhall ſearch for me with all your Heart. Well then, when thou findeſt thy Heart under the power of deadneſs and diſtraction, ſay to thy Soul, O what do I loſe by a careleſs Heart now! My Praying times are the choiceſt Parts, the golden Spots of all my time: Could I but get up this Heart with God, I might now obtain ſuch Mercies as would be matter for a Song to all Eternity.

9. Help. Look upon it as a great Diſcovery of the ſincerity or hypocriſy of your Hearts, according as you find them careful, or careleſs, in this matter.

Nothing will ſtartle an upright Heart more than this: What, ſhall I give way to a cuſtomary wandring of heart from God? Shall the ſpot of the Hypocrite appear upon my Soul? They indeed can drudge on in the round of duty, never regarding the frames of their Hearts, Ezek. 33. 31, 32. but ſhall I do ſo? When Men come into the Preſence Chamber, and the King is not there, they bow to the empty Chair. O never let me be ſatisfyed with empty Duties! Never let me take my leave of a Duty, until mine Eyes have ſeen the King, the Lord of Hoſts.

10. Help. Laſtly, 'Twill be of ſpecial uſe to keep thine Heart with God in duties, to conſider what Influence all thy duties have into thy Eternity.

Theſe are your Seed-times, and what you ſow in your Duties in this World, you muſt look to reap the Fruit of it in another World, Gal. 6. 7, 8. If you ſow to the Fleſh, of that you ſhall reap Corruption; but if to the Spirit, Life everlaſting. O my Soul, anſwer ſeriouſly, wouldſt thou be willing to reap the fruit of Vanity, in the World to come? Dareſt thou ſay, when thy Thoughts are roving to the ends of the Earth in duty, when thou ſcarce mindeſt what thou ſayeſt or heareſt; now Lord I am ſowing to the Spirit; now I am providing and laying up for Eternity; now I am ſeeking for Glory, Honour and Immortality; now I am ſtriving to enter in at the ſtrait Gate; now I am taking the Kingdom of Heaven by an holy Violence: O ſuch a Conſideration as this ſhould make the multitudes of vain thoughts that preſs in upon the Heart in duty, to fly ſeven ways before it. And thus I have ſhown you how to keep your Hearts in the times of duty.

7. Seaſon. "The ſeventh Seaſon calling for "more than common diligence to keep the Heart, "is, when we receive Injuries and Abuſes from "Men. Such is the depravedneſs and corruption "of Man in his collapſed ſtate, that homo homini "lupus, one Man is become a Wolf, a Tyger, to "another; they are as the Prophet complains, "Hab. 1. 24. As the Fiſhes of the Sea, and as the "creeping Things that have no Ruler over them; and "as wicked Men are cruel and oppreſſive one "to another, ſo they conſpire together to abuſe "and wrong the People of God, as the ſame Pro-"phet complains, verſ. 13. The Wicked devoureth "the Man that is more Righteous than he. Now "when we are thus abuſed and wronged; 'tis "hard to keep the Heart from revengeful Mo-"tions; to make it meekly and quietly to com-"mit the Cauſe to him that judgeth righteouſly; "to exerciſe no other affection but Pity towards "them that abuſe us. Surely the Spirit that is " in us luſteth to revenge, but it muſt not be ſo; " you have choice helps in the Goſpel to keep " down your Hearts from ſuch ſinful Motions a- " gainſt your Enemies, and to ſweeten your im- " bitter'd Spirits. The ſeventh Caſe then ſhall " be this.

7. Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from revengeful Motions, under the greateſt Injuries and Abuſes from Men?

The Goſpel indeed allows a Liberty to vindicate our Innocency, and aſſert our Rights; but not to vent our Corruptions, and invade God's right; when therefore thou findeſt thy Heart begin to be inflamed by revengeful Motions, preſently apply the following Remedies; and the firſt is this.

1. Rem. Urge upon thy Heart the ſevere Prohibitions of Revenge by the Law of God. Remember that this is forbidden Fruit, how pleaſant and luſcious ſoever it be to our vitiated Appetites. O ſaith Nature, Revenge is ſweet; O but, ſaith God, the Effects thereof ſhall be bitter: How plainly hath God interdicted this Fleſh-pleaſing Sin, Prov. 20. 22. Say not, I will recompence Evil, Prov. 24. 29. Say not I will do ſo to him as he hath done to me. Rom. 12. 27. Recompence to no Man Evil for Evil, and verſ. 19. Avenge not your ſelves, but rather give place to Wrath: Nay, that's nor all; but Prov. 25. 21. If thine Enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirſt, give him drink. The Word feed him, as Criticks obſerve, ſignifyes to feed chearfully and tenderly, as Birds do their young ones: The Scripture is a great Friend to the Peace and Tranquility of humane Societies, which can never be preſerved, if Revenge be not depoſed: It was wont to be an Argument urged by the Chriſtians to prove their Religion to be ſupernatural and pure, that it forbids Revenge which is ſo ſweet to Nature; and verily 'tis a thouſand Pities ſuch an Argument ſhould be loſt. Well then, awe your Hearts with the Authority of God in theſe Scriptures; and when carnal Reaſon ſaith mine Enemy deſerve to be hated, let Conſcience reply, But doth God deſerve to be diſobeyed? Thus, and thus hath he done, and ſo he hath wronged me; but what hath God done, that I ſhould wrong him; If he dare be ſo bold to break the Peace, ſhall I be ſo wicked to break the Precept? If he fears not to wrong me, ſhall not I fear to wrong God? O let the fear of God's Threatnings repreſs ſuch ſinful motions.

2. Rem. Set before your Eyes the moſt eminent Patterns of Meekneſs and Forgiveneſs, that your Souls may fall in love with it.

This is the way to cut off thoſe common Pleas of the Fleſh for Revenge: As thus, No Man, would bear ſuch an Affront; yes, ſuch and ſuch have born as bad and worſe: I ſhall be reckoned a Coward, a Fool, if I paſs by this; no matter, as long as I follow the Examples of the wiſeſt and holieſt of Men: Never did any ſuffer more and greater Abuſes from Men than Chriſt did, and never did any carry more peaceably and forgivingly, Iſa. 53. 7. He was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his Mouth; he was brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter, &c. This Pattern the Apoſtle ſets before you for your imitation, 1 Pet. 2. 21. 22. 23. For even hereunto are you called, becauſe Chriſt alſo ſuffered for us, leaving us an Example that we ſhould follow his ſteps: Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he ſuffered, he threatned not, but committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly. To be of a meek forgiving Spirit is Chriſt-like, God-like; then ſhall you be the Children of your Father, which is in Heaven, for he maketh his Sun to riſe upon the Evil, and upon the Good and ſendeth Rain on the Juſt, and Unjuſt, Mat. 5. 45. How eminently alſo did this Spirit of Chriſt reſt upon his Apoſtles? Never were there ſuch Men upon Earth for true excellency of Spirit. None were ever abuſed more, or ſuffered their abuſes better: Being reviled, (ſay they) we bleſs; being perſecuted, we ſuffer it; being defamed, we intreat: 1 Cor. 4. 12, 13. Mr. Calvin though a Man of a quick Spirit, yet had attained ſuch a degree of this Chriſt-like Forgiveneſs, that when Luther had uſed ſome opprobrious Language to him, the good Man ſaid no more but this, " Although he ſhould call me Devil, yet I will " knowledge him to be an eminent Servant of " ſus Chriſt.

I have often heard it reported of holy Mr. D that when one, enraged at his cloſe convinci Doctrine, pick'd a Quarrel with him, ſmote h on the Face, and daſhed out two of his Teeth; t meek Servant of Chriſt ſpit out the Teeth Blood into his hand, and ſaid, See here, you h knocked out two of my Teeth, and that with any juſt provocation; but on condition I mi do your Soul good, I would give you leave to out all the reſt: Here is the excellency of a C ſtian's Spirit, above all the attainments of M Heathens: Though they were excellent at m other things, yet they could never attain this giving Spirit. It is the firſt office of Juſtice (Tully) to hurt no body, unleſs firſt provoked b injury; whereupon Lactantius, O quam ſimplicem ramque ſententiam duorum verborum, adjectione ruptit! What a dainty Sentence ſpoiled the tor by adding thoſe two laſt Words! Strive for this excellency of Spirit, which is the pr excellency of Chriſtians, do ſome ſingular that others cannot do, and then you will ha teſtimony in their Conſciences: When Moſes did the Magicians, they were forced to confe Finger of God in that buſineſs.

3. Rem. Conſider well the quality of the that hath wronged thee; either he is a good or a wicked Man, that hath done thee the in if he be a good Man, there is light and tende in his Conſcience, and that will bring him a to a ſenſe of the Evil he hath done; ho Chriſt hath forgiven him greater Injuries theſe, and why ſhouldſt not thou? Will not upbraid him with any of thoſe Wrongs do him, but frankly forgives him all, and wilt take him by the Throat for ſome petty abuſ he hath done to thee?

Or is he a wicked Man? If ſo, truly yo more need to exerciſe pity, than revenge to him, and that upon a double account: Fo he is beſide himſelf, ſo indeed is every unco ed Sinner, Luke 15. 17. Should you go into B and there hear one rail at you, another moc and a third threaten you, would you ſay I revenged upon them? No, you would rat away pitying them. Alas, poor Creatures! are out of their Wits, and know not wha do. Beſides,

(2.) There is a day a coming, if they not, when they will have more Miſery th can find in your Hearts to wiſh them; yo not ſtudy revenge, God's Vengeance ſleepe and will ſhortly take place upon them, not that enough? Have they not an E of Miſery coming? If they repent no must be the Portion of their Cup; and if ever they do repent, they will be ready to make you reparation.

4. Rem. Keep down thy Heart by this Consideration, that by Revenge thou canst but satisfy a Lust, but by Forgiveness thou shalt Conquer a Lust.

Suppose by Revenge thou shouldst destroy one Enemy, I will shew thee how by forgiving thou shalt Conquer three: Thine own Lust, the Devil's Temptation, and thine Enemy's Heart; and is not this a more glorious Conquest? If by revenge thou overcome thine Enemy, yet (as Bernard saith) Infelix victoria, ubi superans virum succumbit vitio: Unhappy Victory, when by overcoming another Man, thou art overcome by thine own Corruption; but this way you may obtain a glorious Conquest indeed. What an honourable and dry Victory did David this way obtain over Saul, 1 Sam. 24. 16, 17. And it came to pass when David had made an end of speaking these Words, that Saul lift up his Voice and wept; and he said to David, Thou art more Righteous than I.

It must be a very disengenuous Nature indeed, upon which Meekness and Forgiveness will not Work; A stony Heart which this Fire will not melt: To this sense is that, Prov. 25. 21. If thine Enemy hunger feed him, if he thirst give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap Coals of Fire upon his Head. Some will have it a Sin-punishing Fire, but others a Heart-melting Fire: To be sure 'twill either melt his Heart, or aggravate his Misery. Augustine thinks that Stephen's Prayer for his Enemies, was the great means of Paul's Conversion.

5. Rem. Seriously propound this Question to thy own Heart, have I got any good by the Wrongs and Injuries received, or have I not? If they have done you no good, turn the Revenge upon your selves. O that I should have such a hard Heart, that can get no good out of such Troubles. O that my Spirit should be so unlike to Christ's! The Patience and Meekness of other Christians have turned all the Injuries thrown at them into precious Stones; the Spirits of others have been raised in Blessing God, when they have been loaded with Reproaches from the World, they have bound them as an Ornament to their Necks. Superbus fio (said Luther) Quod video nomen pessimum mihi crescere. I could even be Proud upon it, that I have a bad Name among wicked Men; to the same purpose Jerome sweetly, Gratias ago Deo meo quod dignus sum quem mundus oderit. I thank my God, that I am worthy to be hated of the World: Thus their Hearts were provoked by Injuries to magnify God, and bless him for them; if it work contrary with me, I have cause enough to be filled with self-displacency.

If you have got any good by them, if the Reproaches and Wrongs you have received, have made you search your Hearts the more, watch your ways the more narrowly; if their wronging you, have made you see how you have wronged God, then let me say for them as Paul did himself, pray forgive them this Wrong.

What, can you not find an Heart to forgive one that hath been instrumental of so much good to you? That's strange! What though they meant it for evil? Yet if God hath turned it to good, you have no more Reason to rage against the Instrument, than he had who received a Wound from his Enemy, which only brake, and let out that Impostume which otherwise had been his Death.

6. Rem. 'Tis of excellent Use to keep the Heart from Revenge, to look up and eye the first Cause by which all our Troubles are ordered.

This will calm and meeken our Spirits quickly; never did a wicked Tongue try the Patience of a Saint more than David's was tryed by that railing Shimei: Yet the Spirit of this good Man was not at all poisoned with Revenge, though he goes along cursing and casting Stones at him all the way: Yea, though Abishai offered David, if he pleased, the head of that Enemy; but the King said, What have I to do with you, ye Sons of Zeruiah? So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David: Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so? It may be God uses him as his Rod to lash me, because I by my Sin made his Enemies to blaspheme him: And shall I be angry with the Rod? How irrational were that? This also was it that quieted Job; he doth not rail, and vow Revenge upon the Caldæans and Sabeans, but eyes God as the Orderer of those Troubles, and is quiet: The Lord hath taken away, blessed be his Name, Job 1, 21.

Object. But you will say, To turn aside the Right of a Man, to subvert a Man in his Cause, the Lord approveth not, Lam. 3. 36.

Ans. True, but though it fall not under his approving, yet it doth under his permitting Will, and there is a great Argument for quiet Submission in that: Nay, he hath not only the permitting, but the ordering of all those Troubles; did we see more of an holy God, we should show less of a corrupt Nature in such Tryals.

7. Rem. Consider how you dayly wrong God, and you will not be so easily inflamed with Revenge against others that have wronged you.

You are dayly grieving and wronging God, and yet he bears, forgives, and will not take Vengeance upon you; and will you be so quick in avenging your selves upon others? O what a sharp and terrible Rebuke is that, Matt. 18. 32, 33. O thou wicked and slothful Servant! I forgave thee all that Debt because thou desiredst me, shouldst not thou also have had Compassion on thy Fellow Servant, even as I had pity on thee? None should be filled with Bowels of Pity, Forbearance and Mercy, to such as wrong them, as those should be that have experienced the riches of Mercy themselves; methinks the Mercy of God to us, should melt our very Bowels into Mercy over others 'tis impossible we can be Cruel to others, except we forget how kind Christ hath been to us? those that have found Mercy, should shew Mercy; if kindness cannot work, methinks Fear should: If ye forgive not Men their Trespasses, neither will your Father forgive you your Trespasses, Mat. 6. 15.

8. Rem. Lastly, Let the Consideration of the Day of the Lord, which draweth nigh, with-hold your Hearts from anticipating it by Acts of Revenge.

Why are you so quick? Is not the Lord at hand, to avenge all his abused Servants? Be patient therefore, my Brethren, unto the coming of the Lord? Behold the Husbandman waiteth, &c. Be ye also patient, for the coming of the Lord draws nigh: Grudge not one against another, Brethren, least ye be condemned. Behold the Judge standeth at the door, Jam. 5. 7, 8, 9. This Text affords three Arguments against Revenge. (1.) The Lord's near approach. (2.) The Example of the Husbandman's Patience. (3.) The Danger we draw upon our selves by anticipating God's Judgment: Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; he will distribute Justice more equally and impartially than you can; they that believe they have a God to right them, will not so much wrong themselves as to avenge their own Wrongs.

1. Obj. But Flesh and Blood are not able to bear such Abuses.

Sol.

S 1. If you resolve to consult Flesh and Blood in such Cases, and do no more but what that will enable you to do, never pretend to Religion. Christians must do singular and supernatural Things.

2. Obj. But if I put up such Abuses, I shall be reckoned a Fool, and every one will trample upon me.

Sol. (1.) You may be reckoned so among Fools, but God and good Men will account it your Wisdom, and the Excellency of your Spirits. (2.) It must be a base Spirit indeed that will trample upon a meek and forgiving Christian: And thus learn to keep your Hearts from Revenge under all your Provocations.

S. Season. "The next Season in which we are "in danger of losing our Hearts, is when we meet "with great Crosses and Provocations; then sin- "ful Passion is apt to transport the Heart; 'tis "the Fault of many good Men to be of hasty and "quick Spirits when provoked; though they dare "not concoct Anger into Malice, for that would "be a note of Wickedness, yet are they very in- "cident to sudden Anger, which is "a sign of Weakness. Beza, in the "Life of Calvin observes, that he "was of a keen and hasty Spirit; And "he that writes the Life of Great "Camcron, saith, that his Anger was "soon stirred towards his near and "familiar Friends, but then he would easily de- "pose it, and acknowledge his Weakness; alas, "when Provocations and Tryals of our Patience "come, we know not what Spirit we are of. The "eighth Case therefore is this.

Beza in Vit. Calv. p. 100.

Iton Cameronis.

S Case. How the Heart may be kept meek and patient under great Crosses and Provocations.

There are three Sorts of Anger, natural, holy, and sinful Anger. (1.) Natural, which is nothing else but the Motion of the irascible Appetite towards an offensive Object: And this in it self is no Sin, they are Propassions rather than Passions; the Infelicities rather than the Sins of Nature, as Jerom calls them; Reason (saith Plutarch) is the Driver, the Soul is the Chariot, and the two Horses that draw it on in all its Motions, are the concupiscible and irascible Appetites; whilst these are rightly managed by Reason, they are not only lawful, but very useful to the Soul. God would not have us to be stupid and insensate, though he would have us to be meek and patient: In Eph. 4. 26. He allows the natural motion, but forbids the sinful exorbitancy. (2.) Holy Anger, which is a pure flame, kindled by an heavenly spark of Love to God, and in Scripture is called Zeal, which is (as one saith) the Dagger which Love draws in God's Quarrel. Such was Lot's against the Sodomites, and that of Moses against the Idolatrous Israelites. When Servetus condemned Zwinglius for his harshness, his answer was, In aliis mansuetus ero, in blasphemiis in Christum, non ita; In other cases I will be milde, but in the cause of Christ, not so. That which the World calls Moderation and mildness here, is in God's account stupidity and cowardliness; neither of these are that which I am now perswading you to keep your Hearts against. But (3.) There is sinful Passion, that's the thing which endangers you. Now Anger becomes sinful when 'tis either Causeless, Mat. 5. 22. or Excessive; and that either in measure or time, exceeding the value of the impulsive cause, be it more transient or abiding; yet 'tis a Sin, and is matter of humiliation before God. Now the means to keep the Heart from it under Provocations, are these.

1 Means, Get low and humble thoughts of your selves, and then you will have meek Spirits, and peaceable deportments towards others.

The humble, is ever the patient Man; Pride is the root of Passion, a lofty, will be a surly Spirit; Bladders blown up with wind, will not lie close together; but prick them, and you may pack a thousand in a small room: Only by Pride cometh Contention, Prov. 13. 10. When we over-rate our selves, then we think we are unworthily treated by others, and that provokes; and here (by the way) take notice of one great benefit of acquaintance with your own Hearts, even the meekning and calming of your Spirits. Christian, methinks thou shouldst know so much by thy self, that 'tis impossible any should lay thee lower, or have baser thoughts of thee, than thou hast of thy self. Some render the original of that Text, Hab. 2. 5. thus: The proud Man is as he that transgresseth by Wine; and Drunkards, you know, are quarrelsome: O get more Humility, and that will bring you more Peace.

2 Means. Be often sweetning your Spirits in Communion with God, and they will not easily be imbittered with wrath toward Men.

A quiet Conscience never produced an unquiet Conversation: The Peace of God doth βραβεύειν, rule in the Heart, as an Umpire in appeasing strifes, for so much that Word, Col. 3. 15. imports; Wrath and Strife are hugely opposite to the Frame and Temper of a spiritual Heart, because inconsistent with the delight and contentment of that Dove-like Spirit, which loves a sedate and quiet Breast. O, saith a Soul, that feeds upon the sweet Communion of the Spirit, shall the Sparkles of Provocations now catch in my Passions, and raise such a Smoak in my Soul as will offend and drive away the Comforter from me? This is so affectual a Remedy against Passion, that I durst almost venture, in a Christian of a hasty Nature, to make long suffering a sign of Communion with God. Seest thou such a Christian quiet and calm under Provocations, 'tis very like his Soul feeds upon such Sweetness in God as he is loth to leave: And on the other side, seest thou a Christian Turbulent and Clamorous, doubtless all is not well within; his Spirit is like a Bone out of joynt, which cannot move without Pain and Trouble.

3 Means. Get due Apprehensions of the evil Nature and Effects of sinful Anger: Ira furor brevis, Anger is a short Madness (saith one:) Ira animæ febris, (saith another) Anger is the Fever of the Soul; 'Tis the Interregnum and Eclipse of Reason (saith a third,

The Effects of it are also very sad,

(1) It grieves the Spirit of God, Eph. 4. 30. Banishes him from that Breast in which it rages and tumultuates, God is the God of Peace; the Presence and Comforts of God are only injoyed in a Calm: 'Tis a golden Note one gives upon the fore-cited Text, God doth not usually bless with Peace of Conscience such as make no Conscience of Peace. (2) It gives Advantage to the Devil, Eph. 4. 26, 27. Satan is an angry and discontented Spirit, and finds no rest but in restless Hearts; he lives like the Salamander in Fires of Contention; he bestirs himself when the Spirits are in a Commotion, sometimes he fills the Heart with revengeful Thoughts, sometimes he fills the Lips, and inflames the Tongue with indecent Language, even

(3) It diſ-tunes the Spirit for …Duty; upon this Account the Apoſtle diſſwades …Husbands and Wives from jarring Carriages and …Contentions, that their Prayers be not hindered, …Pet. 3. 7. All Acts of Worſhip muſt be ſuita…le to the Object of Worſhip; but God is the …God of Peace, the God of Love. (4) To mention …o more, it diſparages the Chriſtian Religion. …ow would Plato and Pythagoras ſhame us, if they …ere now living? Chriſt was a Lamb for meek…eſs, and doth it become his Followers to be like …ons? O keep your Hearts, or you will at once …ſe not only your own Peace, but the credit of …eligion.

4 Means. Conſider how ſweet a thing it is to a Chri…n to conquer his Corruptions, and carry away the …ils of them.

He that is ſlow to Anger, is better than the Mighty; …d he that ruleth his Spirit, than he that taketh a …y, Prov. 16. 32. Is there any content in vent…g a Paſſion? 5 Means. Shame your ſelves by ſetting before you …ſe eminent Patterns that have been moſt excellent …meekneſs.

Above all, compare your Spirits with the Spirit …Chriſt; Learn of me (ſaith he) for I am meek …lowly, Matth. 11. 29. …ans 6. Laſtly. Avoid all irritating occaſi…

…that will not hear the Clapper, muſt not …he Rope: Grievous words ſtir up Anger (ſaith …n) Prov. 15. 1. Do not only pray, and re…againſt it, but get as far as you can out of …the way of it; 'tis true Spiritual Valour, to run as faſt, and far as we can, out of Sins way: If you can but avoid Anger in its firſt riſe, there is no great fear of it afterwards; for it is not with this Sin as it is with other Sins; other Sins grow to their full ſtrength by degrees, their firſt motions are the weakeſt; but this Sin is born in its full ſtrength, 'tis ſtrongeſt at firſt; withſtand it then, and it falls before you. Thus learn to keep your Hearts when Provocations ariſe.

9 Seaſon. The ninth Seaſon of exerting our greateſt diligence, "Is the critical hour of Temp-"tation, wherein Satan lays cloſe Siege to the "Fort-Royal of a Chriſtians Heart, and often "ſurpriſes it for want of watchfulneſs: To keep "thy Heart now, is no leſs a Mercy than a Duty; "few Chriſtians are ſo well skilled in detecting "the fallacies, and retorting the Arguments by "which Satan uſes to draw them to Sin, as to "come off ſafe in thoſe Encounters. Watch and "Pray (ſaith our Lord) leſt ye enter into tempta-"tion, Mark 14. 38. Even an eminent David, "and a wiſe Solomon, have ſmarted for their care-"leſsneſs at ſuch a time as this. The ninth Caſe "therefore ſhall be this.

Caſe 9. How a Chriſtian when ſtrongly ſolicited by the Devil to ſin, may keep his Heart from yielding to the Temptation.

Now there are ſix ſpecial Arguments by which Satan ſubtilly inſinuates and windes in the Temptation; in all which I ſhall offer thee ſome help for the keeping of thy Heart; and the firſt is this:

Arg. 1. The firſt Argument is drawn from the pleaſure of Sin: O (ſaith Satan) here is pleaſure to be enjoyed; the Temptation comes with a ſmiling Countenance, and charming Voice: What, art thou ſo flegmatick and dull a Soul, as not to feel the powerful charms of Pleaſure? Who can withhold himſelf from ſuch delights?

Now thine Heart may be kept from the danger of this Temptation, by retorting this Argument of pleaſure upon the Tempter; which is done two ways.

1. Thou telleſt me, Satan, that Sin is pleaſant; be it ſo: But are the gripes of Conſcience, and the flames of Hell, ſo too? Is it pleaſant to feel the wounds and throbs of Conſcience? If ſo, Why did Peter weep ſo bitterly? Matth. 26. 75. Why did David cry out of broken Bones? Pſal. 51. I hear what thou ſayeſt of the pleaſure of Sin, and I have read what David hath ſaid of the terrible effects of Sin in his Pſalm to bring to remembrance; Pſal. 38. Ver. 2. Thine Arrows ſtick faſt in me, and thy Hand preſſeth me ſore: Ver. 3. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh, becauſe of thine Anger; neither is there any reſt in my Bones, becauſe of my Sin. Ver. 4. For mine Iniquities are gone over mine head as an heavy burden; they are too heavy for me: Ver 5. My wounds ſtink and are corrupt, becauſe of my fooliſhneſs: Ver. 6. I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly, I go mourning all the day long: Ver. 7. My loins are filled with a loathſome Diſeaſe, and there is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh: Ver. 8. I am feeble and ſore broken, I have roared by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of my Heart.

Here I ſee the true face of Sin; if I yield to thy Temptation, I muſt either feel theſe pangs of Conſcience, or the flames of Hell.

2. What talkeſt thou of the pleaſure of Sin, when, by experience, I know there is more true pleaſure in the mortification, than can be in the commiſſion of Sin? O how ſweet is it to pleaſe

God, to obey Conscience, to preserve inward Peace! To be able to say, in this Tryal, I have discovered the sincerity of my Heart; now I know I fear the Lord, now I see that I truly hate Sin. Hath Sin any such delight as this? This will choak that temptation.

Arg. 2. The second Argument is drawn from the secrecy of Sin: O (saith Satan) this Sin will never disgrace thee abroad, none shall know it.

This Argument may be retorted, and the Heart secured thus: Thou sayest, none shall know it; but Satan canst thou find a place void of the Divine Presence for me to sin in? Thus Job secured his Heart from this temptation, Job, 13. 4. Doth he not see my ways, and count all my steps? Therefore he makes a Covenant with his Eyes, vers. 1. After the same manner Solomon teacheth us to retort this temptation, Prov. 5. 20, 21. And why, my Son, wilt thou be ravished with a strange Woman, and embrace the Bosom of a Stranger? For the ways of Man are before the Eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. What if I hide it from the Eyes of all the World for the present? I cannot hide it from God; and the time is at hand, when all the World shall know it too; for the Word assures me, Luke 8. 17. That what now is done in secret, shall be proclaimed as upon the House-top. Besides is not my Conscience as a thousand Witnesses? Do I owe no reverence to my self? Could the Heathen Men say, Turpe quid ausurus, te sine teste time; When thou art tempted to commit sin, fear thy self without any other witness: And shall not I be afraid to sin before mine own Conscience, which always hath a Reproof in its Mouth, or a Pen in its Hand, to record my most secret Actions?

Arg. 3. The third Argument by which Satan tempteth to Sin is taken from the Gain and Profit arising out of it: Why so nice and scrupulous? 'Tis but stretch Conscience a little, and thou mayest make thy self: Now is thy opportunity?

The Heart may be kept from falling into this dangerous Snare, by retorting the Temptation thus: But what Profit will it be, if a Man should gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? Or what shall a Man give in exchange for his Soul? Shall I hazard thee for all the good that is in this World? There is an immortal Spirit dwelling in this fleshly Tabernacle, of more value than all earthly things, which must live to all Eternity, when this World shall lye in white Ashes: A Soul for which Jesus Christ shed his precious and invaluable Blood. I was sent into this World to provide for this Soul; indeed God hath also committed to me the care of my Body, but (as one happily expresses it) with this difference; a Master commits two things to a Servant, the Child and the Child's Cloaths: Will the Master thank the Servant, if he plead, I have kept the Cloaths, but I have neglected the Life of the Child?

Gospel-Glass, p. 3.

Arg. 4. The fourth Argument is drawn from the smallness of the Sin; 'Tis but a little one, a small matter, a trifle; who would stand upon such niceties?

This Argument may be retorted three ways.

1. But is the Majesty of Heaven a little one too? If I commit this Sin, I must offend and wrong a great God, Isa. 40. 15, 16, 17. 22.

2. Is there any little Hell to torment little sinners in? Are not the least Sinners there filled with the fulness of Wrath? O there is great Wrath treasured up for such as the World counts little Sinners.

3. The less the Sin, the less the inducement to commit it: What, shall I break with God for a trifle? Destroy my Peace, wound my Conscience, grieve the Spirit, and all this for nothing? O what madness is this?

Arg. 5. A fifth Argument is drawn from the Grace of God, and hopes of Pardon: Come, God will pass by this as an infirmity, he will not be extream to mark it.

But stay my Heart.

1. Where do I find a Promise of Mercy to Presumptuous Sinners? Indeed for involuntary Surprisals, unavoidable and lamented Infirmities, there is a Pardon of course; but where is the Promise to a daring Sinner, that sins upon Presumption of Pardon? Pause a while, my Soul, upon that Scripture, Numb. 15. 27. 30. And if a Soul Sin through Ignorance, then he shall bring a She-Goat, of the first Year for a Sin-offering, &c. But the Soul that doth ought Presumptuously, the same reproacheth the Lord, and that Soul shall be cut off from among his People.

2. If God be a God of so much Mercy, how dare I abuse so good a God? Shall I take so glorious an Attribute as the Mercy of God is, and abuse it unto sin? Shall I wrong him because he is good, or should not rather the goodness of God lead me to repentance? Rom. 2. 3. There is Mercy with thee, that thou mayest be feared, Psal. 130. 4.

Arg. 6. Lastly, Sometimes Satan encourages to sin from the Examples of good and holy Men, thus, and thus they have sinned and been restored, therefore this may consist with Grace, and I may be saved nevertheless. The danger of this temptation is avoided, and the Heart secured, by retorting the Argument these three ways:

1. Though good Men may commit the same Sin materially, which I am tempted to, yet did ever any good Men venture to sin, upon such a ground and encouragement as this?

2. Did God record these Examples for my imitation, or for my warning? Are they not set as Sea-marks, that I might avoid the Rocks upon which they split? 1 Cor. 10. 6. Now these were Examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

3. Am I willing to feel what they felt for sin? O I dare not follow them in the ways of sin! Longe me vestigia terrent; Lest God should plunge me into the deeps of Horror, into which he cast them.

Thus learn to keep your Hearts in the hour of temptation to sin.

10. Season. "The tenth special Season to keep "the Heart with all diligence, is the time of Spi"ritual darkness and doubting when it is with "the Soul, as it was with Paul in his dangerous "Voyage, neither Sun, nor Moon, nor Stars ap"pears for many days: When by reason of the "hidings of God's Face, the prevalency of Cor"ruption, and the inevidence of Grace, the Soul "is even ready to give up all its hopes and com"forts for lost; to draw sad and desperate Con"clusions upon it self; to call its former com"forts vain delusions; its Grace hypocrisy. When "the serene and clear Heavens are overcast with "dark Clouds, yea filled with Thunders, and ter"rible Tempests, when the poor pensive Soul "sits down and weeps forth this sad Lament, "My Hope is perished from the Lord! Now to keep "the Heart from sinking in such a day as this, "to enable it to maintain its own sincerity, is a "matter of great difficulty. The tenth Case "will be this.

Ca

Case. 10. How the People of God in dark and doubting Seasons, may keep their Hearts from entertaining such sad Conclusions about their Estates, as destroy their Peace, and unfit them for their Duty.

There are two general Heads, to which the Grounds of doubting our Sincerity may be reduced. (1.) God's carriage towards the Soul, either in the time of some extraordinary Affliction, or of some long and sad Desertion. Or, (2.) The Soul's carriage towards God: And here it usually argues against the truth of its own Graces, either (1.) From its relapses into the same Sins, from which it hath formerly risen with shame and sorrow. Or, (2.) From the sensible declining of its affections from God. Or, (3.) From the excess of the Affections towards Creature-comforts and Enjoyments. Or, (4.) From its Enlargements in publick, and often straitnings in private Duties. Or, (5.) From some horrid Injections of Satan, with which the Soul is greatly perplexed. Or, Lastly, from God's silence, and seeming denyal of its long depending Suits and Prayers.

These are the common Grounds of those sad conclusions: Now in order to the establishment and support of the Heart in this condition, it will be necessary,

1. That you be acquainted with some general Truths, which have a tendency to the settlement of a trembling and doubting Soul.

2. That you be rightly instructed about the aforementioned Particulars, which are the grounds of your doubting.

The general Truths requisite for poor doubting Souls to be acquainted with, are these:

1. That every working and appearance of Hypocrisy doth not presently prove the Person in whom it is, to be an Hypocrite. You must carefully distinguish between the Presence and Predominancy of Hypocrisy: There are remains of Deceitfulness in the best Hearts; David and Peter had sad experience of it, yet the standing frame and general bent of the Heart being upright, it did not denominate them Hypocrites.

2. That we ought as well to hear what can be said for us as against us: It is the sin of upright hearts sometimes to use an over-rigid, and mercileſs severity against themselves: They do not indifferently consider the case of their own Souls: It is in this case, as Solomon speaks in another, Prov. 13. 7. There is that maketh himself Rich, and yet hath nothing; and there is that maketh himself Poor, and yet hath great Riches. 'Tis the damning Sin of the self-flattering Hypocrite, to make his condition better than 'tis: And it is the Sin and Folly of some upright ones, to make their condition worse than indeed it is. Why should you be such enemies to your own Peace? To read over the evidences of God's love to your Souls, as a Man doth a Book which he intends to confute? Why do you study to find Evasions, to turn off those comforts which are due to you? 'Tis said of Joseph, that he was minded to put away his espoused Mary, not knowing that that holy thing which was conceived in her, was by the holy Ghost: And this may be your case. And a third Truth is this,

3. That many a Saint hath changed and condemned himself for that, which God will never charge him with, nor condemn him for. Why hast thou hardned our Hearts from thy Fear, (saith the Church) Isa. 63. 17. and yet the Verse before manifests, that their Hearts were not so hardned: Godly Bradford wrote himself an Hypocrite, a painted Sepulchre; yet doubtless God acquitted him of that charge.

4. Every thing which is a ground of Grief to the People of God, is not a sufficient ground of questioning their Sincerity. There are many more things to trouble you, than there are to stumble you: If upon every slip and failing through infirmity, you should question all that ever was wrought upon you, your Life must be made up of doubtings and fears: You can never attain a settled Peace, nor live that Life of praise and thankfulness, the Gospel calls for.

5. The Soul is not at all times fit to pass judgment upon its own condition: To be sure in the dark day of Desertion, when the Soul is benighted; and in the stormy day of Temptation, when the Soul is in a hurry, 'tis utterly unfit to judge its Estate: Examine your Hearts upon your Beds, and be still, Psal. 4. This is rather a Season for watching and resisting, than for judging and determining.

6. That every breach of Peace with God, is not a breach of Covenant with God. The Wife hath many weaknesses and failings, often grieves and displeases her Husband; yet in the main is faithful, and truly loves him: These failings may cause him to alter his Carriage, but not to withdraw his Love, or deny his Relation. Return, O backsliding Israel, for I am Marryed unto you.

7. Lastly, Whatever our sin, or trouble be, it should rather drive us to God, than from God. Pardon my Sin for it is great, Psal. 25. 11. Suppose it be true, that thou hast so and so sinned, that thou art thus long and sadly deserted: Yet 'tis a false Inference, that therefore thou shouldest be discouraged, as if there were no help for thee in thy God. When you have well digested these seven establishing Truths, if still the doubt remain, then consider, what may be replyed to the particular grounds of these Doubts. As,

1. You doubt, and are ready to conclude, the Lord hath no regard or love for your Souls, because of some extraordinary affliction which is come upon you: But I would not have thy Soul so to conclude, till thou be able satisfactorily to answer these three Questions.

1. Quest. If great Troubles and Afflictions be marks of God's hatred, why should not impunity and constant Prosperity be tokens of his Love? For contrariorum contraria est ratio & consequentia? of contrary things, there is a contrary reason and consequence: But is this so indeed? or saith not the Scripture quite otherwise? Prov. 1. 32. The Prosperity of Fools destroy them. So Psal. 73. 5.

2. Quest. Dare I draw the same Conclusion upon all others that have been as much, yea more afflicted than my self? If this Argument concludes against thee, then so it doth against every one in thy condition; yea, the greater the Affliction of any Child of God hath been, the more strongly the Argument still concludes: And then woe to David, Job, Haman, Paul, and all that have been afflicted as they were.

3. Quest. Had God exempted you only from those Troubles, which all other his People feel, would not that have been a greater ground of doubting to you than this? Especially since the Scripture saith, Heb. 12. 8. If ye be without Chastenings, whereof all are partakers, then are ye Bastards, and not Sons.

Oh how is our Father put to it by froward Children! If he afflicts, then one cryes he loves me not: If he exempt from Affliction, others question his his love upon that ground. Surely you have other work to do under the Rod than this.

2. Or do you rashly infer the Lord hath no love for you, because he hides his Face from you; that your condition is miserable, because dark and uncomfortable? Before you draw such rash Conclusions, see what Answer you can give to these Four following Queries.

1. Quer. If any Action of God towards his People will bear a favourable, as well as a harsh and severe construction, why should not his People interpret it in the best sense? And is not this such? May he not have a design of Love, as well as of Hatred, in this Dispensation? May he not depart for a Season, and not for ever; yea, that he might not depart for ever? You are not the first that have mistaken God's ends in Desertion, Isa. 49. 14. Sion said, the Lord hath forsaken me, my God hath forgotten me: Was it so indeed? Nothing less, Vers. 15. Can a Mother forget, &c.

2. Quer. Do you find the marks of an absolute, total and final Desertion upon your own Spirits, that you are so apt to conclude yours to be such? Do you find your Heart inclined to forsake God? Have you lost your conscientious tenderness in point of Sin? If so, sad Characters appear upon you indeed; but if in this dark Hour you are as tender of Sin as ever, as much resolved to cleave to God as ever; I cannot, I will not forsake God, let him do what he will with me; Oh no, I cannot. If your Hearts work thus, it can be but a partial, limited, and temporary Desertion; by this he still keeps his Interest in your Hearts, a sure sign he will return, and visit you again.

3. Quer. Is Sense and Feeling a competent Judge of God's Actions and Designs? Or may a Man safely rely upon its Testimony after so many Discoveries of the Infallibility of it? Is this a sound Argument? If God had any love for my Soul, if it were not quite gone, I should feel it now as well as in former times; but I cannot feel it, therefore it's quite gone. Do not you know the Sun still keeps on his Course in the Heavens, even in full and close Weather, when you cannot see it? And may it not be so with the Love of God? Read Isa. 50. 10. May not I as well conclude in Winter, when the Flowers have hid their beautiful Heads under Ground, they are quite dead and gone, because I cannot find them in December, where I saw them in May?

4. Quer. Think you the Lord cares not to break his Childrens Hearts; and his own Promise too? Hath he no more regard to either? If he return no more, these must be the consequents, Isa. 57. 16, 17. Heb. 13. 5.

Well then, from God's Carriage towards you, either in Affliction or Desertion, no such Discouraging, Heart-sinking Conclusions can be inferr'd. Next let us see whether they may not be inferr'd from our Carriage towards God: And here the principal Grounds of Doubting are such as these:

1. I have fallen again into the same Sin from which I have formerly risen with Repentance and Resolution, therefore my Sinning is customary Sinning, a Spot that is not the Spot of God's Children: Hence the upright Soul trembles; upon this 'tis ready to affirm, that all its former Humiliations for, and Oppositions unto Sin, were but Acts of Hypocrisy. But stay, poor trembling Heart:

1. Quer. If this be so, how comes it to pass that Christ put such a favourable Construction upon the Disciples sleeping the third time, when he had as often reproved them for it? Matth. 26. 40, 41. And how is it that we find in Scripture so many Promises made not only to the first Sins, but also to the Backslidings of God's People? Jer. 3. 22. Hos. 14. 4.

2. Quer. Is not your Repentance and Care renewed as often as your Guilt is renewed? Yea, the oftner you sin, the more you are troubled; it is not so in customary Sinning, the rise whereof Bernard excellently discovers: 1. (saith he) when a Man accustomed to good, sinneth grievously, it seems insupportable, yea, he seems to descend alive into Hell. 2. In process of time it seems not insupportable, but heavy; and betwixt insupportable and heavy there is no small Descent. 3. Next it becomes light, his Conscience smites but faintly, and he feels not the Stripes of it. 4. Then there is not only a total insensibleness of it, but that which was bitter and displeasing, is now become sweet and pleasing in some degree. 5. Then 'tis turned into Custom, and not only pleases, but dayly pleases. Lastly, Custom is turned in Nature, he cannot be pulled away from it; but defends and pleads for it: This is customary sinning, this is the way of the Wicked; but the quite contrary is our condition. Lib. de Conf. p. 1. 109.

3. Quer. Are you sure from Scripture Grounds that good Men may not relapse again and again into the same Sin? 'Tis true, as for gross Sins, they do not use to relapse into them. David committed Adultery no more: Paul persecuted the Church no more: Peter denyed Christ no more: But I speak of ordinary Infirmities: Job's Friends were good Men yet (saith he) Chap. 19. 3. These ten times have ye reproached me. So then no such Conclusions follow from this first Ground of Doubting.

2. The second Ground is the Declining and Withering of our Affections to spiritual Things. O (saith the upright Soul) if ever I had been planted a right Seed, I should have been as a green Olive Tree in the House of my God; but my Branches wither, therefore my Root is naught. But stay,

1. Quer. May you not be mistaken about the decay of Grace, and fading of your Affections? What if they be not so quick and ravishing as at first; may not that be recompenced in the Spirituality and Solidity of them now? Phil. 1. 9. I pray God your Love may abound more and more in all Judgment. It may be more solid, though not so fervent. Or do you not mistake, by looking forward to what you would be, rather than backward to what once you were? 'Tis a good Note of Ames, to discern the growth of Grace, as the growth of Plants, which we perceive rather Crevisse quam Crescere, to have grown, than to grow.

2. Quer. But grant it be so indeed as you affirm, must it needs follow, that the Root of the matter is not in you? David's last ways are distinguished from his first, 2 Cor. 17. 3. and yet both first and last a holy Man. The Church of Ephesus is charged by Christ for leaving her first Love, and yet a golden Candlestick, many precious Saints in that Church, Rev. 2. 2, 3, 4.

3. A third Ground of these sad Conclusions, is the Excess of our Affections to some Creature Enjoyments. I fear, I love the Creature more than God; and if so, my Love is but Hypocritical: I sometimes feel stronger, and more sensible Motions of my Heart to earthly Comforts, than I do to heavenly Objects; therefore my Soul is not upright in me. But stay my Soul,

1. Q

1. Quer. May not a Man love God more ſolidly and ſtrongly than the Creature, and yet his Affections to the Creatures be ſometimes moved more violently and ſenſibly than toward God? As rooted Malice argues a ſtronger Hatred, than a ſudden, though more violent Paſſion: So we muſt meaſure our Love, not by a violent motion of it, now and then, but by the depth of the Root, and conſtancy of its Actings; becauſe David was ſo paſſionately moved for Abſalom, Joab concludes that if he had lived, and all the People dyed, it would have pleaſed him well, 2 Sam. 19. 7. But that was argued more like a Soldier than a Logician.

2. Quer. If you indeed love the Creature for it ſelf, if you make it your End, and Religion but a Means, then the Concluſion is rightly drawn upon you. But if you love the Creature in reference to God, and ſee nothing in it ſeparated from him, though ſometimes your Affections offend in the exceſs; this is conſiſtent with ſincere Love to God. To love the Creature inordinately, (i. e.) to put it in God's room, and make it a Man's end: This is the Love of a carnal Heart, to Love it immoderately, that is, to let out more Affection to it than we ought, is ſometimes the Sin of the beſt Hearts.

3. Quer. Have not many Souls feared as you do, but when Chriſt and Creatures ſhall ſtand as Competitors in ſome eminent Tryal, they ſhould forſake Chriſt rather than the Creature; and yet when brought to that Dilemma, have been able to caſt all the World at their Heels for Chriſt? Many of the Martyrs had ſuch fears, and thus they were ſatisfyed: The prevalency of Love is beſt ſeen at parting; there may be more Love to Chriſt in thy Soul than thou art now aware of; and if God bring thee to ſuch a touch, thou mayeſt ſee it.

4. A Fourth Ground of theſe ſad Concluſions is from hence, that we find our Heart ſometimes more ſtraitned in private, than in publick Duties. Thus if my Soul were ſincere, its actings in Duty would be uniform. I fear I am but a Phariſee upon this Ground. 'Tis ſad indeed we ſhould at any time find our Hearts ſtraitned in private; but,

1. Query Do not all thine Enlargements in Duty whether Publick, or Private, depend upon the Spirit, who is the Lord of Influences, and according as he breathes out, or holds back thoſe Influences, ſo art thou enlarged or ſtraitned? And what if ſometimes he chuſe to give that in a publick, which he withholds in a private Duty, as long as thy Soul is ſatisfyed in neither, without Communion with him, and the ſtraitneſs of thy Heart is indeed its burden? Doth that argue thee to be an Hypocrite.

2. Quer. Doſt thou not make Conſcience of private Duties, and ſet thy ſelf as before the Lord in them? Indeed, if thou live in the conſtant Neglect or careleſs Performance of them, if thou art curious at Publick, and careleſs about Private Duties, it would be a ſad Sign: But when you have conſcientiouſly performed, and often met with God in them, it will not follow you are inſincere becauſe that Communion is ſometimes interrupted.

3. Quer. May there not be ſomething at ſometimes in Publick, which is wanting in a Private Duty, to the end and advantage thine Affections? God may ſometimes make uſe of the melting Affections of them with whom thou heareſt or prayeſt, as petty Inſtruments to move thy Affections; this advantage is wanting in private: Therefore from hence (the caſe ſo ſtanding) no ſuch inference can be drawn.

5. Another ground is from thoſe horrid Injections of Satan with which the Soul is greatly perplexed; by theſe I may ſee what an Heart I have: Can Grace be where theſe are?

Yes, Grace may be where ſuch Thoughts are, though not where they are lodg'd and conſented to: Doſt thou cry out under the Burden? Enter thy proteſt in Heaven againſt them; ſtrive to keep up holy and reverend Thoughts of God? Then 'tis a Rape, not a voluntary Proſtitution.

6. The laſt Ground of theſe ſad Concluſions, is the Lord's long ſilence, and ſeeming denyal of our long depending Suits and Prayers. O if God had any regard to my Soul, he would have heard my cryes before now! But I have no anſwer from him, therefore no intereſt in him. But ſtay doubting Soul.

1. Quer. Have not many Saints ſtumbled upon this Stone before thee? Pſal. 31. 22. I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off from before thine Eyes: Nevertheleſs thou heardeſt the Voice of my Supplication. So the Church, Lam. 3. 44. "Thou covereſt thy ſelf "with a Cloud, that our Prayers ſhould not paſs "through, Jonah 2. 4. Then ſaid I, I am caſt out of thy ſight. And may not you be miſtaken in this matter as well as they?

2. Quer. Though God's abhorring, and final rejecting Prayer, be an Argument of his abhorring the Perſon that prays; yet dare we conclude ſo from a meer ſuſpenſion of the Anſwer? God may bear long with his own Elect, that cry unto him Day and Night, Luke 18. 7.

3. Quer. Can you deny but that there are ſome Signs appearing in your Souls, even whilſt God ſuſpends his anſwer, that argue your Prayers are not rejected by him? as (1.) Though no Anſwer come, yet you are ſtill reſolved to wait: You dare not ſay as that profane Wretch did, 2 Kings 6. 33. This evil is of the Lord, why ſhould I wait for him any longer? (2.) You can clear and juſtify God ſtill, and lay the reaſon and cauſe of his ſilence upon your ſelves. So did David, Pſal. 22. 2, 3. O my God, I cry in the day time, and thou heareſt not; and in the Night, and am not ſilent, but thou art holy, &c. (3.) The ſuſpenſion of God's Anſwer makes you inquiſitive into your own Hearts, what Evils are there that obſtruct your Prayers: So the Church, Lamen. 3. 8. He ſhutteth out my Prayer: And how doth he this Work? You may ſee, v. 40. Let us ſearch and try our ways: Well then, neither from hence may you conclude that God hath no love for your Souls.

And thus I have ſhewn you, how to keep your Hearts in a dark and doubting ſeaſon from thoſe deſperate Concluſions of Unbelief. God forbid any falſe Heart ſhould encourage it ſelf from theſe things, 'tis our unhappineſs that when we give Saints and Sinners their proper Portions, that each of them are ſo prone to take up the others part.

Caution.

11. Seaſon. "The eleventh ſpecial Seaſon calling for this diligence to keep our Hearts, is, "when ſufferings for Religion come to an height, "then look to your Hearts. Mat. 24. 8, 9, 10. "All theſe are the beginning of Sorrows, and they ſhall deliver you up to be afflicted, and ſhall kill you; and ye ſhall be hated of all Nations for my Name's ſake; and THEN ſhall many be offended. "When ſufferings for Religion grow hot, then "Bleſſed is he that is not offended in Chriſt, trou" bles are then at an height. (1.) When a Man's " neareſt Friends and Relations forſake and leave " him, Mich. 7. 5, 6. 2 Tim. 4. 16. When a " Man is engaged alone. (2.) When it comes to " reſiſting to Blood, Heb. 12. 4. (3.) When temp- " tations are preſented to us in our ſufferings, Heb. " 11. 37. (4.) When eminent Perſons for Pro- " feſſion turn aſide, and delert the cauſe of Chriſt, " 2 Tim. 2. 19. (5.) When God hides his Face " in a ſuffering Hour, Jer. 17. 17. (6.) When " Satan falls upon us with ſtrong Temptations, " to queſtion the Grounds of our Sufferings, or " the Soul's Intereſt in Chriſt: Now 'tis hard to " keep the Heart from turning back, and the ſteps " from declining God's ways. The eleventh Que- " ſtion then ſhall be this:

11. Caſe. How the Heart may be kept from relapſing under the greateſt ſufferings for Religion? If the bitterneſs of ſufferings at any time cauſe thy Soul to diſtaſte the way of God, and take up thoughts of forſaking it, ſtay thine Heart under that Temptation, by propounding theſe eight Queſtions ſolemnly to it.

1. Queſt. What reproach and diſhonour ſhall I pour upon Chriſt and Religion, by deſerting him at ſuch a time as this? This will proclaim to all the World, that how much ſoever I have boaſted of the Promiſes, yet when it comes to the Tryal, I dare hazard nothing upon the credit of them: And how will this open the Mouths of Chriſt's Enemies to blaſpheme? O better had I never been born, than that worthy Name ſhould be blaſphemed through me! Shall I furniſh the Triumphs of the Uncircumciſed? Shall I make Mirth in Hell? O if I did but value the Name of Chriſt as much as many a wicked Man halves his own Name, I would never endure to ſee it expoſed in ſuch Contempt! Will proud Duſt and Aſhes venture Death, yea Hell, rather than a blot upon their Name? And ſhall I venture nothing to ſalve the Honour and Reputation of Chriſt?

2. Queſt. Dare I violate my Conſcience to ſave my Fleſh? Who ſhall comfort me when Conſcience wounds me? What comfort is there in Life, Liberty, or Friends, when Peace is taken away from the Inner Man? When Conſtantius threatned to cut off Samoſatenus's right hand, if he would not ſubſcribe ſomewhat that was againſt his Conſcience, he held up both his Hands to the Meſſenger than was ſent, ſaying, he ſhall cut off both rather than I will do it: Farewel all Peace, Joy and Comfort, from that day forward, Had Zimri Peace that ſlew his Maſter? ſaid Jezebel: So ſay I here, had Judas Peace? Had Spira Peace? And ſhall you have Peace, if you tread in their ſteps? O conſider what you do!

3. Queſt. Is it the publick Intereſt of Chriſt and Religion, infinitely more than any private Intereſt of my own? 'Tis a famous paſſage that of Tercatius, Captain to Adrian the Emperor, he preſented a Petition to Adrian, that the Chriſtians might have a Temple by themſelves to Worſhip God apart from the Arians: The Emperor tore his Petition and threw it away, bidding him to ask ſomewhat for himſelf, and it ſhould be granted: But he modeſtly gathered up the pieces of his Petition again, and told him, If he could not be heard in God's Cauſe, he would never ask any thing for himſelf. Yea, even Tully, though an Heathen, could ſay, Ne immortalitatem quidem contra rem publicam. He would not accept even of Immortality it ſelf againſt the Common-wealth. O if we had more publick, we ſhould not have ſuch Cowardly Spirits!

4. Queſt. Did Jeſus Chriſt ſerve me ſo, when for my ſake he expoſed himſelf to far greater Sufferings than can be, before me? His Sufferings were great indeed, he ſuffered from all Hands, in all his Offices, in every Member, not only in his Body, but in his Soul; yea, the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his Sufferings: Witneſs the bloody Sweat in the Garden; witneſs that Heart-melting and Heaven-rending out-cry upon the Croſs, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? And yet he flinched not, he endured the Croſs, deſpiſing the Shame. Alas! what are my Sufferings compared with Chriſt's? he hath drunk up all that Vinegar and Gall that would make my Sufferings bitter. When one of the Martyrs was asked, why he was ſo merry at his Death? Oh, ſaid he, it is becauſe the Soul of Chriſt was ſo heavy at his Death. Did Chriſt bear ſuch a burden for me, with unbroken Patience and Conſtancy? And ſhall I ſhrink back from momentary light Afflictions for him?

5. Queſt. Is not eternal Life worth the ſuffering of a moments Pain? If I ſuffer with him, I ſhall reign with him. O how will Men venture Life and Limb for a fading Crown, ſwim through Seas of Blood to a Throne? And will I venture nothing? Suffer nothing for the Crown of Glory that fadeth not away? My Dog will follow my Horſes heels from Morning to Night, take many a weary ſtep through Mire and Dirt, rather than leave me, though at Night all he gets by it is but Bones and Blows. If my Soul had any true Greatneſs, any ſparks of Generoſity in it, how would it deſpiſe the ſufferings of the Way, for the glory of the End! How would it break down all difficulties before it, whilſt by an eye of Faith it ſees the Forerunner, who is already entered, ſtanding as it were upon the Walls of Heaven, with the Crown in his hand, ſaying, He that overcometh ſhall inherit all things: Come on then, my Soul, come on, there is eternal Life laid up for them that by patient continuance in well doing, ſeek for Glory, Honour and Immortality, Rom. 2. 7.

6. Queſt. Can I ſo eaſily caſt off the ſociety and company of the Saints, and give the right hand of fellowſhip to the Wicked? How can I part with ſuch lovely Companions as theſe have been? How often have I been benefited by their Counſels? Eccl. 10. 3. How often refreſhed, warmed and quickned by their Company? Eccleſ. 4. 10, 11. How often have I faſted and prayed with them? What ſweet Counſel have I taken with them, and gone to the Houſe of God in company? And ſhall I now ſhake hands with them, and ſay, Farewel all ye Saints for ever, I ſhall never be among you more; come Drunkards, Swearers, Blaſphemers, Perſecutors, you ſhall be my everlaſting Companions? O rather let my Body and Soul be rent aſunder, than that ever I ſhould ſay thus to the excellent of the Earth, in whom is all my delight.

7. Queſt. Have I ſeriouſly conſidered the terrible Scripture-Comminations againſt Backſliders? O my Heart! Dareſt thou turn thy back upon the very points of ſuch Threatnings as theſe? Jer. 17. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the Man that truſteth in Man, and maketh Fleſh his Arm; and whoſe Heart departeth from the Lord, for he ſhall be like the Heath in the Deſart, and ſhall not ſee when good cometh, (i. e.) the Curſe of God ſhall wither him Root and Branch. And Heb. 14. 26, 27. If we ſin wilfully, after we have received the Knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more Sacrifice for Sin, but a certain fearful looking for Judgment, and fiery Indignation, which ſhall devour the Adverſaries. And again, verſ. 38. If any Man draw back, my ſhall have no pleaſure in him: As if he ſhould ſay, Take him World, take him Devil for your own, I have no delight in him. O who dare draw back, when God hedged up the way with ſuch terrible threats as theſe!

Queſt. 8. Can I look Chriſt in the Face, at the day of Judgment, if I deſert him now?

He that is aſhamed of me and of my Words, in this adulterous and ſinful Generation, of him ſhall the Son of Man be aſhamed, when he cometh in the Glory of his Father, with the holy Angels, Mark 8. 38. Yet a little while, and you ſhall ſee the Sign of the Son of Man coming in the Clouds of Heaven with Power and great Glory; the laſt Trump ſhall ſound, the Dead, both Small and Great, even all that ſleep in the Duſt ſhall awake, and come before that great white Throne, on which Chriſt ſhall ſit in that Day. And now do but imagine thou ſaweſt the trembling Knees, and quivering Lips of guilty Sinners; imagine thou heardeſt the dreadful Sentence of the Judge upon them, Go ye curſed, &c. And then a cry, the weeping, wailing, and wringing of Hands, that there ſhall be: Wouldſt thou deſert Chriſt now to protract a poor, miſerable Life on Earth? If the Word of God be true, if the Sayings of Chriſt be ſealed and faithful, this ſhall be the Portion of the Apoſtate. 'Tis an eaſy thing to ſtop the Mouth of Conſcience now, but will it be eaſy to ſtop the Mouth of the Judge then? Thus keep thy Heart, that it depart not from the living God.

Seaſ. 12. The Twelfth Seaſon of looking diligently to our Hearts, and keeping them with greateſt Care is the time of Sickneſs: "When a Child of God draws nigh to Eternity, when there are but a few Sands more in the Upper-part of his Glaſs to run down: Now Satan buſily beſtirs himſelf; of him it may be ſaid, as of the natural Serpent, Nunquam niſi moriens producitur in longum; he is never ſeen at his full Length till dying: And now his great Deſign, ſince he cannot win the Soul from God, is to diſcourage, and make it unwilling to go to God, though the gracious Soul, with Jacob, ſhould then rouſe up it ſelf upon a dying Bed, and rejoyce that the Marriage Day of the Lamb is now almoſt come; though it ſhould then ſay with dying Auſtin, Vivere renuo ut Chriſto vivam; I deſpiſe Life to be with Chriſt. Or as dying Milius, when one asked him, whether he were willing to dye? O, ſaid he, illius eſt nolle mori, qui nolit ire ad Chriſtum; let him be unwilling to dye, who is unwilling to go to Chriſt. But O! what ſhrinking from Death? What lothneſs to depart, may ſometimes (indeed too frequently) be obſerved in the People of God? How loth are ſome of them to take Death by the cold hand? If ſuch a Liberty were indulged to us, not to be diſſolved till we diſſolve our ſelves; when ſhould we ſay with St. Paul, I deſire to be diſſolved? Well then, the laſt Caſe ſhall be this.

Caſe 12. How the People of God in Times of Sickneſs may get their Hearts looſe from all earthly Enjoyements, and perſwade them into a Willingneſs to

And there are ſeven Arguments, which I ſhall give upon the People of God at ſuch a Time as this, to make them chearfully entertain the Meſſengers of Death, and dye, as well as live, like Saints: And the firſt is this:

Arg. Firſt the harmleſneſs of Death to the People of God, Though it keeps its Dart, it hath loſt its Sting: A Saint (to allude to that, Iſa. 11. 8.) May play upon the hole of the Aſpe, and put his Hand into the Cockatrices Den. Death is the Cockatrice, or Aſp, the Grave is his Hole or Den; a Saint need not fear to put his Hand boldly into it: It hath left and loſt its Sting in the Sides of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O Death! Where is thy Sting? Why art thou afraid, O Saint, that this Sickneſs may be thy Death, as long as thou knoweſt that the Death of Chriſt is the Death of Death? Indeed, if thou didſt lye in thy Sins, as Job. 8. 21. If Death, as a King, did reign over thee, Rom. 5. 14. If it could feed upon thee, as the Lyon doth upon the Prey he hath taken, as Pſal. 49. 14. If Hell followed the Pale Horſe, as it is, Rev. 6. 8. Then though mighteſt well ſtartle and ſhrink back from it, but when God hath put away thy Sins from thee, as far as the Eaſt is from the Weſt, Pſal. 103. 12. As long as there is no other Evil left in Death, for thee to encounter with, but Bodily Pain; as long as the Scriptures repreſent it to thee under ſuch harmleſs and eaſy Notions, as the putting off thy Cloaths, 2 Cor. 5. 2. And lying down to ſleep upon the Bed, Iſa. 57. 2. Why ſhouldeſt thou be afraid? There is as much Difference betwixt Death to the People of God, and others, as betwixt the Unicorn's Horn, when it is upon the Head of that fierce Beaſt, and when it is in the Apothecary's Shops, where it is made Salubrious and Medicinal.

2. Arg. Thy Heart may be kept from ſhrinking back at ſuch a time as this, by conſidering the Neceſſity of Death, in order to the full Fruition of God.

Whether thou art willing to dye or no, I aſſure thee there is no other way to obtain the full ſatisfaction of thy Soul, and compleat its Happineſs till the hand of Death do thee the kind Office to draw aſide the Curtain or Fleſh, thy Soul cannot ſee God: This Animal Life ſtands betwixt him and thee, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Whilſt we are at home in the Body, we are abſent from the Lord. Thy Body muſt be refined and caſt into a new Mould, elſe that new Wine of heavenly Glory would break it. Paul in his higheſt Rapture, 2 Cor. 12. 4. when he heard Things unutterable, was then but as a Stander-by, a Looker on, not admitted into the Company as one of them; but as the Angels are in our Aſſemblies, ſo was Paul in that glorious Aſſembly above, and no otherwiſe; and yet even for this he muſt, as it were, be taken out of the Body, uncloathed for a little Time, to have a Glimpſe of that Glory, and then put on his Cloaths again. O then! Who would not be willing to dye for a full Sight and Enjoyment of God? Methinks thy Soul ſhould look and ſigh, like a Priſoner, through the Grates of this Mortality; O that I had Wings like a Dove, then would I fly away, and be at reſt: Moſt Men need Patience to dye, but a Saint that underſtands what Death admits him to, ſhould rather need Patience to live; methinks he ſhould often look out, and liſten on a Death-bed for his Lord's Coming; and when he receives the News of his approaching Change, ſhould ſay, The Voice of my Beloved! Behold, he cometh leaping over the Mountains, skipping over the Hills, Cant. 2. 8.

Arg. 3. Another Argument perſwading to this willingneſs, is the immediate Succeſſion of a more excellent and glorious Life.

'Tis but wink, and you ſhall ſee God: Your Happineſs ſhall not be deferred till the Reſurrection; but as ſoon as the Body is dead, the gracious Soul is ſwallowed up in Life, Rom. 8. 10, 11. When once you have looſed from this Shore in a few

few Moments, your Souls will be wafted over upon the Wings of Angels to the other shore of a Glorious Eternity. Phil. 1. 23. I desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ. Did the Soul and Body dye together, as Berilius taught; or did they sleep till the Resurrection, as others have groundlesly fancyed; it had been a Madness for Paul to desire a Dissolution for the enjoyment of Christ: For if this were so, he enjoyed more of Christ whilst his Soul dwelt in its fleshly Tabernacle than he should out of it.

There are but two ways of the Souls living known in Scripture, viz. The Life of Faith, and the Life of Vision, 1 Cor. 5. 5. Those two divide all Time, both present and future, betwixt them, 1 Cor. 13. 12. If when Faith fails, Sight should not immediately succeed, what should become of the unbodyed Soul? But blessed be God this great Heart-establishing Truth is evidently revealed in Scripture, Luk. 23. 43. You have Christ's Promise, John 14. 3. I will come and receive you to my self. O what a Change will a few Moments make upon your condition? Rouse up, dying Saint, when thy Soul is come out a little farther; when it shall stand like Abraham at its Tent Door, the Angels of God shall soon be with it: The Souls of the Elect are, as it were, put out to the Angels to Nurse, and when they dye, these Angels carry them home again to their Fathers House: If an Angel were caused to fly swiftly to bring a Saint the Answer of his Prayer, Dan. 9. 22. How much more will the Angels come post from Heaven to receive and transfer the praying Soul it self?

4 Arg. Farther, It may much conduce to thy willingness to dye, to consider, That by Death, God oftentimes hides his People out of the way of all Temptations and Troubles upon Earth, Rev. 14. 13. Write, from henceforth, Blessed are the Dead that dye in the Lord. 'Tis God's usual way, when some extraordinary Calamities are coming upon the World, to set his People out of harms way before hand, Isa. 57. 1. Merciful Men are taken away from the evil to come. So Mich. 7. 1, 2. When such an evil time comes as is there described, That they all lye in wait for Blood, and every Man hunts his Brother in a Net: Before that, God by an Act of favour houses his People before hand: Dost thou know what evil may be in the Earth, which thou art so loth to leave? Thy God removes thee for thy great advantage; thou art disbanded by Death, and called off the Field; other poor Saints must stand to it, and endure a great fight of afflictions.

'Tis observed that Methusala dyed the very Year before the Flood; Augustin, a little before the sacking of Hippo, Pareus just before the taking of Heydelburgh: Luther observes that all the Apostles dyed before the Destruction of Jerusalem, and Luther himself before the Wars broke out in Germany: It may be the Lord sees thy tender Heart cannot endure to see the misery, or bear the Temptations that are coming, and therefore will now gather thee to thy Grave in Peace; and yet wilt thou cry, O spare me a little longer?

5 Arg. If yet thy Heart hang back, consider the great advantage you will have by Death, above all that ever you enjoyed on Earth; and that (1) As to your Communion with God: (2) As to your Communion with Saints.

1. For your Communion with God: The time of perfecting that is now come: Thy Soul shall shortly stand before the Face of God, and have the immediate emanations and beamings forth of his Glory upon it; here thy Soul is remote from God, the beams of his Glory strike it but obliquely and feebly, but shortly it will be under the Line, and there the Sun shall stand still, as it did in Gibeon; there shall be no cloudings, nor declinings of it: O how should this wrap thy Soul with desires of being uncloathed!

2. As for the enjoyment of Saints, here indeed we have Fellowship with them of the lower Form; but that Fellowship is so disswetned by remaining Corruptions, that there is no satisfaction in it: As it is the greatest plague that can befal an Hypocrite that lives in a pure Church, so 'tis the greatest vexation to the Spirit of a Saint, to live in a corrupt and disorder d Church; but when Death hath admitted you into that Glorious Assembly of the Spirits of Just Men made perfect, you shall have the desire of your Hearts: Here you cannot fully close one with another; yea, you cannot fully close with your own Souls: O what Discords, Jarrings, Censurings are here? What perfect blessed Harmony there? In Heaven each Saint loves another as himself, they are altogether lovely. O my Soul, haste thee away from the Lyons Dens, from the Mountains of Bether, from divided Saints, to those Mountains of Myrrhe, and Hills of Franckincense: Thou art now going unto thine own People, as the Apostles Phrase imports, 2 Cor. 5. 8.

6 Arg. If this will not do, Consider what heavy burthens Death will ease thy shoulders of.

In this Tabernacle we groan, being burthen'd (1) With bodily Distempers; how true do we find that of Theophrastus, The Soul pays a dear Rent for the Tenement it now lives in? But Glorifyed Bodies are clogged with no Indispositions: Death is the best Physician, it will cure thee of all Diseases at once. (2) With the indwelling of Sin; this makes us groan from the very Bowels, Rom. 7. 24. But he that is dead, is free from Sin, Rom. 6. 7. Hath Justification destroyed its Damning Power, and Sanctification its Reigning Power? Glorification destroys its very Being and Existence. (3) We groan under Temptations here, but as soon as we are out of the Body, we are out of the reach of Temptation: When thou art once got into Heaven, thou may'st say, Now Satan, I am there where thou canst not come; for as the Damned in Hell are malo obformati, so fixed in Sin and Misery, that there condition cannot be altered; so Glorifyed Saints are bono confirmati; so fixed in Holiness and Glory, that they cannot be shaken. (4) Here we groan under various Troubles and Afflictions, but then the Days of our Mourning are ended. God shall wipe away all tears from our Eyes: O then let us haste away, that we may be at rest.

7 Arg. If still thou linger like Lot in Sodom, then lastly, Examine all the Pleas and Pretences for a longer time on Earth, Why art thou unwilling to Dye?

1 Object. Oh I have many Relations in the World, I know not what will become of them when I am gone.

Sol. 1. If thou art troubled about their Bodies and outward Condition, Why should not the Word satisfy thee, Jer. 49. 11. Leave thy Fatherless Children to me, I will keep them alive, and let thy Widows trust in me. Luther in his last Will and Testament hath this Expression, "Lord, thou hast given me Wife and Children, I have no thing to leave them, but I commit them unto thee. O Father of the Fatherless, and Judge of Widows, Nutri, Serva, Doce; Nourish, Keep and Teach them. Or, art thou troubled their Souls? Thou canſt not convert them, if thou ſhouldſt live, and God can make thy Prayers and Counſels to live, and take Place upon them when thou art dead.

2. Object. I would fain live to do God more Service in the World.

Sol. Well, but if he have no more Service for thee to do here, why ſhouldſt thou not ſay with David: If he have no delight to uſe me any farther, here am I, let him do what ſeemeth him good. In this World thou haſt no more to do, but he is calling thee to an higher Service and Employment in Heaven; and what thou ſhouldſt do for him here, he can do that by other Hands.

3. Object. I am not yet fully ready, I am not as a Bride compleatly adorned for the Bride-room.

Sol. 1. Thy Juſtification is compleat already, though thy Sanctification be not ſo; and the way to make it ſo, is to dye; for till then, it will have Defects and Wants.

4. Object. O but I want Aſſurance if I had that, could dye preſently!

Sol. 1. Yea, there it ſticks indeed; but then conſider, that an hearty Willingneſs to leave all the World to be freed from Sin, and be with God is the next way to that deſired Aſſurance; no rational Perſon was ever willing to dye upon this Ground.

And thus I have finiſh'd thoſe Caſes which ſo nearly concern the People of God, in the ſeveral Conditions of their Life, and taught them how to keep their Hearts in all. I ſhall next apply the Whole.

I. Uſe of Information.

YOU have heard, that the keeping of the Heart is the great Work of a Chriſtian, in which the very Soul and Life of Religion conſiſts, without which all other Duties are of no value with God; hence then I ſhall infer, to the Conviction of Hypocrites and formal Profeſſors. That the Pains and Labours which many Perſons have taken in Religion is but loſt labour, and pains to no purpoſe, ſuch as will never turn to account.

Many great Services have been performed, many glorious Works are wrought by Men, which are utterly rejected by God, and ſhall never come upon Record, in order to an eternal Acceptation, becauſe they took no heed to keep their Hearts with God in thoſe Duties: This is that Rock, upon which thouſands of vain Profeſſors ſplit themſelves eternally; they are curious about the externals of Religion, but regardleſs of their Hearts. O how many Hours have ſome Profeſſors ſpent in Hearing, Praying, Reading, Conference? And yet, as to the main end of Religion, God they had ſat ſtill and done nothing; for all ſignifyes nothing, the great Work, I mean the Work, being all the while neglected; tell me thou vain Profeſſor, when didſt thou ſhed a Tear for the Deadneſs, Hardneſs, Unbelief, or Carelineſs of thy Heart? Thinkeſt thou ſuch an empty Religion can ſave thee? If ſo we may invert Chriſt's Words, and ſay, Wide is the Gate, and broad is the Way, that leadeth to Life, and many there be that go in thereat: Hear me, thou ſelf-deluding Hypocrite, thou that haſt put off God with heartleſs Duties, thou that haſt acted in Religion as if thou hadſt been Bleſſing an Idol, that could not ſearch and diſcover thy Heart: Thou that haſt offered to God but the Skin of the Sacrifice, not the Marrow, Fat and Inward of it; how wilt thou abide the coming of the Lord: How wilt thou hold up thy Head before him, when he ſhall ſay, O thou diſſembling falſe-hearted Man? How couldſt thou profeſs Religion? With what Face couldſt thou ſo often tell me that thou lovedſt me, when thou kneweſt all the while in thine own Conſcience, that thine Heart was not with me? O tremble to think what a fearful Judgment it is to be given over to a heedleſs and careleſs Heart; and then to have religious Duties inſtead of a Rattle, to quiet and ſtill the Conſcience!

2. Hence I alſo infer for the Humiliation, even of upright Hearts, That unleſs the People of God ſpend more Time and Pains about their Hearts, than generally and ordinarily they do, they are never like to do God much Service, or be Owners of much Comfort in this World.

I may ſay of that Chriſtian, that is remiſs and careleſs in keeping his Heart, as Jacob ſaid of Reuben, Thou ſhalt not excel. It grieves me to ſee how many Chriſtians there are that go up and down dejected, and complaining, that live at a poor low rate; both of Service and Comfort, and how can they expect it ſhould be otherwiſe as long as they live at ſuch a careleſs rate? O how little of their Time is ſpent in the Cloſet, in ſearching, humbling and quickning their Hearts?

You ſay your Hearts are dead; and do you wonder they are ſo, as long as you keep them not with the Fountain of Life? If your Bodies had been dyeted as your Souls have been, they would have been dead too; never expect better Hearts, till you take more Pains with them; qui fugit molam, fugit farinam, he that will not have the Sweat, muſt not expect the Sweet of Religion.

O Chriſtians! I fear your Zeal and Strength hath run in the wrong Channel: I fear moſt of us may take up the Church's Complaint, Cant. 1. 6. They have made me the Keeper of the Vineyards, but mine own Vineyard have I not kept. Two Things have eaten up the Time and Strength of the Profeſſors of this Generation, and ſadly diverted them from Heart-work. (1.) Fruitleſs Controverſies ſtarted by Satan, I doubt not to this very purpoſe, to take us off from practical Godlineſs, to make us puzzle our Heads, when we ſhould be ſearching our Hearts. O how little have we minded that of the Apoſtle, Heb. 13. 9. 'Tis a good thing that the Heart be eſtabliſhed with Grace, and not with Meats; (i. e.) with Diſputes and Controverſies about Meats, which have not profited them that have been occupyed therein.

O how much better is it to ſee Men live exactly, than to hear them diſpute ſubtilly! Theſe unfruitful Queſtions, how have they ruined the Churches, waſted Time and Spirits, and called Chriſtians off from their main Buſineſs, from looking to their own Vineyard? What think ye, Sirs? Had it not been better if the Queſtions ventilated among the People of God of late days had been ſuch as theſe? How ſhall a Man diſcern the ſpecial from the common Operations of the Spirit? How may a Soul diſcern its firſt declinings from God? How may a backſliding Chriſtian recover his firſt Love? How may the Heart be preſerved from unſeaſonable Thoughts in Duty? How may a boſom Sin be diſcovered and mortifyed, &c. Would not this have tended more to the Credit of Religion, and Comfort of your Souls! O 'tis time to repent and be ashamed of this Folly! When I read what Suarez, a Papist, said, who wrote many Tomes of Disputations, that he prized the Time he set apart for the Searching and Examining of his Heart, in reference to God, above all the time that ever he spent in other Studies: I am ashamed to find the Professors of this Age yet insensible of their Folly: Shall the Conscience of a Suarez feel a relenting Pang for Strength and Time so ill employed, and shall not yours? This is it your Ministers long since warned you of, your spiritual Nurses were afraid of the Rickets, when they saw your Heads only to grow, and your Hearts to wither. O when will God beat our Swords into Plow-shares! I mean, our Disputes and Contentions into Practical Godliness. (2.) Another Cause of neglecting our Hearts, hath been earthly Incumbrances; the Heads and Hearts of many have been filled with such a crowd and noise of Worldly Business, that they have sadly and sensibly declined and withered in their Zeal, Love and Delight in God, in their heavenly, serious and profitable way of conversing with Man.

O how hath this Wilderness entangled us! Our Discourses and Conferences; nay our very Prayers and Duties have a Tang of it: We have had so much Work without Doors, that we have been able to do but little within. It was the sad Complaint of an holy one, "O (saith he) 'tis sad to think how many "precious Opportunities I have lost, how many "sweet Motions and Admonitions of the Spirit I "have posted over unfruitfully, and made the "Lord to speak in vain; in the secret Illapses of "his Spirit the Lord hath called upon me, but "my wordly Thoughts did still lodge within me, "and there was no Place in my Heart for such "Calls of God. Surely there is a way of enjoyning God, even in our worldly Employments; God would never have put us upon them to our Loss; Enoch walked with God, and begat Sons and Daughters, Gen. 5. 19. He walked with God, but did not retire and seperate himself from the things of this Life: And the Angels, that are employed by Christ in the things of this World (for the Spirit of the living Creatures, as in the Wheels) they are finite Creatures, and cannot be in a twofold Ubi at one time, yet they lose nothing of the beatifical Vision, all the time of their Administration; for Mat. 18. 10. Their Angels (even whilst they are employed for them) behold the Face of their Father, which is in Heaven. We need not lose our Visions by our Employments, if the Fault were not their own: Alas! that ever Christians, who stand at the Door of Eternity, and have more Work upon their Hands, than this poor Moment of interposing Time is sufficient for, should yet be filling both our Heads and Hearts with Trifles.

Mr. Strong.

3. Hence also I infer for the Awakening of all, That if the keeping of the Heart be the great Work of a Christian, then there are but few real Christians in the World.

Indeed if every one that hath learned the Dialect of Christianity, and can talk like a Saint; if every one that hath Gifts and Parts, and by the common assisting Presence of the Spirit can preach, pray, or discourse like a Christian; in a Word, if such as associate themselves with the People of God, and delight in Ordinances, might pass for Christians, the Number then is great.

But alas! to what a small Number will they shrink, if you judge them by this Rule! How few are there that make Conscience of keeping their Hearts, watching their Thoughts, judging their Ends, &c. O there be but few Closet Men among Professors! 'Tis far easier for Men to be reconciled to any Duties in Religion than to these: The profane part of the World will not so much as touch with the outside of Religious Duties, much less to this; and for the Hypocrite, though he be polite and curious about those Externals, yet you can never perswade him to this inward Work, this difficult Work: This Work to which there is no inducement by human Applause; this Work that would quickly discover what the Hypocrite seems not to know; so that by a general Consent, this Heart-work is left to the Hands of a few secret ones, and I tremble to think in how few Hands it is.

II. Use of Exhortation.

IF the keeping of the Heart be so important a Business, if such choice Advantages accrue to us thereby; if so many dear and precious Interests wrapt up in it, then let me call upon the People of God every where to fall close to this Work.

O study your Hearts, watch your Hearts, keep your Hearts: Away with fruitless Controversies and all idle Questions, away with empty Names and vain Shews, away with unprofitable Discourse and bold Censures of others; turn in upon yourselves, get into your Closets, and now resolve to dwell there. You have been Strangers to this Work too long, you have kept others Vineyards too long, you have trifled about the Borders of Religion too long, this World hath detained you from your great Work too long; will you not resolve to look better to your Hearts? Will you haste and come out of the Crowds of Business, the Clamours of the World? And retire your selves more than you have done? O that this Day you would resolve upon it!

Reader, methinks I should prevail with thee, all that I beg for is but this, that thou would'st step aside a little oftner to talk with God, and thine own Heart; that thou wouldest not suffer every Trifle to divert thee, that thou would keep a more true and faithful Account of thy Thoughts and Affections. That thou would but seriously demand of thine own Heart, at every Evening, O my Heart, where hast thou been to day? Whither hast thou made a Road to-day? If all that hath been said by way of Inducement be not enough, I have yet more Motives to offer you: And the first is this:

1. Motive. The Studying, Observing, and diligent Keeping of your own Hearts, will marvelously help your Understanding in the deep Mysteries of Religion.

An honest well-experienced Heart, is a singular help to a weak Head; such a Heart will be unto you instead of a Commentary upon a great part of the Scriptures: By this means you shall far better understand the things of God, than the learned Rabbies and profound Doctors (if graceless and unexperienced) ever did; you shall not only have more clear, but a more sweet Perception and Taste of them: A Man may discourse orthodoxly and profoundly of the Nature and Effects of Faith, Troubles and Comforts of Conscience, the ness of Communion with God, that never felt the efficacy and sweet Impressions of these things upon his own Spirit: But O how dark and dry are these Notions, compared with his, upon whose Heart they have been acted? When such a Man reads David's Psalms, or Paul's Epistles, there he finds his own Objections made and answered. O, saith he, these holy Men speak my very Heart! Their Doubts were mine, their Troubles mine, and their Experiences mine. I remember Chrysostome speaking to his People of Antioch about some choice Experiences, useth this Expression: Sciunt initiati quid dico: Those that are initiated, know what I say: Experience is the best Schoolmaster. O then! study your Hearts, keep your Hearts.

2. Mot. The Study and Observation of your own Hearts will antidote you against the dangerous and infecting Errors of the Times and Places you live in.

For what think you is the Reason, that so many Professors in England have departed from the Faith, giving heed to Fables? That so many thousands have been led away by the Error of the Wicked, that Jesuits and Quakers, who have sown corrupt Doctrine, have had such plentiful Harvests among us, but because they have met with a Company of empty notional Professors, that never knew what belongs to practical Godliness, and the study of their own Hearts.

If Professors did but give diligence to study, search, and watch their own Hearts, they would have that ἰδιον στήριγμον, that steadfastness of their own, that Peter speaks of, 1 Pet. 3. 17. and this would ballast and settle them, Heb. 13. 9. Suppose a subtil Papist would talk to such of the Dignity, and Merit of good Works, could he ever work the Perswasion of it into that Heart, that is conscious to it self of so much Darkness, Deadness, Distraction and Unbelief attending its best Duties? 'Tis a good Rule, Non est disputandum de gustu; there is no disputing against Taste. What a Man hath felt and tasted, one cannot beat him off from that by Argument.

3 Mot. Your Care and Diligence in keeping your Hearts, will prove one of the best Evidences of your Sincerity.

I know no external Act of Religion that differences the sound from the unsound Professor: 'Tis wonderful to consider how far Hypocrites go in all external Duties; how plausibly they can order the outward Man, hiding all their Indecencies from the Observation of the World.

But then, they take no heed to their Hearts, they are not in secret; when they appear to be in publick: And before this Tryal no Hypocrite can stand; 'tis confess'd they may in a Fit, under a Pang upon a Death-bed, cry out of the Wickedness of their Hearts; but alas! there is no heed to be taken to these extorted Complaints: In our Law, no Credit is to be given to the Testimony of one upon the Rack, because it may be supposed, that the Extremity of the Torture may make him say any thing to be eased. But if Self-jealousy, Care and Watchfulness, be the dayly Workings and Frames of thy Heart, it strongly argues the Sincerity of it: For what but the Sence of a Divine Eye, what but the real Hatred of Sin as Sin, could put thee upon those secret Duties, which lye out of the Observation of all Creatures?

If then it be a desirable thing in thine Eyes, to have a fair Testimony of thine Integrity, and to know of a Truth, that thou feareſt God: Then study thine Heart, watch thy Heart, keep thy Heart.

4 Mot. How fruitful, sweet and comfortable, would all Ordinances and Duties be to us, if our Hearts were better kept?

O what precious Communion might you have with God, every time you approach him, if your Hearts were but in Frame! You might then say with David, Psal. 104. 34. My Meditation of him shall be sweet. That which loses all our Comforts in Ordinances and more secret Duties, is the Indispositedness of the Heart: A Christian whose Heart is in a good Frame, gets the Start of all others that come with him in that Duty. They are tugging hard to get up their Hearts to God, now trying this Argument upon them, and then that, to quicken and affect them; and sometimes go away as bad as they came. Sometimes the Duty is almost ended before their Hearts begin to stir to feel any Warmth, Quickning or Power from it; but all this while the prepared Heart is at its Work, this is he that ordinarily gets the first Sight of Christ in a Sermon, the first Seal from Christ in a Sacrament, the first Kiss from Christ in secret Prayer. I tell you, and I tell you but what I have felt, that Prayers and Sermons would appear to you other manner of things than they do, did you but bring better ordered Hearts unto them, you would not go away dejected and drooping. O this hath been a lost Day, a lost Duty to me, if you had not lost your Hearts, it had not been so: If then the Comfort of Ordinances be sweet, look to your Hearts, keep your Hearts.

5. Mot. Acquaintance with your own Hearts would be a Fountain of matter to you in Prayer.

A Man, that is diligent in Heart-work, and knows the State of his own Soul, will have a Fountain-fulness of Matter to supply him richly in all his Addresses to God: His Tongue shall not faulter, and make Pauses for want of Matter, Psal. 45. 1. My Heart is inditing a good Matter: Or as Montanus renders the Original, my Heart is boyling up good Matter, like a living Spring, that is still boyling up fresh Water; and then my Tongue is as the Pen of a ready Writer: Other must pump their Memories, rack their Inventions, and are often at a loss, when they have done all; but if thou have kept, and faithfully studyed thine own Heart, 'twill be with thee (as Job speaks in another case) like Bottles, full of New Wine, that want vent, which are ready to burst: As holy Matter flows plentifully, so more feelingly and sweetly from such a Heart; when a Heart-experienced Christian is mourning before God over some special Heart-corruption, wrestling with God for the supply of some special inward Want, he speaks not as other Men do, that have learned to pray by rote, their Confessions and Petitions are squeezed out, his drop freely, like pure Honey from the Comb; 'tis a happiness then to be with or near such a Christian. I remember Bernard, having given Rules to prepare the Heart for Prayer, concludes them thus, Et cum talis fueris memento mei; and (saith he) when thy Heart is in this frame, then remember me.

6 Mot. By this the decayed Power of Religion will be recovered again among Professors, which is the most desirable Sight in this World.

O that I might live to see that Day! When Professors shall not walk in a vain Shew, when they shall please themselves no more with a Name to live, being spiritually Dead: When they shall be no more (as many of them now are) a Company of frothy, vain, and unserious Persons, but the Majestick Beams of Holiness shining from their heavenly and serious Conversations, shall awe the World, and command Reverence from all that are about them; when they shall warm the Hearts of those that come nigh them, so that Men shall say, God is in these Men of a Truth.

Well, such a Time may again be expected according to that Promise, Isa. 60. 21. The People shall be all righteous. But till we fall closer to this great Work of keeping our Hearts, I am out of Hopes to see those blessed Days; I cannot expect better Times, till God gives better Hearts: Doth it not grieve you to see what a Scorn Religion is made in the World? What Objects of Contempt and Scorn the Professors of it are made in the World.

Professors, Would you recover your Credit? Would you again obtain an Honourable Testimony in the Consciences of your very Enemies? Then, keep your Hearts, watch your Hearts; 'Tis the Looseness, Frothiness, and Earthliness of your Hearts that hath made your Lives so; and this hath brought you under Contempt of the World, you first lost your Sights of God, and Communion with him, then your Heavenly and Serious Deportment among Men; and by that, your Interest in their Consciences: O then! for the Credit of Religion, for the Honour of your Profession, keep your Hearts.

7 Mot. By Diligence in keeping your Hearts, we should prevent, and remove the fatal Scandals and Stumbling-blocks out of the Way of the World.

Woe to the World (saith Christ) because of Offences, Mat. 18. 7. Doth not Shame cover your Faces? Do not your Hearts bleed within you, to hear of the scandalous miscarriages of many loose Professors? Could you not, like Shem and Japhet, go backward with a Garment to cover the Shame of many Professors? How is that worthy Name blasphemed? Jam. 2. 7. 2 Sam. 12. 13, 14. the Hearts of the Righteous sadned, Psal. 25. 3. Ezek. 36. 20. by this the World is fearfully prejudiced against Christ and Religion, the Bonds of Death made fast upon their Soul; those that have a general Love and liking to the Ways of God, startled and quite driven back, and thus Soul-blood is shed: Woe to the World.

Yea, How are the Consciences of fall'n Professors plunged, and even overwhelmed in the Deeps of Trouble? God inwardly Excommunicating their Souls from all comfortable Fellowship with himself, and the Joys of his Salvation; infinite are the Mischiefs that come by the scandalous Lives of Professors.

And what is the true Cause and Reason of all this, but the neglecting of their Hearts? Were our Hearts better kept, all this would be prevented: Had David kept his Heart, he had not broken his Bones, a neglected careless Heart must of Necessity produce a disorderly scandalous Life. I thank God for the Freedom and Faithfulness of a Reverend Brother, in shewing Professors their manifold Miscarriages, and from my Heart do wish, that when their Wounds have been thoroughly searched by that Probe, God would be pleased to heal them by this Plaister. O Professors! If ever you will keep Religion sweet, if ever you hope to recover the Credit of it in the World, keep your Hearts; either keep your Hearts, or lose your Credit; keep your Hearts, or lose your Comforts; keep your Hearts, lest ye shed Soul-blood: What Words can express the deep Concernments, the wonderful Consequences of this Work! Every thing puts a Necessity, a Solemnity, a Beauty upon it.

Gospel-Glass.

8 Mot. An Heart well kept will fit you for any Condition God casts you into, or any Service he hath to use you in.

He that hath learnt how to keep his Heart lowly, is fit for Prosperity; and he that knows how to use and apply to it Scripture Promises, and Supports, is fit to pass through any Adversity; he that can deny the Pride and Selfishness of his Heart, is fit to be employed in any Service for God. Such a Man was Paul, he did not only spend his Time in preaching to others, in keeping others Vineyards, but he looked to himself, kept his own Vineyard, 1 Cor. 9. 27. Lest when I have preached to others, I my self should be a cast-away. And what an eminent Instrument was he for God? He could turn his Hand to any Work, he could dexterously manage both an adverse and prosperous Condition. I know how to abound, and how to suffer Want: Let the People deify him, it moves him not, unless to Indignation; let them stone him, he can bear it: If a Man purge himself from these (saith he) 2 Tim. 2. 21.) He shall be a Vessel unto Honour, sanctified and meet for the Masters Use, and prepared unto every good Work.

First the Heart must be purged; and then it is prepared for any Service of God. When the Heart of Isaiah was purified, which was the Thing signified by the touching of his Lips with a Coal from the Altar, Isa. 6. 7. then he was fit for God's Work: Here am I send me, Vers. 8. A Man that hath not learned to keep his Heart, put him upon any Service for God, and if it be attended with Honour, it shall swell up and over-top his Spirit: If with suffering, it will exanimate and sink him.

Jesus Christ had an instrumental Fitness for his Father's Work above all the Servants that ever God employed, he was zealous in publick Work for God, so zealous, that sometimes he forgot to eat Bread, yea, that his Friends thought he had been besides himself. But yet he so carryed on his publick Work, as not to forget his own private Communion with God; and therefore you read, Matth. 13. 23. that when he had been labouring all Day, yet after that, he went up to a Mountain apart to pray, and was there alone. O let the Keepers of the Vineyards look to their own Vineyard! We shall never be so instrumental to the good of others, as when we are most diligent about our own Souls.

9 Mot. If the People of God would more diligently keep their Hearts, how exceedingly would the Communion of Saints be thereby sweetned!

How goodly then would be thy Tents, O Jacob, and thy Tabernacles, O Israel! then 'tis prophesied of the Jews, Zech. 8. 23. Men will say, we will go with you, for we have heard that God is among you. 'Tis the Fellowship your Souls have with the Father, and with the Son, that draws out the Desires of others after Fellowship with you, 1 John 1. 3. I tell you, if Saints would be perswaded to take more Pains, and spend more Time about their Hearts, there would quickly be such a divine Lustre upon the Face of their Conversations, that Men would account it no small Priviledge to be with or near them.

'Tis the Pride, Passion and Earthliness of our Hearts that have spoyled Christian Fellowship. Whence is it, that when Christians meet, they are often often jarring and contending, but only from their unmortifyed Passions? Whence are their uncharitable Censures of their Brethren, but only from Self-ignorance? Why are they so rigid and unmerciful towards those that are fallen? But because they consider not themselves, as the Apostle speaks, Gal. 6. 1. Why is their Discourse so frothy and unprofitable when they meet? Is not this from the Earthliness and Vanity of their Hearts?

My Brethren, these be the things that have spoyled Christian Fellowship, and made it become a dry and sapless thing; so that many Christians are even weary of it, and are ready to say with the Prophet, Jer. 9. 2. O that I had a Cottage in the Wilderness, &c. That I might leave my People and go from them! And with David, Psal. 120. 6. My Soul hath long dealt with them that hate Peace. This hath made them long for the Grave, that they might go from them that are not their own People, to them that are their own People, as the Original of that Text imports, 2 Cor. 5. 8.

But now if Professors would study their own Hearts more, watch and keep them better, all this would be prevented; and the Beauty and Glory of Communion again restored. They would divide no more, contend no more, censure rashly no more; when their Hearts are in Tune, their Tongues will not jarr, how charitable, pitiful and tender will they be of one another, when every one is dayly humbled under the Evil of his own Heart; Lord, hasten those much desired Days, and bless these Counsels in order to them.

10 Mot. Lastly, By this the Comforts of the Spirit, and precious Influences of all Ordinances would be fixed, and much longer preserved in your Souls, than now they are.

Ah! What would I give, that my Soul might be preserved in that Frame I sometimes find it after an Ordinance! Aliquando intromittis me Domine in affectum multum inusitatum introrsus ad nescio quam dulcedinem, &c. Sometimes, O Lord, (saith one of the Fathers sweetly) thou admittest me into the most inward, unusual and sweet Delights to I know not what Sweetness, which were it perfected in me, I know not what it would be; or rather, what it would not be. But alas! the Heart grows careless again, and quickly returns, like Water removed from the Fire, to its native Coldness: Could we but keep those Things for ever in your Hearts, what Christians would you be! what Lives would we live! and how is it that these Things remain no longer with us? Doubtless it is because we suffer our Hearts to take Cold again: We should be careful after an Ordinance or Duty to prevent it, as one that comes out of a hot Bath, or great heat, is of going out into the chill Air. We have our hot and cold Fits by Turns, and what is the reason but our Unskilfulness and Carelessness in keeping the Heart?

It is a thousand Pities, that the Ordinances of God, as to their quickning and comforting Effects, should be like those human Ordinances the Apostle speaks of, that perish in the using. O then, let me say to you, as Job 15. 11. Do the Consolations of God seem small to you? Look over these ten special Benefits, weigh them in a just Ballance; are they small Matters? Is it a small Matter to have thy Understanding assisted? Thy endangered Soul antidoted, thy Sincerity cleared, thy Communion with God sweetned, thy Sails filled in Prayer? Is a small thing to have the decayed Power of Holiness again recovered, all fatal Scandals removed, an instrumental Fitness to serve Christ obtained, the Communion of Saints restored to its primitive Glory, and the Influences of Ordinances abiding in the Souls of Saints? If these be no common Blessings, no small Benefits, then surely 'tis a great Duty to keep the Heart with all diligence.

The III. Use for Direction.

THE next Use shall be for Direction to some special Means for the keeping of the Heart; and here, besides what hath been hinted in the Explication of the Duty, at the beginning of this Discourse, to which I refer the Reader, and all those Directions throughout the whole, appropriated to particular Cases and Seasons: I shall farther add several other general Means of excellent Use to this end: And the first is this.

1 Means Would you thus keep your Hearts as hath been perswaded, then furnish your Hearts richly with the Word of God, which is their best Preservative against Sin.

Keep the Word, and the Word will keep you: As the first receiving of the Word regenerated your Hearts, so the keeping of the Word within you will preserve your Hearts. Col. 3. 16. Let the Word of Christ dwell richly in you; let it dwell, not tarry with you for a Night, and let it dwell richly or plentifully; in all that is of it, in its Commands, Promises, Threats; in all that is in you, in your Understandings, Memories, Consciences, Affections, and then 'twill preserve your Hearts, Psal. 119. 11. Thy Word have I hid in mine Heart, that I might not sin against thee: 'Tis the slipperiness of our Hearts, in reference to the Word, that causes so many slips in our Lives. Conscience cannot be urged or awed with forgotten Truths, but keep it in the Heart, and it will keep both Heart and Life upright, Psal. 37. 31. The Law of his God is in his Heart, none of his Steps shall slide, or if he do, the Word will recover the straying Heart again. Mat. 26. 57. Then Peter remembred (the Word of Jesus*) and wept bitterly*: We never lose our Hearts, till they have first lost the efficacious and powerful Impression of the Word.

2 Means. Call your Hearts frequently to an Account, if ever you mean to keep them with God.

Those that put a Stock into the Hands of unfaithful or suspicious Servants, will be sure to make short Reckonings with them; the Heart is deceitful above all Things, and desperately wicked, Jer. 17. 9. O 'tis as necessary as sweet, that we and our Reins, that is, we and our secret Thoughts, should confer together every Night, Psal. 16. 7. We should call our Hearts to Account every Evening, and say, O my Heart! Where hast thou been to Day? Where have thy Thoughts been wandring to Day? What an Account canst thou give of them? O naughty Heart, vain Heart, couldst thou not abide by the Fountain of Delights? Is there better Entertainment with the Creature than with God? The oftner the Heart meets with Rebukes and Checks for wandring, the less 'twill wander; if every vain Thought were retracted with a Sigh, every excursion of the Heart from God, with a severe Check, it would not dare so boldly and frequently to digress and step aside; those Actions which are committed with reluctancy, are not committed with frequency.

3 Means. He that will keep his Heart, must take heed of plunging himself into such a Multiplicity of earthly Busines, as he cannot manage without neglecting his main Business.

It cannot be imagined he should keep his Heart with God, that hath lost himself in a Wood of Earthly Business; take heed you do not pinch your Souls, by gratifying the immoderate Desires of your Flesh. I wish many Christians could truly say, what an Heathen once did, I do not give, but only lend my self to Business. 'Tis said Germanicus reigned in the Romans Hearts, Tyberius only in their Provinces: Though the World be in your Hands, let it not justle Christ out of your Hearts.

Seneca.

Take heed, Christian, lest thy Shop steal away thy Heart from thy Closet: God never intended Earthly Employments for a Stop, but rather for a Step to heavenly Ones. O let not Aristippus the Heathen arise in Judgment against thee, who said, He would rather neglect his Means than his Mind, his Farm than his Soul. If thy Ship be overladen, thou must cast some over-board; more Business than thou canst well manage, is like more Meat than thou canst well digest, which will quickly make a sickly Soul.

4 Means He that means to keep his Heart, must carefully observe its first Declinings from God, and stop it there.

He that will find his House in good Repair, must stop every Chink as soon as discovered, and he that will keep his Heart, must not let a vain Thought be long neglected: The Serpent of Heart Apostacy is best killed in the Egg of a small Remission. O if many poor decayed Christians had looked to their Hearts in time, they had never come to that sad pass they now are: We may say of Heart Neglects, as the Apostle doth of vain Bablings, that they increase to more and more Ungodliness. Nemo repente fit turpissimus; little Sins neglected will quickly become great and masterless: The greatest Crocadile once lay in an Egg, the greatest Oak was once but an Acorn. The firing of a small Train of Powder may blow up all by leading to a greater Quantity Men little think what a proud, vain, wanton or wordly Thought may grow to: Behold how great a matter a little Fire kindles!

5 Means. Take heed of losing the Liveliness and Sweetness of your Communion with God, lest thereby your Hearts be loosed off from God.

The Heart is an hungry and restless Thing, it will have something to feed upon; if it enjoy nothing from God, it will hunt for something among the Creatures, and there it often loses it self, as well as its end. There is nothing more engages the Heart to a Constancy and Evenness in walking with God, than the Sweetness which it tastes therein: As the Gauls, when once they tasted the sweet Wine of Italy, could never be satisfyed till they conquered that Country where it grew.

'Tis true, Conscience of Duty may keep the Heart from neglecting it, but when there is no higher Motive, it drives on deadly, and is filled with Distractions; that which we delight in, we are never weary of, as is evident in the Motions of the Heart to earthly Things, where the Wheels being oyled with delight, run nimbly, and have often need of trigging; the Motions of the Heart upward would be as free, if its Delight in heavenly Things were as great.

6 Means Habituate thy Heart to spiritual Meditations, if thou wouldst have it free from those burdensome Diversions.

By this Means you will get a Facility and Dexterity in Heart-Work: 'Tis pity those smaller Portions of our Time betwixt solemn Duties should lye upon our Hands, and be rendered useless to us. O learn to save, and be good Husband upon your Thoughts; to this purpose, a neat Author speaks, "These Parentheses,

Boyle's occasion Reflect. pag. 9,

Something of that nature I have under h for a publick Benefit, if God give life to fi and opportunity to produce it; certainly th a great Advantage for the keeping of the H with God.

IV. Use of Consolation.

I Shall now close the whole with a Word o of Consolation to all diligent and serious stians, that faithfully and closely ply Heart-w that are groaning and weeping in secret ove hardness, pride, earthliness and vanity of Hearts, that are fearing and trembling ove experienced Deceitfulness and Falseness of whilst other vain Professors Eyes are abroad, Time and Strength eaten up by fruitless Di and earthly Employments; or at best by a and formal Performance of some heartle empty Duties: Poor Christian, I have three T to offer thee in order to thy support and fort, and doubtless either of them alone with Faith is sufficient to comfort thee over trouble thou hast with thine own Heart.

1 Comfort. This argues thy Heart to be and honest, whatever thy Gifts and Abilities are.

'Tis uprightness of Heart will comfort th on a Death-bed. 2 Kings 20. 2, 3. Then he his Face to the Wall, and prayed to the Lord,

Re

Remember now, O Lord, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect Heart, &c.

I am really of his mind, who said, Si mihi daretur optio, eligerim Christiani rustici sordidissimum & maxime agreste te opus præ omnibus victoriis & triumphis Alexandri aut Cæsaris. Might I have my wish, I would prefer the most despicable and sordid work of a rustick Christian, before all the Victories and Triumphs of Alexander or Cæsar; yea, let me add, before all the elaborated Duties and excellent Gifts of vain Professors; before the Tongues of Men and Angels: It will signify more to my comfort to spend one solitary hour in mourning before the Lord over heart corruption, than many hours in a seeming zealous, but really dead performance, of common duties with the greatest enlargements and richest embellishments of Parts and Gifts.

By this very thing Christ distinguishes the formal and serious Christian, Mat. 6. 5. The one is for the Street and Synagogue, for the Observation and Applause of Men, but the other is a Closet-man; he drives on a Home-trade, a Heart-trade. Never be troubled then for the want of those things that a Man may have and be eternally Damned, but rather bless God for that which none but the Favourites, and Darlings of Heaven have; Many a one is now in Hell that had a better head than thine, and many a one now in Heaven that complained of as bad an Heart as thine.

2 Comf. Know further for thy comfort, that God would never leave thee under so many Heart troubles and burdens, if he intend not thy real benefit thereby.

Thou art often crying out, Lord why is it thus, why go I mourning all the Day, having sorrow in my Heart, thus long have I been exercised with hardness of Heart, and to this day have not obtained a broken Heart, many years have I been praying and striving against vain Thoughts, yet am still infested and perplexed with them. O when shall I get a better Heart! I have been in travail, and brought forth but wind, I have obtained no deliverance, neither have the corruptions of my Heart fallen! I have brought this Heart many times to Prayers, Sermons, Sacraments, expecting and hoping for a cure from them, and still my Sore runneth and ceaseth not.

Pensive Soul, let this comfort thee, thy God designs thy benefit, even by these occasions of thy sad complaints. For (1) Hereby he would let thee see what thy Heart by Nature is and was, and therein take notice how much thou art beholding to Free-Grace. He leaves thee under these exercises of Spirit, that thou mayest lye as with thy Face upon the ground, admiring that ever the Lord of Glory should take such a Toad, so vile a Creature into his Bosom. Thy base Heart, if it be good for nothing else, yet serves to commend and set off, the unsearchable Riches of Free Grace. (2.) This serves to beat thee off continually from resting, yea, or but glancing upon thine own Righteousness or Excellency: The corruption of thy Heart, working in all thy Duties, makes the sensible to feel that the Bed is too short, and the Covering too narrow: Were it not for those reflections thou hast after duties, upon the dulness and distractions of thine Heart in them; how apt wouldest thou be to fall in love with, and admire thine own Performances and Enlargements? For it notwithstanding these, thou hast much to do with the Pride of thy Heart, how much more, if such humbling and self-abasing considerations were wanting. And lastly, this tends to make thee the more compassionate and tender towards others; perhaps thou wouldst have little pity for the distresses, and Soul troubles of others, if thou hadst less experience of thine own.

3 Comf. To conclude, God will shortly put a blessed end to all these Troubles, Cares and Watchings.

The time is coming when thy Heart shall be as thou wouldest have it, when thou shalt be discharged of these Cares, Fears and Sorrows, and never cry out, Oh my hard, my proud, my vain, my earthly Heart any more. When all darkness shall be banished from thine Understanding; and thou shalt clearly discover all Truths in God, that Crystal Ocean of Truth: When all Vanity shall be purged perfectly out of thy Thoughts, and they be everlastingly, ravishingly and delightfully entertained and exercised upon that supream Goodness, and infinite Excellency of God, from whom they shall never start any more like a broken Bow. And as for thy Pride, Passion, Earthliness, and all other the matters of thy Complaint and Trouble, it shall be said of them, as of the Egyptians to Israel, Stand still, and see the Salvation of God. These corruptions thou seest to day, henceforth thou shalt see them no more for ever: When thou shalt lay down thy Weapons of Prayers, Tears and Groans, and put on the Armour of Light, not to fight, but triumph in.

Lord, when shall this blessed day come? How long, how long, Holy and True? My Soul waiteth for thee: Come my Beloved, and be thou like a Roe, or a young Hart upon the Mountains of Bether. Amen.

THE

The Touchstone of Sincerity:

OR,

The Signs of Grace, and Symptoms of Hypocrisy: Opened in a Practical Treatise upon Revelations 3. 17, 18.

The Epistle to the Reader.

READER,

AMONG the Difficulties and Severities of true Religion, the faithful searching and diligent keeping of our Hearts, are found in the first and highest rank of difficulties; these two take up the main work of a Christian betwixt them, Hic labor, hoc opus est. I had hopes that these Essays for the searching of the Heart, might much sooner have followed my former * for keeping the Heart: But Providence hath reserved it for the fittest Season.

* A Saint indeed.

It comes to thy hand, Reader, in a day of Straits and Fears, a dark and gloomy Season; when the Nations about us are made drunk with their own Blood, and filled with the Wine of Astonishment: In a day when the Cup is ready to pass unto us, and a Storm seems to be rising in the Fears of many, and threatning the Protestant Interest in these reformed Nations. Some Men, very considerable for Piety and Learning, from that Scripture, Rev. 13. 3, The deadly Wound, (viz. That given the Beast by the Reformation) was healed, have concluded that Popery will once more over-run the reformed Nations; and one of great renown in all the Churches of Christ, foretelling this furious (but short) Storm, comforts the People of God with this, that it is like to fall heaviest upon the Worshippers in the outward Court, namely the formal Professors of the Times.

Oh! How much is every Man now concerned to have his estate and condition well cleared, and to give all diligence to make his Calling and Election sure!

It should both amaze and grieve a pious Mind, to see how some ingenious Persons can sit with unwearied Patience and Pleasure, racking their Brains upon some dry School Problem, or some nice Mathematical Point; whilst no Reasons or Perswasions can prevail with them to spend one serious Hour in the search and study of their own Hearts.

It was the Saying of the great Cicero, Libenter omnibus omnes opes concesserim, ut mihi leceat, vi nulla interpellante, isto modo literis vivere. I would give all the Wealth in the World that I might wholly live in my Studies, and have nothing to hinder me. What a brave Offer had that been, if Heaven and the clearing of a Title to it had been the subject matter of those studies! Crede mihi extingui dulce esset, Mathematicarum artum studio, saith another, (i. e.) Believe me, it were a sweet Death to dye in the study of the Mathematical Arts: And I should be apt to believe it too, did I not know that eternal Judgment immediately follows Death; and that they who stand at the Door of Eternity have higher matters to mind than Mathematical Niceties. To discern the Harmonies and Proportion of the Signs of Grace wrought in our Souls, is a far more pleasant and necessary Employment; and to be extinguished in such a Work as this, were a lovely Death indeed; Blessed is that Servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

My Friends, a day of Trouble is near, a dying Hour approacheth us, and when our Eye-strings and Heart-strings are breaking, when we are taking the last grasp of Christ and the Promises, you will then know to what purpose those Hours spent in such Work as this were. Search your selves, yea search your selves before the Decree bring forth, as that Text may be read, Zeph. 2. 1, 2. Enter into thy Chamber, Christian, and shut thy Door; sit close to this Employment thou art here directed to; and however Times shall govern, whether it be fair or foul Weather Abroad, thou shalt never repent such an Expence of thy Time; Nusquam requiem inveni, nisi in libro & claustro, said a devout Soul once; I am never better than when I am at my Book, or on my Knees.

This may seem but a dull, melancholly Life to the brisk and airy Spirits of these Times; but let us be content with it as it is, and leave them (if we cannot have their Company) to their Sportiveness and Frolicks, never once grudging them their short and dear-bought Pleasures. Assurance that Sin is pardoned, and Christ is ours; with the unspeakable Joys that are inseparably connected therewith, is that White Stone, and New Name, which none knows but he that receives it; for no Words can possibly signify to another what that Soul tastes and feels in such an Hour as that is.

And be not discouraged at the Difficulty of obtaining it, this White Stone is no Philosophers Stone, which no Man could ever say he had in his own hand, for many a Christian hath really found it in waiting upon the Lord by Prayer, and diligently searching the Scriptures and his own Heart.

Reader, the time will come when they that scoff at the serious diligence of the Saints, and break many a pleasant Jest upon the most solemn and awful things in Religion, will tremble when they shall hear the Midnight-Cry, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; and see the Lamps of all vain and formal Professors expire, and none admitted into the Marriage, but such whose Lamps are furnished with Oyl, (i. e.) such such whose Professions and Duties are enlivened and maintained by vital Springs and Principles of real Grace within them.

Melch. Adams in vita Gobelini persona vixit anno 1420.

It is a very remarkable Story that Melchior Adams records in the Life of Gobelinus, that a little before his Time there was a Play set forth at Iserach in Germany, of the Wise and Foolish Virgins, wherein the Virgin Mary, who was one of the Five Saints that represented the Wise Virgins, was brought in with the rest, telling the Foolish Virgins that cryed to her for Oyl, that it was too late: And then others representing the Foolish Virgins, fell a weeping and making most bitter Lamentations.

Hereat Prince Frederick (who was one of the Spectators) greatly amazed, cryed out, Quid est fides nostra Christiana, si neque Maria, neque alia Sancta exorari potest, &c. What is our Faith worth, and to what purpose are all our good Works, if neither Mary, nor any other Saint can help us! And such was his Consternation, that it threw him into a sore and violent disease, which ended in an Apoplex, whereof he died about four Days after.

If the Representation of these Things in a Play ended the Life of so great a Man, so tragically; Oh think with thy self, Reader, what will the Effects of the Lord's real Appearance in the Clouds of Heaven, and the Mourning and Wailing of the Tribes of the Earth in that Day be? Think, I say, and think again, and again, what the dismal Effects of such a Sight and Sound will be upon all that neglect serious Preparation themselves, and scoff at them that do prepare to meet the Lord.

The Design of this Manual is to bring every Man's Gold to the Touchstone and Fire, I mean every Man's Grace to the Tryal of the Word, that thereby we may know what we are, what we have, and what we must expect and trust to at the Lord's coming. I pretend not to any Gift of discerning Spirits. Such an extraordinary Gift there once was in the Church, and very necessary for those times (wherein Satan was so busy, and the Canon of Scripture not compleated) which the Apostle calls the Gift of discerning Spirits, 1 Cor. 12. 10. And some are of Opinion that by vertue of this Gift, Peter discerned the Hypocrisy of Ananias and Saphira, but whatever that Gift was, it is utterly ceased now; no Man can pretend to it, but the ordinary Aids and Assistances of the Spirit are with us still, and the lively Oracles are among us still, to them we may freely go for Resolution of all Doubts, and Decision of perplexed Cases: And thus we may discern our own Spirits, though we want the extraordinary Gift of discerning of other Mens Spirits.

I have little to say of this Treatise in thy Hands, more than that it is well aimed and designed, however it be managed: The Ear tryes Words, as the Mouth tasteth Meat; these Things will relish according to the Palates it meets with.

It is not the pleasing but profiting of Men that I have herein laboured for. I know of nothing in it that is like to wound the Upright, or slightly heal the Hypocrite, by crying Peace, Peace, when there is no Peace. Scripture Light hath been my Cynosura, and with that Thread in my Hand, I have followed the Search of Hypocrisy through the Labyrinths of the Heart. Some Assistance I hope I have had also from Experience; for Scripture and Experience are such Relatives, and the Tye betwixt them so discernable as nothing in Nature can be more so. What we feel in our Hearts, we might have read the Scriptures before ever we felt it.

That the Blessing of God may go forth with it, and accompany it to thy Soul, Reader, is the Hearts desire and prayer of,

Thine and the Churche's

Servant in Christ,

John Flavel.

The Touchstone of Sincerity:

OR,

The Signs of Grace, and Symptoms of Hypocrisy: Opened in a Treatise upon Revelations 3. 17, 18.

Because thou sayest I am Rich, and increased with Goods, and have need of nothing: And knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blinde, and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me GOLD TRYED in the FIRE, that thou mayest be Rich, &c.

CHAP. I.

Wherein the Text is opened, and the Doctrines propounded.

ALthough the Revelation be a Compendium of intricate Visions and obscure Prophecies, containing almost as many Mysteries as Words: Yet that Cloud overshadows the Prophetical Part only; which begins where this Chapter (with the doctrinal Part) ends: Here the Waters are found no deeper than in other places of the Scripture; but if we go a little farther they become an overflowing Flood: Hitherto we touch Ground, but a Step further delivers us into the Deeps, which are above the heads of the tallest Christians: Here the Spirit speaks doctrinally and perspicuously; but in the following Chapters mystically, and in great Obscurity.

Tot mysteria quot verba Hieron.

Seven Epistles are found in this Doctrinal Part, immediately dictated from Heaven, and sent by John to the Seven Churches of Asia, to instruct, correct, encourage and confirm them, as their several Cases required.

My Text falls in the last Epistle, sent to the Church of Laodicea; the worst, and most degenerate of all the rest. The best had their Defects and Infirmities; but this laboured under the most dangerous Disease of all. The fairest Face of the seven had some Spots, but a dangerous Disease seems to have invaded the very Heart of this.

Not that all were equally guilty, but the greatest Part (from which the whole is denominated) were lukewarm Professors; who had a Name to live, but were dead, who being never thoroughly engaged in Religion, easily embraced that Principle of the Gnosticks, which made it ἀδιάφορον, a matter of Indifferency to own or deny Christ in time of Persecution. The most saving Doctrine that some Professors are acquainted with. This lukewarm Temper Christ hated, he was sick of them, and loathed their Indifferency: I wish (saith he) vers. 16, thou wert either Cold or Hot; an Expression of the same amounts with that in 1 Kings 18. 21. How long halt you between two Opinions? And is manifestly translated from the Qualities of Water, which is either Cold, or Hot; or lukewarm, a middle Temper betwixt both, and more nauseous to the Stomach than either of the former. Cold is the Complection and natural Temper of those that are wholly alienated and estranged from Christ and Religion. Hot, is the gracious Temper of those that know and love Jesus Christ in an excelling degree. Lukewarm, or Tepid, is the Temper of those who have too much Religion to be esteemed Carnal, and too little to be truly Spiritual; a Generation that is too politick to venture much, and yet so foolish as to lose all: They are loth to forsake Truth wholly, and more loth to forsake it too closely: The Form of Religion they affect as an Honour, the Power of it they judge a Burden.

Frigidos vocat plane a Christo alienos. Fervidos, vera Christi cognitione in excellenti gradu præditos. Tepidos, qui cum Christiani dici velint, nec causam religionis serio agunt nec vitam Confessioni conformem dignamque ducunt. Sol. Glass. Rhet. Sacra par. 3. p. 165.

This is that Temper which the Lord hates, and this was the Disease of Laodicea, which Christ the great and only Heart-Anatomist and Soul-Physician discovers in vers. 17. and prescribes a Cure for in vers. 18. So that the Words resolve themselves into two Parts: viz.

{ First, A faithful Discovery, } the Disease
{ Secondly, A proper Remedy, of } of Laodicea

1. First, Their Disease is faithfully discovered to them, both in its Symptoms, Cause and Aggravation.

First, Its Symptom, an unconcerned, indifferent regardless Spirit in matters of Religion; nor hot nor cold; the true Temper of Formal-Professors who never engaged themselves thoroughly and heartily in the ways of God, but can take or leave as Times govern, and wordly Interest come to be concerned.

Secondly, Its Cause and Root, which is the Defect and Want of the Truth, and Want of inward Grace, noted in these Expressions, Thou art wretched and miserable, poor, blind and naked; (i. e.) thou art destitute of a real Principle, a solid Work of Grace; these five Epithets do all point at one and the same thing; namely, the Defectiveness and Rottenness of their Foundation. The two first, ἐλεεινὸς καὶ ὁ ἐλεεινὸς, wretched and miserable, are more general, concluding them in a sad condition, a very sinful and lamentable estate: The three last, πτωχὸς, τυφλὸς, καὶ γυμνὸς, viz. poor, blind and naked, are more particular, pointing at those grand Defects, and Flaws in the Foundation, which made their condition so wretched and miserable.

First, Poor, that is, void of Righteousness and true Holiness before God; these are the true Riches of Christians, and whoso wants them, is poor and miserable, how Rich soever he be in Gift of the Mind, or Treasures of the Earth.

πτωχὸς destitutus Justitia, & Sanctitate vera, coram Deo. Grotius.

Secondly, Blind, (i. e.) without spiritual Illumination and so neither knowing their Disease, nor their Remedy; the Evil of Sin, or Necessity of Christ. Durham in Loc.

τυφλὸς Nec mortem sciens, nec remedium.

Thirdly, Naked, without Christ, and his Righteousness. Sin is the Souls Shame and Nakedness. Christs pure and perfect Righteousness is its Covering or Garment: This they wanted, how richly soever their Bodies were adorned. These were Laodiceans, (i. e.) just and righteous People (according to the Notation of that Word) whose Garments with which they covered themselves, were made of the home-spun Thread of their own Righteousness.

γυμνὸς Cerens Justitiæ quæ vestitus est Christianorum. Pareus.

Thirdly, The Disease of Laodicea is here opened to them in its Aggravations. Thou saidst I am rich, and increased with Goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not, &c.

To be really Graceless and Christless, is a miserable Condition; but to be so, and yet confidently perswaded of the contrary, is most miserable: To have the very Symptoms of Death upon us, and yet tell those that pity us we are as well as they, is lamentable indeed.

Nil miserius misericordiâ miserante ipsum.

O the Efficacy of a Spiritual Delusion! This is their Disease, Gracelessness, and the Aggravation of it was their Senselessness.

2. Secondly, We have a proper Remedy prescribed, vers. 18. I counsel thee to buy of me Gold tryed in the Fire, that thou mayest be Rich, &c. In which we have to consider, First, what is prescribed for the Cure. Secondly, where it is to be had. Thirdly, how to be obtained.

First, What are the Remedies prescribed, and they are three; Gold, White-Rayment, and Eye-salve. First, Gold the Cure of Poverty; yea, Gold tryed in the Fire, (i. e.) Grace that hath been gloriously proved already, and the more it is proved, the more its Truth will be conspicuous. The next is White-Rayment, the Remedy against Nakedness. And lastly Eye-Salve, the effectual Cure of Blindness. Under all these choice Metaphors, these choice and excellent Things are shadowed, viz. spiritual Graces, real Holiness, more precious than Gold. Christ's imputed Righteousness, the richest Garment in all the Wardrobe of Heaven; and spiritual Illumination, the most excellent Collyrium or Eye-Salve that ever was or can be applyed to the mental Eye or Understanding of Man in this World.

Secondly, Where these precious Remedies may be had, and you find Christ hath the Monopoly of them all; buy of me, said Christ in the Text; he is the Repository of all Graces. Angels, Ministers, Ordinances, cannot furnish you with them without Christ.

Hoc μονοπώλιον est Christi, extra quod nulla est salus.

Thirdly, How they may be obtained from him; buy of me; on this Place Estius, and others build their Doctrine of Merit; which is to build a Superstructure of Hay and Stubble upon a Foundation of God. The Exigence of the very Text it self destroys such Conceits: For what have they that are poor, wretched, miserable, and want all things, to give as a Price, or by way of Merit for those inestimable Treasures of Grace? Buying therefore in this Place, can signify or intend no more than the Acquisition, Compassing or Obtaining these things from Jesus Christ in the Use of such Means and Methods as he hath appointed, and in the Use of them we merit Grace no more than the Patient merits of his Physician by coming to him, and carefully following his Prescriptions in the Use of such Medicaments as he freely gives him: And that Place, Isa. 55. 1. (from which this Phrase seems to be borrowed) fully clears it: He that hath no Money, let him come and buy Wine and Milk without Money, and without Price.

From all which these three Observations fairly offer themselves to us.

Doct. 1. That many Professors of Religion are under very great and dangerous Mistakes in their Profession.

Doct. 2. That true Grace is exceeding precious, and greatly enriches the Soul that possesseth it.

Doct. 3. That only is to be accounted true Grace, which is able to endure all those Tryals appointed, or permitted for the Discovery of it.

The first Doctrine naturally rises ont of the Scope of the Text, which is to awaken and convince unsound Professors.

The second from the Use the Holy Ghost makes of the best and choicest things in Nature, to shadow forth the inestimable Worth and Preciousness of Grace.

And the Third, from that particular, and most significant Metaphor of Gold tryed in the Fire; by which I here understand, a real and solid Work of Grace, evidencing it self to be so, in all the Proofs and Tryals that are made of it; for whatsoever is probational of Grace, and puts its Soundness and Sincerity to the Test, is that to it which Fire is to Gold: In this Sense it is used in Scripture, Psal. 66. 10. Thou hast tryed us as Silver is tryed: And Zach. 13. 9. I will bring the third part through the Fire, and will refine them as Silver is refined, and try them as Gold is tryed. So that whatsoever it is which examines and tryes Grace, whether it be sound and sincere, that is the Fire Christ here speaks of, and such Grace as abides these Tryals, is the Gold here intended.

CHAP. II.

CHAP. II.

Wherein firſt the Doctrine is opened and improved briefly, as a preliminary Diſcourſe to the principal Subject herein deſigned.

Doct. 1. That many Profeſſors of Religion are under very great and dangerous Miſtakes in their Profeſſions.

SECT. I.

ALL Flattery is dangerous, Self-flattery is more dangerous, but Self-flattery in the Buſineſs of Salvation, is the moſt dangerous of all.

To pretend to the good we know we have not, is Groſs Hypocriſy; to opine and perſwade our ſelves of the good we have not, though we think we have it, is Formal Hypocriſy; and this was the Caſe of thoſe Self-deceivers in the Text.

My Deſign in this Diſcourſe is not to ſhake the well-built Hopes of any Man, or beget groundleſs Jealouſies, but to diſcover the real dangerous Flaws in the Foundation of many Mens Hopes for Heaven: Every thing is as its Foundation is, and debille Fundamentum fallit opus; that failing all fails.

There is a twofold Self-ſuſpicion or Fear in God's own People. The one is a Fear of Caution, awaking the Soul to the uſe of all preventive Means for avoiding Danger; this is Laudable. The other a groundleſs Suſpicion of reigning Hypocriſy tending only to Deſpondency; this is Culpable: By the former the Soul is guarded againſt Danger, by the latter it is betrayed into needleſs Trouble; and debarred from Peace.

Good Men have ſometimes more Fear than they ought, and wicked Men have leſs than they ought: The former do ſometimes ſhut their Eyes againſt the fair Evidences of their own Graces, the latter ſhut their Eyes againſt the ſad Evidences of their Sin and Miſery. This is an Evil in both, but not equally dangerous; for he that ſhuts his Eyes againſt his own Graces and Priviledges, loſeth but his Peace and Comfort for a time; but he that ſhuts his Eyes againſt the Evidences of his Sin and Miſery loſeth his precious Soul to all Eternity! Of this latter ſort of Self-deceivers the World is full, and theſe are the Men I am concerned with in this Point.

O that ſome Men had leſs Trouble! And Oh that ſome had more! If the fooliſh Virgins had been leſs confident, they had certainly been more ſafe, Matth. 25. If thoſe glorious Profeſſors in Matth. 7. 22. had not ſhut their Eyes againſt their own Hypocriſy, Chriſt had not ſhut againſt him the Door of Salvation and Glory. Ananias and Saphira; Hymeneus and Philetus; Alexander and Demas; with multitudes more of that ſort, are the ſad Inſtances and Proofs of this Point. Is is ſaid, Prov. 30. 12. There is a Generation that is pure in their own Eyes, and yet is not waſhed from their Filthineſs. Through what falſe Spectacles do the Men of that Generation look upon their own Souls; the Men of that Generation are multiplyed in this Generation: Never was any Age over-run with a Generation of vain, ſelf-cozening, formal Profeſſors, as this Generation is.

Three Things I ſhall here endeavour to do.

(1.) To give Evidence beyond Contradiction to this ſad Truth, that among Profeſſors are found many Self deceivers.

(2.) To aſſign the true Cauſes and Reaſons why it is ſo. And,

(3.) Improve it in thoſe practical Inferences the Point affords.

SECT. II.

THat there are multitudes of ſuch Self-deceivers among Profeſſors, will appear;

1. Firſt, by this, that there are every where to be found many more Profeſſors than Converts. Unregenerate Profeſſors, whoſe Religion is but the Effect of Education. Chriſtianity by the favour of an early Providence was the firſt Comer, it firſt beſpoke them for it ſelf; theſe are Chriſtians of an human Creation, rather born, than new-born Believers. Now all theſe are ſelf-deceived, and haſting to Damnation, under the Efficacy of a ſtrong Deluſion; for if a Man think himſelf to be ſomething, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himſelf, ſaith the Apoſtle, Gal. 6. 3. Surely our Birth priviledge, without the new Birth, is nothing, yea worſe than nothing, as to our laſt and great Account; that which ſtands for a great Sum in our Arithmetick, its nothing, it is but a Cypher yea ſee in God's, Except a Man be born again (ſays the Lips of Truth) he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God, Joh. 3. 3.

Poor Self-deceivers, ponder thoſe Words of Chriſt; you have hitherto thought your civil Education, your dead and heartleſs Duties, enough to denominate you Chriſtians before God; but think now, and learn what that Scripture meaneth; and be aſſured you muſt experience another manner of Converſion, or elſe it is impoſſible for you to eſcape eternal Damnation.

2. Secondly, It is too manifeſt by this, that many Profeſſors are only acquainted with the External of Religion; and all their Duties are no more than a complyance of the outward Man with the Commands of God: This is the ſuperficial Religion which deceives and betrays multitudes into eternal Miſery. True Religion ſeats it ſelf in the Inward Man, and acts effectually upon the vital Powers: Killing Sin in the Heart, and purging the Deſigns and Delights from Carnality and Selfiſhneſs, engaging the Heart for God, ſetting it as a Bow in its full Bent for him, in the Approach we make to him: But how little are many Profeſſors acquainted with theſe things!

Alas! If this be all we have to ſtand upon, how dangerous a Station is it? What is external Conformity, but an artificial Imitation of that which only lives in the Souls of good Men? Thus was Jehu deceived; he did many external Acts of Obedience to God's Command, but Jehu took no heed to walk in the Way of the Lord God of Iſrael, with his Heart, 2 Kings 10. 31. alſo this was his Overthrow.

This alſo was the Ruin of thoſe Formaliſts Ezek. 33. 31. they came and ſat before the Lord as his People: The Word was to them as a lovely Song; mightily charmed with the Modulation of the Prophet's Voice, and his lively Geſture, but all this while their Hearts went after their Covetouſneſs: And what abundance of ſuch Phariſaical, Superficial Religion is every where to be found?

3. Third

3. Thirdly, It appears by this, that every Tryal made by Sufferings upon Profeſſors, blows away multitudes like dry Leaves in Autumn, by a ſtormy Wind; many fall from their own Stedfaſtneſs in ſhaking Times: Proſperity multiplies vain Profeſſors, and Adverſity purges the Church of them. Then ſhall many be offended, Matth. 24. 10.

This the Scripture every where marks as a Symptom of Hypocriſy, Pſal. 78. 8. A Generation that ſet not their Heart aright: And whoſe Spirit was not ſtedfaſt with God. 1 Joh. 2. 19. But they went out, that they might be made manifeſt, that they were not of us, Matth. 13. 21. For when Tribulation or Perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the Word by and by he is offended. But ſhould one have told them in the Days of their firſt Profeſſion, that all their Zeal and Labour in Religion would have ended in this, it is like they would have replyed as Hazael to the Man of God, 2 King. 8. 13. But what is thy Servant, a Dog, that he ſhould do this great thing? Quantum mutatus ab illo?

Oh how unlike is their dark and dirty Evening to their glorious and hopeful Morning! Theſe Profeſſors have more of the Moon than of the Sun, little Light, leſs Heat, but many Changes. They deceive many, yea, they deceive themſelves, but cannot deceive God. During the Calm, what a flouriſh do they make? And with what Gallantry do they ſail? By and by you may hear horribiles Tempeſtates, and ſoon after you may ſee horrenda Naufragia, a dreadful Shipwrack, after a furious Storm; and no Wonder, for they wanted that ἴδιον σπεῖρον, that Ballaſt and Eſtabliſhments in themſelves that would have kept them tite and ſtable. Jam. 3. 17.

4. Fourthly, It is too apparent by this, that many Profeſſors ſecretly indulge and ſhelter beloved Luſts under the Wings of their Profeſſion. This like a Worm at the Root will wither and kill them at laſt, how fragrant ſoever they may ſeem to be for a Seaſon. Gideon had ſeventy Sons, but one Baſtard; but that one Baſtard was the death of all his ſeventy Sons.

Some Men have many excellent Gifts, and perform multitudes of Duties, but one ſecret Sin indulged and allowed, will deſtroy them all at laſt. He that is partial as to the Mortification of his Sin, is undoubtedly hypocritical in his Profeſſion. David's Evidence was good for his Integrity, Only ſuch Profeſſors will never clear themſelves from Hypocriſy. I was alſo upright before him, and kept my ſelf from mine Iniquity, ſaith he, Pſal. 18. This is the right Eye, and right Hand which every ſincere Chriſtian muſt pluck out, and cut off, Matth. 5. 29, 30.

Which is a Metaphor from Chyrurgeons, whoſe manner it is when the whole is in danger by any part, to cut it off, ne pars ſincera trahatur; leſt all periſh.

Their ſuppreſſing ſome Luſts raiſeth their Confidence, the indulging of one razeth the Foundation of their Hopes, and thus they deceive themſelves.

5. Fifthly, This alſo manifeſts the Self-deceits of many Profeſſors, that the ſecret Duties of Religion, or at leaſt the ſecret Intercourſe of the Soul with God in them, is a ſecret hid from the Knowledge and Experience of many Profeſſors.

To attend the Ordinances of God in the Sea- of them they know, to pray in their Families the ſtated Hours thereof they know; but to come from all the World into their Cloſets, and there to pour out their Hearts before the Lord, know not.

To feel ſomewhat within, paining them like an empty hungry Stomach, until they have eaten that hidden Manna, that Bread in ſecret; I mean refreſhed their Souls with real Communion with the Lord there; this is a Myſtery locked up from the Acquaintance of many that call themſelves Chriſtians; and yet this is made a Characteriſtical Note of a ſincere Chriſtian by Chriſt himſelf, in Matth. 6. 6.

O Reader, if thy Heart were right with God, and thou didſt not cheat thy ſelf with a vain Profeſſion, thou wouldeſt have frequent Buſineſs with God, which thou wouldeſt be loth thy deareſt Friend, or the Wife of thy Boſom ſhould be privy to: Non eſt religio ubi omnia patent. Religion doth not lay all open to the Eyes of Men. Obſerved Duties maintain our Credit, but ſecret Duties maintain our Life. It was the ſaying of an Heathen about his ſecret correſpondency with his Friend, what need the World be acquainted with it? Thou and I are Theater enough to each other: There are encloſed Pleaſures in Religion, which none but renewed ſpiritual Souls do feelingly underſtand.

6. Laſtly, How many more profeſs Religion in theſe Days than ever made Religion their Buſineſs! Phyloſophy tells us, there is a πρᾶγμα, and a παρεργὸν, a Main-Buſineſs, and a By-buſineſs, the ſame is found in Religion alſo.

There are that give themſelves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. whoſe Converſation or Trade is in Heaven, Phil. 3. 18. the End or Scope of whoſe Life is Chriſt, Heb. 13. 7, 8. who give Religion the precedency both in Time and Affection, Pſal. 5. 3. Rom. 12. 11. who are conſtant and indefatigable in the Work of the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. 58.

And there are alſo that take up Religion rather for Oſtentation than for an Occupation, who never mind the Duties of Religion, but when they have nothing elſe to do; and when their outward Man is engaged in the Duties of it, yet their Heart is not in it; they hear, they pray, ἡ ὃ ψυχὴ ἄλλοθι ἔξω, as Chryſoſtome ſpeaks, but their Souls, their Thoughts and Minds are abroad. It is not their Buſineſs to have Fellowſhip with God in Duties, to get their Luſts mortifyed, their Hearts tryed, their Souls conformed to the Image of God in Holineſs.

They pray as if they prayed not, and hear as if they heard not, and if they feel no Power in Ordinances, no Quickening in Duties, it is no Diſappointment at all to them; for theſe were not their Deſigns in drawing nigh to God in theſe Appointments.

And thus you ſee what Numbers of Profeſſors deceive themſelves.

SECT. III.

AND if we ſeriouſly enquire into the Grounds and Cauſes of this Self-deceit among Profeſſors, we ſhall find theſe four Things conſpiring to delude and cheat them, in the great Concern of their Salvation.

1. Firſt, The natural Deceitfulneſs of the Heart, than which nothing is more treacherous, and falſe, Jer. 17. 9. The Heart is deceitful above all Things, and deſperately wicked; מִכֹּל עָקֹב הַלֵּב Supplantativum cor, pra omnibus the Heart is the greateſt Supplanter, the moſt crafty and ſubtil Cheat of all, it deceives us, as Jacob did his Brother, (to whoſe Ar. Mont.

Name this Text alludes.) It defeats us of our heavenly Heritage, as Jacob supplanted him in his earthly one; while we are gone a hunting after earthly Trifles. And wherein its Deceitfulness principally appears, you may see by the solemn Caveat of the Apostle, James 1. 22. wherein he warns us to beware, that in hearing the Word we deceive not our selves by false Reasonings; for so παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαυτοὺς imports, and may be strictly rendred, false reasoning themselves, namely, by making false Syllogisms; whereby they misconclude about their spiritual and eternal Estate and Condition, and befool themselves.

The time will come when a Man's own Heart will be found to have the chief hand in his Ruin; and what Apollodorus did but fancy his Heart said to him, some Men's Hearts will tell them in earnest when they come to the place of Misery and Torment; ἐγὼ σοὶ τούτων αἰτία. I have been the cause of all this. I have betrayed thee into all these Torments. It was my Laziness, my Credulity, my Averseness to the ways of strict Godliness, Mortification and Self-denyal have for ever undone thee. When thou satest under the convincing Truths of the Gospel, it was I that whispered those Atheistical Surmises into thine Ear, perswading thee all thou heardest was but the intemperate Heat of an hot-brained Zealot; when the Judgments of God were denounced, and the Misery thou now feelest forewarned and threatned, it was I that whispered what the Tongue of another once spake out, Tunc credam, cum illuc venero. I will believe it when I come thither.

Surely this is a great Truth which was observed by the Wisest of Men, He that trusteth in his own Heart is a Fool, Proverbs 28. 26. And thousands of such Fools are to be found among Professors.

2. Secondly, Satan is a chief Conspirator in this treacherous Design; we are not Ignorant (saith the Apostle) of his Devices; νοήματα his Sophistry and Slights, 2 Cor. 2. 21. his μεθοδείας, trains and methods of Temptation, which are thoroughly studyed, artificially moulded and ordered; even such Systems as Tutors and Professors of Arts and Sciences have, and read over to their Auditors; as one judiciously observes, to be the import of that Text, Eph. 6. 11. Nor is it to be wondred at, considering his vast Knowledge, deep Malice, and long Experience in this Art of Cheating; together with the great Corruption and Pronity of the Hearts of Men to close with his Devices, and believe his Impostures; that so vast a number of Souls are taken Captive by him at his Will, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

Dr. Goodwin, Child of Light.

'Tis the God of this World that blindes the minds of them that believe not, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. The God of this World, (so call'd by a Mimesis) who leads a World of poor deluded Wretches to Destruction, having first blinded their Minds, that is deluded, and with his hellish Art practised upon their Understanding, that τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν leading and directive Faculty, which is to the Soul what Eyes are to the Body.

I remember Basil brings in Satan thus insulting Christ, I have them, I have them: For all thy Blood and Miracles, thy Wooings and Beseechings, thy Knockings and Strivings, I have cousened thee of them at the very Gates of Heaven: For all their Illuminations, and tasting of the Powers of the World to come: I have shipwrackt them in the very Mouth of the Haven.

3. Thirdly, the common Works found in unregenerate Souls, deceive many, who cannot distinguish them from the special Works of the Spirit in God's Elect: See that startling Scripture, Heb. 6. 4. Where you find among the common Operations of the Spirit upon Apostates Illumination, which gives perspicuity to their Minds in discerning spiritual Truths, and that frequently with more distinctness and depth of Judgment than some gracious Souls attain unto; besides, it is the matter out of which many rare and excellent Gifts are formed in admirable variety, which are singularly useful to others as they are exercised in expounding the Scriptures, defending the Truths of Christ by solid Arguments, preaching, praying, &c. And make the subject of them renowned and honoured in the Church of God, whilst mean time, they are dazzled with their own Splendor, and fatally ruined by them.

There you find also Tasting as well as enlightening. So that they seem to abound not only in Knowledge, but in Sense also, (i. e.) in some kind of Experience of what they know; for Experience is the bringing of things to the Test of spiritual Sense. They do taste or experience the Good that comes by the promises of the Word and discoveries of Heaven and Glory; though they feel not experimentally the transforming Efficacy of these things upon their own Souls.

Now that Illumination furnishing them with excellent Gifts (as before was noted) enabling them to assent to Gospel Truths, which the Scripture calls Faith, Acts 8. 12. and working in them conviction of Sin, 1 Sam. 15. 24. Reformation of Life, 2 Pet. 2. 20. and touching their Affections also with transient Joy in the Discovery of those Truths.

And this Taste which comes so near to the Experience which the sanctifyed Soul enjoys; these things seem to put their condition beyond Controversy, and lay a Foundation for their built Confidence; nothing is more apt to beget and nourish such a Confidence than the melting and workings of our Affections about spiritual things; for as a grave Divine hath well observed, such a Man seems to have all that is required of a Christian, and to have attained the very top of all Knowledge, which is the operation and influence upon the Affections. When they shall find Heat in their Affections, as well as Light in their Minds, how apt are they to say (as these Self-deceivers in the Text did) they are Rich, and have need of nothing! Now of all the false Signs of Grace, by which Men couzen themselves, none are so dangerous and destructive to Souls, as those that come nearest true ones: Never does Satan more effectually and securely manage his Cheats, than when he is transformed into an Angel of Light.

Mr. A. Ingelsb.

Among this sort of Self-deceivers, how many gifted Men, and among that sort some employed in the office of the Ministry will be found; whose dayly Employment being about spiritual things, studying, preaching, praying, &c. conclude themselves sanctifyed Persons, because they are conversant about sacred Employments, as if the Subject must be, because the Object is sacred. Oh that such would seriously ponder these two Scriptures, Matth. 7. 22. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſyed in thy Name? And in thy Name have cast out Devils? And in thy Name done many wonderful things? And 1 Cor. 9.

— least that by any means, when I have preached unto others, I my self should be cast away.

4. Lastly, To add here no more, this strengthens self-deceit exceedingly in many, viz. Their observations of, and comparing themselves with others. Thus the Pharisees, (those gross Self-deceivers) trusted in themselves that they were Righteous, and despised others, Luke 18. 9. their low rating of others, gave them that high rate and value of themselves: And thus the Proverb is made good, Regnat luscus inter cæcos, he that hath but one Eye is a King among the Blind.

Thus the false Apostles cheated and befool'd themselves, 2 Col. 10. 12. But they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise. God hath not made one Man a Measure or Standard to another Man, but his Word is the common Beam or Scale to try all Men.

These Men are as sharp-sighted to note other Mens Evils as their own Excellencies, to eye the Miscarriages of others with Derision, and their own Performances with Admiration.

They bless themselves when they behold the profane in their Impieties, Luke 18. 11. God, I thank thee that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as the Publican, q. d. O what a Saint am I in comparison of these Miscreants! The Pharisees Religion you see runs all upon Nots; a negative Holiness is enough to him; and the Measure he takes of it is by comparison of himself, with others more externally vile than himself. A Christian may say with Praise and Humility, I am not as some Men are, but though he know nothing by himself, yet is he not thereby justified, 1 Cor. 4. 4. He neither rakes together the Enormities of the vilest, or the Infirmities of the holiest, to justify and applaud himself as these Self-deceivers do. And these are the Causes and Occasions of that general Deception, under which so great a Part of the professing World bow down and perish.

SECT. IV.

3. IN the last Place I shall improve this Point variously according to the Importance and usefulness of it, with as much Brevity and Closeness of Application as I can: And,

Use. 1. Shall be for Caution to Professors; before I tell you what Use you should make of it, I must tell you what Use you may not make of it.

First, Don't make this Use of it, to conclude from what hath been said, that all Professors are but a pack of Hypocrites, and that there is no Truth nor Integrity in any Man: This is both intolerable Arrogance to ascend the Throne of God, and unparallel'd Uncharitableness to judge the Hearts of all Men.

Some Men are as apt to conclude others to be Hypocrites, by measuring their Hearts by their own, as others are to conclude themselves Saints, by comparing their own Excellencies with other Men's Corruptions: But blessed be God there is some Grain among the heap of Chaff, some true Diamonds among the counterfeit Stones. The Devil hath not the whole Piece, a Remnant according to Election belongs really to the Lord.

2. Secondly, Don't make this Use of it, that Assurance must needs be impossible because so many Professors are found to be Self-deceivers.

That Assurance is one of the great Difficulties in Religion, is a great Truth; but that it is therefore unattainable in this World is very false. Popish Doctrine indeed makes it impossible, but that Doctrine is practically confuted in the comfortable Experience of many Souls: All are commanded to strive for it, 2 Pet. 1. 10. Give Diligence to make your Calling and Election sure: And some have the Happiness to obtain it. 2 Tim. 1. 12. For I know whom I have believed, and I am perswaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that Day.

Let the similar Works upon Hypocrites resemble as much as they will the saving Works of the Spirits upon Believers; yet God doth always, and the Saints do sometimes plainly discern the difference.

3. Thirdly, Don't make this Use of it, to conceal or hide the Truths or Graces of God, or refuse to profess, or confess them before Men, because many Professors deceive themselves and others also by a vain Profession; because another professeth what he hath not, must you therefore hide or deny what you have? 'Tis true, the Possession of Grace and Truth in your own Souls is that which saves you; but the Profession and Confession of it, is that which honours God, and edifyes; yea, sometimes is the Instrument to save others, It's your Comfort that you feel it, it's others Comfort to know that you do. Ostentation is your Sin, but a serious and humble Profession is your Duty, Rom. 10. 9.

SECT. V.

Use 2. HAving shewed you in the former Section what Use you ought not to make of this Doctrine, I will next shew you what Use you ought to make of it; and surely you cannot improve this Point to a better purpose than from it to take warning, and look to your selves, that you be not of that number who deceive themselves in their Profession. If this be so, suffer me closely to press that great Apostolical Caution, 1 Cor. 10. 12. Let him that think he stands take heed lest he fall. O Professors, look carefully to your Foundation; be not high-minded but fear: You have, it may be, done and suffered many things in and for Religion; you have excellent Gifts and sweet Comforts, a warm Zeal for God, and high Confidence of your Integrity; all this may be right (for ought I or, it may be, you know) but yet 'tis possible it may be false also; you have sometimes judged your selves, and pronounced your selves upright; but remember your final Sentence is not yet pronounced by your Judge. And what if God weigh you over again in his more equal Ballance, and should say Mene Tekel, thou art weighed in the Ballance, and art found wanting: What a confounded Man wilt thou be under such a Sentence! Qui splendent in conspectu hominis, sordent in conspectu Judicis; things that are highly esteemed of Men, are an abomination in the Sight of God; he seeth not as Man seeth.

Thy Heart may be false, and thou not know it; yea, it may be false, and thou strongly confident of its Integrity.

The Saints may approve thee, and God condemn thee, Rev. 3. 1. Thou hast a Name that thou livest, but thou art dead: Men may say, There's a true Nathaniel, and God may say, there's a Self-couzening Pharisee.

Reader, thou hast heard of Judas and Demas; of Ananias and Saphira; of Hymeneus and Phyletus; once once renowned and famous Professors, and thou hast heard what they proved at last.

Take heed their Case be not thine own; do they not all, as it were, with one Mouth cry to thee, O Professor! If thou wilt not come where we are, don't couzen they self as we did: If thou expectest a better Place and Lot, be sure thou get a sincerer Heart: Had we been more self-suspicious, we had been more safe.

I would not scare you with needless Jealousies, but I would fain prevent fatal Mistakes. Don't you find your Hearts deceitful in many things? don't they shuffle over secret Duties? Don't they censure the same Evils in others, which they scarce reprove in your selves? Are there not many by-ends in Duties? Don't you find they are far less affected with a great deal of Service and Honour done to God by others, than with a little by your selves?

Is it not hard to look upon other Men's Excellencies without Envy, or upon your own without Pride?

And are you not troubled with a busie Devil, as well as with a bad Heart? Hath not he that circuits the whole World, observed you? Hath he not studyed your Constitution Sins, and found out that Sin which most easily besets you? Hath he less Malice against your Souls than others; Surely you are in the very Thick of Temptations; thousands of Snares are round about you. Oh how difficultly are the Righteous saved! How hard to be uprigbt! How few even of the professing World win Heaven at last!

O therefore search your Hearts, Professors, and let this Caution go down to your very Reins; let him that thinks he stands, take heed lest he fall.

Away with rash uncharitable Censures of others, and be more just and severe in censuring your selves. Away with dry and unprofitable Controversies, and spend your Thoughts upon this great Question, Am I found, or am I rotten at Heart? Am I a new Creature, or an old Creature still, in a new Creatures Dress and Habit? Beg the Lord that you be not deceived in that great Point (your Integrity) whatever you may be mistaken in. Pray that you be not given up to an heedless, careless, and vain Spirit, and then have Religious Duties for a Rattle to still and quiet your Consciences.

Surely that Ground work can never be laid too sure, upon which so great a stress as thy Soul and Eternity must depend. It will not repent thee (I dare promise) when thou comest to dye, that thou hast employed thy Time and Strength to this End: Whilst others are panting after the Dust of the Earth, and saying, Who will shew us any Good? be thou panting after the Assurance of the Love of God, and crying, Who will shew me how to make my Calling and Election sure?

O deceive not your selves with Names and Notions! Think not, because you are for a stricter Way of Worship, or because you associate with (and are accordingly denominated) one of the more reformed Professors, that therefore you are safe enough: Alas! How small an Interest have Titles, Modes, and Denominations in Religion? Suppose a curious Artist take a Lump of Lead and refine it, and cast it into the Mould; whence it comes forth shining, and bearing some noble Figure, suppose of an Eagle, yet it is but a leaden Eagle. Suppose the Figure of a Man, and that in the most exact Lineaments and Proportions, yet still it is but a leaden Man. Nay, let it bear the Figure of an Angel, it is but a leaden Angel. For the base and ignoble Matter is the same it was, though the Figure be not. Even so, Take an unregenerate carnal Man, let his Life be reformed, and his Tongue refined; and call him a zealous Conformist, or a strict Non-conformist; call him a Presbyterian, an Independant, or what you will; he is all the while but a carnal Conformist, or Non-conformist; an unregenerate Presbyterian, a carnal Independant; for the Nature is still the same, though the stamp and figure his Profession gives him, be not the same.

O my Friends, believe it, fine Names, and brave Words, are of little value with God. God will no more spare you for these, than Samuel did Agag for his delicate Ornaments, and spruce Appearance: Either make sure the Root of the Matter, or the Leaves of a vain Profession will not long cover you.

To be deceived by another is bad enough, but to deceive our selves is a thousand Times worse.

To deceive our selves in Truths of the Superstructure is bad, and they that do so shall suffer loss; 1 Cor. 3. 12. But to deceive our selves in the Foundation is a desperate Deceit and shipwracks all our Hope and Happiness at once.

If any Man lose his Money by a cheat it troubles him, but to lose his Soul by a cheat will confound him: If a Man lose an Eye, an Ear, a Hand, a Foot; yet omnia Deus dedit duplicia, as Chrysostome speaks; God hath given these Members double; so that there's another left; animam vero unam; but the Soul is one, and only one, and if that be damned, you have not another to be saved.

O therefore be restless till it be, and till you know it be out of Eternal Danger.

SECT. VI.

Use 3. IN Conclusion, If so many Professors of Religion be cheated in their Profession, let all that are well satisfyed and assured in their Integrity bless the Lord whilst they live for that Mercy. O 'tis a Mercy that no Unsatisfyed Soul can have; yea, and its a Mercy that many gracious Souls cannot obtain, though they seek it with Tears, and would part with all the Pleasant Things they have in the World to enjoy it.

This is that Mercy that gives Souls the highest pleasures this World is acquainted with, or the State of this Mortality can bear; for let the well assured Soul but consider what it is assured of in Christ with the Purchases of his Blood. O what is this! I am my Beloved, and my Beloved is mine, Cant. 2. 16. What a vital Ravishing overpowering Efficacy is in that Voice of Faith! Let it but look back a few Years, and compare what it was with what it is; it was afar off, it's now made nigh, Ephes. 2. 12. 13. It was not beloved, but is now beloved, Rom. 25. 26. It had not obtained Mercy, but now hath obtained Mercy, 1 Pet. 2. 10. Or let the assured Soul look forward and compare what it now is, and hath, with what it shortly shall be made, and put in Possession of: Beloved (saith the Apostle) now are ve Sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be: But we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, John 3. 2.

I say let the assured Soul but steep its Thoughts by Meditation in these Subjects, and it is as impossible to keep him from his Transports of Joy, as it is for a Man to forbear laughing when he is tickled.

O what a Life have you in Comparison of other Men? Some have two Hells, one present, another coming; you have two Heavens, one in Hand, the other in Hope. Some of your own Brethren in Christ, that have been, it may be, many Years panting after Assurance, are still denyed it; but God hath indulged so peculiar a Favour to you. Bless ye the Lord, and make his praise glorious.

CHAP. III.

Containing the Proof and Improvement of Doct. 2. That true Grace is exceeding Gracious, and greatly enricheth the Soul that hath it: It's Christ's Gold.

SECT. I. THE Lord Jesus here chuseth the most pure, precious, resplendent, durable, and valuable Thing, in all the Treasuries and Magazines of Nature, to shadow forth Saving Grace, which is infinitely more excellent: Certainly that must be the best Thing, which the best Things in Nature can but imperfectly shadow forth. What was the Golden Oyl emptyed through the two Golden Pipes, Zech. 4. 12. But the precious Graces of God, flowing through Christ, into all his Members, God is precious, but one Gram of Saving Grace, is more precious than all the Gold of Ophir. It cannot be gotten for Gold, neither shall Silver be weighed for the price thereof, Job 28. 15. Surely Gold and Silver, Saphires, Diamonds and Rubies are not worth the mentioning, when saving Grace is once mentioned. For Consider it,

1. First, In its Cause and Fountain from whence it flows, and you shall find it to be the Fruit of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22. Who upon that Account is called the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. It derives its Original from the most High; it is Spirit born of Spirit, John 3. 6. All the Rules of Morality, all Human Diligence and Industry can never produce one gracious habit or act alone, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are sufficient of our selves, &c.

Nay, we speak not becoming the incomparable worth of Grace, when we say, it is the Fruit and Birth of the Spirit; for so are common Gifts also. There are several Emanations from this Sun, divers Streams from this Fountain, but of all its Operations and Productions, this of saving Grace is the most Noble and Excellent. Gifts are from the Spirit as well as Grace, but Grace is more excellent than the best Gifts, 1 Cor. 12. 31. Covet earnestly the best Gifts, and yet shew I unto you a more Excellent way. Hence you read in Phil, 1. 10. of things that are excellent, or as the Original, διαφέροντα might be rendred, Things that differ. namely, in respect of excellency, not as good and evil, but as less good, and more good differ. Gifts have their value and preciousness, but the best Gifts differ as much from Grace, as Brass from Gold, though both be generated by the Influence of the same Sun. Gifts (as one saith) are dead Graces, but Graces are living Gifts: It is the most excellent Production of the highest and most excellent Cause.

2. Secondly, Consider it in its Nature, and you will find it Divine, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Partakers of the Divine Nature, viz. in our Sanctification; not that it gives us the Properties of the Divine Nature, they are incommunicable; but the similitude and resemblance of it is stamped upon our Souls, in the Work of Grace.

The new man is renewed in knowledge, after the Image of him that created him, Col. 3. 10. The Schoolmen, and some of the Fathers, place this Image or resemblance of God, in the Natural Faculties of the Soul, viz. the Understanding, Memory and Will; which is an umbrage of a Trinity in Unity; but it rather consists in the Renovation of the Faculties by Grace; for in this we bear the Divine Image upon our Souls, and that Image or resemblance of God in Holiness, is the Beauty and Honour of our Souls.

It is their Beauty, How fair, and how pleasant art thou, O Love, for Delights! saith Christ of his People, Cant. 7. 6. Natural Beauty consists in the Symmetry, and comely Proportion of Parts each with the other; Spiritual Beauty in the Harmony or agreeableness of our Souls to God: And as it is our chiefest Beauty, so certainly it is our highest Honour; for it gives us access unto God, who is the Fountain of Honour and Glory; and this makes the righteous more excellent than his Neighbour; let his Neighbour be what he will, tho' the Blood of Nobles run in his Veins, the Righteous is more excellent than he, except Saving Grace be also diffused into his Soul.

3. Thirdly, Consider it in its recipient Subject, and you will find its value still to increase; for the preeious Oyl of Saving Grace is never poured into any other than an Elect Vessel.

Hence Faith, one Branch of Sanctification, is with respect to its subject, stiled the Faith of God's Elect, Tit. 1 1. Whosoever finds true Grace in his Soul, may (during the Evidence thereof) from it strongly conclude his Election, looking backward, and his Salvation looking forward Rom. 8. 30. It marks and seals the Person in whom it is for Glory. God hath set apart him that is godly for himself, Psal. 4. 3.

4. Fourthly, View the precious worth of Grace in its excellent Effects and Influences upon the Soul, in which it inheres.

(1.) It adorns it with incomparable Ornaments, which are of great price in the sight of God, 1 Pet. 3. 4. Yea it reflects such Beams of Glory in the Soul where its seat is, that Christ himself the Author, is also the Admirer of it, Cant. 4. 9. Thou hast ravished my Heart, my Sister, my Spouse; thou hast ravished my Heart with one of thine Eyes, with one of the Chains of thy Neck. And as one overcome with its excelling Beauty, he saith, Turn away thine Eyes from me, for they have overcome me, Cant. 6. 5.

(2.) It Elevates and Enobles a Man's Spirit beyond all other principles in Man; It sets the Heart and Affections upon Heaven, and takes them up with the Glory of the Invisible World, Phil. 3. 20. But our Conversation is in Heaven, from whence we look for a Saviour. Whilst others are trading for Corn, and Wine; for Sheep and Oxen; for Feathers and Trifles; the gracious Soul is trading with God for Pardon and Peace; for Righteousness and Life; for Glory and Immortality. Truly our Fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ: 1 John 1. 3.

(3.) It doth not only raise the Spirit by Conversing with God, and things above; but transforms the Soul, by that Converse, into the Likeness of those heavenly Objects it converseth with. It changeth them into the same Image, 2 Cor. 3. 18. so that though the sanctifyed Man still remains the who he was, yet not the what he was before, the very temper of his Spirit is altered.

(4.) It doth not only transform the Soul in which it is; but preserves the Subject in which it is: It is a singular Preservative from Sin; so that though Sin be in them still, and works in them still, yet it cannot prevail in them still to fulfil the Lusts of it, as it was wont to do, Gal. 5. 17. Sin conceives, but cannot bring forth Fruit unto Death; this gives it a miscarrying Womb.

(5.) It doth not only preserve it from Sin, but Grace establisheth the Soul in whom it is, far beyond any other Arguments without, or any other Principles within a Man. It is a good thing that the Heart be established with Grace, Heb. 13. 9. This is that which the Apostle calls our own Stedfastness, or that Ballast we have within our selves; which keeps us tite and stable. O the Excellency of Grace!

(6.) To conclude, it is the Root of all that precious Fruit which we bring forth to God in this World. It is the Root of every gracious Word in our Lips, and of every gracious Work in our Hands: Be the Matter of our gracious Thoughts never so excellent, the Matter of our heavenly Discourses and Prayers never so sweet; still Grace is the Root of the Matter, Job 19. 28. O then what a precious thing is Grace!

5. Fifthly, View it in its Properties, and you will soon discover its transcendent Excellencies: The richest Epithets are no Hyperboles here, we speak not beyond the Value of it, when we call it Supernatural Grace, for so it is. It comes down from above, from the Father of Lights, Jam. 1. 17. Nature can never be improved to that Height, how much soever its Admirers boast of it: Nor do we strain too high, when we call it Immortal Grace; for so hath God made it: This is that Water which springs up in the sanctifyed Soul into eternal Life, John 4. 14. It will not dye when thou dyest, but ascend with the Soul from which it is inseparable, and be swallowed up with it into Glory, Rom. 8. 10. you may out-live your Friends, you may out-live your Estates, you may out-live your Gifts; but you can't out-live your Graces.

Shall I say, it is the most sweet and comfortable thing that ever the Soul was acquainted with in this World, next Jesus Christ, the Author and Fountain of it? Sure, If I so speak, I have as many Witnesses to attest it, as there be gracious Souls in the World: Nothing is more comfortable than Grace, except Christ, and yet without Grace no Soul can feel the Comforts of Christ, in the Troubles of Life, or in the Straits of Death: This is a Spring of Comfort.

6. Sixthly, Consider it in its Design and Scope; and you will still discern more and more of its precious Excellency: For what is the Aim and End of God in the Infusions and Improvements of Grace, but to temper and mould our Spirits by it, into a Meekness and Fitness for the Enjoyment of himself in the World to come? Col. 1. 12. Giving Thanks to the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light? Compare this with 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God.

O blessed Design! How precious must that Work be, which is wrought for so high and glorious a purpose as this is! No Work more excellent, no End more noble.

7. Seventhly, Consider the Means and Instruments, both principal and subordinate, employed in this Work: Many blessed Instruments are set on Work to beget, conserve and improve it in our Souls; and these all speak the precious Worth of it: No wise Man will dig for a base and worthless Metal with golden Mattocks. The Blood of Christ was shed to procure it, Heb. 13. 12.

The Spirit of God is sent forth to form and create it; for it is his own Workmanship, Ephes. 2. 10. his Fruit, Gal. 5. 22.

The Ordinances and Officers of the Gospel were at first instituted, and ever since continued in the Church, for this Works sake, John 17. 17. and Eph. 4. 12. It's the Fruit of Christ's Blood; yea, and it hath cost the Sweat and Blood of the Dispensers of the Gospel too.

Nay, all the Works of Providence look this way, and aim at this thing, Rom. 8. 28. What is the errand of all God's Rods, but to make us partakers of his Holiness? Heb. 12. 10.

8. Eighthly, The high value that the most high God sets upon Grace, shews it to be an excellent thing indeed: It is of great Price in his sight, 1 Pet. 3. 4. no Service finds Acceptation with God, but what is performed by Grace: None but sanctified Vessels, are meet for the Master's Use. The End of the Commandment is Charity out of a pure Heart, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

The weakest Performances of Grace find Acceptance with him, though clogg'd with many sinful Weaknesses and Infirmities, Heb. 11. 31, 32. God so prise it well may we: He that made the Jewel, best understands the value of it.

9. Ninthly, The Hypocritical Pretences made of it all over the Professing World, shew what a most precious and desirable thing it is: If there were not some singular Glory in it, why doth every one covet to be reputed gracious? Nay, the Devil himself baits many of his Hooks of Temptation with a shew of Grace; for he knows Sin hath no native beauty of its own to entice, and therefore he borrows the Paint and Pretence of Holiness to cover it: But O what a Dilemma will the Hypocrite be posed with at last? And how can he answer it when God shall demand?

If Grace were Evil, why didst thou so affect the Name and Reputation of it? And if it were good, why didst thou satisfy thy self with the empty Name and Shadow of it only?

10. Tenthly, To conclude, the incomparable esteem that all good Men have for it, shews it to be a thing of inestimable Price.

Grace is the Sum of all their Prayers, the Scope of all their Endeavours, the Matter of their chief Joy, the Reward of their Afflictions and Sufferings. Their chief Joys and Sorrows, Hopes and Fears in this World, are taken up about it: all which it appears that its Price is above Rubies, and all the Gold and Silver in the World are but Dung and Dross in comparison with it.

SECT.

SECT. II.

Containing Six practical Inferences from this precious Truth.

Infer. 1. Is saving Grace more precious than Gold? Let them that have it bless God for it, and not boast: Men's Hearts are as apt to puff up and swell with spiritual, as with material Gold: It's hard to be an Owner of much of this Gold, and not be lifted up with it. To keep down thy Heart, and preserve thine Eyes from being dazzled with these their gracious Excellencies, it will be needful for thee, Christian, sometime to consider,

That although Grace be one of the most excellent things that ever God created, yet it is but a Creature, a dependent thing, 1 Cor. 5. 17.

Yea, it is not only a Creature, but a very imperfect Creature yet in thy Soul; labouring under many Weaknesses, Phil. 3. 12. and sometimes ready to dye, Rev. 3. 2.

Though it can do many things for you, yet it cannot justify you before God: You cannot make a Garment of it to cover your Guilt, nor plead the Dignity of it at God's Bar for your Discharge; 'tis not your inherent, but Christ's imputed Righteousness must do that for you, though in other respects it be very necessary.

Nay, remember, how excellent soever it be, it's not the native Growth and Product of your Hearts; all the Grace you have is foreign to your Natures, and what you have is received, 1 Cor. 4. 7.

And lastly, Remember he that is most proud and conceited of his own Graces, will be found to be the Owner of least Grace, and hath most cause to question whether he hath any or no. It's the Nature of Grace to humble, abase and empty the Soul; and it's the Strength of our Corruptions which thus puffs us up with vain Conceits.

Infer. 2. Is saving Grace more excellent than Gold? What Cause then have the poorest Christians to be well satisfyed with their Lot? To others God hath given Ishmael's Portion, the Fatness of the Earth; to you Isaac's, the Graces of the Covenant: Their Portion is paid in Brass, yours in Gold: Many of you are poor in the World, but rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom which God hath promised, Jam. 2. 5. what is the Dust of the Earth, to the Fruits of the Spirit: You are troubled that you have no more of the World! it may be if you had more Gold, you would have less Grace: You consider not how many are poor and wretched in both Worlds, Moneyless and Christless too; You don't consider you are near come to that State, in which all your Wants will be fully supplyed; where you shall not need the Treasures of the Earth, and have your Desires satisfyed out of the Treasures of Grace and Glory.

Infer. 3. Is saving Grace Gold, yea, infinitely more precious than Gold? Then surely declining Christians are great Losers, and have Cause to be great Mourners. The Remission of the least Degree of Grace, is more to be lamented than the loss of the greatest Sum of Gold.

Though the Habits of Grace be not lost, yet the Acts of Grace may be suspended, 2 Sam. 12. 1. The Degrees of Grace may be remitted, Rev. 3. 3. The Evidences of Grace may be clouded, and consequently the Comforts of Grace may be suspended, Isa. 50. 10. and the least of these is such a Loss, as all the Treasures of the Earth cannot repair: Well therefore may declined Christians challenge the first Place among all the Mourners in the World.

Infer. 4. Is Grace so invaluably precious? How precious then ought the Ordinances of God to be to our Souls, by which Grace is first communicated, and afterwards improved in our Souls! The Law of thy Mouth is better unto me than thousands of Gold and Silver, Psal. 119. 72. and good Reason, whilst it imparts and improves that to which Gold and Silver is but Dross and Dung.

None but those that value not Grace, will ever slight the Means, or despise and injure the Instruments thereof. It's a sad Sign of a graceless World, when these precious things fall under Contempts and Slights.

Infer. 5. If Grace be so precious, how watchful should all gracious Persons be in the days of Temptation! The Design of Temptation is to rob you of your Treasure: When Cut-purses get into the Crowd, we use to say, Friends, look to your Purses. How many brave Christians have we read and heard of, that have rather chosen to part with their Lives, than with their Graces, who have resisted unto Blood, striving against Sin? Heb. 12. 4.

O Christians, you live in a cheating Age, many seeming Christians have lost all, and many real Christians have lost much, so much, that they are like to see but little Comfort in this World: Who are like to go Mourning to the Grave with that Lamentation, Job 29. 2, 3. O that it were with me as in times past.

Infer. 6. To conclude, Is there such precious worth in saving Grace? Then bless God for, and diligently use all Means to increase and improve it in your Souls. It's Gold for preciousness, and for usefulness; and must not be laid up in a Napkin: That's a Sin condemned by the very Scope of that Parable, Mat. 25. 14, 15.

All Christians indeed have not the same Advantages of Improvement, but all must improve it according to the Advantages they have in order to an Account. Reserved Christians who live too abstracted from the Society and Communion of others, and disperse not their Streams abroad to the Benefit of others; nor improve the Graces of others for their own Benefit, are wanting both to their own Duty and Comfort. See you a Man rich in Grace, O trade with him if you can, to improve your selves by him; and the rather, because you know not how soon Death may snatch him from you, and with him all his Stock of Grace is gone from you too, except what you made your own whilst you conversed with him: But alas! alas! Instead of holy profitable Soul-improving Communion, some are sullenly reserved; some are negligent and lazy; some are litigious and wrangling; more apt to draw forth the Dross, than the Gold; I mean the Corruptions, than Graces of others. And how few there be that drive a profitable Trade for increase of Grace, is sad to consider.

And as Grace is not improved by Communion with Men, so I doubt most Christians thrive but little in their Communion with God: We are too seldom in our Closets, too little upon our Knees, and when we are there we gain but little, we come not off such Gainers by Duty as we might. O Christians, think when you are hearing and praying, I am now trading with Heaven for that which is infinitely better than Gold. God is rich to all that call upon him, what a Treasure may I get get this Hour, if the fault be not in mine own Heart? And thus of the Second Observation.

CHAP. IV.

Wherein the Third Doctrine, being the main Subject of this Treatise is opened, and the Method of the whole Discourse stated, Doct. 3. That only it is to be accounted true Grace which is able to endure all those tryals appointed or permitted for the discovery of it.

SECT. I.

THE most wise God hath seen it fit to set all his People in a state of tryal in this World. First, He tryes, and then he Crowns them, James 1. 12. Blessed is the Man that endureth Temptation πειρασμὸν (i. e.) [Probation or tryal] for when he is tryed, he shall receive the Crown of Life: &c.

No Man can say what he is, whether his Graces be true or false, till they be tryed and examined by those things which are to them as Fire is to Gold. These Self-deceivers in the Text, thought they had Grace; yea they thought they had been rich in Grace; but it proved no better than dross: And therefore Christ here counsels them to buy of him Gold tryed in the Fire, (i. e.) true Grace indeed, which appears to be so upon the various Proofs and Examinations of its Sincerity, which are to be made in this World, as well as in the great solemn tryal it must come to in the World to come.

The Scriptures speak of a twofold tryal, viz.

A tryal of Men's { Opinions / and / Graces }

1. First, The Opinions and Judgments of Men are tryed as by Fire, in which Sense we are to understand that place, 1 Cor. 3. 12, 13. Now if any Man build upon this Foundation, Gold, Silver, precious Stones, Wood, Hay, Stubble, every Man's work shall be made manifest, for the Day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by Fire, and the Fire shall try every Man's work of what sort it is.

This Text speaks of such Persons as hold the Foundation of Christianity, but yet superstructed such Doctrines and Practices, as were no more able to endure the Tryal, than Hay, Wood, or Stubble can endure the Fire. Such a Person hereby brings himself into danger, and though the Apostle will not deny the possibility, yet he asserts the difficulty of his Salvation: He shall be saved, yet so as by Fire, (i. e.) as a man is saved by leaping out of his House at midnight when it is all on Fire about his Ears, for so that phrase imports Amos 4. 11. and Jude 23. Glad to escape naked, and with the loss of his Goods, blessing God, he hath his Life for a prey; as little regard shall such have to their erroneous Notions, and unscriptural Opinions at last.

Dum probantur toti in fumum abeunt.

Quo ex judicio velut ex incendio nudus effugit. Chrysost.

2. Secondly, the Graces of Men are brought to the test as well as their Opinions. Tryal will be made of their Hearts, as well as of their heads; and upon this tryal the everlasting safety and happiness of the Person depends: If a Man's Opinions be some of them found Hay or Stubble, yet so long as he holds the head, and is right in the Foundation, he may be saved; but if a Man's supposed Graces be found so, all the World cannot save him: There is no way of escape if he finally deceive himself herein; and of this tryal of Graces my Text speaks: Sincere Grace is Gold tryed by Fire.

There is a twofold Tryal of Grace, Active, and Passive.

First, An Active tryal of it, in which we try it our selves, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your selves, prove your selves: (i. e.) measure your Hearts, Duties and Graces by the rule of the Word; see how they answer to that rule, bring your Hearts and the Word together by solemn Self-Examination, confer with your Reins, and commune with your own Hearts

Secondly, A Passive tryal of it; whether we try it or no, God will try it, he will bring our Gold to the touchstone, and to the Fire. Thou O Lord knowest me, thou hast seen me, and tryed mine Heart towards thee, saith the Prophet, Jer. 12. 3.

Sometimes he tryes the Strength and Ability of his Servants Graces, and thus he tryed Abraham, Heb. 11. 17. And sometimes he trys the soundness and sincerity of our Graces, so the Ephesian Angel was tryed and found dross, Rev. 2. 2. And so Job was tryed and found true Gold, Job 23. 10. These tryals are not made by God for his own Information, for he knows what is in Man, his Eyes pierce his Heart and Reins; but for our Information which is the true sence of Deut. 8. 2. Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty Years in the Wilderness, to humble thee and to prove thee, to know what was in thy Heart (i. e.) to make thee know it, by giving thee such experiments and tryals of it in those Wilderness straits and difficulties.

And these are the Tryals of Grace I am here to speak of, not excluding the Active Tryals made of our selves; no, no, all these Tryals made by God upon us, are designed to put us upon the Try of our selves: When God trys, we should try too.

Now the Method into which I shall cast the Discourse shall be to shew you.

1. First, What those Things are which try the sincerity of our Graces, as Fire tryes Gold.

2. Secondly, For what Ends doth God put the Graces of his People upon such Tryals in the World.

3. Thirdly, That such Grace only is sincere which can endure these Tryals.

4. Fourthly and Lastly, To apply the whole to the main uses of it.

SECT. II.

1. First. WHAT those things are which try the sincerity of Grace, as Fire tryes Gold.

Before I enter into Particulars it will be needful to acquaint you, that the Subject before me is full of difficulties. There is need (as one speaks) of much cautious respect to the various sizes and degrees of growth among Christians, and the vicissitudes of their inward Case; else we may darken and perplex the way instead of clearing it.

The portracture of a Christian is such as we can draw to one Model, but with respect to the fancy of some, as well as the Age and Strength of others.

Great heed ought also to be had in the Application of Marks and Signs, we should first try them, before we try our selves, or others by them. Marks and Signs are by some distinguished into exclusive, inclusive and positive; Exclusive Marks serve to shut out bold Pretenders, by shewing them how far they come short of a saving Work of Grace, and they are commonly taken from some necessary common Duty, as hearing, praying, &c. He that doth not these things cannot have any Work of Grace in him; and yet if he do them, he cannot from thence conclude his estate to be gracious: He that so concludes deceives himself.

Inclusive Marks rather discover the Degrees, than the Truth of Grace, and are rather intended for Comfort than for Conviction: If we find them in our selves, we do not only find Sincerity, but Eminency of Grace: They being taken from some raised degree and eminent Acts of Grace in confirmed and grown Christians.

Betwixt the two former there is a middle sort of Marks, which are called positive Marks, and they are such as are always and only found in regenerate Souls. The Hypocrite hath them not, the grown Christian hath them, and that in an eminent degree, the poorest Christian hath them in a lower but saving degree: Great Care must be taken in the Application of them. And it's past doubt that many weak and injudicious Christians have been greatly prejudiced by finding the Experiences of eminent Christians proposed as Rules to measure their Sincerity by. Alas! these no more fit their Souls, than Saul's Armour did David's Body.

These things being premised, and a due Care observed along with us through this Discourse, I shall next come to the Particulars, and shew you what those things are which discover the State and Tempers of our Souls. And though it be true, that there is no condition we are in, no Providence that befals us, but it takes some Proof, and makes some Discovery of our Hearts: Yet to omit this Discourse, and fall into Particulars as soon as we can, I shall shew what Tryals are made of our Graces in this World, by our Prosperity, and our Adversity, by our Corruptions, and our Duties: And lastly, by our Sufferings upon the Score and account of Religion.

SECT. III.

First, Prosperity, Success, and the Increase of outward Enjoyments are to Grace what Fire to Gold. Riches and Honours make Tryal what we are, and by these things many a false Heart hath been detected, as well as the Sincerity and Eminency of others Graces discovered. We may fancy the Fire of Prosperity to be rather for Comfort than Tryal; to refresh us rather than to grieves us; but you will find Prosperity to be a great Discovery, and that scarce any thing proves the Truth and Strength of Men's Graces and Corruptions more than she doth: Rara virtus est humilis honorata, said Bernard, to find Humility with Honour is to find a Phœnix; let an an obscure Person be lifted up to Honour, and how steady and well-composed soever he was before, its a thousand to one but his Eyes will dazzle, and his Head run round when he is upon the lofty Pile of Praise and Honour: Prov. 27. 21. As the Fining Pot for Silver, and the Furnace for Gold; so a Man to his Praise: Put the best Gold in the fining Pot of Praise, and it's a great Wonder if a great deal of Dross do not appear, Isa. 39. 2. the vain glory of Hezekiah rose like a Froth or Scum upon the Pot, when heated by Prosperity. It was such a fining Pot to Herod as discovered him to be dross it self, Acts 12. 23. How did that poor Worm swell under that Tryal into the Conceit of a God? And was justly destroyed by Worms, because he forgat himself to be one: We little think what a strange Alteration an exalted Estate will make upon our Spirits. When the Prophet would abate the vain Confidence of Hazael, who could not believe that ever he should be turned into such a savage Beast as the Prophet had foretold: He only tells him, The Lord hath shewed me that thou shalt be King over Syria, 2 King. 8. 13. The Meaning is, don't be too confident, Hazael, that thy Temper and Disposition can never alter to that degree, thou never yet satest in a Throne; when Men see the Crown upon thy Head, then they will better see the true Temper of thy Heart.

Magistratus indicat virum.

How humble was Israel in the Wilderness, tame and tractable in a lean Pasture; but bring them once into Canaan, and the World is strangely altered; then, we are Lords, say they, we will come no more unto thee, Jer. 2. 2. 7. 31. Prosperity is a Crisis both to Grace and Corruption. Thence is that Caution to Israel, Deut. 10. 11, 12. When thou hast eaten, and art full, then beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God. Then beware, that's the critical time; surely that Man must be acknowledged rich, very rich in Grace, whose Graces suffers no Diminution or Eclipse by his Riches; and that Man deserves double Honour, whose Pride the Honours of this World cannot provoke and inflame.

It was a sad Truth from the Lips of a pious Divine in Germany upon his Death-bed; being somewhat disconsolate by reflecting upon the Bareness of his Life: Some Friends took thence an occasion to commend him, and minde him of his painful Ministry, and fruitful Life among them; but he cryed out, Auferte ignem adhuc enim paleas habeo; withdraw the Fire, for I have Chaff in me; meaning that he felt his Ambition like Chaff catching Fire from the Sparkles of their Praises: Like unto which was the saying of another, He that praiseth me, wounds me.

But to descend into the particular Discoveries that Prosperity and Honour make of the Want of Grace in some, and of the Weakness of Grace in others, I will shew you what Symptoms of Hypocrisy appear upon some Men under the Tryals of Prosperity, and what Signs of Grace appears in others under the same Tryal.

SECT. IV.

PRosperity discovers many sad Symptoms of a naughty Heart, and among others these are ordinarily most conspicuous.

1. First, It casts the Hearts of some Men into a deep Oblivion of God, and makes them lay aside all care of Duty: Rare fumant felicibus Ara. The Altars of rich Men seldom smoke, Deut. 32. 13, 14. 15. Jesurun sucked Honey out of the Rock, eat the fat of Lambs, and Kidneys of Wheat; but what was the effect of this; he kicked, and forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his Salvation; instead of lifting up their Hearts in an humble thankful acknowledgment of God's Bounty, they lifted up the Heel in a wanton abuse of his Mercy: In the fattest Earth we find the most slippery footing.

He that is truly gracious may in Prosperity remit some degrees, but a carnal Heart there loseth all that which in a low condition he seemed to have. Agurs Deprecation, as to himself, no doubt, was built upon his frequent Observation how it was with others, Prov. 3. 8, 9. Lest I be full, and deny God.

It's said in Eccles. 5. 12. That the abundance of the Rich will not suffer him to sleep, and I wish that were the worst Injury it did him; but alas, it will not suffer him to pray, to meditate, to allow time and thoughts about his eternal Concernments; he falls asleep in the lap of Prosperity, and forgets that there is a God to be served, or a Soul to be saved. O this is a dangerous Symptom of a very graceless Heart.

2. Secondly, Prosperity meeting with a graceless Heart, makes it wholly sensual, and entirely swallows up its thoughts and affections: Earthly things transform and mold their Haarts into their own similitude and nature: The whole strength of their Souls goes out to those Enjoyments. So those graceless, yet prosperous Persons are described, Job 21. 11. 12, 13. They take the Timbrel and Harp, and rejoyce at the sound of the Organ, they spend their days in Wealth; They take the Timbrel, not the Bible. They rejoyce at the sound of the Organ, not a Word of their rejoycing in God. They send forth their little ones in the Dance. That is all the Catechism they are taught; they spend their days in Wealth. Their whole time, that precious Stock and Talent is wholly laid out upon these sensitive things: Either the pleasure of it powerfully charms them, or the cares of it wholly engross their Minds; that there is no time to spare for God: They live in pleasure upon Earth, as it is Jam. 5. 5. Just as the Fish lives in the Water its proper Element, take him off from these things, and put him upon spiritual, serious, heavenly Employments, and he is Piscis in arido: Like a Fish upon the dry Land.

Now though Prosperity may too much influence and ensnare the minds of good Men, and estrange them too much from heavenly things; yet thus to engross their Hearts, and convert them into their own similitude and nature, so that these things should be the center of their Hearts, the very proper Element in which they live, is utter impossible.

An Hypocrite indeed may be brought to this, because, though Janus-like, he have two Faces, yet he really hath but one Principle, and that is wholly carnal and earthly: So that it's easy to make all the Water to run in one Channel, to gather all into one entire Stream, in which his Heart shall pour out all its Strength to the Creature.

But a Christian indeed hath a double Principle that acts him; though we have a Law of Sin that moves him one way, yet there is in him also the Law of Grace, which thwarts and crosses that principle of Corruption; so that as Grace cannot do what it would, because of Sin; so neither can Sin do what it would, because of Grace, Gal. 5. 17.

The Heart of a Christian in the midst of ensnaring sensitive Enjoyments finds indeed a corrupt Principle in it, which would incline him to fall asleep upon such a soft Pillow, and forget God and Duty; but it cannot, O no, it cannot do so, there's a Principle of Grace within him that never leaves joggling, disturbing and calling up him, till he rise and return to his God, the t rest of his Soul.

3. Thirdly, A false Pretender to Religion, Hypocritical Professor, meeting with Prosper and Success, grows altogether unconcerned abo the Interest of Religion, and senseless of the C lamities of God's People. Thus the Prophet co vinces the Jews of their Hypocrisy, Amos 6. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6. They were at ease in Zion, and trusted in Mountains of Samaria: And so, having a shadow Religion, and a fulness of all earthly things, they t to feasting and sporting: They drank Wine in Bo and anointed themselves with the chief Oyntmen but were not grieved for the Affliction of Jose They condoled not Gnalsheber over the breaki or tearing to pieces of Joseph; if they are out danger once, let the Church shift for its self, t are secure in a warm Nest, let the Birds of P catch and devour that Flock with which th sometimes associated, they are not touched with Moses could not do so, though the greatest curity and confluence of the Honours and Pleasu of Egypt, Acts 7. 23. Nehemiah could not do though the Servant and Favourite of a mig Monarch, and wanted nothing to make him o wardly happy; yet the Pleasures of a King's Co could not chear his Heart, or scatter the Clo of Sorrow from his Countenance, whilst his B thren were in Affliction, and the City of his G lay waste, Nehemiah 2. 1, 2, 3. Nor indeed any gracious Heart be unconcerned and sensel for that Union that all the Saints have with Ch their Head, and with one another as fellow M bers in Christ, will beget sympathy among the their sufferings, 1 Cor. 12. 26.

SECT V.

BUT as the Fire of Prosperity discovers t and much more dross in a graceless He so it discovers the Sincerity and Grace of G People. I say not that it discovers nothing Grace in them. O that it did not! Alas, m of them have had a great deal of Dross and C ruption discovered by it, as was noted bef But yet in this Tryal, the graciousness and rightness of their Hearts will appear in these such like workings of it.

1. First, Under Prosperity, Success and Hon the upright Heart will labour to suppress Pr and keep it self lowly and humble, and still more Grace there is, the more Humility th will be. If God lift him up, he will lay him low, and exalt his God high. So did Jacob w God had raised and enlarged him, Gen. 32. I am not worthy of the least of all the Mercies, of all the Truth which thou hast shewed unto thy vant, for with my Staff I passed over this Jordan, now I am become two Bands.

Great was the difference in Jacob's outw condition at his return, from what it was at passage over Jordan; then poor, now rich; single and comfortless, now the head of a g Family. Yea, but though his outward Estate altered, the frame of his Heart was not alte Jacob was an holy and humble Man when he w out, and so he was when he returned: He s multitude of Mercies about him, and among t all not one but was greater than himself.

I dare not say every Christian under Prosp can at all times manifest like Humility; but sure what Pride and Vanity soever may rise gra gracious Heart tryed by Prosperity, there's that within him will give check to it: He dare not suffer such proud Thoughts to lodge quietly in his Heart: For alas he sees that in himself, and that in his God that will abase him Grace will, make him look back to his original Condition, and say with David, What am I, O Lord God, and what is my Father's House, that thou hast brought me hitherto? 2 Sam. 7. 18.

It will make him look in, and see the Baseness of his own Heart, and the Corruptions that are there, and admire at the Dealings of God with so vile a Creature. O thinks he, if others did but know what I know of my self, they would abhor me more than now they esteem and value me.

2. Secondly, Prosperiry usually draws forth the Saints Love to the God of their Mercies: That which heats a wicked Man's Lusts, warms a gracious Man's Heart with Love and Delight in God. These were the Words of that lovely Song which David sang in the day that the Lord delivered him out of the Hands of all his Enemies, and from the Hand of Saul, and he said, I will love thee O Lord, my Strength, Psal. 18. title & verse 1. compared: These outward things are not the main Grounds and Motives of their love to God; no, no, they love him when he takes away, as well as when he gives: But they are sanctifyed Instruments to inflame their Love to God: They boyl up a wicked Man's Lust, but they melt a gracious Man's Soul. O in what a Pang of Love did David go into the Presence of God under the Sense of his Mercies! his melting Mercies; when he thus poured out his whole Soul in a Stream of Love to his God, 2 Sam. 7. 19, 20. Is this the manner of Men O Lord God! And what can David say more unto thee! An Expression that turns up the very Bottom of his Heart.

3. Thirdly, Prosperity and comfortable Providences do usually become Cautions against Sin when they meet with a sanctifyed Soul. This is the natural Inference of a gracious Soul from them. Hath God pleased me, then hath he obliged me to take more care to please him. O let me not grieve him, that hath comforted me. So Ezra 9. 13. After such a Deliverance, as this, should we again break thy Commandments! What! break his Commandments who hath broken our Bonds! God forbid.

It was an excellent Resolution of a Christian once, who receiving an eminent Mercy, at the same time he felt himself under the Power of a special Corruption; Well, saith he, now will I go forth in the Strength of this Mercy to mortify and subdue that Corruption. I will not measure every Christian by the eminent Workings of Grace in some one; but surely so far I may safely go, that Sincerity knows not how to sin because Grace hath abounded, any more than it dare sin that Grace may abound.

4. Fourthly, A truly gracious Soul will not be satisfyed with all the Prosperity and Comforts in the World for his Portion. Not thine Lord, but thee is the Voice of Grace: When Providence had been more than ordinarily bountiful in outward things to Luther, he began to be afraid of its Meaning, and earnestly protested, God should not put him off so. The Lord is my Portion, saith my Soul, Lam. 3. 24. and the Soul can best tell what it hath made its choice, and wherein it hath bestowed its chief Delights and Expectations.

An unsound Heart will accept these for its Portion: If the World be sure to him, and his Designs fail not there, he can be content to leave God, and Soul, and Heaven, and Hell at hazard: But so cannot the Upright. These things in Subordination; but neither these, nor any thing under the Sun in Comparison with, or Opposition to God.

CHAP. V.

Shewing what Probation Adversity makes of the Sincerity or Unsoundness of our Hearts.

SECT. I.

THAT Adversity is a Furnace to try of what Metal our Hearts are, none can doubt, that hath either studyed the Scriptures, or observed his Heart under Afflictions.

When the Dross and Rust of Hypocrisy and Corruption had almost eaten out the Heart of Religion among the Jews, then saith God, I will melt them, and try them; for what shall I do for the Daughter of my People? Jer. 9. 7. Here Affliction is the Furnace, and the People are the Metal cast into it, and the End of it is Tryal. I will melt them and try them; what other Course shall I take with them? If I let them alone, their Lusts, like the Rust and Canker in Metals, will eat them out. Prosperity multiplyes Professors, and Adversity brings them to the Test: Then Hirelings quickly become Changlings: The gilded Potsherd glisters till it come to scouring. The Devil thought Job had been such a one, and moves that he may be tryed this way; being confident he would be found but Dross in the Tryal, Job. 1. 11. But though the Furnace of Affliction discovered some Dross in him, (as it will in the best of Men) yet he came forth as Gold.

In this Furnace also Grace is manifested: 'Tis said, Rev. 13. 10. Here is the Patience and Faith of the Saints: (i. e.) here is the Tryal and Discovery of it in these days of Adversity. It was a weighty saying of Tertullian to the Persecutors of the Church in his Days, Probatio innocentiæ nostræ, est iniquitas vestra. Your Wickedness is the Tryal of our Innocency. Constantius the Father of Constantine made an explanatory Decree, That all who would not renounce the Christian Faith, should lose their Places of Honour and Profit: This presently separated the Dross from the Gold, which was his Design: For many renounced Christianity, and thereupon were renounced by him, and those that held their Integrity, were received into Favour. Tertul. in Apol.

In time of Prosperity, Hypocrisy lyes covered in the Heart, like Nets in the green Bushes; but when the Winter of Adversity hath made them bare, every Body may see them without searching.

But to fall into closer Particulars, it will be necessary to enquire what Effects of Adversity are common to both the Sound and the Unsound; and then what are proper to either in this close Tryal by Adversity.

SECT. II.

SECT. II.

IT will be expidient to the Deſign I manage in this Diſcourſe, to ſhew in the firſt Place what are common Effects of Adverſity to both the Godly and Ungodly, for in ſome Things they differ not, but as it is with the one, ſo alſo with the other: As,

1. Firſt, Both the Godly and Ungodly may fear Adverſity before it comes. To be ſure a wicked Man cannot, and its evident many Godly Men do not come up to the Heigth of that Rule, Jam. 1. 2. To account it all Joy when they fall into divers Temptations, or Tryals by Adverſity.

'Tis ſaid, Iſa. 33. 14. The Sinners in Sion are afraid, trembling ſurpriſeth the Hypocrite. Namely, under the Apprehenſion of approaching Calamities, and its true alſo, the Saints in Sion may be afraid: My Fleſh trembleth for Fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy Judgments, ſaid holy David, Pſal. 119. 120. and Job 3. 23. The thing which I greatly feared (ſaith that upright Soul, is come upon me: There is a vaſt Difference betwixt a Saint firſt meeting with Afflictions, and his parting with them, he entertains them ſometimes with tremblings, he parts with them rejoycing, ſmiling on them, and bleſſing them in the Name of the Lord. So that by this the upright, and the falſe Heart, are not diſcriminated: Even ſanctifyed Nature declines Sufferings and Troubles.

2. Secondly, Both the Godly and Ungodly may entertain Afflictions with Regret and Unwillingneſs when they come. Afflictions and Troubles are Wormwood and Gall, Lam. 3. 19. And that goes not down pleaſantly with Fleſh and Blood, Heb. 12. 11. No Affliction for the preſent ſeemeth joyous, but grievous; he means to God's own People. They are in heavineſs through manifold Temptations or Tryals by the Rod, 1 Pet. 1. 6. When God gives the Cup of Affliction into the Hands of the Wicked, how do they reluctate and loath it? How do their Stomacks riſe at it? And though the Portion of the Saints Cup be much ſweeter than theirs, (for that bitter Ingredient of God's vindictive Wrath is not in it) yet even they ſhrink from it, and loth they are to taſte it.

3. Thirdly, Both the one and other may be impatient and fretful in Adverſity; its the very Nature of Fleſh and Blood to be ſo. The wicked are like the troubled Sea which cannot reſt, whoſe Waters caſt forth Mire and Dirt, Iſa. 57. 20. Its an Alluſion to the unſtable and ſtormy Ocean: You know there is naturally an Eſtuation, and working in the Sea, whether it be incenſed by the Wind or no; but if a violent Wind blow upon the unquiet Ocean, Oh what raging and foaming is there! What abundance of traſh and filth doth it at ſuch times caſt out.

Now, though Grace make a great difference betwixt one and another, yet I dare not ſay, but even a gracious Heart may be very unquiet and tumultuous in the Day of Affliction. Sanctifyed Souls have their Paſſions and Luſts which are too little mortifyed, even as ſweet Bryar, and Holy-thiſtles have their Prickles, as well as the worthleſs Bramble. Jonah was a good Man, yet his Soul was ſadly diſtempered by adverſe Providences. Jonah 4. 9. Yea (ſaith he, and that to his God) I do well to be angry, even unto Death.

4. Fourthly, Both the one and the other may be weary of the Rod, and think the Day of Adverſity a tedious Day, wiſhing it were once at an End. Babylon ſhall be weary of the Evil that God will bring upon it. Jer. 51. ult. and Oh that none of Sions Children were weary of Adverſity too! How ſad a Moan doth Job make of his long continued Affliction, Job 16. 6. 7. Though I ſpeak, my Grief is not aſſuaged, and though I forbear, what am I eaſed? But now he hath made me weary.

And if you look into Pſal. 6. 3. 6. You may ſee another ſtrong Chriſtian even tyred in the Way of Afflictions: My Soul (ſaith David in that Place) is ſore vexed, but thou, O Lord, how long! I am weary with my groaning.

5. Fifthly, Both the one and other may be driven to their Knees by Adverſity. Lord in Trouble have they viſited thee, they have poured out a Prayer when thy chaſtening was upon them, Iſa. 26, 16. Not that a godly Perſon will pray no longer than the Rod is at his Back; O no, he cannot live without Prayer long, how few Calls ſoever he hath to that Duty by the Rod; but when the Rod is on his Back, he will be more frequently, and more fervently upon his Knees: Indeed many graceleſs Hearts are like Childrens Tops which will go no longer than they are whipt; they cannot find their Knees and their Tongues, till God find a Rod to excite them. A dangerous Symptom. The ſame Affliction may put a gracious, and a graceleſs Soul to their Knees, but tho' in the External Matter of Duty, and in the external Call or Occaſion of Duty they ſeem to agree; yet is there a vaſt Difference in the Principles, Manners and Ends of theſe their Duties; as will evidently appear in its proper Place in our following Diſcourſe.

But by what has been ſaid in this Section, you may ſee how in ſome Things the holy upright Soul acts too like the unſanctifyed, and in other Things how much the Hypocrite may act like a Saint; he may be externally humbled, ſo was Ahab: He may pray under the Rod, Mal. 2. 13. yea, and requeſt others to pray for him, ſo did Simon, Acts 8. 24.

SECT. III.

BUT though the ſound and unſound Heart differ not in ſome External Carriages under the Rod, yet there are Effects of Adverſity which are proper to either, and will diſcriminate them. To which end let us firſt ſee what Effects Adverſity is uſually followed withal in unſound and carnal Hearts: And we ſhall find among others, theſe Five Symptoms of a naughty Heart appearing under Croſſes and Afflictions.

1. Firſt, A graceleſs Heart is not quickly and eaſily brought to ſee the Hand of God in thoſe Troubles that befal it, and be duly affected with it, Iſa. 26. 11. Lord when thy Hand is liſted up they will not ſee: When it has ſmitten, or is liſted up to ſmite, they ſhut their Eyes: 'Tis the Malice of this Man, or the Negligence of that, or the Unfaithfulneſs of another, that hath brought all this Trouble upon me: Thus the Creature is the Horiſon that terminates their Sight, and beyond that they uſually ſee nothing: Sometimes indeed the Hand of God, is ſo immediately manifeſted, and convincingly diſcovered in Afflictions, that they cannot avoid the Sight of it, and then they may (in their Way) pour out a Prayer before him, but ordinarily they impute all to ſecond Cauſes, and overlook the firſt Cauſe of their Troubles.

2. Secondly, Nor is it uſual with theſe Men under under the Rod to retire into their Cloſets, and ſearch their Hearts there; to find out the particular Cauſe and Provocation of their Affliction: No Man repented him of his Wickedneſs, ſaying what have I done? Jer. 8. 6. What curſed Thing is there with me, that hath thus incenſed the Anger of God againſt me? God viſits their Iniquities with Afflictions, but they viſit not their own Hearts by Self-Examinations. God judges them, but they judge not themſelves; he ſhews their Iniquities in a clear Glaſs, but none ſaith, What have I done? This phraſe, What have I done? Is the Voice of one that recollects himſelf after a raſh Action; or the Voice of a Man aſtoniſhed at the diſcovery Afflictions make of his Sins, but no ſuch Voice as this is ordinarily heard among carnal Men.

3. Thirdly, An unſound Profeſſor if left to his choice, would rather chuſe Sin than Actiction; and ſees more Evil in that, than in this.

And it cannot be doubted, if we conſider the principle by which the unregenerate Men are acted, is Senſe not Faith: Hence Job's Friends would have argued his Hypocriſy, Job 36. 21. And had their Application been as their Rule, it would have concluded it. This (viz. Sin) haſt thou choſen, rather than Affliction.

I do not ſay that an upright Man cannot commit a moral Evil, to eſcape a pœnal Evil. O that daily Obſervation did not too plentifully furniſh us with ſad Inſtances of that kind; but upright ones do not, dare not, upon a ſerious deliberate diſcuſſion and debate chuſe Sin rather than Affliction, what they may do upon ſurpriſals, and in the violence of Temptation is of another Nature.

But a falſe and unſound Heart diſcovers it ſelf in the choice it makes upon Deliberation, and that frequently, when Sin and Trouble come in Competition; put caſe, ſaith Auguſtine, a Ruffian ſhould with one Hand ſet the Cup of Drunkenneſs to thy Mouth, and with the other a Dagger to thy Breaſt, and ſay, Drink or Dye: Thou ſhouldeſt rather chuſe to dye Sober, than to live a Drunkard: And many Chriſtians have reſiſted unto Blood ſtriving againſt Sin, and with renowned Moſes choſen Affliction, the worſt of Afflictions; yea Death it ſelf in the moſt formidable appearance, rather than Sin: And it is the habitual Temper and Reſolution of every gracious Heart ſo to do, though thoſe holy Reſolutions are ſometimes over-born by Violence of Temptation.

But the Hypocrite dreads leſs the defilement of his Soul, than the loſs of his Eſtate, Liberty or Life. If you ask upon what ground then doth the Apoſtle ſuppoſe, 1 Cor. 13. 3. A Man may give his Body to be burnt, and not have Charity? that the Salamander of Hypocryſy may live in the flame of Martyrdom? The anſwer is at hand, they do not chuſe Death in the Senſe of this Text, do not chuſe it to eſcape Sin, but to feed and indulge it. Thoſe ſtrange adventures (if any ſuch be) are either to maintain their own honour, and enroll their Names among worthy and famous Perſons to Poſterity; or out of a blind zeal to their eſpouſed Errors and miſtakes, than in a due regard to the Glory of God, and the Preſervation of Integrity. I fear to ſpeak it, but it muſt be ſpoken, (ſaith Hierom) That even Martyrdom it ſelf when ſuffered for Admiration and Applauſe, profits nothing; but Blood is ſhed in vain.

Non eo dicere, ſed dolendum eſt; martyrium ipſum ne fiat ut ad ambitioni & laudi detur fraus; fruſtra ſanguis effuſus eſt.

4. Fourthly, It is the property of an unregenerate Soul under adverſity to turn from Creature to Creature for ſupport and comfort, and not from every Creature to God alone. So long as their Feet can touch Ground, I mean feel any Creature relief or Comfort under them, they can ſubſiſt and live in Afflictions; but when they loſe ground then all Creature-refuge fails, then their Hearts fail too.

Thus Zedekiah and the ſelf-deceiving Jews, when they ſaw their own Strength failed them, and there was little hope left that they ſhould deliver themſelves from the Chaldeans, what do they in that ſtrait? Do they with upright Jehoſophat ſay, Our Eyes are unto thee? No, no, their Eyes were upon Egypt for Succour, not upon Heaven: Well Pharaoh and his aids are left ſtill, all hope is not gone: Jer. 37. 9. See the like in Ahaz, in a ſore plunge and diſtreſs he courts the King of Aſſyria for help, 2 Chron. 28. 22, 23. That project failing, why then he will try what the Gods of Damaſcus can do for him, any way rather than the right way, Flectere ſi nequeam ſuperos, Acheronta movebo.

So it is with many others. If one Child dye, what do they do, run to God, and comfort themſelves in this, The Lord liveth tho' my Child dye? If an Eſtate be loſt and a Family ſinking, do they with David comfort themſelves in the everlaſting Covenant, ordered and ſure? No, no, but if one Relation dye, there's another alive; if an Eſtate be gone, yet not all; ſomething is left ſtill, and the Caſe will mend.

As long as ever ſuch Men have any viſible encouragment, they will hang upon it; and not make up all in Chriſt, and encourage themſelves in the Lord. To tell them of rejoycing in the Lord, when the Fig-tree Bloſſoms not, is what they cannot underſtand.

5. Fifthly, To conclude, An unſound Heart never comes out of the Furnace of Affliction purged, mortyfied, and more ſpiritual and holy than when he was caſt into it: His ſcum and droſs is not there ſeparated from him: Nay, the more they are afflicted, the worſe they are. Why ſhould ye be ſmitten any more? ye will revolt more and more, Iſa. 1. 5. And to keep our Metaphor, conſult Jer. 6. 29. God had put that incorrigible People into the Furnace of Affliction, and kept them long in that Fire; and what was the Iſſue? Why ſaith the Prophet, The Bellows are burnt, the lead is conſumed of the Fire, the founder melteth in vain, &c. reprobate Silver ſhall Men call them, becauſe the Lord hath rejected them.

If the Fire of Affliction be continually blown till the very Bellows be burnt, that is, the Tongue, or rather the Lungs of the Prophet, which have ſome reſemblance to bellows; though theſe be even ſpent in reproving, and threatning, and denouncing Woe upon Woe, and Judgment upon Judgment; and God fulfils his word upon them; yet ſtill they are as before; the droſs remains, though Jeruſalem be made a Furnace, and the Inhabitants, the Fleſh boyling in it is noted (pertinently to my Diſcourſe) in Ezek. 24. 6. 13. The ſcum remains with them, and cannot be ſeparated by the Fire; and the reaſon is plain, becauſe no Affliction in its ſelf purges Sin, but as it is ſanctifyed, and works in the vertue of God's bleſſing, and in purſuance of the promiſes.

O thſnk on this you that have had Thouſands of Afflictions in one kind and another, and none of them all have done you good; they have not mortifyed, humbled, or benefited you at all. And thus you see what the effects of Adversity are when it meets a graceless Heart.

SECT. IV.

BY this time, Reader, I suppose thou art desirous to know what effects Adversity and Afflictions use to have when they meet with an honest and sincere Heart; only before I come to particulars, I think it needful to acquaint thee, that the fruits of Afflictions are mostly after-fruits, and not so discernable by the Christian himself under the Rod, as after he hath been exercised by it, Heb. 12. 11. and calmly reflects upon what is past, nor doth every Christian attain the same measure and degree, some rejoyce, others commonly submit; but I think these seven Effects are ordinarily found in all upright Hearts that pass under the Rod.

1. First, The sincere and upright Soul betakes its self to God in Affliction, Job 1. 20. When God was smiting, Job was praying; when God afflicted, Job worshipped: So David, Psal. 116. 3,4. I found Sorrow and Trouble, then called I upon the Name of the Lord: And when the Messenger of Satan buffeted Paul, For this Cause (saith he) I besought the Lord thrice, 2 Cor. 12. 8. Alas, whither should a Child go in distress but to its Father?

2. Secondly, He sees and owns the hand of God in his Afflictions, how much or little soever of the instruments of Trouble appear. The Lord hath taken away, saith Job, Job 1. 21. God hath bidden him, saith David, 2 Sam. 16. 10. If the blow come from the hand of a wicked Man, yet he sees that wicked hand in God's righteous hand, Psal. 17. 14. And this apprehension is fundamental to all that Communion Men have with God in their Afflictions, and to all that peaceableness and gracious submission of their Spirits under the Rod; he that sees nothing of God in his Troubles, hath nothing of God in his Soul.

3. Thirdly, He can justify God in all the Afflictions and Troubles that come upon him, be they never so severe. Thou art just in all that is brought upon us, saith Nehemiah, Nehem. 9. 33. Thou hast punished us less than our Iniquities deserve, saith Ezra, Ezra 9. 13. It is of the Lord's Mercy we are not consumed, saith the Church, Lam. 3. 22. Are we in Babylon? It's a Mercy we are not in Hell. If God condemn him, yet he will justify God; if God cast him into a Sea of Trouble, yet he will acknowledge, in all that Sea of Trouble, there is not one drop of Injustice. If I have not deserved such usage from the hands of Men, yet I have deserved worse than this at the hands of God.

4. Fourthly, Afflictions use to melt and humble gracious Hearts; there is an habitual tenderness planted in their Spirits, and a just occasion quickly draws it forth: And so usual a thing it is for gracious Hearts to be humbled under the Afflictings of God, that Affliction is upon that score called Humiliation: The Effect put for the Cause, to shew where one is the other will be, 2 Cor. 12. 21. My God will humble me, (i. e.) he will afflict me with the sight of your Sins, and disorders: And if a gracious Soul be so apt to be humbled for other Men's Sins, much more for his own.

5. Fifthly, The upright Soul is inquisitive under the Rod to find out that Evil for which the Lord contends with him by Affliction, Job 10. 2. Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me: And Job 34. 31. That which I see not teach thou me: If I have done Iniquity I will do no more. So Lam. 3. 39. 40. Let us search and try our Ways, and turn again to the Lord: In Afflicting God searches them, and under Affliction they search themselves: Willing they are to hear the Voice of the Rod, and glad of any discovery it makes of their Hearts.

6. Sixthly, The upright Heart chuseth to lye under Affliction, rather than to be delivered from it by Sin. I say this is the Choice and Resolution of every upright Heart, however it may be sometimes over-born by the Violence of Temptation. Heb. 11. 35. Not accepting deliverance, viz. upon sinful Terms and Conditions.

They are sensible how the Flesh smarts under the Rod, but had rather it should smart, than Conscience should smart under Guilt. Affliction saith an upright Soul, grieves me, but Sin will grieve God; Affliction wounds my Flesh, but Sin will wound my Soul. Deliverance I long for, but I will not pay so dear for it, how much soever I desire it: Nolo tanti emere pœnitentiam: Outward Ease is sweet, but inward Peace is sweeter.

7. Seventhly, He prises the spiritual Good gotten by Affliction, above Deliverance from it, and can bless God from his Heart for those Mercies how dear soever his Flesh hath paid for them. Psal. 119. 67. and 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted. Such is the Value the People of God have for spiritual Graces, that they cannot think them a dear Pennyworth, whatever the Flesh hath paid for them. The Mortification of one Lust, one Discovery of Sincerity, one Manifestation of God to their Souls, doth much more than make amends for all that they have endured under the Rod.

Is Patience improved, Self-acquaintance encreased, the Vanity of the Creature more effectually taught, longings after Heaven inflamed? O blessed Afflictions that are attended with such blessed Fruits! It was the saying of a holy Man under sore Trouble for the Death of an only Son; when in that dark Day God had graciously manifested himself to his Soul; O, said he, I would be contented (if it were possible) to lay an only Son in the Grave every Day I have to live in the World, for one such Discovery of the Love of God as I now en

CHAP. VI.

Shewing Indwelling Sin to be to Grace, as Fire is to Gold, and how the soundness or unsoundness of our Hearts are discovered by our Carriage towards it.

SECT. I.

PRosperity and Adversity put Sincerity to the Tryal, but nothing makes a deeper Search into our Bosoms, nothing sifts our Spirits more narrowly, or tells us what our State is more plainly, than our Behaviour towards that Corruption that dwells in us, the Thorn is next Neighbour to the Rose: Sin and Grace dwell not only in the same Soul, but in the same Faculties. The Child and Fuller dwell in one Room, what one cl seth the other blacks: Of all the Evils God permits in this World, none is more grievous to his People than this: They sometimes wonder why the Lord will suffer it to be so; why surely among other wise and holy ends of this Permission, these are some.

They are left to try you, and to humble you; there is no intrinsical goodness in Sin, but however in this it occasions good to us, that by our Carriage towards it we discern our Sincerity. The Touch-stone is a worthless Stone in its self, but it serves to trye the Gold: 1 Joh. 3. 9, 10. Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God; in this the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil; q. d. In respect of their Carriage towards Sin, the one and other is plainly manifested: This is that which separates the Dross from the Gold, and shews you what the true state of Men's Persons, and Temper of their Heart is. By not sinning we are not to understand a total Freedom from it in this World, as if it implyed any such Perfection of the People of God in this World, that's the Popish and Pelagian sence: Nor yet must we take it in the Arminian sense, who to avoid the Argument of the Orthodox, will understand it of the sin against the holy Ghost: What a strange thing would it be to make that a Characteristical Note of Distinction betwixt the Godly and Ungodly, which so very few, even of the most Ungodly, are ever guilty of?

But the manner of our Behaviour towards sin, and our Carriage towards it before, or under, or after the Commission of it, in that the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil.

Now there are five Things relating to sin that discriminate and mark the state of the Persons: The Difference is discernable,

In our
1. Abstinence from Sin.
2. Hatred of Sin.
3. Troubles about Sin.
4. Subjection to Sin.
5. Opposition of Sin.

SECT. II.

(1.) THE Grounds and Motives of our Abstinence do very clearly manifest the state of our Souls; what they are in the Regenerate and Unregenerate, is our next Work. And let it be considered,

First, That an unsound and unrenewed Heart may abstain from one Sin, because it is contrary to, and inconsistent with another Sin: For it is with the Sins of our Natures, as it is with the Diseases of our Bodies: Though all Diseases be contrary to health, yet some Diseases (as the Feaver and Palsy) are contrary to each other. So are Prodigality and Covetousness, Hypocrisy and Pronenes: These oppose each other, not for mutual destruction as Sin and Grace do, but for Superiority, each contending for the Throne, and sometimes taking it by Turns: It is with such Persons as with that possessed Man, Matth. 17. 15. whom the Spirit cast sometimes into the Fire, sometimes into the Water: Or if one subdue the other, yet the Heart is also subdued to the Vassalage of that Lust that is uppermost in the Soul.

2. Secondly, An unrenewed Soul may be kept from the Commission of some sin, not because there is a Principle of Grace within him, but because of some providential Restraint without him, or upon him: For it often falls out, that when Men have conceived Sin, and are ready to execute it, Providence claps on the Fetters of Restraint, and hinders them from executing it.

This was the Case of Abimelech, Gen. 20. 6. and 17. compared, I withheld thee: And though Persons so restrained, have not the good of such Providences, yet others have; for by it a World of Mischief is prevented in this World, which otherwise would break out; and to this Act of Providence we owe our Lives, Liberties, Estates and Comforts in this World.

3. Thirdly, An unsound Heart may not commit some Sins, not because he truly hates them, but because his Constitution inclines him not to them: These Men are rather beholding to a good Temper of Body, than to a gracious Temper of Soul. Some Men cannot be Drunkards if they would, others cannot be covetous and base, they are made e meliori lato, of a more refined Metal than others; but chaste and liberal, just and sober Nature, is but Nature still: The best Nature in all its Endowments is but Nature at the best.

4. Fourthly, A graceless Heart may be restrained from Sin by the Force of Education and Principles of Morality that way instilled into it. Thus Jehoash was restrained from Sin, 2 Kings 12. 2. And Jehoash did that which was right in the Sight of the Lord all the Days wherein Jehoiadah the Priest instructed him. The Fear of a Parent or Master, will do a great deal more with some in this Case, than the Fear of God. The Influence of a strict Education nips off the Excrescencies of budding Vice. The Way we are taught when young, we keep when old: This is the Influence of Man upon Man, not the Influence of the regenerate Spirit upon Men.

5. Fifthly, A graceless Heart may be kept from some sins by the Fear of the Events, both in this World, and that to come. Sin that is followed with Infamy and Reproach among Men, may on this ground be forborn; not because God hath forbidden it, but because humane Laws will punish it, and the sober World will brand us for it: And some look farther, to the Punishment of Sin in Hell: They are not afraid to sin, but they are afraid to burn.

Here Sin is like a sweet Rose in a Brake of Thorns: Fain we would have it, but are loth to tear our Flesh to come by it. It's good that Sin is prevented any way; but to be kept on this ground from Sin, doth not argue the Estate of the Person to be good: And thus you see some of the grounds on which carnal Men are restrained: And in this the Children of the Devil are manifest.

SECT. III.

BUT there are grounds of Abstinence from Sin, by which the Children of God are also manifested, and such are these that follow.

1. First, A sincere Heart dares not sin because of the Eye and Fear of God, which is upon him: So you find it in Job 31. 1, and 4. he durst not allow his Thoughts to sin, because he lived under the Awe of God's Eye. Nehemiah durst not do as former Governors had done, though an opportunity presented to enrich himself; because of the Fear of his God, Nehem. 5. 15. The Soul that lives under the Awe of this Eye will be as conscientious cntious where no Discovery can be made by Creatures, as if all the World looked on, Levit. 19. 14. Thou shalt not curse the Deaf, nor put a Stumbling Block before the Blind; but shalt fear thy God, I am the Lord.

What if a Man do curse the Deaf, the Deaf cannot hear him, and what if he do put a stumbling Block before the Blind, the Blind cannot see him: True, but God sees him, God hears him, that's enough to a Man that hath the Fear of the Lord upon his Heart.

2. Secondly, As the Fear of God, so the Love of God, is a principle of restraint from Sin to the Soul that is upright. This kept back Joseph from Sin, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this great Wickedness, and Sin against God? How can I? He speaks as a Man that feels himself bound up from Sin by the Goodness and Love of God, that had been manifested to him, q. d. Hath he delivered me from the pit into which my envious Brethren cast me? Hath he in so miraculous a Way advanced me to all this Honour and Power in Egypt? and now, after all his Kindness and Love to me, shall I sin against him? O how can I do this against so good, so gracious a God? So Psal. 97. 10. Ye that Love the Lord hate Evil. Love will cry out in the Hour of Temptation, is this thy kindness to thy Friend? Dost thou thus requite the Lord for all his Kindnesses?

3. Thirdly, As the Love of God, so the intrinsical Evil and Filthiness that is in Sin keeps back the gracious Soul from it, Rom. 12. 9. abhor that which is Evil. ἀποστυγοῦντες τὸ πονηρόν hate it as Hell it self: Or as the French Traslation hath it, be in Horror: As the Apprehensions of Hell, so the Apprehensions of Sin impress horrour upon the Mind that's sanctifyed: Nothing more loathsome to an holy Soul. Its Aversations from it are with the highest Indignation and loathing.

4. Fourthly, The renewed Nature of a Saint restrains him from Sin, Gal 5. 17. The Spirit lusteth against the Flesh, so that ye cannot do the thing that ye would: Ye cannot, why cannot ye? because it is against your new Nature.

Beloved, This is a very remarkable thing in the Experience of all renewed Men, That upon the Renovation of Men's Principles, their Delights, and their Aversations and Loathings are laid quite cross and opposite to what they were before. In their Carnal State, vain company, and sinful exercises were their Delight. To be separated from these, and tyed to Prayer, Meditation, heavenly discourse and Company; O what a Bondage would that have been, now to be tyed to such carnal Society, and restrained from Dutys of Godlyness, and the Society of the Godly, becomes a much sorer Bondage to the Soul.

5. Fifthly, Experience of the Bitterness of Sin, is a restraint to a gracious Heart. They that have had so many sick Days, and sorrowful Nights for Sin as they have had, are loth to taste that Wormwood and Gall again, which their Soul hath still in remembrance, 2 Cor. 7. 11. In that ye sorrowed after a Godly Sort, what Carefulness it wrought. He would not grapple with those inward Troubles again, he would not have the chearful Light of God's Countenance eclipsed again for all, and much more than all the Pleasures that are in Sin.

6. Sixthly, The Consideration of the sufferings of Christ for Sin, powerfully withholds a gracious Soul from the Commission of it, Rom. 6. 6. Our old Man is Crucified with him, that the Body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. Were there a Knife or Sword in the House that had been thrust through the Heart of your Father, would you ever endure the sight of it? Sin was the Sword that pierced Christ; and so the Death of Christ becomes the Death of Sin in his People. Thus the Children of God and the Children of the Devil are manifest, in the Principles and Reasons of their abstinence from Sin.

SECT. IV.

(2.) Secondly, They are also manifested by their hatred of sin: This puts a clear Distinction betwixt them; for no false or unregenerate Heart, can hate Sin as Sin; he may indeed,

1. First, Hate Sin in another, but not in himself Thus one proud Man hates another; Calco superbiam Platonis, said Diogenes, when he trampled Plato's fine Cloaths under Foot; I spurn the Pride of Plato: Sed majori superbiâ, as Plato smartly replyed, Thou trampleſt upon my Pride, but it is with greater pride. Why (saith Christ to the Hypocrite) beholdest thou the Mote in thy Brothers Eye, but considerest not the Beam that is in thine own Eye? Matt. 7. 3. How quick in espying, and rash in censuring the smallest fault in another is the Hypocrite! it was but one fault, and that but a small one, but a mote that he could find in another; yet this he quickly discerns; It may be there were many excellent Graces in him, these he overlooks, but the mote he plainly discerns.

It may be that Mote in his Brothers Eye had drawn many Tears from it, but these he takes no notice of, and mean while there is a Beam (i. e.) a great horrid flagitious evil in himself, but it is too near him to be discerned, or bewailed: This is a sad Symptom of a naughty Heart.

2. Secondly, He may hate it in its Effects, and Consequents; not in its own Nature; as the Thief hates the Gallows, not the Wickedness that he hath done. It is not sin in it self, but sin in its Connexion with Hell, that is frightful to him.

The unsound Professor could wish that there were no such threatning in the Bible against Sin: When Sin tempts him, I would, saith he, but I fear the Consequence. O Sin, could I separate thee from Hell, nothing should separate thee and me.

3. Thirdly, He may hate it in a mood or pang but not with a rooted habitual hatred. It's plain from Pet. 2. 22. That Sin may sometimes lye upon the Conscience of an unregenerate Man, as a load lyes upon a sick Stomach; and so he may discharge himself of it, by Reformation, Restitution, &c. but a little Time reconciles the quarrel betwixt him and his Lust again: If they fall out they will fall in again; the Dog is returned to his vomit, and the Sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.

But an upright Soul hates sin in another manner, and in this hatred of sin the Children of God are manifest.

1. First, The Opposition of Sin to God, is the very Ground and formal Reason upon which a gracious Soul opposes and hates it: if it be opposite to the holy Nature and Law of God it cannot but be odious in his Eyes: This cut David's Heart, Psal. 51. 4. Against thee, thee only have I sinned q. d. I have wronged Uriah greatly, I have wronged my self and Family greatly; but the wrong I have done to others is not worth ming, in Comparison of the wrong I have done to thee.

2. Secondly, The upright Soul hates sin in himself, more than he hates it in any other? as a Man hates a Serpent in the Hedge, but much more in his own bosom. Rom. 7. 23. But I see another Law in my Members, and ver. 21. I find then a Law that when I would be good, evil is present with me: q. d. I don't know how others find it, but I am sure I find sin in my very Bosom, in my very Bowels, it is present with me. O wretched Man that I am! A gracious Soul can mourn to see it in others, but to find it in himself pierceth him to the very Heart.

3. Thirdly, The gracious Soul hates not only this or that particular Sin, but the whole kind, every thing that is sinful. True hatred i ς ὡρὸς τὰ γενὴ, of the whole nature or kind, Psal. 119. 104. I hate every false way; his reasonings proceed a quatenus ad omne, from sin, as sin? concluding against every sin. Sins that are profitable, and pleasant, as well as sins that have neither Profit nor Pleasure: Sins that are secret as well as sins that are open, and will defame him.

Arist. Rhet. lib. 2. cap. 4.

And before this tryal a false Heart cannot stand; for he always indulges to some Lust: there is an Iniquity which he cannot be separated from.

4. Fourthly, The sincere Soul hates sin with an irreconcileable hatred. There was a time when Sin and his Soul fell out, but there never will be a time of Reconciliation betwixt them again.

That breach which effectual Conviction once made, can never be made up any more: They will return no more to folly, Psal. 85. 8. And indeed it seems to them that have suffered so much for Sin, that have endured so many Fears and Sorrow for it, the greatest folly in the World to return to sin again: No, no, they admire the Mercy of their escape from sin, to their dying Day; and never look back upon their former state but with Shame and Grief.

Ask a Convert, would you be back again where once you were? Would you be among your old Companions again? Would you be fulfilling the Lusts of the Flesh again? And he will tell you he would not run the hazard to abide one day or one Night in that Condition again, to win all the Kingdoms of the World the next morning.

5. Fifthly, The sincere Soul hates Sin with a superlative hatred; he hates it more than any other evil in the World besides it. Penal evils are not pleasant themselves, but yet if he must endure them, or sin; then sufferings to chuse: Heb. 11. 25. Chusing rather to suffer Affliction than enjoy the pleasure of Sin; the worst of sufferings rather than the best of sin.

6. Sixthly, To conclude, so deep is the hatred that upright ones bear to Sin, that nothing raises them more than the thoughts of a full deliverance from it doth: Romans 7. 34. I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. What doth he so heartily thank God for? O for a prospect of his final deliverance from sin, never to be entangled, defiled, or troubled with it any more: And this is one thing that sweetens death to the Saints, as much as any thing in the World can do, except Christ's victory over it, and lying in the Grave for us. To think of a grave is not pleasant in it self, but to think of a parting time with sin, that's sweet and pleasant indeed.

SECT. V.

(3.) THIRDLY, The Children of God and the Children of the Devil, pure Gold, and vile Dross, are manifest as in Hatred of Sin, so in their Troubles, and Sorrow about Sin.

All trouble for sin argues not sincerity, some have Reason to be troubled even for their troubles for sin. So have they

1. First. That are only troubled for the Commission of some more gross sins that startle the natural Conscience, but not for inward Sins that defile the Soul. Judas was troubled for betraying Innocent Blood, but not for that base Lust of Covetousness that was the Root of it, or the want of sincere Love to Jesus Christ: Matth. 27. 4. 5. Outward sins are sins majoris infamiæ, of greater scandal; but Heart-sins are oftentimes majoris reatus, sins of greater guilt; to be troubled for grosser sins, and have no trouble for ordinary sins daily incurred, is an ill sign of a bad Heart.

2. Secondly, A graceless heart may be much troubled at the Discovery of Sin, when it is not troubled for the guilt of sin, Jer. 2. 26. As the Thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the House of Israel ashamed. Hence it is that they stick not to commit ten sins against God, to hide one sin from the Eyes of Men. It is a Mercy that sin is the matter of Men's shame, and that all are not arrived to that height of Impudence to declare their sin as Sodom, and glory to their Shame; but to be ashamed only because Men see it, and not with Ezra, to say, O my God I am ashamed, and blush to look up unto thee, Ezra 9. 6. Ashamed that thou seest it, is but Hypocrisy.

3. Thirdly, A graceless heart may be troubled for the rod that sin draws after it, but not for sin it self, as it provokes God to inflict such rods.

But the troubles of upright ones for sin are of another kind and nature.

1. First, They are troubled that God is wronged, and his Spirit troubled by their sins. So the penitent Prodigal, I have sinned against Heaven, and in thy sight, Luk. 15. 21. Against Heaven, that is, against him whose Throne is in Heaven, a great, glorious, and infinite Majesty, a poor Worm of the Earth, hath lifted up his hand against the God of Heaven.

2. Secondly, They are troubled for the defilement of their own Souls by sin: Hence they are compared in Proverbs 25. 26. to a troubled fountain; you know its the property of a living spring, when any filth falls into it, or that which lyes in the bottom of it's Channel, is raised and defiles it Streams, never to leave working till it hath purged it self of it, and recovered it's purity again.

So it is with a righteous man, he loves purity in the precept, Psal. 119. 140. And he loves it no less in the principle and practice; he thinks it is Hell enough to lye under the pollution of sin, if he should never come under Damnation for it.

3. Thirdly, They are troubled for the estrangements of God, and the hiding of his face from them because of their Sin. It would go close to an Ingenerous spirit to see a dear and faithful friend whom he hath grieved, to look strange and shy upon him at the next meeting; as if he did not know him: much more doth it go to the heart of a gracious Man to see thee Face of God turned from him, and not to be towards him as in times past. This went to David's Heart after his fall, as you may see, Psal. 51. 11. Cast me not away from thy Presence, and take not thy holy Spirit from me; q. d. Lord, if thou turn thy back upon me, and estrange thy self from me, I am a lost Man; that is the greatest Mischief that can befal me.

4. Fourthly, Their Troubles for sin run deep, to what other Mens do. They are strong to bear other Troubles, but quail and faint under this: Psal. 38. 4. Other sorrows may for the present be violent, and make more noise, but this sorrow soaks deeper into the Soul.

5. Fifthly, Their Troubles for sin are more private and silent Troubles than others are, their Sore runs in the Night, as it is Psal. 77. 2. Not but that they may, and do open their Troubles to Men, (and it is a Mercy when they meet with a judicious, tender and experienced Christian to unbosom themselves unto) but when all is done, it is God and thy Soul alone that must whisper out matter, Ille vere dolet, qui sine teste dolet: That is sincere sorrow for sin indeed, which is expressed secretly to God in the Closet.

6. Sixthly, Their Troubles are incurable by Creature Comforts: It is not the removing some outward Pressures and Inconveniencies that can remove their Burden; nothing but Pardon, Peace, and witnessed Reconciliation, can quiet the gracious Heart.

7. Seventhly, Their Troubles for sin are ordinate and kept in their own place; they dare not stamp the Dignity of Christ's Blood upon their worthless Tears and Groans for sin: Lava lachrymas Domine. Lord, wash my sinful Tears in the Blood of Christ, was once the desire of a true Penitent. And thus our Trouble for sin shews us what our Hearts are.

SECT. VI.

(4.) FOurthly, The Behaviour and Carriage of the Soul, with respect to subjection to the commands of Sin, shews what our Estate and Condition is. This will separate Dross from Gold. All unregenerate Men are the Servants of Sin, they subject themselves to its commands. This the Scripture sometimes calls a Conversation in the Lusts of the Flesh, Eph. 2. 3. Sometimes the Selling of themselves to Sin, 1 Kings 21. 20. Now as a judicious Divine observes, though the Children of God complain with Paul, Rom. 7. 14, 15. That they are sold under Sin, yet there is a vast difference betwixt these two: The Saints are sold to it by Adam, but others by their own continued Consent. But to shew you the difference in this matter, I conceive it necessary to shew wherein the reigning power of Sin doth not consist, and then wherein it doth: That you may plainly discern who are in subjection to the reigning power of their Corruptions, and who are not. Now there be divers things common both to Regenerate and Unregenerate, and we cannot say the dominion of Sin lies in any or in all of them, viz. abstractly and simply considered.

Dr. Reynolds.

1. First, Both one and other having Original Corruption dwelling in them, may also find this Fountain breaking forth into gross and scandalous sins: But we cannot say that because Original Corruption thus breaks forth into gross and scandalous sins in both; therefore it must needs reign in the one as well as in the other; a Righteous Man may fall before the Wicked, as it is Prov. 25. 26. He may fall in the Dirt of grosser Iniquities, and furnish them with matter of reproach. So did David, Peter, Abraham, and many more of the Lord's upright Hearted ones, whose Souls nevertheless sin did not reign over by a voluntary subjection to its Commands, nor must this embolden any to sin with more liberty.

2. Secondly, Though an upright Soul fall one and again into sin, though he reiterate the same act of sin which he hath repented of before; yet it cannot meerly from thence be concluded, that therefore sin reigns over him, as it doth over a wicked Man that makes it his dayly Trade. I confess every Reiteration of sin, puts a further Aggravation upon it: And it's sad we should repent and sin, and sin and repent; but yet you read, Prov. 24. 16. A just Man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: Job's Friends were good Men, yet he tells them, These ten times have ye reproached me, Job 19. 3. This indeed shews a Heart that greatly needs purging; for it is with relapses in spiritual as it is with relapses into natural Diseases: A Recidivation or Return of the Disease shews that the Morbifick Matter was not duly purged; but though it shew the foulness, it does not always prove the falseness of the Heart.

3. Thirdly, Though one may be impatient of the reproof of his sin, as well as the other; that alone will not conclude sin to be in full dominion over one, as it is over the other.

It's pity any good Man should storm at a rebuke of sin; that such a precious Oyl as is proper to heal, should be conceited to break the Head: But yet Flesh will be tender and touchy even in good Men. Asa was a good Man, and yet he was wrath with the Prophet who reproved him, as you find, 2 Chron. 16. 10. yet I doubt not but their Consciences smite them for it, when they suffers not another to do it; a Reproof may be untimely and ill manag'd by another, and so may provoke, but they will hear the Voice of Conscience in another manner.

4. Fourthly, Though in both some one particular Sin may have more power than another; yet neither doth this alone conclude that there is that Sin must reign in one, as it doth in another. Indeed the beloved Lust of every wicked Man is King over his Soul; but yet a godly Man's Constitution, Calling, &c. may incline him more to one Sin than another; and yet neither that, nor the other may be said to be in dominion; for thus David speaks of his Iniquity, (i. e.) his special Psal. 18. 23. Which some suppose to be the of Lying, from that intimation, Psal. 119. 29. you see in one place he begs God to keep from it, and in the other he tells us he kept himself from it, and both shew he was not the Servant of it.

5. Fifthly, Though both may sin against knowledge, yet it will not follow from thence that therefore sins against knowledge must needs sins in dominion in the one, as they are in the other: There was too much Light abused, Violence offered in David's deliberated sin, as he confesses, Psal. 51. 6. and the sad Story too plainly shews, and yet, in the main, he was an upright Man still, though this Commission of the Fact shrewdly wounded his Integrity, and stands upon Record for a Caution to others.

SECT.

SECT. VII.

WE have seen what doth not infer the Dominion of Sin in the former Particulars, being ſimply conſidered; I ſhall next ſhew you what doth, and how the ſincere and falſe Hearts are diſtinguiſhed in this Tryal. And,

1. Firſt, Aſſent and Conſent upon deliberation notes the Soul to be under the Dominion of ſin: When the Mind approves ſin, and the Will gives its plenary Conſent to it; this ſets up Sin in its Throne, and puts the Soul into ſubjection to it: For the Dominion of ſin conſiſts in its Authority over us, and our voluntary ſubjection to it. This you find to be the Character of a wicked graceleſs Perſon, Pſal. 36. 4. He deviſeth Miſchief upon his Bed, he ſetteth himſelf in a Way that is not good, he abhorreth not evil.

The beſt Men may fall into ſin through miſtake, or be precipitated into ſin through the violence of Temptation; but to deviſe Miſchief, and ſet himſelf in an evil way, this notes full Aſſent of the Mind, and then not to abhor Evil notes full conſent of the Will, and theſe two being given to ſin, not only antecedently to the acting of it, but alſo conſequently to it, to like it afterward, as well as before; this puts the Soul fully under the power of ſin, what can it give more?

This (as one ſaith) in direct oppoſition to the Apoſtle, Rom. 12. 1. Is to preſent their Bodies a dead Sacrifice, unholy, and abominable to God; acceptable to the Devil, which is their unreaſonable ſervice: All Men by nature are given to ſin, but theſe Men give themſelves to it. Mr. Caryl.

2. Secondly, The cuſtomary practice of ſin, ſubjects the Soul to the Dominion of ſin; and ſo he that is born of God doth not commit Sin, 1 John 3. 9. Fall into ſin, yea the ſame ſin he may, and that often; but then it's not without Reluctance, Repentance, and a Proteſt entred by the Soul in Heaven againſt it: So that Sin hath not a quiet poſſeſſion of his Soul; he is not the ſervant of ſin, nor doth he willingly walk after its Commandments; but ſo do its own ſervants; it's their dayly Practice, Jer. 9. 3. They proceed from Evil to Evil.

3. Thirdly, Delight in ſin proves the Dominion of ſin. So the Servants of ſin are deſcribed, Iſa. 66. 3. They have choſen their own Ways, and their Soul delighteth in their Abomination.

Look as our delight in God is the meaſure of our Holineſs, ſo our delight in ſin is the meaſure of our Sinfulneſs. Delight in ſin is one of the uppermoſt Rounds of the Ladder, and much higher the Soul of a Sinner cannot go, till it be turned off into Hell, It's a Sport to a Fool to do Miſchief, Prov. 10. 23. Never merryer than when he hath the Devil for his Playfellow, ſaith one upon that Place. Mr. Trap.

4. Fourthly, Impatience of Chriſt's Yoke and Government, argues the Soul to be the ſubject of ſin. This is clear from the Apoſtle's reaſoning in Rom. 6. 17, 18. But God be thanked that ye were the Servants of Sin, but you have obeyed from the Heart the form of Doctrine which was delivered you: Being then made free from ſin, ye became the Servants of righteouſneſs: Where you ſee plainly, that no Man can have its Manumiſſion or Freedom from ſin, that comes not into Chriſt's Service, and yields himſelf up to his Obedience.

So then to fret at Chriſt's Law that tye us up from our Luſts, to be weary of all ſpiritual Employments as a Burden intolerable, never to be in our Element and Center till we are off from God and plunging in the World and our Luſts; this is a ſad note of a ſoul in ſubjection to ſin.

Object. But may not an upright Soul find ſome wearineſs in ſpiritual things?

Sol. Doubtleſs he may, for he hath Fleſh as well as Spirit, and though the Spirit be willing, the Fleſh is weak: He is ſanctifyed but in part, and his delight in the Law of God is but according to, or after the inner Man, Rom. 7. 22. But he ſees another Law in his Members, (i. e.) contrary Inclinations. However, if he be weary ſometimes in the duties of Godlineſs, to be ſure he is more weary out of them, and is not centered and at reſt till he be with his God again: But the carnal Heart is where it would be when it is in the ſervice of ſin; and as a Fiſh upon dry Land, when engaged in ſpiritual Duties: Eſpecially ſuch as are ſecret, aud have no external Allurements of Reputation to engage him to them.

But what ſurpriſals or captivities to ſin ſoever may befal an upright Soul, yet it appears by theſe eight following particulars, that he is not the ſervant of ſin, nor in full ſubjection to it. For,

1. Firſt, Though he may be drawn to ſin, yet he cannot reflect upon his ſin without ſhame and ſorrow; which plainly ſhews it to be an involuntary ſurpriſe. So Peter wept bitterly, Mat. 26. 75. And David mourned for his ſin heartily; others can fetch new Pleaſures out of their old ſins by reflecting on them: And ſome can glory in their ſhame, Phil. 3. 19. Some are ſtupid and ſenſeleſs after ſin, and the ſorrow of a carnal Heart for it, is but a Morning Dew; but it is far otherwiſe with God's People.

2. Secondly, Though a Saint may be drawn to ſin, yet it is not with a deliberate and full conſent of his Will; their delight is in the Law of God, Rom. 7. 22. They do that which they would not, ver. 16. (i. e.) there are inward diſlikes from the new Nature: And as for that caſe of David, which ſeems to have ſo much of counſel and deliberation in it, yet it was but in a ſingle Act; it was not in the general Courſe of his Life; he was upright in all things (i. e.) in the general courſe and tenour of his Life, 1 Kings 15. 5.

3. Thirdly, Though an upright Soul may fall into ſin, yet he is reſtleſs and unquiet in that condition, like a Bone out of joynt; and that ſpeaks him to be none of ſins ſervants, as on the contrary, if a Man be engaged in the external Duties of Religion, and be reſtleſs and unquiet there, his Heart is not in it, he is not at reſt till he be again in his earthly Buſineſs; this Man cannot be reckoned Chriſt's Servant: A gracions Heart is much after that rate employed in the Work of ſin, that a carnal Heart is when employed in the work of Religion: That's a good Rule, Ea tantum dicuntur ineſſe, quæ inſunt per modum quietis: That's a Man's true Temper, wherein he is at reſt: Poor David fell into ſin, but he had no reſt in his Bones becauſe of it, Pſal. 51. 10, 11, 12. If his Heart be off from God and Duty for a little while, yet he recollects himſelf, and ſaith, as Pſal. 116. 7. Return unto thy reſt, O my Soul.

4. Fourthly, Tho' a ſincere Chriſtian fall into ſin, and commit evil; yet he proceeds not from evil to evil, as the ungodly do. Jer. 9. 3. But makes his fall into one ſin a Caution to prevent another ſin. Peter by his fall got eſtabliſhment for time to come. If God will ſpeak Peace to them them, they are careful to return no more to folly, Psal. 85. 8. In that ye sorrowed after a Godly sort, what carefulness it wrought? Yea what fear. 2 Cor. 7. 11. It is not so with the Servants of Sin, one sin leaves them much more disposed to another Sin.

5. Fifthly, A sincere Christian may be drawn to sin, but yet he would be glad with all his Heart to be rid of sin. It would be more to him than thousands of Gold and Silver, that he might grieve and offend God no more, and that shews sin is not in dominion over him: He that is under the dominion of Sin, is loth to leave his Lusts. Sins Servants are not willing to part with it, they hold it fast, and refuse to let it go, as that Text expresseth it, Jer. 8. 5. But the great Complaint of the Upright is expressed by the Apostle according to the true sense of their Hearts, in Rom. 7. 24. Who shall deliver me from the Body of this Death:

6. Sixthly, It appears they yield not themselves willingly to obey sin, in as much as it is the matter of their joy when God orders any Providence to prevent sin in them: Blessed be the Lord (said David to Abigail) and blessed be thy Advice, and blessed be thou, that hast kept me this Day from shedding Blood, 1 Sam. 15. 32, 33.

Here's blessing upon blessing, for a Sin-preventing Providence. The Author is blessed, the Instrument blessed, the means blessed. O its a blessed thing in the Eyes of a sincere Man to be kept from sin; he rekons it a great Deliverance, a very happy Escape if he be kept from sin.

7. Seventhly, This shews that some who may be drawn to commit sin, yet are none of the Servants of Sin, That they do heartyly beg the assistance of Grace to keep them from sin: Keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins (saith the Psalmist, Psal. 19. 13.) let them not have Dominion over me; q. d. Lord, I find Propensions to sin in my Nature, yea, and strong ones too; if thou leave me to my self, I am carried into sin as easily as a Feather down the Torrent. O Lord keep back thy Servant: And there is no Petition that upright ones pour out their Hearts to God in, either more frequently, or more ardently than in this, to be kepr back from sin.

8. Eighthly and Lastly, This shews the Soul not to be under the dominion of sin, that it doth not only cry to God to be kept back from sin, but uses the means of Prevention himself; he resists it, as well as prays against it, Psal. 18. 23. I was also upright before him, and kept my self from mine Iniquity: So Job 31. 1. I have made a Covenant with mine eyes; and yet more fully in Isa. 33. 15. He shaketh his hands from holding bribes, and stoppeth his Ears from hearing blood; and shutteth his Eyes from seeing evil, See with what care the Portals are shut at which sin useth to enter. All these things are very relieving Considerations to poor Souls questioning their Integrity under the frequent Surprisals of Sin. And the next Tryal no less.

SECT. VIII.

(5.) Fifthly, Our Opposition to Conflicts with Sin discover what we are, Gold, or Dross

There are conflicts with sin both in the Regenerate, and in the Unregenerate; but there is a vast difference betwixt them, as will appear in the following account.

1, First, There is an universal, and there is a particular Opposition to Sin; the former is found in regenerate, the latter in unregenerate Souls: A gracious Heart hates every false way, Psal. 119. 104. and must needs do so, because he hates and opposes Sin as Sin; so that he can have no peccatum in deliciis, no excepted or reserved Lust, but fights against the whole Body, and every limb and member of the body of sin.

But it is not so with the Hypocrite or carnal Professor: He hath evercome some reserved sin, that he cannot part with.

2. Secondly, There is an Opposition betwixt the new Nature and Sin, and there is an Opposition betwixt natural Conscience and Sin; the former is the Case of an upright Soul, the latter may be of a Self-deceiver.

A regenerate Person opposeth Sin because there is an irreconcileable Antipathy betwixt it and the new Nature in him, as is clear from Gal. 5. 17. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: By Flesh understand corrupt Nature; by Spirit not only the spirit of Man, but the spirit of God, or principle of Regeneration in Man: By the lusting of these two against each other, understand the Desire and Endeavour of each others destruction and Ruine; and the ground of all this is the contrariety of these two Natures.

These are contrary one to the other; there is a twofold Opposition betwixt them, one formal their very Nature are opposite; the other effective, their workings and designs are opposite, as it is betwixt Fire and Water.

But the Oppositions found in unrenewed Souls against Sin, is not from their Natures, for Sin is suitable enough to that; but from the Light that is in their Minds and Consciences with scares and terrifies them. Such was that in Darius, Dan. 6. 14. He was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and laboured till the going down of the Sun to deliver him. Here the contest was betwixt Sense of Honour upon one side, and Conviction of Conscience on the other side.

Sometimes a generous and noble Disposition opposes sordid and base Actions: Major sum, & ad major a natus; quam ut corporis mei sim mancipium: I am greater, and born to greater things, than that I should be a Slave to my Body, said a brave Heathen.

3. Thirdly, There is a permanent, and there is a transient Opposition to Sin; the former is the case of God's People, the latter of temporary and unsound Professors.

The Saint when he draws the sword in this War fare against Sin, throws away the scabbiness; no End of this Combate with Sin till Life end; their life and their troubles are finished together, 2 Tim. 4. 7. I have fought the good fight, and have finished my Course.

But in other Men it is but a transient quarrel out with sin one Day, and in another; and the reason is plain by what was noted before; it is not the Opposition of two Natures: It is like the Opposition of the Wind and Tyde, these may be contrary and make a stormy Sea to day; but the Wind may come about, and go as the Tyde go to morrow; but in a Christian it is as the opposition of the River and the Dam, one must give way to the other there's no reconciling them. But the other like the Dog, returns to his vomit. 2 Pet. ult.

4. Fourthly, There is an Opposition to the Root of sin, and an Opposition to the Fruits of sin. gracio gracious Soul oppoſeth Root and Fruit, but others the latter only. The great Deſign of an upright Soul, is not only to lop off this or that Branch, but to kill the Root of Sin which is in his Nature, Rom. 7. 24. Who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death. But the great care and endeavours of others is to ſuppreſs outward acts of ſin, and eſcape the miſchevous conſequents of it: Yea, their ſtudy is, as Lactantius phraſeth it, Potius abſcondere, quam abſciendere vitia: To hide, rather than to kill their Luſts.

5. Fifthly, There is an Oppoſition to ſin, in the ſtrength of God, and an Oppoſition to ſin, in our own ſtrength; the former is proper to a real Chriſtian, the latter is found frequently with unſanctifyed perſons; when a Chriſtian goes forth againſt any ſin, it is in the ſtrength of God: So you read their Rule directs them, Eph. 6. 10. Be ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might: Take unto you the whole Armour of God: And ſuitably you ſhall find them frequently upon their Knees begging Strength from Heaven againſt their Luſts; 2 Cor. 12. 8. For this Cauſe I beſought the Lord thrice, ſaith Paul, (i. e.) often and earneſtly, that the Temptation might depart from him.

But others go forth againſt ſin only in the ſtrength of their own Reſolutions, ſo did Pendleton in our Story: Theſe Reſolutions, or Vows, which they have put themſelves under, are as frequently fruſtrated, as made.

6. Sixthly, There is a ſucceſsful Oppoſition to ſin, and an Oppoſition that comes to nothing. The former is that of true Chriſtians, the latter is found among unregenerate Men.

The work of Mortification in the Saints is progreſſive, and increaſing: Hence Rom. 6. 6. Our old man is Crucifyed with him, that the Body of Sin might be deſtroyed. Sin dyes in Believers much as crucifyed Perſons uſe to dye, viz. a ſlow lingering, gradual, but ſure Death; its vigour and Life expires by degrees: Or as a conſumptive Perſon dyes; for to that alſo he alludes here: There is a Diſeaſe which is called Conſumptio totius, a Conſumption of the whole, and thoſe that dye of that Diſeaſe languiſh more and more, till at laſt they drop ſenſium, ſine ſenſu, by imperceptible degrees and ſteps into the Grave.

But in the Unregenerate whatever conflicts they have with ſin, no Corruption falls before it: It may be ſaid of them, as the Church in another caſe complains of her ſelf, Iſa. 26. 18. We have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind, we have not wrought any deliverance in the Earth, neither have the Inhabitants of the World fallen. So it fares with theſe Profeſſors, they pray, they hear, they vow, they reſolve, but when all is done, their Luſts are as ſtrong and vigorous as ever: No degree of Mortification appears after all.

And thus much of the Tryal of our Sincerity by our carriage toward Sin.

CHAP. VII.

Shewing what Proof and Tryal is made of the ſoundneſs or unſoundneſs of our Graces by the Duties of Religion which we perform.

SECT. I.

WE now come (according to the Method propoſed) to make tryal of the truth or falſeneſs of Grace, by the Duties we daily perform in Religion. And certainly they alſo have the Uſe and Efficacy of Fire, for this Diſcovery, 1 John 2. 4, 5. He that ſaith I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments [is a lyar] and the Truth is not in him: But whoſo keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; And hereby know we that we are in him.

This is a practical lye; of which the Apoſtle ſpeaks here, by which Men deceive others for a while, and themſelves for ever; a lye not ſpoken, but done; when a Man's courſe of Life contradicts his Profeſſion. The Life of an Hypocrite is but one long or continued lye, he ſaith or profeſſeth he knows God, but takes no care at all to obey him in the Duties he commands, he either neglects them, or if he performs them, it is not as God requires: If they draw nigh him with their Lips yet their Heart is far from him, Iſa. 29. 13. Thou art near in their Mouth, but far from their reins, Jer. 12. 2.

There are ſome that feel the Influence and Power of their Communion with the Lord in Dutys, going down to their very reins: And there are others whoſe Lips and Tongues only are touched with Religion.

This is an Age of Light and much Profeſſion: Men cannot now keep up a Reputation in the ſober and profeſſing World, whilſt they let down, and totally neglect the Duties of Religion; but ſurely if Men would be but juſt to themſelves, their very performances of Duty would tell them what their Hearts are.

SECT. II.

FOR there are among others theſe following Particulars, that do very clearly difference the ſound from the unſound Profeſſor.

1. Firſt, The Deſigns and true Levels and Aims of Men's Hearts in Duty will tell them what they are.

An Hypocrite aims low, Hoſ. 7. 14. They have not cryed to me with their Heart, when they howled upon their Beds, they aſſembled themſelves for Corn and Wine, and they rebel againſt me. It is not for Chriſt, and Pardon, for Mortification, and Holineſs, but for Corn, and Wine, thus they make a Market of Religion; all their Ends in Duty are either carnal, natural, or legal; it is either to accommodate their carnal ends, or ſatisfy and quiet their Conſciences; and ſo their Duties are performed as a ſin-offering to God.

But an upright Heart, hath very high, and pure aims in Duty; the deſire of their ſoul is to God, Iſa. 26. 8. Their Soul follows hard after God, Pſal. 63. 8. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I might dwell in the House of the Lord all the days of my Life, to see the Beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his Temple, Psal. 27. 4. These are the true Eagles that play at the Sun, and will not stoop to low and earthly Objects. Alas! if the enjoyment of God be missed in a Duty, it is not the greatest enlargements of Gifts will satisfy; he comes back like a Man that hath taken a long Journey to meet his Friend upon important business, and lost his labour, his Friend was not there.

2. Secondly, The Engagements of Men's Hearts to God in Duties will tell them what they are, the Hypocrite takes little heed to his Heart, Esa. 29. 13. they are not afflicted really for the hardness, deadness, unbelief and wandrings of their Hearts in duty, as upright ones are; nor do they engage their Hearts, and labour to get them up with God in duty as his People do. I have intreated thy favour with my whole Heart, saith David, Psal. 119. 58. They are not pleased in duty till they feel their Hearts stand towards God like a Bow in its full bent. I say it is not always so with them, what would they give that it might be so? But surely if their Souls in duty be empty of God, they are filled with trouble and sorrow.

3. Thirdly, The Conscience Men make of secret as well as publick Duties, will tell them what their Hearts and Graces are true or false. A vain Professor is curious in the former, and either negligent, or at best formal in the latter; for he finds no inducements of Honour, Applause or Ostentation of Gifts externally moving him to them; nor hath he any experience of the sweetness and benefit of such duties internally to allure and engage his Soul to them.

The Hypocrite therefore is not for the Closet, but the Synagogue, Matth. 6. 5, 6. Not but that education, example, or the impulse of Conscience, may sometimes drive him thither, but it is not his dayly Delight to be there, his Meat and Drink to retire from the clamour of the World to enjoy God in secret. 'Tis the observation of their Duties is the great inducement to these Men to perform them, and Verily, saith our Lord, ver. 2. they have their Reward, ἀπέχουσι, they have it away, or they have carryed off the Benefit and Advantage that ever they shall have by Religion. Much good may it do them with their Applause and Honour, let them make much of that airy Reward, for it's all that ever they shall have.

But now for a Soul truly gracious, he cannot long subsist without secret Prayer. 'Tis true, there is not always an equal Freedom and Delight, a like Enlargement and Comfort in those Retirements, but yet he cannot be without them; he finds the want of his secret in his publick Duties: If he and his God have not met in secret, and had some Communion in the Morning, he sensibly finds it in the deadness and unprofitableness of his Heart and Life all the day after.

4. Fourthly, The spirituality of our Duties tryes the sincerity of our Graces: An unregenerate Heart is carnal, whilst engaged in Duties that are spiritual. Some Men deceive themselves in thinking they are spiritual Men, because their Employment and Calling is about spiritual things, Hosea 9. 7. This indeed gives them the Denomination, but not the Frame of spiritual Men; and others judge themselves spiritual Persons, because they frequently perform and attend upon spiritual Duties: But alas the Heart and State may be carnal notwithstanding all this. O, my Friends, it is not enough that the Object of your Duties is spiritual, that they respect an holy God, nor that the matter be spiritual, that you be conversant about holy things; but the frame of your Heart must be spiritual, an heavenly temper of Soul is necessary, and what are the most heavenly Duties without it?

The End and Design you aim at must be spiritual, the Enjoyment of God, and a growing Conformity to him in Holiness, else multiply Duties as the Sand on the Sea-shore, and they all will not amount to one Evidence of your Sincerity. God is my Witness whom I serve with my Spirit, saith the Apostle, Rom. 1. 9. He seems to appeal to God in this matter. I serve God in my Spirit, and God knows that I do so; I dare appeal to him that it is so; he knows that my Heart is with him or would be with him in my Duties: The Arms of my Faith do either sensibly grasp, or are stretched out towards him in my Duties. O how little savour do gracious Hearts find in the most excellent Duties, if God and their Souls do not sensibly meet in them!

Certainly, Reader, there is a time when God comes nigh to Men in duty, when he deals familiarly with Men, and sensibly fills their Souls with unusual Powers and Delights. The near approaches of God to their Souls are felt by them, (for Souls have their senses as well as Bodies) and now are their Minds abstracted and marvelously refined from all that is material and earthly, and swallowed up in spiritual Excellencies and Glories.

These are the real Prelibations or Foretastes of Glory, which no Man can by Words make another to understand, as he himself doth that feels them.

These Seasons, I confess, do but rarely occur to the best of Christians, nor continue long when they do: Alas! this Wine is too strong for such weak Bottles as we are. Hold, Lord, said an holy Man said once, it is enough, thy poor Creature is a Clay Vessel, and can hold no more: This is that Joy unspeakable and full of Glory, which is mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 7, 8. Something that Words cannot describe; these Seasons are the golden Spots of our Lives, when we are admitted to these near and ineffable views and tastes of God, possibly so poor Christians can say but little to these things, their Sorrows are exercised in Duties more than their Joys: They are endeavouring to mount, but the Stone hangs at the Heel; they essay, but cannot rise to that height that others do, who are got up by their labouring Faith into the upper Region, and there display their Wings and play in the Sun-beams: But though they cannot rise to this height, yet have they no satisfaction in Duty wherein there is no intercourse betwixt God and their Souls.

Rara hora, brevis mora; sapit quidem suavissime, sed gustatur rarissime. Bern.

That which contents another, will not content a Christian: If the King be absent, Men will look to the empty Chair; but if God be absent, an empty Duty gives no satisfaction to a gracious Spirit. The poorest Christian is found panting after God by sincere Desires, and labouring to get up that dead and vain Heart to God in Duty, though, alas! it's many times but the rolling of the returning Stone against the Hill, yet he never expects advantage by that Duty wherein the Spirit of God is not, nor doth he expect the Spirit of God should be where his own Spirit is not.

5. Fifthly, Assiduity and Constancy in Duties

Rel

Religion makes a notable Discovery of the soundness or rottenness of Men's Heart's. The Hypocrite may shew some zeal and forwardness in Duties for a time, but he will jade and give out at length: Job 27. 10. Will he delight himself in the Almighty? will he always call upon God? No, he will not. If his motions in Religion were natural, they would be constant, but they are artificial, and he is moved by external inducements, and so must needs be off and on; he prays himself weary of praying, and hears himself weary of hearing: His Heart is not delighted in his Duties, and therefore his Duties must needs grow stale and dry to him after a while. There be three Seasons in which the zeal of an Hypocrite may be inflamed in duties.

First, When some imminent danger threatens him, some smart Rod of God is shaked over him, When he slew them, then they sought him, and returned and enquired early after God, Psal. 78. 34. O the goodly Words they give, the fair Promises they make, and yet all the while they do but flatter him with their Lips, and lye unto him with their Tongues, vers. 36, 37. for let but that Danger pass over, and the Heavens clear up again, and he will restrain Prayer, and return to his old course again.

Secondly, When the Times countenance and favour Religion, and the Wind is in his back, O what a zeal will he have for God! So in the stony Ground, Matth. 3. 5. the Seed sprung up and flourished till the Sun of Persecution arose, and then it faded away, for it had no depth of Earth, no deep solid inward work or principle of Grace to maintain it.

Thirdly, When Self-ends and Designs are accommodated and promoted by these things; this was the case of Jehu, 2 Kings 10. 16. Come see my Zeal, for what? For a base Self-interest, not for God: How fervently will some Men pray, preach and profess, whilst they sensibly feel the incomes and profits of these Duties to their Flesh: Whilst they are admired and applauded!

These external Incentives will put an Hypocrite into an hot fit of Zeal, but then, as it is with a Man, whose Colours are raised by the heat of the fire, and not by the healthfulness of a good Constitution, it soon fades and falls again.

But, blessed be God, it is not so with all. The Man whose Heart is upright with his God, will keep Judgment, and do Righteousness at all times, Psal. 106. 3. Whether Dangers threatens or no; whether Times favour Religion or no; whether his earthly Interest be promoted by it or no, he will be Holy still, he will not part with his Duties when they are stript naked of those external Advantages; as the Addition of these things to Religion did not at first engage him, so the Abstraction of them, cannot disengage him.

If his Duty become his reproach, yet Moses will not forsake it, Heb. 11. 26. If he lose his Company, and be left alone, yet Paul will not flinch from his Duty, 2 Tim. 4. 16. If Hazard surround Duty on every side, yet Daniel will not quit it, Dan. 6. 10. for they considered these things at first, and counted the Cost, they still find Religion is rich enough to pay the Cost of all that they can lose, or suffer for its sake: Yea, and that with an hundred-fold Reward now in this Life. They never had other design in engaging in Religious Duties, but to help them to Heaven, and they recover Heaven at last, whether the way it prove better or worse, they have their design and ends; and therefore they will be steadfast, always abounding in the Work of the Lord, as knowing their labour is not vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. ult.

6. Sixthly, The Humility and Self-denyal of our Hearts in Duties will try what they are for their Integrity and Sincerity towards God. Doth a Man boast his own Excellencies in Prayer, as the Pharisee did, Luke 18, 10, 11. God I thank thee I am not as other Men: Which he speaks not in an humble acknowledgment of the Grace of God which differences Man from Man, but in a proud ostentation of his own Excellencies? Doth a Man make his Duties his Saviours, and trust to them in a vain confidence of their worth and dignity? Luke 18. 9. Surely his Heart which is thus lifted up within him, is not upright, Hab. 2. 4. But if the Heart be upright indeed, it will express its humility, as in all other things, so especially in its Duties wherein it approaches the great and holy God.

First, It will manifest its humility in those awful and reverential apprehensions it hath of God, as Abraham did, Gen. 18. 27. And now I that am but Dust and Ashes, saith he, have taken upon me to speak unto God. The Humility of Abraham's Spirit is, in some measure, to be found in all Abraham's Children.

Secondly, In those low and vile Thoughts they have of themselves and their religious Performances: Thus that poor Penitent, Luke 7. 38. stood behind Christ weeping, Yet the Dogs eat the Crumbs, saith another, Mark 7. 28. I am more brutish than any Man, saith a third, Prov. 30. 7. I abhor my self in Dust and Ashes, saith a fourth, Job 42. 6. and as little esteem they have for their Performances, Isa. 64. 6. All our Righteousnesses are as filthy Rags. I deny not but there is Pride and Vanity in the most upright ones, but what place soever it finds in their converses with Men, it finds little room in their converses with God, or if it doth, they loathe it, and themselves for it.

Thirdly, But especially their humility in Duty is discovered in renouncing all their Duties in point of dependance, and relying entirely upon Christ for Righteousness and Acceptance: They have special regard to Duties in point of Obedience, but none at all in point of Relyance.

7. Seventhly, The Communion and Intercourse which is betwixt God and Men in Duties, notably discovers what their Persons and Graces are. And it must needs do so, because what Communion soever the Hypocrite hath with Duties, or with Saints in Duties, to be sure he hath none with God.

None can come nigh to God in Duty, but those that are made nigh by Reconciliation: All special Communion with Christ is founded in real Union with Christ; but the Wicked are estranged from the Womb, Psal. 58. 3.

But now there is real Communion betwixt God and his People in Duties. Truly our Fellowship, κοινωνία, our Communion is with the Father and Son, 1 Joh. 1. 3. God pours forth of his Spirit upon them, and they pour forth their Hearts to God. It is sensibly manifest to them when the Lord comes nigh to their Souls in Duty, and as sensible they are of his Retreats and withdrawments from their Souls, Cant. 3. 1. 4. They find their Hearts, like the Helotrope, open and shut, according to the accesses and recesses of the Divine Presence. They that never felt any thing of this Nature, may call it a Fancy, but the Lord's People are abundantly satisfyed of the reality thereof.

Their

Their very Countenance is altered by it, 1 Sam. 1. 18. the sad and cloudy Countenance of Hannah cleared up, there was fair Weather in her very Face, as soon as she knew she had Audience and Acceptance with her God. I know all Communion with God doth not consist in Joys and Comforts, there is a real Communion with God in the mortifying and humbling Influences of his Spirit upon Men, as in the cheering and refreshing Influences thereof. I know also there is a great diversity in the Degrees and Measures thereof. It is not alike in all Christians, nor with the same Christian at all times: But that real Christians have true and real Communion with God in their Duties, is a Truth as manifest in spiritual sense and experience of the Saints, as their Communion is one with another.

8. Eighthly, Growth and Improvement of Grace in Duties notably differences the sound and the unsound Heart. All the Duties in the World will never make an Hypocrite more holy, humble or heavenly than he is; but as the watering of a dry Stick will sooner rot it, than make it flourishing and fruitful: What was Judas the better for all those heavenly Sermons, Prayers and Discourses of Christ which he heard? And what will thy Soul be the better for all the Duties thou performest weekly and dayly, if thy Heart be unsound? It's plain, from Joh 15. 4. there must be an implantation into Christ, before there can be an improvement in fruitful Obedience. And it is as plain, from 1 Joh. 2. 14. that the virtues of Ordinances must remain, the efficacy and powers that we sometimes feel under them, must abide and remain in the Heart afterwards, or we cannot grow, and be made fruitful by them.

But the false Professor is neither rooted in Christ by Union with him, nor doth, or can retain the vertue of Ordinances with him; but, like one that views his Face in a Glass, quickly forgets what manner of Man he was; his Head indeed may grow, his Knowledge may increase, but he hath a dead and withered Heart.

But as the Saints have real Communion with God in Duties, so they do make Improvements answerable thereunto: There is more certainly a ripening of their Graces that way; a changing or gradual transformation from Glory to Glory; a springing up to that full stature of the Man in Christ. They that are planted in the House of the Lord, shall flourish in the Courts of our God, Psal. 92. 13, 14. There is pure and sincere Milk in the Breasts of Ordinances; a Believer sucks the very Breasts of Christ in his Duties, and doth grow thereby, 1 Pet. 2. 2. they do grow more and more judicious, experienced, humble, mortifyed and heavenly, by conversing with the Lord so frequently in his Appointments.

There is, I confess, a more discernable Growth and ripening in some Christians, than in others: The Faith of some groweth exceedingly, 2 Thes. 1. 3. others more slowly, Heb. 5. 12. but yet there are improvements of Grace in all upright ones: Habits are more deeply radicated, or fruits of Obedience more increased.

Obj. If any upright Soul be stumbled at this, as not being able to discern the Increase of his Graces after all his Duties.

Sol. Let such consider, the growth of Grace is discerned as the growth of Plants is, which we perceive rather crevisse, quam crescere: To have grown, than to grow; compare Time past and present, and you may see it; but usually our eager Desires after more, make us overlook what we have as nothing.

9. Ninthly, The Assistances and Influences of the Spirit in Duties, shews us what we are, no vital sanctifying Influences can fall upon carnal Hearts in Duties. The Spirit helps not their Infirmities nor makes Intercession for them with Groanings which cannot be uttered, as he doth for his own People, Rom. 8. 26, 27. they have his assistance in the way of common Gifts, but not in the way of special Grace: He may enable them to preach judiciously not experimentally: To pray orderly and neatly, not feelingly, believingly and brokenheartedly, For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God, Rom. 8. 14. he never so assists, but where he hath first sanctifyed. Carnal Men furnish the materials of their Duties out of the strength of their Parts; a strong Memory a good Invention are the Fountains whence they draw.

But it is otherwise with Souls truly gracious they have ordinarily a threefold assistance from the Spirit in reference to their Duties.

First, Before Duties, exciting them to it, making them feel their need of it, like the Call of an empty Stomach, Psal. 27. 8. Thou saidst, Seek my Face, My Heart answered, Thy Face, Lord, will I seek.

Secondly, In their Duties, furnishing both matter and affection, as in that Text lately cited Rom. 8. 26. guiding them not only what to ask but how to ask.

Thirdly, After their Duties, helping them not only to suppress the Pride and Vanity of their Spirits, but also to wait on God for the accomplishments of their Desires.

Now though all these things, wherein the sincerity of our Hearts is tryed in Duties, be found in great variety (as to degrees) among Saints yet they are Mysteries unknown by experience to other Men.

CHAP. VIII.

Opening the Tryals of Sincerity and Hypocrisy sufferings upon the Account of Religion.

SECT. I.

WE are now arrived at the last Tryal of Grace propounded, viz. by sufferings for Religion.

Thousands of Hypocrites embark themselves in the profession of Religion in a Calm; but if the Wind riseth, and the Sea rageth, and they see Religion will not transport them safely to the Cape of their earthly Hopes and Expectations they desire to be landed again assoon as may be, for they never intended to ride out a Storm for Christ: So you find Matth. 13. 20, 21. He indureth for a while, but when Tribulation or Persecution ariseth because of the Word, by and by he is offended.

But yet it is not every Tryal by sufferings that separates Gold from Dross, and therefore my Business will be to shew,

1. First, When the Fire of Sufferings and Persecution is hot and vehement enough to separate them.

2. Second

2. Secondly, Why it must needs discover Hypocrisy when it is at that height.
3. Thirdly, What Advantages sincere Grace hath to endure that severe and sharp Tryal.

SECT. II.

1. NOW the Fire of Persecution or Sufferings for Religion, may be judged intense and high enough to separate Gold and Dross.

First, When Religion exposes us to imminent hazard of our deepest and dearest Interests in this World. Such are our Liberties, Estates and Lives: Now 'tis a fierce and fiery Tryal indeed. Sometimes it exposes the Liberties of its Professors, Rev. 2. 10. The Devil shall cast some of you into Prison: Sometimes their Estates, Heb. 10. 34. Ye took joyfully the spoyling of your Goods; and sometimes their Lives, Heb. 11. 37. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, they were slain with the Sword. Whilst it goes no higher than some small inconveniences of Life, Reputation and sense of Honour will hold a false Heart; but when it comes to this, few will be found able to endure it, but those that expect to save no more by Religion but their Souls, and account themselves in good case if they can but save them with the loss of all that is dear to them in this World.

Here the false Heart boggles, here it usually fades and faulters.

Secondly, The fiery Tryal is then high, when there remains no visible hopes of deliverance or outward encouragements to sense, that the Scene will alter: When we see not our Signs, there is no more any Prophet, nor any that can tell us how long, as the case with the Church was, Psal. 74. then their Hands hang down, and their Hearts faint: Nor is it to be wondred at, when the length of Troubles prove so sore a Temptation even to the Upright, to put forth their hands to Iniquity, as it is Psal. 125. 3. if such a Temptation shake such Men as build on the Rock, it may quite overturn those whose foundation is but Sand.

Thirdly, When a false Professor is engaged alone in sufferings, and is singled out from the Herd as a Deer to be run down, now it's a thousand to one but he quits Religion to save himself; good Company will encourage a faint-hearted Traveller to jogg on a great way; but if he be forsaken by all, as Paul was, no Man to stand by him, if left alone, as Elijah was, what can encourage him to hold out?

Indeed if they had the same invisible Supports those good Men had, that the Lord was with them, that would keep them steady; but wanting that Encouragement from within, and all shrinking away from without, they quickly tyre downright.

Fourthly, When near Relations and Intimates oppose and tempt us. The Prophet speaks of a case when a Man's Enemies shall be the Men of his House; it may be the Wife of his Bosome, Mich. 7. 5, 6. O what a Tryal is that which Christ mentions in Luke 14. 26. when we must hate Father and Mother, Wife and Children, or lose claim to Christ and Heaven! This is hard work indeed.

How hard did that truly noble and renowned Patrius Carracciolus find this! O what a Conflict had he in his Bowels! Now Christ and our dearest Interest come to meet like two Men upon a narrow Bridge, if one go forward, the other must go back, and now the predominant Interest can no longer be concealed.

Fifthly, When powerful Temptations are mixed with cruel Sufferings, when we are strongly tempted, as well as cruelly persecuted; this blows up the Fire to a vehement height. This was the Tryal of those precious primitive Believers, Heb. 11. 35. 37. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, they were tempted: Here was Life, Liberty and Preferment set upon one hand, and Death in the most formidable Shape upon the other. This cannot but be a great Tryal to any, but especially when a cruel Death, and tender Temper meet, then the Tryal goes high indeed.

SECT. III.

2. AND that such Sufferings as these will discover the falseness and rottenness of Men's Hearts cannot be doubted, if you consider this is the Fire designed by God for this very use and purpose, to separate the Gold fom the Dross, so you will find it, 1 Pet. 4. 12. Beloved think it not strange concerning the fiery Tryal, which is to try you, (i. e.) the very Design and Aim of Providence in permitting and ordering them is to try you. The Design of Satan is to destroy you, but God's Design is to try you. Upon this account you find the Hour of Persecution (in a suitable notion) call'd the Hour of Temptation, or Probation, Rev. 3. 10. for then Professors are sifted to the very Bran; searched to the very bottom principles. This is the day that burns as an Oven, in which all the Proud, and all that do wickedly shall be as stubble, Mal. 4. 1. for,

1. First, In that day the predominant Interest must appear, and be discovered: It can be concealed no longer, No Man can serve two Masters, saith Christ, Luke 16. 13. A Man may serve many Masters, if they all command the same things, or things subordinate to each other; but he cannot serve two Masters if their Commands clash and interfere with each other; and such are the Commands of Christ and the Flesh in a suffering Hour: Christ saith, Be thou faithful to the Death; the Flesh saith, spare thy self, and secure the Comforts of Life. Christ saith, He that loveth Father or Mother, Wife or Children, Lands or Inheritances more than me, is not worthy of me. Flesh saith, He that will grieve and break the Hearts of such dear Relations, and forsake when he might keep such earthly Accommmodations, is not worthy of them.

Thus the two Interests come in full opposition: And now have but patience to wait a little, and you shall discern which is predominant. A Dog follows two Men while they both walk one way; and you know not which of the two is his Master; stay but a little till their Path parts, and then you shall quickly see who is his Master. So is it in this case.

2. Secondly, In that day sensible supports fail, and all a Man's relief comes in by the pure and immediate actings of Faith; and were it not for those reliefs, his heart would soon faint and dye away under discouragements, 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. We faint not whilst we look not at the things which are seen, for they are temporal, but at the things which are not seen, for they are eternal: q. d. No longer than we keep our eye intently fixed upon the invisible and eternal things in the coming World; we feel our selves fainting and dying away under the many Troubles and Afflictions of this World. I had fainted (saith holy David) if I had not believed. How then suppose ye shall the Hypocrite live at such a time, who hath no faith to support him? No relief but what comes in through his senses?

3. Thirdly, In that day all meer Notions and Speculations about Religion vanish, and nothing relieves and satisfies the suffering Soul but what it really believes, and what it hath satisfying proof and experience of in himself. There are a great many pretty and pleasing notions with which our Minds are entertained with some delight in times of Peace, which can do us no service at all in the day of Trouble; and for our speculative unpracticable knowledge of the greatest truths in Religion, as little service is to be expected from them. Except we have a better evidence and security about them we shall be loth to venture all upon the credit of them; that's a very considerable passage to this purpose in Heb. 10. 34. Ye took joyfully the spoiling of your Goods, [knowing in your selves] that ye have in Heaven a better and more enduring substance: This knowing in your selves is by inward and sensible experience, taste and feeling, which is most abundantly satisfying to the Soul, and stands opposed to all that traditional knowledge we receive from others; which, as it leaves the Mind fluctuating, so the Heart also dead and comfortless.

4. Fourthly, In that day the root and foundation of a Man's faith and hope is tryed, and then they that have built upon the sand must needs fail; for every thing is as its foundation is, Principles are to us what a Root is to a Tree, or a Foundation to a House, a flaw or grand defect there most assuredly ruines all: This we find to be the very scope of those two famous Parables, Luke 14. 25. and Matth. 13. 21. Lesser troubles shake but the branches, but these try the very root; if nothing be found there but Self-ends, the force of Education, the influence of Examples, surely when the Winds rise high, and beat upon it, they will immediately lay the loftyest Professor even with the Ground.

And thus you see what a Crisis an hour of Temptation, the suffering hour is, and what discoveries of Hypocrisy it must needs make; for now the Hypocrite like Orpha will forsake Religion, but Sincerity will make the Soul cleave to it, as Ruth did to Naomi.

SECT. IV.

3. WHAT Advantages Sincerity gives the Soul for its establishment and perseverance in suffering times, I shall briefly account for in the following particulars.

1. First, Sincere Godliness dethrones that Idol the love of this World, in all true Christians; and this is it that makes Men shrink and flinch from Christ in a day of suffering. I do not deny but even Believers themselves love the World too much, but they love it not as their chief good; it is not their portion or happiness, if any man so love the World, the love of the Father is not in him, 1 John 2. 15. How much soever a sincere Christian loves the World, yet still it is in subordination to the love of God, John 21. 15. Sincerity can consist with no other love of the World, it will not suffer such a cursed plant to grow under its shadow.

Now, What is it but this inordinate supream love of the Creature that makes Men forsake Christ in time of temptation? This was the ruine of that young man, Mat. 19. 22. He went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions. This was the overthrow of Demas, 2 Tim. 4. 10. He hath forsaken me (saith the Apostle) having loved this present World: The love of this World, like sap in green Wood, will not suffer you to burn for Christ, get but the heart mortifyed to the Creature, by a discovery of better things in Heaven, and it will establish and fix your Spirits, that it shall not be in the power of Creatures to shake you off from Christ your foundation.

2. Secondly, Sincerity knits the Soul to Christ, and union with him secures us in the greatest tryals, Munimur quatenus unimur. The Hypocrite having no union with Christ can have no communion with him, nor communications of Grace from him; and so that little stock of his own being presently spent, (I mean natural Courage and Resolution) and no incomes from Christ, he must needs give up in a short time; but it is with a Believer in a day of trouble, as it is with a Garrison besieged by Land, but free and open to the Sea, whence fresh supplies are dayly sent to relieve it, see 2 Cor. 1. 15. As the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ, fresh aids and dayly supplies proportionable to our expences and decays of strength: So Col. 1. 11. Strengthned with all might in the inner man, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness: And this is the Believer's great advantage by his union with Christ in a day of Tryal.

3. Thirdly, As Sincerity unites the Soul with Christ, so it sets the Heart upon Heaven and things eternal, Col. 3. 1, &c. surely nothing is more conducive to our stability than this in the hour of temptation.

This is the most effectual preservative from temptations upon the right hand, and upon the left. Moses could cast a Kingdom at his heels, despise the Riches, Pleasures and Honours of Egypt whilst his eye was fixed upon him that is invisible, and had respect to the recompence of reward, Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. And it was a brave reply of the Forty Martyrs to Valence the Emperor, tempting them with the Preferments and Honours of the World, Why offer you these trifles to us when you know how the whole World is contemned by us? And for temptations on the left hand, how little can they move that Soul, who realises the glory of the approaching World, and sees the afflictions and sufferings of this World preparing him for, and hastening him to the enjoyment of it; temptations meet with but cold entertainment from such Souls.

4. Fourthly, Sincerity drives but one design, and that is to please and enjoy God; and what can more establish and fix the Soul in the hour of Temptations than this? The reason why the Hypocrite is unstable in all his ways, is given us by the Apostle James, 1. 8. He is a double minded man, δίψυχος ἀνὴρ, a Man of two Souls in one body; as a prophane wretch once boasted, that he had one Soul for God, and another for any thing: but all the designs of a gracious heart are united in one; and so the entire stream of his affections runs strong.

'Tis base by-ends and self-interests, that, like a great many ditches cut out of the bank of a River, draw away the stream out of its proper Channel, and make its waters fail: But if the heart be united for God, as the expression is, Psal. 86. Then we may say of such a Christian, as was said of a young Roman, Quicquid vult, valde vult, what he doth is done with all his might. And was the ground of that saying, liberet me Deus de homine unius tantum negotii: A man of one only design puts to all his strength to carry it, nothing can stand before him.

5. Fifthly, Sincerity brings a Man's Will into subjection to the Will of God, and this being done; the greatest danger and difficulty is over with such a Man. This is that holy Oyl which makes the Wheels of the Soul run nimbly even in difficult paths of Obedience, non tardat uncta rota. Let a Man be once brought to that, The will of the Lord be done, as it is Acts 21. 13. To see the highest reason of chearful obedience in the holy, just and Good-will of God, and then all the difficulty is over: He can suffer quietly what Men inflict unjustly.

6. Sixthly, Sincerity takes its measures of present things by the rules of Faith and Eternity, it goes not by the same reckoning and account that others do, who judge of things by sense, and the respects they have to the present World, 2 Cor. 4. 18. We look not at the things that are seen, but at the things that are not seen; and this is there given as the reason of his not fainting under present difficulties; so Rom. 8. 18. I reckon that the Sufferings of the present times are not worthy to be compared with Glory which shall be revealed in us: He will not allow himself to undervalue eternal Glory by once mentioning present sufferings, in a way of bemoaning himself for them: A steady Eye upon the other World makes us more than Conquerors over the Troubles of this World.

7. Seventhly, To conclude, Sincerity alone hath all the heavenly Aids and Assistances to stability, and perseverance in suffering times. Upright ones (and such only) have Christ's Intercession in Heaven for them, Rom. 8. 34. The Spirit's Consolation in all their Troubles, 1 Pet. 4. 14. The Spirit of Glory and of God resteth on them: The beneficial Ministry of Angels, who are sent forth upon their Account, Heb. 1. 14. A stock of Prayers going for them all the World over, Heb. 6. 18. Multitudes of precious Promises in the Scriptures, for every Line, Word and Syllable of which the faithfulness of God stands engaged: So that it's impossible such Gold can perish in the Fire.

And thus of the several ways by which Grace is here tryed.

CHAP. IX.

Opening the Designs and Ends of God in bringing of the Professors of Religion into such various Tryals of their Graces in this World.

SECT. I.

THESE are some of the ways and methods in which God brings his Gold to the Touchstone, and to the Fire, even in this World; before the awful and solemn Tryal they must come to in the final Judgment. And if we desire to be satisfyed what the design and end of God in making such probations of his People is,

We must conclude in the general, he certainly designs his own Glory, and his People's Advantage and Profit in them. If he suffer them to be tryed by Reproaches, happy are they, the Spirit of God and Glory resteth on them, there's their Profit, and though his Name be evil spoken of, yet in the meekness of the Spirits he is glorifyed, as it is, 1 Pet. 4. 14. If the Scourge slay suddenly, he laugheth at the Tryal of the Innocent, Job 9. 23. Not at their Afflictions, but at the Effects and blessed Issues and Results of them: Not that it gives them pain, but that it gives him Glory: Upon this account the Apostle bids us count it all Joy when we fall into divers Temptations or Tryals: And still the more Tryals the more Joy; for thereby God will produce such Effects, as are more precious than Gold that perisheth, 1 Pet. 1. 7. O who can value the Comfort that is tasted by the Soul upon the Tryal and Discovery of its Sincerity! When after some sore Temptation, wherein God hath helped us to maintain our Integrity, or after some close pinching Affliction, wherein we have discovered in our selves a sweet resignation to, and Contentment in the Will of God; an Heart cleaving to the Lord, purged and made more spiritual under the Rod; we can turn to the Lord, and appeal to him as the Prophet did, Jer. 12. 3. But thou, O Lord, knowest me, thou hast seen me, and tryed mine Heart towards thee.

I say who can duly value such an Advantage, who would exchange such a Comfort for all the Gold and Silver in the World? How many Tryals soever God brings his People under, to be sure neither his own Glory, nor their Interest shall suffer any damage by them.

SECT. II.

BUT more particularly, let us bring our Thoughts close to the matter before us, and we shall find many great Advantages and Benefits rising out of these Tryals of Sincerity; for,

1. First, Hereby Hypocrisy is unmasked and discovered; the Vizard is pluckt off from the false Professor, and his true natural Face and Complection shewn to the World; and in this there is a great deal of good.

Object. Good, you will say, where lyes it? All the World sees the Mischief and sad Effects of it; many are stumbled, many are hardned by it, woe to the World because of Offences, Mat. 16. 7.

Sol. True, some are prejudiced and hardened by it, so as never to have good Thoughts of the Ways and People of God more; that's sad indeed, however therein God accomplishes his Word, and executeth his degree. And though these perish, yet,

First, Others are warned, awakened, and set a searching their own Hearts more narrowly than ever, and this is good: 1 Cor. 10. 11, 12. Now these were our Examples, wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

Secondly, Hereby Sin is ashamed, and it is good when Sin that hath exposed Men to so much shame shall be it self exposed to shame. This is the just reward of Sin, Jer. 13. 25, 26. This is thy Lot, the Portion of thy Measures from me, saith the Lord, because thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in falshood, therefore will I discover thy skirts upon thy Face, that thy Shame may appear.

The turning up the Skirt is a modest Expression of exposing a Person to the greatest Shame, in the Day of Tryal; God by discovering Hypocrisy shames the Hypocrite; and surely many such discoveries are made of Men at this day; we may see Sin that lurked close in the Heart before, now laid open before all Israel and before the Sun.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Hereby the poor self-cozening Hypocrite hath the greatest opportunity and advantage that ever was before him in all his Life, to recover himself out of the snare of the Devil: Now all his Pretences are gone; now that which like a Shield was advanced against the Arrows of Reproof and Conviction is gone; now a poor Creature stands naked and stript out of all his Pleas as a fair and open Mark to the Word, and his own Conscience; and happy will it be for him if now the Lord make Conviction to enter point-blank into his Soul; all these are blessed Effects of the Discovery of Hypocrisy.

2. Secondly, By these Tryals Integrity is cleared up, and the Doubts and Fears of many upright and holy ones allayed and quieted, resolved and satisfyed.

O what would many a poor Christian give for satisfaction in that point of Sincerity! How many Tears have been shed to God in secret upon that account? How many Hours have been spent in examination of his own Heart about it, and still Jealousies and Fears hang upon his Heart? He doubts what he may prove at last: Well, saith God, let his Sincerity then come to the test, kindle the Fire and cast in my Gold. Tryals are the high way to Assurance, let my Child see that he loves me more than these, that his Heart is upright with me. I will try him by Prosperity and by Adversity, by Persecutions and Temptations, and he shall see his Heart is better than he suspects it to be. This shall be the day of Resolution to his Fears and Doubts.

The Apostle speaking of Heresies, 1 Cor. 11. 7, 9. puts a necessity upon them. There must be Heresies, saith he, that they which are approved may be made manifest. The same necessity there is (and for the same end) of all other Tryals of Grace, that the lovely beautiful sweet Face of Sincerity may be opened sometimes to the World to enamour them, and to the Soul in whom it is, to satisfy that it doth not personate a Christian, but lives the very Life of a Christian, and hath the very Spirit and Principles of a Christian in him.

3. Thirdly, By these Tryals Pride and Self-confidence is destroyed and mortifyed in the Saints, as much as by any thing in the World: We never see what poor weak Creatures we are till we come to the Tryal. It is said, Deut. 8. 2. God led Israel through the Desart to prove them and to humble them: When we are proved, then we are humbled: Those that over-reckon their Graces before the Tryal, see they must come to another account, and take new measures upon themselves after they have been upon Tryal.

Ah! little did I think, saith one, that I had so much love for the World, and so little for God, till Afflictions tryed it. I could not have believed that ever the Creature had got so deep into my Heart, till Providence either threatned or made a Separation, and then I found it. I thought I had been rich in Faith, till such a Danger befel me, or such a Want began to pinch hard; and then I saw how unable I was to trust God for Protection, or Provision. O it's a good thing that our Hearts be kept humble and lowly, how rich soever they be in Grace.

4. Fourthly, By Tryals Grace is kept in Exercise, and the gracious Soul preserved from Security and spiritual Slothfulness: Tryals are to Grace what the Estuations and continual Agitations of the Waters are to the Sea, or what the racking of Wines from the Lees is to it; were it not for our frequent Tryals and Exercises, we should quickly settle upon the Lees, and our Duties would be (as God complains of Ephraim) like sower or dead Drink, Hos. 4. 18. flat and spiritless. Moab hath been at ease from his Youth, and he hath settled on his Lees, and hath not been emptyed from Vessel to Vessel; neither hath he gone into Captivity; therefore his taste remained in him, and his Scent is not changed, Jer. 11.

Much after that Rate it would be with our Hearts, did not the Lord frequently try and exercise them: Let the best Man be without some Tryal or other but a few Months, and you may find the want of it in his Prayers and Conference quickly. O what a Tang of Formality will be found in them! And is it for the Honour of God or Profit of his People that it should be so? No no, the Lord knows it is not; but how shall their Spirits be reduced to the former zealous heavenly Temper again? Why, saith the Lord, they must into the Furnace again. I will melt them and try them, for how shall I do for the Daughter of my People! Jer. 9. 7. I love them too well to lose them for want of a Rod. Alas! If I should suffer things to go on at this rate, what will become of them in a little time? What delight can I take in their Duties, when the Faith, Fervour, Humility and holy Seriousness of their Spirits is wanting in them? I will therefore refine them as Silver is refined, and try them as Gold is tryed, and they shall call upon my Name, and I will hear them, and I will say it is my People, and they shall say the Lord is my God, Zech. 13. 9. and thus the Lord chides himself Friend again with his People.

Thus he recovers them to their true Temper and thus his Visitations do preserve their Spirits and when the Lord sees these sweet Effects of his Tryals upon them, it greatly pleaseth him. now, saith God, I like it. This Providence hath done them good, this Rod was well bestowed, this letting loose of this Temptation or that Corruption upon them, hath made them find their Knees again, now I hear the Voice of my Child again.

Beloved, this is a blessed Fruit and Effect of our frequent Tryals, and how ungrateful soever they are to Flesh and Blood that affects Ease and is loth to be disturbed, yet it is necessary to the Preservation of our Spirits.

5. Fifthly, By the Tryal of our Graces Satan is defeated, and his accusations of the Saints found to be meer slanders. It is a very common thing with the Devil and wicked Men, to accuse the People of God of Hypocrisy, and to tell the World they are not the Men and Women they are taken to be, and that if their inside were but turned out by some thorough Tryal, or deep Search, it would appear that Religion did not indeed live in their Souls as they pretend, but that they only act a part, and personate heavenly and mortifyed Persons upon the publick Stage of Profession.

Thus the Accuser of the Brethren suggests the Hypocrisy of Job, cap. 2. 5. Put forth thine Hand now and touch his Bone and his Flesh, and he will curse thee to thy Face. q. d. Well might Job serve thee whilst thou hast been so bountiful a Master to him, he hath been well rewarded for all the service he hath done thee; but if thou stop the current of his Prosperity, thou shalt see how quickly he will stop the course of his Duty: A few Lashes from thy Hand will make him curse thee to thy Face; but O what shame and disappointment was it that envious Spirit? What a Vindication of Job's Integrity, when under the greateſt Tryals of his Faith and Patience, he ſtill held faſt his Integrity, and ſhews himſelf as great a Pattern of Patience under the Croſs, as he had been of Piety in the days of his greateſt Proſperity! Satan gets nothing by bringing forth the Saints upon the Stage, to be made a Spectacle to Angels and Men, as it is, 1 Cor. 4. 9.

6. Sixthly and Laſtly, The frequent Tryals of Grace, exhibit a full and living Teſtimony againſt the Atheiſm of the World. Theſe prove beyond all Words or Arguments that Religion is no fancy, but the greateſt reality in the World: Men would make Religion but a Fancy, and the Zeal of its Profeſſors, but the intemperate Heat of ſome crazy Brains, over-heated with a fond Notion.

They that never felt the real Influences of Religion upon their own Souls, will not believe that others do feel them. Serious Piety is become the ludicrous Subject with which the wanton Wits of this Atheiſtical World ſport themſelves. But behold the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God exhibiting to the World the undeniable Teſtimonies of the Truth of Religion, as often as the ſincere Profeſſors thereof are brought to the Teſt by Afflictions from the hand of God, or Perſecutions from the Hands of Men. Lo here is the Faith and Patience of the Saints: Here is their Courage, Meekneſs, and Self-denyal ſhining as Gold in the Fire; they have the real Proofs of it before their Eyes; inſtead of caſting them into Hell, and conſuming them by eternal Fire, he is pleaſed to caſt his own People into the Fire of Affliction, that they who ſcoff at them may be convinced at an eaſier and cheaper Rate. It is no new thing to ſee the Enemies of Religion brought over to embrace it, by the Conſtancy and Faithfulneſs of the Saints in their Tryals and Sufferings for it. God grant that the Atheiſm of this preſent Generation do not occaſion a more fiery Tryal to the People of God in it, than they have yet ſuffered.

CHAP. X.

Shewing that that Grace only is to be reckoned ſincere and real, which can endure thoſe Tryals which God appoints, or permits for the Diſcovery of it.

SECT. I.

BEFORE I offer you the Proofs and Evidences of this Truth, it will be neceſſary to prevent ſome Miſtakes that may be occaſioned by miſunderſtanding of it.

Caution 1. And in the firſt Place we are not to think aſſurance of our Sincerity impoſſible to be had in this Life, becauſe as long as we live here we are in a ſtate of Tryal, and how many Tryals ſoever have been made upon us already, yet ſtill there are more to come, and we know not what we ſhall prove in future Tryals, though God hath kept us upright in former Tryals: No, no, this is none of my meaning; nor doth ſuch a Concluſion neceſſarily follow this Aſſertion: For a Chriſtian that hath rightly cloſed with Chriſt at firſt, and been faithful in the Duties of Active and Paſſive Obedience hitherto, may be aſſured upon good Grounds of a Victory before he come to the Fire of his remaining Tryals. So was the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 35, &c. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall Tribulation, or Diſtreſs, or Perſecution, or Famine, or Nakedneſs, or Peril, or Sword? Nay, in all theſe we are more than Conquerors, through him that hath loved us: Here's an aſſured Triumph before the Combate. So Job 23. 10. But he knoweth the way that I take, when he hath tryed me I ſhall come forth as Gold: He appeals to God for the Sincerity of his Heart, ſo far as he had hitherto gone in the way of Religion, and thence concludes that whatever Tryals God ſhould bring him to for time to come he ſhould come forth as Gold, (i. e.) he ſhould not loſe one Grain by the Fire; And this confidence of a gracious Soul, is built not only upon experience gained in former Tryals, but upon Faith in the Power, Promiſes and Faithfulneſs of God which are engaged for him in the Covenant of Grace, to keep him in the greateſt Dangers that befal him in this World.

He believes the Power of God is able to make him ſtand, though he hath no Power nor Might in himſelf to overcome the leaſt Temptation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. You are kept, φρουρουμένους, (kept as with a Garriſon) by the Power of God through Faith unto Salvation: When Chriſt hath once taken poſſeſſion of the Soul by his Spirit, he fortifies it by his Power as a Garriſon, that uſing the Means, it be ſurprized or betrayed no more into the Enemy's hand, ſo as finally to be loſt.

He builds this confidence alſo upon the Promiſes of God, which are his Security in all future Dangers, and how are all the Pages of the Bible beſpangled with ſuch Promiſes, as the Firmament is with bright and glorious Stars! ſuch are theſe of the firſt Magnitude, 1 Cor. 1. 8, 9. Chriſt ſhall confirm you to the end, that ye may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; God is faithful by whom ye are called unto the Fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: And no leſs ſatisfying and ſweet is that, Jer. 32. 40. And I will make an everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good; but I will put my Fear in their Hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. And of the ſame nature is that alſo, John 10. 27, 28. My Sheep hear my Voice, and I know them and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal Life; and they ſhall never periſh; neither ſhall any Man pluck them out of my Hand.

If there be any Hypocrite in Sheeps-cloathing, he hath no Part or Lot in this Promiſe; but it ſecures the whole Flock of Chriſt, great and ſmall, againſt all Danger.

He alſo builds his Aſſurance upon the faithfulneſs of God, which ſtands engaged to make good every Line, Word and Syllable of his Promiſes to his People; ſo we find in 1 Cor. 10. 13. There hath no temptation taken you but ſuch as is common to Man; but God is faithful, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above what ye are able; but will with every temptation make a way to eſcape, that ye may be able to bear it: And 2 Theſ. 3. 3. but the Lord is faithful, who ſhall eſtabliſh you, and keep you from Evil.

Add to this the conſtant prevalent Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven for his People in all their Tryals, and then you will ſee a ſincere Chriſtian need not to deny himſelf the Joy and Comfort of his Aſſurance, upon the Account and Suppoſition of his future Tryals.

SECT. II.

Caution. 2. NOR do we here suppose in this Assertion, that inherent Grace in the Saints hath a sufficiency of Ability in it self to endure the greatest and severest Tryals that can befal it in this World. It is certain that it shall be carryed safely through all, but not in its own Strength and Ability.

That is a true Observation of the learned Gerson, Perfectiones sibi relictæ, sunt pondera ad ruinam: The most perfect Creature left to it self will fall into ruin. This was exemplifyed in the Angels that fell, and in Adam, though in a perfect state: Divine Preservation is the best prop which supports the best Creatures from ruin. Grace it self is but a Creature, and therefore a dependant Being: It is but a Stream, depends upon the supply of the Fountain; if the Fountain let not forth it self, what becomes of the Stream? That's a true and judicious Observation of the learned Dr. Ames, Perseverentia fidelium, vel immutabilis eorum conditio secundem integram ejus rationem, non provenit à principio intrinseco solo, nec a solo extrinseco; sed partim ab intrinseco, ex natura vitæ spiritualis e Christo fluentis, & partim ab extrinseco, ex custodia, protectione & directione Dei: Amesii Coronis, Art. 5. The perseverance of Believers, or the immutability of their condition, if we view the whole ground and reason of it, is not wholly from within, nor wholly from without it self; but partly from Christ into them, and partly from the nature of the spiritual Life which flows from the keeping, protection and direction of God. That Protection is always afforded to this Life of Grace, and this Life of Grace always needs that Protection. The best of Men are but Men at best, as one speaks: It was not Peter's Grace and Resolution that kept him, but Christ's Care of him and Intercession for him, Luke 22. 32. Be strong in the Lord, saith the Apostle, and in the power of his Might, Ephes. 6. 10 Without me, saith Christ, ye can do nothing, Joh. 15. 5.

Neither of these is that which I have before me to prove, but this is that which I aim at, that such seeming Grace as was never yet brought to the Tryal, nor will be able to bear the Tryal, when God shall bring it thereto, must not pass for currant (as too frequently it doth) among us; such Grace will neither comfort us now, nor save us hereafter. For,

SECT. III.

1. FIRST, Great numbers of Persons in the professing World are deceived and destroyed by trusting to seeming and untryed Grace: This was the miserable condition of those Laodicean Professors in the Text: They reckoned themselves rich, but were really poor, all is not Gold that glisters: Their Gold (as they accounted it) was never tryed in the Fire: If a Man's whole Estate lay in some precious Stone, suppose a rich Diamond, how is he concerned to have it thoroughly tryed, to see whether it will bear a smart Stroke with the Hammer, or fly like a Bristol Diamond under it? All that you are worth lyes in the Truth and Sincerity of your Grace: And till that be tryed you know not whether you be worth any thing or nothing.

Reader, There are two sad sights in the World, which cannot but deeply affect every upright Heart: One is to see so many thousands of rational and ingenious Men in the Romish Church, by an implicit Faith in their Guides, venturing their Souls upon their bare Word, never searching the Scriptures with their own Eyes, but wholly trusting to the Infallibility of a Pope, or a Council, when in the mean time they would fear to take their Word for a Sum of Money, without some farther Security. It is amazing to behold the soul-destroying, easy Credulity of these Men; but this is a stroke of Madness and spiritual Infatuation judicially inflicted upon them, that the Judgment which is written might be fulfilled in them, God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a Lye, 2 Thes. 2. 11.

And yet more amazing is that stroke of God upon multitudes of vain and formal Professors even in the Reformed Protestant Churches, where no Man is restrained from searching the Scriptures; nay, where Men so frequently and earnestly pressed from Sabbath to Sabbath, to examine themselves, and prove their own Work, that yet so many are content to leave all at hazard, and without any more ado, or farther search in the matter, credit the Report of their own deceitful Hearts, and take all for granted, without due Tryal or Examination of the matter.

Surely, no one dayly sends down more Souls to Hell out of the professing World, than this doth. The five foolish Virgins (i. e. the unprincipled Professors in the Reformed Churches) perished this way. They took it for granted all was well, because they had Lamps of Profession as well as others, and saw not the Cheat till the Cry was heard at Midnight, and their unfurnished Lamps went out, Mat. 25.

2. Secondly, The Promises of Salvation are made over to tryed Grace, and such only as will endure the Tryal: So James 1. 12. Blessed is the Man that endureth temptation; for when he is tryed he shall receive the Crown of Life which God hath promised to them that love him: We must be first tryed and then crowned. If a Man strive for Masteries yet is he not Crowned, except he strive lawfully, 2 Tim. 2. 5. He manifestly alludes to the Roman Games to which there were Judges appointed to see that no foul Play were offered contrary to the Law for Wrestling, and where it was found the Crown was denyed them. Not to him that comes forth in the Morning with Resolution and Gallantry, but to him that holds out till the Even of his Life, is the Promise made, Mat. 10. He that endureth to the end shall be saved: So 2. 7. To them who by patient continuance in doing seek for Glory, and Honour, and Immortal eternal Life: And once more, Heb. 3. 15. We are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning our confidence steadfast unto the end. So that you should endure some few slighter Troubles, and faint at last, give out when a closer Tryal befalls you, all your Labours and Sufferings are in vain: Sincerity and final Perseverance are the condition of all special Promises.

3. Thirdly, Every Man's Graces and Duties must be tryed and weighed by God in the great Day; and if they cannot endure these lesser Tryals which God exposes them now, how will they endure that severe and exact Tryal to which he will bring them then? No Man can search his own Heart with that exactness in this World, as God will search it in the World to come.

I may say in this case to you as the Lord to Jeremiah, Chap. 12. 5. If thou haſt run with the Footmen, and they have wearyed thee, then how canſt thou contend with Horſes; and if in the Land of Peace wherein thou truſteſt, they have wearyed thee, then how wilt thou do in the ſwelling of Jordan? This was ſpoken to encourage the Prophet to conſtancy in his Work; and as if the Lord had ſaid, O Jeremy, do the ſtrivings of the Men of Ananoth thine own Town, diſhearten thee? Pluck up thy Spirits and faint not; there are harder Tryals than theſe that thou muſt undergo at Jeruſalem; theſe are no more to what is coming, than the running with Footmen, is to contending with Horſes, or the paſſing a ſmall Rivulet, to the ſwellings of Jordan.

To allude to this, If our Graces and Duties cannot bear theſe lighter Tryals, if a little lift of Proſperity, or lighter ſtroke of Adverſity diſcover ſo much Falſeneſs, Rottenneſs, Pride and Selfiſhneſs in the Heart; if we cannot reſiſt the motions of Corruption, but yield our ſelves to obey Sin in the Luſts of it; if we can neither keep our Hearts with God in Duties, nor mourn for our wanderings from him; if a few Scoffs from wicked Tongues, or Tryals of Perſecution from the Hands of Men will cauſe us to faint in the way, and turn back from following the Lord, what ſhall we do when he comes whoſe Fan is in his Hand, and who will thoroughly purge his Floor, Mat. 3. 12. who will try every Man's Work as by Fire, 1 Cor. 3. 13. Search the Secrets of all Hearts, Romans 2. 16. Weigh every Man to his Ounces and Drachms; ſurely we can take little comfort in that which is ſo unable to bear the ſevere Tryals of that day, that it cannot ſtand before the lighter Tryals of this day.

4. Fourthly, True Grace is willing to be tryed, and nothing is more deſirable to an upright Soul, than to know his own condition. If therefore we ſhun the Tryal, and are loth to ſearch our ſelves, or be ſearched by the Lord, our condition is ſuſpicious, and we can take little comfort in it. It was David's earneſt Deſire, Pſal. 139. 23. That God would thoroughly ſearch his Heart and Reins, and ſee if there were any way of Wickedneſs in him: Falſe Grace is ſhy of God's Eye, it cares not to be examined; but this is the delight of ſincere ones: Every one that doth Evil hateth the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved; but he that doth Truth cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God, Joh. 3. 20, 21.

The reaſon is plain why Hypocriſy cannot endure to come to the Touchſtone and Teſt, for Hypocrites having a ſecret conſciouſneſs of their own guilt and Unſoundneſs, know that by this means their vain confidence would quickly be confuted, and all their Reputation for Religion blaſted; but if Men dare not ſtand before the Word, as it is now opened and applyed by the Miniſters, how will they ſtand when it ſhall be opened and applyed in another manner by Jeſus Chriſt?

O Profeſſor, if thy condition be good, thy Heart right, thou wilt deſire to know the very worſt of thy ſelf, and when thou haſt made the deepeſt ſearch thou canſt, thou wilt ſtill fear thou haſt not been ſevere enough, and impartial enough to thy ſelf; nothing will give thee more content than when thou feeleſt the Word dividing thy Soul and Spirit, thy Joynts and Marrow; nothing ſo much comforts thee under, or after an Affliction, as the diſcovery it hath made of thy Heart, thou wilt ſeem to feel with what Affections thoſe Words came from the Prophet's Lips, Jer. 12. 2. But thou, O Lord, knoweſt me, thou haſt ſeen me, and tryed my Heart towards thee. O what a refreſhing Sweetneſs will ſtream through thy Heart, and all the Powers of thy Soul, when thou canſt make the like Appeal to God with like Sincerity! And certainly without ſuch a diſpoſition of Spirit towards the Tryal of our Graces, we can have little Evidence of the Truth of them.

CHAP. XI.

Containing divers practical inſtructive Inferences from this Doctrine, with a ſerious Exhortation to Self-Tryal, and thorough Examination.

SECT. I.

Infer. I. ARE there ſuch variety of Tryals appointed to examine the Sincerity of Men's Graces, how great a Vanity then is Hypocriſy, and to how little purpoſe do Men endeavour to conceal and hide it! We ſay, Murder will out. When Rebecca had laid the Plot to diſguiſe her Son Jacob, and by perſonating his Brother to get the Bleſſing, Jacob thus objects againſt it, My Father peradventure will feel me, and I ſhall ſeem to him as a Deceiver, and I ſhall bring a Curſe upon me, and not a Bleſſing, Gen. 27. 12. as if he ſhould ſay, But what if my Father detect the Cheat, how then ſhall I look him in the Face? How ſhall I eſcape a Curſe? After the ſame manner every upright Soul ſcares it ſelf from the way of Hypocriſy. If I diſſemble, and pretend to be what I am not, my Father will find me out, Ah there is no darkneſs or ſhadow of Death that can conceal the Hypocrite, but out it will come at laſt, let him uſe all the Art he can to hide it. Oftentimes God diſcovers him by the Tryals he appoints in this World, and Men in that day ſhall return and diſcern betwixt the Righteous and the Wicked, betweeen him that ſerveth God, and him that ſerveth him not, Mal. 3. 18. but if he make an hard ſhift to get by a private way to Hell, carrying the comfort with him to the laſt ſtep, that no body knows or thinks he is gone thither; yet there will be a day when God will ſtrip him naked before the great Aſſembly of Angels and Men, and all ſhall point at him and ſay, Lo, this is the Man that made not God his Hope.

This is he that wore a Garment of Profeſſion to deceive, but God hath now ſtript him out of it, and all Men ſee what he is: For, There is nothing covered that ſhall not be revealed, and hid that ſhall not be known, Mat. 10. 26. and the Apoſtle aſſures us, 1 Tim. 5. 24, 25. That they that are otherwiſe cannot be hid: If Men's Works be not good it's impoſſible they ſhould be hid long: A gilded piece of Braſs may paſs from hand to hand a little while, but the Touchſtone will diſcover the baſe Metal; if that do not the Fire will.

O Sinners, away with your Hypocriſy, be honeſt, ſincere, plain, and hearty in Religion; if not, Confuſion of Face ſhall be your recompence from the Lord, that is what you ſhall get by it.

Infer. 2. Secondly, Are there ſuch Tryals appointed

Pointed and permitted by the Lord for the discovery of his Peoples ſincerity in this World, then let none of God's People expect a quiet Station in this World: Certainly you ſhall meet with no reſt here, you muſt out of one Fire into another, and it is a merciful Condeſcenſion of the Lord to poor Creatures, thus to concern himſelf for their ſafety and benefit: What is Man that thou ſhouldeſt magnify him? And that thou ſhouldeſt ſet thine heart upon him? And that thou ſhouldeſt viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? Job 7. 17, 18.

O 'tis a great deal of honour put upon a poor worm, when God will every moment try him and viſit him; it argues the great eſteem the Goldſmith hath of his Gold, when he will ſit by the Furnace himſelf, and order the Fire with his own hand: When he pries ſo often, and ſo curiouſly into the fining pot, to ſee that none of his precious Metal, upon which he ſets his Heart, be loſt.

Think it not then a debaſing to you to be ſo often expoſed to Tryals: If God did not value you highly, he would not try you ſo frequently: What would become of you, if your Condition here ſhould be more ſettled and quiet than now it is? I believe you find droſs enough in your Hearts after all the Fires into which God hath caſt you: Surely there is filth enough in the beſt of God's People to take all this: It may be a great deal more trouble than they have yet met with: We fancy it a brave Life to live at eaſe, and if we meet with longer reſpits and intervals of tryal than uſual, we are apt to ſay, We ſhall never be moved, as David did, Pſal. 30. 6. or we ſhall dye in our neſt as it is, 29. 18. our hard and difficult days are over; but woe to us if God ſhould give us the deſire of our Hearts in this: See what the Temper of thoſe Men's Spirits is, that meet with no changes, Pſal. 55. 19. Becauſe they have no changes, therefore they fear not God: O it's better to be preſerved ſweet in brine, than to rot in Honey.

Infer. 3. Thirdly, Let none boaſt in a natural confidence of their own ſtrength and ſtability; you are yet in a State of Tryal: Hitherto God hath kept you upright in all your Tryals, bleſs God but boaſt not; you are but Feathers in the Wind of Temptation, if God leave you to your ſelves. Peter told Chriſt (and doubtleſs he ſpake no more than he honeſtly meant) Though all men forſake thee yet will not I: And you know what he did when the Hour of his Tryal came: Matth. 26. 35. Angels left to themſelves have fallen: It's better be an humble Worm, than a proud Angel.

Ah how many Pendletons will this profeſſing age ſhew, if once God bring us to the fiery Tryal? let him that thinks he ſtands take heed leſt he fall: You have not yet reſiſted unto Blood ſtriving againſt Sin. None ſtand upon firmer ground, than thoſe that ſee nothing in themſelves to ſtand upon; he that leans upon his own arm, uſually benumbs it, and makes it uſeleſs.

Infer. 4. Fourthly, Doth God kindle ſo many Fires in Sion, and ſet his Furnaces in Jeruſalem, to diſcover and ſeparate the droſs from the Gold, how contrary are thoſe Men to God that allow, yea and prize the droſs of Hypocryſy which God hates and ſtick not to make the holy God a patroniſer and countenancer of it in the Hearts and Lives of Men.

It is amazing to read what Popiſh pens have imprudently written about this Matter, Sylveſter puts the Queſtion, whether it be a Sin to make a falſe ſhew of Sanctity; and anſwers it thus: If it be for the honour of God, and profit of others, it is no ſin: Nay, they have a reverence for Hypocriſy as an holy Art. Vincentius ſpends a whole Chapter in Commendation of the Hypocriſy of St. Dominick, and entitles it, de ſancta ejus Hypocriſi (i. e.) of the holy Hypocryſy of that Saint; reckoning it among his commendations, that he had the Art of diſſembling. And yet, one peg higher, Religious perſon (ſaith another) that feigns himſelf to have more Holineſs than he hath, that others may be edifyed, ſins not but rather merits.

Roſella in v. Hypocriſis. n. 1.

A ſum. adv. ſimulatio. n. 4.

Bluſh O Heavens; that ever ſuch Factors for Hell ſhould open and vend ſuch ware as this in the publick Market, and invite the World to Hypocryſy, as that which makes for the Glory of God, the Edification of Men, and a work meritorious in the Hypocrite himſelf. This is the Doctrine of Devils indeed.

Infer. 5. Fifthly, If it be ſo, that all Grace muſt come to the Teſt, and be tryed as Gold in the Fire, even in this World: How are all Men concerned to lay a ſolid Foundation at firſt, and thoroughly deliberate the Terms upon which they cloſe with Chriſt, and engage in the Profeſſion of his Name! Which of you, ſaith Chriſt, intending to build a Tower, ſitteth not down firſt, and counteth the Coſt? Luke 14. 28. If ſome Men had ſat down at firſt, and pondered the conditions and terms of Chriſt, they had not ſat down now diſcouraged and tyred in the way. The Apoſtle Paul went to work at another rate; he accounted all but Dung and Droſs for Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8. and was of the ſame mind when the actual Tryal came; for then he tells us, he counted not his Life dear unto him, Acts 20. 24. And the Apoſtle Peter admoniſhes Believers not to think it ſtrange concerning the fiery Tryal which was to try them, 1 Pet. 4. 21. q. d. Let none of theſe things be ſurprizals to you, you were told before-hand what you muſt truſt to; every Chriſtian muſt be a Martyr, at leaſt in the diſpoſition and reſolution of his Heart.

O that Men would ballance the Advantages and Diſadvantages of Religion, and thoroughly ponder the matter in their deepeſt Thoughts: To the Teſt you muſt come; the Rain will fall, and the Storm beat upon your Buildings, look carefully therefore to the Foundations.

Infer. 6. Sixthly and Laſtly, Learn from this Point the unavoidableneſs of Scandals and Offences in the way of Religion; for if there be a neceſſity of Tryal, there is alſo a neceſſity of Scandal. It muſt needs be that Offences come, Luke 17. 1. Why muſt it needs be? The reaſon is evident, all muſt come to the Tryal, and all are not able to bear it. Our Lord tells us, Matth. 24. 8, 9, 10. of a day of great ſtraits and perplexity coming: And then (ſaith he) ſhall many be offended. The Day of Tryal is the day of Scandal: By theſe offences ſome are put a ſearching themſelves, and ſome fall a cenſuring all others; but the holy God brings about his end both ways, in them that are ſaved and in them that periſh.

SECT. II.

WELL then, if it be ſo that all muſt into the Furnace, let every Man try his own work; examine your ſelves, Profeſſors, ſearch your Hearts, commune with your Reins; nothing more concerns you in all the World than this doth. O that you would be more in your Cloſets, and oftner upon your Knees: O that you would Bible, then into your Hearts; and then to God, saying with David, Search me, O God, and know my Heart; prove me, and try my Reins, and see if there be any way of Iniquity in me: Never did Religion thrive in the World since Men's Heads have been so over-heated with Notions and Controversies, and their Hearts so sensibly cooled in their Closet-work. I have elsewhere more largely pressed this Duty upon the Professors of this Generation, and thither shall refer the Reader for the present to see the necessity and importance of this Work.

See my Saint Indeed, p. 191, 192, 193, &c.

Here I shall only urge the Duty of Self-Tryal by some pressing Motives, and awakening Considerations.

Motive 1. And the first shall be, the exceeding difficulty of this Work: Difficulty in some Cases may be a discouragement, but where the matter is of absolute Necessity, as it is here, nothing provokes more to diligence; Strive, saith our Lord, to enter in at the Strait Gate, for many will seek to enter in and shall not be able, Luke 13. 24. A double Difficulty is found attending this Work of Self-Tryal. Difficulty in bringing the Heart to it, and Difficulty in the right and successful management of it: Who finds it not hard to perswade his Heart to such Work as this? Nature declines it, Flesh and Blood relish it not: It's one of the great Severities in Religion: 'Tis no easy thing to bring a Man and his own Heart together. As it is in this case as in the study of Geography, we are more inquisitive to know, and delighted when we discover the Rarities of Foreign Countries, and strange things in the remote Parts of the World, than those of our own native Countrey. I fear there be many Professors of Religion that can spend Day after Day in hearing, and love to be disputing fruitless Controversies, that never spent one day in searching what influence all those Sermons they have heard, have had upon their Hearts, or in rightly stating and determining that great Controversy, in whose right and possession their Souls are, and which way they shall go as soon as Death hath divided them from those Mortal Bodies; yea, I doubt many sinful Hours are spent in prying into, reporting and censuring the Doings of others, and not one Hour faithfully employed in judging their own Hearts before the Lord: O Men had rather be about any other Work than this: There's no Pleasure in it to the Flesh.

And yet how difficult soever it be to bring our Hearts to the Work, its certainly much more difficult to manage it successfully, and bring the great question of our Sincerity to a clear Result and Issue. O how many upright Hearts have sate down to this Work many a Year, and lifted up many a Cry to Heaven, and shed many a secret Assembled Tear about it; and yet still are in the dark, and their Minds greatly perplexed, and filled with Fear about it: What would they not do? What would they not suffer? What pleasant Employment would they not gladly part with to come at the Desire of their Souls, the full Assurance of their Sincerity! It was the Saying of a good Woman, I have born, said she, seven Children, and they have cost me as dear as ever Children did cost a Mother, yet I would be content to endure all that Sorrow over again, to be assured of the love of God to my Soul.

Motive 2. Secondly, And as the Work is full of difficulty, so the discovery of your Sincerity will be full of sweetness and Joy unspeakable: It will never repent you that you have prayed and mourned, that you have trembled and feared, that you have searched and tryed: Nay, it will never repent you that God hath tryed you by thousands of sharp Afflictions and deep Sufferings; if after all, your Sincerity may be fully cleared up to the satisfaction of your Souls; for in the same day your Sincerity shall be cleared, your Title to Christ will be made as clear to your Souls as your Sincerity is; you may then go to the Promises boldly, and take your own Christ into the Arms of your Faith, and say, My Beloved is mine, and I am his: Yea, you may be confident it shall be well with you in the Judgment of the great Day, for God will not cast away the upright Man, Job 8. 20. If the Word clear you now, it cannot condemn you then.

O what an ease is it to the Soul when the fears and doubts that hanged about it are gone! When a Man sees what he is, and what he hath in Christ and the Promises; and what he hath to do, even to spend the time betwixt this and Heaven in admiring the Grace of God that hath delivered him from the ruining Mistakes and Miscarriages by which so great a part of the professing World perish to all Eternity.

Motive 3. Thirdly, The deep Concernment of your Souls in the matter to be tryed, should awaken you to the utmost diligence about it. The Tryals of Men for their Life, at human Bars, is but a Trifle to this: 'Tis your eternal Happiness that stands or falls with your Sincerity.

It's said in the Tryal of Opinions, that if a Man superstruct Hay or Stubble upon the Foundation, he shall suffer Loss, yet he himself may be saved, 1 Cor. 3. 12. But if Hypocrisy be in the Foundation, there is no such Relief, there is no possibility of Salvation in that case.

Ah Reader, thou must be cast for ever according to the Integrity or Hypocrisy of thy Heart with God. Summon in then all the Powers of thy Soul, bring thy Thoughts as close as it is possible to bring them to this matter: If there be any Subject of Consideration able to drink up the Spirits of Man, here it is: Never was time put to an higher Improvement, never were Thoughts spent upon a more important Business than this is: Happy is the Man that rescues the Years, Months, Days, yea, the very Moments of his Life from other Employments to consecrate them unto this solemn, awful, and most important Business.

Motive 4. Fourthly, How evidential will it be of your Sincerity, when you are willing to come to the Tryal of your own Hearts!

Suppose your Doubts and Fears should in some degree remain with you, yet in this you may take some comfort, that if Hypocrisy be in your Heart, it is not there by consent; You are not loth to rise and come to the Tryal, because, like Rachel, you sit upon your Idols: Certainly it is a good sign thy Heart is right, when it is filled with so much fear lest it should be false: You know all the Disciples said, Master is it I? Before Judas who was the Traytor spoke a word. Last of all (saith the Text) Judas said, Is it I? Our willingness to be tryed, is a good sign that the desire of our Soul is to be right with God.

Motive 5. Fifthly, Conclude it to be your great Advantage to be thoroughly tryed, whatever you be found to be in the Tryal: If you be found sincere, you are richly rewarded for all your pains and labour: Never did that Man repent of digging and toyling, that after all hit upon the rich Vein that he digged for: What is a Vein of Gold to a Vein af Sincerity!

If upon search you find the contrary, a false Hypocrital unsound Heart, yet in that very sad discovery you meet with the greatest Advantage that ever you had in your Lives for Salvation. This discovery is your great Advantage: For now your vain Confidence being over-turned, and your ungrounded Hopes destroyed; you lye open to the Stroke of a deep and effectual Conviction of your Sin and Misery, which is the introductive Mercy to all other Mercies to your Souls; and surely till you come to that, to give up your false Hopes, and quit your vain Pretensions, there is no hope of you, Christ told the Pharisees, Mat. 21. 31. Publicans and Harlots enter into the Kingdom of Heaven before you: Publicans were the worst sort of Men, and Harlots the worst sort of Women, and yet they stood in a fairer way for Heaven than the Hypocrital Pharisees, because Conviction had easier access to their Consciences: They had not those Defences and Pleas of Duty and Strictness to ward off the Word, that the self-couzening Pharisees had.

I may say of your vain and groundless Hopes, as Christ in another Sense said to the Officers that came to seize him in the Garden, If you seek me let these go their way. So 'tis here, if you expect Christ, and Salvation by him, let your vain Confidences go their way; away with your Masques and Vizards, if ever you expect to see Christ. O 'tis your happiness to have all these things stript off, and your Nakedness and Poverty discovered, that you may be rich, as the Text speaks.

Motive 6. Sixthly, Consider how near the Day of Death and Judgment approach you. Oh these are searching Days wherein you cannot be hid: Will your Consciences, think you, be put off in a Dying Day as easily as they are now? No, no, you know they will not.

I have heard of a good Man that consumed not only the greatest part of the Day, but a very considerable part of the Night also in Prayer, to the great weakening of his Body; and being asked by a Relation why he did so, and prayed to favour himself, he returned this Answer, O I must dye, I must dye; plainly intimating, that so great is the concernment of dying in a clear assured condition, that it's richly worth the Expence of all our Time and Strength to secure it.

You know also that after Death the Judgment, Heb. 9. 27. you are hastening to the Judgment of the great and terrible God. Death will put you into his Ballance to be weighed exactly; and what gives the Soul a louder Call to search it self with all diligence, whilst it stands at the Door of Eternity, and its turn is not yet come to go before that awful Tribunal? O that these Considerations might have place upon our Hearts!

CHAP. XII.

Containing divers Helps for the clearing of Sincerity, and discovery of Hypocrisy.

SECT. I.

YOU see of what importance the Duty of self-examination is, how many things put a Necessity and a Solemnity upon that Work. Now in the close of all, I would offer you some Helps for the due Management thereof, that is as far as I can carry it; the Lord perswade your Hearts to the diligent and faithful Application and Use of them. The general Rules to clear Sincerity are these that follow.

Rule 1.

We may not presently conclude we are in the state of Hypocrisy, because we find some Workings of it, and Tendencies to it in our Spirits: The best Gold hath some Dross and Alloy in it. Hypocrisy is a Weed naturally springing in all Ground, the best Heart is not perfectly clear or free of it: It may be we are stumbled, when we feel some workings or grudgings of this Disease in our selves, and looking into such Scriptures as these, John 1. 47. Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no Guile; and Psal. 32. 1. Blessed is the Man unto whom the Lord imputeth not Iniquity, and in whose Spirit there is no Guile.

This I say may stumble some upright Soul, not understanding in what an allayed and qualifyed sense those Scriptures are to be understood: For by a Spirit without guile, is not understood a Person absolutely free from all deceitfulness, and falseness of Heart; this was the sole Prerogative of the Lord Jesus, who was separated from Sinners, in whose Mouth was no Guile found: In whom the Prince of this World in all his Tryals and Attempts upon him found nothing: But we must understand it of reigning and allowed Hypocrisy; there is no such Guile in any of the Saints: Distinguish the Presence from the Predominance of Hypocrisy, and the Doubt is resolved.

Rule 2.

Every true ground of Humiliation for Sin, is not sufficient ground for doubting and questioning our State and Condition.

There be many more things to humble us upon the account of our Infirmity, than there are to stumble us upon the account of our Integrity: It is the Sin and Affliction of some good Souls to call their condition in question, upon every slip and failing in the course of their Obedience. This is the way to debar our selves from all the Peace and Comfort of the Christian Life: We find that Joseph was once minded to put away Mary his Espoused Wife, not knowing that the holy thing which was conceived in her was by the Holy Ghost. It is the Sin of Hypocrites to take Brass for Gold, and the folly of Saints to call their Gold Brass: Be as severe to your selves as you will, always provided you be just: There is that maketh himself rich, and yet hath nothing; and there is that maketh himself poor, and yet hath great riches, Prov. 13. 7. Airam called the Cities Solomon gave him Cabul, Dirty, for they pleased him not, 1 Kings 9. 13. 'Tis but an ill Requital, an ungrateful Return to God for the best of Mercies, to undervalue them in our Hearts, and be ready upon all occasions to put them away as worth nothing.

Rule 3.

A stronger Propension in our Nature, and more frequent Incidence in our Practice to one sin than another, doth not presently infer our Hypocrisy, and the unsoundness of our Hearts in Religion. 'Tis true every Hypocrite hath some way of Wicked-

Some peccatum in deliciis, Iniquity that he delights in, and rolls as a ſweet Morſel under his Tongue; ſome Luſt that he is not willing to part with, nor can endure that the Knife of Mortification ſhould touch it, and this undoubtedly argues the inſincerity and rottenneſs of his Heart: And it is true alſo, that the Nature and Conſtitution of the moſt ſanctifyed Man inclines him rather to one Sin than to another, though he allow himſelf in none; yea, though he ſet himſelf more watchfully againſt that Sin than another, yet he may ſtill have more Trouble and Vexation, more Temptation and Deſilement from it than any other.

As every Man hath his proper Gift, one after this manner and another after that, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 7. 7. So every Man hath his proper Sin alſo, one after this manner, and another after that: For it is with original Sin, as it is with the Juice or Sap of the Earth, which though it be the common matter of all kinds of Fruits, yet it is ſpecificated according to the different ſorts of Plants and Seeds it nouriſhes: In one it becomes an Apple, in another a Cherry, &c. Juſt ſo it is in Original Corruption, which is turned into this or that Temptation or Sin, according to this or that Conſtitution or Employment it finds us in; One it's Paſſion, in another Luſt, in a third Covetouſneſs, in a fourth Levity, and ſo on. Now I ſay the frequent aſſaults of this Sin, provided we indulge it not, but by ſetting double Guards, labour to keep our ſelves from our own Iniquity as David did, Pſal. 18. 23. will not infer the Hypocriſy of our Hearts.

Rule. 4.

A greater backwardneſs and indiſpoſedneſs to one Duty rather than another, doth not conclude the Heart to be unſound and falſe with God, provided we do not inwardly diſlike and diſapprove any duty of Religion, or except againſt it in our Agreement with Chriſt, but that it riſeth meerly from the preſent Weakneſs and Diſtemper we labour under.

There be ſome Duties in Religion, as Sufferings for Chriſt, bearing ſharp Reproofs for Sin, &c. that even an upright Heart, under a preſent Diſtemper may find a great deal of backwardneſs and lothneſs to; yet ſtill he conſents to the Law that it is good, is troubled that he cannot comply more chearfully with his Duty, and deſires to ſtand compleat in all the Will of God: Perfection is his Aim, and Imperfections are his Sorrows. Some Chriſtians have much ado to bring their Hearts to fixed ſolemn Mediation, their Hearts fly off from it, but this is their Burden, that it ſhould be ſo with them. Truth is, it is a very dangerous ſign of Hypocriſy, when a Man's Zeal runs out in one Channel of Obedience only, and he hath not a reſpect to all God's Commandments, as Phyſicians obſerve, the Sweating of one part of the Body when all the reſt is cold, is Symptomatical, and argues an ill habit: But whilſt the Soul heartily approves all the Will of God, and ſincerely deſires to come up to it, and mourns for its backwardneſs and deadneſs to this or that Duty, and this is not fixed, but occaſional, under ſome preſent Indiſpoſition, out of which the Soul riſeth by the ſame degrees as Sanctification riſeth in him, and the Lord comes in with renewed ſtrength upon him; this, I ſay, may conſiſt, and is very ordinarily found to be the Caſe of upright-hearted ones.

Rule 5.

The glances of the Eye at ſelf-ends in Duties whilſt ſelf is not the Weight that moves the Wheels, the Principal End and Deſign we drive at, and whilſt thoſe glances are corrected and mourned for; do not conclude the Heart to be unſound and hypocritical in Religion: For even among the moſt deeply ſanctifyed, few can keep their Eye ſo ſteady and fixed with pure and unmixed Reſpects to the Glory of God, but that there will be (Alas too frequently) ſome by-ends inſinuating and creeping into the Heart.

Theſe, like the Fowls, ſeize upon the Sacrifice, let the Soul take what pains it can to fray them away. It's well that our High-Prieſt bears the Iniquities of our holy things for us: Peter had too much regard to the pleaſing of men, and did not walk with that upright Foot towards the Gentile Chriſtians and the Believing Jews, in the matter of Liberty as became him, Gal. 2. 13, 14. For which, as Paul ſaith, he ought to be blamed, and did blame him; but yet ſuch a failing as that in the end of his Duty did not condemn him. In publick Performances there may be too much Vanity, in works of Charity too much Oſtentation, theſe are all workings of Hypocriſy in us, and matters of Humiliation to us; but whilſt they are diſallowed, corrected and mourned over, are conſiſtent with Integrity.

Rule. 6.

The Doubts and Fears that hang upon and perplex our Spirits about the Hypocriſy of our Hearts, do not conclude that therefore we are what we fear our ſelves to be. God will not condemn every one for an Hypocrite that ſuſpects, yea, or charges himſelf with Hypocriſy. Holy David thought his Heart was not right with God, after that great ſlip of his in the matter of Uriah, and therefore begs of God to renew a right Spirit in him, Pſal. 51. 10, 11, 12. His Integrity was indeed wounded, and he thought deſtroyed by that fall.

Holy Maſter Bradford ſo vehemently doubted the Sincerity of his Heart, that he ſubſcribed ſome of his Letters (as Maſter Fox tells us) John Bradford the Hypocrite; a very painted Sepulchre. And yet in ſo ſaying he utterly misjudged the State and Temper of his own Soul.

SECT. II.

WELL then, let not the Upright be unjuſt to themſelves in cenſuring their own Hearts: They are bad enough, but let us not make them worſe than they are, but thankfully own and acknowledge the leaſt degrees of Grace and Integrity in them: And poſſibly our Uprightneſs might be ſooner diſcovered to us, if in a due compoſure of Spirit, we would ſit down and attend the true Anſwers of our own Hearts to ſuch queſtions as theſe are.

Queſtions 1.

Do I make the approbation of God or the applauſe of Men the very end and main Deſign of my Religious Performances, according to 1 Theſ. 2. 4. Col. 3. 23. Will the Acceptation of my Duties with Men ſatisfy me, whether God accept my Duties and Perſon or not?

Queſt. 2.

Quest. 2.

Is it the Reproach and Shame that attends Sin at present, and the Danger and Misery that will follow it hereafter, that restrains me from the Commission of it? Or is it the Fear of God in my Soul, and the hatred I bear to Sin as it is Sin? according to Psal. 19. 12. and Psal. 119. 113.

Quest. 3.

Can I truly and heartily rejoyce to see God's Work carried on in the World, and his Glory promoted by other Hands, though I have no share in the Credit and Honour of it, as Paul did? Philip 1. 18.

Quest. 4.

Is there no duty in Religion so full of difficulty and self-denyal, but I desire to comply with it? And is all the holy and good Will of God acceptable to my Soul, though I cannot rise up with like readiness to the Performance of all Duties; according to that Pattern, Psal. 119. 6.

Quest. 5.

Am I sincerely resolved to follow Christ and Holiness at all Seasons, however the Aspects of the Times may be upon Religion? Or do I bear myself so warily and covertly as to shun all hazards for Religion; having a secret Reserve in my Heart to launch out no farther than I may return with safety; contrary to the Practice and Resolution of upright Souls? Psal. 116. 3. Psal. 44. 18, 19. Rev. 22. 11.

Quest. 6.

Do I make no Conscience of committing secret Sins, or neglecting secret Duties? Or am I conscientious both in the one and other, according to the Rules and Patterns of Integrity? Mat. 6. 5, 6. Psal. 19. 12.

A few such Questions solemnly propounded to our own Hearts, in a calm and serious Hour, would sound them, and discover much of their Sincerity towards the Lord.

SECT. III.

AND as upright Hearts are too apt to apply to themselves the Threats and Miseries of Hypocrites, so Hypocrites on the contrary, are as apt to catch hold of the Promises and Privileges pertaining to Believers.

To detect therefore the Soul-damning Mistakes of such deceived Souls, O that these following Rules might be studyed, and faithfully applyed to their Conviction and Recovery!

Rule 1.

It is not enough to clear a Man from Hypocrisy, that he knows not himself to be an Hypocrite. All Hypocrites are not designing Hypocrites; they deceive themselves as well as others: Many will say to me in that day, Lord, have we not Prophesied in thy Name? &c. Mat. 7. 22. Hell will be a meer surprizal to Multitudes of Professors: A Man may live and dye in a blind ungrounded Confidence of his safe Condition, and not fear his Ruin, till he begin to feel it.

Rule 2.

Zeal and Forwardness in the Cause of God, and for the Reformation of his Worship, will not clear a Man from the danger of Hypocrisy. Jehu was a zealous Reformer, and yet but a painted Sepulchre. In the Year 1549. Reformation grew so much in reputation even among the Nobles and Gentry of Germany, that many of them caused these five Letters, V. D. M. I. Æ. being the initial Letters of these Words, Verbum Domini Manet In Æternum: (i. e.) The Word of the Lord abideth for ever, to be wrought or embroidered, or set in Plates, some upon their Cloaks, and others upon the Sleeves of their Garments; to shew to all the World, (saith my Author) that forsaking all Popish Traditions they would now cleave to the pure Doctrine and Discipline of the Eternal Word. John Wolfe, lect. memor. To 2. ad An 1549.

And no doubt they would have been as good as their Word, if what was embroidered on their Cloaks, had been engraven on their Hearts, but Come see my Zeal, marrs all.

Rule 3.

It is no sufficient Evidence of a Man's own Integrity, that he hates Hypocrisy in another: For as one Proud Man may hate another, and he that's Covetous himself, will be apt to censure another for being so; (Lusts may be contrary to one another, as well as all of them contrary to Grace) so may an Hypocrite loath that in another, which yet he alloweth in himself: Nay, 'tis the Policy of some to declaim against the Hypocrisy of others thereby to hide their own. Hypocrites are none of the most modest Censurers of others, Psal. 35. 16. A Salt Jest seasoned their Meat.

Rule 4.

The meer Performance of private Duties, will not cleat a Man from Hypocrisy; the influence of Education, or support of Reputation, or the impulse of a convinced Conscience may induce a Man to it; and yet all this while his Heart may not be carried thither with hungry and thirsty Desires after God: It is not the matter of any Duty that distinguishes the sound and unsound Professor, but the Motives, Designs and Ends of the Soul in them.

Rule 5.

The Vogue and Opinions you have got among Christians, of your Sincerity, will not be sufficient to clear you from the danger of Hypocrisy. Christ tells the Angel of Sardis, Rev. 3. 1. Thou hast a Name that thou livest, and art dead. The fall of Hymenæus and Philetus, could never have shaken the Faith of Saints as it did, had they not had great credit in the Church, and been Men of renown for Piety among them.

Rule 6.

Your Respects and love to them that are the sincere and upright Servants of God, will not clear from the danger of being Hypocrites your selves: For the bare loving of a Christian is not Characteristical and evidential of a Man's own Christianity, except he love him, qua talis, as he is a Christian, or as he belongs to Christ: And so his sincerity becomes the Attractive of thy Affection. There be a Thousand By-Considerations and Respects that may kindle a Man's love to the Saints, besides their Integrity.

SECT. IV.

WELL then, if thou wouldst indeed see the unsoundness of thy own Heart, propound such Heart-sounding Questions as these to thy self.

Quest. 1.

Do I engage my Heart to approach unto God in the course of my Duties? Or do I go in the round of Duties, taking no heed to my Heart in them? If so, compare this Symptom of thy Hypocrisy with that in 2 Kings 10. 3. and that Ezek. 33. 31, 32.

Quest. 2.

Am I not swayed and moved by Self-Interest and Carnal Respects in the ways of Religion, the Accommodation of some worldly Interest, or getting a Name and Reputation of Godliness? If so, how apparently do the same Symptoms of Hypocrisy appear upon my Soul, which did upon Judas, Joh. 12. 6. and 2 Kings 9. 13. 14.

Quest. 3.

Have I not some secret Reserves in my Heart, notwithstanding that face and appearance of Zeal which I put on? Certainly if there be any Sin that I cannot part with, any Suffering for Christ which I resolve against in my Heart: I am none of his Disciple, my Heart is not right with God, the Searcher of Hearts himself being Judge, Luke 14. 26, 27.

Quest. 4.

What Conscience do I make of secret Sins? Do I mourn for a vain Heart, wandering Thoughts, Spiritual Deadness? And do I conscientiously abstain from the Practice of secret Sins, when there is no danger of Discovery, no fear of forfeiting my Reputation by it? Is it God's Eye, or Man's Eye awes me from commission of Sin? Certainly, if I allow my self in secret Sins; I am not of the number of God's upright People; whose Spirits are of a contrary Temper to mine, Psal. 119. 113. Psal. 12. 12.

SECT. V.

I will shut up all with five or six concluding Counsels, (which the Lord impress upon the heart of him that writes, and those that shall read them) to preserve and antidote the Soul against that dangerous Insinuation and Leven of Hypo-

Counsel. 1.

Intreat the Lord Night and Day for a renewed and right Spirit: All the Helps and Directions in the World will not antidote and preserve you from Hypocrisy, nothing will be found able to keep you right, till Sanctification have first set you right, Ezek. 36. 27. I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my Statutes.

A Bowl may keep by a strait line, so long as the impressed force of the Hand that delivered it remains strong upon it; but as that wears off, so its Motions fail; and its own Bias swayes and turns it: A fright of Conscience, a pang of warm Affection, or the influence of some great Example, or a good Education may influence an unrenewed Soul, and push it on in the way of Religion for a Season; but the Heart so influenced must and will return to its own natural Course again. And I think there wants nothing but time, or a suitable Temptation to discover the true Temper of many a Professor's Spirit; pray therefore as that holy Man did, Psal, 119. 80. Let my Heart be sound in thy Statutes, that I be not ashamed.

Counsel 2.

Always suspect and examine your Ends in what you do: Sincerity and Hypocrisy lye much in your Ends and Designs: As they are, so are you. The Intentions of the Heart lye deep. A Man may do the same Action to an holy End, and his Person and Service be accepted with God; which another doing for a corrupt End, it may be reckoned his Sin, and both his Person and Service be abhorred by the Lord: We find two Men riding in one Chariot, and both of them concerned in the same Expedition, Jehu the Son of Nimshi, and Jonadab the Son of Rechab, 2 Kings 10. 15. 23. But though the Work they engaged in was one and the same, yet the different Ends they aimed at, made the same Action an excellent Duty in Jonadab, and an Act of vile Hypocrisy in Jehu: Idem quod duo faciunt, non est idem: It was the Saying of a good Soul, commended for a good Action: The Work indeed is good, but I fear the Ends of it. Self-ends are creeping and insinuating things into the best Actions.

Counsel 3.

Scare your selves with the dayly Fears of the Sin, that is in, and the Misery that will follow Hypocrisy: Look upon it as the most odious Sin in the Eyes of God and Men: To want Holiness is bad enough, but to simulate and pretend it when we have it not, is double Impiety: To make Religion the most glorious thing in the World, a meer Stirrup to Preferment, and a Covert to Wickedness; Oh how vile a thing is it! God made Christ a Sacrifice for Sin, and the Hypocrite will make him a Cloak for Sin.

And as to the Punishments that follow it, they are suitable to the Nature of the Sin; for as Hypocrisy is out of measure sinful, so the Reward and Punishment of it, will be out of measure dreadful. Mat. 24. 51. He shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his Portion with Hypocrites, there shall be weeping and gnashing of Teeth.

Counſel 4.

Be daily at work in the Mortification of thoſe Luſts that breed Hypocriſy. It's plain without much ſifting, that Pride, Vain glory, Self-love, and a wordly Heart are the Seeds out of which this curſed Plant ſprings up in the Souls of Men. Dig but to the Root, and you ſhall certainly find theſe things there; and till the Lord help you to kill and mortify theſe, Hypocriſy will ſpring up in all your Duties to God, and in all your Converſes with Men.

Counſel 5.

Attend the Native Voice of your own Conſciences in the day of Sickneſs, Fear or Trouble, and take ſpecial notice of [illegible] Checks and Upbraidings, which like a Stitch in your Side, will gird you at ſuch times: Commonly in that lyes your greateſt danger: Beware of that Evil which Conſcience brands and marks at ſuch times, whether it be your living in the Practice of ſome ſecret Sin, or in the neglects of ſome known Duty: Theſe Frights of Conſcience mark out the Corruption, wherein your danger moſtly lyes.

Counſel 6.

Let us all that profeſs Religion be uniform and ſteady in the Profeſſion and Practice of it, without Political Reſerves, and By-Ends.

O take heed of this Laodicean Neutrality and Indifferency, which Chriſt hates: Be ſure your Ground be good, and then be ſure you ſtand your Ground. The Religion of Time-ſervers is but Hypocriſy: They have Sluices in their Conſciences which they can open or ſhut as occaſion requires: Every Fox will have at leaſt two Holes to his Den, that if one be ſtopt, he may eſcape at the other. The Hypocrite poiſeth himſelf ſo evenly in a Mediocrity, that, as it was ſaid of Baldwin, let Anthony win, let Auguſtus win, all is one: So let Chriſt win, or let Antichriſt win, he hopes to make every Wind that can blow, ſerviceable to waft him to the Port of his own Intereſt.

The Hypocrite hath always more of the Moon than of the Sun; little Lights, many Spots, and frequent Changes: It's eaſier to him to bow to the Croſs, than to bear the Croſs; to ſin, than to ſuffer.

Our own Story tells us of a poor ſimple Woman that lived both in the Reigns of Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, and would conſtantly ſay her Prayers both in Latin and Engliſh, that ſhe might be ſure to pleaſe one ſide or other; and let God, ſaid ſhe, take which likes him beſt: What is noted as an act of ridiculous Simplicity in her, the time ſerving Hypocrite accounts a point of deep Policy in himſelf.

The times under Dioclesian were Pagan; under Conſtantine, Chriſtian; under Conſtantius, Arian; under Julian, Apoſtate; and under Jovian, Chriſtian again: And all this within the ſpace of ſeventy Years, the Age of one Man. O what ſhifting, and ſhuffling was there among the Men of that Generation! The changes of Weather ſhew the unſoundneſs of Men's Bodies, and the changes of Times, the unſoundneſs of their Souls.

Chriſtian, if ever thou wilt manifeſt and maintain thine Integrity, be a Man but of one Deſign, and be ſure that be an honeſt and good Deſign, to ſecure Heaven whatever becomes of Earth: hold faſt Integrity, whatever thou art forced let go for its ſake.

Take heed of pious Frauds: Certainly it was the Devil that firſt married thoſe two Words together, for they never did nor can agree betwixt themſelves, nor was ever ſuch a Marriage made in Heaven.

Never ſtudy to model Religion and the exercise thereof in a conſiſtency with, or ſubſervience to your fleſhly Intereſts: If your Religion be but a mock Religion, your Reward ſhall be but a mock Heaven, that is, a real Hell.

O the Vanity and Inutility of their Projects and Deſigns! Men ſtrive to caſt themſelves into ſuch Modes, and ſtint themſelves to ſuch Measures of Religion, as they think will beſt promote and ſecure their earthly Intereſts: But it often falls out contrary to their Expectation, then do their Policies are ridiculous Follies, they [illegible] and Shame of their Friends [illegible] Song of their Enemies. And often it [illegible] them, as with him that placed himſelf [illegible] dle of the Table, where he could neither reach the Diſh above him, nor that below him, [illegible] medii, &c. and (which is the very beſt of it) earthly Intereſt be accommodated by fatal Neutrality, and a Laodicean Indifferency in Religion, yet no good Man ſhould once feel a Temptation to embrace it, except he think what is wanting in the ſweetneſs of his Sleep, may be fully recompenſed to him by the ſtatelineſs of his Bed, and richer Furniture of his Chamber; I mean that fuller and higher condition in the World, can make him amends for the loſs of his inward Peace and the quiet Repoſe of a good Conſcience: The By-ends and Self-intereſts, are the little Paſſages through which Hypocriſy creeps in upon the Profeſſors of Religion.

O let this be your rejoycing, which was Paul's, The Teſtimony of your Conſcience, that in all Sincerity and godly Simplicity, not in fleſhly Wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, you have had your Converſation in this World, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

Let that be your dayly Prayer and Cry to Heaven, which was David's, Pſal. 25. 21. Let Integrity and Uprightneſs preſerve me, for I wait on thee.

Counſel 7.

Keep your Hearts Day and Night under the awful God's All-ſeeing Eye: Remember he beholds all your ways, and ponders all your Thoughts; however covertly ſoever Hypocriſy may be carryed for a time, all muſt and will out at laſt, Luke 12. Secreſy is the main Inducement to Hypocriſy, but it will fall out with the Hypocrite, as it did with Ottocar the King of Bohemia, who refuſed to do Homage to Rodolphus the Emperor, till at laſt diſtreſſed with War, he was content to do him Homage privately in a Tent: But the Tent was contrived by the Emperor's Servants, that by drawing one Cord it was taken all away; and Ottocar preſented on his Knees doing Homage in view of three Armies.

Reader, Awe thy Heart with God's Eye, and that he will bring every ſecret thing into Judgment. Thus did Job, and it preſerved him, Job 31. Thus did David, and it preſerved him, Pſal. 18. 21, 22, 23. Thus do thou alſo, and it will preſerve thee blameleſs and without guile to the day of Chriſt.

A TOKEN for MOURNERS.

OR,

The Advice of Chriſt to a Diſtreſſed Mother, bewailing the Death of her Dear and Only Son. Wherein the Boundaries of Sorrow are duly fixed, Exceſſes reſtrained, the Common Pleas anſwered, and divers Rules for the Support of God's Afflicted Ones preſcribed.

The EPISTLE Dedicatory.

To his dearly Beloved Brother and Siſter, Mr. F. C. and Mrs. E. C. the Author wiſheth Grace, Mercy and Peace.

Dear Friends,

THE double Tye of Nature and Grace, beſide the many endearing Paſſages that for ſo many Years have linked and glewed our Affections ſo intimately, cannot but beget a tender Sympathy in me with you, under all your Troubles and make me ſay of every Affliction which befalls you, half's mine. I find it is with our Affections, as with the Strings of Muſical Inſtruments exactly ſet at the ſame height, if one be touched, the other trembles, though it be at ſome diſtance.

Our Affections are one, and ſo in a great meaſure have been our Afflictions alſo. You cannot forget that in the Years lately paſt, the Almighty viſited my Tabernacle with the Rod, and in one Year, cut off from it the Root, and the Branch, the tender Mother, and the only Son. What the Effects of thoſe Strokes, or rather of my own unmortifyed Paſſions were, I have felt, and you and others have heard. Surely I was a Bullock unaccuſtomed to the Yoke. Yea, I may ſay with them, Lam. 3. 19, 20. Remembring mine Affliction and my Miſery, the Wormwood and the Gall, my Soul hath them ſtill in remembrance, and is humbled in me.

I dare not ſay that ever I felt my Heart diſcontentedly riſing and ſwelling againſt God; no, I could ſtill juſtify him when I moſt ſenſibly ſmarted by his Hand: If he had plunged me into a Sea of Sorrow, yet I could ſay in all that Sea of Sorrow, there is not a drop of Injuſtice: But it was the over-heating, and over-acting of my fond and unmortifyed Affections and Paſſions that made ſo ſad Impreſſions upon my Body, and caſt me under thoſe Diſtempers which ſoon imbittered all my remaining Comforts to me.

It was my earneſt Deſire ſo ſoon as I had Strength and Opportunity for ſo great a Journey to viſit you, that ſo (if the Lord had pleas'd) I might both refreſh, and be refreſhed by you, after all my ſad and diſconſolate Days. And you cannot imagine what Content and Pleaſure I projected in that Viſit! But it proved to us (as all other Comforts of the ſame kind ordinarily do) more in Expectation than in Fruition: For how ſoon after our joyful Meeting and Embraces did the Lord over-caſt and darken our Day, by ſending Death into your Tabernacle, to take away the Deſire of your Eyes with a Stroke! To crop off that ſweet and only Bud from which we promiſed our ſelves ſo much Comfort. But no more of that, I fear I am gone too far already. It is not my Deſign to exaſperate your Troubles, but to heal them; and for that purpoſe have I ſent you theſe Papers, which I hope may be of uſe both to you and many others in your Condition, ſince they are the After-Fruits of my own Troubles; things that I commended not to you from another Hand, but which I have (in ſome meaſure) proved and taſted in my own Tryals.

But I will not hold you longer here I have only a few things to deſire for an of from you, and I have done.

The Things I deſire, are.

Firſt, That you will not be too haſty to get off the Yoke which God hath put upon your Neck. Remember when your Child was in the Womb, neither of you deſired it ſhould be delivered thence till God's appointed time was fully come; and now that you travail again with Sorrow for its Death: O deſire not to be delivered from your Sorrows one moment before God's time for your Deliverance be fully come alſo. Let Patience have its perfect Work; that Comfort which comes in God's way and ſeaſon, will ſtick by you, and do you good indeed.

Secondly, I deſire, that though you and your Affections had a ſad Meeting, yet you and they may have a comfortable Parting. If they effect that upon your Hearts which God ſent them for, I doubt not but you will give them a fair Teſtimony when they go off.

If they obtain God's Bleſſing upon them in their Operation, ſurely they will have your Bleſſing too at their Valediction. And what you entertained with Fear, Fear, you will dismiss with Praise. How sweet is it to hear the Afflicted Soul say, when God i loosing Hands, It is good for me that I have been Afflicted.

Thirdly, I heartily wish that these searching Afflictions may make the most satisfying Discoveries, that you may now see more of the evil of Sin, the vanity of the Creature, and the fulness of Christ, than ever you yet saw. Afflictions are Searchers, and put the Soul upon searching and trying its ways, Lam. 3. 14. When our Sin finds us out by Affliction, happy are we, if by the light of Affliction we find out Sin. Blessed is the Man whom God chastneth, and teacheth out of his Law, Psal. 94. 12. There are unseen Causes many times of our Trouble; you have an Advantage now to sift out the Seeds and Principles from which they spring.

Fourthly, I wish that all the Love and Delight you bestowed on your little One, may now be placed to your greater Advantage upon Jesus Christ; and that the Stream of your Affection to him may be so much the stronger, as there are now fewer Channels for it to be divided into. If God will not have any part of your Happiness, to lye in Children, than let it wholly lye in himself. If the Jealousy of the Lord hath removed that which drew away too much of your Heart from him, and hath spoken by this Rod, saying, Stand aside, Child, thou art in my way, and fillest more room in thy Parents Hearts than belongs to thee. O then, deliver up all to him, and say, Lord, take the whole Heart entirely and undividedly to thy self. Henceforth let there be no parting, sharing or dividing of the Affections betwixt God and the Creature, let all the Streams meet and center in thee only.

Fifthly, That you may be strengthened with all Might in the Inner-Man to all Patience, that the Peace of God may keep your Hearts and Minds labour to bring your Hearts to a meek Submission to the Rod of your Father. We had Fathers of the Flesh who corrected us, and we gave them Reverence, shall we not much more be in subjection to the Father of Spirits and live? Is it comely for Children to contest and strive with their Father? Or it is the way to be freed from the Yoke by struggling under it? O that your Hearts might be in a like Frame with his that said, Lord, thou shalt beat and I will bear. It was a good Observation that one made. Anima sedendo & quiescendo fit sapiens. The Soul grows wise by sitting still and quiet under the Rod. And the Apostle calls those excellent Fruits which the Saints gather from their sanctified Afflictions, The peaceable Fruits of Righteousness, Heb. 12. 11.

Lastly, My Heart's Desire and Prayer to God for you is, that you may dye dayly to all visible Enjoyments, and by these frequent Converses with Death in your Family, you may be prepared for your own Change and Dissolution when it shall come.

O, Friends! How many Graves have you and I seen opened for our dear Relations? How oft hath Death come up into your Windows, and summoned the Delight of your Eyes? It is but a little while and we shall go to them; we and they are distinguished but by short Intervals.

Transivere patres, simul hinc transibimus omnes.

Our dear Parents are gone, our lovely and desirable Children are gone, our bosom Relations that were as our own Souls, are gone: And do not all these Warning-Knocks at our Doors acquaint us, that we must prepare to follow shortly after them!

O that by these Things our own Death might be both more easy and familiar to us, the oftner it visits us, the better we should be acquainted with it; and the more of our beloved Relations it removes before us, the less of either Snare or Entanglements remains for us when our Turn comes.

My dear Friends, my Flesh, and my Blood, I beseech you for Religion sake, for your own sake, and for my sake, whose Comfort is, in great part, bound up in your Prosperity and Welfare, that you read frequently, ponder seriously, and apply believingly these Scripture Consolations and Directions, which in some haste, I have gathered for your Use; and the God of all Consolation be with you.

I am,

your most endeared

Brother,

John Flavel.

LUKE

TOKEN for MOURNERS.

LUKE VII. viii.

And when the Lord saw her, he had Compassion on her, and said to her, Weep not.

TO be above the Stroke of Passions, is a condition equal to Angels: To be in a State of Sorrow, without the Sense of Sorrow, is a Disposition beneath Beasts; but duly to regulate our Sorrows, and bound our Passions under the Rod, is the Wisdom, Duty and Excellency of a Christian. He that is without natural Affections, is deservedly ranked amongst the worst of Heathens; and he that is able rightly to manage them, deserves to be numbred with the best of Christians. Though when we are Sanctifyed, we put on the Divine Nature, yet till we are Glorifyed, we put not off the Infirmities of our human Nature.

Whilst we are within the reach of Troubles, we cannot be without the Danger, nor ought not to be without the Fear of Sin; and it is as hard for us to escape Sin, being in Adversity, as becalming in Prosperity.

How apt we are to transgress the Bounds both of Reason and Religion under a sharp Affliction, appears, as in most Men's Experience, so in this Woman's Example, to whose excessive Sorrow Christ puts a stop in the Text: He saw her, and had Compassion on her, and said to her, Weep not.

The Lamentations and Wailings of this distressed Mother, moved the tender Compassions of the Lord in beholding them, and stirred up more Pity in his Heart for her, than could be in her Heart for her Dear and Only Son.

In the Words we are to consider both the Condition of the Woman, and the Counsel of Christ, with respect unto it.

First, The Condition of this Woman, which appears to be very Dolorous and Distressed; her Groans and Tears moved and melted the very Heart of Christ, to hear and behold them: When he saw her, he had Compassion on her.

How sad an Hour it was with her when Christ met her, appears by what is so distinctly remarked by the Evangelist, in ver. 12. where it is said, Now when they came nigh to the Gate of the City, behold, there was a dead Man carried out, the only Son of his Mother, and she was a Widow, and much People of the City was with her.

In this one Verse, divers Heart-piercing Circumstances of this Affliction are noted.

First, It was the Death of a Son. To bury a Child, any Child must needs rend the Heart of a tender Parent; for what are Children but the Parent multiplyed? A Child is a part of the Parent made up in another Skin. But to lay a Son in the Grave; a Son which continues the Name, and supports the Family; this was ever accounted a very great Affliction.

Φιλίαε μὲν πᾶσος δεῖται καὶ τέκνων χρυσός.

Secondly, This Son was not carried from the Cradle to the Coffin, nor stript out of its Swathing, to be wrap'd in its Winding-Cloth: Had he dyed in Infancy, before he had engaged Affection, or raised Expectation, the Affliction had not been so pungent and cutting, as now it was: Death smote the Son in the Flower and Prime of his Time. He was a Man, saith the Evangelist, vers. 12. a Young Man (as Christ calls him.) vers. 14. He was now arrived * at that Age which made him capable of yielding his Mother all that Comfort which had been the Expectation and Hope of many Years, and the Reward and Fruit of many Cares and Labours: Yet then when the Endearments were greatest, and her Hopes highest, even in the Flower of his Age, he is cut off.

* In adolescentia defunctus fuit, ideo plus dolendum fuerat qui in flore ætatis suæ fuit, & cum grande labore ac sollicitudine parentum ad istum ætatem perduxus. Dion. Cat. in loc.

Thus Basil bewailed the Death of his Son.

" Filius mihi erat adolescens, solus vitæ successor, solatium senectæ, gloria generis, flos æqualium, fulcrum domus, ætatem gratiosissimam agebat; hic raptus periit, qui paulo ante jucundam vocem edebat, & jucundissimum spectaculum parentis oculis erat.

I once had a Son, who was a young Man, my only Successor, the Solace of my Age, the Glory of his Kind, the Prop of my Family, arrived to the endearing Age; then was he snatcht from me by Death, whose lovely Voice but a little before I heard, who lately was a pleasant Spectacle to his Parent.

Reader, if this have been thine own condition, as it hath been his that writes it, I need say no more to convince thee, that it was a sorrowful State indeed Christ met this tender Mother in.

Mortem levius toleraret, si non unicus fuisset; si alter qui parentis dolarem leniret superfuisset. Ambros.

Thirdly, And which is yet more, he was not only a Son, but an Only Son: So you find in vers. 12. He was the only Son of his Mother. One in whom all her Hopes and Comforts of that kind were bound up. For, Omnis in Ascanio stat chari cura Parentis, Virg. All her Affections were contracted into this one Object. If we have never so many Children we know not which of them to spare. If they stand like Olive-Plants about our Table, it would grieve us to see the least Twig amongst them broken down. But surely the Death of one out of many, is much more tolerable than of all in one.

Nihil charius unico filio, sic dolor de morte ipsius intensissimus existit. Carth. in loc.

Hence it's noted in Scripture as the greatest of Earthly Sorrows, Jer. 6. 26. O Daughter of my People, gird thee with Sackcloth, and wallow thy self in Ashes. Make thee Mourning as for an only Son, most bitter Lamentation. Yea, so deep and penetrating is this Grief, that the Holy Ghost borrows it to express the deepest spiritual troubles by it, Zech. 12. 10. They shall mourn for him (namely Christ whom they pierced) as one mourneth for an only Son.

Duplici nomine charissimus fuit, tum quod esset unigenitus tam quod esset solatium, & quasi baculus viduitatis ipsius. Piscat. in loc.

Fourthly, And yet to heighten the Affliction, it is super-added, vers. 12. And she was a Widow. So that the Staff of her Age on whom she leaned, was broken: She had now none left to comfort or assist her in her helpless, comfortless State of Widowhood; which is a condition not only void of comfort, but exposed to Oppression and Contempt.

Yea, and being a Widow, the whole burthen lay upon her alone; she had not an Husband to comfort her, as Elkanah did Hanah in 1 Sam. 1. 8. Why weepest thou, and why is thy Heart grieved? Am not I more to thee than ten Sons? This would have been a great Relief; but her Husband was dead as well as her Son, both gone, and she only surviving, to lament the loss of those Comforts that once she had. Her Calamities came not single, but one after another, and this reviving and aggravating the former. This was her case and condition when the Lord met her.

Secondly, Let us consider the Counsel which Christ gives her, with respect to this her sad and sorrowful Case. And when the Lord saw her he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. Relieving and supporting Words; wherein we shall consider,

The { Occasion. Motive. Counsel it self.

1. The occasion of it, and that was his seeing of her. This Meeting at the Gate of the City, how Accidental and Occasional soever it seems, yet without doubt it was providentially suited to the Work intended to be wrought: The Eye of his Omniscience foresaw her, and this Meeting was by him designed, as an occasion of that famous Miracle which he wrought upon the young Man. Christ hath a quick Eye to discern Poor mourning and disconsolate Creatures; And though he be now in Heaven, and stands out of our sight, so that we see him not, yet he sees us; and his Eye (which is upon all our Troubles) still affects his Heart, and moves his Bowels for us.

2. The Motive stirring him up to give this relieving and comfortable Counsel to her, was his own Compassion. She neither expected, nor desired it from him; but so full of tender Pity was the Lord towards her, that he prevents her with unexpected Consolation: Her Heart was nothing so full of compassion for her Son, as Christ was for her: He bore our Infirmities, even Natural as well as Moral ones, in the days of his Flesh; and though he be now exalted to the highest Glory, yet still he continues as merciful as ever, and as apt to be touched with the sense of our Miseries, Heb. 4. 15.

Lastly, The Counsel it self, Weep not, herein fulfilling the Office of a Comforter to them that Mourn, whereunto he was anointed, Isa. 16. 1, 2, 3. Yet the Words are not an absolute prohibition of Tears and Sorrow, he doth not condemn all Mourning as sinful, or all expressions of Grief for dead Relations as uncomely: No, Christ would not have his People stupid and insensate; he only prohibits the excesses and extravagances of our Sorrows for the Dead, that it should not be such a Mourning for the Dead as is found among the Heathen, who sorrow without Measure, because without Hope, being ignorant of that grand relief by the Resurrection which the Gospel reveals.

The Resurrection of her Son from the dead, is the ground upon which Christ builds her Consolation and Relief. Well might he say, Weep not, when he intended quickly to remove the cause of her Tears by restoring him again to Life.

Now though there be somewhat in this case extraordinary and peculiar; for few or none that carry their dead Children to the Grave, may expect to receive them again from the Dead immediately by a special Resurrection, as she did: I say this is not to be expected by any that now lose their Relations; the occasion and reason of such miraculous special Resurrections being removed, by a sufficient and full evidence and confirmation of Christ's divine Power and Godhead: Yet those that now bury their Relations, if they be such as dye in Christ, have as good and sufficient reason to moderate their Passions, as this Mourner had, and do as truly come within the reach and compass of this Christ's comfortable and supportable Counsel, Weep not, as she did; for do but consider what of support or comfort can a particular and present Resurrection from the dead give us, more than that it is; and as it is a specimen, handsel or pledge of the General Resurrection? It is not the returning of the Soul to its Body, to live an animal Life again in this World of Sin and Sorrow, and shortly after to undergo the agonies and pains of Death again that is in it self any such privilege as may afford much comfort to the Person raised, or his Relations: It is no Peivilege to the Person raised; for it returns him from Rest to Trouble, from the Harbour back again into the Ocean. It is matter of trouble to many dying Saints, to hear of the likelihood of their returning again, when they are got so nigh to Heaven.

It was once the case of a Godly Minister of this Nation, who was much troubled at his return, and said, I am like a Sheep driven out of the Storm almost to the Fold, and then driven back into the Storm again; or a weary Traveller that is come near his home and then must go back to fetch somewhat he had forgotten; or an Apprentice, whose Time is almost expired, and then must begin a New Term.

But to dye, and then return again from the dead, hath less of Privilege, than to return only from the brink of the Grave; for the Sick hath not yet felt the Agonies and last Struggles or Pangs of Death, but such have felt them once, and must feel them again; they must dye twice, before they can be happy once; and besides, during the little time they spend on Earth betwixt the first and second dissolution, there is a perfect ἀμνησία, forgetfulness and insensibleness of all that which they saw or enjoyed in their Estate of separation: It being necessary, both for them and others, that it should be; for, for themselves it's necessary, that they may be content to live, and endure the time of Separation from that blessed and ineffable State, quietly and patiently; and for others that they may live by Faith, and not by Sense, and build upon divine and not human Authority and Report.

Viturosque dicebant, ut vivere durent.

So that here you see, their Agonies and Pangs are doubled, and yet their Life not sweetned by any sense of their Happiness which returns and remains with them, and therefore it can be no such Privilege to them.

And for their Relations, though it be some comfort to receive them again from the dead; yet the consideration, that they are return'd to them into the stormy Sea, to partake of new Sorrows and Troubles, from which they were lately free; and in a short time they must part with them again, and feel the double Sorrows of a parting Pull, which others feel but once, surely such a particular Resurrection considered in it self, is no such ground of Comfort as at first we might imagine it to be.

In eo futuræ resurrectionis illustre habemus specimen. Calv. in loc.

It remains then, that the ground of all solid Comfort and Relief against the Death of our Relations, lies in the general and last Resurrection, and what is in a particular one, is but as it were a Specimen, and Evidence of the general; and there the Apostle places our Relief, 1 Thes. 4. 17. that we shall see and enjoy them again at the Lord's coming. And surely this is more than if with this Mother (in the Text) we should presently receive them from the dead, as she did her Son: And if we judge not so, it is because our Hearts are carnal, and measure things rather by Time and Sense, than by Faith and Eternity.

Thus you see the Counsel, with its ground, which for the most part is common to other Christian Mourners with her; the difference being but inconsiderable, and of little Advantage.

Here then you find many aggravations of Sorrow meeting together: A Son, an only Son, is carrying to the Grave; yet Christ commands the pensive Mother, not to Mourn,

Hence we note,

Doct. That Christians ought to moderate their Sorrows for their dead Relations, how many afflicting circumstances and aggravation soever do meet together in their Death.

Quæ arctiore diligimus habita, graviter suspiramus, amisa. Greg. mor.

It is as common with Men, yea, with good Men, to exceed in their Sorrows for dead Relations, as it is to exceed in their Love and Delights to living Relations; and both of the one and other, we may say as they say of Waters, it's hard to confine them within their Bounds. It is therefore grave Advice which the Apostle delivers in this case, 1 Cor. 7. 29, 30. But this I say Brethren, the time is short; it remaineth that both they that have Wives, be as though they had none; and they that weep, as though they wept not; and those that rejoyce, as if they rejoyced not. As if he had said, the floating World is near its Port: God hath contracted the Sails of Man's Life: It is but a point of time we have to live, and shortly it will not be a Point to chuse, whether we had Wives or not, Children or not: All these are time-eaten things, and before the expected Fruit of these Comforts be ripe, we our selves may be rotten. It is therefore an high point of Wisdom, to look upon things which shortly will not be, as if already they were not, and to behave our selves in the loss of these carnal Enjoyments, as the natural Man behaves himself in the use of Spiritual Ordinances: He hears as if he heard not, and we should weep as if we wept not; their Affections are a little moved sometimes by Spiritual things, but they never lay them so to heart as to be broken-hearted for the Sin they hear of, or deeply affected with the Glory revealed: We also ought to be sensible of the Stroke of God upon our dear Relations: But yet still we must weep, as if we wept not; that is, we must keep due bounds and moderation in our Sorrows, and not to be too deeply concerned for these dying, short-liv'd things.

To this purpose the Apostle exhorts, Heb. 12. 5. My Son despise not the Chastening of the Lord; neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. These are two extreams, despising and fainting: When God is correcting, to say, I do not regard it, let God take all if he will; if my Estate must go let it go; if my Children dye let them dye; this is to despise the Lord's chastening; and God cannot bear it, that we should bear it thus lightly.

There is also another extream, and that is Fainting, if when Goods are taken away, the Heart be taken away, and when Children dye, then the Spirit of the Parent dyes also; this is fainting under the Rod. Thou lamentest, saith Seneca, thy deceased Friend, but I would not have thee grieve beyond what is meet: That thou shouldst not grieve at all I dare not require thee; Tears may be excused, if they do not exceed: Let thine Eyes therefore be neither wholly dry, nor yet let them them overflow; Weep thou may'ſt, but Wail thou muſt not.

Happy Man that ſtill keeps the Golden Bridle of Moderation upon his Paſſions and Affections, and ſtill keeps the poſſeſſion of himſelf, whatſoever he loſe the poſſeſſion of.

Now the Method in which I propoſe to proceed ſhall be,

1. To diſcover the Signs
2. To diſſwade from the Sin
3. To remove the Pleas
4. To propoſe the Cure

} of immoderate Sorrow.

Firſt I ſhall give you the Signs of immoderate Sorrow, and ſhew you when it exceeds its bounds, and becomes ſinful, even a Sorrow to be ſorrowed for; and for clearneſs ſake, I will firſt allow what may be allowed to the Chriſtian Mourner, and then you will the better diſcern wherein the exceſs and ſinfulneſs of your Sorrow lyes.

And firſt, How much ſoever we cenſure and condemn immoderate Sorrow, yet the Afflicted muſt be allowed an awakened and tender Senſe of the Lord's afflicting hand upon them. It's no Vertue to bear what we do not feel: Yea, it is a moſt unbecoming Temper, not to tremble when God is ſmiting.

The Lord ſaith to Moſes in the caſe of Miriam, Numb. 12. 24. If her Father had ſpit in her Face, ſhould ſhe not be aſhamed ſeven Days. The Face is the Table and Seat of Beauty and Honour; but when it is ſpit upon, it is made the Sink of Shame. Had her own Father ſpit upon her Face when ſhe had diſpleaſed him, would ſhe not have gone aſide as one aſhamed by ſuch a rebuke, and not have ſhewed her Face to him again in Seven Days? How much more ſhould ſhe take it to Heart and be ſenſible of this Rebuke of mine, who have filled her Face with Leprous Spots, the ſigns of my diſpleaſure againſt her? Surely God will be aſhamed of thoſe that are not aſhamed when he rebukes them.

It is not Magnanimity, but Stupidity to make light of God's Corrections, and for this the Afflicted are ſmartly taxed, Jer. 5. 3. I have ſmitten them, but they have not grieved; when God ſmote Job in his Perſon, Children and Eſtate, he aroſe and rent his Mantle, and put duſt upon his Head, to ſhew he was not ſenſeleſs and unaffected, and yet bleſſed the afflicting God, which as plainly ſhewed he was not Contumacious and Unſubmiſſive.

Secondly, We muſt allow the mourning afflicted Soul, a due and comely expreſſion of his Grief, and Sorrow, in his complaints both to God and Men.

It's much more becoming a Chriſtian ingenuouſly to open his Troubles, than ſullenly to ſmother them. There is no Sin in complaining to God, but much Wickedneſs in complainiug of him. Griefs are eaſed by Groans and Heart Preſſures relieved by utterance. This was David's courſe, and conſtant way, who was a Man of Afflictions, Pſal. 142, 2, 3. I poured out my Complaint before him, I ſhewed before him my trouble; when my Spirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knoweſt my Path.

To whom ſhould Children go, but to their Father to make their moan? Whence may they expect relief and comfort but from him? The 102 Pſalm is intituled, A Pſalm for the Afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his Complaint before the Lord.

And happy were it, if every afflicted Soul would chuſe this way to expreſs his Sorrows. Did we complain more to God, God would complain leſs of us, and quickly abate the matters of your Complaint. O you cannot think how moving, how melting, how prevailing it is with God, when his poor Burdened and afflicted People, in a day of Diſtreſs and Deſpondency, when Deep calleth unto Deep, and one Wave drives on another, then for the oppreſſed Soul with Humility, Filial Confidence and Faith to turn it ſelf to the Lord, and thus beſpeak him,

'Father, what ſhall I do? My Soul is 'greatly bowed down by Trouble, I am full 'to the Brim, my vain Heart hath looked 'for relief this way and that way, but none 'comes, every Door of Comfort is ſhut up 'againſt me: Thou haſt multiplyed my Sor-'rows, and renewed thy Witneſſes againſt 'me: Comfort is removed from my outward, 'and Peace from my inner Man, Sharp 'Afflictions without, and bitter Reflections 'within. O Lord, I am oppreſſed, under-'take for me. Fathers of the Fleſh pity their 'diſtreſſed Children when they complain to 'them, and wilt not thou, O Lord, whoſe 'Compaſſions as far exceed Creature-Com-'paſſions, as the Sea exceeds a Drop: O 'my Father, pity me, ſupport me, deliver 'me.

Oh how acceptable is this to God! how advantageous to the Soul!

We may alſo make our complaint to Men, So did Job, chap. 19. 21. Have pity, have pity on me, O ye my Friends, for the hand of God hath touched me. And it is a Mercy if we have any Friends that are Wiſe, Faithful and Experienced. They are born for ſuch a time as this, Prov. 17. 17. But be they what they will, they cannot pity as God, relieve and ſuccour as he: And oftentimes we may ſay with Job, chap. 21. 4. As for me, is my complaint to Men? And if it were, why ſhould not my Spirit be troubled? q. d. What great advantage can I get by theſe complaints? I may burden the Heart of my Friend, but how little doth that eaſe my own? Yet the very opening of the Heart to an experienced tender Chriſtian is ſome relief, and the engaging his Prayers is more. Thus far you moan ſafely: In all this there is no danger.

Thirdly, The afflicted Perſon may (ordinarily) accuſe, judge and condemn himſelf, for being the cauſe and procurer of his own Troubles. He may lawfully be diſcontented, and vexed with himſelf for his own Folly, when the Iniquity of his Heels compaſſeth him about. And truly it is but ſeldom that any great affliction befals a gracious Perſon, but he ſaw the need of ſuch a Rod before he felt it.

Hath God ſmitten thy Child or Friend, and didſt thou not foreſee ſome ſharp Tryal coming? Did not thy fond, ſecure, carnal temper per need such a Scourge to awaken, quicken and purge thee? Or if you did not foresee it, it's now your Duty to search and examine your selves. So the Church in their Affliction, resolved, Lam. 3. 40. Let us search and try our ways. When God is smiting we should be a searching. Surely our Iniquities will enquire after us, if we will not enquire after them. Yea, in the day of Affliction, a gracious Soul is inquisitive about nothing more than the procuring and provoking Cause of his Troubles, Job 10. 2. Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me; q. d. Lord what special corruption is it that this Rod is sent to rebuke; what sinful neglect doth it come to humble me for? O discover it now to me, and recover me now from it.

And having found the Root and Cause of their Troubles, ingenuous Souls will shame themselves for it, and give Glory to God by an humble Submission, and Vindication of the Equity of his Proceedings, Job 7. 20. I have sinned, what shall I do unto thee, thou preserver of Men? He thinks it no shame freely to discover unto God, and deeply to abase himself before him, for his Folly.

* Nec enim pudet sanctos vitam postquam revocata Corda fuerint per Epiſcenium, lapsus sui & decoris sui Dei Gloriam animisse. Nihil nocebit, si decedit sed cedit illius Dolorem. Brightman in Cant. c. 1. v. 4 p. 11.

I remember a choice Note that * Mr. Brightman hath in his Commentary upon the Canticles.

Holy Men, saith he, after their Hearts are renewed by Repentance are not ashamed to remember and confess their Slips and shameful Falls, to the Glory of God; for they account that Glory which such confessions take from them is not lost, while it goes to the Glory of God. If his Glory may rise out of our Shame, how willing should we be to take such shame to us? Holy David was not ashamed to acknowledge, Psal. 38. 5. My Wounds stink and are corrupted because of my Foolishness. He is the wisest Man that thus befools himself before God.

It is true, God may afflict from Prerogative, or for Tryal; but we may always see cause enough in our selves, and it is safest to charge it upon our own Folly.

Lastly, The afflicted Christian may in an humble submissive manner plead with God, and be earnest for the removal of the Affliction.

When Affliction presseth us above Strength, when it disables us for Duty, or when it gives advantage to Temptation, then we may say with David, Remove thy stroke from me, I am consumed by the blow of thine hand, Psal. 39. 10. Even our Lord Jesus Christ, in the Day of his Troubles poured out his Soul with strong Cries and many Tears, saying, Father, if thou be willing, let this Cup pass from me, Luke 22. 42. Oppressed Nature desires ease, and even our renewed Nature desires Freedom from those Clogs and Temptations which hinder us in Duty, or expose us to Snares.

Thus far we may safely go.

But Sorrow then becomes sinful and excessive when,

First, " It causeth us to slight and despise " all our other Mercies and Enjoyments, as " small things in comparison of what we " have lost.

It often falls out that the setting of one Comfort clouds and benights all the rest. Our Tears for our lost Enjoyment so blind our Eyes that we cannot see the many other Mercies which yet remain: We take so much notice of what is gone, that we take little or no notice of what is left. But this is very sinful, for it involves in it both Ignorance, Ingratitude, and great Provocation.

It's a Sin springing from Ignorance. Did we know the desert of our Sin, we would rather wonder to see one Mercy left, than that twenty are cut off. They that know they have forfeited every Mercy, should be thankful that they enjoy any, and patient when they lose any of their Comfort.

Did we know God, even that Sovereign Lord, at whose dispose our Comforts come and go, who can the next moment blast all that remain, and turn you into Hell, afterwards you would prize the Mercies he yet indulges to you at an higher value. Did you understand the fickle vanishing nature of the Creature, what a Flower, what a Bubble it is: Oh how thankful would you be to find so many yet left in your possession!

Did you know the case of Thousands as good, yea better than you, whose whole Harvest of Comfort in this World, is but an handful to the gleanings of the Comforts you still enjoy, who in all their Lives never were owners of such comfortable Enjoyments as you now overlook, surely you would not act as you do.

Besides, what vile Ingratitude is in this? What, are all your remaining Mercies worth nothing? You have buried a Child, a Friend: Well, but still you have a Husband, a Wife, other Children; or if not, you have comfortable Accommodations to your selves, with Health to enjoy them; or if not, yet have you the Ordinances of God, it may be an Interest in Christ, and in the Covenant, Pardon of Sin, and hopes of Glory. What; and yet sink at this rate, as if all your Mercies, Comforts and Hopes, even in both Worlds were buried in one Grave. Must Ichabod be written upon your best Mercies, because Mortality is written upon one? Fye, fye, what shameful Ingratitude is here?

And really, Friend, such a carriage as this under the Rod is no small provocation to the Lord to go on in Judgment, and make a full end of all that remains, so that Affliction shall not rise up the second time.

What if God taking notice how little thou regardest the many undeserved Favours thou yet possessest, should say, Well, if thou think'st them not worth the owning, neither do I think them worth the continuing? Go, Death, there's a Husband, a Wife, other Children yet left, smite them all. Go, Sickness, and remove the Health of his Body yet left; go, Losses, and impoverish his Estate yet left; go, reproach, and blast his Reputation which is yet sweet, what would you think of this? And yet if you be out of Christ, you are in danger of a far sadder stroke than any or all yet mentioned, What if God should say, prizest thou not my Mercy? Hast thou no value for my Goodness and Forbearance towards thee? Is it nothing that I have spared thee thus long in thy Sins and Rebellions:

Well then I will ſtretch out my hand upon thy Life, cut off that Thread which hath kept thee ſo many Years from dropping into Hell.

O think then what you have done, by provoking the Lord through your vile Ingratitude! It is a dangerous thing to provoke God, when he is already in a way of Judgment. And if you be his own People, and ſo out of the danger of this laſt and worſt ſtroke; yet know, you have better Mercies to loſe than any you have yet loſt. Should God cloud your Souls with doubts, let looſe Satan to buffet you, remove Joy and Peace from your inner Man, how ſoon would you be convinced that the Funeral of your dearеſt Friend is but a Triſle to this.

Well then, whatever God takes, be ſtill thankful for what he leaves. It was the great Sin of Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, that though God had delivered them from their cruel Servitude in Egypt, miraculouſly fed them in the Deſert, and was leading them on to a Land flowing with Milk and Honey; yet as ſoon as any want did but begin to pinch them, preſently all theſe Mercies were forgotten and ſlighted, Numb. 14. 12. Would to God, ſay they, we had dyed in Egypt. And Numb. 11. 6. There is nothing at all beſide this Manna. Beware of this, O ye Mourning and Afflicted ones. You ſee both the Sin that is in it, and the danger that attends it.

Secondly, And no leſs Sinful are our Sorrows, "When they ſo wholly ingulph our "Hearts, that we either mind not at all, or "are little or nothing ſenſible of the pub-"lick Evils and Calamities, which lye upon "the Church and People of God.

Some Chriſtians have ſuch publick Spirits, that the Church's Troubles ſwallow up their perſonal Trouble. Melanchon ſeemed to take little notice of the Death of his Child which he dearly loved, being almoſt overwhelmed with the Miſery lying on the Church.

Cumque ille nominaſſet Arcam, Dei, q. d. nondum integram, ſed inchoatam audiens narratio-nem, mente prævolans & exitum præſagiens ruebat. Mereoz. in Loc.

And it was a good Evidence of the graciouſneſs and publickneſs of Eli's Spirit, who ſitting in the Gate, anxiouſly waiting for tydings from the Army, when the Tydings came that Iſrael fled before the Philiſtines, that his two Sons Hophni and Phineas were dead, and that the Ark of God was taken, juſt at the mention of that Word, The Ark of God, before he heard out the whole Narration, his Mind quickly preſaging the Iſſue, he ſunk down and dyed, 1 Sam. 4. 19, 20. O that was the ſinking, the killing Word; had the Meſſenger ſtopt at the Death of his two Sons, like enough he had ſupported that Burden, but the loſs of the Ark was more to him than Sons or Daughters.

But how few ſuch publick Spirits appear, even among Profeſſors in this ſelfiſh Generation? May we not with the Apoſtle complain, Phil. 2. 21. All ſeek their own, and not the things that are of Chriſt: Few Men have any great Cares or Deſigns, lying beyond the Bounds of their own private Intereſts. And what we ſay of Cares, is as true of Sorrows: If a Child dye we are ready to dye too, but publick Calamities pierce us not.

How few ſuffer either their domeſtick Comforts to be ſwallowed up in the Churche's Trouble, or their domeſtick Troubles to be ſwallowed up by the Church's Mercies! Now when it is thus with us, when we little regard what Mercies or Miſeries lye upon others, but are wholly intent upon our own Affections, this is a Sinful Sorrow, and ought to be ſorrowed for.

Thirdly, Our Sorrows then become ſinful and exorbitant, "When they divert us "from, or diſtract us in our Duties, ſo that "our intercourſe with Heaven is ſtopt and "interrupted by them.

How long can we ſit alone muſing upon a dead Creature? Here our Thoughts eaſily flow, but how hard to fix them upon the living God! when our Hearts ſhould be in Heaven with our Chriſt, they are in the Grave with our Dead. May not many afflicted Souls juſtly complain, that their Troubles had taken away their Chriſt from them (I mean as to ſweet ſenſible Communion) and laid the dead Child in his Room?

Poor Creature, ceaſe to weep any longer for thy dead Relation, and weep rather for thy dead Heart. Is this thy compliance with God's Deſign in afflicting thee? What, to grow a greater Stranger to him than before! Or is this the way to thy Cure and Comfort in Affliction, to refrain Prayer, and turn thy back upon God?

Or if thou dareſt not wholly neglect thy Duty, yet thy affliction ſpoils the ſucceſs and comfort of it; thy Heart is wandring, dead, diſtracted in Prayer and Meditation, ſo that thou haſt no Relief or Comfort from it.

Rouze up thy ſelf, Chriſtian, conſider this is not Right. Surely the Rod works not kindly now. What, did thy love to God expire when thy Friend expired? Is thy Heart as cold in Duty, as his Body is in the Grave?

Hath natural Death ſeized him, and ſpiritual Deadneſs ſeized thee? Sure then thou hadſt more reaſon to lament thy dead Heart, than thy dead Friend. Divert the ſtream of thy Troubles ſpeedily, and labour to recover thy ſelf out of this Temper quickly; leſt ſad experience ſhortly tell thee that what thou now Mourneſt for, is but a Triſle to what thou ſhalt Mourn for hereafter. To loſe the Heavenly Warmth and Spiritual Livelineſs of thy Affections, is undoubtedly a far more conſiderable Loſs, than to loſe the Wife of thy Boſom, or the ſweeteſt Child that ever a tender Parent laid in the Grave.

Reader, If this be thy caſe, thou haſt reaſon to challenge the firſt Place among the Mourners. It is better for thee to bury ten Sons, than to remit one degree of Love or Delight in God. The end of God in ſmiting, was to win thy Heart nearer to him, by removing that which eſtranged it; how then doſt thou croſs the very deſign of God in this diſpenſation? Muſt God then loſe his delight in thy Fellowſhip, becauſe thou haſt loſt thine in the Creature? Surely when thy Troubles thus accompany thee to thy Cloſet, they are ſinful and extravagant Troubles.

Fourthly, Then you may alſo conclude your Sorrows to be Exceſſive and Sinful, When they ſo overload and oppreſs your Bodies as to endanger your Lives, or render them uſeleſs and unfit for Service.

Worldly

Worldly Sorrow works Death, 2 Cor. 7. 10. that is, Sorrow after the manner of Worldly Men, Sorrow in a meer carnal natural way, which is not relieved by any Spiritual Reasonings and Considerations: This falls so heavy sometimes upon the Body, that it sinks under the Weight, and is cast into such diseases as are never more wrought off, or healed in this World. Heaviness in the Heart of a Man makes it stoop, saith Solomon, Prov. 12. 25. The stoutest Body must stoop under Heart-pressure.

It is with the Mind of Man, saith one, as with the Stone Tyrhenus; as long as it's whole it swimmeth, but once broken it sinks presently. Grief is a Moth, which getting into the Mind, will, in short time, make the Body, be it never so strong and well wrought a piece, like an old seary Garment.

Physosophers and Physicians generally reckon Sorrow among the chief Causes of shortning Life. Christ was a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with Griefs, and this some think was the reason that he appeared as a Man of Fifty, when he was little more than Thirty Years old, Joh 8. 57. But his Sorrows were of another kind. *

Many a Man's Soul is to his Body, as a sharp Knife to a thin Sheath, which easily cuts it through, and what do we by poring and pondering upon our Troubles, but whet the Knife that it may cut the deeper and quicker? Of all the Creatures that ever God made (Devils only excepted) Man is the most able and apt to be his own Tormentor.

How unmercifully do we load them in times of Affliction? How do we not only waste their Strength by Sorrow, but deny Relief and necessary Refreshment? They must carry the Load, but be allowed no Refreshment: If they can eat the Bread of Affliction and drink Tears, they may feed at full; but no pleasant Bread, no quiet Sleep is permitted them. Surely you would not burden a Beast as you do your own Bodies: You would pity and relieve a brute Beast, groaning and sinking under an heavy Burden, but you will not pity nor relieve your own Bodies.

Some Men's Souls have given such deep Wounds to their Bodies, that they are never like to enjoy many easy or comfortable days more whilst they dwell in them.

Now this is very sinful and displeasing to God; for if he have such a tender Care for our Bodies, that he would not have us swallowed up of over-much Grief, no though it be for Sin, 2 Cor. 2. 7. But even to that Sorrow sets Bounds. How much less with outward Sorrow for Temporal Loss? May not your Stock of natural Strength be employed to better purposes think you than these? Time may come that you may earnestly wish you had that Health and Strength again to spend for God, which you now so lavishly waste, and prodigally cast away upon your Troubles to no purpose or advantage.

It was therefore an high point of Wisdom in David, and recorded no doubt for our Imitation, who, when the Child was dead, ceased to mourn, but arose, washed himself, and eat Bread, 2 Sam. 12. 20.

Fifthly, When Affliction sowers the Spirit with discontent, and makes it inwardly grudge against the Hand of God, then our Trouble is full of Sin, and we ought to be humbled for it before the Lord.

Whatever God doth with us or ours, still we should maintain good Thoughts of him. A gracious Heart cleaves nearer and nearer to God in Affliction, and can justify God in his severest Strokes, acknowledging them to be all Just and Holy, Psal. 119. 75. I know also that thy Judgments are right, and that thou in Faithfulness hast afflicted me. And hereby the Soul may comfortably evidence to it self its own upon uprightness and sincere Love to God; yea, it hath been of singular use to some Souls, to take right measures of their love to God in such Tryals: To have lovely and well-pleased thoughts of God, even when he smites us in our nearest and dearest Comforts, argues plainly that we love him for himself, and not for his Gifts only. And that his Interest in the Heart is deeper than any Creature-Interest is. And such is the comfort that hath resulted to some from such discoveries of their own Hearts by close smarting Afflictions, that they would not part with it, to have their Comforts, (whose removal occasioned them) given back in lieu of it.

But to swell with secret Discontent, and have hard Thoughts of God, as if he had done us wrong, or dealt more severely with us than any. O this is a vile Temper, cursed Fruit springing from an evil Root; a very carnal, ignorant, proud Heart; or at least from a very distempered, if renewed Heart. So it was with Jonah when God smote his Gourd, Yea, saith he, I do well to be angry even unto Death, Jonah 4. 9. Poor Man, he was highly distempered at this time, and out of frame; this was not his true Temper or ordinary Frame, but a Surprize; the effect of a Paroxysme of Temptation, in which his Passions had been over-heated.

Few dare to vent it in such Language: But how many have their Hearts imbittered by discontent, and secret risings against the Lord? Which, if the Lord ever open their Eyes to see, will cost them more Trouble than ever that of Affliction did, which gave the occasion of it.

I deny not but the best Heart may be tempted to think and speak frowarly concerning these Works of the Lord; that envious Adversary, the Devil, will blow the Coals, and labour to blow up our Spirits at such time into high discontents: The Temptation was strong even upon David himself, to take up hard Thoughts of God, and to conclude, Verily I have cleansed my Heart in vain; q. d. How little Privilege from the worst of Evils hath a Man by his Godlyness? But he soon suppress'd such Motions. If I should say this, I should offend against the Generation of thy Children: Meaning that he should condemn the whole race of Godly Men through the whole World; for who is there among them all, but is, or hath, or may be afflicted as severely as my self?

Surely, it is meet to be said unto God, I have born Chastisement, I will not offend any ny more, Job 34. 31. Whatever God doth with you, ſpeak well, and think well of him, and his Works.

Sixthly, Our Sorrows exceed due bounds, when we continually excite and provoke them by willing irritations.

Grief, like a Lyon, loves to play with us before it deſtroys us. And ſtrange it is that we ſhould find ſome kind of Pleaſure in rouzing our Sorrows. It's * Seneca's obſervation, and experimentally true that even Sorrow it ſelf hath a certain kind of delight attending it.

* Ineſt quædam dulce triſtitiæ, cum ē curſant ſermones eorum jucundi, converſatio hilaris, officioſa pietas: Tunc oculi velut in gratio relaxantur. Sen. Ep. 86.

† Ex eorum more qui luctus ſui irritamenta quærunt. Calvin.

The Jews that were with Mary in the Houſe to comfort her, When they ſaw that ſhe went out haſtily, followed her, ſaying, She goeth to the Grave to weep there. Joh. 11. 32. As they do, ſaith †Calvin, that ſeek to provoke their Troubles by going to the Grave, or often looking upon the dead Body.

Thus we delight to look upon the Reliques of our deceaſed Friends, and often to mention their Actions and Sayings, not ſo much for any matter of holy and weighty Inſtruction or Imitation, for that would warrant and commend the Action; but rather to rub the Wound, and fetch freſh Blood from it, by piercing our ſelves with ſome little, trivial, yet wounding Circumſtances. I have known many that will ſit and talk of the Features, Actions and Sayings of their Children, for Hours together, and weep at the Rehearſal of them, and that for many Months after they are gone; ſo keeping the Wound continually open, and excruciating their own Hearts without any Benefit at all by them. A Lock of Hair, or ſome ſuch Trifles muſt be kept for this purpoſe to renew their Sorrow daily by looking on it. On this account, Jacob would not have his Son called Benoni, leſt it ſhould renew his Sorrow, but Benjamin.

I am far from commending a bruitiſh Oblivion of our dear Relations, and condemn it as much I do this Childiſh and unprofitable Remembrance. Oh Friends, we have other things to do under the Rod than theſe. Were it not better to be ſearching our Hearts and Houſes, when God's Rod's is upon us, and ſtudying how to anſwer the end of it, by mortifying thoſe Corruptions which provoke it? Surely the Rod works not kindly till it comes to this.

Seventhly, Laſtly, Our Sorrows may then be pronounced ſinful, when they deafen our Ears to all the wholeſome and ſeaſonable Words of Counſel and Comfort offered us for our Relief and Support.

Jer. 31. 15. A Voice was heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter Weeping; Rachel weeping for her Children, would not be comforted for her Children, becauſe they were not. She will admit no comfort, her diſeaſe is curable by no other means but the Reſtoration of her Children; give her them again and ſhe will be quiet, elſe you ſpeak into Air, ſhe regards not whatever you ſay.

Thus Iſrael in the cruel Bondage in Egypt, Moſes brings them the glad tydings of Deliverance; But they hearkned not to him, becauſe of the anguiſh of Spirit, and their cruel Bondage Exod. 6. 9.

Thus obſtinately fixed are many in their Trouble, that no Words of Advice or Comfort find any place with them: Yea, I have known ſome exceeding quick and ingenious, even above the rate of their common Parts and Abilities in inventing Shifts, and framing Objections to turn off Comfort from themſelves, as if they had been hired to plead againſt their own Intereſt; and if they be driven from thoſe Pleas, yet they are ſetled in their Troubles too faſt to be moved, ſay what you will they mind it not, or at moſt it abides not upon them. Let proper, ſeaſonable Advice or Comfort be tendered, they refuſe it, your Counſel is good, but they have no Heart to it now. Thus Pſal. 77. 10. My Soul, ſaith he, refuſed to be comforted.

To want Comfort in time of Affliction is an aggravation of our Affliction; but to refuſe it when offered us, wants not Sin. Time may come when we would be glad to receive Comfort, or hear a Word of Support, and ſhall be denied it.

O 'tis a Mercy to the Afflicted to have Barnabas with them, an Interpreter, one among a Thouſand; and it will be the great Sin and Folly of the Afflicted to ſpill thoſe excellent Cordials, prepared and offered to them, like Water upon the Ground, out of a froward or dead Spirit, under Trouble. Say not with them, Lam. 3. 18, 19. My Hope it is periſhed from the Lord, remembring mine Affliction and my Miſery, the Wormwood and the Gall. It's a thouſand pities the Wormwood and Gall of Affliction ſhould ſo diſguſt a Chriſtian, as that he ſhould not at any time be able to reliſh the ſweetneſs that is in Chriſt, and in the Promiſes. And thus I have diſpatched the firſt part of my deſign, in ſhewing you wherein the Sin of Mourners doth not lye, and in what it doth.

Secondly, Having cleared this, and ſhewn you wherein the Sin and Danger lies, my way is prepared to the ſecond thing propoſed, namely, to diſſwade Mourners from theſe ſinful Exceſſes of Sorrows, and keep the golden Bridle of Moderation upon their Paſſions in times of Affliction. And O that my Words may be as ſucceſsful upon thoſe Penſive Souls that ſhall read them, as Abigal's were to David, 1 Sam. 25. 32. Who when he perceived how ſeaſonable and proper they were, ſaid, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, who ſent thee this day to meet me, and Bleſſed be thy Advice.

I am ſenſible how hard a Task it is I here undertake, to charm down, and allay mutinous, raging and tumultuous Paſſions; to give a check to the Torrent of Paſſion, is ordinarily but to provoke it, and make it rage and ſwell the more.

The Work is the Lord's, wholly depends upon his Power and Bleſſing. He that ſaith to the Sea, when the Waves thereof roar, be ſtill, can alſo quiet and compoſe the ſtormy and tumultuous Sea that rages in the Breaſts of the Afflicted, and caſts up nothing but the Froth of vain and uſeleſs complaints of our Miſery, or the dirt of ſinful and wicked complaints of the dealings of the Lord with us.

The Rod of Affliction goes round, and viſits all ſort of Perſons without difference: It is upon the Tabernacle of the Juſt and the Unjuſt, the Righteous and the Wicked, both are mourning under the Rod.

is

The Godly are not ſo to be minded, as that the other be wholly neglected, they have as ſtrong and tender, though not as regular Affections to their Relations, and muſt not be wholly ſuffered to ſink under their unrelieved Burthens.

Here therefore I muſt have reſpect to two ſorts of Perſons, whom I find in Tears upon the ſame account; I mean the loſs of their dear Relations, the Regenerate and the Unregenerate, I am a Debtor to both, and ſhall endeavour their ſupport and aſſiſtance; for even the Unregenerate call for our help and pity, and muſt not be neglected and wholly ſlighted in their Afflictions. We muſt pity them that cannot pity themſelves. The Law of God commands us to help a Beaſt, if fallen under its Burden; how much more a Man ſinking under a load of Sorrows.

Sed miſerius eſt non miſerante ſe-ipſum.

I confeſs Uſes of Comfort to the Unregenerate are not (ordinarily) in uſe among us, and it may ſeem ſtrange whence any thing of ſupport ſhould be drawn for them, that have no ſpecial Intereſt in Chriſt, or Promiſes.

I confeſs alſo, I find my ſelf under great diſadvantages for this Work, I cannot offer them thoſe reviving Cordials that are contained in Chriſt and the Covenant for God's afflicted People; but yet ſuch is the Goodneſs of God even to his Enemies, that they are not left wholly without ſupports, or means to allay their Sorrows.

If this therefore be thy caſe, who readeſt theſe Lines; afflicted and unſanctified, mourning bitterly for thy dead Friends, and more cauſe to mourn for thy dead Soul, Chriſtleſs and Graceleſs, as well as Childleſs or Friendleſs: No Comfort in Hand, nor yet in Hope, full of Trouble, and without vent by Prayer or Faith to eaſe the Heart.

Poor Creature, thy caſe is ſad, but yet do not wholly ſink, and ſuffer thy ſelf to be ſwallowed up of Grief: Thou haſt laid thy dear one in the Grave, yet throw not thy ſelf head-long into the Grave after him; that will not be the way to remedy thy Miſery: But ſit down a while and ponder theſe three things.

Firſt, That of all Perſons in the World, thou haſt moſt reaſon to be tender over thy Life and Health, and careful to preſerve it; for if thy Troubles deſtroy thee, thou art eternally loſt, undone for ever. Wordly Sorrow, ſaith the Apoſtle, works Death. And if it works thy Death it works thy Damnation alſo; for Hell follows that Pale Horſe, Rev. 6. 8. If a Believer dyes, there's no danger of Hell to him, the ſecond Death hath no power over him; but it is to thee if it overtake thee in thy Sin; before therefore what thou doſt againſt thy Health and Life. Do not put the Candle of Sorrow too near that Thread by which thou hangeſt over the Mouth of Hell.

It is far better to be Childleſs, or Friendleſs on Earth, than hopeleſs and remedileſs in Hell.

Secondly, Own and Admire the Bounty and Kindneſs of God manifeſted to thee in this Affliction; that when Death came into thy Family to ſmite and carry off one, it had not fallen to thy Lot to be the Perſon; thy Husband, Wife or Child is taken, and thou art left; Had thy Name been in the Commiſſion, thou hadſt been now paſt the ſparing Mercy of God! The wonderful long-ſuffering of God towards thee: Poſſibly that Poor Creature that is gone, never provoked God as thou haſt done; thy Poor Child never abuſed Mercies, neglected Calls, treaſured up the thouſandth part of that Guilt thou haſt done: So that thou mighteſt well imagine it ſhould rather have cut thee down that haſt ſo provoked God, than thy poor little one.

But Oh the admirable Patience of God! Oh the Riches of his long-ſuffering! Thou art only warned, not ſmitten by it: Is there nothing in this worth thankful Acknowledgment? Is it not better to be in Black for another on Earth, than in the Blackneſs of Darkneſs for ever? Is it not eaſier to go to the Grave with thy Dead Friend, and weep there, than to go to Hell among the Damned, where there is weeping and wailing and gnaſhing of Teeth?

Thirdly, This Affliction for which thou mournеſt, may be the greateſt Mercy to thee that ever yet befel thee in this World. God hath now made thy Heart ſoft by Trouble, ſhewed thee the Vanity of this World, and what a poor Trifle it is which thou madeſt thy Happineſs: There is now a dark Cloud ſpread over all thy Worldly Comforts. Now, O now! if the Lord would but ſtrike in with this Affliction, and by it open thine Eyes to ſee thy deplorable State, and take off thy Heart for ever from the vain World which thou now ſeeſt hath nothing in it; and cauſe thee to chuſe Chriſt, the only abiding good, for thy Portion. If now thy Affliction may but bring thy Sin to remembrance, and thy dead Friend may but bring thee to a ſenſe of thy dead Soul, which is as cold to God and ſpiritual things, as his Body is to thee; and more loathſome in his Eyes than that Corpſe is, or ſhortly will be to the Eyes of Men: Then this day is certainly a day of the greateſt Mercy that ever yet thou ſaweſt. O happy Death, that ſhall prove Life to thy Soul.

Why this is ſometimes the way of the Lord with Men, Job 36. 8, 9. If they be bound in Fetters, and holden in Cords of Affliction, then he ſheweth them their Work, and their Tranſgreſſion, that they have exceeded: He openeth alſo their Ear to Diſcipline, and commandeth them that they return from Iniquity.

O conſider, poor penſive Creature, that which ſtole away the Heart from God is now gone: That which eat up thy Time and Thoughts, that there was no room for God, Soul or Eternity in them, is gone: All the vain Expectations that thou raiſedſt up to thy ſelf, from that poor Creature which now lyes in the Duſt, are in one day periſhed. O what an Advantage haſt thou now for Heaven, beyond whatever thou yet hadſt! If God will but but bleſs this Rod, thou wilt have cauſe to keep many a Thanſgiving-Day for this Day.

I pray let theſe three things be pondered by you: I can beſtow no more Comforts upon you, your Condition bars the beſt Comforts from you, they belong to the People of God, and you have yet nothing to do with them.

I ſhall therefore turn from you to them, and preſent ſome choicer Comforts to them to whom they properly belong, which may be of great uſe to you in reading, if it be but to convince you of the Bleſſed Privilege and State of the People of God in the greateſt Plunges of Troubles in this World, and what Advantages their Intereſt in Chriſt gives them for Peace and Settlement, beyond that State you are in.

And here I do with much more freedom and hope of Succeſs, apply my ſelf to the Work of counſelling and comforting the Afflicted. You are the fearers of the Lord, and tremble at his Word: The leaſt Sin is more formidable to you than the greateſt Affliction. Doubtleſs you would rather chuſe to bury all your Children than provoke and grieve your Heavenly Father. Your Relations are dear, but Chriſt is dearer to you by far.

Well then, let me perſwade you to retire a while into your Cloſets, redeem a little time from your unprofitable Sorrows, eaſe and empty your Hearts before the Lord, and beg his Bleſſing upon the relieving, quieting and heart-compoſing Conſiderations that follow; ſome of which are more general and common, ſome more particular and ſpecial, but all of them ſuch as, through the Bleſſing of God, may be very uſeful at this time to your Souls.

1. Conſid. Conſider in this day of Sorrow, who is the Framer and Author of this Rod by which you now ſmart, is not the Lord? And if the Lord hath done it, it becomes you meekly to ſubmit, Pſal. 46. 10. Be ſtill, and know that I am God.

Man and Man ſtand upon even Ground, if your Fellow-Creature do any thing that diſpleaſes you, you may not only enquire, Who did it, but Why he did it? You may demand his grounds and reaſons for what he hath done; but you may not do ſo here: It is expected that this one thing, The Lord hath done it, ſhould, without any farther Diſputes or Conteſts, ſilence and quiet you, whatever it be that he hath done, Job 33. 13. Why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? For he giveth not an account to any of his matters. The Supreme Being muſt needs be an unaccountable and uncontroulable Being.

It's a ſhame for a Child to ſtrive with his Father; a ſhame for a Servant to contend with his Maſter; but for a Creature to quarrel and ſtrive with the God that made him, O how ſhameful is it? Surely it is highly reaſonable that you be ſubject to that Will whence you proceeded, and that he who formed you and yours, ſhould diſpoſe of both as ſeemeth him good. It is ſaid, 2 Sam. 3. 36. That whatſoever the King did, pleaſed all the People: And ſhall any thing the Lord doth diſpleaſe you? He can do no wrong. If we pluck a Roſe in the Bud as we walk in our Gardens, who ſhall blame us for it, it is our own, and we may crop it off when we pleaſe: Is not this the ſame caſe? Thy ſweet Bud, which was cropt off before it was fully blown, was cropt off by him that owned it, yea, by him that formed it. If his Dominion be abſolute, ſure his diſpoſal ſhould be acceptable.

It was ſo to good Eli, 1 Sam. 3. 18. It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. And it was ſo to David, Pſal. 39. 9. I was dumb, I opened not my Mouth; becauſe thou didſt it. O let it be for ever remembred, That he whoſe Name alone is Jehova is the moſt high over all the Earth, Pſal. 83. 18.

The glorious Sovereignty of God is illuſtriouſly diſplayed in Two Things, his Decrees and his Providences: With reſpect to the firſt he ſaith, Rom. 9. 15. I will have Mercy on whom I will have Mercy. Here is no ground of diſputing with him, for ſo it is ſaid, verſ. 20. Who art thou, O Man, that replyeſt againſt God? Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter power over the Clay.

And as to his Providences, wherein his Sovereignty is alſo manifeſted. It's ſaid, Zech. 2. 13. Be ſilent, O all Fleſh, before the Lord, for he is raiſed up out of his Habitation. It's ſpoken of his Providential working in the changes of Kingdoms and deſolations that attend them.

Now ſeeing the Caſe ſtands thus, that the Lord hath done it, it is his Pleaſure to have it ſo, and if it had not been his Will it could never have been as it is: He that gave thee (rather lent thee) thy Relation, hath taken him. O how quickly ſhould this Conſideration leave thee! If your Landlord who have many Years ſuffered you to dwell in his Houſe, do at laſt warn you out of it, though he tell you not why, you will not contend with him, or ſay he hath done you any wrong: Much leſs if he tell you it will be more for his Profit and Accommodation to take it into his own hand than let it to you any longer.

Doubtleſs Reaſon will tell you you ought quietly to pack up and quit it. It's your great Landlord, from whom you hold (at pleaſure) your own and your Relations Lives, that hath now warned you out from one of them, it being more for his Glory, it may be, to take it in his own Hand by Death; and muſt you diſpute the Caſe with him?

Come Chriſtian, this no way becomes thee, but rather The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord. Look not from a dead Creature, lift up thine Eyes to the Sovereign, Wiſe and Holy Pleaſure that ordered this Affliction: Conſider who he is, and who thou art; yea, purſue this Conſideration till thou can ſay, I am filled with the Will of God.

2. Conſid. Ponder well the quality of the Comforts you are deprived of, and remember, that when you had it, it ſtood but in the Rank and Order of common and inferior Comforts.

Children, and all other Relations, are but common Bleſſings, which God indifferently beſtows upon his Friends and Enemies, and by the having or loſing of them, no Man knows either Love or Hatred. It is ſaid of the Wicked, Pſal. 17. That they are full of Children, yea, and of Children that do ſurvive them too; for, They leave their Subſtance to the Babes. Full of Sin, yet full of Children, and theſe Children live to inherit their Parents Sins and Eſtates together.

It is the miſtaking of the quality and nature of our Enjoyments, that ſo plunges us into Trouble when we loſe them. We think there is ſuch a neceſſary a connection betwixt theſe Creatures and our Happineſs, that we are utterly undone when they fail us.

But this is our Miſtake, there is no ſuch neceſſary connection or dependance, we may be happy without theſe things. It is not Father, Mother, Wife or Child, in which our chief Good and Felicity lyes, we have higher, better, and more enduring things than theſe, all theſe may periſh, and yet our Soul ſecure and ſafe, yea and full of Comfort in the way, as well as end, may be happy enough though theſe be gone; God hath better things to comfort his People with than theſe, and worſe Rods to afflict you with than the removal of theſe: Had God let your Children live and flouriſh, and given you eaſe and reſt in your Tabernacle, but in the mean time inflicted Spiritual Judgments upon your Souls, how much more had your Caſe been?

But as long as our beſt Mercies are all the things that have Salvation in them not and only the things that have Vanity in them are removed; you are not prejudiced, or much hindred as to the attainment of your laſt End by the loſs of theſe things.

Alas, it was not Chriſt's Intent to purchaſe for you a ſenſual Content in the Enjoyment of theſe Earthly Comforts, but to redeem you from all Iniquity, purge your Corruptions, ſanctify your Natures, wean your Hearts from this vain World, and ſo to diſpoſe and order your preſent Condition, that finding no Reſt and Content here, you might the more ardently pant and ſigh after the Reſt which remains for the People of God. And are you not in as probable a way to attain this end now as you were before? Do you think you are not as likely by theſe Methods of Providence to be weaned from the World, as by more pleaſant and proſperous ones: Every Wiſe Man reckons that Station and Condition to be beſt for him, which moſt promotes and ſecures his laſt End and great Deſign.

Well then, reckon you are as well without theſe things as with them; yea, and better too, if they were but Clogs and Snares upon your Affections, you have really loſt nothing, if the things wherein your eternal Happineſs conſiſteth be yet ſafe. Many of God's deareſt Children have been denyed ſuch Comforts as theſe, and many have been deprived of them, and yet never the farther from Chriſt and Heaven for that.

3. Conſider. Always remember that how ſoon and unexpected ſoever your parting with your Relations was, yet your Leaſe was expired before you loſt them, and you enjoyed them every Moment of the time that God intended them for you.

Before this Relation, whoſe Loſs you lament, was born, the time of your Enjoyment and Separation was unalterably fixed and limitted in Heaven, by the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh: And although it was a Secret to you, whilſt your Friend was with you: Yet now it is a plain and evident thing that this was the time of Separation before appointed; and that the Life of our Friend could by no means be protracted or abreviated, but muſt keep you company juſt ſo far, and then part with you.

This Poſition wants no full and clear Scripture Authority for its Foundation, how pregnant and full is that Text, Job 24. 5, 6. Seeing his Days are determined, the Number of his Months are with thee; thou haſt appointed him his Bounds which he cannot paſs.

The Time of our Life, as well as the Place of our Habitation was prefixed before we were born.

It will greatly conduce to your Settlement and Peace to be well eſtabliſhed in this Truth: That the appointed time was fully come, when you and your dear Relation parted; for it will prevent and ſave a great deal of Trouble which comes from our after Reflections.

O, if this had been done, or that omitted, had not been for ſuch Miſcarriages and Overſights, my dear Husband, Wife or Child, had been alive this day! No, no, the Lord's time was fully come, and all things concurred and fell in together to bring about the Pleaſure of his Will; let that ſatisfy you; had the ableſt Phyſicians in the World been there, or had they that were there, preſcribed another Courſe, as it is now, ſo it would have been when they had done all. Only I muſt be precautioned, that the decree of God no way approves them; but it greatly relieves, againſt all our involuntary and unavoidable overſights, and miſtakes about the uſe of Means, or the timing of them; for it could not be otherwiſe than now it is.

Object. But many things are alledged againſt this Poſition, and that with much ſeeming Countenance from ſuch Scriptures as theſe, Pſal. 54. 25. Blood-thirſty Men ſhall not live out half their days. Eccleſ. 7. 18. Why ſhouldeſt thou dye before thy time. Pſal. 102. 24. O, my God, take me not away in the midſt of my days. Iſa. 28. 10. I am deprived of the reſidue of my Years. And Prov. 10. 27. The Fear of the Lord prolongeth Days, but the Years of the Wicked ſhall be ſhortned. It is demanded, what tolerable Senſe we can give theſe Scriptures, whilſt we inſert an unalterable Fixation of the Term of Death.

Sol. The Senſe of all theſe Scriptures will be cleared up to full Satisfaction, by diſtinguiſhing Death, and the Terms of it.

First we muſt diſtinguiſh Death into Natural and Violent.

The wicked and blood-thirſty Man ſhall not live out half his days; (i. e.) half ſo long as he might live according to the Courſe of Nature, or the Vigor and Soundneſs of his natural Conſtitution: For his Wickedneſs either drowns Nature in an exceſs of Riot or Luxury, or expoſes him to the hand of Juſtice, which cuts him off for his Wickedneſs before he hath accompliſhed half his days.

Again, we muſt diſtinguiſh of the Term or Limit for Death, which is either, General or Special.

The general Limit is now ſeventy or eighty Years, Pſal. 90. 10. The Days of our Years are threeſcore Years and ten, and if by reaſon of Strength they be fourſcore Years, yet is their Strength Labour and Sorrow. To this ſhort Limit the Life of Man is generally reduced ſince the Flood; and though there be ſome few Exceptions, yet the general Rule is not thereby deſtroyed.

The ſpecial Limit is that proportion of Time, which God by his own Counſel and Will hath allotted to every individual Perſon; and it is only known to us by the Event: This we affirm to be a fixed and unmovable Term, with it all things ſhall fall in, and obſerve the Will of God in our diſſolution at that time. But becauſe the general Limit is known, and this ſpecial Limit is a Secret hid in God's own Breaſt; therefore Man reckons by the former Account, and may be ſaid when he dyes at thirty or forty Years old to be cut off in the midſt of his days; for it is ſo, reckoning by the general Account; though he be not cut off till the End of his Days, reckoning by the ſpecial Limit.

Thus he that is wicked dyes before his time; (i. e.) the time he might attain to in an ordinary way: But not before the time God hath appointed. And ſo in all other objected Scriptures.

It is not proper at all in a Subject of this nature ture to digreſs into a Controverſy. Alas, the poor Mourner, overwhelmed with Grief, hath no Pleaſure in that; it is not proper for him at this time; and therefore I ſhall, for the preſent, wave the Controverſy, and wind up this Conſideration with an humble and ſerious Motion to the Afflicted, that they will wiſely conſider the matter. The Lord's time was come: Your Relations lived with you every Moment that God intended them for you before you had them.

O Parents! Mind this I beſeech you; the time of your Child's continuance in the Womb, was fixed to a Minute by the Lord; and when the paturient Fulneſs of that time was come, were you not willing it ſhould be delivered thence into the World? The tender Mother would not have it abide one Minute longer in the Womb, how well ſoever ſhe loved it; and is there not the ſame reaſon we ſhould be willing, when God's appointed time is come to have it delivered by Death out of this State, which in reſpect of the Life of Heaven, is but as the Life of a Child in the Womb, to its Life in the open World.

And let none ſay the Death of Children is a præmature Death. God hath ways to ripen them for Heaven, whom he intends to gather thither betimes, which we know not: In reſpect of fitneſs they dye in a full Age, though they be cut off in the Bud of their time.

He that appointed the Seaſons of the Year, appointed the Seaſons of our Comfort in our Relations: And as thoſe Seaſons cannot be altered, no more can theſe. All the Courſe of Providence is guided by an unalterable Decree; what falls out caſually to our Apprehenſion, yet falls out neceſſarily in reſpect of God's Appointment.

O therefore be quieted in it, this muſt needs be as it is.

4. Conſid. Hath God ſmitten your Darling, and taken away the Delight of your Eyes with this ſtroke? Bear this ſtroke with Patience and quiet Submiſſion: For how know you but your Trouble might have been greater from the Life, than it is from the Death of your Children?

Sad Experience made a Holy Man once to ſay, It's better to weep for ten dead Children, than for one living Child: A living Child may prove a continual drooping, yea, a contiuual dying to the Parent's Heart. What a ſad Word was that of David to Abiſhai, 2 Sam. 16. 11. Behold, ſaith he, my Son which came out of my Bowels ſeeketh my Life. I remember Seneca, in his Conſolatory Epiſtle to his Friend Marullus, brings in his Friend thus aggravating the Death of his Child.

O, ſaith Marullus, had my Child lived with me, to how great Modeſty, Gravity and Prudence might my Diſcipline have formed and moulded him? But, ſaith Senecca, (which is more to be feared) he might have been as others moſtly are; for look, ſaith he, what Children come, even out of the Worthieſt Families; ſuch who exerciſe both their own and others Luſts; in all whoſe Life there is not a day without the Mark of ſome notorious Wickedneſs upon it.

Seneca's Ep. p 84

I know your tender love to your Children will ſcarce admit ſuch Jealouſies of them, they are for the preſent ſweet, lovely, innocent Companions; and you doubt not but by your care of their Education, and Prayer for them, they might have been the Joy of your Hearts.

Why doubtleſs Eſau, when he was little, and in his tender Age, promiſed as much Comfort to his Parents as Jacob did; and I queſtion not not but Iſaac and Rebecca (a gracious Pair) ſpent as many Prayers, and beſtowed as many Holy Counſels upon him as they did upon his Brother: But when the Child grew up to riper Years, then he become a ſharp Affliction to his Parents; for it is ſaid, Gen. 26. 34. That when Eſau was forty Years old he took to Wife Judith the Daughter of Berith the Hittite, which was a Grief of Mind to Iſaac and Rebecca. The Word in the Original comes from a Root that ſignifies to imbitter: This Child imbittered the Minds of his Parents by his Rebellion againſt them, and deſpiſing their Counſels.

And I cannot doubt but Abraham diſciplin'd his Family as ſtrictly as any of you, never Man received a higher Encomium from God upon that Account, Gen. 18. 19. I know him, that he will Command his Children and his Houſhold, after him, and they ſhall keep the way of the Lord. Nor can I think but he beſtowed as many and as frequent Prayers for his Children, and particularly for his Iſhmael, as any of you: We find one, and that a very pathetical one, recorded, Gen. 17. 18. O that Iſhmael might live before thee: And yet you know now he proved, a Son that yielded him no more Comfort than Eſau did to Jacob and Rebecca.

O how much more common is it for Parents to ſee the Vices and Evils of their Children, than their Vertues and Graces? And where one Parent lives to rejoyce in beholding the Graae of God ſhining forth in the Life of his Child, there are twenty, it may be a hundred, that live to behold, to their Vexation and Grief, the workings of Corruptions in them.

It is a Note of Plutarch in his Morals, Nicoles ſaith he, lived not to ſee the noble Victory obtained by Themiſtocles, his Son; nor Melitades to ſee the Battle his Son Cimon won in the Field. Nor Zantippus to hear his Son Pericles Preach, and make Orations. Ariſton never heard his Son Plato's Lectures and Diſputations. But Men, ſaith he, commonly live to ſee their Children fall a Gaming, Revelling, Drinking and Whoring; multitudes live to ſee ſuch things to their Sorrow. And if thou be a gracious Soul, O what a Cut would this be to thy very Heart! to ſee thoſe (as David ſpake of his Abſolom) that came out of thy Bowels to be ſinning againſt God, that God whom thou loveſt, and whoſe Honour is dearer to thee than thy very Life!

Plut. Morali p. 222.

But admit they ſhould prove civil and hopeful Children, yet mighteſt thou not live to ſee more Miſery come upon them than thou couldeſt endure to ſee? O think what a ſad and doleful ſight was that to Zedekiah, Jer. 50. 10. The King of Babylon brought his Children, and ſlew them before his Eyes. Horrid Spectacle; and that leads to the

5. Conſid. How know you but by this ſtroke which you ſo lament, God hath taken them away from the Evil to come?

It is God's uſual way when ſome extraordinary Calamities are coming upon the World, to hide ſome of his weak and tender ones out of the way by Death, Iſa. 57. 1, 2. He leaves ſome and removes others, but taketh care for the Security of all. He provided a Grave for Methuſe- ab before the Flood. The Grave is an hiding place to ſome, and God ſees it better for them o be under Ground, than above Ground in ſuch vil days.

Juſt as a careful and tender Father, who hath Son abroad at School, hearing the Plague is oke out in, or near the Place, ſends his Horſe eſently to fetch home his Son, before the dan- r and difficulty be greater. Death is our Fa- her's Pale Horſe, which he ſends to fetch home s tender Children, and carry them out of harms ay.

Surely when National Calamities are drawing , it is far better for our Friends to be in the rave in Peace, than expoſed to the Miſeries and ſtreſſes that are here, which is the meaning of . 22. 10. Weep not for the Dead, neither bemoan ; but weep for him that goeth away, for he ſhall urn no more, nor ſee his Native Countrey.

And is there not a dreadful ſound of Troubles w in our Ears? Do not the Clouds gather ckneſs? Surely all things round about us ſeem be preparing and diſpoſing themſelves for Af- tion. The days may be nigh in which you ll ſay, Bleſſed is the Womb that never bare, and Paps that never gave ſuck.

It was in the day wherein the Faith and Pa- nce of the Saints were exerciſed, that John ard a Voice from Heaven, ſaying to him, Write, eſſed are the dead which dye in the Lord from ceforth.

Thy Friend by an act of Favour is disbanded by ath, whilſt thou thy ſelf art left to endure a eat fight of Affliction. And now if Troubles me, thy Cares and Fears will be ſo much the leſs, d thy own Death ſo much the eaſier to thee; en ſo much of thee is in Heaven already. In s caſe the Lord, by a merciful Diſpenſation is oviding both for their own Safety, and thy own ier Paſſage to them.

In removing thy Friends before hand, he ſeems ſay to thee as he did to Peter, John 14. 7. at I do thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou t know it. The Eye of Providence hath a Pro- ct far beyond thine; it would be in probabi- a harder Task for thee to leave them behind, n to follow them.

A Tree that is deeply rooted in the Earth, uires many ſtrokes to fell it, but when it's ots are looſed before-hand, then an eaſy ſtroke it down upon the Earth.

. Conſider. A parting time muſt needs come, and is not this as good as another? You knew before- d your Child or Friend was Mortal, and that Thread that linked you together, muſt be cut. If any one, ſaith Baſil, had ask- ed you, when your Child was Born? What is that which is born? What would you have anſwered? Would you not have ſaid it is a Man? And if a Man, then a Mortal vaniſh- ing thing. And why then are you ſurprized with wonder to ſee a dy- thing dead?

o animo e neceſ- quam poſt im tuum u? Sen. 99.

He, ſaith Seneca, who complains that one is dead, complains that he was a Man. All Men are under the ſame condition, to whoſe ſhare it falls to be , to him it remains to dye.

neca's . 804.

We are indeed diſtinguiſhed by the Intervals, equalized in the Iſſue: It is appointed to all once to dye, Heb. 9. 27. There is a Statute- of Heaven in the caſe.

Poſſibly you think this is the worſt time for parting that could be; had you enjoyed it longer, you could have parted eaſier, but how are you deceived in that? The longer you had enjoyed it, the loather ſtill you would have been to leave it: The deeper it would have rooted it ſelf in your Affection.

Had God given you ſuch a Priviledge as was once given to the Engliſh Parliament; that the Union betwixt you and your Friend ſhould not be diſſolved, till you your ſelf were willing it ſhould be diſſolved; when, think you, would you have been willing it ſhould be diſſolved?

It is well for us and ours, that our times are in God's Hand, and not in our own. And how immature ſoever it ſeemed to be when it was cut down; yet it came to the Grave in a full Age, as a ſhock of Corn in its Seaſon, Job 5. 26. They that are in Chriſt, and in the Covenant, never dye unſeaſonably whenſoever they dye (ſaith one upon the Text) They dye in a good old Age; yea, though they dye in the Spring and Car. in Loc Flower of Youth; they dye in a good old Age; i. e. they are ripe for Death whenever they dye. Whenever the Godly dye, it's Harveſt-time with him: Though in a natural Capacity he be cut down while he is green, and cropt in the Bud or Bloſſom; yet in his ſpiritual Capacity he never dyes before he is ripe; God can ripen his ſpeedily, he can let out ſuch warm Rays and Beams of his Spirit upon them, as ſhall ſoon maturate the Seeds of Grace into a preparedneſs for Glory.

It was doubtleſs the moſt fit and ſeaſonable time for them that ever they could dye in, and as it is a fit time for them, ſo for you alſo. Had it lived longer, it might either have engaged you more, and ſo your parting would have been harder; or elſe have puzzled and ſtumbled you more by diſcovering its natural Corruption: And then what a ſtinging Aggravation of your Sorrow would that have been?

Surely the Lord of Time is the beſt Judge of Time; and in nothing do we more diſcover our Folly and Raſhneſs, than in preſuming to fix the Times either of our Comforts or Troubles: As to our Comforts, we never think they can come too ſoon, we would have them preſently, whether the Seaſon be fit or not, as Numb. 12, 13. Heal her now, Lord. O let it be done ſpeedily; we are in poſt-haſte for our Comforts, and for our Afflictions, we never think they come late enough; not at this time, Lord, rather at any other time than now.

But it is good to leave the timing both of the one and the other to him, whoſe Works are all beautiful in their Seaſons, and never doth any thing in an improper time.

7. Conſider. Call to mind in this day of Trouble, the Covenant you have with God, and what you ſolemnly promiſed him in the Day you took him for your God.

It will be very ſeaſonable and uſeful for thee, Chriſtian, at this time to reflect upon theſe Tranſactions, and the Frame of thy Heart in thoſe days, when an heavier load of Sorrow preſt thy Heart, than thou now feeleſt.

In thoſe your ſpiritual Diſtreſſes, when the Burden of Sin lay heavy, the Curſe of the Law, the Fear of Hell, the Dread of Death and Eternity beſet thee on every ſide, and ſhut thee up to Chriſt, the only Door of Hope: Ah what good News wouldeſt thou then have accounted it, to escape that danger with the loss of all earthly Comforts!

Was not this thy cry in those days? 'Lord 'give me Christ, and deny me whatever else thou 'pleasest. Pardon my Sin, save my Soul, and in 'order to both, unite me with Christ, and I will 'never repine or open my Mouth. Do what 'thou wilt with me; let me be Friendless, let 'me be Childless, let me be Poor, let me be 'any thing rather than a Christless, Graceless, 'Hopeless Soul.

And when the Lord hearkened to thy cry, and shewed thee Mercy; when he drew thee off from the World into thy Closet, and there treated with thee in secret, when he was working up thy Heart to the Terms of his Covenant, and made thee willing to accept Christ upon his own Terms: O then how heartily didst thou submit to his Yoke, as most reasonable and easy, as at that time it seemed to thee?

Call to mind these Days, the secret Places where Christ and you made the Bargain. Have not these Words, or Words to this sense, been whispered by thee into his Ear with a dropping Eye, and melting Heart?

'Lord Jesus, here am I, a poor guilty Sinner, 'deeply laden with Sin; Fear and Trouble upon 'one hand, and there is a just God, a severe 'Law, and everlasting Burnings on the other 'hand; but blessed be God, O blessed be God for 'Jesus the Mediator, who interposeth betwixt 'me and it. Thou art the only Door of Hope 'at which I can escape, thy Blood the only 'means of my Pardon and Salvation. Thou hast 'said, Come unto me all ye that Labour and are 'heavy laden. Thou hast promised that he that 'cometh to thee shall in no wise be cast out.

'Blessed Jesus, thy poor Creature cometh to 'thee upon these Encouragements: I come, O 'but it is with many staggerings, with many 'Doubts and Fears of the Issue; yet I am willing to come and make a Covenant with thee 'this day.

'I take thee this day to be my Lord, and submit heartily to all thy Disposals: Do what thou 'wilt with me or mine: Let me be Rich or 'Poor, any thing or nothing in this World: I 'am willing to be as thou wouldst have me; and 'I do likewise give my self to thee this day to 'be thine; all I am, all I have shall be thine, 'thine to serve thee, and thine to be disposed 'at thy Pleasure. Thou shalt henceforth be 'my highest Lord, my chiefest Good, my last 'End.

Now, Christian, make good to Christ what thou so solemnly promisedst him. He, I say, he hath disposed of this thy dear Relation as pleased him; and is thereby trying thy uprightness in the Covenant which thou madest with him: Now where is the Satisfaction and Content thou promisedst to take in all his disposals? Where is that Covenanted Submission to his Will? Didst thou accept this Affliction that is come upon thee?

Didst thou tell him, Lord, I will be content thou shalt, when thou pleasest, take any thing I have, save only this Husband, this Wife, or this dear Child, I reserve this out of the Bargain? I shall never endure thou shouldest kill this Comfort? If so, thou didst in all this but prove thy self an Hypocrite: If thou wast sincere in thy Covenant, as Christ had no reserves on his part, so thou hadst none on thine.

It was all without any exception thou then s signedst to him, and now wilt thou go back fr thy Word, as one that had out-promised himse and repents the Bargain? Or, at least, as one th hath forgotten these solemn Transactions in t days of thy Distress? Wherein hath Christ fai in one tittle that he promised thee? Charge hi if thou canst, with the least Unfaithfulness:
hath been faithful to a tittle on his part, O thou so upon thine; this day it's put to the Pro remember what thou hast promised him.

8. Consider. But if thy Covenant with God not quiet thee, yet methinks God's Covenant with might be presumed to do it.

Is thy Family, which was lately hopeful a flourishing, a peaceful Tabernacle, now broken and scattered? Thy Posterity, from which th raisedst up to thy self great expectations of Co fort in thy old Age, cut off? So that thou now like neither to have a Name or Memor left thee in the Earth.

Dost thou sit alone, and mourn to think whith to thy Hopes and Comforts are now come?

Dost read over those Words of Job, Chap.
1, 2, 3, 4, 5. and comment upon them with ma
Tears, O that I were as in Months past, as in day when God preserved me! When his Candle shi upon my Head, and when by his Light I wal through Darkness! As I was in the days of my Yo when the secret of God was upon my Tabernacle, w the Almighty was yet with me, when my Child were about me.

Yet let the Covenant God hath made with th comfort thee in this thy desolate condition.

You know what domestick Troubles holy Da met with in a sad Succession, not only from Death of Children, but which was much wo from the Wicked Lives of his Children. Th was Incest, Murder and Rebellion in his Fami
a far sorer Tryal than Death in their Infa could have been: And yet see how sweetly relieves himself from the Covenant of Grace,
2 Sam. 23. 5. *Although my House be not so w
God, yet he hath made with me an everlasting venant, ordered in all things and sure; for thi all my Salvation, and all my Desire, although he m it not to grow.*

I know this place principally refers to Chr who was to spring out of David's Family acco ing to God's Covenant made with him in th behalf; and yet I doubt not but it hath anoth though less principal Aspect upon his own F mily, over all the Afflictions and Troubles whe of the Covenant of God with him did abundan comfort him.

And as it comforted him, although his Ho did not increase, and those that were left w not such as he desired; so it may abundantly co fort you also, whatever Troubles or Deaths upon your Families, who have an Interest in t Covenant. For,

First, If you be God's Covenant People, thou he may afflict, yet he will never forget you, Ps
3. 5. He is ever mindful of his Covenant. Y are as much upon his Heart in your deep Afflictions, as in the greatest Flourish of your P sperity.

You find it a hard matter to forget yo Child, though it be now turned to an he of Corruption, and loathsome Rottenness; how doth your mind run upon it. Night and Da your Thoughts tire not upon that Object: Wh surc

ſurely it's much more eaſie for you to forget your dear Child whilſt living and moſt endearing, (much more when dead and undefireable) than it is for your God to forget you, Iſa 49. 15. Can a Woman forget her ſucking Child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion upon the Son of her Womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will not I forget thee.

Can a Woman, the more affectionate Sex, forget her Sucking Child; her own Child, and not a nurſing Child: Her own Child, whilſt it hangs on the Breaſt, and together with the Milk from the Breaſt, draws love from its Mothers Heart: Can ſuch a thing as this be in Nature? Poſſibly it may; for Creature-Love is fickle and variable: But I will not forget thee; it's an Everlaſting Covenant.

Secondly. As he will never forget you in your Troubles; ſo he will order all your Troubles for your good; its a well-ordered Covenant, or a Covenant orderly diſpoſed: So that every thing ſhall work together for your good.

The Covenant ſo orders all your Trials, ranks and diſpoſes your various Troubles ſo, as that they ſhall in their orders and places ſweetly co-operate, and join their united influences to make you happy.

Poſſibly you cannot ſee how the preſent Affliction ſhould be for your good, you are ready to ſay with Jacob, Gen. 42. 36. Joſeph is not, and Simeon is not; and ye will take Benjamin away; all theſe things are againſt me. But could you once ſee how ſweetly and orderly all theſe Afflictions work under the Bleſſing and Influence of the Covenant to your Eternal Good; you would not only be quiet, but thankful for that which now ſo much afflicts and troubles you.

Thirdly. This Covenant is not only well ordered in all things, but ſure, the Mercies contained in it are called the ſure Mercies of David, Iſa. 55. 3. Now how ſweet, how ſeaſonable a ſupport doth this Conſideration give to God's afflicted under the Rod! You lately made your ſelves ſure of that Creature-Comfort which hath forſaken you. It may be you ſaid of your Child which is now gone, as Lamech ſaid of his Son Noah, Gen. 5. 29. This ſame ſhall comfort us concerning our work, and toil of our Hands. Meaning that his Son ſhould not only comfort them by aſſiſting them in the work of their Hands, but for enjoying the fruit of their toil and pains for him.

Probably ſuch Thoughts you have had, and raiſed up to your ſelves great Expectations of Comfort in your old age from it; but now you ſee you built upon the Sand; and where were you now, if you had not a firmer bottom to build upon? But bleſſed be God, the Covenant-Mercies are more ſure and ſolid; God, Chriſt, and Heaven, never ſtart or fade as theſe things do.

The ſweeteſt Creature-Enjoyments you ever had or have in this World, cannot ſay to you as your God doth, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee. You muſt part with your dear Husbands, how well ſoever you love them; you muſt bid adieu to the Wife of your Boſom, how nearly ſoever your affections be linked, and Heart delighted in her. Your Children and you muſt be ſeparated, though they be to you as your own Soul.

But though theſe vaniſh away, bleſſed be God there is ſomething that abides. Though all Fleſh be Graſs, and the Goodlineſs of it as the Flower of the Graſs, though the Graſs withereth, and the flower thereof fadeth, becauſe the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; yet the Word of our God ſhall ſtand for ever. Iſa. 40. 6, 7, 8. There is ſo much of Support contained in this one Conſideration, that could but your Faith fix here, to realize and apply it, I might lay down my Pen at this Period, and ſay, the Work is done, there needs no more.

9. Conſid. The hope of the Reſurrection ſhould powerfully reſtrain all exceſſes of Sorrow in thoſe that do profeſs it.

Let them only mourn without meaſure, who mourn without Hope. The Husbandman doth not mourn when he caſts his Seed-corn into the Earth, becauſe he ſows in hope; commits it to the ground with an expectation to receive it again with improvement. Why thus ſtands the caſe here, and juſt ſo the Apoſtle ſtates it, 1 Theſ. 4. 13, 14. But I would not have you to be ignorant, Brethren, concerning them which are aſleep, that ye ſorrow not even as others that have no hope; for if we believe that Jeſus died and roſe again, even ſo them alſo which ſleep in Jeſus will God bring with him.

Q. D. Look not upon the Dead as a loſt Generation: Think not that Death hath annihilated and utterly deſtroyed them. O no, they are not dead, but only aſleep, and if they ſleep, they ſhall awake again. You don't uſe to make out cries and lamentations for your Children and Friends when you find them aſleep upon their Beds. Why, Death is but a longer ſleep, out of which they ſhall as ſurely awake as ever they did in the Morning in this World.

I have often wondred at that golden Sentence in Seneca, My Thoughts of the Dead (ſaith he) are not as others are; I have fair and pleaſant Apprehenſions of them, for I enjoyed them as one that reckoned I muſt part with them; and I part with them as one that makes account to have them.

Habui enim illos tanquam amiſſurus, amiſi tanquam habe. Seneca Ep. 63.

He ſpeaks, no doubt, of that enjoyment of them, which his pleaſant Contemplations of their Vertuous Actions could give him; for he was wholly unacquainted with the comfortable and Heart-ſupporting Doctrine of the Reſurrection. Had he known the Advantages which reſult thence, at what a rate may we think he would have ſpoken of the Dead and of their State? But this you profeſs to believe, and yet ſink at a ſtrange rate. O ſuffer not Gentiliſm to outvie Chriſtianity; Let not Pagans challenge the greateſt Believers, to out-do them in a quiet and cheerful Behaviour under Afflictions.

I beſeech thee, Reader, if thy deceaſed Friend have left thee any ſolid ground of hope that he died intereſted in Chriſt, and the Covenant; that thou wilt diſtinctly ponder theſe admirable ſupports which the Doctrine of the Reſurrection affords.

Firſt. That the ſame Body which was ſo pleaſant a Spectacle to thee ſhall be reſtored again; yea, the ſame numerically, as well as the ſame ſpecifically: So that it ſhall not only be what it was, but the who it was. Theſe Eyes ſhall behold him, and not another, Job 19. 27, &c. The very ſame Body you laid, or are now about to lay in the Grave, ſhall be reſtored again: Thou ſhalt find thy own Husband, Wife, or Child, or Friend again: I ſay the ſelf-ſame, and not another.

Secondly, And farther, this is ſupporting, that as you ſhall ſee the ſame Perſon that was ſo dear to you: So you ſhall know them to be the ſame that were once endeared to you on Earth in ſo near a tye of Relation.

Indeed you ſhall know them no more in any carnal Relation, Death diſſolved that Bond: But you ſhall know them to be ſuch as once were your dear Relations in this World, and be able to ſingle them out among that great Multitude, and ſay, This was my Father, Mother, Husband, Wife, or Child. This was the Perſon for whom I wept and made Supplication, who was an Inſtrument of good to me, or to whoſe Salvation God then made me Inſtrumental.

For we may allow in that State, all that knowledge which is cumulative and perfective, whatſoever may enlarge and heighten our Felicity and Satisfaction, as this muſt needs be allowed to do. Luther's Judgment in this Point being asked by his Friends at Supper the Evening before he died, replied thus, What (ſaid he) befell Adam? He never ſaw Eve, but was in a deep Sleep when God formed her; yet when he awaked and ſaw her, he asked not what ſhe was, nor whence ſhe came? But ſaith ſhe was Fleſh of his Fleſh, and Bone of his Bone. Now how knew he that? He being full of the Holy Ghoſt, and endued with the knowledge of God, ſpake thus. After the ſame manner we alſo ſhall be in the other Life renewed by Chriſt, and ſhall know our Parents, our Wives and Children.

Melchion Adam in vita Luth.

And this among other things was that with which Auguſtine comforted the Lady Italica after the death of her dear Husband, telling her that ſhe ſhould know him in the World to come among the glorified Saints. Yea, and a greater than either of theſe, I mean Paul, comforted himſelf that the Theſſalonians whom he had converted to Chriſt ſhould be His Joy and Crown of rejoicing in the Preſence of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt at his coming, 1 Theſ. 2. 19, 20. which muſt needs imply his diſtinct knowledge of them in that Day, which muſt be many hundred Years after Death hath ſeparated them from each other. Whether this knowledge ſhall be by the glorified Eyes diſcerning any lineaments or property of Individuation remaining upon the glorified Bodies of our Relations? Or whether it ſhall be by immediate Revelation as Adam knew his Wife; or as Peter, James, and John, knew Moſes, and Elias in the Mount, as it is difficult to determine, ſo it is needleſs to puzzle our ſelves about it.

Aug. Ep. 6.

It is the concurrent Judgment of ſound Divines, and it wants not Countenance from Scripture and Reaſon, that ſuch a knowledge of them ſhall be in Heaven: and then the ſadneſs of this parting, will be abundantly recompenced by the joy of that meeting. Eſpecially conſidering,

Thirdly, that at our next meeting, they ſhall be unſpeakably more deſirable, ſweet, and excellent than ever they were in this World. They had a deſireableneſs in them here, but they were not altogether lovely, and in every reſpect deſirable; they had their Infirmities both natural and moral; but all theſe are removed in Heaven, and for ever done away. No natural infirmities hang about glorified Bodies; or ſinful ones upon perfected Spirits of the Juſt. O what lovely Creatures will they appear to you then, when that which is ſown now in diſhonour ſhall be raiſed in honour! 1 Cor. 15. And then to Crown all,

Fourthly, You ſhall have an Everlaſting Enjoyment of them in Heaven, never to part again. The Children of the Reſurrection can die no more. Luke 20. 36. You ſhall kiſs their pale Lips, and cold Cheeks no more; you ſhall never fear another parting pull, but be together with the Lord for Ever. 1 Theſ. 4. 14. And this the Apoſtle thought an effectual Cordial in this caſe, when he exhorted the Theſſalonians to comfort one another with theſe Words.

10. Conſid. The preſent Felicity into which all that die in Chriſt are preſently admitted; ſhould abundantly comfort Chriſtians over the death of ſuch as either carried a lively hope out of the World with them, or have left good grounds of ſuch an hope behind them.

Some there are that carried a lively hope to Heaven with them, who could evidence to themſelves and Friends their Intereſt in Chriſt and in the Covenant. Yea, though they had died in ſilence, yet their converſations would ſpeak for them, and the tenour of their Lives leave no ground of doubting touching their Death: Others dying in their Infancy and Youth, though they carried not ſuch an actual hope with them, yet they have left good grounds of hope behind them.

Parents, now ponder theſe grounds; you have prayed for them, you have many times wreſtled with the Lord on their behalf; you have taken hold of God's Covenant for them, as well as for your ſelves, and dedicated them to the Lord; and they have not by any Actions of theirs deſtroyed thoſe grounds of hope, but that you may with much probability conclude they are with God.

Why, if the caſe be ſo, what abundant reaſon have you to be quiet and well ſatisfied with what God hath done? Can they be better than where they are? Had you better Proviſions and Entertainments for them here, than their Heavenly Father hath above?

There is no Chriſtian Parent in the World but would rejoice to ſee his Child out-ſtrip and get before him in Grace, that he may be more eminent in Parts and Service than ever he was: And what reaſon can be given why we ſhould not as much rejoice to ſee our Children get before us in Glory as in Grace? They are gotten to Heaven a few Years before you, and is that matter of Mourning? Would not your Child (if he were not ignorant of you) ſay as Chriſt did to his Friends a little before his death, when he ſaw them caſt down at the thoughts of parting, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me ye would rejoice, becauſe I go unto the Father. q. d. Do you value your own ſenſible comfort from my Bodily Preſence with you, before my Glory and advancement in Heaven? Is this the Love to me? Or is it not rather ſelf-love?

'So would your departed Friend ſay to you: You 'have profeſſed much Love all along to me, my 'Happineſs ſeemed to be very dear to you? How 'comes it to paſs then that you mourn ſo exceeding-'ly now? This is rather the effect of a fond and 'fleſhly, than of a Rational and Spiritual Love, if 'you lov'd me with a pure Spiritual Love, ye 'would rejoice that I am gone to my Father. It's 'infinitely better for me to be here, than with you 'on Earth, under Sin and Sorrow. Weep not for 'me, but for your ſelves.

Alas, though you want your Friend's Company, he wants not yours: Your care was to provide for this Child, but Jeſus Chriſt hath provided infinitely better for it than you could; you intended an Eſtate, but he a Kingdom for it: You thought upon ſuch or ſuch a Match, but Chriſt hath forbid all others, and married your Child to himſelf. Would you imagine a higher Preferment for the Fruit of your Bodies.

A King from Heaven hath ſent for your Friend, and do you grudge at the Journey? O think, and think think again, what an Honour is it to you, that Christ hath taken them out of your Bosom, and laid them in his own: stript them out of those Garments you provided, and cloathed them in White Robes washed in the Blood of the Lamb. Let not your Hearts be troubled, rather rejoice exceedingly that God made you Instruments to replenish Heaven, and bring forth an Heir for the Kingdom of God.

Your Child is now glorifying God in a higher way than you can; and what though you have lost its Bodily Presence for a time? yet, I hope, you don't reckon that to be your loss, which turns to God's greater Glory.

When Jacob heard his Joseph was Lord of Egypt, he rather wisht himself with Joseph, than his Joseph with him in wants and streights: So should it be with you. You are yet rolling and tossing upon a tempestuous Sea, but your Friend is gone into the quiet Harbour; desire rather to be there, than that he were at Sea with you again.

11. Consid. Consider how vain a thing all your Troubles and self-vexation is: It no way betters your case, nor eases your Burthen.

As a Bullock by wrestling and sweating in the Furrow, makes his Yoke to be more heavy, and galls his Neck, and spends his Strength the sooner, and no ways helps himself by that. Why thus stands the case with thee, if thou be as a Bullock unaccustomed to the Yoke: What Christ saith of caring, we may say of grieving, (Mat. 6. 27.) Which of you by taking thought can add one Cubit to his Stature.

Cares may break our sleep, yea, break our Hearts: But they cannot add to our stature either in a natural, or in a civil Notion: So your Sorrowing may sooner break your Hearts, than the Yoke God hath laid on you.

Alas, what is all this, but as the fluttering of a Bird in the Net, which instead of freeing, doth but the more entangle it self? It was therefore a wise Resolve of David in this very case, when the Will of God was signified in the Death of his Child, 2 Sam. 12. 23. But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me.

Can I bring him back again? No, I can no more alter the purpose and work of God, than I can change the Seasons of the Year, or alter the Course of Sun, Moon and Stars, or disturb the order of the Day and Night; which are all unalterably established by a firm Constitution and Ordinance of Heaven.

As these Seasons cannot be changed by Man, so neither can this course and way of his Providences be changed, Job 23. 13. He is of one Mind, and who can turn him? And what his Soul desireth, even that he doeth. Indeed while his Pleasure and Purpose are unknown to us, there is room for Fasting and Prayer to prevent the thing we fear: But when the Purpose of God is manifested in the Issue, and the stroke is given, then it is the vainest thing in the World to fret and vex our selves, as David's Servants thought he would do, as soon as he should hear the Child was dead, but he was wiser than so, his Tears and Cries to God before, had the nature and use of means to prevent the Affliction; but when it was come, and could not be prevented, then they were of no use, to no purpose in the World: Wherefore should I fast; q. d. To what end, use, or purpose will it be now?

Well then cast not away your Strength and Spirits to no advantage, reserve them for future Exercises and Tryals. Time may come that you may need all the strength you have, and much more, to support greater Burthens than this.

12. Consid. The Lord is able to restore all your lost Comforts in Relations, double to you, if you meekly submit to him, and patiently wait upon him under the Rod.

When Esau had lost his Blessing, he said, Hast thou but one Blessing, my Father? Gen. 27. 38. But your Father hath more Blessings for you than one; his Name is The Father of Mercies, 2 Cor. 13. He can beget and create as many Mercies for you as he pleaseth; Relations, and the Comforts of them are at his Command.

It is but a few Months or Years past, and these Comforts whose Loss you now lament were not in being; nor did you know whence they should arise to you, yet the Lord gave the Word, and commanded them for you: and if he please he can make the death of these but like a Scythe to the Meadow that is mown down, or a Razor to the Head that is shaved bare; which tho' it lay you under the present trouble and reproach of Barrenness, yet doth but make way for a double Increase, a second Spring with advantage.

So that as it was with the Captive Church in respect of her special Children in the day of her Captivity and Reproach, the Lord made up all with Advantage to her, even to her own Astonishment, Isa. 49. 20. The Children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, the place is too streight for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

Thus may he deal with you, as to your natural Children and Relations: So that what the Man of God said to Amaziah, 1 Chron. 25. 9. may be applied to the case in hand, Amaziah said to the Man of God, but what shall we do for the hundred Talents? And the Man of God answered, the Lord is able to give thee much more than this.

O say not, what I shall do for Friends and Relations? Death hath robbed me of all Comfort in them. Why, the Lord is able to give you much more. But then as ever you expect to see your future Blessings multiplied, look to it, and be careful that you neither dishonour God, nor grieve him, by your unsubmissive and impatient Carriage under the present Rod.

God took away all Job's Children, and that at one stroke, and the stroke immediate and extraordinary: And that when they were grown up, and planted (at least some of them) in distinct Families; yea, whilst they were endearing each other by mutual Expressions of Affection. This must be yielded to be an extraordinary Tryal; yet he meekly receives, and patiently bears it from the Hand of the Lord.

You have heard of the Patience of Job, (saith the Apostle, Jam. 5. 11.) and seen the End of the Lord. Not only the gracious end or intention of the Lord in all his Afflictions, but the happy End and Issue the Lord gave to all his Afflictions, of which you have the account, Job 42. 10. The Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before. The number of his Children was not double to what he had, as all his other Comforts were: But though the Lord only restored the same number to him again that he took away yet it's like the Comfort he had in these latter Children was double to what he had in the former. There's nothing lost by waiting patiently, and submitting willingly to the Lord's dispose.

It is as easy with the Lord to revive, as it is to remove your Comforts in Relations. There is a sweet Expression to this purpose in Psal. 81. 28. For thou Lord wilt Light my Candle, the Lord my God will enlighten my Darkness.

Every comfortable Enjoyment, whether it be in Relations, Eſtate, Health, or Friends, is a Candle lighted by Providence for our Comfort in this World, and they are but Candles, which will not always laſt, and thoſe that laſt longeſt will be conſumed and waſted at laſt; but oftentimes it falls out with them as with Candles, they are blown out before they are half conſumed; yea, almoſt as ſoon as lighted up, and then we are in darkneſs for the preſent.

It's a dark Hour with us when theſe Comforts are put out: but David's Faith did, and ours may comfort us with this, That he that blew out the Candle, can light up another. Thou Lord ſhalt light my Candle, the Lord my God ſhall enlighten my Darkneſs, that is, the Lord will renew my Comforts, alter the preſent ſad Eſtate I am in, and chaſe away that trouble and darkneſs which at preſent lies upon me. Only beware of offending him at whoſe beck your Lights and Comforts come and go. Michal diſpleaſed the Lord and therefore had no Child unto the day of her Death. 2 Sam. 6. 23.

Hannah waited humbly upon the Lord for the Bleſſing of Children, and the Lord remembred her, he enlightned her Condition with that Comfort when ſhe was as a Lamp deſpiſed. There is no Comfort you have loſt, but God can reſtore it, yea, double it in kind, if he ſee it convenient for you. And if not then,

13. Conſid. Conſider, Though he ſhould deny you any more Comforts of that kind, yet he hath far better to beſtow upon you, ſuch as theſe deſerve not to be named with.

You have an excellent Scripture to this purpoſe in Iſa. 56. 4, 5. For thus ſaith the Lord unto the Eunuchs that keep my Sabbaths; and chuſe the things that pleaſe me, and take hold of my Covenant; even to them will I give in my Houſes, and within my Walls a place and a name better than of Sons and of Daughters: I will give them an Everlaſting Name that ſhall not be cut off.

Vide Engliſh Annotation in Loc.

Mens Names are ſaid to be continued in their Iſſue, in their Male Iſſue eſpecially, and conſequently to fail in ſuch as wanted Iſſue, Numb. 17. 4. And a numerous Iſſue is deemed no ſmall Honour, Pſal. 127. 4, 5. God therefore promiſed here to ſupply and make good the want of Iſſue, and of whatſoever either Honour here, or Memorial hereafter might from it have accrued to them, but beſtowing upon them matter of far greater honour, and more durable; a Name better or before the Name of Sons or Daughters.

Its a greater honour to be the Child of God, than to have the greateſt Honour or Comfort that ever Children afforded their Parents in this World.

Poor Heart, thou art not dejected by this Affliction that lies upon thee, as if all Joy and Comfort were now cut off from thee in this World.

A Cloud dwells upon all other Comforts, this Affliction hath ſo imbittered thy Soul, that thou taſteſt no more in any other earthly Comforts, than in the White of an Egg. O that thou didſt but conſider the Conſolations that are with God for ſuch as anſwer his ends in Affliction, and patiently wait on him for their Comfort! He hath Comforts for you far tranſcending the Joy of Children.

This ſome have found when their Children have been cut off from them, and that in ſo eminent a Degree; that they have little valued their Comfort in Children in compariſon with this Comfort.

I will therefore ſet down a pregnant Inſtance of the point in hand, as I find it recorded by the grave and worthy Author of that Excellent Book Entituled, The fulfilling of the Scripture. Fulfilling of the Scripture, pag. 491.

'Another notable Inſtance of Grace 'with a very remarkable Paſſage in his Condition, 'I ſhall here mention. One Patrick Mackewrath, 'who lived in the Weſt Parts of Scotland, whoſe 'heart, in a remarkable way, the Lord touched, and after his Converſion (as he ſhewed to many Chriſtian 'Friends) was in ſuch a frame ſo affected with a new 'World, wherein he was entred, the Diſcoveries of 'God, and of a life to come; that for ſome Months 'together he did ſeldom ſleep, but was ſtill taken 'up in wondring. His life was very remarkable for 'tenderneſs, and near Converſe with God in his 'walk; and which was worthy to be noticed, one day 'after a ſharp Tryal, having his only Son ſuddenly 'taken away by Death, he retired alone for ſeveral 'hours, and when he came forth did look ſo chear-'fully, that to thoſe who asked him the reaſon there-'of, and wondred at the ſame in ſuch a time; he told 'them, He had got that in his retirement with the 'Lord, that to have it afterwards renewed, he would 'be content to loſe a Son every Day.

Oh what a ſweet exchange had he made! Surely he had Gold for Braſs, a Pearl for a Pebble; a Treaſure for a Trifle; for ſo great, yea, and far greater is the diſproportion betwixt the ſweet light of God's Countenance, and the faint dim light of the beſt Creature-enjoyment.

Would it pleaſe the Lord to make this Sun ariſe and ſhine upon you; now when the Stars that ſhined with a dim and borrowed light are gone down, you would ſee ſuch gain by the exchange, as would quickly make you caſt in your Votes with him we now mentioned, and ſay, Lord, let every day be ſuch as this funeral day, let all my hours be as this, ſo that I may ſee and taſte what I now do. How gladly would I part with the deareſt and neareſt Creature-comfort I own in this World.

The gracious and tender Lord hath his divine Cordials reſerved on purpoſe for ſuch ſad Hours: theſe are ſometimes given before ſome ſharp trial, to prepare for it, and ſometimes after, to ſupport under it.

I have often heard it from the Mouth, and found it in the Diary of a ſweet Chriſtian now with God, That a little before the Lord removed her dear Husband by death, there was ſuch an abundant outlet of the love of God unto her Soul, for ſeveral Days and Nights following; that when the Lord took away her Husband by Death, though he were a gracious and ſweet tempered (and by her moſt tenderly beloved) Husband; ſhe was ſcarce ſenſible of the Stroke, but carried quite above all Earthly things their comforts and their troubles; So that ſhe had almoſt loſt the thoughts of her dear Husband in God. And had not the Lord taken this courſe with her, ſhe concluded that blow had not been poſſible to be born by her, ſhe muſt have ſunk without ſuch a preparative.

A Husband, a Wife, a Child, are great, very great things, as they ſtand by other Creatures, but ſurely they will ſeem little things, and next to nothing, when the Lord ſhall ſet himſelf by them before the ſoul.

And how know you, but God hath bid theſe Earthly Comforts ſtand aſide this day, to make way for Heavenly ones; It may be God is coming to communicate himſelf more ſweetly, more ſenſibly than ever to your Souls; and theſe are the Providences which muſt caſt up and prepare the way of

Lo

Lord. Poſſibly Gods meaning in their Death is but this; Child, ſtand aſide, thou art in my way, and filleſt my place in thy Parents Heart.

14. Conſid. Be careful you exceed not in your grief for the loſs of earthly things, conſidering that Satan takes the advantage of all extreams.

You cannot touch any extream, but you will be touched by that Enemy; whoſe greateſt advantages lye in aſſaulting you here.

Satan is called the Ruler of the darkneſs of this World, Eph. 6. 12. (i.e.) his Kingdom is ſupported by darkneſs. Now there is a twofold darkneſs, which gives Satan great advantage: the darkneſs of the mind, viz. Ignorance, and the darkneſs of the condition, viz. Trouble and Affliction. Of the former the Apoſtle ſpeaks chiefly in that Text: but the latter alſo is by him often improved, to carry on his deſigns upon us. When it's a dark hour of trouble with us, then is his fitteſt ſeaſon to Tempt.

That cowardly Spirit falls upon the People of God when they are down, and low in Spirit as well as State. Satan would never have deſired that the hand of God ſhould have been ſtretched out upon Job's Perſon, Eſtate, and Children; but that he promiſed himſelf a notable advantage therein, to poyſon his Spirit with vile thoughts of God. Do this (ſaith he) and he will curſe thee to thy Face.

What the Pſalmiſt obſerves of Natural, is as true of Metaphorical Darkneſs, Pſal. 104. 20. Thou makeſt darkneſs, and it is night, wherein all the beaſts of the foreſt do creep forth, the young Lions roar after their prey.

When it is dark night with Men, it's noonday with Satan; (i.e.) our ſuffering time is his buſieſt working time, many a diſmal ſuggeſtion he then plants and grafts upon our affliction, which are much more dangerous to us than the affliction it ſelf.

Sometimes he injects deſponding thoughts into the afflicted Soul, Then ſaid I, I am cut off from before thine eyes, Pſal. 31. 22. and Lam. 3. 18, 19. My hope is periſhed from the Lord, remembring my affliction and my miſery, the wormwood and the gall.

Sometimes he ſuggeſts hard thoughts of God, Ruth 1. 20. The Lord hath dealt very bitterly with me. Yea, that he hath dealt more ſeverely with us than any other, Lam. 1. 11. See and behold if there be any ſorrow like unto my Sorrow which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce Anger.

And ſometimes murmuring and repining thoughts gainſt the Lord; the Soul is diſpleaſed at the hand f God upon it. Jonah was angry at the hand of od, and ſaid, I do well to be angry even unto death, onah 4. 9. What diſmal thoughts are theſe? And ow much more afflictive to a gracious Soul than the ſs of any outward Enjoyment in this World?

And ſometimes very Irreligious and Atheiſtical oughts, as if there were no priviledge to be had Religion, and all our pains, zeal and care out Duty were little better than loſt labour, al. 73. 13, 14. Verily I have cleanſed my heart in in, and waſhed my hands in Innocency, for all the long I have been plagued; and chaſtened every rning.

By theſe things Satan gets no ſmall advantage n the afflicted Chriſtian; for albeit theſe thoughts his burthen, and God will not impute them to condemnation of his People; yet they rob the l of Peace, and hinder it from Duty, and make t uncomely under affliction, to the ſtumbling hardening of others in their Sin; beware therefore leſt by your exceſſes of Sorrow ye give place to the Devil: we are not Ignorant of his devices.

15. Conſid. Give no way to exceſſive ſorrows upon the account of affliction, if ye have any regard to the Honour of God and Religion, which will hereby be expoſed to reproach.

If you ſlight your own Honour, don't ſlight the Honour of God and Religion too. Take heed how you carry it in a day of Trouble, many eyes are upon you. It is a true obſervation that a late worthy Author hath made upon this caſe: What will the Atheiſt, and what will the prophane ſcoffer ſay when they ſhall ſee this? So ſottiſh and malicious they are, that if they do but ſee you in affliction, they are ſtraitway ſcornfully demanding, Where is your God?

M. M. his Appendix to Salmon's preſcription. p. 122.

But what will they ſay, if they ſhould hear you your ſelves unbelievingly cry out; Where is our God? Will they not be ready to cry; This is the Religion they make ſuch boaſt of, which you ſee how little it does for them in a day of extremity: they talk of promiſes, rich and precious promiſes; But where are they now? Or to what purpoſe do they ſerve? They ſaid they had a treaſure in heaven; What ails them to mourn ſo then if their Riches be there?

O beware what you do before the World; they have eyes to ſee what you can do, as well as ears to hear what you can ſay. And as long as your cariage under troubles is ſo much like their own, they will never think your Principles are better than theirs. Carnal Worldlings will be drawn to think that whatever fine talk you might have about God, and Heaven, your Hearts were moſt upon the ſame things that theirs were, ſince your grief for their removal is as great as theirs.

They know by experience what a ſtay it is to the Heart to have an able, faithful Friend to depend upon, or to have hopes of a great Eſtate ſhortly to fall to them; and they'll never be perſwaded you have any ſuch ground of comfort, if they ſee you as much caſt down as they, that pretend to no ſuch matter.

By this means the Precepts of Chriſt to conſtancy and contentment in all Eſtates, will come to be lookt upon (like thoſe of the Stoicks) only as magnifica verba, brave Words; but ſuch as are impoſſible to be practiced; and the whole of the Goſpel will be taken for an airy notion, ſince they that profeſs greateſt regard to it, are no more helpt thereby.

O what a ſhame is it that Religion ſhould in this caſe make no more difference betwixt Man and Man? Wherefore ſhew to the World (whatever their common cenſures are) that it is not ſo much your care to differ from them in ſome opinions, and a little ſtrictneſs, as in humility, meekneſs, contempt of the World, and Heavenly-mindedneſs; and now let theſe Graces diſplay themſelves by your chearful, patient deportment under all your grievances.

Wherefore hath God planted thoſe excellent graces in your Souls, but that he might be glorified, and you benefited by the exerciſes of them in tribulation? Should theſe be ſuppreſt and hid, and nothing but the Pride, Paſſion, and Unmortified earthlineſs of your Hearts ſet on work and diſcovered in time of trouble, what a ſlur, what a wound will you give to the glorious Name which is called upon by you? And then if your Hearts be truly gracious, that will pierce you deeper than ever your affliction which occaſioned it, did.

I beſeech

I beſeech you therefore be tender of the Name of God, if you will not be ſo of your own peace and comfort.

16. Conſid. Be quiet and hold your peace; you little know how many mercies lie in the womb of this affliction.

Great are the benefits of a ſharp rouzing affliction to the People of God at ſome times, and all might have them at all times, were they more careful to improve them. Holy David thankfully acknowledgeth, Pſal. 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted.

And ſurely there's as much good in them for you, as for him; if the Lord ſanctifie them to ſuch ends and uſes as his were ſanctified unto.

Such a ſmarting Rod as this came not before there was need enough of it, and poſſibly you ſaw the need of ſome awakening Providence your ſelves; but if not, the Lord did; he took not up the Rod to ſmite you, till his faithfulneſs, and tender love to your Souls called upon him to correct you.

You now ſit penſive under the Rod, ſadly lamenting and deploring the loſs of ſome earthly comfort, your Heart is ſurcharged with ſorrow, your Eyes run down upon every mention and remembrance of your dear Friend, Why, if there were no more, this alone may diſcover the need you had of this Rod; for doth not all this ſorrow at parting, plainly ſpeak how much your Heart was ſet upon, how faſt your heart was glewed to this earthly comfort?

Now you ſee that your affections were ſunk many degrees deeper into the Creature than you are aware of; and what ſhould God do in this caſe by you? Should he ſuffer you to cleave to the Creature more and more? Should he permit it to purloin and exhauſt your love and delight, and ſteal away your Heart from himſelf? This he could not do and love you. The more impatient you are under this affliction, the more need you had of it.

And what if by this ſtroke the Lord will awaken your drowzy Soul, and recover you out of that pleaſant, but dangerous ſpiritual ſlumber you were fallen into, whileſt you had pillowed your head upon this pleaſant, ſenſible creature enjoyment? Is not this really better for you, than if he ſhould ſay, Sleep on: He is joined to Idols, let him alone, he is departing from me the fountain, to a broken Ciſtern, let him go.

Yea, What if by this ſtroke upon one of the pleaſanteſt things you had in this World, God will diſcover to you, more ſenſibly and effectually than ever, the vanity both of that and all earthly comforts, ſo as that you ſhall from henceforth never let forth your heart, your hope, your love, and delight to any of them, as you did before? You could talk before of the creatures vanity; but I queſtion whether ever you had ſo clear and convincing a ſight of its vanity as you have this day: And is not this a conſiderable mercy in your Eyes?

Now, if ever, God is weaning you from all fond opinions and vain expectations from this World; by this your Judgment of the creatures is rectified, and your affections to all other enjoyments on Earth moderated: And is this nothing? O doubtleſs it is a greater mercy to you, than to have your Friend alive again.

And what if by this Rod your wandring, gadding heart ſhall be whipped home to God? your Neglected Duties revived? your decayed communion with God reſtored? a ſpiritual Heavenly frame of heart recovered? What will you ſay then?

Surely you will bleſs that merciful hand which removed the obſtructions; and adore the divine Wiſdom and Goodneſs, that by ſuch a device as this recovered you to himſelf. Now you can pray more conſtantly, more ſpiritually, more affectionately than before. Oh bleſſed Rod which buds and bloſſoms with ſuch fruits as theſe! Let this be written among your beſt mercies; for you ſhall have cauſe to adore and bleſs God eternally for this beneficial affliction.

17. Conſid. Suffer not your ſelves to be tranſported by Impatience, and ſwallowed up of Grief, becauſe God hath exerciſed you under a ſmart Rod; for as ſmarting as it is, it's comparatively a gentle ſtroke to what others as good as your ſelves have felt.

Your dear Relation is dead; be it ſo, here is but a ſingle death before you, but others have ſeen many deaths contrived into one upon their Relations, to which yours is nothing.

Zedekiah ſaw his Children murdered before his eyes; and then had thoſe Eyes (alas too late) put out. The worthy Author of that excellent book forementioned, tells us of a choice and godly Gentlewoman in the North of Ireland, who when the Rebellion brake out there, fled with three Children, one of them upon the Breaſt; they had not gone far before they were ſtripped Naked by the Iriſh, who to their admiration ſpared their lives (it's like, concluding that cold and hunger would kill them) afterwards going on at the foot of a River which runs to Lochbeach, others met them, and would have caſt them into the River; but this Godly Woman, not diſmayed, asked a little liberty to pray, and as ſhe lay naked on the frozen ground, got reſolution not to go on her own Feet, to ſo unjuſt a death, upon which having called her, and ſhe refuſing, was dragged by the heels along that rugged way, to be caſt in with her little ones and company.

The fulfilling of the Scriptures.

But ſhe then turned, and on her knees ſays, you ſhould, I am ſure, be Chriſtians, and Men I ſee you are; in taking away our miſerable lives you do us a pleaſure: But know, that as we never wronged you nor yours, you muſt remember to die alſo your ſelves and one day give an account of this cruelty, to the Judge of Heaven and Earth: Hereupon they reſolved not to murder them with their own hands, but turned them all naked upon a ſmall Iſland in the River without any Proviſion, there to periſh.

The next day the two Boys having crept aſide found the hide of a Beaſt which had been killed, at the Root of a Tree; which the Mother caſt over them lying upon the Snow. The next day a little Boat goes by, unto whom ſhe calls for God's ſake to take them out, but they being Iriſh, refuſed; ſhe deſired a little Bread, but they ſaid they had none; then ſhe begs a Coal of Fire, which ſhe obtained; and then with ſome fallen Chips, made a little Fire, and the Children taking a piece of the Hide, laid it on the Coals, and began to gnaw the Leather; but without an extraordinary divine ſupport, what could they do?

Thus they lived Ten days without any viſible means of help, having no Bread, but Ice and Snow nor drink except Water. The two Boys being near ſtarved, ſhe preſſed them to go out of her ſight, unable to ſee their death: yet God delivered them miraculouſly at laſt, as he had ſupported them that while.

But, judge whether a natural death, in an ordinary way, be comparable to ſuch a trial as this; and yet thus the Lord did by this choice and eminent gracious Woman.

And Mr. Wall in his None-but-Chriſt relates as ſad a Paſſage of a Poor Family in Germany, who were driven to that extremity in the Famine, that at laſt the Parents made a motion one to the other to ſell one of the Children for Bread to ſuſtain themſelves and the reſt; but when they came to conſider which Child it ſhould be, their Hearts ſo relented and yerned upon every one, that they reſolved rather all to die together. Yea, we read in Lam. 4. 10. The hands of the pitiful women have ſodden their own Children.

But what ſpeak I of theſe extremities? How many Parents, yea, ſome Godly ones too, have lived to ſee their Children dying in prophaneſs, and ſome by the hand of Juſtice, lamenting their Rebellions with a Rope about their Necks.

Ah, Reader, little doſt thou know, what ſtings there are in the Afflictions of others! Surely you have no reaſon to think the Lord hath dealt more bitterly with you than any. It's a gentle ſtroke, a merciful Diſpenſation, if you compare it with what others have felt.

18. Conſid. If God be your God, you have really loſt nothing by the removal of any Creature-Comfort.

God is the Fountain of all true Comfort: Creatures, the very beſt and ſweeteſt, are but Ciſterns to receive and convey to us what Comfort God is pleaſed to communicate to them; and if the Ciſtern be broken, or the Pipe cut off, ſo that no more comfort can be conveyed to us that way, he hath other ways and mediums to do it by, which we think not of; and if he pleaſe he can convey his Comforts to his People without any of them; and if he do it more immediately, we ſhall be no loſers by that; for no comforts in the World are ſo delectable and raviſhingly ſweet, as thoſe that flow immediately from the Fountain.

And it is the ſenſuality of our Hearts that cauſe us to affect them ſo inordinately, and grieve for the loſs of them ſo immoderately, as if we had not enough in God without theſe Creature-ſupplements.

Is the fulneſs of the Fountain yours? And yet do you caſt down your ſelves, becauſe the broken Ciſtern is removed. The beſt Creatures are no better, Jer. 2. 13. Ciſterns have nothing but what they receive, and broken ones cannot hold what is put into them. Why then do you mourn as if your Life were bound up in the Creature? You have as free an acceſs to the Fountain, as you had before. It is the advice of an Heathen, and let them take the Comfort, of it) to repair by a new earthly Comfort, what we have loſt the former.

Thou haſt carried forth him whom thou lovedſt (ſaith Seneca) ſeek one whom thou maiſt love in his ſtead: It's better to repair, than bemoan thy loſs.

emamabas, uliſti, quæ- quem ames: ius eſt ami- reparare mſtere. Sen's Epiſt. 637.

But if God never repair your loſs, in things of the ſame kind, you know he can abundantly repair it in himſelf.

Ah Chriſtian! Is not one Kiſs of his Mouth, glimpſe of his Countenance, one Seal of his rit, a more ſweet and ſubſtantial Comfort than ſweeteſt Relation in this World can afford ! If the Stream fail, repair to the Fountain, e's enough ſtill, God is where he was, and t he was, tho' the Creature be not.

19. Conſider. Though you may want a little Com- in your Life, yet ſurely it may be recompenſed u by a more eaſie Death.

The removal of your Friends before you, may turn to your great Advantage, when your Hour is come that you muſt follow them. Oh how have many good Souls been clogged and enſnared in their dying Hour, by the Loves, Cares, and Fears they have had about thoſe they muſt leave behind them in a Sinful Evil World!

Your Love to them might have proved a Snare to you, and cauſed you to hang back, as loth to go hence; for theſe are the things that make Men loth to die. And thus it might have been with you, except God had removed them before hand, or ſhould give you in that day ſuch ſights of Heaven, and taſtes of Divine Love, as ſhould maſter and mortifie all your Earthly Affections to theſe things.

I knew a gracious Perſon, now in Heaven, who for many Weeks in her laſt Sickneſs complained, that ſhe found it hard to part with a dear Relation, and that there was nothing proved a greater clog to her Soul than this; 'Tis much more eaſier to think of going to our Friends, who are in Heaven before us, than of parting with them, and leaving our deſirable and dear ones behind us.

And who knows what cares and diſtracting thoughts you may then be peſtered and diſtracted with upon their account? What ſhall become of theſe when I am gone? I am now to leave them, God knows to what Want, Miſeries, Temptations, and Afflictions, in the midſt of a deceitful, defiling, dangerous World.

I know it's our Duty to leave our Fatherleſs Children, and Friendleſs Relations with God; to truſt them with him that gave them to us: And ſome have been enabled cheerfully to do ſo when they were parting from them. Luther could ſay, Lord, thou haſt given me a Wife and Children, I have little to leave them; nouriſh, teach, and keep them; O thou Father of the Fatherleſs, and Judge of the Widow. But every Chriſtian hath not a Luther's Faith: Some find it an hard thing to diſentangle their Affections at ſuch time: But now, if God have ſent all yours before you, you have ſo much the leſs to do. Death may be eaſier to you than others.

Melchior Adam in vita Lutheri.

20. Conſid. But if nothing that hath been yet ſaid will ſtick with you, then laſtly, remember, that you are near that ſtate and place which admits no Sorrows nor ſad Reflections upon any ſuch accounts as theſe.

Yet a little while, and you ſhall not miſs them, you ſhall not need them, but you ſhall live as the Angels of God. We now live partly by Faith, partly by Senſe, partly upon God, and partly upon the Creature. Our ſtate is mixed, therefore our Comforts are ſo too. But when God ſhall be all in all, and we ſhall be as the Angels of God in the way and manner of our living; How much will the caſe be altered with us then, from what it is now?

Angels neither Marry, nor are given in Marriage; neither ſhall the Children of the Reſurrection; when the days of our Sinning are ended, the days of our Mourning ſhall be ſo too. No Graves were opened till Sin entered, and no more ſhall be opened when Sin is excluded.

Our grorified Relations ſhall live with us for Ever, they ſhall complain no more, die no more; yea, this is the happineſs of that ſtate to which you are paſſing on, that your Souls being in the neareſt neareſt conjunction with God the Fountain of Joy, you ſhall have no concernment out of him. You ſhall not be put upon theſe exerciſes of Patience; nor ſubjected to ſuch Sorrows as you now feel, any more. It is but a little while and the end of all theſe things will come. Oh therefore bear up as Perſons that expect ſuch a day of Jubilee at hand.

And thus I have finiſhed the ſecond general Head of this Diſcourſe, which is a diſſwaſive from the Sin of immoderate Sorrow.

3. I now proceed to the third thing propoſed, namely to remove the Pleas and excuſes for this immoderate Grief. It's natural to Men, yea to good Men to juſtifie their Exceſſes, or at leaſt to extenuate them, by pleading for their Paſſions, as if they wanted not cauſe and reaſon enough to excuſe them. If theſe be fully anſwered, and the Soul once convinced, and left without Apology for its Sin, it is then in a fair way for its Cure, which is the laſt thing deſigned in this Treatiſe.

My preſent buſineſs therefore is to ſatisfie thoſe Objections, and anſwer thoſe Reaſons which are commonly pleaded in this caſe, to juſtifie our exceſſive Grief for loſt Relations. And though I ſhall carry it in that line of Relation to which the Text directs, yet it's equally applicable to all others.

1. Plea.

You preſs me by many great Conſiderations to Meekneſs, and quiet Submiſſion under this heavy ſtroke of God: But you little know what ſtings my Soul feels now in it.

This Child was a Child of many Prayers, it was a Samuel begg'd of the Lord, and I concluded when I had it, that it brought with it the returns and anſwers of many Prayers. But now I ſee it was nothing leſs: God had no regard to my Prayer about it; nor was it given in that ſpecial way of Mercy, as I imagined it to be. My Child is not only dead, but my Prayers in the ſame day ſhut out and denied.

1. Anſwer.

That you prayed for your Children before you had them was your Duty, and if you prayed not for them ſubmiſſively, referring it to the Pleaſure of God to give or deny them, to continue or remove them, as ſhould ſeem good to him; that was your Sin; you ought not to limit the Holy One of Iſrael, or preſcribe to him, or capitulate with him, for what term you ſhall enjoy your outward Comforts. If you did ſo, it was your Evil, and God hath juſtly rebuked it by this ſtroke: If you did pray conditionally, and ſubmiſſively, referring both the Mercy asked, and continuance of it to the Will of God as you ought to do; then there is nothing in the death of your Child, that croſſes the true Scope and Intent of your Prayer.

2. Anſwer.

Your Prayers may be anſwered, though the thing prayed for be with-held, yea, or though it ſhould be given for a little while and ſnatcht away from you again. There are four ways of God's anſwering Prayers: By giving the thing prayed for preſently, Dan. 9. 23. or by ſuſpending the Anſwer for a time, and giving it afterwards: Luke 18. 7. or by with-holding that Mercy which you ask from you, and giving you a much better Mercy in the room of it, Deut. 3. 24. compared with Deut. 34. 4, 5. or laſtly, by giving you patience to bear the loſs or want of it, 2 Cor. 12. 9.

Now if the Lord have taken away your Child or Friend, and in lieu thereof given you a meek, quiet, ſubmiſſive Heart to his Will, you need not ſay he hath ſhut out your cry.

2. Plea.

But I have loſt a lovely, obliging and moſt endearing Child, one that was Beautiful and Sweet; it is a ſtony Heart that would not diſſolve into tears for the loſs of one ſo deſirable, ſo engaging as this was. Ah it's no common loſs!

1. Anſwer.

The more lovely and engaging your Relation was, the more excellent will your patience and contentment with the Will of God in its death be; the more lovelineſs, the more ſelf denial, and the more ſelf denial the more grace. Had it been a thouſand times more endearingly ſweet than it was, it was not too good to deny for God. If therefore obedience to the Will of God do indeed maſter natural affections; and that you look upon Patience and Contentment as much more beautiful than the ſweeteſt and moſt deſirable Enjoyment on Earth, it may turn to you for a teſtimony of the truth and ſtrength of Grace; that you can, like Abraham, part with a Child whom you ſo dearly love, in obedience to the Will of your God whom you love infinitely more.

2. Anſwer.

The lovelineſs and beauty of our Children and Relations, though it muſt be acknowledged a good gift from the hand of God; yet it is but a common gift, and oftentimes becomes a ſnare, and is in its own nature but a tranſitory vaniſhing thing, and therefore no ſuch great aggravation of the loſs as is pretended.

I ſay 'tis but a common Gift; Eliab, Adonijah, and Abſolom, had as lovely a Preſence as any in their Generation. Yea, it's not only common to the wicked, with the Godly, but to bruit Animals as well as Men, and to moſt that excel in it, it becomes a Temptation; the Souls of ſome had been more beautiful and lovely, if their Bodies had been leſs ſo. Beſides, it's but a flower which flouriſhes in its Month, and then fades. This therefore ſhould not be reflected on as ſo great a circumſtance to aggravate your Trouble.

3. Anſwer.

But if your Relation ſleeps in Jeſus, he will appear ten thouſand times more lovely in the Morning of the Reſurrection than ever he was in this World. What is the exacteſt, pureſt Beauty of Mortals, to the incomparable Beauty of the Saints in the Reſurrection: Then ſhall the Righteous ſhine forth as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father, Mat. 13. 43. In this hope you part with them, therefore act ſuitably to your Hopes.

3. Plea.

Oh but my Child was nipt off by death in the very Bud, I did but ſee, and love, and part: Had I enjoyed it longer, and had time to ſuck out the ſweetneſs of ſuch an enjoyment, I could have born it eaſier, but its Months or Years with me are ſo few, that they only ſerved to raiſe a expectation which was quickly, and therefore th more ſadly diſappointed.

1. Anſwer.

Did your Friend die young, or was the bond of ar other Relation diſſolved almoſt as ſoon as made? Let not this ſeem ſo intolerable a load to you; for if you have ground to hope they died in Chriſt, then they lived long in this World. It's truly ſaid, he hath ſailed long enough th hath won the Harbour; he hath fought long enou that hath obtained the Victory, he hath run ſo enou enough that hath toucht the Goal, and he hath lived long enough on Earth, that hath won Heaven, be his days here never so few.

Vide Mr. Baxter's Epiſtle the Life of John Janew

2. Answer.

The sooner your Relation died, the less Sin hath been committed, and the less sorrow felt: What can you see in this World but Sin or Sorrow? A quick passage through it to Glory, is a special priviledge. Surely the World is not so desireable a place, that Christians should desire an hours time longer in it for themselves or theirs, than serves to fit them for a better.

3. Answer.

And whereas you imagine the parting would have been easier, if the enjoyment had been longer, it is a fond and groundless Suspicion. The longer you had enjoyed them, the stronger would the Endearments have been. A young and tender Plant may be easily drawn up by a single Hand, but when it hath spread and fixed its Root many Years in the Earth, it will require many a strong blow and hard tug to root it up. Affections, like those under-ground Roots, are fixed and strengthened by nothing more than consuetude, and long possession; it's much easier parting now, than it would be hereafter, whatever you think. However, this should satisfie you, that God's time is the best time.

4. Plea.

O but I have lost all in one, it is my only one, I have none left in its room to repair the breach, and make up the loss; If God had given me other Children to take comfort in, the loss had not been so great; but to lose all at one stroke, is insupportable.

1. Answer.

Religion allows not to Christians a Liberty of expressing the death of their dear Relations by so hard a Word as the loss of them is. They are not lost but sent before you. And it is a shameful thing for a Christian to be reproved for such an uncomly Expression by an Heathen. It is enough to make us blush to read what an Heathen said in this case. Never say thou hast lost any thing (saith Epictetus) but that it is returned. Is thy Son dead? He is only restored. Is thy Inheritance taken from thee? It is also returned. And a while after he adds, ὁ τῦτο θεοῖς φίλον, τῦτο γινέσθω, (i. e.) Let every thing be as the Gods will have it.

Non amittunt sed præmittunt.

Epict. Enchir. Cap. 15.

2. Answer.

It is no fit Expression to say you have lost all one, except that one be Christ, and he being once ours, can never be lost. Doubtless your meaning you have lost all your Comfort of that kind; what though you have? are there not multudes of Comforts yet remaining of a higher kind, more precious and durable nature? If you have more of that sort, yet so long as you have ter, what cause have you to rejoice!

3. Answer.

You too much imitate the way of the World his complaint; they know not how to repair loss of one Comfort, but by another of the e nature, which must be put in its room to up the vacancy: But have you no other way upply your loss; have you not a God to fill place of any Creature that leaves you? Surely would better become a Man whose Portion this Life, than one that professes God is his all.

5. Plea.

O but my only one is not only taken away, but there remains no expectation or probability of any more: I must now look upon my self as a dry Tree, never to take comfort in Children any more, which is a cutting Thought.

1. Answer.

Suppose what you say, that you have no hope nor expectation of another Child remaining to you; yet if you have a hope of better things than Children: you have no reason to be cast down: bless God for higher and better hopes than these, in Isa. 56. 4, 5. The Lord comforts them that have no expectations of Sons or Daughters; with this, That he will give unto them in his House, and within his Walls a place, and a name better than of Sons or Daughters; even an everlasting name that shall not be cut off. There are better Mercies, and higher hopes than these; though your hopes of Children, or from Children should be cut off; yet if your eternal hopes be secure, and such as shall not make you ashamed, you should not be so cast down.

2. Answer.

If God will not have your Comforts to lye any more in Children, then resolve to place them in himself, and you shall never find cause to complain of loss by such an exchange. You will find that in God which is not to be had in the Creature; one hours communion with him shall give you that which the happiest Parent never yet had from his Children, you will exchange Brass for Gold, perishing Vanity, for solid and abiding Excellency.

6. Plea.

But the suddenness of the stroke is amazing, God gave little or no warning to prepare for this Trial: Death executed its commission as soon as it opened it. My dear Husband, Wife, or Child, was snacht unexpectedly out of my Arms by a surprizing stroke; and this makes my stroke heavier than my complaint.

1. Answer.

That the death of your Relation was so sudden and surprizing, was much your own fault, who ought to have lived in the daily sense of his Vanity, and expectation of your separation from it; you knew it to be a dying comfort in its best Estate; and it is no such wonderful thing to see that dead, which you knew before to be dying: Besides, you heard the changes ringing round about you in other Families; you frequently saw other Parents, Husbands, and Wives carrying forth their dead; And what were all these but warnings given you to prepare for the like tryals?

Surely then it was your own security and regardlessness that made this affliction so surprizing to you, and who is to be blamed for that, you know.

2. Answer.

There is much difference betwixt the sudden death of Infants, and that of grown persons: The latter may have much work to do, many sins actually to repent of, and many evidences of their Interest in Christ to examine and clear, in order to their more comfortable death; and so sudden death may be deprecated by them.

But the case of Infants, who exercise not their reason, is far different, they have no such work to do; but are purely passive; all that is done in order to their salvation, is done by God immediately upon them, ſo it comes all to one, whether their death be more quick or more ſlow.

3. Anſwer.

You complain of the ſuddenneſs of the ſtroke, but another will be ready to ſay, had my Friend died in that manner, my affliction had been nothing to what now it is; I have ſeen many deaths contrived into one: I ſaw the gradual approaches of it upon my dear Relation, who felt every tread of death as it came on toward him, who often cryed with Job, Chap. 3. 20. Wherefore is light given to him that is in Miſery, and life to the bitter in Soul? Which long for Death, but it cometh not, and dig for it more than for hidden Treaſures: Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the Grave.

That which you reckon the ſting of your Affliction, others would have reckoned a favour and priviledge. How many tender Parents, and other Relations, who loved their Friends as dearly as your ſelves, have been forced to their Knees upon no other errand but this, to beg the Lord to haſten the ſeparation, and put an end to that Sorrow, which to them was much greater than the Sorrow for the dead.

7. Plea.

You preſs me to moderation of Sorrows, and I know I ought to ſhew it, but don't know how the caſe ſtands with me, there's a ſting in this Affliction, that none feels but my ſelf; and how intollerable is it now! I neglected proper means in ſeaſon to preſerve Life, or miſcarried in the uſe of means. I now ſee ſuch a neglect or ſuch a miſtake about the means, as I cannot but judge greatly to contribute to that ſad loſs which I now (too late) lament.

O my negligence, O my raſhneſs and inconſiderateneſs! How doth my Conſcience now ſmite me for my Folly! And by this aggravate my burthen beyond what is uſually felt by others. Had I ſeaſonably applied my ſelf to the uſe of proper means, and kept ſtrictly to ſuch Courſes and Counſels as thoſe that are able and skilful might have preſcribed, I might now have had a living Husband, Wife or Child: Whereas I am now not only bereaved, but am apt to think I have bereaved my ſelf of them. Surely there is no Sorrow like unto my Sorrow.

1. Anſwer.

Though it be an evil to neglect and ſlight the means ordained by God for recovery of health, yet it's no leſs Evil to aſcribe too much to them, or rely too much on them. The beſt means in the World are weak and ineffectual without God's Aſſiſtance and Concurrence, and they never have that his Aſſiſtance or Concurrence, when his time is come; and that it was fully come in your Friend's caſe, is manifeſted now by the Event. So that if your Friend had had the moſt excellent helps the World affords, they would have availed nothing. This conſideration takes place only in your caſe, who ſee what the Will of God is by the Iſſue, and may not be pleaded by any whilſt it remains dubious and uncertain, as it generally doth in time of Sickneſs.

2. Anſwer.

Do you not unjuſtly charge and fault your ſelves for that which is not really your fault or neglect? How far you are chargeable in this caſe will beſt appear by comparing the circumſtances you are now in, with thoſe you were in when your Relation was only arreſted by Sickneſs; and it was dubious to you what was your duty and beſt courſe to take.

Poſſibly you had obſerved ſo many to periſh in Phyſicians Hands, and ſo many to recover without them, that you judged it ſafer for your Friend to be without thoſe means, than to be hazarded by them.

Or if divers Methods and courſes were preſcribed and perſwaded to, and you now ſee your Error in preferring that which was moſt improper, and neglecting what was more ſafe and probable; yet as along as it did not ſo appear to your underſtanding at that time, but you followed the beſt light you had to guide you at that time, it were moſt unjuſt to charge the fault upon your ſelves, for chooſing that courſe that then ſeemed beſt to you, whether it were ſo in it ſelf or not.

To be angry with your ſelves for doing or omitting what was then done, or omitted, according to your beſt diſcretion and judgment, becauſe you now ſee it by the light of the Event far otherwiſe than you did before, it is to be troubled that you are but Men, or that you are not as God, who only can foreſee iſſues, and events; and that you acted as all Rational Creatures are bound to do, according to the beſt light they have, at the time and Seaſon of action.

3. Anſwer.

To conclude, times of great Affliction are ordinarily times of great Temptation, and it's uſual with Satan then to charge us with more Sins than we are really guilty of, and alſo make thoſe things ſeem to be Sins, which upon impartial examination will not be found to be ſo.

Indeed, had your neglect or miſcarriage been knowing or voluntary, or had you really preferred a little Money (being able to give it) before the life of your Relation, and did deliberately chuſe to hazard this, rather than part with that, no doubt then but there had been much evil of Sin mixed with your affliction; And your Conſcience may juſtly ſmite you for it, as your Sin. But in the other caſe which is more common, and I preſume yours; it's a falſe charge and you ought not to abet the deſign of Satan in it.

Judge by the Sorrow you now feel for your Friend, in what degree he was dear to you, and what you could now willingly give to ranſom his Life, if it could be done with Money. Judge I ſay, by this how groundleſs the charge is that Satan now draws up againſt you; and you will be but too ready to yield to the truth of it.

8 Plea.

But my troubles are upon a higher ſcore and account. My Child or Friend is paſſed into Eternity, and I know not how it is with his Soul. Were I ſure my Relation were with Chriſt, I ſhould be quiet; but my fears of the contrary are overwhelming; O it's terrible to think of the damnation of one ſo dear to me.

1. Anſwer.

Admit what the objection ſuppoſes, that you have real grounds to fear the eternal condition of your dear Relation, yet it's utterly unbeſeeming you, even in ſuch a caſe as this, to diſpute with or repine againſt the Lord.

I do confeſs it's a ſore and heavy Trial, and that there is no cauſe more ſad and ſinking to the Spirit of a gracious Perſon. Their death is a trifle to this; but yet, if you be ſuch as fear the Lord, methinks his indiſputable Sovereignty them, and his diſtinguiſhing Love and Mercy to you, ſhould at leaſt ſilence you in this matter.

Firſt, His indiſputable Sovereignty over them, Rom. 9. 22. Who art thou, O Man, who diſputeſt with God? He ſpeaks in the matters of eternal Election and Reprobation. What if the Lord will not be gracious to thoſe that are ſo dear to us? Is there any wrong done to them or us thereby? Aaron's two Sons were cut off in the act of Sin, by the Lord's immediate Hand, and yet he held his Peace, Levit. 10. 3. God told Abraham plainly, that the Covenant ſhould not be eſtabliſhed with Iſhmael, for whom he ſo earneſtly prayed, O let Iſhmael live before thee! And he knew that there was no Salvation out of the Covenant, and yet he ſits down ſilent under the Word of the Lord.

Secondly, But if this do not quiet you, yet, methinks his diſtinguiſhing Love and Mercy to you ſhould do it. O what do you owe to God, that root and branch hath not been caſt together into the Fire! That the Lord hath given you good hope through grace, that it ſhall be well with you for Ever. Let this ſtop your Mouth, and quiet your Spirit: Though you ſhould have grounds for this Fear.

2. Anſwer.

But pray examine the grounds of your Fear, whether it may not proceed from the ſtrength of your Affections to the eternal welfare of your friend, or from the ſubtilty of Satan deſigning thereby to overwhelm and ſwallow you up in ſuppoſed, as well as from juſt grounds and cauſes? In two caſes it's very probable your fear may proceed only from your own affection or Satan's Temption.

Firſt, If your Relation died young, before it did any thing to deſtroy your hopes. Or,

Secondly, If grown, and in ſome good degree hopeful; only he did not in Life, or at Death manifeſt and give evidence of Grace, with that clearneſs as you deſired.

As to the caſe of Infants in general, it's none of our concern to judge their condition; and as for thoſe that ſprang from Covenanted Parents, it becomes us to exerciſe Charity towards them, the Scripture ſpeaks very favourably of them.

And as for the more adult, who have eſcaped the pollutions of the World, and made Conſcience of Sin and Duty, albeit they never manifeſted what you could deſire they had; yet in them, as in young Abijah, may be found ſome good thing toward the Lord, which you never took notice of. Reverence of your Authority, Baſhfulneſs, and Shamefacedneſs, Reſervedneſs of Diſpoſition, and many other things may hide thoſe ſmall and weak beginnings of Grace that are in Children, from the obſervations of the Parents. God might ſee ſomething in them that you never ſaw; he deſpiſeth not the day of ſmall things.

However it be, it's now out of your Watch, and your concernment rather is to improve the Affliction to your own good, than judge and determine the condition, which belongs not to you, but but I have ſinned in this Relation, and now God hath puniſhed my Sin in diſſolving it. O one, my Heart was ſet too much upon it, I idolized it, that was my Sin; and ſaith er, I wanted due affections, and did not love my Relation, at leaſt not ſo Spiritually as I ought, that was my Sin. Now God is viſiting me for all the neglects and defects that have been in me towards my Relation.

9. Plea.

1. Anſwer.

There is no Man ſo throughly Sanctified, as not to fail and come ſhort in many things pertaining to his Relative Duties. And to ſpeak as the thing is, the corruptions of the holieſt Perſons are as much diſcovered in this, as in any other thing whatſoever; and it's a very common thing for Conſcience, not only to charge theſe failures upon us, but to aggravate them to the utmoſt when God hath made the ſeparation. So that this is no more than what is uſual and very common with Perſons in your caſe.

2. Anſwer.

Admit that which the Objection ſuppoſes, that God had afflicted you for your Sin, and removed that Comfort from you, which you Idolized and too much doted on; yet there is no reaſon you ſhould be ſo caſt down under your Affliction; for all this may be, and probably is the Fruit of his love to, and care of your Soul, Rev. 3. 19. He tells the afflicted for their Comfort, Whom I love I rebuke and chaſten. How much better is it to have an Idolized Enjoyment taken from you in Mercy, than if God ſhould ſay concerning you as he did of Ephraim, Hoſ. 4. 17. He is joined to Idols, let him alone?

O it's better for you that your Father now reckons with you for your Follies with the Rod in his Hand, than to ſay as he doth to ſome, Let them go on, I will not hinder them in, or rebuke them for their ſinful Courſes; but will reckon with them for all together in Hell at laſt.

3. Anſwer.

And as to what you now charge upon your ſelf, that the neglect of duty did ſpring from the want of Love to your Relation: Your Sorrow at parting may evidence that your Relation was rooted deep in your Affection! But if your Love was not ſo ſpiritual and pure, to love and enjoy them in God; that was undoubtedly your Sin, and is the Sin of moſt Chriſtians; for which both you, and all others, ought to be humbled.

10. Plea.

God hath bleſſed me with an Eſtate, and outward comforts in the World, which I reckoned to have left to my Poſterity: And now I have none to leave it with, nor have I any comfort to think of it; the purpoſes of my Heart are broken off, and the comfort of all my other Enjoyments blaſted by this ſtroke in an Hour. How are the pains and cares of many Years periſhed.

1. Anſwer.

How many are there in the World, yea of our own acquaintance, whom God hath either denied, or deprived, both of the comforts of Children and of Eſtates too? If he have left you thoſe outward Comforts, you ought to acknowlege his goodneſs therein, and not to ſlight theſe becauſe he hath deprived you of the other.

2. Anſwer.

Though your Children be gone, yet God hath many Children left in the World, whoſe Bowels you may refreſh with what he hath beſtowed upon you; and your Charity to them will doubtleſs turn to a more comfortable account, than if you had left a large Eſtate to your own Poſterity.

Surely we are not ſent into this World to heap up great Eſtates for our Children; and if you have been too eager in this deſign, you may now read God's juſt Rebuke of your Folly. Bleſs God you have yet an opportunity to ſerve him eminently by your Charity: And if God deny you other Executors, let your own hands be your Executors, to diſtribute to the neceſſity of the Saints; that the Bleſſings of them that are ready to periſh may come upon you.

11. Plea.

O but the Remembrance of its witty Words and pretty actions is wounding.

1. Anſwer.

Let it rather lift up your Heart to God in Praiſe, that gave you ſo deſirable a Child, than fill your Heart with diſcontent at his hand in removing it. How many Parents are there in the World whoſe Children God hath deprived of Reaſon and underſtanding, ſo that they only differ from the Beaſts in external ſhape and figure? And how many ſhew betimes ſo perverſe a temper, that little Comfort can be expected from them?

2. Anſwer.

Theſe are but ſmall Circumſtances and trivial things in themſelves; but by theſe little things, Satan manages a great deſign againſt your Soul, to deject or exaſperate it: And ſurely this is not your buſineſs at this time; you have greater things than the Words and Actions of Children to mind; to ſearch out God's End in the Affliction: To mortifie the Corruption it is ſent to rebuke, to quiet your Heart in the Will of God: This is your Work.

12. Plea.

Laſtly, It is objected, O but God hides his Face from me in my Affliction: It is dark within as well as without, and this makes my caſe more deplorable, greatly afflicted and ſadly deſerted.

1. Anſwer.

Though you want at preſent ſenſible Comfort, yet you have reaſon to be thankful for gracious ſupports. Though the Light of God's Countenance ſhine not upon you; yet you find the everlaſting Arms are underneath you; the Care of God worketh for you, when the Conſolations of God are withdrawn from you.

2. Anſwer.

To have God hide his Face in the time of trouble is no new, or unuſual thing. God's deareſt Saints; yea his own Son hath experienced it; who in the deeps of inward and outward trouble, when wave called unto wave, felt not thoſe ſweet ſenſible Influences of Comfort from God, which had always fill'd his Soul formerly. If Chriſt cry in extremity, My God, My God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Then ſure we need not wonder as if ſome ſtrange thing had happened to us.

3. Anſwer.

May not your unſubmiſſive carriage under the Rod provoke God to hide his Face from you? Pray conſider it well, nothing is more probable than this, to be the cauſe of God's withdrawment from you. Could you in meekneſs and quietneſs receive that Cup your Father hath given you to drink? Accept the puniſhment of your Iniquities; Say, good is the Word of the Lord, it is the Lord, let him do what he will. You would ſoon find the caſe altered with you; but the comforting Spirit finds no delight or reſt in a turbulent and tumultuous Breaſt.

And thus I have ſatisfied the moſt conſiderable Pleas urged in juſtification of our Exceſſes.

4. I come now to the laſt thing propoſed, namely, the means of curing and preventing theſe Sinful Exceſſes of Sorrow for the Death of our dear Relations.

And although much hath been ſaid already to diſſwade from this Evil, and I have enlarged already much beyond my firſt Intention; yet I ſhall caſt in ſome farther help and aſſiſtance towards the Healing of this Diſtemper, by preſcribing the following Rules.

1. Rule.

If you would not mourn exceſſively for the loſs of Creature-Comforts, then beware that you ſet not your delight and love exceſſively, or inordinately upon them whilſt you enjoy them.

Strong Affections make ſtrong Afflictions, the higher the Tide, the lower the Ebb. According to the meaſure of our Delight in the enjoyment, is our grief in the loſs of theſe things. The Apoſtle knits theſe two Graces, Temperance and Patience together in the Precept. 2 Pet. 1. 16. And it's very obſervable how Intemperance and Impatience are inſeparably linked in Experience, yea, the experience of the beſt Men. You read Gen. 37. 3. How Iſrael loved Joſeph more than all his Children, becauſe he was the Son of his old Age; and made him a Coat of many Colours.

This was the darling, Jacob's Heart was exceedingly ſet upon him, his very Life was bound up in the Life of the Lad. Now when the ſuppoſed death of his Child was brought to him, how did he carry it? See ver. 34. 35. And Jacob rent his Cloaths, and put Sackcloth upon his Loins; and mourned for his Son many Days: And all his Sons and all his Daughters roſe up to comfort him, but he refuſed to be comforted? And he ſaid, For I will go down into the Grave to my Son mourning. Thus his Father wept for him.

Here, as in a Glaſs, are the effects of exceſſive Love to a Child repreſented. Here you may ſee what work immoderate love will make, even in a Sanctified Heart.

O therefore let your moderation be known to all Men, in your Delights and Sorrows about Earthly things; for ordinarily the proportion of the one is anſwerable to the other.

2. Rule.

If you would not be overwhelmed with Grief for the Loſs of your Relations, be exact and careful in diſcharging your Duties to them while you have them.

The teſtimony of your Conſcience that you have laboured in all things to diſcharge the duties you owed to your Relations, whilſt they were with you, will prove an excellent allay to your Sorrow for them when they are no longer yours. 'Tis not ſo much the ſingle Affliction as the Guilt charged upon us in times of Affliction, that makes our load ſo heavy.

O what a terrible thing is it to look upon our dead Friend, whilſt Conſcience is accuſing and upbraiding us for our duties neglected, and ſuch or ſuch Sins committed? O you little think how dreadful a Spectacle this will make the dead Body of thy Friend to thee.

Conſcience if not quite ſtupid, or dead, will ſpeak at ſuch a time. O therefore, as ever you would provide for a comfortable parting at Death or meet again at Judgment; be exact, punctual, and circumſpect in all your Relative Duties.

3. Ru

3. Rule.

If you would not be overwhelmed by trouble for the loss of dear Relations, then turn to God under your trouble, and pour out your Sorrows by Prayer into his Bosom.

This will ease and allay your Troubles: Blessed be God for the Ordinance of Prayer; How much are all the Saints beholden to it at all times, but especially in Heart-sinking and distressful times. It's some relief, when in distress, we can pour out our trouble into the Bosom of a Wife, or faithful Friend; how much more when we leave our complaint before the gracious, wise, and faithful God? I told you before of that Holy Man, who having lost his dear and only Son, got to his Closet; there poured out his Soul freely to the Lord, and when he came down to his Friends that were waiting below to comfort him, and fearing how he would bear that stroke; he came from his Duty with a chearful Countenance, telling them he would be content to Bury a Son (if it were possible) every day, provided he might enjoy such comfort as his Soul had found in that private Hour.

Go thy way Christian, to thy God, get thee to thy Knees in the cloudy and dark day: Retire from all Creatures, that thou maist have thy full Liberty with thy God, and there pour out thy Heart before him, in free, full and broken-hearted Confessions of Sin: Judge thy self worthy of Hell as well as of this trouble: Justifie God in all his smartest strokes; beg him in this distress to put under thee everlasting arms, intreat one smile, one gracious look to enlighten thy darkness and chear thy drooping Spirit. Say with the Prophet, Jer. 17. 17. Be thou not a terror to me; thou art my hope in the day of evil. And try what relief such a course will afford thee. Surely if thy heart be sincere in this course, thou shalt be able to say with that Holy Man, Psal. 94. 29. In the Multitude of my thoughts which I had within me, thy Comforts have delighted my Soul.

4. Rule.

If you would bear the loss of your dear Relations with moderation, eye God in the whole process of the affliction more, and secondary causes and circumstances of the matter less.

I was dumb, I opened not my Mouth; because thou didst it, Psal. 39. 9. Consider the hand of the Lord in the whole matter: And that,

First, As a Sovereign Hand, which hath right to dispose of thee and all thy comforts without thy leave or consent, Job 33. 13.

Secondly, As a Father's Hand correcting thee in Love and Faithfulness, Prov. 3. 11. Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, as a Father the Son in whom he delighteth. O if once you could but see Affliction as a Rod in a Father's Hand, proceeding from his Love, and intended for your eternal good; How quiet would you then be?

And surely if it draw your Heart nearer to God, and mortifie it more to this vain World, it is a Rod in the hand of special Love: If it end in your Love to God, doubt not but it comes from God's Love to you.

Thirdly, As a Just and Righteous Hand: Hast not thou procured this to thy self by thy own Folly? Yea, the Lord is just in all that is come upon thee: Whatever he hath done, yet he hath done thee no wrong.

Fourthly, Lastly, as a moderate and merciful Hand that hath punished thee less than thine Iniquities deserve: He that cast thee into Affliction, might justly have cast thee into Hell. It's of the Lord's Mercy that thou art not consumed. Why doth the living Man complain?

5. Rule.

If you would bear your affliction with moderation, compare it with the Affliction of other Men, and that will greatly quiet your Spirits.

You have no cause to say God hath dealt bitterly with you, and that there is no Sorrow like your Sorrow: Look round about you, and impartially consider the condition that others are in: And they nothing inferior to you in any respect. You had one dead Child, Aaron had two at a stroke, Job all at one stroke, and both these by an immediate stroke from the hand of God. Some Godly Parents have lived to see their Children die in their Sin by the Hand of Justice: Others have seen them live to the dishonour of God and breaking of their own Spirits: And would have esteemed it a Mercy if they had died from the Womb, and given up the Ghost when they came out of the Belly, as Job speaks.

In what Misery have some Parents seen their Children lie? God holding them as so many terrible spectacles of Misery before their Eyes; so that they have begged the Lord with importunity, to let loose his Hands and cut them off. Death being in their esteem, nothing to those continual Agonies in which they have seen them lye sweltering from day to day. Oh you little know what a bitter Cup others have had given them to drink! Surely if you compare, you must say, the Lord hath dealt gently and graciously with me.

6. Rule.

Carefully shun and avoid whatsoever may renew your Sorrow, or provoke you to impatience.

Increase not your Sorrow by the Sight of, or discourses about sad objects, and labour to avoid them, as occasions presented by the Enemy of your Souls, to draw forth the corruptions of your Heart.

I told you before, why Jacob would not have the Child of which Rachel died, called after the name his Wife had given, Benoni, the Son of my Sorrow, lest it should prove a daily occasion of renewing his trouble for the loss of his dear Wife; but he called his name Benjamin.

Your Impatience is like Tinder, or Gun-powder, so long as you can prevent the sparks from falling on it, there is no great danger: But you that carry such dangerous prepared matter in your own Hearts, cannot be too careful to prevent them. Do by murmuring, as you do by blasphemous Thoughs, think quite another way, and give no occasion.

7. Rule.

In the day of your Mourning for the Death of your Friends, seriously consider your own death as approached, and that you and your dead Friend are distinguishing by a small interval and point of time. 2 Sam. 11. 13. I shall go to him. Surely the Thoughts of your own Death as approaching also, will greatly allay your Sorrows for the dead that are gone before you.

We are apt to fancy a long life in the World, and then the loss of those Comforts which we promised our selves so much of the sweetness and comforts of our Lives from, seems an intollerable thing.

But would you reallize your own deaths more, you would not be so deeply concerned for their death death as you are. Could you but look into your own Graves more ſeriouſly, you would be able to look into your Friend's Grave more compoſedly.

And thus I have finiſhed what I deſigned from this Scripture. The Father of Mercies and God of all Comforts, whoſe ſole Prerogative it is to comfort them that are caſt down, write all his Truths upon your Hearts, that they may abide there, and reduce your diſordered Affections to that frame which beſt ſuits the Will of God, and the profeſſion you make of ſubjection and reſignation thereunto.

The Beſt Work in the worſt Times.

Wherein the Neceſſity, Excellency, and Means of our readineſs for Sufferings are evinced and preſcribed; our call to Suffering cleared, and the great unreadineſs of many Profeſſors bewailed.

The EPISTLE to the READER.

IT was the Obſervation of the Learned Gerſon (when the World was not ſo old by many Years as now it is) that Mundus ſeneſcens patitur Phantaſias: The Aged World, like aged Perſons, dotes and grows whimſical in its old Age; the truth of which Obſervation is confirmed by no one thing more, than the fond and groundleſs Dreams and Phantaſms of Tranquility and continuing Proſperity, wherewith the multitude pleaſe themſelves, ewen whilſt the Sins of the Times are ſo great, and the Signs of the times ſo ſad and lowring as they are.

It is not the deſign of this Manual to ſcare and affright any Man with imaginary Dangers, much leſs to ſow Jealouſies, and foment the diſcontents of the times: It being a juſt Matter of Lamentation, that all the Tokens of God's Anger produce with many of us no better Fruit, but bold Cenſures and loud Clamours, inſtead of Humiliation for our own Sins, and due preparation to take up our own Croſs, and follow Chriſt in a ſuffering Path, which is the only mark and aim of this Tract.

We read the Hiſtories of the Primitive Sufferers, but not with a Spirit prepared to follow them. Some cenſure them as too prodigal of their Blood, and others commend their Courage and Conſtancy; but where are they that ſincerely reſolve and prepare to be followers of them, who through Faith and Patience inherit the Promiſes? Heb. 6. 12. or take them for an Example of Suffering, Affliction, and of Patience, Jam. 5. 10.

It is as much our Intereſt, as it is our Duty to be ſeaſonably awakened out of our pleaſant, but moſt pernicious drowzineſs. Troubles will be ſo much the more ſinking and intollerable, by how much they ſteal upon us by way of ſurprizal. For look as expectation deflowreth any temporal comfort, by ſucking out much of the ſweetneſs thereof before-hand, and ſo we find the leſs in it when we come to the actual enjoyment: So the expectation of evils abates much of the dread and terrour, by accuſtoming our Thoughts before-hand to them; and making preparation for them: So that we find them not ſo grievous, amazing and intollerable when they are come indeed.

This was exemplified to us very lively by Holy Mr. Bradford the Martyr, when the Keeper's Wife came running into his Chamber, ſaying, O Mr. Bradford, I bring you heavy Tidings, for to Morrow you muſt be Burned, your Chain is now buying, and preſently you muſt go to Newgate. He put off his Hat, and looking up to Heaven, ſaid, O Lord, I thank thee for it. I have looked for this a long time: It comes not ſuddenly to me, the Lord make me worthy of it: See in this Example the ſingular advantage of a prepared and ready Soul.

Reader, The Cup of Sufferings is a very bitter Cup, and it is but needful that we provide ſomewhat to ſweeten it, that we may be able to receive it with Thankſgiving: And what thoſe ſweetning ingredients are, and how to prepare them, you will have ſome direction and help in the following diſcourſe, which hath once already been preſented to the publick view; And that it may at this time alſo (wherein nothing can be more ſeaſonable) become farther uſeful and aſſiſting to the People of God in their preſent duties, is the hearty deſire of ACTS XXI. xiii.

Then Paul anſwered, What mean ye to weep, and break my Heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but alſo to die at Jeruſalem for the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

CHAP. I.

Wherein the Text is opened and the Doctrine propounded.

THE Divine Providence is not more ſignally diſcovered in Governing the motions of the Clouds, than it is in diſpoſing and ordering the Spirits and Motions of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, who in a Myſtical Senſe are fruitful Clouds to diſpenſe the ſhowers of Goſpel-Bleſſings to the World. The Motion of the Clouds is not ſpontaneous, but they move as they are moved by the Winds; neither can Goſpel-Miniſters chuſe their own Stations, and govern their own Motions, but muſt go when and where the Spirit and Providence of God directs and guides them; as will evidently appear in that dangerous Voyage

Voyage to Jerusalem in which the Apostle was at this time engaged; Acts 20. 22. And now behold I go bound in the Spirit to Jerusalem: [Bound in the Spirit] alluding to the watery Vapours which are bound up in Clouds, and conveyed according to the motion of the Winds: This Journey was full of Danger; Paul foresaw his business was not only to plant the Gospel at Jerusalem, with his Doctrine, but to water it also with his Blood; but so effectually was his Will determined by the Will of God, that he chearfully complies with his Duty therein, whatsoever difficulties and dangers did attend it.

And indeed it was his great advantage, that the Will of God was so plainly and convincingly revealed to him touching this matter; for no sooner did he employ himself to obey this Call of God, but he is presently assaulted by many strong Temptations to decline it.

The first Rub he met in his way, was from the Disciples of Tyre, who pretending to speak by the Spirit, said unto Paul, that he should not go up to Jerusalem, Acts 11. 4. The Lord by this trying the Spirit of his Apostle much, as he did the young Prophet coming from Judea to Bethel, 2 Kings 13. 18. But not with like Success.

His next discouragement was at Cæsarea, where Agabus (whom Dorotheus affirms to be of the seventy two Disciples, and had before Prophesied of the Famine in the Reign of Claudius, which accordingly came to pass) takes Paul's Girdle and binding his own Hands and Feet with it, said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, so shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the Man that owneth this Girdle, and shall deliver him into the Hands of the Gentiles, ver. 11. And surely he was not ignorant what he must expect whenever he should fall into their Hands; yet neither could this affright him from his Duty.

But then, last of all, he meeteth with the sorest Tryal from his dearest Friends, who fell upon him with passionate Entreaties, and many Tears, beseeching him to decline that Journey: O they could not give up such a Minister as Paul was! This even melted him down, and almost broke his Heart; which was easier to do, than to turn him out of the Path of Obedience: Where by the way we may note two things;

First, That Divine Precept, not Providence, is to rule out our way of Duty.

Secondly, That no hindrances or encouragements whatsoever will justifie our neglect of a known Duty.

All these Rubs he passes over, all these discouragements he overcame with this Heroick and truly Christian Resolution in the Text; What mean you to weep, and to break my Heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem, for the Name of the Lord Jesus.

In which words we have:

1. A loving and gentle Rebuke.
2. A quieting and calming Argument.

First, He lovingly and gently rebukes their fond and inordinate Sorrow for his Departure, in these words, What mean ye to Weep, and break my Heart? As if he should say, What mean these Passionate Entreaties, and tempting Tears? To what purpose is all this a-do? They are but so many Snares of Satan to turn my Heart out of the way of Obedience: You do as much as in you lies to break my Heart; Let there be no more of this, I beseech you.

Secondly, He labours to charm their unruly Passions with a very quieting and calming Argument: For I am ready, &c. ἑτοίμως ἔχω, parate habeo. I am prepared and fitted for the greatest Sufferings which shall befall me in the pursuit of my Duty, be it a Prison or be it Death, I am provided for either? Liberty is dear, and Life much dearer, but Christ is dearer than either.

But what was there in all this to satisfie them whose trouble it was to see him so forward? Let the words be considered, and we shall find divers things in them to satisfie and quiet their Hearts, and make them willing to give him up.

First, I am ready, that is, God hath fitted and prepared my Heart for the greatest Sufferings; this is the Work of God; Flesh and Blood would never be brought to this, were not all its interests and inclinations subdued and over-ruled by the Spirit of God: What do ye therefore in all this, but work against the Design of God, who hath fitted and prepared my Heart for this Service?

Secondly, I am ready, that is, my Will and Resolution stands in a full bent, my Heart is fixed, you cannot therefore study to do me a greater Injury, than to discompose and disorder my Heart again, by casting such Temptations as these in my way, to cause the Flesh to rebel, and the Enemy that is within to renew his opposition.

Thirdly, I am ready, that is, my Heart is so fixed to follow the Call of God whatever shall befall me, that all your Tears and Entreaties to the contrary are but cast away, they cannot alter my fixed purpose, you had as good be quiet, and chearfully resign me to the Will of God.

Thus you see the Equipage and Preparation of Paul's Spirit to receive both Bonds and Death for Christ at Jerusalem; This made him victorious over the Temptations of Friends, and the Malice and Cruelty of his Enemies; by this readiness and preparation of his Mind he was carried through all, and enabled to finish his course with Joy. From hence the Observation is;

Doct. That it is a blessed and excellent thing for the People of God to be prepared, and ready for the hardest Services, and worst of Sufferings to which the Lord may call them.

This is that which every gracious heart is reaching after, praying and striving to obtain, but, ah, how few attain it? Certainly there are not many among the Multitude of Professors of this Generation, that can say as Paul here did, I am ready to be bound, or to die for Christ.

CHAP. II.

Shews that although God takes no delight in afflicting his People; yet he sometimes exposeth them to great and grievous Sufferings, with a brief account why, and how he calls them thereunto.

THE Mercies and Compassions of God over his People are exceeding great and tender, Psal. 103. 14. Like as a Father pitieth his Children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him; He delights not in afflicting and grieving them, Lam. 3. 33. He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the Children of Men. The Scripture intimates to us a seeming Conflict betwixt the Justice and Mercy of God, when he is about to deliver up his people into their Enemies hands, Hosea 1. 8, 9. How shall I give thee up Ephraim? How shall I deliver thee Israel? How shall I make thee as Adma? How shall I set thee as Zeboim? Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together: Which shews us with what reluctance and great unwillingness the Lord goes about such work as this: The work of Judgment is his strange work; it pleases him better to exercise the milder Attribute of Mercy towards his Children. Hence we find when he is preparing to execute his Judgments, that he delays the execution as long as the Honour of his Name, and safety of his People will permit, Jer. 44. 22. He bears till he can bear no longer; He often turns away his wrath from them, Psal. 78. 38, 39. He tries them by lesser Judgments, and gentler Corrections, to prevent greater, Amos 4. 6. When his people are humbled under the Threatnings of his Wrath, his Heart is melted into Compassion to them, Jer. 31. 17, 20. And whenever his Mercy prevails against his Judgment, it is with joy and triumph, Jam. 2. 13. Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment.

For he feels his own tender Compassions yerning over them; he foreseeth, and is no way willing to gratifie the insulting pride of his and their Enemies, Deut. 32. 26, 27. I said I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men, were it not that I feared the wrath of the Enemy, lest their Adversaries should behave themselves strangely, &c.

Yet all this notwithstanding, it often falls out by the provocations of his Sons and Daughters, that the Lord gives them up into the hands of their Enemies, for the correction of their evils, and the manifestation of his own Glory. Seneca (though a Heathen) could say, that God Loves his People with a Masculine Love, not with a Womanish Indulgence and Tenderness: If need require, they shall be in heaviness through manifold Temptations, 1 Pet. 1. 6. He had rather their Hearts should be heavy under Adversity, than vain and careless under Prosperity; The choicest Spirits have been exercised with the sharpest sufferings, and those that now shine as Stars in Heaven, have been trod under foot as Dung on the Earth, 1 Cor. 4. 11. Unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked and buffeted, and have no certain dwelling places, and labour, working with our hands, being reviled we bless, being persecuted we suffer it, being defamed we entreat; we are made as the filth of the World, and the offscouring of all things unto this day. The Eleventh Chapter to the Hebrews is a Compendium of the various, and grievous sufferings of the Primitive Saints: They were tortured, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the Sword, they wandred about in Sheep-skins and Goat-skins being afflicted, destitute, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy; They wandered in Deserts, and in Mountains, in Dens, and Caves of the Earth. And since the Earth had dryed up those Rivers of precious blood, whereof the Sacred Records make mention, what Seas of Christian blood have since those days been shed by bloody Persecutors? Histories inform us, that in the Ten Primitive Persecutions, so many of the Saints and Martyrs of Jesus have been slain, as that you may allow five Thousand a day to every day in the whole Year. Those bloody Emperors sported themselves with the Deaths of Gods dearest Saints; many precious Christians were burnt by night at Rome, to serve as Torches to light their Enemies in their passage through the Streets; Eight hundred Thousand Martyrs are mentioned within the space of thirty Years, since the Jesuits arose out of the Bottomless Pit.

To what grievous Sufferings did the Lord give up those precious Servants of Christ, the Waldenses and Albigenses, who received the Light of Reformation about the Year, 1260. when the Fogs of Antichristian Darkness had overspread the Earth; a People found in judgment, as appears by their Letters, Catechisms, and Confessions which are extant; a People of a simple, plain and inoffensive Behaviour; yet with what fury and rage did that impious Pope Pius Persecute them to destruction? driving them into the Woods and Mountains, except the Aged and Children that could not flee, who were murthered in the way: Some Famished in the Caves and Clefts of the Rocks, others endured the Rack for eight Hours together; some beaten with Iron Rods, others thrown from the tops of high Towers, and broken to pieces.

What bloody Shambles and Slaughter houses have France, Ireland, and England been made by Popish cruelty? More might be related out of each Story, than a tender Hearted Reader is able to bear the rehearsal of. But what God hath done, he may do again; we are no better than our Fathers, dismal Clouds of Indignation are gathering over our heads, charged with double destruction, should the Lord please to make them break upon us; we cannot imagine the rage of Satan to be abated, now that his Kingdom hastens to its period, Rev. 12. 12 nor are his Instruments grown less cruel and skilful to destroy. The Land indeed hath enjoyed a long rest, and this Generation is acquainted with little more of Martyrdom, than what the Histories of former times inform us of: But yet let no man befool himself with a groundless expectation of a continuing tranquillity. Augustin thinks that the Bloody Sweat which overran the Body of Christ in the Garden, signified the sharp and grievous Sufferings which in his Mystical Body he should afterwards endure; and indeed it is a truth, that these are also called the Remains of Christ's Sufferings, Col. 1. 24. His Personal Sufferings were indeed compleated at his Resurrection, that Cup was full to the brim, to which no drop of Suffering can be added; but his Sufferings in his Mystical Body are not yet full; by his Personal Sufferings he fully satisfied the Wrath of God, but the Sufferings of his People have not yet satisfied the Wrath of Men; though Millions of precious Saints have shed their Blood for Christ, whose Souls are now lying under the Altar, How long Lord! how long! Yet there are many more coming on behind in the same Path of Persecution, and much Christian Blood must yet be shed before the Mystery of God be finished; and notwithstanding this Lucid Interval, the Clouds seem to be returning again after the Rain. Thus you see to what grievous Sufferings the Merciful God hath sometimes called his dearest People.

Now God may be said to call forth his People to suffer, when he so hedgeth them in by Providence, that there is no way to escape suffering, but by Sinning; whatsoever Providence labours with such a Dilemma as this, is a plain Signification of God's Will to us in that Case. We may not now expect Extraordinary Calls to Suffering-Work, as some of the Saints had of old, Gen. 22. 2. Acts 9. 16. But when our way is so shut up by Providence, that we cannot avoid Suffering, but by stepping over the Hedge of the Command, God will have us look upon that Exigence as his Call to ſuffer: And if the Reaſons he demanded why the Lord, who is ſo inclined to Mercy, doth ſo often hedge in his own People by his Providence in a ſuffering Path; let us know; that in ſo doing he doth both

1. Illuſtrate his own Glory. And
2. Promote his Peoples Happineſs.

Firſt, Hereby the moſt Wiſe God doth Illuſtrate the Glory of his own Name, clearing up the Righteouſneſs of his ways by the ſufferings of his own People: By this the World ſhall ſee, that how well ſoever he loves them, he will not indulge or patronize their Sins; if they will be ſo diſingenuous to abuſe his Favours, he will be ſo juſt to make them ſuffer for their Sins, and by thoſe very Sufferings will provide for his own Glory, which was by them Clouded in the Eyes of the World. He hates not Sin a jot the leſs becauſe it is found in his own People, Amos 3. 2. And though for the magnifying of his Mercy he will pardon their Sins, yet for the clearing of his Righteouſneſs he will take Vengeance upon their Inventions, Pſal. 99. 8.

Moreover, by expoſing his People to ſuch grievous Sufferings, he gives a fit opportunity to manifeſt the Glory of his Power in their Support, and of his Wiſdom in the Marvellous ways of their eſcape and deliverance. It is one of the greateſt wonders in the World how the Church ſubſiſts under ſuch fierce and frequent Aſſaults as are made upon it by its Enemies: I will turn aſide (ſaid Moſes) and ſee this great ſight, why the Buſh is not conſumed, Exod. 3. 3. That Flaming Buſh was the lively Emblem of the oppreſſed Church in Egypt, the crackling Flames noted the heat of their Perſecution, the remaining of the Buſh unconſumed in the Flames ſignified the wonderful Power of God in their Preſervation; no People are ſo Priviledged, ſo Protected, ſo delivered as the People of God; much leſs oppoſition than hath been made againſt the Church, hath overturned and utterly deſtroyed the mighty Monarchies of the World.

Romanis ——— ———

And no leſs admirable is the Wiſdom of God in fruſtrating and defeating the moſt deep and deſperate Deſigns of Hell againſt his poor People. Now you may ſee the moſt Wiſe God going beyond a malicious and ſubtil Devil, overturning in a Moment the deep-laid Deſigns and Contrivances of many Years, and that at the very birth and point of Execution, Heſt. 6. 1. Snaring the Wicked in the Works of their own Hands, making their own Tongues to fall upon them, working out ſuch marvellous Salvations with his own Hand, as fills them with Aſtoniſhment and Wonder: Pſal. 126. 7. When the Lord turned back the Captivity of Sion, We were like them that dreamed.

Secondly, As God provides for his own glory by the Sufferings and troubles of his People: So he advanceth their Happineſs, and greatly promotes their Intereſt thereby.

For firſt, Theſe Troubles are ordered as ſo many occaſions and means to mortifie the Corruptions that are in their Hearts; there are Rank Weeds ſpringing up in the beſt Soil, which need ſuch Winter Weather to rot them; and certainly if we reckon Humility, Heavenly-mindedneſs, Contempt of the World, and longing deſires after Heaven, to be the real Intereſt and Advantage of the Church; then 'tis evident nothing ſo much promotes their Intereſt as a ſuffering Condition doth; Adverſity kills thoſe Corruptions which Proſperity bred.

Secondly, By theſe tryals their Sincerity is cleared, to the Joy and Satisfaction of their own Hearts; many a doubt and fear which had long entangled and perplexed them is removed and anſwered: When Adverſity had given them proof and tryal of their own Hearts, one ſharp tryal wherein God helps us to be faithful, will do more to ſatisfie our Fears, and reſolve our Doubts, than all the Sermons that ever we heard in our Lives could do.

Thirdly, theſe Sufferings and Tryals of the Church are ordained to free it of abundance of Hypocrites, which were its reproaches as well as burthen. Amos 9. 9, 10. Affliction is a Furnace to ſeparate the Droſs from the more pure and noble Gold. Multitudes of Hypocrites, like Flies in a hot Summer, are generated by the Churches Proſperity; but this Winter Weather kills them; many gaudy Profeſſors grow within the Incloſure of the Church, like beautiful Flowers in the Field, where they ſtand, during its Peace and Proſperity, in the pride and bravery of their Gifts and Profeſſions; but the Wind paſſeth over them, and they are gone, and their places ſhall know them no more; to allude to that in Pſal. 103. 16. Thunder and Lightning is very terrible Weather, but exceeding uſeful to purifie and cleanſe the Air.

Fourthly, the Churches Sufferings are ordered and ſanctified to endear them each to other. Times of Common-Suffering are times of Reconciliation, and greater endearments among the People of God, never more endeared, than when moſt Perſecuted; never more united than when moſt ſcattered: Mal. 3. 17. Then they that feared the Lord, ſpake often one to another. Certainly there is ſomething in our Fellowſhip in the ſame Sufferings that is endearing and engaging; but there is much more in the diſcoveries that Perſecution makes of the ſincerity of our Hearts, which, it may be was before entertained with Jealouſie, and there is yet more than all this in the Reproofs of the Rod, whereby they are humbled for their Pride, Wantonneſs, and bitterneſs of their Spirits each to other, and made to cry in the ſenſe of theſe tranſgreſſions, as Pſal. 70. 8. Remember not againſt us former Iniquities.

Laſtly, By theſe Troubles and Diſtreſſes they are awakened to their Duties, and taught to pray more frequently, Spiritually, and Fervently. Ah what drowſineſs and formality is apt to creep in upon the beſt Hearts in the time of Proſperity! but when the Storm riſes, and the Sea grows turbulent and raging, now they cry as the Diſciples to Chriſt, Lord ſave us, we periſh, They ſay Muſick is ſweeteſt upon the Waters; I am ſure the ſweeteſt Melody of Prayer is upon the deep waters of Affliction: For theſe, among many other righteous, wiſe, and holy ends, the Lord permits and orders the Perſecutions and Diſtreſſes of his People.

CHAP

CHAP. III.

Shews that it is usual with God to premonish his People of approaching Tryals and Sufferings; with some account of the manner how, and the reasons why he so forewarns them.

AS Paul had many clear Premonitions and fore-notices of the Sufferings that should befall him at Jerusalem, that he might not be surprized by them when they came; so it is usual with God (though not in such an immediate and extraordinary manner) to admonish the World, and especially his own People, of great Tryals and Sufferings before-hand, Amos 3. 7. Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his Secrets unto his Servants the Prophets.

Thus when he was about to bring the Flood upon the World, he gave one hundred and twenty Years warning of it before it came, Gen. 6. 3. And when he was to destroy Sodom, he saith, Gen. 18. 17. Shall I hide from Abraham the thing that I do? And the like discovery he made about the same Judgment to Lot, Gen. 9. 12, 13, 14. So when the Captivity of the Jews was nigh at hand, the People had many forewarnings of it; God forewarned them both Ministerially, and Providentially; he warned them by the Prophets, Ezek. 3. 17. Hear the Word of my Mouth, and give them warning from me. And when the time drew nigh to execute the Judgment determined upon Jerusalem, and the Temple, how plainly did Christ foretel them of it? Luke 19. 43, 44. Thine Enemies shall cast a Trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the Ground, and thy Children within thee.

Josephus de bello Jud. lib. 7. cap. 2. Audita major humana vox excedere Deos, simul ingens motus excedentium, Tacitus lib. 21.

And when the Storm was just ready to fall, their own Historian tells us a Voice was heard in the Temple, saying Migremus hinc, Let us go hence: Which Voice Tacitus also mentions in his Annals, affirming it to be more than a humane Voice, telling them God was departing, and that it was accompanied with a rushing noise, as of Persons going out; These were extraordinary Warnings. The like Signs have been given to divers other Nations, by dreadful Eclipses of the Heavenly Bodies, Portentous Comets, Earthquakes, and other Signs of Judgment.

Now though we have no ground to expect such extraordinary Warnings; yet we have the most apparent and certain signs of approaching Calamities, after which if they surprize us, the fault must lie in our own inexcusable negligence; for we have a standing Rule to govern our selves in this matter, and that is this: When the same Sins are found in one Nation, which have brought down the Wrath of God upon another Nation, it is an evident sign of Judgment at the Door; for God is Unchangeable, Just, and Holy, and will not savour that in one People which he hath punished in another, nor bless that in one Age which he hath cursed in another. Upon this very ground was it that the Apostle warned the Corinthians by the Example of the Israelites, whose Sins had sinned them in the Wilderness, 1. Cor. 10. 6. Now these things were our Examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted: As if he should say, Look upon those dead Bodies which are as it were cast up upon the Scripture Shore for a warning to you; follow not the same course, lest you meet in the same curse; if you tread the same paths, expect the same punishment; God is as righteous now as he was then, he hates, and will punish Sin in you, as much as he did in them.

Let us therefore consider what these Provocations were, that hastened the wrath of God upon his own Israel, a People that were nigh and dear unto him, a People upon whom he spent as much of the riches of his Patience, as upon any People in the World; that so we may reckon whereabout we are at this day, and what is like to be the Lot of this sinful and provoking Generation, and we shall find by the Consent of all the Prophets, that these Sins were the immediate fore-runners and proper causes of their overthrow.

First, The great corruption of God's Worship among them, kindled his Wrath, and hastened their Ruin, Psal. 106. 39, 40, 41, 42. They were defiled with their own Works, and went a Whoring with their own Inventions; therefore was the Wrath of God kindled against his People, insomuch that he abhorred his own Inheritance, and he gave them into the Hand of the Heathen, and they that hated them ruled over them, their Enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand. They that will not bear the Golden Yoke of Christ, shall be galled with the Iron Yoke of Men: Nothing more provokes the Anger of God, than the adulterating of his Worship; a Man will bear with a Thousand Infirmities in the Wife of his Bosom, but unfaithfulness in the Marriage Covenant breaks his Heart: After the manner of Men so abused and grieved, the Lord expresseth himself. Ezek. 6. 9. I am broken with their Whorish Heart, which hath departed from me, and with their Eyes that go a Whoring after their Idols. Men cannot invent a surer and speedier way to their own Ruin, than to bring their own Inventions into God's Worship.

Secondly, incorrigible Obstinacy and Impenitency under gentler strokes and lesser Judgments, makes way for utter Ruin and Desolation, Amos 4. from the 6th to the 12th Verse. Scarcity, Mildews, Pestilence, and Sword had been tried upon them, but without effect; for the remnant that escaped those Judgments; (although pluckt as so many Brands out of the Fire, in which their Fellow-Sinners Perished) were not Reformed by those gentler and Moderated Judgments.

Thirdly, Stupidity, and senslessness of God's Hand, and the tokens of his Anger was a provoking cause, and forerunning of their National Desolation; they neither saw the Hand of God when it was lifted up, nor humbled themselves under it when it was laid on; the Hand of God is then said to be lifted up, when the Providences of God prepare and posture themselves for our Affliction; when the Clouds of Judgment gather over our Heads, and grow blacker and blacker as theirs did upon them, and do upon us at this day, but they took no notice of it, Isa. 26. 11. Lord, when thy Hand is lifted up, they will not see; and (which is the height of Stupidity) they all remain senseless and regardless when the Hand of God was laid upon them, Isa. 24. 25. Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the Robbers? Did not the Lord? He against whom we have sinned, for they would not walk in his Ways, neither were they obedient to his Law; therefore he hath poured upon them the fury of his Anger, and the ſtrength of Battel, and it hath ſet him on fire round about, and he knew not, and it burned him, yet he laid it not to Heart. O prodigious Sottiſhneſs! It was not ſome ſmall drops of Gods Anger, but the fury of his Anger, not ſome lighter skirmiſh of his Judgments with them, but the ſtrength of Battel; it was not ſome particular ſtrokes upon ſingle Perſons, or Families, but it ſet him on Fire round about, a general Conflagration; yet all this would not awaken them.

Fourthly, the Perſecution of God's Faithful Miniſters and People was another ſin that procured, and a ſign that foretold the deſtruction of their Nation, 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. And the Lord of their Fathers ſent to them by his Meſſengers, riſing up betimes and ſending, becauſe he had compaſſion on his People, and on his Dwelling-place; but they mocked the Meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his Words, and miſuſed his Prophets, until the Wrath of the Lord aroſe againſt his People, till there was no Remedy. There were alſo a number of upright Souls among them, who deſired to worſhip God according to his own Preſcription; but a Snare was laid for them in Mizpah, and a Net ſpread for them upon Tabor, Hoſ. 5. 1. And this haſtened Judgment towards them: Mizpah and Tabor, were placed lying in the way betwixt Samaria and Jeruſalem, where the true Worſhip of God was; and in thoſe places Spies were ſet by the Prieſts to obſerve and inform againſt them, ſo that it became very hazardous to attend the pure and incorrupt Worſhip of God, which quickly haſtened on their Ruin.

Fifthly, The Removal of Godly and uſeful Men by Death in more than ordinary haſte, was to them a ſign of Deſolation at Hand, Iſa. 57. 1. The Righteous periſheth, and no Man layeth it to Heart, and merciful Men are taken away, none conſidering that the Righteous is taken away from the Evil to come. In this caſe God acts towards his People, as the Husbandman in a catching Harveſt doth by his Corn, he hurries it with a ſhuffling haſte into the Barn, when he ſees a Storm coming; or as a careful Father with his Sons that are abroad at School, who ſends his Horſes to fetch them home ſpeedily when he hears the Plague is begun in the Place: Upon this Ground the Prophet Amos bewails himſelf, Amos 7. 1. Woe is me, for I am as when they have gathered the Summer Fruit, as the Grape gleanings of the Vintage, there is no Cluſter to eat: My Soul deſireth the firſt ripe Fruit; q. d. Alas, alas, what miſerable days are at hand! What Miſeries muſt I expect to ſee! The pleaſant Cluſters (i. e.) the Societies of the Saints are gathered away by the Hand of Death; there are but few that remain, here and there a ſingle Saint, like Grapes after the Vintage is done, two or three upon the outmoſt Branches.

Sixthly, The general decay of the Life and Power of Godlineſs amongſt them that were left, foreboded Deſtruction at the Door; this is both a provoking Sin, and a fore running ſign of National Calamity, Hoſea 4. 18. Their Drink is ſower; A Metaphor lively expreſſing the deadneſs and formality of the People in the Worſhip of God, it was like ſower or dead Drink which hath loſt its Spirit and reliſh, and is become flat; ſuch were their Duties, no Spiritual Life, Affection or ſavour in them; they heard as if they heard not, and prayed as if they prayed not; the Ordinances of God were to them as the Ordinances of Men, of which the Apoſtle ſaith, that they Periſh in the uſing.

Seventhly, To conclude, Mutual Animoſities, Jars, and Diviſions, were to them manifeſt Symptoms of National Calamities and Deſolations; for then Ephraim envied Judah, and Judah vexed Ephraim, Iſa. 11. 13. Hoſea 9. 7. The Days of Viſitation are come, the days of recompence are come, Iſrael ſhall know it: The Prophet is a Fool, the ſpiritual Man is mad, for the multitude of thine Iniquities, and the great Hatred.

When ſuch Symptoms of God's Indignation do appear upon any People, the Lord, by them, as by ſo many glazing Meteors and blazing Comets, forewarns the World that his Judgments are near, even at the Door. Theſe ſigns all Men ought to obſerve and behold with trembling. If you ask why doth God uſually give ſuch warnings of his Indignation before it comes, the Reaſons are:

1. To prevent the Execution.
2. To make them more Tollerable.
3. To leave the Incorrigible inexcuſable.

Firſt, Warning is given with deſign to prevent the Execution of Judgments, Amos 4. 12. Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Iſrael; and becauſe I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael; i. e. Prepare thy ſelf to meet me in the way of my Judgments, by Humiliation and Interceſſion, to prevent the Execution: And what elſe was the Deſign of God in ſending Jonah to that great City Nineveh, but to excite them to Repentance for the prevention of their Ruin. This Jonah knew to be the Lord's meaning, how poſitive ſoever the words of his Commiſſion were; and therefore he declined the Meſſage to ſecure his Credit; knowing that if upon warning given they Repented, the Gracious Nature of God would ſoon melt into Compaſſion over them, and free Grace would make him appear as a Liar for ſo we muſt expound his Words, Jonah 4. 2. Was not this my ſaying when I was yet in my Country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarſhiſh, For I knew that thou art a gracious God, and Merciful, ſlow to Anger, and of great Kindneſs, and repenteſt thee of the Evil. q. d. Yea Lord, I knew before hand it would come to this; thou ſendeſt me poſitively to denounce thy Judgments to Nineveh, mean time deſiring nothing more than that the Execution of them might be prevented by their Repentance: And thus thy Mercy hath expoſed my Reputation in ſaving them from Deſtruction.

Secondly, God forewarns his People of Judgment to make them more tolerable when they come; expected Evils are nothing ſo heavy, as thoſe that come by ſurprizal; for look as the long expectation of a Mercy makes it leſs ſweet, our Thoughts having anticipated and ſucked out much of the ſweetneſs before-hand; ſo the expectation of Judgments before they befall us, make them leſs bitter and burthenſome than elſe they would be, the Soul having inured and accuſtom'd it ſelf to them by frequent Thoughts, and prepared and made ready it ſelf to entertain them, as Paul did my Text. To prevent the Diſciples ſurprizal and offence at thoſe days of Perſecution that were coming upon them, Chriſt foretold them, and gave them fair warning before hand, Joh. 16. 4.

Thirdly, He forewarns his People of approaching Dangers, to leave the Incorrigible wholly inexcuſa-cusable, that those who have no sense of Sin, nor care to prevent Ruin, might have no Cloak for their folly when Judgments overtake them; What wilt thou say when he shall punish thee? Jer. 13. 21, 22. As if he should say, What Plea or Apology is left thee after so many fair Warnings and timely Premonitions? Thou canst not say I have surprized thee, or that thou wast ruined before thou wast warned; Thy Destruction therefore is of thy self.

CHAP. IV.

Demonstrating the Excellency of a prepared Heart for the worst of Sufferings; and what a blessed thing it is to be ready to be bound, or to die for Christ, as Paul here was.

I Am Ready] O blessed frame of Spirit! how hard, but how happy is it to get a Heart so tempered! Every Christian can say, I would be ready, and the Lord make me ready for Sufferings; but few can say I am ready, my Heart is prepared and fitted for such a work; yet this example shews us it is attainable; and what a blessed thing it is to attain it, the following particulars will abundantly convince us.

First, Readiness for sufferings will bring the Heart of a Christian to an holy Rest and Tranquility in a Suffering Hour, and prevent that Anxiety, Perturbation, and distraction of Mind, which puts the sinking weight into Afflictions; the more cares, fears and troubles we have before our Sufferings come, the more calm, quiet and composed we are like to be when our Sufferings are come indeed. It is admirable to consider with what Peace and Patience Job entertained his Troubles, which considering the kinds, degrees and manner in which they befel him, one would think they should at least have startled and amazed him, and put his Soul (as gracious and mortified as it was) into great disorder and confusion; but you find the contrary; never did the Patience of a Man Triumph at that rate over Adversity, he worships God, owns his Hand, and resigns himself up to his Pleasure, Job 1. 20, 21. And whence was this? Surely had his Troubles come by way of Surprize, he could never have carried it at that rate; but in the days of his Peace and Prosperity he had prepared for such a day as this, Job 3. 25, 26. I was not in safety, neither had I rest, yet Trouble came; The thing that I feared (saith he) is come upon me. He laid it to Heart before it came, and therefore it neither distracted nor brake the Heart when it came. In like manner the Prophet Habakkuk stood upon his Watch-Tower, i. e. He made his Observations by the Word upon the probable events of Providence, whereby he got a clear foresight of those troubulous days that were at hand; which though it made him tremble in himself, yet it gave him rest in the day of Evil, Hab. 3. 16, 17, 18. There is a Twofold rest in the day of evil, viz.

1. A Rest of Deliverance.
2. A Rest of Contentation.

It is a singular Mercy to find rest in a Man's own Spirit, to enjoy inward Peace and Tranquility of Mind, when there is no rest without; and the way to obtain this, is to foresee, count upon, and make due preparation for troubulous times before-hand: Evils that come by way of Surprizal are not only amazing, but very frequently destructive Evils; 'tis a sad aggravation to feel a Misery before we fear it; those Calamities that find Men secure, do usually leave them desperate; the Enemy that comes upon your Backs hath a great advantage to ruin us, yet this is the common case of the World. For Man knoweth not his time, but as the Fishes are taken in an evil Net, and as the Birds that are caught in the Snare; so are the Sons of Men snared in an evil time, when it falleth on them suddenly, Eccles. 8. 12. Thus perished the old World; there was but one Noah provided for the Flood, and he only with his Family was preserved in it; all the rest were Eating and Drinking, Marrying, and giving in Marriage, until the Flood came and swept them all away, Mat. 24. 38. Men will not use their foreseeing Faculties, but because it is all quiet to day, they conclude it shall be so to Morrow. Those that are at rest in their habitations, and have got a soft Pillow under their heads, are apt to fall asleep in Security, and dream pleasantly of continued Rest and Peace, and loath they are to interrupt their sensual Pleasure with Melancholy Thoughts of changes and sufferings.

Philosophers tell us, that immediately before an Earthquake, the Air is very quiet and serene, and before the great Rain falls, the Wind usually lies; Were the aspect of second causes much more favourable and encouraging than it is; yet there were cause enough for all that are wise in Heart to fear and tremble, under the consideration of that National guilt which is treasured up, and will certainly produce distress and trouble.

O Christians look out for days of Visitation, prepare for a Storm, and provide you an Ark, an hiding place in Christ and the Promises, as ever you expect Rest and Peace in your own Spirits, when the Earth shall be full of Tumults, Uproars and Desolations.

Secondly, Our Preparations for Sufferings is an excellent Argument of the Honesty and Sincerity of our Hearts in the matters of Religion; He that makes account of Sufferings, and is daily at work with his own Heart, mortifying its Corruptions, weaning its Worldly Affections, exciting and making ready its Suffering-Graces, resolving in the Strength of God to take his Lot with Christ, whereever and howsoever it shall fall, this is the Man that hath deliberately closed with Christ upon his own terms, and is like to be the durable and victorious Christian.

As for Hypocrites, (Christ's Summer Friends) they have either their Exceptions against the Severities of Religion, and study to secure to themselves a Retreat from danger, or else they rush inconsiderately into the Profession of Christ, never debating the terms which he proposes to all that will follow him, Mark 8. 34. The necessity of a rational and well advised closure with Christ upon suffering and self-denying terms, is by himself fully set forth in that excellent Parable, Luke 14. 25, 26, 27, 28. There was a great Multitude that followed him at that time; Christ began to grow in request among them, they flocked from all parts to see and hear him; but he foresaw that if once a sharp Tryal should befall them, it would quickly thin and diminish that great Multitude, and reduce them, like Gideons Host, into a little Handful; and therefore he resolves to deal candidly and plainly with them, he propounds his terms, and sets down his Conditions, Conditions, which every one of them must subscribe that will follow him, the Sum of which is this; Let him deny himself, take up his Cross, and follow me. And to evince the rationality of these terms, he argues from the most common and obvious practices of Men in their Civil Affairs: No Man that exerciseth Reason will begin to build an House, and lay a large Foundation, when he is not provided with a Stock to carry up the Walls, and compleat the Work; no Man in his Wits would engage with a Handful of Men against a great armed Multitude; possibly they may intend a great armed Multitude; possibly they may intend to face, but no man would think they intend to Fight the Enemy on such a disadvantage: Just so stands the case in our Profession of Christ, if we really intend to go through with the Business of Religion, we must sit down and compute the cost and charges of Christianity, think upon the worst, as well as the best, cast upon Reproaches, Prisons and Death for his sake, as well as the easier and more pleasant parts of Active Obedience; and having so done, if then we can be content to hazard and forego all the rest upon his account, and accordingly manage our selves in a day of Suffering, then we deal sincerely with Christ, and clear our selves from the danger of Hypocrisie. It is for want of this that so many Professors faint and fall away in times of Temptation, furnishing the Devil with so many Triumphs over Religion, and the more upright Professors of it. It was for want of Depth of Earth, (i. e.) a deep Consideration, and well-rooted Resolution at first, that the stony-ground Hypocrite so quickly withered away, when the Sun of Persecution began to shine fervently upon him, Mat. 13. 5, 6. And doubtless it is to prevent this fatal Issue of our Profession, that God makes such deep wounds by Conviction upon his Peoples Hearts at first; it is for our Establishment in future Tryals and Sufferings, that he so distresses and humbles them, that he makes Sin so bitter and burthensome to them, as well knowing that all this is no more than needs, to prevent their returning again to Sin in the times of their Temptation.

O Professor, if thou be one that art come to Christ in this way, and hast thus deliberately closed with him; if thou hast as well bethought thy self of bearing his Cross, as of wearing his Crown, thou hast then a fair Evidence of the uprightness of thy Heart, than which the World affords not a sweeter Comfort.

Thirdly, the Advantage of Preparations for Sufferings lies in this, that it prevents and cuts off the Scandal of the Cross, with respect both to our selves and others.

First, It prevents our own offence at Sufferings; and by Christ's own Testimony, That Soul is Blessed that is not offended in him, Mat. 11. 6. Among the Multitudes of Professors, few are found that are no way offended at the Suffering of Christ; they expected much Peace, Honour and Prosperity in the ways of Religion, but finding their Expectations frustrated, and their Carnal Interest rather exposed than secured by their Profession of Christ, they go back like those, Joh. 6. 66. And walk no more with him. And it is very remarkable, that Christ dates the offence that Men shall take at him, from the first appearance of Sufferings, Mat. 24. 8, 9. All these are the beginnings of Sorrows, and then shall many be offended. Sorrows and Apostacies Commence together.

But Reader, if thou be one that makest it thy Business to foresee and prepare for an evil day, thou wilt have as good thoughts of Christ and his ways at the lowest Ebb, as ever thou hadst in the greatest flourish and time of Prosperity: Great Peace (saith the Psalmist) have they that love thy Law, and nothing shall offend them. O happy Soul, whom no Troubles, Reproaches, or Sufferings are able to offend! Thou mayest meet with Prisons, Death, Banishments; yea, but none of these things shall offend or stumble thee, but thou shalt peaceably and safely pass over them, because they are no more than thou expectest and providest for.

Secondly, And by this means thou wilt also prevent the offence and scandals of others at the ways of Religion: It is a sad and dangerous thing to be an occasion of stumbling, either to the weak or to the wicked. Woe to the World because of Offences, for it must needs be that offences come; but Woe to that man by whom the offences cometh, Mat. 18. 7. The Apostacies and sinful compliances of ungrounded Professors, and weak Christians in times of Temptation, are the woful occasions of prejudicing others against Religion, and shedding the Blood of Souls. Ah, it were much better never to be in the ways of Profession, than to be there only as a Stone of stumbling, and a Rock of offence to others: But all this Mischief will be prevented, by thy serious Expectation of, and Provision for the Evil Day.

Fourthly, A fourth Excellency of Preparation for Sufferings lies in this, that it hath a tendency to convince and awaken the drowsie World. O! if the Lord's People would but fall about this Work in earnest, and live as People that are providing for a Storm, and resolve in the Strength of God to run all hazards and hardships for Christ, I am perswaded it would be of more use, to startle and convince the World, than all the Sermons that ever they heard: For here is that which dashes and cuts the throat of all our Labours, we preach up Self-denial, and contempt of Life and Liberty for Christ. Now, though they hear us preach the necessity and exellency of these things, and hear you profess them as your Principles; yet when they look upon the Lives of Professors in times of danger, and find no proportion betwixt Profession and Practice, when they see us cling to the World, and are as loath to give it up as others; when they observe Prisons and Sufferings affright and terrifie us as much as those that make no Profession; when they see us start like Hares at every sound, and that we live not loose from the World, as Men prepared to let it go, and give it up for Christ: Why then they conclude that we dare not trust our own Principles, when it comes to the Push; And how can they be perswaded to believe that which they think we our selves do not really believe, although we perswade them to believe it?

My Friends; the World hath Eyes to see what you can do, as well as Ears to hear what you can say; and as long as they see you do no more than others, you may talk your Hearts out, e're they will believe your way is better than others.

But now when Persecution ariseth, did they see you providing your selves for it, and putting on your Harness to enter the Lists, carry your dearest Enjoyments in your Hands, and put on the Shoo of Preparation, to follow the Lord through the roughest ways of Sufferings: This would convince to to purpose, and preach the Excellency of Christ the Vanity of the Creature, the rationality and certainty of Christian Principles, in a more intelligible and rouzing Dialect to them, than all our cheap and easie Commendations of them did. And hence it is, that Noah was said to condemn the World, Heb. 11. 7. By Faith Noah being warned of God, of things not seen as yet, (i. e.) of the Deluge that was coming, though no appearance of it yet, the Heavens being as clear as ever; yet believing the Threatning, He was moved with Fear: The Fear of God, an Effect of his Faith in the Word of God, moved, (i. e.) impelled him to his Duty: Set him about his Preparation Work to provide an Ark; and this was it by which he condemned the World, left them excuseless. For they not only heard of an approaching Flood by his Ministry, but now saw he himself believed what he preached, by his daily Preparation against it came. O consider this, how much it would tend to the World's Conviction. Now they will see that you are in good earnest and that there is a reality in Godliness This will induce them to search into the matter more than ever, and remove those Prejudices they have taken up against the Good Ways of God, as if they were but Phantasms and Conceits.

5. In the next place, this foresight and preparation, must needs be an excellent thing, because the Spirit of God every where sets an honourable Character upon it, and always mentions such persons with some singular commendation and respect. These only were wise Men in the Judgment of God; and all the rest (what great Politicians soever they are famed to be among Men) are accounted Fools, Prov. 22. 3. Eccles. 2. 14. The Wise Man's Eyes are in his Head; that is, he is a foreseeing Man; but the Fool goes on, and is punished: Rushes on without Consideration, suspecting no danger that he at present sees not, and so smarts for his Folly. Beloved, there are Signs of the Times, as well as of the Weather, Matt. 16. 3. You may see the Clouds of Judgment gathering before the Storm falls upon you: And this is the meaning of Zeph. 2. 1, 2. Gather your selves together, before the Decree bring forth, and the day pass as the Chaff. Where there is a Conception of Judgment, there will be a Birth, unless the Reformations and Prayers of the Saints prove it a miscarrying Womb. But it requires Wisdom to discern this; they must be Men of much observation, that can descry it at a great distance: Yet this may be done, by considering what GOD hath done in like cases in former Ages, when Nations have been guilty of the same sins as now they are: For God is as Just now as then, and hates Sin as much as ever he did; and partly by attending to things present, to what fulness and maturity the Sins of a Nation are grown, Joel 3. 16. Or what beginnings of Judgment are already upon a People, as Harbingers and Fore-runners of more at hand, Luke 3. 30, 31. Sam. 2. 12. Or what is the universal note and cry of God's Ministers, who are his Watchmen to foresee danger, Ezek. 3. 17. And his Trumpets to discover it, Numb. 10. 8. And when these have one Mouth given them, certainly there is much in it, Luke 1. 70. Or lastly, by pondering those Scripture-Prophesies that yet remain to be fulfilled: They must all go out their times, and accomplish their full number of Years and Months; but certainly they shall be fulfilled in their Seasons.

By attending to these things, a Christian may give a near guess at the Judgments that are approaching a Nation, and so order himself accordingly, Eccles. 8. 5. A Wise Man's Heart discerns both Time and Judgment. And this is even in the Judgment of God) a choice point of Wisdom. Whereas on the contrary, heedless and careless ones, that regard not these things are branded for Fools, and upbraided with more Bruitishness than the Beasts of the Field, or Fowls of the Air, Mat. 16. 3. Jer. 8. 7. The Stork in the Heavens, the Swallow, Turtle, and Crane, observe their Seasons of departing, and returning upon the approach of the Winter and Spring, and that by a natural Instinct, whereby they prolong their Lives, which else must perish. But though God hath made Man wiser than the Fowls of the Air, and Beasts of the Earth, which by Instinct will quit colder Climates, or run to the Hedge when Winter or Storms approach; yet the Heavens may be astonished at this, to see Nature cast by sin so far below it self, and that in reasonable Creatures.

But now, if this be foreseen, then there is a singular advantage in a Man's Hand, either to use the means of preventing those approaching Calamities, Zeph. 2. 3. Or if it cannot be prevented, yet to take Sanctuary in Christ, Mic. 5. 5. To run to the Promises and Attributes, Esa. 26. ult. And so have a good Roof over his Head while the Storm falls, and the Weather is tempestuous abroad. And therefore certainly this Preparation is an excellent thing. Whatever the Spirit of God speaks in the commendation of foreseeing Evils, is with respect to this Duty of preparing for them; for foresight of Evils without Preparation, rather increases than diminishes the Misery.

6. A sixth Excellency of Preparation, lies in the Influence that it hath into a Christians stability in the Evil Day. You cannot but know that your stability in that critical hour of Temptation, is a choice and singular Mercy, in as much as all you are worth in the other World depends upon your standing then, Rev. 21. 7, 8. Rom. 2. 6, 7. Luke 22. 28. Neither can you be ignorant how much you are like to be tried and put to it then, whether you respect the Enemy that engages you, Eph. 6. 12. Or your own weakness, who have been so often foiled in lesser Tryals. Jer. 11. 5. All the Grace you have will be little enough to keep the Field, and bear you up from sinking; and therefore it cannot but be a Blessed thing, to be able to stand and cope with the greatest difficulties, in such a nick of Tryal as that will be. Now he that expects to do this, must put on the whole Armour of God. See Ephes. 6. 12, 13, 14. There's no Expectation of standing in the evil day, except your foot be shod, that is, your Wills prepared, with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace.

It is true, that our ability to stand, is not from our own inherent Grace; For by his strength shall no Man prevail, 1 Sam. 2. 9. And yet it is as true, that without Grace, both inherent in us, and excited and prepared for Action, we cannot expect to stand: For these two, Grace inherent in us, and Grace exciting and assisting without, are not opposed, but co-ordinated. Grace in us, is the Weapon by which our Enemy falls; but then that Weapon must be managed by the Hand

Hand of the Spirit. —— Well then, look upon this as a choice Mercy which tends so much to your stability,

7. A seventh Excellency of a prepared Heart is, that it is a very high testification of our love to Jesus Christ, when we thus shew our willingness to take our Lot with him, and follow him whereever he goes. What an high expression of love was that of Ruth to her Mother Naomi? I will not go back, but where thou lodgest I will lodge, and where thou goest I will go. 'Tis excellent when a Soul can say to Christ, as Ittai to David; 2 Sam. 15. 21. Surely, in what place my Lord the King shall be; whether in Death, or in life, even there also will thy servant be. This is love indeed to cleave to him in a time of such distresses and dangers. This is love which the Waters cannot quench, nor the Flood drown, Cant. 1. 6. Probatio amoris, est exhibitio operis, If you love Christ indeed, shew your love by some fruits of it; and surely, this is a very choice fruit and proof of it. There be many that profess a great deal of love to Christ; but when it comes to this Touch-stone, it appears false and counterfeit, but a meer flourish, when no danger is near: But that Soul which buckles on the Shoo of Preparation, to follow him through Thorns and Briars, and over the Rocks and Mountains of Difficulties and Troubles, loves him indeed, Jer. 2. 2, 3. Beloved, it's one of the choicest discoveries of your love to your Master Christ; yea, it is such a testification of love to him, as Angels are not capable of. They shew their love by their readiness to do his Will, in the Execution of which they fly as with Wings, Ezek. 1. 24. But you only have the Happiness of testifying your love, by your readiness to suffer for him, and is not this Excellent?

8. When the heart is prepared for the worst Sufferings; it's an Argument that your Will is subdued to the Will of God; for till this be done in a good measure, you cannot stand ready to suffer for him. But now, to have the Will subdued by Grace to the Will of God, is a very choice and excellent frame indeed; for in this the main power of Grace lieth: Look in what faculty the chief Residence and strength of sin was, in the same chief Residence the power of Grace, after Conversion, is also: Now it is in the Will, that the strength and power of sin (before Conversion) lay. See Job. 5. 40. Psal. 81. 11. Jer. 44. 16, 17. And indeed it was the Devils strong Hold, which in the day of Christs Power, he storms and reduces to his obedience, Psal. 110. 3. Oh what a blessed thing is this! The Will rules the Man, it hath the Empire of the whole Man, it commands the Faculties of the Soul, imperio politico; and it commands the Members of the Body, imperio despotico. Now to have Christ and Grace rule that, which rules and commands your inner and outer Man too, is no small Mercy: And a better Evidence that it is so cannot be given than this, you stand ready, or do seriously prepare your selves to suffer the hardest things for Christ: If your will can like that Work, its an Argument Grace hath conquered and subdued your wills indeed.

9. This Preparation of Heart to Sufferings, is an excellent thing, because God is so abundantly pleased with it, that he often excuses them from sufferings in whom he finds it, and accepts it, as if the Service had been actually done. So Abraham, Gen. 22. 12. He was ready to offer up his Isaac's life to God; but God seeing his servants heart ready prepared, and ready for that difficult service, and high point of Self-denial, provided himself another Sacrifice instead of Isaac. Abraham shall have his Isaac back again, and that with advantage; for he hath with him not only a choice Experiment of his love to God, but Gods high approbation of him, and acceptation of his offering. It was all one, in respect of Divine Acceptance, as if he had been slain; and so the Scripture represents it, Jam. 2. 21. And in this sence, that Promise is often made good to Gods People, who stand ready to give up their Isaacs, their lives, liberties, and dearest enjoyments to the Lord; He that will lose his Life for my Names sake, shall save it, Luke 9. 24.

Now what a blessed thing is this! you may this way have the Crown of Martyrdom, and yet not shed one drop of Blood for Christ actually. Ah how kindly doth God accept it at his poor Creatures hands, when he sees how willing they are to serve him with their best enjoyments! It is well (saith he to David) that it was in thy heart, 1 King. 8. 18.

10. And then lastly, to add no more, it is beyond Controversie an excellent and blessed thing; because should such a Christian, after all his pains and preparations, be over-born, and fall by Temptation; yet this preparation of his heart excuses his fall, from those aggravations that are upon the falls of others, and will give him both support under such a Condition, and encouragement to hope for a speedy recovery out of it. Ah! It's no small comfort, when a poor Soul that hath been overborn by temptation, can come to God and say, Lord, thou knowest that this was not a wilful departure from my duty, but contrary to the bent and resolution of my Heart, thou sawest my diligence before hand to prepare for it; thou sawest my Fears and Tremblings of heart about it; O Lord forgive, O Lord recover thy Servant, wash away this spot, it is one of the spots of thy Children, an infirmity, not a Rebellion: This may much stay the Soul.

Surely in this case, thou hast many grounds of comfort that another wants: For thy sin being but an infirmity, (1.) It's that which is common to all Saints, Psal. 103. 11, 12, 13, 14. (2.) God hath mercy and pardons for such sins as these, else woe to the holiest Soul, Psal. 130. 3, 4. Solomon, upon this ground, pleads for mercy for them that prepared their heart, 2 Chron. 30. 18, 19. And God hath laid in sweet grounds of encouragement for such Souls, Numb. 15. 27, 28. Heb. 5. 2. How tenderly doth Christ deal with the Disciples under this kind of sin, Mat. 26. 41. And though they forsook him for a time, yet he received him again; though they fled from him, yet they all returned again, and appeared boldly for Christ afterwards, and sealed their Confession of him with their Blood: And that which recovered them again was this, that their fall and departure was contrary to the resolution and standing frame and bent of their hearts; for they resolved all to cleave to him to the death, Mat. 26. 35. Whereas those that engaged in a profession of him inconsiderately, and never resolved nor prepared for the worst, fell off from him, and never returned any more, Joh. 6. 66. So then, upon the whole, you cannot but grant, that it is a very blessed and excellent thing, to prepare thus for the greatest Sufferings that that can betail us for Christ. We come next to shew wherein it lies.

CHAP. V.

Evincing the necessity of a sound and real work of Grace upon the Heart, to fit a Man for the Sufferings of Christ.

HAving shewed you that God doth sometimes put his dearest People upon very hard Services for him, and what an excellent thing it is to prepare our selves to obey the Call of God to them. In the next place I come to shew you, wherein this Preparation or Readiness for Sufferings consists, and how many things concur and contribute their assistance to this Work.

Now there is a twofold Preparation or Readiness for Suffering; the one is habitual, the other Actual: That Habitual Readiness is nothing else but the Inclination of a Soul to suffer any thing for Christ; which Inclination ariseth from the Principles of Grace infused into the Soul: But then as Fire, though it have a natural Inclination to ascend, yet may be violently depresst and hindred, that it cannot ascend actually, so may it be in this case; and therefore, before a Man can be fitted for Sufferings, as Paul was, there must to this habitual be superadded an Actual Readiness, which is nothing else but the rouzing of Grace out of the sleepy and dull habits, and awakening it to its work in a time of need: as the Lion was said to lash himself with his Tail, to rouze up his Courage before he fight. The former is a remote Power, the latter a Proxim and immediate Power. I must handle the forme in this Chapter, and you are to know that it consisteth in a sound and real work of Grace or Conversion wrought upon the Soul; without which, I shall make it evidently appear to you, that no Man can be fit or ready to suffer as a Christian.

Whatever stock of Natural Courage, Moral Principles, or common Gifts of the Spirit be lodged in any Man's Breast, yet all this (without Special Grace) can never fit him to suffer for Christ. And had not this Work been really and soundly wrought upon the Heart of this Blessed Man, as indeed it was, Acts 9. 3, 4, 5. He had quickly fainted under his Sufferings; and so will every Soul sooner or later do, that suffers not upon the same Principles he did.

1. For first, No Man can suffer for Christ until he be able to deny himself. See Mat. 16. 4. Self denial goes in order of nature before Sufferings. Beloved, in a Suffering Hour the Interests of Christ and Self meet like two Men upon a narrow Bridge, one must of necessity go back, or the other cannot pass on: If you cannot now deny self you must now deny Christ. The Yoke and Dominion of self must be cast off, or else Christ's Yoke and Burthen cannot be taken on.

It is confest that Self may not only consist with, but be a Motive to some kind of Sufferings: Ambition and Applause may carry a Man far this way; Pride is a Salamander that it seems can live in the Flames of Martyrdom, 1 Cor. 13. 3. But to be a Servant to Self, and a true Sufferer for Christ, is incompatible. Self may make you the Devil's Martyrs, but Grace only can make you Christ's Martyrs. So that let a Man be seemingly carried for a while with never so high a Tide of Zeal for Christ, yet if self be the Spring that feeds it, those Self-ends like so many little Ditches joined to the Bank of a River, shall suck and draw away the Water into themselves, that the lofty stream will sink and come to nothing e're it have ran far: So then of necessity Self must be dethroned in the Hearts of Christ's suffering Servants

But now it is real Grace only that depose Self, and subjects its Interest to Christs; for Sanctification is nothing else but the dethroning of exalted self, and the setting up of Christ's Interest above it in the Soul. This is it that alters the Property of all a Man hath, and superscribes them with a new Title, Holiness to the Lord, Isa. 23. 18. Zech. 14. 20, 21. Thenceforth a Man looks at himself as none of his own, but past into anothers Right, 1 Cor. 6. 19. And that he must neither live, nor act ultimately for himself, but for Christ, Rom. 14. 7. Heb. 13. 7, 8. Phil. 1. 20. He is no more as a Proprietor, but a Steward of all he hath; and so holds upon those terms to lay it out, or lay it down, as may best serve his Master's ends and glory.

All that he is or hath, is by Grace subordinated to Christ; and once subordinated, then no more opposed to him, subordinata non pugnant. This is it that makes him say, I care not what becomes of me or mine, so Christ may be glorified. Let Christ be magnified in my Body, whether it be by Life, or Death, Phil. 1. 20.

By Conversion Christ enters the Soul, as an Army doth an Enemies Garrison by Storm, and when he is possessed of it by Grace, he presently divides the whole Spoil of Self betwixt himself and his Church. This is the first that evinces the necessity of a Work of Grace, to prepare the Heart for Sufferings. 2 Cor. 10, 5.

2. And then in the next place, it is as evident that a Man can never be fit to suffer hard things for Christ, until his Spirit be enlarged, raised, and enobled, so that he be able to despise dangers, and look all difficulties in the face. That low and private Spirit must be removed, and a publick Spirit must possess him. If a Man be of a feeble and effeminate Spirit, every petty danger will daunt and sink him; Delicacy and Tenderness is as unsuitable to a Christian as to a Soldier, 2 Tim. 2. 3. They that mean to enter into the Kingdom of God must resolve to make their way through that brake of Troubles betwixt them and it, 2 Tim. 3. 12. They that will be Crowned with Victory, must stand to it, and play the Men, as that Word imports, 2 Cor. 16. 13. Look over all the Sacred and Humane Histories, and see if you can find a Man that ever honoured Christ by Suffering, that was not of a raised and noble Spirit, and in some measure able to contemn both the allurements and threats of Men. So those three noble Jews, Dan. 3. 16. 17. So Moses, Heb. 11. 27. And so our Apostle, Acts 20. 24. And the same Heroick and brave Spirit was found in the succeeding Ages amongst the Witnesses of Christ. When Valence the Emperor endeavoured to draw Basil from the Faith by Offers of Preferment, Offer these things (said he) to Children; when he threatned him with torments, Threaten these things (said he) to your Purple Gallants that live Delicately. And the same Basil relating the Story of the forty Martyrs, saith, That when great Honours and Preferments were offered them to draw them from Christ, their Answer was, Why offer you these small things of the World to us (O Emperor) when you know the whole World is contemned by us! So Luther, Money could not tempt him, nor the fear of Man daunt him. Let me (ſaid he in his Letter to Staupicius) be accounted Proud, Covetous, a Murtherer, Guilty of all vices, rather than of wicked Silence and Cowardize in the Cauſe of Chriſt. Thus you ſee to what an height and holy greatneſs the Spirits of Suffering Saints in all Ages have been raiſed.

But now it is Grace that thus raiſes the Spirits of Men above all the ſmiles and honours, frowns and fears of Men: and no other Principle but Grace can do it. There is indeed a Natural Stoutneſs and Generoſity in ſome, which may carry them far, as it's ſaid of Alexander, that when any great danger approached him, his courage would riſe, and he would ſay, Jam periculum par animo Alexandri; Here is a danger fit for Alexander to encounter: So Pompey when diſſwaded from a dangerous Voyage anſwered, Neceſſe eſt ut eam, non ut vivam; It's neceſſary that I go, not that I live. But this being fed only by a natural Spring, can carry a Man no higher than Nature, and will flag at laſt. If applauſe and the obſervation of the world ſupply it not, it quickly ebbs and fails.

But as Grace raiſes Men much higher; ſo it maintains it even when there is nothing to encourage without; when forſaken of all Creatures, and viſibly ſupports, 2 Tim. 4. 10. And this it doth three ways: (1.) By giving him that hath it a view of far greater things, which ſhrinks up all temporary things, and makes them appear but trifles and ſmall matters, Rom. 8. 18. 2 Cor 4. 18. By Grace a Man riſes with Chriſt, Col. 3. 1. It ſes him upon his high places, and thence he looks down upon things below, as very poor and inconſiderable. The great Cities of Campania ſeem but little ſpots to them that ſtand on the top of the Alps. (2.) By teaching him to value and meaſure all things by another Rule than he was wont to do. He did once meaſure life, liberty, riches, honours, by ſenſe and time; and then they ſeemed great things, and it was hard to deny them, or thus to ſlight them; but now he values and meaſures all by Faith and Eternity; and eſteems nothing great and excellent, but what hath a reference to the Glory of God, and an influence into Eternity. (3.) Grace raiſes and enobles the Spirit thus, becauſe it is the Divine Nature, 'tis the Spirit of Chriſt infuſed into a poor Worm, which makes a ſtrange alteration on him, transforms him into another manner of perſon; as much difference betwixt his Spirit now and what it was, as betwixt the Spirit of a Child that is filled with ſmall matters, and taken up with Toys; and of a grave Statesman, that is daily imployed about the grand affairs of a Kingdom.

3. A Man can never ſuffer as a Chriſtian, till his will be ſubjected to the Will of God. He that ſuffers involuntary, and out of neceſſity, not out of Choice, ſhall neither have acceptance nor Reward from God. Of neceſſity the will muſt be ſubjected; A Man can never ſay, Thy will be done, till he can firſt ſay, Not my will.

But it is Grace only that thus conquers and ſubjects the will of Man to God's, Pſal 110. 3. This is that which exalts God's Authority in the Soul, and makes the Heart to ſtoop and tremble at his Commands. 'Tis this which makes our will to write its fiat at the foot of every Command, and its placet under every Order it receives from God. No ſooner was Grace entred into the Soul of Paul, but preſently he crys out, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. The Will is to the Soul what the Wheels are to the Chariot; and Grace is to Will what Oil is to thoſe Wheels. When we receive the Spirit of Grace, we are ſaid to receive an Unction from the Holy One, 1 Joh. 2. 20. And then the Soul is made as the Chariots of Aminadab, Cant. 6. 12. Non tardat uncta rota, it runs freely after the Lord, and chearfully addreſſeth it ſelf to every Service.

4. A Man can never ſuffer as a Chriſtian, until his heart be compoſed, fixed, and determinated to follow the Lord through all hazards and difficulties. As long as a man is hefitating and unreſolved what to do, whether to go forward, or turn back again to the proſperous World, when a Man is at ſuch a pauſe, and ſtand in his way, he is very unfit for Sufferings. All ſuch Diviſions do both weaken the Soul, and ſtrengthen the Temptation: The Devils work is more than half done to his hand in ſuch a Soul, and he is now as unfit to endure hardſhip for Chriſt, as a Ship is to ride out a Storm, that hath neither Cable, Anchor, nor Ballaſt, to hold and ſettle it, but lies at the Mercy of every Wave, Jam. 1. 8. The double-minded man is unſtable in all his Ways. But it's Grace, and nothing beſides it, that brings the heart to a fixed reſolution and ſettlement to follow the Lord. 'Tis Grace that eſtabliſhes the Heart, Heb. 13. 9. And unites it to fear the Name of God, Pſal. 86. 11. This gathers all the Streams into one Channel, and then it runs with much ſtrength and ſweeps away all Obſtacles before it. So that look as it is with a wicked man that hath ſold himſelf to do wickedly, if he be ſet upon any one deſign of ſin, he pours out his whole heart and ſtrength in the proſecution of that deſign, which is the ground of that ſaying, Liberet me Deus ab homine unius tantum negotii, Let God deliver me from a Man of one only deſign. He will do it to purpoſe: So is it alſo in Grace; if the Heart be compoſed, fixed, and fully reſolved for God, nothing ſhall then ſtand before him. And herein lies much of a Chriſtians habitual fitneſs and ability to ſuffer.

5. The neceſſity of ſaving-grace in all Sufferers for Chriſt will farther appear from this Conſideration, that he who will run all hazards for Chriſt, had need of a continual ſupply of Strength and Refreſhment from time to time He muſt not depend on any thing that is failable: for what ſhall he do then, when that Stock is ſpent, and he hath no Proviſion left to live upon? Now all natural Qualifications, yea, all the common gifts of the Spirit are failable and ſhort-liv'd things; they are like a ſweet Flower in the Boſom, that is an Ornament for a little while, but withers preſently: Or like a Pond or Brook occaſioned by a great fall of Rain, which quickly ſinks and dries up, becauſe it is not fed by Springs in the bottom; as other Fountain-waters are; and hence it is they cannot continue and hold out when Sufferings come, Mat. 13. 21. Becauſe there is no Root to nouriſh and ſupport. The Hypocrite will not always call upon God, Job 27. 10. Though they may keep company with Chriſt a few Miles in this dirty way, yet they muſt turn back at laſt, and ſhake Hands eternally with him, John 6. 66. Theſe Comets may ſeem to ſhine for a time among the Stars, but when that earthly matter is ſpent, they muſt fall and loſe their glory.

But now Grace is an Everlaſting Principle, it hath Springs in the bottom that never fail. It ſhall be in him (ſaith Chriſt) a Well of Water ſpringing up into Eternal Life, Joh. 4. 14. The Spirit Spirit of God supplies it from time to time as need requires. It hath daily Incomes from Heaven. 2 Cor. 1. 5. Phil. 4. 13. Col. 1. 11. So that it is our Union with Christ the Fountain by Grace, that is the true ground of our constancy and long-suffering.

Munimur quatenus unimur.

6. And then lastly, it will appear by this also, that there is an absolute necessity of a real change by Grace on all that will suffer for Christ; because although we may engage our selves in Sufferings without it, yet we can never manage our Sufferings like Christians without it. They will neither be honourable or acceptable to God, nor yet beneficial and comfortable to our selves or others, except they be performed from this Principle of Grace: For upon what Principle soever beside this any Man is acted in Religion, it will either cause him to decline Sufferings for Christ; or, if he be engaged in them, yet he will little credit Religion by his Sufferings. They will either be spoiled by an ill management, or his own Pride will devour the praise and glory of them. I do not deny, but a Man that's Graceless, may suffer many hard things upon the account of his Profession, and suffer them all in vain, as these Scriptures manifest. See 1 Cor. 13. 3 Gal 3. 4. And although you may find many sweet Promises made to those that suffer for Christ, yet you must consider that those pure and Spiritual ends and Motives, by which Men ought to be acted in their Sufferings, are always supposed and implied in all these Promises that are made to the external Action. And sometimes it is expresst, 1 Pet. 4. 16. To suffer [as a Christian] is to suffer from pure Christian Principles, and in a Christian manner, with Meekness, Patience, Self-denial, &c. And this Grace only can enable you to do: So that by all this, I suppose, what I have undertaken in this Character, viz. To evince the necessity of a work of Grace to pass upon you, before Sufferings for Religion come, is by all this performed to satisfaction.

CHAP. VI.

Wherein the Nature of this Work of Grace, in which our habitual fitness for suffering lies, is briefly opened, and an account given of the great advantage the gracious Person hath for any, even the hardest work thereby.

HAving in the former Chapter plainly evinced the necessity of saving Grace to a Man for Sufferings; it will be expected now that some account be given you of the nature of this Work, and how it advantages a Man for the discharge of the hardest Services in Religion: Both which I shall open in this Chapter, by a distinct Explication of the parts of this description of it.

This work of Grace, of which I am here to speak, consists in the real change of the whole Man, by the Spirit of God, whereby he is prepared for every good Work: In which brief description, I shall open these four things to you.

What saving Grace is.

1. That it is a Change; this is palpably evident, both from Scripture and Experience. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are past away: behold, all things are become new; and it is so sensible a Change; that it's called a Turning from Darkness to Light, Act. 26. 18. And a new Creature formed and brought forth. But to be little more distinct and particular, there are several other Changes that pass upon Men, which must not be mistaken for this; and therefore, (1.) It is not a meer change of the Judgment from Error to Truth, from Paganism to Christianity. Such a change Simon Magus had, yet still remained in the gall of bitterness, and fast bound in the Bonds of Iniquity, Acts 8. 23. (2.) Nor only of a Man's Practice, from Prophaneness to Civility: This is common among such as live under the Light of the Gospel, which breaking into Mens Consciences, thwarts their Lusts, and over-awes them with the fears of Hell: Which is no more than what the Gentiles had, Rom. 2. 15. (3.) Nor is it a change from meer Morality, to meer Formality in Religion. Thus Hypocrites are changed, by the common gifts of the Spirit, illuminating their Minds, and slightly touching their Affections, Heb. 6. 4, 5. (4.) Nor is it such a Change as Justification makes, which is relative, and only alters the state and condition, Rom. 5. 1, 2. (5.) Lastly, it is not a Change of the Essence of a Man; he remains essentially the same Person still. But this Change consists in the infusion of new habits of Grace into the old Faculties; which immediately depose Sin from its dominion over the Soul, and deliver up the Soul into the Hands and Government of Christ, so that it lives no more to its self, but to Christ. This is that Change whereof we speak: And this Change (2.) I assert to be Real, no Phansie, nor delusion; not a groundless conceit, but it is really existent, extra mentem, whether you conceit it or not. Indeed the blind World would perswade us it is supposititious, and phantastick; and that there is no such real diference betwixt one Man and another, as we affirm Grace makes. And hence it is, that whoever professeth it, is presently branded for a Phanatick; and that Scripture, Esa. 56. 5. Stand by thy self, I am holier than thou, &c. clapt in their Teeth, in their absurd and perverse sence of it.

But I shall briefly offer these seven things to your consideration, which will abundantly evince the reality of it, and at once both stop the slanderous Mouths of Ignorant Men, and silence those Atheistical Surmises, which at any time Satan may inject into the Hearts of God's own People touching this matter. And first, let it be considered, that the Spirit of God hath represented to us this work of Grace, under such Names and Notions in Scripture, as if they had been chosen purposely to obviate this Calumny. It's called a Creature, Gal. 6. 15. A Man, Pet. 3. 4. A New Birth, Joh. 3. 3. Christ formed in us, Gal. 4. 19. All which expres its reality, and that it is not a conceited thing. (2.) It appears to be real by the marvellous effects it hath upon a Man, turning him both in Judgment, Will, Affections and Practice quite counter to what he was before. This is evident in that famous instance of Paul, Gal. 1. 23. Which is abundantly attested and sealed by the constant Experience of all gracious Souls that are witnesses of the Truth hereof. (3.) A Divine and Almighty Power goes forth to produce and work it; and hence Faith is said to be of the operation of God, Col. 2. 12. Yea, that the same Power which raised Jesus Christ from the Dead, goes to the production of it, Ephes. 1. 19, 20.

And if ſo, how much leſs than Blaſphemy is it, to call it a Conceit or Phanſie? Doth God ſet on work his Infinite Power to beget a Phanſie, or raiſe an Imagination? (4) Conceits and Whimſies abound moſt in Men of weak Reaſon: Children and ſuch as are crackt in their Underſtandings have moſt of them: Strength of Reaſon Baniſhes them, as the Sun doth Miſts and Vapours: But now the more Rational any gracious Perſon is, by ſo much the more he is fixed, ſettled, and ſatisfied in the Grounds of Religion: Yea, there is the higheſt and pureſt Reaſon in Religion; and when this change is wrought upon Men, it's carried on in a rational way, Eaſ 1. 18. Joh. 16. 9 The Spirit over-powers the Underſtanding with clear demonſtrations, and ſilences all Objections, Pleas and Pretences to the contrary. (5.) It's a real thing, and gracious Souls know it to be ſo; elſe ſo many Thouſands of the Saints would never have ſuffered ſo many cruel Torments and Miſeries, rather than forſake a Phanſie, and ſo ſave all. They have been ſo well ſatisfied of the reality of that which the World calls a Phanſie, that they have choſen rather to embrace the Stake than deny it. The conſtancy of Chriſtians, in cleaving to Religion, was common to a Proverb among the Heathen; who when they would expreſs the greateſt difficulty, would ſay, You may as ſoon turn a Chriſtian from Chriſt, as do it. Surely no Wiſe Man would Sacrifice his Liberty, Eſtate, Life, and all that is dear, for a Conceit. 6. It's reality appears in its uniformity in all thoſe on whom it is wrought: They have all obtained like precious Faith, 2 Pet. 1. 1. They are all changed into the ſame Image, 2 Cor. 3. 18 Three Thouſand Perſons affected in one and the ſame manner at one Sermon; Act. 2. 37. Could one and the ſame Conceit poſſeſs them all together? Take two Chriſtians that live a thouſand Miles diſtant from each other, that never heard of one another, let theſe Perſons be examined, and their reports compared, and ſee if they do not ſubſtantially agree, and whether as Face anſwers Face in Water, ſo their Experiences do not anſwer one to the other? Which could never be if it were a groundleſs Conceit. (7) And laſtly, it's manifeſt, it is a reality, and puts a real difference betwixt one, and another, becauſe God carries himſelf ſo differently towards them, after their Converſion; now he ſmiles, before he frowned; now they are under the Promiſes, before they were under the Threats and Curſes: And what a vaſt difference will be put betwixt the one and the other in that great day? See Mat. 25. Surely, if theſe Nominal Chriſtians did but differ in Conceit, not really from others, the Righteous Judge of all the Earth would not paſs ſuch a different Judgment and Doom upon them.

By all this you evidently ſee, that Grace is a real Change, and not a conceited one.

3. We ſay that this real Change paſſes upon the whole Man: he is changed in Soul, Body and Practice; all things are become new. (1.) This Change appears in his Soul: For by it, (1.) His Underſtanding is ſtrangely altered, and receives things in another way than formerly. It did look at Chriſt and things Eternal, as uncertain and light matters; The things that are ſeen and preſent, did moſtly affect, and appeared great and excellent: It admired Riches and Honours, while Chriſt and Glory were over-looked and deſpiſed. But now all theſe Temporals are eſteemed Dung, Droſs, Vanity, Phil. 3. 8. 11. Rom. 8. 5. And Jeſus Chriſt is now eſteemed the Wiſdom and the Power of God, 1 Cor. 1. 23. 24. It did look on the Saints as deſpicable Perſons, but now as the Excellent of the Earth, Pſal. 16. 3. Strictneſs and Duty was once eſteemed a needleſs thing, but now the only thing deſirable, Pſal. 119. 14. Oh, ſaith the renewed Soul, where were mine eyes, that I could ſee no more Excellency in Chriſt, his ways, and people? (2.) It ſtops not there (as it doth in Hypocrites) but paſſes on further and reduces the Will; that ſtrong hold is taken, and delivered up to Chriſt. It did rebel againſt God, and could not be ſubject, but now it ſubmits, Acts 9. 6. Lord what wilt thou have me to do? In the day of Chriſt's Power, he preſents himſelf in all his drawing glory and lovelineſs before the Will, and cryes to that ſtubborn Faculty, Open to me, open to me; with which Word there goes forth an opening and ſubduing Power, which the Will no ſooner feels, but it ſpontaneouſly moves towards him, and ſaith, Stand open ye everlaſting Gates, that the King of Glory may come in. Henceforth it votes for God, ſubſcribes and ſubmits to his Will as its only Rule and Law; and indeed, it becomes the Principal Seat where Grace makes its Reſidence; and where, for the moſt part, it is more viſible than in any other Faculty. For after a Man hath ſearched for it in all other Faculties, and cannot diſcern it, yet here he ordinarily finds it; to will is preſent, Rom. 7. 18. (3.) The Will being thus gained to Chriſt, Love comes in of courſe; it, feeling the power of Grace alſo, preſently changeth its Object: It ſeizeth not ſo greedily on Earthly Objects as before, but is ſtrangely cooled and deadned to them, by the appearance of a far greater Glory in Jeſus Chriſt; which hath ſo captivated the Soul, and ſtrongly attracted this Affection, that its now become very remiſs in all its actings towards them; and often (eſpecially at firſt) it is ſo weaned from all things on Earth, that the Temptation ſeems to lie on the other extream, even in too great neglect of our lawful Employments and Comforts. Now Jeſus Chriſt, Cant. 1. 3. His Ordinances, Pſal. 119. 97. And his Saints 1 Joh. 3. 14. are the only Delights, and ſweeteſt Companions; he could ſit from Morning till Night, to hear Diſcourſes of Chriſt his Beloved, and could live and die in the company of his People, whoſe company is now moſt delightful and ſweet, Pſal. 119. 63. (4) The Deſires are altered, they pant no more after the Duſt of the Earth, Pſal. 4. 6. but pant for God, as the Hart for the Brooks of Water, Pſal. 42. 1. Yea, ſo big is the Soul with them, that its ſometimes ready to faint, yea to break with the longing it hath after him, Pſal. 119. 20. (5) The Thoughts are changed, Pſal. 119. 113. and the Thoughts of God are now moſt precious, Pſal. 139. 47. Muſing, when alone, of him; and in its Solitudes, the Soul entertains itſelf with a delightful Feaſt, which its Thoughts of God bring in to refreſh it, Pſal. 63. 5, 6. (6) The Deſigns and Projects of the Soul are changed; all are now ſwallowed up in one grand Deſign, even to approve himſelf to God, and be accepted of him, 2 Cor. 5. 9. And if he fail not there, it will not much trouble him, if all his other Deſigns ſhould be daſhed. It were eaſie to inſtance in the reſt of the Affections, and ſhew how Grace ſpreads and diffuſes it ſelf into them all, as Light in in the Air, or Leaven in the Lump; but this may ſuffice, to ſhew how it paſſes upon the whole Soul, and enters the ſeveral Faculties and Affections thereof.

And the Soul being thus poſſeſt for God, the Body with all its Members is conſequently reſigned up to him alſo: For the Will hath the Empire of the Members of the Body, as well as of the Paſſions and Affections of the Soul. Theſe are not any more delivered up to execute the Luſts of Satan, but are yielded up to God for his ends and uſes, Rom. 6. 19. And thus you have the third thing in the deſcription made out alſo, that it is an univerſal, as well as a real Change. But then,

4. Laſtly, you muſt know that by this change God prepares a Man for Choice and Excellent ſervices; and this indeed is the main thing deſign'd in this Chapter, and is the Reſult and Iſſue of all that hath hitherto been ſaid about this work of Grace.

Beloved, can you imagine that God would employ his Infinite and Glorious Power, to produce this new Creature in ſuch an excellent nature, it being the Maſter-piece of all his works of Wonder wrought upon Man, and not aim at ſome ſingular Uſe, and excellent End? Every wiſe Agent deſigns ſome End; and what God aims at he hath told us, Iſa. 43. 21. Epheſ. 2. 20. And accordingly he expects ſingular things from ſuch Perſons, Mat. 5. 47. If God had not aimed at ſome new Service, he need not have made a new Creature: the old Creature was fit enough for the old uſe and ſervice it was employed in. But God hath ſome choice ſervice to be done, wherein he will be glorified, he will have his Name glorified, even in this world, by the active and paſſive obedience of his People. But this being far above all the power of Nature, God therefore brings them forth in a New and Heavenly nature, endowed with rare ſupernatural and Divine Qualities, by which it is fitted and excellently prepared for any Service of God, by doing or by ſuffering which before he had no fitneſs or ability for.

The very make and Conſtitution of this New Creature ſpeaks its uſe and end: As now, if a Man look upon a Sword or Knife (ſuppoſing he had never ſeen either before) yet, I ſay, by viewing the ſhape and properties of it, he will ſay, this was made to cut. Even ſo here, this new Creature was formed for ſome glorious and ſingular ſervice for God, to which it is exceedingly advantaged, whether God put you upon doing or ſuffering. If you ask wherein this Advantage of the new Creature to Honour God either way lies: I anſwer, It principally conſiſts in it's heavenly inclination, or natural tendency to God. This is its great advantage; for by virtue of this:

1. If God call a Man to any Duty, there is a Principle within, cloſing with the Command without, and moving the Soul freely and ſpontaneouſly to duty, Pſal. 27. 8. If God ſay, Seek my Face, Such an heart ecchoes to the call, Thy Face Lord will I ſeek. And this is it which is call'd, The writing of God's law in the Heart, Jer. 31. 33. and muſt needs be a mighty advantage; for now is work is its delight and wages, Pſal. 19. 11. The Command to ſuch a Soul is not grievous, Joh. 5. 3. And by this its kept from tiring in uty, and being weary of its work; as you ſee hat pains Children can take at Play, how they ill run and ſweat, and endure knocks and falls, d take no notice of it; put them upon any maal labour, and they cannot endure half ſo much. When our Work is our delight, we never faint nor tire at it. This inclination to God is to the Soul as wings to bird, or ſails to a ſhip. This carries the Soul eaſily through every duty. O there is a vaſt difference betwixt a Man that works for wages, one one whoſe work is wages to him. And here you may at once ſee wherein the principal difference betwixt the Hypocrite and the real Chriſtian lies in the performance of duty; and alſo have a true account of the reaſon why one perſeveres in his work to the end, when the other flags. Why, here is the true account of both; the one is moved to duty from a natural inclination to it, the other is forced upon it by ſome external motives: For the Hypocrite takes no delight in the ſpiritual and inward part of duty, but is ſecretly weary of it, Mal. 1. 13. only his ambition and ſelf-ends put him upon it as a task. But now the upright heart goes to God as his joy, Pſal. 43. 4. And ſaith, It is good for me to draw nigh to God, Pſal. 73. ult. When the Sabbath comes, (that Golden Spot of the Week) oh how he longs to ſee the Beauty of the Lord in his Ordinances! Pſal. 27. 4. And when engaged in the Worſhip of God, he cannot ſatisfie himſelf in Bodily Service, or to ſerve God in the oldneſs of the letter. He knoweth that this perſwaſion cometh not of him that called him, Gal. 5. 7, 8. He labours to engage his heart to approach to God, Jer. 30. 21. And hence thoſe mountings of heart, and violent ſallies of the deſires heavenward. And thus you ſee one rare advantage to glorify God actively, flowing from the inclination of this new Creature

2. But then ſecondly; Hence in like manner hath the Soul as great an advantage for ſufferings: For this new Creature having ſuch a natural tendency to God will enable the Soul, in which it is to break its way to God through all the interpoſing obſtacles and diſcouragements. What are perſecutions, what are reproaches, what are the fears and frowns of Enemies, but ſo many blocks thrown in the Souls way to keep it from God and duty? And indeed where this Principle of Grace is wanting, they prove inacceſſible Mountains. Graceleſs hearts are ſtalled and quite diſcouraged by them; but now this tendency of the Soul to God enables the Chriſtian to break his way through all. You may ſay of him in ſuch a caſe, as the Hiſtorian doth of Hannibal (who forced a way over the Alps with Fire and Vinegar) either he will find a way, or make a way; Shall Sword or Famine; or any other Creature ſeparate me from Chriſt? ſaith an upright Soul. No, no, it will through all to him, and that from this tendency of his new Nature. You ſee in Nature, every thing hath a tendency to its center; Fire will up, do what you can to ſuppreſs it; Water will to the Sea, if it meet with Dams, yea Mountans in its way; if it cannot bear them down it will creep about ſome other way, and wind and turn to find a Paſſage to the Sea. God is the center of all gracious Spirits, and Grace will carry the Soul through all to him. This is Grace, and this is your advantage by it in the moſt difficult part of your work. It will carry you through all; make the hardeſt work eaſie and pleaſant, 2 Cor. 12. 10. And if great ſufferings or temptations interpoſe betwixt you and your God, it will break through all, and enable you to withſtand all; as it did Paul in the Text, who forced his way not only through the Fury of Enemies, but alſo through the entreaties and tears Friends.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

In which the neceſſity of getting clear Evidences of this work of Grace in us, in order to our readineſs for ſufferings is held forth; the nature of that Evidence opened, and divers things that Cloud and obſcure it, removed out of the way.

I Have done with habitual readineſs, conſiſting in an inwrought work of Graces. The following particulars are the thing in which our actual readineſs lies. And of them that which comes next to be handled, is the getting of clear Evidences in our own Souls that this work hath been wrought on us, this will exceedingly tend to your ſtrengthning, and comfort in a ſuffering hour. Bleſſed Paul, who here profeſſeth himſelf ready both for Bonds and Death, was clear in this point. 2 Tim. 1. 12. 2 Tim. 4. 6. 7. And indeed had he been cloudy and dark in this, he could not have ſaid, I am Ready. No, no, he had been in an ill caſe to undertake that Journey to Jeruſalem: And thou wilt find it a ſingular advantage in dark and difficult days to have all clear and right within. Now for the opening of this, I will ſhew:

1. What the Evidence or Manifeſtation of the work of Grace is.

2. How it appears to be of ſuch great advantage to a ſuffering Saint.

3. Preſcribe ſome Rules for the obtaining of it.

1. What it is. And in ſhort it's nothing elſe but the Spirits ſhining upon his own work in the hearts of Believers, thereby enabling them ſenſibly to ſee and feel it to their own Satisfaction. And this is expreſt in Scripture under a pleaſant variety of Metaphors. Sometimes it is called the ſhedding abroad of the love of God in the heart, Rom. 5. 5. Sometimes the lifting up of the light of Gods countenance, Pſal. 4. 6. and ſometimes it's expreſt without a Trope by Chriſts manifeſting himſelf to the Soul, John 14. 21.

For the opening of it, I deſire you would conſider theſe ſix things.

1. That it is attainable by Believers in this life, and that in a very high degree and meaſure. Many of the Saints have had it in a full meaſure, 1 Cor. 2. 12. 1 John 3. 24. John 21. 15.

2. Though it be attainable by Believers, yet it is a thing ſeparable from true Grace, and many precious Souls have gone mourning for the want of it, Iſa. 50. 10. This was ſometimes the caſe of Heman, David, Job, and multitudes more.

3. During its continuance, it is the ſweeteſt thing in the World. It ſwallows up all Trouble, and doubles all other comforts: It puts more gladneſs into the heart, than the increaſe of Corn and Wine, Pſal. 4. 6. Suavis hora, ſed brevis mora; ſapit quidem ſuaviſſimè, ſed guſtatur Rariſſimè, Bern.

4. Both in the Continuation and removal of it the Spirit acts arbitrarily. No man can ſay how long he ſhall walk in this pleaſant Light, Pſal. 30. 7. By thy Favour thou haſt made my Mountain ſtand ſtrong, thou hiddeſt thy face, and I was troubled. And when in darkneſs, none can ſay how long it will be e're that ſweet light break forth again. God can ſcatter the Cloud unexpectedly in a moment, Cant. 3. 4. It was but a little that I paſſed from them, but I found him whom my Soul loveth. There is ſuch an obſervable difference in David's Spirit in ſome Pſalms, as if one man had written the beginning, and another the end of them.

5. Though God can quickly remove the darkneſs and doubts of a Soul, yet ordinarily the Saints find it a very hard and difficult thing to obtain and preſerve the Evidences of their Graces. Such is the darkneſs, deadneſs, and deceitfulneſs of the heart; ſo much unevenneſs and inconſtancy in their practice, ſo many counterfeits of Grace, and ſo many wiles and devices of Satan to rob them of their peace, that few (in compariſon) live in a conſtant and quiet fruition of it.

6. Notwithſtanding all theſe things which increaſe the difficulty, yet God hath afforded his people a ſure Light, and ſufficient means, in the diligent uſe and improvement whereof they may attain a certainty of the work of Grace in them. And there is a threefold Light by which it may moſt clearly and infallibly be diſcovered.

1. Scripture Light, which is able to diſcover the ſecrets of a mans heart to him; and is therefore compared to the Anatomizers Knife, Heb. 4. 12.

2. The Innate light of Grace it ſelf; or if you will, the light of experience, 1 John 5. 10. It hath ſome properties and operations which are as eſſential, neceſſary, and inſeparable, as heat is to the fire, and may be as ſenſibly felt and perceived by the Soul, Pſal. 119. 20.

3. The Light of the Spirit, ſuperadded to both the former, which is ſometimes called its Earneſt, ſometimes its Seal. The Spirit doth both plant the habits, excite and draw forth the acts, and alſo ſhine upon his own work that the Soul may ſee it; and that ſometimes with ſuch a degree of light as only begets peace, and quiets the heart though it do not fully conquer all the doubts of it. And at other times the heart is irradiated with ſo clear a Beam of light that it's able to draw forth the Triumphant Concluſion, and ſay, Now I know the things that are freely given me of God: I believe, and am ſure.

And ſo much briefly for the opening of the nature of this Evidence.

2. I ſhall ſhew you the neceſſity of it to a ſuffering Saint, in order to the right management of a ſuffering condition.

And this will appear by the conſideration of five things.

1. Dem. You will readily grant that the Chriſtians love to God hath a mighty influence into all his ſufferings for God. This Grace of Love enables him victorioufly to break through all difficulties and diſcouragements. The ſtouds cannot drown it, nor the Waters quench it, Cant. 8. verſe 6, 7. It facilitates the greateſt hardſhips, 1 John 5. ver. 3. And whatever a Man ſuffer, if it be not from this Principle, it is neither acceptable to God, nor available to himſelf, 1 Cor. 13. 3.

But now nothing more inflames and quickens the Chriſtians love to God, than the knowledge of his intereſt in him, and the ſenſible perception and taſte of his love to the Soul. Our love to God is but a reflection of his own love; and the more powerful the ſtroke of the direct Beam is, the more is that of the reflex Beam alſo. Never doth the Flame of Jah burn with a more vehement heat than when the Soul hath the moſt clear Manifeſtation festations of its interest in Christ and his Benefits, Luke 7. 47.

2. Dem. It must needs be of singular use to a suffering Saint, because it takes out the sinking weight of affliction. That which sinks and breaks the Spirit, is the conjunction and meering of inward and outward troubles together; then if the Lord do not strangely and extraordinarily support the Soul, it's wrackt and overwhelmed as the Ship in which Paul sailed was, when it fell into a place where two Seas met, Acts 27. 41. Oh how tempestuous a Sea doth that Soul fail in, that hath fightings without, and fears within! How must that poor Christians heart tremble and meditate terrour, that when he retires from troubles without, for some comfort and support within, shall find a sad Addition to his troubles from whence he expected relief against them! Hence it was that Jeremy so earnestly deprecates such a misery, Be not thou a terrour to me, thou art my hope in the day of evil, Jer 17. 17. This is prevented by this means: If a man have a clear breast, and all be quiet within, he is like one that hath a good Roof over his head when the Storm falls. We glory in tribulation, because the love of God is shed abroad in our Hearts, Rom. 5. 3, 5.

3. Dem. It is a Fountain of joy and comfort in the darkest and saddest hour. Hence the glorious triumphs of Saints in their afflictions; Rom. 5. 5 And in the Christians joy in the Lord, lies much of his strength for sufferings, Neh. 8. 10. If once the Spirit droop and sink, the man is in a bad case to suffer: Holy joy; it is the oil that makes the Chariot-wheels of the Soul free to follow the Lord, Non tardat uncta rota. To suffer with joyfulness for Christ is a qualification that Gods Eye is much upon in his suffering Servants, Col 1. 11. How did the famous Worthies that went before us magnifie Christ, and glorifie religion by their holy triumphs of their Faith and Joy under Tribulation! One kiss'd the Apparitor that brought him news of his Condemnation, and was like a man transported with an excess of Joy. Another upon the pronouncing of the Sentence kneels down, and with Hands and Eyes lifted up, solemnly blesses God for such a day as that. Oh how is Christ magnified by this; And this cannot be unless interest be cleared. It's true, the faith of Recumbency gives the Soul a secreet support, and enables the Christian to live; but the faith of Evidence keeps him lively, and prevents all those uncomfortable and uncomely sinkings and despondencies of Spirit, 2 Cor. 4. 16. 17. And therefore cannot but be of a singular use to a Soul in such a time.

4. Dem. Lastly, it is of special use to a Christian under Sufferings, inasmuch as it enables him to repel the temptations that attend upon sufferings. Nothing sets a keener edge upon his indignation against unworthy compliances, than this. Indeed a poor Cloudy and dubious Christian will be apt to catch at deliverance, though upon terms dishonourable to Christ: but he that is clear in point of interest, abhors compositions and capitulations upon unworthy terms and conditions, Heb. 11. 35. Heb. 10. 34. He that sees the gain and reward of suffering, will think he is offered to loss, when life and deliverance are set before him upon such hard terms as sin is.

And thus you see what influence it hath into a suffering condition.

In the next place I promised to prescribe some Rules for the attaining of this Evidence, and the dispelling of those doubts by which it is usually clouded in the Souls of Believers. And oh, that by the faithful use of them you may attain it, against a suffering day come upon you.

1. Rule. And the first Rule I shall give you is this, make it your business to improve Grace more; for the more vigorous it is, the more evidential it must needs be, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Oh how much time have many Christians spent in inquiring after the lowest signs of sincerity, and what may consist with Grace: Which had they spent in the diligent improvement of the means of Grace for the increasing of it, they would have found it a shorter cut to peace and comfort by much.

2. Mistake not the Rule, by which you are to try your selves, lest you give a false judgment upon your selves. Some are apt to make those things signs of Grace, which are not; and when the falseness of them is detected, how is that poor Soul plunged into doubts and fears, that leaned upon them? As now, If a man should conclude his sincerity from his diligence in attending on the Word preached; this is but a Paralogism (as the Apostles calls it) Jam. 1. 22. By which a man deceiveth his own Soul: For that which is a note or mark, must be proper to the thing notified, and not common to any thing else. There are divers sorts of marks; some are exclusive, the principal use of which is to convince bold pretenders, and discover Hypocrites: Such is that, 1 Cor. 9. 9. It is a most certain sign where these are, there is no Grace; but yet it will not follow on the contrary, that where these are not, there is Grace. See Luke 18. 11. Others are inclusive, the use of which is not so much for trying of the truth, as the strength and degrees of Grace. As now, when Faith is described by the radiancy of it, or by some of its heroick acts, and promises made to some raised degrees and operations of it; as that, Ephes. 3. 12. &c. Here a mistake is easily made. Besides these, or rather betwixt these, are another sort of marks, which are called positive marks; and these agreeing to the lowest degree of Grace, are for the tryal of the truth and sincerity of it. Such are these, 1 John 4. 13. 1 John 2. 3. Matth. 5. 3. Be sure to try by a proper mark.

3. Rule. Take heed of such sins as violate and waste the Conscience; for these will quickly raise a Mist, and involve the Soul in Clouds and darkness, Psal. 51. 8. &c. Such are sins against Light, and the reclamations of Conscience.

4. Rule. Labour to shun those common mikastes that Christians make in Judging of their state; amongst which I shall select these five as principal ones.

1. Call not your condition into question upon every failing, and involuntary lapse into sin. Iniquities prevail against me, as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away, Psal. 65. 3. In short, thou needest not call thy Condition into question, provided thou find thy Spirit working as Paul's did under the surprizals of temptation: viz. If (1) thou do approve of and delight in the Law, though thou fall short of it in thy Practice, Rom. 7. 12, 14. (2) If thy failings be involuntary, and against the Resolution and bent of thy Soul, vers. 25. 18, 19. (3) If it be the load and burthen of thy Soul, vers. 24. (4) If the thoughts of deliverance comfort thee, verse 25.

2. Question not the truth of thy Grace, because it it was not wrought in the ſame way and manner in thee, as in others: For there is great variety, as to the circumſtances of time and manner, betwixt the Spirits operations upon one and another. Compare the Hiſtory of Paul's Converſion with that of the Jaylor, Zacheus, or Lydia, and ſee the variety of circumſtances.

3. Conclude not that you have no Grace becauſe you feel not thoſe tranſports and raviſhing joys that other Chriſtians ſpeak of. If thou canſt not ſay as Paul doth, Rom. 8. 38. Yet bleſs God, if thou canſt but breath forth ſuch language as that, Mark 9. 24. Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief.

4. Say not thou haſt no Grace, becauſe of the high attainments of ſome Hypocrites, who in ſome things may excel thee. When ſome perſons read the ſixth Chapter to the Hebrews, they are ſtartled to ſee to what a glorious height the Hypocrite may ſoar; not conſidering that there are theſe three things wherein they excel the moſt glorious Hypocrite in the World. (1.) That Self was never dethroned in Hypocrites, as it is in them. All that an Hypocrite doth is for himſelf. (2) The Hypocrite never hated every ſin, as he doth; but hath ſtill ſome Agag, Rimmon, or Delilah. (3) That the Hypocrite never acted in duty from the bent and inclination of a new nature, taking delight in heavenly imployment, but is moved rather as a Clock by the weights and poiſes of ſome external motives and advantages.

5. Conclude not you have no Grace, becauſe you grow not ſo ſenſibly as ſome other Chriſtians do. You may be divers ways miſtaken about this. (1) You may meaſure your growth by your deſires, and then it appears nothing; for the Chriſtian aims high, and graſps at all. (2) Or by comparing your ſelves with ſuch as have larger Capacities, Time, and Advantages, than you. (3.) Or by comparing your Graces with other Mens Gifts, which you miſtake for their Graces. (4) Or by thinking that all growth is upward in Joy, Peace, and Comfort; whereas you may grow in Mortification and Humility, which is as true a growth as the former. Oh! take heed of theſe miſtakes; they have been very prejudicial to the peace of many Chriſtians.

5. Rule. Laſtly, Decline not ſufferings when God gives you a fair call to them. Oh! the Chriſtians ſuffering time is commonly his cleareſt and moſt comfortable time. Then the Spirit of God and glory relieth on them, 1 Pet. 4. 14. That which hath been in ſuſpence for ſome years, is decided and cleared in a ſuffering hour. And thus I have ſhewed you how to attain this neceſſary qualification alſo.

CHAP. VIII.

Diſcovering the neceſſity of an improved faith for the right management of ſufferings, and directing to ſome ſpecial means for the improvement thereof.

THE next thing conducing to our actual readineſs for Sufferings, is the improvement of Faith to ſome conſiderable degree of ſtrength. This is the Grace that muſt do the main ſervice in ſuch an hour, as hath the principal hand in ſupporting the Chriſtian under every burden. This is the Grace that Crowns our Heads with Victory in the day of Battle, Epheſ. 6. 16. Above all taking the ſhield of Faith. It's true, every grace is of uſe, and contributes aſſiſtance: Suffering Saints have been beholding to them all. But of this we may ſay, as Solomon of the Vertuous Woman; Though many Graces have done excellently, yet this excels them all. In this Grace ready Paul was eminent. It was the life he daily lived, Gal. 2. 20. Oh! It is a precious Grace, 2 Pet. 1. 1. So precious that Chriſt who ſeldom admired at any thing, yet wondred at this, Mat. 8. 10. A victorious Grace it is that overcomes all difficulties, Mark 9. 23. By this Sword it was that all thoſe famous Heroes, Heb. 11. atchieved all thoſe glorious Conqueſts; and in every diſtreſs it may ſay to the Soul, as Chriſt to the Diſciples, John 15. 5. Without me ye can do nothing. This is that Sword that hath obtained ſo many Victories over the World, 1 John 5. 4. And that ruſty Shield that hath quenched ſo many deadly Darts of Temptation, has been levelled at the very heart of a Chriſtian in the day of Battle. By it a Chriſtian lives, when all outward ſenſible comforts die, Heb. 2 4. It's the ground upon which the Chriſtian fixes his Foot, and never fails under him, 2 Cor. 4. 24. The neceſſity of it will more clearly appear, by Conſidering how many ways it relieves the Soul in trouble, and diſburthens the Heart of all it's ſinking loads and preſſures: There are two things that ſink a Man's Spirit when under Sufferings; viz. The greatneſs of the Troubles and the weakneſs of the Soul to bear them; againſt both which Faith relieves the Soul, viz. by making a weak Soul ſtrong, and heavy Troubles light.

Firſt, It makes a weak Soul ſtrong and able to bear; and this it doth divers ways.

1. By purging out of the Soul thoſe enfeebling and weakening Diſtempers; not only guilt in general, which is to the Soul as a Wound upon the bearing Shoulder, Rom. 5. 1. The removal whereof enables the Soul to bear any other burden, Iſa. 33. 24. But it alſo removes Fear, that Tyrant Paſſion that cuts the Nerves of the Soul. For, as Faith comes in, ſo Fear goes out: Look in what degree the Fear of God is aſcendant in the Soul, proportionably this ſinful Fear of the Creature declines and vaniſheth, Iſa. 8. 12, 13. This Fear extinguiſhes that, as the Sun-ſhine puts out fire, The Righteous is as bold as a Lyon. Prov. 28. 1. The כפיר ſignifies a young Lyon in his hot blood, that knows no ſuch thing as fear: And look how much of the Soul is empty of Faith, ſo much it's filled with Fear: Why are ye fearful, O ye of little Faith? Mat. 8. 26. Certainly, it's a rare advantage, to be freed from the common diſtraction, in times of common deſtruction: and this advantage the Soul has by Faith.

2. It ſtrengthens the Soul to bear Afflictions and hardſhips, not only by purging out its weakning Diſtempers, but by turning it ſelf to Chriſt, in whom all its ſtrength lies, and that ſuitably to the ſeveral Exigencies of the Soul, in all its Diſtreſſes. Doth Darkneſs, like the ſhaddow of death, overſpread the Earth, and all the Lights of Earthly Comforts diſappear, then Faith ſupports the Heart by looking to the Lord, Mic. 7. 7. And the look of Faith exceedingly revives the Heart, Pſ. 34. 5. And enlightens the Soul. Doth God pluck away all Earthly Props from under your feet, and leave you nothing viſible to reſt upon; in this Exigence Faith puts forth a ſuitable Act, viz. Reſting or ſtaying upon God, Eſa. 26. 3. and by this the Soul comes to be quieted and eſtabliſhed, Pſ.

125 1. Do temptations ſtrive to put off the Soul from Chriſt, and diſcourage it from leaning upon the Promiſe? Then it puts forth an act of Reſolution, Job 13. 15. And ſo breaks its way through that diſcouragement; Or hath the Soul been long ſeeking God for deliverance out of Trouble, and ſtill there is ſilence in Heaven, no Anſwer comes; but inſtead of an Anſwer comes a Temptation, to throw up the Duty, and ſeek to deliver it ſelf? Then Faith puts forth another Act upon Chriſt, ſuitable to this diſtreſs, viz. An act of waiting, Iſa. 49. 23. Which waiting is oppoſed to that ſinful haſte which the Soul is tempted to, Iſa. 28. 16. Or doth God at any time call the Soul forth to ſome difficult Service, againſt which the Fleſh and Carnal Reaſon diſpute and plead? Now Faith helps the Soul, by putting forth an act of obedience; and that whilſt Carnal Reaſon ſtands by diſſatisfied, Gal. 1. 16. And hence it is, that Obedience carries the name of Faith upon it, to ſhew its deſcent, Rom. 16. 26. Faith encourages the Soul to obey, not only by urging God's Command, but by giving it God's Warrant for it's Indempnity, Heb. 15. 24, 25, 26. Or doth a poor Believer find himſelf over-matched by Troubles and Temptations, and his own inherent ſtrength begin to fail under the burden? Then Faith leads him to an Omnipotent God, and ſo ſecures him from fainting under his Trouble, Pſal. 61. 2. In of the Lord is everlaſting ſtrength. El Shaddai, is a Name of encouragement to a feeble Soul, Iſa. 40. 29, 30, 31. And thus you ſee the firſt particular made good, viz. What a ſtrengthning influence it hath unto a weak Soul.

Secondly, In the next place, let us ſee how it lightens the Chriſtians Burthen, as well as ſtrengthens his Back to bear.

And certainly, This Grace of Faith doth ſtrangely alter the very Nature of Sufferings, taking away both the heavineſs and horrour of them; and this it doth divers ways.

1. By committing the buſineſs to Chriſt, and leaving the matter with him; and ſo quitting the Soul of all thoſe anxieties and perturbations, which are the very burden and weight of affliction, Pſal. 37. 5. For certainly, that which ſinks us in days of Trouble, is rather from within, from our unruly, ſeditious, and clamorous thoughts, than from the troubles themſelves with which we conflict: But by committing the matter to God, the Soul is quickly brought to reſt.

2. By diſcovering much preſent good in our Troubles; the more good Faith diſcovers in a Trouble, the more ſupportable and eaſie it makes it to the Soul. Now Faith brings in a comfortable Report, that they are not only Evils, as the Troubles of the Wicked are, Ezek. 7. 5. But have an allay and mixture of much good, Heb. 12. 10. Iſa. 27. 9.

3. By foreſeeing the end and final removal of them, and that near at hand, 2 Cor. 4. 17. That which daunts and amazes Men in times of Trouble, is, that they can ſee no end of them. Hence the Heart faints, and Hands hang down through diſcouragement: But now Faith brings the joyful tidings of the end of Troubles, and ſaith to the Soul, Why art thou caſt down, O my Soul? and why ſo diſquieted and diſcouraged within me? as if thy Sufferings were like the Sufferings of the Damned, endleſs and everlaſting, whereas they are but for a moment; yet a little, a very little while, and he that ſhall come, will come, and will not tarry, Heb. 10. 37. Yet a little while, and then the days of thy mourning ſhall be over.

4. By comparing our ſufferings with the ſufferings of others, which exceedingly diminiſheth and ſhrinks them up; ſometimes the Believer compares his ſufferings with Chriſts, and then he is aſhamed that ever he ſhould complain and droop under them. Oh! ſaith he, What is that, to that which the Lord Jeſus ſuffered for me? He ſuffered in all his Members, Head, Hands, Side, Feet, from all Hands, Friends and Enemies, in all his Offices; Yea, in his Soul, as well as in his Body: And indeed the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his ſufferings: Sometimes he compares them with the ſufferings of others of the Saints in former Ages: When he reads in Faith the Hiſtory of their Perſecutions, he is ſhamed out of his Complaints, and ſaith, Am I better than my Fathers? Sometimes he compares them with the ſufferings of the Damned: Oh what is this to everlaſting burnings! What is a Priſon to Hell? How light and eaſie is it to ſuffer for Chriſt, in compariſon of thoſe ſufferings which are from Chriſt? And thus the Soul is quieted, and the Terrour of ſufferings abated.

5. Faith entitles Chriſt to the Believers ſufferings, and puts them upon his ſcore; and ſo it exceedingly transforms and alters them: Ah! it's no ſmall Relief, when a man can hold up the Bible, as that Martyr did at the Stake, and ſay, This is that which hath brought me hither: Or, as the Pſalmiſt, For thy ſake we are killed all the day long: Or, as the Apoſtle, Col. 1. 14. I fill up that which is behind of the ſufferings of Chriſt in my fleſh.

6. Laſtly, Faith engages the preſence of God, to be and abide with the Soul in all its ſolitudes and ſufferings: It lays hold upon the Promiſes made to that Purpoſe, Pſal. 23. 2. Iſa. 43. 2. Heb. 13. 5. John 14. 18. And whileſt a poor Soul enjoys this, the very ſenſe of Troubles is ſwallowed up.

And thus I have given ſome briet hints, how Faith relieves and ſtrengthens the Soul in a ſuffering hour: The next thing is to direct you how to improve this excellent Grace, that it may do you ſuch ſervice as this in a time of need: And, in order thereunto, I ſhall give you theſe Seven Directions.

1. Attend diligently upon the Miniſtration of the Goſpel, which is not only the procreant, but alſo the conſerving cauſe of Faith, 1 Pet. 2. 2. The Doctrine of Faith, is the Food and Nutriment of the Grace of Faith: There are its Rules, its Encouragements, its Cordials. Thence Faith takes and treaſures up its Michtams, to which it hath recourſe in times of need: Every Attribute, Command or Promiſe, that ſhines forth there, is a diſh for Faith to feed on, but all together are a Royal Feaſt; Pſal. 63. 5. Some ſay the Land of Judea is called the Land of the Living, in Pſal. 27. 13. In reſpect of the Ordinances of God, which that People enjoyed. Certain it is, they are the great Inſtruments of quickning Souls at firſt, and preſerving that life it ſo begat in them: But then before they have Chriſt's Stamp upon them, and that they be miniſtred by his own Officers, and in his own way: And ſo you may reaſonably expect more Fruits and Influences from them, than from all private gifts and helps in the World: For the Lord loveth the Gates of Zion, more than all the Dwellings of Jacob. Pſal. 87. 2. And all private helps may ſay, in compariſon of Chriſts publick Ordinances, as Gideon ſaid to the Men of Ephraim, Judg. 8. 2. What have we done in compariſon of you?

2. Improve well your Sacrament Seaſons, thoſe Harveſt-days of Faith: This Ordinance hath a direct and peculiar tendency to the improvement and ſtrengthning of Faith. It is a Pledge ſuperadded to the Promiſe for Faiths ſake: Heavenly and ſublime Myſteries do therein ſtoop down to your Senſes, that you may have the clearer apprehenſions of them; and the clearer the apprehenſions are, the ſtronger the aſſent of Faith muſt needs be: By this Seal alſo the Promiſe comes to be more ratified to us; and the firmer the Promiſe appears to the Soul, the more bold and adventurous Faith is in caſting it ſelf upon it: Oh! how many poor doubting trembling Souls have in ſuch a Seaſon gathered the full ripe fruits of Aſſurance, from the Top-boughs of that Ordinance!

3. Frequent actings of Faith, are rare and ſpecial means of improving it: To him that hath (i. e.) that improves and uſes what he hath, ſhall be given, Mat. 25. 29. This was the way by which Paul thrived in Faith, and every other Grace ſo exceedingly, that he out-grew them that were in Chriſt before him, 1 Cor. 15. 10. It's true, that its beginning in the Soul, is not after the manner of other Habits, either Moral or Natural: This is not of Natural Acquiſition, but by Divine Infuſion: But yet its Improvement is in the ſame manner. Oh then! if ever you would have a flouriſhing Faith, rouze it up out of the dull Habit, and live in the daily exerciſe of it.

4. Go to to Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Author and Finiſher of Faith, and cry to him as Mark 9. 24. Lord encreaſe my Faith: Yea, beg the Aſſiſtance of other Prayers in this behalf, as the Apoſtle did, 1 Theſ. 3. 10. 2 Theſ. 1. 11. Faith animates Prayer, and Prayer increaſeth Faith.

5. Improve times of Affliction for the increaſe of Faith: For certainly, Sactified Afflictions do notably exerciſe and increaſe this Grace, 1 Pet. 1. 7. In times of Proſperity, we know not what ſtock of Faith we have: We live ſo much upon things ſeen, that we cannot many times tell whether we have Faith or no: But when difficult days come, then we muſt get out our whole Subſiſtence and Livelihood by Faith, Hab. 2. 4. Yea, then we have many proofs and experiments of God's Fidelity in the Promiſes, which is a choice help to Faith, 2 Cor. 1. 10.

6. Keep Catalogues of all your remarkable Expe-riences; treaſure them up as food for your Faith in time to come: Oh! it is a ſingular encouragement and heartning to Faith, when it can turn over the Records of God's dealing with you in Years paſt, and ſay as Joſhua, Not one thing hath failed, Joſ. 23. 14. When it can ſay ſo of Promiſes, that have already had their Accompliſhments, then they will be apt to ſay concerning thoſe yet to be accompliſhed, as Elizabeth ſaid to Mary, Luke 1. 45. Bleſſed is the Soul that believeth, for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which are told it by the Lord.

Theſe Experiments are the Food of Faith: Pſal. 74. 14. Thou breakeſt the Heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat to thy People inhabiting the Wilderneſs, (i. e.) That famous Experience of the Power and Love of God in their Red-Sea deliverance, where he deſtroyed that Sea-Monſter Pharaoh, and his Hoſt, was Meat to the Faith of God's Iſrael in the Wilderneſs afterwards. We often find Chriſt charging the Peoples unbelief on a Memory, Mat 16. 8, 9. And hence it was, that the Lord commanded the Iſraelites to keep Journals of every days Occurences, Numb. 13. 1, 2. It is a thouſand Pities ſuch choice helps ſhould be loſt. Oh! if you could but remember, how the Lord hath appeared for you in former Exigencies, and how often he hath ſhamed you for your unbelief, it would exceedingly animate your Faith both in preſent and future diſtreſſes, Mic. 6. 5.

7. Laſtly, Beware of Senſe, which is the ſupplanter of Faith. O if you upon things Earthly, you put your Faith out of its Office: Things Earthly have an Enmity to Faith. This is the Victory by which we overcome the World, even our Faith, 1 John 5. 4. Overcoming denotes a Conflict, and Conflicts infer Oppoſitions. Oh you that live ſo much by ſight and ſenſe on things viſible, what will you do when in David's or Paul's Caſe, Pſal. 142. 4. 2 Tim 4. 16. When all outward Encouragements and ſtays ſhall utterly fail. What had Abraham done, if he had not been able to believe againſt Hope, i. e. ſuch an hope as is founded in Senſe and Reaſon.

Reader, I adviſe and charge thee in Name of the Lord, and as thou hopeſt to live when viſible comforts die, that thou be diligent in the improvement and preparation of this excellent Grace of Faith: if it fail, thou faileſt with it; and as thy Faith is, ſo art thou. Conſult all the Cloud of Witneſſes, and ſee if thou canſt find a Man amongſt them that did not atchieve the Victory by his Faith. Had they not all been run down by the furious aſſaults of Temptation, and inſtead of a Cloud of Witneſſes, been ſo many Pillars of Salt, and Monuments of reproach and ſhame to Religion, if their Faith had failed in its Tryal.

CHAP. IX.

Wherein the neceſſity and uſefulneſs of Chriſtian Fortitude in order to Sufferings, is evinced, with a brief account of its nature and means of attaining it.

THE next Grace which concurs to the compleating of our actual Readineſs for Sufferings, is Chriſtian Fortitude, or holy Courage; which muſt ſay in thy Heart in a time of danger, as Elijah once did, As the Lord lives I will ſhew my ſelf. This alſo is a choice part of your preparation work In this grace our Apoſtle was eminent: When he was told, Bonds and Afflictions waited for him; he could ſay, That none of thoſe things moved him, Acts 20. 24. Yea, when he was to appear before the Lyon Nero, and not a Man would own or ſtand by him, yet he ſtands his Ground, reſolving rather to die on the place, than diſhonourably to recede from his Principles and Profeſſion, 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17. He ſet the World, with all its Threats and Terrours lower than it ſet him. Oh how conſpicuous was this Grace in all thoſe Heroes that have paſt on before us! And if ever you hope to ſtand in the evil day, and be fetched off the Field with Honour, you muſt rouze up and awaken your Courage for God: And the neceſſity thereof will appear upon theſe four Conſiderations.

1. Becauſe the ſucceſs and prevalence of Satan's Temptations in the hour of Perſecution depends upon the fainting and overthrow of this Grace. Wherefore doth he raiſe Perſecutions in the World, but becauſe ſuch terrible things are fitted to work upon the paſſion of Carnal Fear, which riſes with thoſe dangers and makes the Soul as a tumultuous Sea. This is it he aims at, Neh. 6. 13. This is a multiplying Paſſion, that repreſents dangers more and greater than they are, and ſo drives the Soul into the very Net and Snare laid by the Devil to take it. Prov. 29. 25. The fear of Man brings a Snare; which was ſadly exemplified exemplified in Abraham, Gen. 12. 12. And divers others of the Saints. If he can but subdue this Grace, he will quickly bring you to capitulate for Life and Liberty upon the baseſt and moſt diſhonourable terms; therefore the preparation of this Grace is ſo exceedingly neceſſary.

2. Becauſe this is the Grace that honours Jeſus Chriſt abundantly, when you are brought upon the Stage for him.

There is a great Solemnity at the ſuffering and tryal of a Saint: Heaven, Earth, and Hell are Spectators, obſerving the Iſſue, and how the Saints will acquit themſelves in that Hour. We are made a ſpectacle, ſaith the Apoſtle. The word is, Θέατρον ἐγενήθημεν, we are ſet as upon a Threatre in publick view, 1 Cor. 4. 9. God, Angels, and Saints, wait to ſee the glorious Triumphs of their Faith and Courage, reflecting Honour upon the Name and Cauſe of Chriſt. Devils and wicked Men gape for an advantage by their Cowardize. Certainly very much lies now upon the Chriſtians hands. Should he faint and give ground, how will it furniſh the triumphs of Hell, and make Chriſt's Enemies vaunt over him, as if his Love ran ſo low in the Hearts of his People, that they durſt not adventure any thing for him: Or if notwithſtanding their brave words and glorious Profeſſion, they durſt not truſt their own Principles when it comes to the Trial! But if now they play the Men, and diſcover an holy Gallantry of Spirit and Reſolution for Chriſt, how will it daunt the Enemies, and make them ſay as Marcus Biſhop of Aretheuſa made one of Julian's Nobles, preſent at his Torments, to ſay concerning him, We are aſhamed, O Emperour; the Chriſtians laugh at your Cruelty! And how will God himſelf rejoice and glory over them, as he once did over Job when he fetched him with Honour off that firſt Field! Job 2. 3. Still he holdeth faſt his Integrity.

3. Your own Peace is wrapt up in it as well as God's Glory. Is it nothing think you, to be freed from thoſe Vultures and Harpies, that feed upon the Hearts of Men at ſuch times? Surely God reckons, that he promiſeth a very great Mercy to his People, when he promiſeth it, Prov. 1. ult. Pſal. 112. 7. When Borromæus was told of ſome that lay in wait to take away his Life, it troubled him not; but he ſaid, An Deus in mundo pro Nihilo? What is God in the World for nought? And like to this was the Anſwer of Silentiarus in the like caſe; Si Deus mei curam non habet, quid vivo? If God take not care for me, how do I live? Oh this is it that brings you to an holy quietude of Spirit in times of Confuſion and Diſtraction, which is a choice Mercy.

4. Your Magnanimity is of ſpecial uſe to other Saints, who are following you in the ſame path of Sufferings. If you faint, it's like the fainting of a Standard-bearer in an Army: You bring thereby an evil report upon the Croſs of Chriſt, as the firſt Spies did upon the Land of Canaan. And a like influence with that it is like to have on your Brethren; ſo that there is a neceſſity of improving this Grace alſo before you can ſay with Paul you are ready.

2. But what is this Chriſtian Fortitude, and wherein doth it conſiſt.

I anſwer briefly, It is an holy boldneſs in the performance of difficult duties, flowing from Faith in the Call of God, and his Promiſe to us in the diſcharge of them.

And ſo you have the Nature of it in theſe four particulars.

1. It is an Holy Boldneſs, not a natural or ſinful boldneſs, ariſing either from the natural Conſtitution, or evil diſpoſition of the Mind.

2. It is expreſt about duties for Truth, not Error, Jer. 9. 3. for the Intereſt of Chriſt, not of the Fleſh.

3. The Seaſon in which appears is, when duties are ſurrounded and beſet with difficulties and dangers, Dan. 3. 16. Dan. 6. 10.

4. The Fountain whence it flows is Faith, and that as it reſpects the command and call of God to duty, Acts 16. 10. And his promiſe to us in the diſcharge thereof, Joſh. 1. 5, 6.

And this Grace ſtands oppoſed both to the fear of Man in the cauſe of God, Heb. 11. 27. And to Apoſtacy from the Truth for fear of ſuffering. Thus briefly of the nature of it.

3. In the laſt place I ſhall lay down ſome Rules for the promoting and improvement of it, and ſo finiſh this Chapter..

Now there are ten Rules heedfully to be obſerved for the breeding of holy Courage in the Breaſt of a Saint in evil times.

And the firſt Rule is this, Get a weaned Heart from all Earthly Enjoyments. If the Heart be inordinately fixed upon any one thing that you poſſeſs in the World, that inordinate Eſtimation and Affection of it will ſtrangely effeminate, ſoften and cowardize your Spirit when your trial comes, 2 Tim. 2. 4. You meet not with a Man of Courage for God, but had his Heart dead to Earthly things; ſo it was with Paul, Philemon 3. 8. Since the Apoſtles we ſcarce meet with a greater Example of Holy Magnanimity than Luther; and if you read his Story, you will find few Men ever ſet a lower rate on the World than he. All the Turkiſh Empire in his Eye was but a Crumb caſt to the Dogs. Germana eſt hæc beſtia pecuniam non curat, Money could not tempt him.

2. Suffer not guilt to lie upon your Conſciences: It is a fountain of Fears, and you can never attain boldneſs for God, till it be removed, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. The ſpirit of a ſound Mind is oppoſed to the Spirit of Fear, 2 Tim. 1. 7. Now that ſound Mind is a Mind or Spirit that is not wounded, and made ſick and infirm by guilt. Oh what black Fogs and Miſts ariſe out of guilt, which becloud our Evidences, and fill us with Fears and Diſcouragements! Gen. 42. 21, 22.

3. Clear your Call to difficult Services; be well ſatisfied that you are in that way and poſture God expects to find you in. O what Courage this will give! Joſh. 1. 9. Then a Man may promiſe himſelf God's Preſence and Protection, 2 Chro. 15. 2. But whilſt a Man is dubious here, and cannot tell whether it be his duty or not, that he is ingaging in? How can he have Courage to hazard any thing for it? For thinks he I may ſuffer much from Men, and yet have no thanks of God for it, 1 Pet. 2. 9. And further till a Man be clear in this he cannot commit his cauſe to God. And it is a ſad thing to be cut off from ſo choice a Relief as that is, 1 Pet. 4. 19.

4. Rule. Get right notions and apprehenſions of your Enemies. We are apt to magnifie the Creature as if he could do no more than he can, and thereby diſable our ſelves from doing what we ſhould. Poſſeſs your Souls with the belief of theſe five things concerning them. (1.) That they are poor weak enemies, Iſa. 40. 15, 17, 22. But as a ſwarm of Gnats in the Air. See how God deſcribes them, Iſaiah 51. 13, 14.

(2) That little Power they have is limited by your God, who hath the bounding and ordering of it, John 19. 11. Pſal. 76. 10. (3) They carry Guilt upon them, which makes them more timorous than you, Iſa. 8. 12. Their fear is ſtrange fear. (4) They only uſe Carnal Weapons againſt you which cannot touch your Souls. If they were praying Enemies that could engage God againſt you, they would be formidable Enemies indeed; but this they cannot do. The largeſt Commiſſion that any of them ever had from God, extended but to the Bodies and Bodily Concernments of the Saints. Luke 12. 4, 5. They cannot thunder with an Arm like God, nor blot your Name out of the Book of Life, nor take away your part out of the new Jeruſalem; therefore fear not Man. (5) Your Enemies are God's Enemies; and God hath eſpouſed your cauſe and quarrel. The more cruel they are, the kinder he will be to you, John 9. 34, 35.

5 Rule. Labour to engage the Preſence of God with you in all places and conditions. Whilſt you enjoy this, your Spirits will be invincible and undaunted, Joſh. 1. 9. Pſal. 118. 6. A weak Creature aſſiſted and encouraged by the Preſence of a great God, will be able to do and ſuffer great things. Poor Fleſh in the hand of an Almighty Spirit acts above it ſelf. A little Dog, if his Maſter be by and animates him, will ſeize upon a greater Beaſt than himſelf, though he would run from him were his Maſter abſent. Our Courage ebbs and flows as the manifeſtations of the Divine Preſence do. Oh get thy ſelf once within the Line of that Promiſe, Iſaiah 43. 1, 2. and thou art invincible.

6 Rule. Get an high eſtimation of Jeſus Chriſt, and all his Concernments. They that value him higheſt, will adventure for him fartheſt. Magnanimous Luther; how ineſtimable a value did he ſet upon the Truths of Chriſt! Ruat Cælum, &c. Let Heaven ruſh rather than a crumb of Truth ſhould periſh. Thou wilt never be a Man of Zeal and Courage for Chriſt's Intereſt, until that Intereſt of Chriſt have ſwallowed up all thine own Intereſts. No ſooner is the Soul acquainted with, and intereſted in Chriſt, but he heartily wiſhes well to all his Affairs and Concernments, Pſal. 45. 3, 4. This is that which puts mettle and reſolution for Chriſt into the Soul.

7. Rule. Beware you be not cheated with Maxims of Carnal Policy, Miſtaken for Chriſtian prudence. Many are ſo: And they prove deſtructive to all true zeal and courage for Chriſt. Never was Religion profeſſed with greater plainneſs and ſimplicity, than by the Primitive Chriſtians: And never was there an higher Spring-tide of Courage and zeal for God, than in thoſe days. We are apt to call it prodigality, and are grown wiſer to husband our Lives and Comforts, better than they did. But indeed our Prudentials have even ſwallowed up our Religion. It's true, there is ſuch a thing as Chriſtian prudence; but this doth not teach men to ſhun all coſtly and difficult duties, and proſtitute Conſcience to ſave the Skin. But a man of underſtanding walketh uprightly, Prov. 15. 21.

8. Rule. Look upon the inſide of troubles for Chriſt, as well as upon the outſide of them. If you view them by an eye of ſenſe, there appeareth nothig but matter of diſcouragement. To look on the outſide of a Priſon, Baniſhment, or Death, is affrighting and horrible: But then if you look into the inſide of theſe things by faith, and ſee what God hath made them to his people, how joyful and comfortable they have been in theſe conditions; what Honey they have found in the Carkaſs of a Lion, what Songs in the Stocks and Dungeons, what glorying in Tribulation, an hundred fold reward even in their Sufferings: O then! that which looked like a Serpent at diſtance, will appear but as a Rod in hand. How many have found themſelves quite miſtaken in their apprehenſions of ſufferings; and been more loth to come out of a Priſon, than they were to go in! If you did but ſee your ſupports, and the comforts that Souls ordinarily meet with in their troubles for Chriſt, you would not look on them as ſuch formidable things.

9. Rule. View the iſſue and reward of ſufferings by an eye of Faith: This alſo will ſtrongly abate the horrour and dread of them, Heb. 10. 34. Upon this Account it is the Saints have ſo ſlighted and contemned them, Rom. 8. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17 But then ſee that you act your Faith, (1) Upon the certainty of it: Look at it as a moſt real and ſubſtantial thing, Heb. 11. 1. (2) View it as a great and glorious Reward. And (3) as near at hand: And then ſay to thy Soul, come on my Soul, come on; Seeſt thou the joy ſet before thee! The Crown of Glory ready to be ſet on thy head by the hand of a righteous God. Oh, what compare is there betwixt thoſe Sufferings, and that Glory!

10. Rule. Propound to your ſelves the beſt patterns and examples. Keep your eye upon the Cloud of Witneſſes; theſe are of ſpecial uſe to beget holy courage, Heb. 12. 1. Jam. 5. 10. Who would be afraid to enter the Liſts, and grapple with that enemy that he hath ſeen ſo often foiled, and that by poor weak Chriſtians? See how the enemy with whom you are to grapple, hath been beaten hand to hand, and triumphed over by poor Women and Children; they had as great infirmities, and you have as gracious aſſiſtances as thoſe that are gone before you.

CHAP. X.

Diſcovering the neceſſity of an heart mortified to all earthly and Temporal enjoyments, in order to the managing of a ſuffering condition: with ſeveral directions for the attaining thereof.

THE next thing wherein your actual readineſs for Bonds, or Death conſiſteth, is in the mortification of your Affections to all earthly Intereſts and Enjoyments, even the beſt and ſweeteſt of them: Till this be done, in ſome meaſure, you are not fit to be uſed in any ſuch ſervice for the Lord, 2 Tim. 1. 21. The living world is the very Life of temptations: The travelling pains of Death, are ſtronger and ſharper upon none, than thoſe that are full of ſenſe and ſelf. As you ſee in Nature, what Conflicts and Agonies ſtrong and lively perſons ſuffer when they die: When others in whom nature is decayed and ſpent beforehand, die away without half that pain, even as a Bird in a ſhell. Corruption in the Saints, is like the Sap in green Wood, which reſiſteth the fire, and will not burn well, till it be dried up. Prepared Paul had an Heart mortified in a very high degree, to all the Honour and Riches of the World, accounting them all but trifles, Gal. 6. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

The need of this will be evinced by theſe five Conſiderations.

1. Unleſs the Heart be mortified to all Earthly enjoyments, they will appear great and glorious things in your eye and eſtimation: And if ſo, judge what a Task you will have, to deny and leave them all in a ſuffering a ſuffering hour. It is corruption within, that puts the Luſtre and Glory upon things without: It's the carnal eye only that gazes admiringly after them, 2 Cor. 5. 16. and hence the Luſt is put to expreſs the Affection, 1 John 2. 16. becauſe all that inordinate affection we have to them, ariſes from our high eſtimation of them, and that eſtimation from our luſts that repreſent them as great and glorious. Therefore certainly, it will be difficult (if not impoſſible) to deny them, till they have loſt their glory in your eye; and that they will never do, till thoſe Luſts within you, that put that Beauty and Neceſſity upon them, be firſt crucified. As for inſtance, what a glory and neceſſity doth the Pride of Men put upon the Honour and Credit of the World, ſo that they will rather chooſe to die, than ſurvive it! But to a mortified Soul it's a ſmall matter, 1 Cor. 4. 3. So for Riches, how much are they adored, till our Luſts be mortified, and then they are eſteemed but Dung and Droſs, Phil. 3. 8. 'Tis our Corruption that paints and gilds over theſe things: When theſe are crucified, thoſe will be lightly eſteemed.

2. Mortification of Corruptions is that which recovers an healthful ſtate of Soul: Sin is to thy Soul, what a Diſeaſe is to the Body; and Mortification is to ſin, what Phyſick is to a Diſeaſe. Hence thoſe that are but a little mortified, are in a comparative ſenſe called Carnal, 1 Cor. 3. 3. and Babes, verſe 2. in reſpect of weakneſs. Now ſuffering Work being ſome of the Chriſtians hardeſt Labour and Exerciſe, he cannot be fitted for it, until his Soul be in an healthful ſtate: A ſickly man cannot carry heavy Burdens, or endure hard Labours and Exerciſes: The ſick Souldier is left behind in his Quarters, or put into the Hoſpital, whilſt his Fellows are dividing the ſpoils, and obtaining glorious Victories in the Field. To this ſenſe ſome expound Rom. 8. 13. If ye live after the Fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, mortifie the Deeds of the Body, ye ſhall live. Whereas Death is put to note a languiſhing ſtate of Soul, whilſt Mortification is neglected: So Life is put to expreſs an healthful and comfortable ſtate; vivere pro valere; ſo that upon this account alſo the neceſſity of it appears.

3. Your Corruptions muſt be Mortified, elſe they will be raging and violent in the time of Temptation, and like a Torrent ſweep away all your Convictions and Reſolutions. It's ſin unmortified within, that makes the Heart like Gun-powder; ſo that when the ſparkles of Temptation fly about it, (and they fall thick in a ſuffering hour) they do but touch and take. Hence the Corruptions of the World are ſaid to be through Luſt, 2 Pet. 1. 4. With theſe internal unmortified Luſts, the Tempter holds correſpondence; and theſe be the Traitors that deliver up our Souls into his hands.

4. Unleſs you be diligent and ſucceſsful in this Work, though you ſhould ſuffer, yet not like Chriſtians, you will but diſgrace Religion, and the Cauſe for which you ſuffer: For it's not ſimple ſuffering, but ſuffering as a Chriſtian, that reflects Credit on Religion, and finds acceptation with God. If you be Envious, Fretful, Diſcontented and Revengeful, under your ſufferings, what Honour will this bring to Chriſt? Is not this altogether unlike the Example of your Lord? Iſaiah 53. 7. and the behaviour of ſuffering Saints? 1 Cor. 4. 13. Yet thus it will be, if your Pride, Paſſion and Revenge, be not firſt ſubdued: For what are the breakings forth of ſuch diſtempers of Spirit, but as the flaſhes of heat in the Face from an ill-affected Liver? Moſt certain it is, that all thoſe evils are in your Natures: And as certain it is, they will riſe like Mud and Filth from the bottom of a Lake, when ſome Eminent Tryals ſhall rake you to the bottom; Natura vexata prodit ſeipſam.

5. Laſtly, Mortification muſt be ſtudied and plyed with diligence; elſe you will find many Longings and Hankerings after Earthly Enjoyments and Comforts, which will prove a ſnare to you: What is ſin, but the corrupt and vitiated appetite of the Creature, to things that are Earthly and Senſual, reliſhing more ſweetneſs and delight in them, than in the bleſſed God? And what is Sanctification, but the rectifying of the inordinate affections, and placing them on their proper Object? A regenerate and mortified Chriſtian taſtes not half that ſweetneſs in forbidden fruits that another doth: Set but Money before Judas, and ſee how eagerly he catches at it —— What will you give me, and I will betray him? Set but Life, Liberty, or any ſuch Bait before an unmortified Heart, and how impotent is he to withſtand them, as offered in a Temptation. Oh thoſe unmortified Luſts! How do they make Men Hanker, Long, and their Lips water (as we uſe to ſay) after theſe things? This makes them break Priſon, decline Sufferings, tho' upon the baſeſt terms: Whereas a Mortified Chriſtian can ſee all theſe things ſet before him, yea, offered to him, and refuſe them, Heb. 10. 35. It is with them much as it was with old Barzillai, 2 Sam. 19. 35. When Nature is decayed, they find but little Pleaſure in natural actions Eccleſ. 12. 1. And look as the body of ſin decays and languiſhes ſo do theſe Longings alſo: It weans the Soul from them all, and enables it to live very comfortably without them, Pſal. 131. 1. Phil. 4. 12. There needs no more to be ſaid to evince the neceſſity of Mortification, and diſcover what influence it hath into a Chriſtians readineſs for ſufferings.

It remains therefore, that I open to you ſome of the principal corruptions, about which it moſtly concerns you, to beſtow pains e're ſufferings come. Now look as there are four principal enjoyments, in which you are like to be tried, viz. Eſtate, Name, Liberty, Life; ſo the Chriſtian Work in ſuffering times lies in mortifying theſe Four ſpecial Corruptions, viz. Firſt, the Love of the World. Secondly, Ambition. Thirdly, Inordinate affectation of Freedom and Pleaſure. Fourthly, Exceſſive love of Life.

1. For the love of this World, Away with it, Crucifie it, Crucifie it: Down with this Idol, and let it be dethroned in all that intend to abide with Chriſt in the hour of Temptation: How elſe will you take the ſpoiling of your Goods? How will you be able to part with all for Chriſt, as theſe bleſſed Souls did? It grieves my Heart to ſee how many Profeſſors of Religion are carried captive at the Chariot-Wheels of a bewitching World. Oh! Good had it been for many Profeſſors, if they had never taſted ſo much of the ſweetneſs of it. Sirs, I beg you, for the Lord's ſake down with it in your Eſtimations, down with it in your Affections, elſe Temptations will down with you e're long. I ſhall offer five or ſix Helps for the Crucifying of it.

Firſt, Conſider your Eſpouſals to Chriſt, and how you have choſen and profeſſed him for your Lord and Husband: Therefore your doting upon the World, is no leſs than Adultery againſt Chriſt, James 4. 4. If Chriſt be your Husband he muſt be a Covering to your Eyes; an unchaſte glance upon the World wounds him.

Secondly, The more you prize it, the more you will be tormented by it: Did you prize and love it leſs, it would diſquiet and vex you leſs: It's our our doteing on it, that makes it draw blood at parting.

Thirdly, Get true Scripture-notions of the World, and rectifie your Judgments and Affections by them. If you will have the true Picture and Representation of it drawn by the Hand of God himself, See 1 John 2. 16. It's nothing else but lust that puts that lustre upon it: It hath but a Phantastick glory, and that also passeth away. What is become of them that ruffled it out in the World but one hundred years ago? What could the World do for them? Are they not all gone down to the sides of the Pit? But he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.

Fourthly, Study and Contemplate Christ, and the things above more: This would vail all its Glory, and kill it at the Root, Phil. 3. 18, 19. Just as a Man that hath been gazing upon the Sun, when he takes off his Eye from that bright and glorious Creature, and looks to the Earth, there is a Vail of Darkness overspreading the Face of it, that he can see nothing. I wonder how such as pretend to live above, and enjoy communion with God, can ever relish such sweetness in the World, or have their Hearts enticed and captivated by it?

Fifthly, Remember always, that by your love and delight in Worldly things, you furnish the Devil with the chiefest Bait he hath to catch, and destroy your Souls. Alas! were your hearts but dead to these things, he would want an Handle to catch hold on. What hath he more to offer you, and tempt you off from Christ with, but a little Money? or some such poor temporal Rewards: And how little would that Soul be moved by such a Temptation, that looks on it all but as Dirt.

Sixthly, Lastly, take notice of the approaches of Eternity; Remember you are almost at the end of Time: And when you come to lanch out into that endless Ocean, how will these things look then? It seems glorious, whilst you are in the Chace and Pursuit of it; but upon a Death-bed, you will overtake and come up with it, and then you'l see what a deceitful and vain thing it is: Stand by the Beds of dying Men, and hear how they speak of it. Oh! the difference betwixt our apprehensions then, and now! Thus labour to wean off your Affections, and Crucifie them to the World.

2. Mortifie your Ambition and vain Affectation of the Repute and Credit of the World: Oh stand not on so vain a thing as this: judge it but a small thing to be judged of Man, to have your Names cast out as evil: Let not Scoffs and Reproaches be such terrible things to you. It is without doubt, a great trial; else the Holy Ghost had not added a peculiar Epithet to it, which is not given to any other of the sufferings of the Saints: not cruel Tortures, not cruel Stonings, Burnings, Slaying with the Sword; but cruel mockings, Heb. 11. 36. Yet learn to be dead to, and unaffected with these things; set the reproaching World as light, and as low as it sets you: Despise the shame, as your Master Christ did, Heb. 12. 2. and to promote Mortification in this, take these helps:

1. Consider this is no new or strange thing that hath happened to you: The Holiest of Men have past through the like, if not worse Trials, Heb. 10. 33. Psal. 44. 14. Reproaches have been the Lot of the best Men. They called Athanasius, Sathanasius; Cyprianus, Coprianus, a gatherer of Dung; Blessed Paul a pestilent Fellow: Doctor Story threw a Fagot at sweet Mr. Denlie's Face, as he was singing a Psalm in the midst of the Flames, saying, I have spoiled a good old Song.

2. It may be Religion hath been Reproached and Scoffed at for your sakes; and if so, think it not much to be reproached for Religions sake.

3. It's much better to be reproached by Men for discharging Duty, than by your own Consciences for the neglect of it: If all be quiet within, never be moved at the noise and clamour without: If you have a good Roof over your Head, be not troubled though the Winds and Storms bluster abroad, 1 Pet. 4. 14. Take heed what you do, and be heedless what the World says.

4. Always remember, that you neither stand or fall at the World's Judgment, and therefore have the less reason to be troubled at it, 1 Cor. 4. 3. If your condition were to be cast to Eternity by it, it were somewhat.

5. There is a Worth and Excellency in the Reproaches of Christ, as bad as they seem; and such an Excellency; as is not to be matched by any Earthly Enjoyment, Heb. 11. 26. The Reproaches of Christ are of more worth than the Treasures of Egypt, though Egypt then was the Magazine of the World for Treasures. The Apostles counted them their Honours, Acts 5. 41. When Ludovicus Marsocus, a Knight of France, saw those that were to suffer with him in the Chains, and that they put none upon him, because of the Nobility of his Birth, he said to the Executioner, Cur me non quoq; Torque donas, & illustris illius ordinis militem non creas? Why do ye not honour me with a Chain too, and create me a Knight of that Noble Order?

6 Lastly, should Scoffs and Reproaches scare you from Christ and Duty; then, though you should escape the Reproaches of men, yet shall you fall under the everlasting Contempt of God, Angels and good Men. Therefore, Fear ye not Reproaches of men that shall die, nor be afraid of their revilings, for the Moth shall eat them up like a Garment, and the Worm shall eat them like Wool, but my Righteousness shall be for ever, and my Salvation from Generation to Generation, Isa. 51. 7, 8.

3. Mortifie your inordinate affectation of liberty, pleasure, and delicate living. O let not a Prison seem so formidable to you. It's true, as Christ told Peter, John 41. 18. When thou wast young, thou girdest thy self, and walkest whither thou wouldst; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not. You have now your liberty to go whither you will, and it's a precious mercy if well improved: The Birds of the Air (as one saith) had rather be in the Woods at liberty, though lean and hungry, than in a Golden Cage with the richest Fare. But yet, if God will call you to deny this also for Christ, see that you be ready to be bound as Paul was, and receive the Chain and Bonds of Christ with thanksgiving: To which end, consider,

1. That the affliction, in such cases of Restraint, is more from within, than from without you. There's no place but may be delectable to you, if your heart be heavenly, and the presence of God be ingaged with you. What a sweet Night had Jacob at Bethel? Paul and Silas in the Stocks? See that precious Letter of Pomponius Algerius.

Transtulit in cælum Christi præsentia claustrum;
Quid faciet cælo? quæ Cælum jam creat antro.

It's your own Unbelief and Impatiency, that gives you more trouble than the Condition.

2. No

2. No Keeper can keep the Comforter from you, if you be the Lord's Prisoners, Act. 16. If they could bar out the Spirit from you, it would be a dismal place indeed: But ordinarily, there the Saints have their cleerest Visions of God, and sweetest Presence of the Spirit: You are the Lord's Freemen, whilst Mens Prisoners: All the World cannot devest you of the state of Liberty Christ hath purchased for you, John 8. 36.

3. Though a Prison look sad and dismal, yet it is not Hell: Oh bless God for that, that's a sad Prison indeed! Beloved, Men have their Prisons, and God hath his: God's Prison is a terrible Prison, indeed, Thousands are now in Chains, 1 Pet. 3. 19. And there you deserved to have been sent long ago: If God exchange an Hell for a Prison, have you any cause to complain?

4. How obdurate and cruel soever Men are to you, yet the Lord Jesus is kind and tender-hearted to his Prisoners; he puts the kindnesses that any shew them upon his own account, Mat. 25. 36. He looks down from Heaven to hear the sighings and groanings of his Prisoners, Psal. 102. 20. He will tenderly sympathize with you in all your Prison-Straights and Troubles.

5. A Prison hath been handselled and perfumed by the best and holiest of Men in all Ages, 1 Kings 22. 27. Jer. 32. 2. Mat 4. 12. Acts 5. 18. and 26. 10. God hath made it a settled School of Discipline to them.

6. Should you, to avoid a Prison commit a Sin, instead of being Man's Prisoner, you shall be clapt up by God, for he hath a Prison for your Souls even in this World, Psal. 142. 7. And this is ten Thousand times more dreadful, than any Dungeon in the World. Oh it's a dark Prison! Not a Cranny to let in one Beam of God's Countenance upon your poor Souls. What a sad exchange have you made then?

7. Consider what a ground of Comfort GOD hath laid in that Word, Rev. 2. 10. to obviate the Fears and Terrours incident to us in such a condition: God hath limited Satan and his Instruments, both for time, number, and all circumstances of the Trial.

8. Lastly, You do not know what a Mercy may be in it: It may be a time of retirement from the World, and the clamours and distractions that are abroad. These days of Imprisonment may be your Holy-days; as a Prisoner of Christ once called them.

4. Get an Heart mortified to the excessive and inordinate love of Life: This, I confess, is the highest and hardest point of Self-denial, because it wraps up all other Self-Interests in it. But yet Consider,

First, Though Life be very dear, yet Jesus Christ is ten thousand times dearer than thy Life: If thou be a Saint, he is the Life of thy Life, and the length of thy days; and in comparison of him, and his glory, Saints should, and have despised and slighted their Lives, Luke 14. 26. Rev. 12. 11.

Secondly, Die you must; and if by shrinking from Christ, you should protract a miserable Life for a few days longer, in the mean time losing that which is better than Life, Psal. 63. 3. Mat. 10. 39. Oh! when you lie upon your Death-bed, you will wish that you had obeyed God's Call, and so have departed in peace.

Thirdly, if you have cordially Covenanted with Christ (as all sincere Believers have done) then you have yielded up your Lives to him, to be disposed of for his Glory, Rom. 14. 7. So that look, as Christ both lived and died for you; so, ought you to live as Christ: And all the Excellency you see in Life, consists in that reference and subserviency it hath to his Glory. I say then, if you have understandingly and cordially transacted in a Covenant way with him, your Care will not be so much how to shun death, as by what death you may most glorifie God, John 21. 19. And certainly, you can never lay them down upon a more honourable or comfortable Account than in his Cause, and for his Sake. It was a great trouble to Luther, that he carried his Blood to his Grave.

Fourthly, to die for Christ, is one of the highest Testifications of your Love to Christ, that you are capable of, John 13. 17. Yea, 'tis such a Testification of your Love to the Lord Jesus, as Angels are not capable of making.

Fifthly, Why should you decline even a violent death for Christ, when as the bitterness of death is past, and there is no Hell following the pale Horse? It cannot separate you from Christ, Rom. 8. 38.

Sixthly, Think what a Death Christ suffered for you: In which the fulness of the Wrath both of God and Man meet together, so that he was sore amazed; yet with desire, did he desire it for your sakes.

7. Lastly, Think what a Life you shall have with Christ, as soon as this is delivered up to, and for him, 2 Tim. 2. 12. It is but wink, and you shall see God.

Oh that these things might provoke you to follow on, and ply the Work of Mortification.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein is opened the singular advantage that suffering Saints have by their Skill and Insight into the Methods and Mysteries of Satan's Temptation; some of those Wiles of Satan opened, and Rules for the avoiding of the danger briefly prescribed.

THE hazards and dangers of Christians in times of Persecution, arise not so much from their Sufferings, as from the Temptations that always attend, and are by Satan planted upon their Sufferings: for the most part Sufferings and Temptations go together, Heb. 11 37. And therefore it behoves such as are, or expect to be called to Sufferings, to dive into the Mysteries of Temptations, and be well acquainted with the Enemies Designs upon them. So was Paul, and so he supposes all others to be, that ingage in the same Cause; We are not ignorant of his Devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. There is a manifold advantage redounding to suffering Saints thereby.

1. He that is well acquainted with the methods of Temptation, will be better able to descry the first approaches and beginnings of it; and a Temptation discovered, is more than half conquered. It is a special Artifice of Satan, to shuffle in his Temptations as undiscernable as may be into the Soul; for he knows, that in vain is the Net spread in the sight of any Bird, Prov. 1. 17. And therefore he ordinarily makes a suffering Season to be a tempting Season; because Sufferings, like Fire to Iron, make it impressive and operable, they do ordinarily put the Soul into an hurry and distraction, and so gives him an advantage to tempt the Soul with less suspicion, and greater success. But now, a skilful Christian, that that is acquainted with his Wiles, will discern when he begins to enter into Temptation; as Christ's Expression is, Luke 22. 46. And so check the Temptation in its first Rise, when it's weakest; and most easily broken. Doubtless one Reason why so many fall by Temptation, is, because it's got within them, and hath prevailed far, before it be discovered to be a Temptation.

2. He that is well acquainted with Satan's Methods of tempting, will not only discern it sooner than another; but also knows his Work and Duty, and how to manage the Conflict with it, which is a great matter. There are many poor Souls that labour under strong Temptations, and know not what to do: They go up and down complaining, from Christian to Christian, whilst the Judicious Christian plies the Terror of the Throne of Grace with strong Cries. See 2 Cor. 12. 8. keeps up his Watch, Luke 22. 46. Countermines the Temptation, by assaulting that Corruption by endeavours of Mortification, which Satan assaults by Temptation, 1 Cor. 1. 9, 27.

3. Lastly, To name no more; he that is best acquainted with the mystery of Temptation, and can maintain his ground against it, he shall be the persevering Christian under Persecutions, and the Victorious Christian over them. Here lies the main design of Satan, in raising Persecution against the Saints. It is not so much their Blood that he thirsteth after, as their fall by Temptation: And all Persecutions are designed by him, to introduce his Temptations. These work upon our Fear, and Fear drives us into his Trains and Snares, Prov. 29. 25. The Devil's work in raising Persecution, is but as the Fowler's Work in beating the Bush in the Night, when the Net is spread to take the Birds, which he can affright out of their Coverts. He that understands this, is not easily moved by the strongest opposition, from his Place and Duty; and so is like to prove the most constant and invincible Christian in times of Persecution.

Oh then how necessary is it, that since all Persecutions are intended as means to promote Temptation: And that Skill and Insight into these designs of Satan, so advantages as to frustrate his designs in both? I say, how necessary is it that you should be all instructed wherein the Strength of Temptation lies: As also how to resist those strong and dangerous Temptations, which your Sufferings only are intended to usher in, and make way for?

It will not be unseasonable or impertinent then in this Chapter to shew you; First, wherein the force and efficacy of Temptations lieth; Secondly, what you are to do, when in a suffering Hour such Temptation shall assault you. And first,

1. Qu. Wherein doth the efficacy and Power of Temptation lie?

Sol. I answer, It lies principally in three things:

1. In the kind and nature of the Temptation.

2. In the Craft and Policy of Satan in managing them.

3. In that secret Correspondency, that Satan hath with our Corruptions.

1. It lies in the kind and nature of the Temptation it self: For it's most certain, that all Temptations are not alike forcible and dangerous. Some are ordinarily more successful than others; and such are these that follow.

1. Strange and unusual Temptations, I mean not such as none have been troubled with before us; for there is not a Dart in Satan's Quiver, but hath been let fly at the Breasts of other Saints, before it was levell'd at ours, 1 Cor. 10. 13. But by strange and unusual, I mean such as the People of GOD are but rarely troubled with, and possibly we were never exercised with before. These are the more dangerous, because they daunt and amaze the Soul, and ordinarily beget despondency, even as some strange Disease would do that we know not what to make of, nor can learn that others have been sick of.

2. Mark them for most dangerous Temptations, that are adapted and suited to your proper Sin, or Evil Constitution: For certainly that is the most dangerous nick and crisis of Temptation when it tries a Man there. Now if he be not truly Gracious, he falls by the Root irrecoverably, Luke 22. 5, 6. Or if sincere, yet without special assistance, and extraordinary vigilance, he falls scandalously, 2 Sam. 11. 2. compared with 1 Sam. 16. 12.

3. When it is a Spiritual Temptation, which rises undiscernably out of a Christian's Duties. This is the less suspected, because Temptations usually come from the strength and liveliness of Corruptions; but this, from the Slaughter and Conquests we make of them. Duties, and Enlargements in them, which are the Poyson of other Lusts, proves the Food and Fewel of this, 1 Cor. 4. 7, 8. And how much the more covert and close any Temptation is, by so much the more dangerous it is.

2. The strength and efficacy of temptation lies much in the skill and policy of Satan in the management of it: And hence they are called wiles, methods, and devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Ephes. 6. 11. and himself an old Serpent, Rev. 12. 9. And amongst the rest of his deep and desperate Stratagems these following are Remarkable.

1. In imploying such instruments to manage his Temptations as are least suspected, and have the greatest influence. A Teacher, Gal. 2. 14. A Wife, Gen. 3. 6. Job 2. 9. Friends, Acts 21. 13. The Devil knows it is a bad business, and therefore must make the best of it; Paul's sorest tryal was by his dearest Friends. 2. In the orderly disposition and ranging of his Temptations; beginning with little things first, and then by degrees working over to greater. His first motions are commonly most modest, Gen. 3. 1. Should he discover the Depth of his design at first, it would startle the Soul, and make it reply as Hasael, Am I a Dog that I should do this? It's far easier to gain his end by parts, than putting for all at once.

3. In endeavouring to engage the Soul upon his own ground. I mean to tempt him from his Station and Duty where God sets, and expects to find him. He knows while you are with God, God is with you, 2 Chro. 15. 2. Whilst a man abides there he abides with God, 1 Cor. 7. 24. Whilst he is there, the Promise is a good breastwork to keep off all his Darts: And therefore as Fishers, when they have spread their Net in the River, beat the Fishes out of their Coverts and Caverns; so doth Satan.

4. In not presenting the Temptation, till the Soul be prepared to receive it. He loves to strike when the Iron is hot. He first lets their troubles come to an height, brings them to the Prison, Gibbet or Fire, and then offers them deliverance, Heb. 11. 35, 37.

5. In tiring our Souls with a long continuance of temptations. What he cannot win by a sudden Storm, he hopes to gain by a tedious Siege. Forty days together he assaulted the Captain of our Salvation, Mark 1. 13. And truly it's a wonder the Soul yields not at last, that hath been tried long, Psal. 125. 3. When the rod of the wicked lies long upon the back of the righteous, it is much if he put not forth his hand to iniquity.

6. In falling most violently upon them, when they they are loweſt and moſt proſtrate in their Spirits and comforts: So he aſſaulted Job with a Temptation to curſe God and die, when he ſat in that deplorable ſtate upon the Dunghil, Job 2. 8, 9. He loves to fall upon us as Simeon and Levi did upon the Sechemites, when we are ſore and wounded: And therefore ordinarily you find times of Divine deſertions, to be times of Diabolical temptations. So that look as the wild Beaſts of the Deſart come out of their Dens in the night, and then roar after their prey, Pſal. 104. 20. So doth Satan when the Soul ſeems to be benighted and loſt in the darkneſs of ſpiritual troubles.

And this is the ſecond thing wherein the Efficacy and Strength of Temptation lies.

3. Laſtly, it lies in that ſecret correſpondency Satan holds with our boſome enemies. Were it not for this domeſtick Traitor, he could not ſurprize us ſo eaſily: As you ſee in Chriſt; he could do nothing becauſe he found nothing to faſten a temptation on. He was like a Chryſtal Glaſs filled with pure Fountain Water: So that though he ſhould have been agitated and ſhaken never ſo much by temptation, yet no filthy ſediment could appear; but now we have an enemy within that holds intelligence with Satan without; and this would prove a Devil to us, if there were no other Devil to tempt us, Sam. 1. 14, 15. It's a Fountain of temptation in it ſelf. Mat. 15. 19. and the cheif inſtrument by which Satan doth all his tempting work, Pet. 1. 4.

Our ſeveral paſſions and affections are the handles of his temptations. Every thing ſaith Epictetus hath δύο λάβας, two handles to take it by. Our affections are the handles of our Souls. The temptation of Self-confidence, and Pride, takes hold of a daring and forward diſpoſition; the temptation of Apoſtacy upon a timorous diſpoſition, &c. Theſe imbred luſts go over to the Enemy in the day of Battle and fight againſt the Soul, 1 Pet. 2. 11. This is a more dangerous Enemy than the Devil. 'Tis true, they both work againſt us, but with a double difference. Satan works externally and objectively; but Luſt internally, and Phyſically, i. e. quoad materiale, as it's capable of Phyſical Efficiency. Sin wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence, Rom. 7. 8. Yea, 'tis a ſubtil Enemy that doth his Buſineſs politickly. Rom. 7. 11. Sin deceived me; it betrays with a Kiſs, ſtrangles with a ſilken Halter, Heb. 3. 13. Eph. 4. 22. Theſe be his Agents ſitting at the Council Table in our own Breaſts, and there carrying on his Deſigns effectually: Yea, it's the reſtleſs and perpetual Enemy, no ridding your Hands of him. Satan is ſometimes put to flight by reſiſtance, Jam. 4. 7. and ſometimes ceaſes his Temptations, Luke 4. 13. But when he ceaſeth to tempt and inject, this ceaſeth not to irritate and ſollicite: Where we are, it will be; it's our ſad lot to be tied to it, and perpetually aſſaulted by it, Rom. 7. 24. We may ſay of it as Hannibal ſaid of Marcellus, That it's never quiet, whether a Conquerour, or conquered. Yea, it is a Potent Enemy too, it hauls Men away to the commiſſion of Sin, Jam. 1. 14. It ſeizeth the Magazine of the Soul, and delivers up the Arms, I mean the Members, to be ὅπλα ἀδικίας, weapons of Unrighteouſneſs.

Thus you ſee wherein the efficacy and power of Temptation conſiſts. And it mightily concerns you that are, or expect to be Sufferers for Chriſt, to be acquainted with theſe things, and know where the ſtrength of your Enemy lies.

But how ſhall the ſuffering Saint ſo manage himſelf in a ſuffering hour, as not to be captivated by Temptations? This brings me upon the ſecond thing I promiſed, viz. to preſcribe ſome Rules for the eſcaping or conquering of thoſe Temptations that are incidental to a ſuffering State. And firſt:

1 Rule. Labour to cut off the advantages of Temptation before they come. It's our inordinate love to Life, Eſtate, Liberty, and Eaſe, that gives the Temptations ſo much Strength upon us. Do not over-value them, and you will more eaſily part from them, Rev. 12 11. O mortifie Self-love, and Creature-love; let your Heart be looſened and weaned from them, and then the Temptation hath loſt its Strength.

2. Rule. Secure to your ſelves an Intereſt in the Heavenly Glory. When once you clearly ſee your Propriety in the Kingdom above, you will ſet the lighter and lower by all things on Earth. That is a pregnant Text to this purpoſe, Heb. 10. 34. It's our darkneſs and uncertainties about thoſe, that make us cling ſo faſt to theſe.

3. Rule. Settle this Principle in your Heart, as that which you will never depart from, That it's better for you to fall into any Suffering, than into the leaſt Sin, Heb. 11. 24, 25. This all will acknowledge, but how few practice it! Oh that you would practically underſtand and receive it! Suffering is but a reſpective, exiernal, and Temporal Evil; but Sin is an univerſal, internal, and everlaſting Evil.

4 Rule. Believe that God hath curſed and blaſted all the ways of Sin, that they ſhall never be a ſhelter to any Soul that flies for refuge to them, Mark 8. 35. Prov. 13. 15. The way of Tranſgreſſors is an hard and difficult way. There is no ſecurity in the way of Iniquity. He that runs from Suffering to Sin, runs from the ſeeming to the real danger; from the painted, to the living Lion.

5 Rule. Live up to this Principle, that there is no Policy like Sincerity and Godly Simplicity. This will preſerve and ſecure you, when Carnal Wiſdom will expoſe and betray you. Pſal. 25. 2. Job 2. 3. Sinful Policy never thrives with Saints.

6 Rule. Conſider ſadly what the Conſequence of yielding up your ſelves to Temptations will be: The Name of God will be dreadfully reproached, 2 Sam. 12. 14. A fatal Stumbling-Block is laid before the blind World, 1 Sam. 2. 36. The Hearts of many upright ones made ſad, Pſal. 25. 3. The fall of a Profeſſor is as when a Standard-bearer fainteth; and a dreadful Wound it will be to thine own Conſcience, 2 Cor. 2. 7. Matth. 25. 76. One hours Sleep of Security, may keep you many days and nights waking upon the rack of Horrour.

7 Rule. Never engage a Temptation in your own Strength, but go forth againſt it trembling in your ſelves, and relying on Divine Aids and Aſſiſtances, Eph. 6. 10. What are you to grapple with Spirits, to enter the Liſts with Principalities and Powers? Or what is your ſtrength that you ſhould hope?

8 Rule. Let the days of your Temptation, be days of ſtrong cries and ſupplications. Thus did Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 8. Pſal. 109. 4. Your beſt poſture to wreſtle with Temptation, is upon your Knees

9 Rule. Dwell upon the conſideration of thoſe choice Encouragements God hath laid up in the World for ſuch a time. As (1) though he give Satan leave to tempt you, yet you are ſtill in his Hand to preſerve you, Deut. 33. 3. John 10. 28. (2) That whilſt Satan is ſifting and trying you on Earth, Chriſt is interceeding for you in Heaven, Luke 22. 31, 32. (3) That an eternal reward is laid up for thoſe that overcome, Luke 22. 28, 29. Rev. 21. 7, 8. And now is this reward to be won or loſt.

Laſtly, Be content till God open a door out of your Temptations, 1 Cor. 10. 13. The time of the Promiſe will come, Acts 7. 17. Wait for it, though it tarry, and ſeem to be deferred; in the end it will ſpeak, and not lie, Hab. 3. There was a ſecret door in the Ark, though it could not be ſeen whilſt the Waters prevailed: And ſo there is in all your Temptations, though at preſent it be not diſcernable by you.

And thus I have brought you one ſtep nearer to Paul's bleſſed Frame. O give diligence to make your ſelves ready for ſufferings.

CHAP. XII.

Sheweth that a choice part of our preparation and readineſs for Sufferings conſiſts in the improvement of our praying abilities, and keeping cloſe with God in that Heavenly and Excellent Duty, in days of Suffering; wherein alſo of the nature, and means of its improvement.

PRayer is ſaid to be amongſt Duties, as Faith is amongſt the Graces. Doubtleſs it is of ſpecial uſe and ſervice at all times to a Chriſtian: But yet in ſuffering days it is of more than ordinary uſe and neceſſity, Heb. 4. 16. James 5. 13. And therefore it is reckoned among thoſe choice pieces of Armour which ſuffering Saints are to put on, Eph. 6. 18. I will here briefly diſcover the neceſſity of it, and then ſhew that a Chriſtian may improve himſelf to an excellent degree in it; and laſtly preſcribe ſome means for an improvement.

The neceſſity of it to a ſuffering Saint will demonſtratively appear, if you conſider;

1. That this duty is the out-let of troubles, and the beſt way the poor Chriſtian hath to eaſe his Heart when ſurcharged with Sorrow. Griefs are eaſed by Groans. Such Evaporations disburthen and cool the heart, as the opening of a Vein in ſome caſes doth. Oh the ſenſible eaſe that comes in this way! When Grief in the Mind, like Vapours in the Air, are condenſed into black Clouds, that over-ſpread the Soul, and darken that beautiful Light that once ſhone there, then Prayer, like the Sun, diſpels and ſcatters them. 1 Sam. 1. 18. Many a Saint by Prayer hath ſucked the breaſt of a Promiſe, and then fell aſleep by Divine Contentment in the Boſom of God. A time may come, when thy Heart is ready to break with Trouble, and not a Friend to whom thou canſt open and eaſe it, and then bleſſed be God for Prayer, Micah 7. 5, 6, 7. That which ſinks others is, That when troubles fill and overwhelm their Hearts, they try what reaſon, merry Company, or outward Comforts can do: But alas! this is to palliate a Cure, it returns again with the more violence: But Prayer gives ſenſible relief, Pſalm 102. title Pſalm 62. 8. For firſt this opens and gives a vent to troubles. Jer. 20. 12. (2) It gives our troubles a diverſion, and ſo a Cure, Pſalm 5. 1. and the laſt verſe compared. Yea (3) by praying over them, they are not only diverted but Sanctified, and ſo ceaſe to be diſtracting, or deſtroying Troubles.

2. As it gives a vent to our Troubles, ſo an in-let to unſpeakable Comforts and Conſolations. See a pregnant Inſtance of this, Acts 16. 25. For (1) hereby they obtain gracious Anſwers from the Lord concerning their Troubles, 2 Cor. 12. 9. In this alſo they meet the gracious Smiles of God which ſwallowed up their Troubles, Pſal. 85. 8. And laſtly, hereby they prevail with God to open a ſeaſonable, and effectual door out of all their Troubles, Pſal. 34. 4, 6.

3. Prayer begets and maintains holy courage and magnanimity in evil times; when all things about you tend to diſcouragement: It is your being with Jeſus that makes you bold, Acts 4. 13. He that uſes to be before a great God, will not be afraid to look ſuch little things as Men are in the Face. The Woman cloathed with the Sun, had the Moon under her Feet. And what need you have of Courage in evil times, hath been already ſhewed.

4. This is a duty you may perform at any time, or in any condition: No Adverſary can cut you off from it. It cannot be ſaid ſo of many other Duties. None can hinder the Intercourſe betwixt Heaven and your Souls. You may perform it in a Priſon, Acts 16. 25. in a baniſhed condition, Pſal. 61. 2. And ſo is fitted for a Suffering Condition.

Laſtly, you muſt ſtrive to excel in this, foraſmuch as no Grace within, or Service without can thrive without it. God hath ordained the whole work of Grace to grow up to Perfection this way, Jud. 19. 20. He will have all Mercies fetched out this way, Ezek. 36. 37. Jer. 29. 11, 12, 13. All that comes from God to you, or to you from God, muſt come in this Channel. Be convinced then of the need you have to improve your ſelves herein, as ever you hope to ſtand in the evil day.

But how are theſe praying Abilities capable of Improvement in the People of God?

Praying Abilities are either external and common, or elſe internal and ſpecial: The external and common Ability is nothing elſe but that dexterity and skill Men get to expreſs themſelves to God in Prayer. Thus many can put their meaning into apt and decent Expreſſions, to which the Spirit ſometimes adds his common touches upon the Affections. And this Hypocrites reſt and glory in: Or elſe they are ſpecial and Internal, whereby Men are enabled to pour out their Souls to God in a gracious manner. And this may be conſidered either in the Habit or the Act. The Habit is given by the Spirit, when the Principles of Grace are firſt infuſed into the Soul, Zech. 12. 10. Acts 9. 11. By being ſanctified we are made near, and by acting thoſe principles in Prayer we are ſaid to draw near to God, the Spirit hath the chief and principal Hand: And his aſſiſtance therein is three-fold.

1. He excites the Heart to the duty; 'tis that whiſpers to the Soul to draw nigh to God, Pſal. 27. 8.

2. He ſuggeſts the matter of our Prayers and furniſhes us with materials, Rom. 8. 26. Guiding us as to the matter, not only to what is lawful, but alſo to what is expedient for us.

3. He ſtirreth up ſuitable affections in Prayer, Rom. 8. 26. And hence thoſe Groans and Tears, thoſe gaſpings and vehement anhelations. But notwithſtanding all our Abilities, both Habitual and Actual, be from the Spirit, and not from our ſelves, yet are they capable of improvement by us: For though in reſpect of acquirement, there be a great difference betwixt natural and ſupernatural Habits, yet their improvement is in the ſame way and and manner; and this improvement may be made divers ways. For,

Firſt, Though you have the Spirit and can pray, yet you may learn to pray more humbly than before: Though you riſe no higher as to words, yet you may learn to lay your ſelves lower before the Lord, as Abraham and Ezra did, Gen. 18. 27. Ezra 9. 6.

Secondly, You may learn to pray with more ſincerity than formerly: Ah! there is much Hypocriſie and and Formality in our Prayers, much of Custom, &c. Now, you may learn to pour out more Cordial Prayers. See Psal. 17. 1. Psal. 119. 10.

Thirdly, You may learn to pray with more zeal and earnestness than before: Some Saints have excelled, and been remarkable for this, Dan. 9. 19. Hos. 12. 4. Jam. 5. 16.

Fourthly, with more assiduity and readiness at all times for it, Ephes. 6. 18. Praying always, with all Prayer. Hence Christ gives that Commendation to the Church, Cant. 4. 11. Thy Lips, O my Spouse, drop as the Hony Comb. The Hony Comb often Drops, but always hangs full of Drops ready to fall.

Fifthly, You may learn to pray with more Faith: Oh the qualms of Unbelief, that go over our Hearts in a Duty; Faith is the Soul of Prayer, and according to the Faith God finds in them, he accepts and values them. Now in all these things you may improve your selves abundantly.

1. By being more frequent in the duty, Job 22. 21. acquaint thy self with the Almighty; in the Hebrew it is, accustom thy self: Those that have been excellent, have also been abundant in it, Psal. 15. 17.

2. By taking heed that you grieve not the Spirit, on whose influences and assistances, you so intirely depend: Even as much as a Ship doth upon the Gales of Wind for its motion.

3. By honouring the Spirit which enables you to pray, and that especially two ways; (1) By dependance on him; go not forth in your own strength to the duty, trust not upon your promptness, or preparations. (2) By returning and with thankfulness ascribing the Praise of all to him; Be humble under all Enlargements: Say, Not I, but Grace.

4. By searching your own Heatts, and examining your necessities and wants, when you draw nigh to God; this will be a Fountain of Matter, and give you a deep Resentment of the worth of Mercies prayed for.

5. Lastly, By looking more at the exercise of Graces, and less at the discovery of Parts; by labouring for impressions more, and pumping for expressions less. And thus I have briefly shewed you, how to furnish your selves with this needful Qualification also.

CHAP. XIII.

Wherein is shewed the necessity of going out of our selves, even when our habitual and actual Preparations are at the greatest height; and depending as constantly and intirely upon the Spirit, who is Lord of all gracious Influences, as if we had done nothing: Tothether with the means of Working the Heart to such a Frame.

THus you have seen your habitual and actual readiness for Sufferings, and blessed is the Soul that gives diligence to this Work: But now, lest all that I have said, and you have wrought, should be in vain; I must let you know, that all this will not secure you, unless you can by Humility, Faith, and Self-denial, go out of your selves to Christ, and live upon him daily for supply of Grace, as much as if you had none of all this Furniture and Provision for Sufferings. I confess, Grace is a very beautiful and lovely Creature, and it's hard for a Man to look upon his own Graces, and not dote upon them. But yet know, that if you had all these excellent preparations that have been mentioned, yea, and all Angelical Perfections superadded, yet are you not complete without this dependance upon Christ, Col. 2. 10. When even you go forth to suffer for Christ, you should say in the Head of all your excellent Graces, Duties, and Preparations, as Jehosaphat did, when at the Head of a Puissant and Mighty Army, 2 Chron. 20. 12. O Lord, I have no might nor strength, but my eyes are unto thee. This was one thing in which Paul excelled, and was a special part of his readiness. See 1 Cor. 15. 10. What a poor Creature is the eminentest Saint, left to himself in an hour of trial, the Hop, the Ivy, and the Woodbind, are taught by nature to cling about stronger Props and Suporters: What they do by Nature, we should do by Grace.

The necessity and great Advantage of this, will appear upon divers Considerations.

1. Consid 1. The Christians own imbecility and insufficiency even in the strength and height of all his Acquirements and Preparations; What are you, to grapple with such an Adversary? Certainly, you are no Match for him that conquered Adam hand to hand in his state of Integrity. It is not your inherent strength that enables you to stand, but what you receive, and daily derive from Jesus Christ, Joh. 15. 5. Without me, or neve so little separated from me, ye can do nothing, all your sufficiency is of God, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Upon this very consideration it was, that the Apostle exhorts the Ephesians, to be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, (i. e.) not to depend upon their own stock and furniture. But Divine Assistances, and daily Communications; for we wrestle not with flesh and blood, but Principalities and Powers, Ephes. 6. 10, 12. In his own strength shall no Man prevail.

2 Consid. It is the great design of God in the Gospel, to exalt his Son, and to have all glory attributed and ascribed to him, That in all things he might have the preheminence, Col. 1. 13. That Christ might be all in all, Col. 3. 11. Hence, no Saint must have a self-sufficiency, or be trusted with a stock as Adam was, but Christ being filled with all the fulness of God, and made the πρῶτον δεκτικὸν, or first Receptacle of all Grace: For it pleased the Father, that in him all fulness should dwell; all the Saints are therefore to go to him for supplies, and of his fulness to receive, John 1. 16. This fulness being a Ministerial fulness, like that of the Sun, or of a Fountain, intended to supply all our wants. And hence is it that Faith, a self-emptying and denying Grace, is appointed to be the instrument of fetching our supplies from Christ. All must be derived from him, that all the Praise and Glory may be ascribed to him, Phil. 4. 14. And this is a most wise and congruous Ordination of God, for hereby not only are his People the better secured, but by this also, the reproach that lay upon Christ is rolled away. He was reproached on Earth, as Barren, Empty, Weak; Can any good come out of Nazareth? He was looked upon as a Root springing out of a dry ground, but by this shall his Reproach be wiped away: So that unless you will go about to cross the great design of God, in the Exaltation of his Christ, you must go out of your selves, and humbly, and constantly rely upon supplies from Christ, and his grace, to help in the times of need.

3. Consid. A Christian is constantly to depend upon Christ, notwithstanding all his own Preparations, and inherent qualifications; because the activity even of inherent Grace depends upon him. Inherent Grace is beholding to exciting and assisting Grace for all it is enabled to do. You cannot act a Grace without his Spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Cor. 3. 5. John 15. 5.

It may be ſaid of Grace in us, as it was of the Land of Canaan, Deut. 11. 10, 11, 12. It is not as the land of Egypt whence ye came out, where thou ſowedſt thy ſeed, and wateredſt it with thy foot, as a Garden of Herbs: But a Land of Hills and Vallies, drinking water, of the Rain of Heaven, a Land which the Lord thy God cared for: his Eyes are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even to the end of the year. As the life and fragrancy of Vegetables, depends on the Influences of Heaven, ſo do our Graces upon Chriſt. And hence, he is called, (1) A Root, Iſa. 11. 10. (2) An Head, Col. 1. 18. (3) A Sun, Mal. 4. 2. (4) A Fountain, Zech. 13. 1. all which Compariſons do fully carry this Truth in them.

4. Conſid. Laſtly in this life of dependance lies your ſecurity; And indeed this is the great difference, betwixt the two Covenants: In the firſt, Adam's ſtock was in his own hands, and ſo his Security or Miſery depended upon the unconſtrained choice of his own mutable and ſelf determining Will. But now in the New Covenant, all are to go to Chriſt, to depend upon him for ſupplies, and are ſo ſecured againſt all deſtructive dangers, Jude 1. 1 Pet. 1. 5. Should you go forth in your own ſtrength againſt a Temptation; either your grace would fail, and you fall in the Conflict: Or if you obtain any Victory over it by your own ſtrength, yet 'tis a thouſand to one but your Pride would conquer you, when you had conquered it: Like him that ſlew an Elephant, but was himſelf ſlain by the fall of that Elephant which he ſlew. But now, by this way, as God hath ſecured you againſt the Dangers without; ſo alſo the frame and conſtitution of this New Covenant is ſuch, as prevents the danger ariſing from our own Pride too. Not Ego & Deus meus; I and my God did this: as was once ſaid by a Prophane Mouth; But ſelf is abaſed, and the Lord lifted up in his own ſtrength, 1 Cor. 47. And thus I have briefly evinced the neceſſity of this daily Dependance.

But next it concerns you to know, what this dependance we ſpeak of is: This alſo I ſhall briefly open to you, laying down ſomewhat negatively, and ſomewhat poſitively about it.

1. Neg. It is not to deny the Grace wrought in us by the Spirit; this were both injuſtice and ingratitude: We may know our own grace ſo as to be thankful for them, tho not ſo as to be proud of them, 1 Cor. 15. 10.

2. Neg. It is not a lazy excuſe from our duty: You do not depend, but rather diſhonour Chriſt by ſo doing; you muſt not ſay, becauſe Chriſt muſt do all, therefore I muſt do nothing: but rather work out your Salvation, becauſe it's he that worketh both to will and do, Phil. 2. 12, 13. Theſe are not oppoſed, but ſubordinated.

But then poſitively, it lies in Three things.

1. Poſit. In ſeeing and acknowledging the infinite ſufficiency and fulneſs that is in Chriſt: To acknowledge him to be all in all; not only by way of Impetration procuring all, Heb. 9. 12. But alſo by way of Application, bringing home to the Soul all the Bleſſings purchaſed by his Blood, and ſettling us in the poſſeſſion of it, John 14. 3. And ſo from firſt to laſt to eye him as the Author and Finiſher of our Faith.

2. Poſit. In ſeeing the neceſſary dependance that all our Graces have upon him. That look as you ſee the Stream depending on the Fountain, the Beam upon the Sun, the Branch upon the Root, the building upon the Foundation, even ſo do our Graces upon Chriſt: On him they live, and cut off from him they die. Our life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. 3. 3. When you ſee this, and alſo ſee that all your activity and ſtriving is but as the hoyſting up of the Sails, in order to the motion of the Ship, which can do nothing till there come a Gale: When you look upon your Grace as a Creature that muſt be upheld, fed, acted and preſerved by Chriſt, Col. 2. 19. Then you are prepared for this act of dependance: As for inſtance, you can never depend upon Chriſt for the acting of that Grace of Hope, until you ſee Chriſt to be the Prop and Foundation of it, and that it depends upon him as upon its cauſe; 1 Pet. 1. 3. as upon its object, Heb. 6. 19. and as upon its foundation and ground Work, Col. 1. 27.

You can never depend upon Chriſt for your joy and comfort, until you ſee what a neceſſary dependance this alſo hath upon him, Phil. 3. 3. And that both as to its being and acting, John 16. 22.

You can never depend upon him for ſtrength in any Duty, until you ſee how your Duties depend upon Chriſt, not only for the ſtrength by which they are performed, John 15. 4, 5. But alſo for Acceptation when they are performed, 1 Pet. 2. 5. It were eaſie to inſtance in any other Grace.

(3.) It lies in * looking off from your own Grace when ever you are put upon the acting of it, (I mean in regard of any dependance upon it) and looking by an eye of Faith for accepration to Chriſt, Heb. 12. 2. To the putting forth of which act of Dependance upon Chriſt, holy Ejaculations in our on-ſets upon duty, or thoſe quick and vigorous lifting up of our Souls to God that way, are of ſpecial uſe, it being a Duty, fitted for the purpoſe, when there is no room for ſet and ſolemn Prayer, and thus briefly of its nature.

* Ἀφορῶντες εἰς τὸν τῆς πίστεως ἀρχηγὸν, Looking off to the Author of our Faith.

And to urge you to this Duty, I ſhall offer theſe Seven Conſiderations; which, Oh, that they might prevail upon your Hearts, and make you for ever to claſp and cling about Chriſt more than ever you have done.

1. Conſid. You have little reaſon to rely upon the ſtrength of your own Graces, for you may eaſily be deceived in that matter, and think you have much more Grace than you have. How often are the common Gifts of the Spirit miſtaken for his ſpecial Graces! The Sixth Chapter to the Hebrews is able to make a Man Tremble in this thing.

2 Conſid. Suppoſe you have much Grace, yet have you not ſtrong Corruptions, and may you not meet with ſtrong Temptations alſo? He that hath leſs of other Graces than you, may have more Humility and ſelf-denial than you, and ſo may ſtand when you fall. Great inlargements are often attended with great Temptations of Pride, &c.

3 Conſid. Whatever meaſures of Grace you have arrived at, yet all is not able to ſecure you from falling, if God with-hold or with-draw his Aids and Influences. Abraham had more Faith than you, and yet he fell into a ſin contrary to that very Grace werein he ſo excelled others, Gen. 20. 2. Job had more Patience than you; which of you could behave your ſelf as he did, had you been in the like circumſtances as he was, Chap. 1. 2. He is renowned for it in the Scripture, Jam. 5. 11. yet he fell into that ſin which is contrary to this Grace alſo, Chap. 3. Moſes had more meekneſs than you: Now the Man Moſes was the meekeſt man upon the Earth. If you be but reproved, and that juſtly for your faults, how Waſpiſh are you? Yet ſee how this Grace failed even in him, in an eminent trial of it, Numb. 11. 13, 14, 15. Adam was much more advantaged in this reſpect than you, being made upright, and no corruption inherent in him, yet he fell: The Angels more again, yet they fell. Oh when will you learn the vanity of ſelf-dependance

4 Con

4. Consid. Nothing more provoketh the Lord to withdraw his Spirit, and let you fall, than this sin of self-confidence doth, Luke 14. 29, 30, 31. God will teach you by sad experience your own weakness, and what frail and vain things you be, if you will learn it by no other means.

5 Consid. If God permit you to fall (as doubtless he will if you be self-conceited) then the more eminent you have been, or are for Grace, the more will the Name of God be Reproached by your fall. This will furnish the Triumphs of the Uncircumcised, and the Lamentations of your Brethren, and make them say, How are the mighty fallen! What dismal consequence will attend your fall?

6 Consid. Have you not sad experience of your own weakness from day to day in your lesser trials? Have you not said in some smaller conflicts, as David once did? My Feet were well nigh slipt. O methinks this should teach you to look more to God, and less to self. If you have run with Footmen, and they have wearied you in the land of Peace, think sadly how you should contend with Horses in the swellings of Jordan Do not you see that you are but Feathers in the Wind of Temptation? Consult your former experiences, and they will tell you what weaklings you are.

7 Consid. Lastly, Hath Christ given you more Grace than others, how then much more hath he obliged you to honour him thereby? And is this your Requital of his Love? What to take the Crown from his Head, and put it upon your own! Certainly a greater injury cannot be done to Christ than this.

Well then, by all this be perswaded to cease from your selves, yea from your Religious selves; and to all other your Preparations, add this as a choice one; If you do these things, you shall never fall: And thus you see the compleat Christian in his Equipage for Sufferings.

CHAP. XIV.

Containing the first use of the point by way of conviction, discovering the unreadiness of multitudes of Professors for suffering-work.

YOU have seen by all that hath been spoken, what the necessary perquisites unto a suffering condition are; and what manner of persons you must be (both for habitual and actual readiness) if ever you honour Christ by Bonds or Death for him. And I doubt not but your Judgments and Consciences yield to the evident necessity of these things, wherein I have placed the Christians readiness. But alas! Where shall we find among the throngs and crowds of Professors, any considerable numbers thus qualified and prepared? To suffer for Christ, is a gift that few have received. We are fallen into the dregs of time. Oh how little of the Primitive zeal and simplicity remains among the Professors of this Age! Latter times have produced a sort of Professors of another stamp and Spirit. These have the Light, but they had the love: these see more, but they did and suffered more. How many that are no ornament to Religion, do adorn themselves with the name of it!

Now according to this account given of a ready Christian, divers professing persons will be convicted of their unreadiness and inability to manage suffering-work: As first,

1. The politick and hypocritical Professors, whose hearts were never set right at first, and therefore cannot be stedfast when trials come, Psal. 78. 8. Their hearts were never sound in Gods statutes, and therefore no wonder if they be not only a shame to, but ashamed of their profession, Psal. 119. 80. Never wonder if you see that profession which began in hypocrisie, to end in apostacy. These want their habitual readiness for sufferings, and so cannot drink of that Cup: Needs must they fall when tried; and when they fall, they fall dreadfully, and often irrecoverably, for they neither have the seed of God in them, nor any promise of God made to them.

And are there not many such to be found in every place? For (1) how difficult is it to perswade many of you to any duty that hath loss or hazard attending on it. Doth not the sincere heart stand inclinable and disposed to all the known will of God? Psal. 119. 6. Do Christians use to enquire more what is cheap, easie, and safe for them, or what is their duty? Gal. 1. 16. Speak Conscience, for to thee do I appeal; Art thou not conscious of some reserves, limitations, and exceptions? Doth not the man like Naaman desire the Lord to excuse and pardon him in this or that thing? 2 Kings 5. 17. And thinkest thou that this is consistent with sincere obedience which excepts no duty, nor quarrels with any command, because they all flow equally from the Sovereignty of God, Jam. 2. 11. And so doth what it doth in tuitu voluntatis, upon the sight of God's Will. Say Conscience, are there not great struglings, disputes and contests betwixt thee, and fleshly interests in such cases? And art thou not frequently over-born? Oh search your hearts in this particular.

Yea, secondly, I appeal to you, whether there be not many among you that choose sin rather than affliction? This is always the Hypocrites option and choice: He judges sufferings the greatest evils. and so orders himself in his election. It was meerly to avoid persecution that those Hypocrites, Gal. 6. 12. constrained others to be circumcised, only to gratifie the Jews; that so by a sinful compliance with them, the offence of the Cross might cease. If Paul would have done so, he might have avoided it too, but he durst not whatever he suffered, Gal. 5 11. Oh this is a shrewd sign of a false heart, Job 36. 21. And the contrary disposition is always found in the upright heart, Heb. 11. 25.

Nay, are there not some that have, and others that are ready to throw up their Profession, when they see into what difficulties it involves them? Whilst they could live upon the Profession of Truth, they entertained it; but when Truth comes to live upon them, they thrust it out, and cry, Away with this Profession, it will beggar and undo us: They then repent of their forwardness, and secretly wish they had never ingaged in it. O examine whether your hearts be not thus turned back, and your steps declined. If so, it's manifest you are hypocritical Professors, and that it was some outward self-respect at first ingaged you in your Profession, but can never enable you to hold out when difficult days come. I say its manifest by this departure from your Profession, that some outward self-respect at first allured you to it. As now, when I behold the artificial motions of the Wheels in a Watch, and see how regularly the Needle marks the journal hours of the Sun upon the flat of the Quadrant, and see nothing that moves or guides it; It would cause admiration if I had never seen it before, or did not understand the cause of that motion: but when I look upon the other side, and there find Wheels, Resforts, and Counterpoises, and a Spring that causes all those motions, I cease to wonder; certainly some Lust or other was the Spring of all thy religious motions; stop or take off off that, and motion ceaſes: And if it be ſo, this Scab of Hypocriſie will at laſt break out into the Botch of Apoſtacy. Thou canſt never hold out long under Trials, Matth. 13. 21. Oh how many ſuch ſad ſights may we live to ſee as Trials come! Difficult times are coming on, 2 Tim. 3. 1. And wo to ſuch then as want ſincerity at the bottom of their Profeſſion.

2. And as theſe have no habitual readineſs for ſufferings, and conſequently muſt be ruin'd by them, ſo there are others that may be truly godly, and have the root of the matter in them, who are yet far from an actual readineſs, and ſo continuing, are like to be a reproach to Religion when their trial come. For it is not a little Grace in the ſleepy habit that will ſecure you from falling ſcandalouſly by the hand of temptation: And although that Seed of God which is in you, will recover you again, and prevent total and final Apoſtacy, yet, oh, conſider what a ſad thing it is to enter into, and be conquered by temptation, to be led away in triumph by the Tempter, and made a reproach to Chriſt. O it's a ſad conſideration to think how many there be amongſt the People of God, that diſcover little or no actual preparation for ſufferings, As firſt;

1. Upon how many of the Saints is the Spirit of ſlumber poured out: Even the wiſe as well as fooliſh ſeem now to be a ſleep. There is a twofold ſpiritual ſleep; the firſt is total, upon wicked men: and it's one of God's foreſt and dreadfulleſt ſtrokes upon their Soul, Iſa. 29. 10. The Hebrew word there is the ſame with that which is uſed of Adam, when God caſt him into a deep ſleep whilſt he took out his Rib. And in 2 Tim. 2. 26. It ſignifies ſuch a ſleep as that which is occaſioned by drunkenneſs; out of ſuch a ſleep doth the Lord awaken all that are ſaved, and they never fall into it any more. The other is partial, Cant. 5. 2. and is incident to the People of God, Matth. 25. 5. This is nothing elſe but that torpor or ſluggiſhneſs of ſpirit which ſeizeth upon the Saints, and never did it prevail, I fear among them, more than now. For where is their activity for God? Where is he that ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold of God? Iſa. 64. 7. Where is there ſuch a Generation as that, Pſal. 24. 6. we pray, confer, and hear for the moſt part, but as men ſpeak betwixt ſleeping and waking. Where can you find, except here and there one, that hath a quick and lively ſenſe of God's indignation upon him, or that trembles at his judgments? Is not that the very caſe of the moſt which God deſcribes? Iſa. 42. ult.

רוח קמות — Ἀνανήψωσιν.

2. How many are ſeized by a private and worldly Spirit, every man turning to his own houſe, and eagerly purſuing the world? Hab. 1. 9. Jer. 45. 4. Oh! how are we intangled in the Wilderneſs? How doth the world eat up our time, and eat out our Zeal, cowardice and ſoften our Spirits, and render us utterly unfit for the Yoke and Burden of Chriſt? You that ſee ſo much Beauty, and taſte ſo much ſweetneſs in the Creature, you will have an hard Tugg when call'd to deny it: You are not yet prepared to drink of the Cup, or take up the Croſs of Chriſt.

3. How many poor Chriſtians are of a low and timerous Spirit, ready to tremble at the ſhaking of a leaf: Ah poor hearts! how unfit are you for Bonds or Death? This paſſion of fear that ſo predominates in you, is the very paſſion which Satan aſſaults, and lays ſiege to in the hour of temptation, as was before noted: And commonly it's occaſioned (where it flows not from the Natural Conſtitution, from an exceſſive love to the world, or from ſome guilt upon the Spirit. Its true, the Lord can ſo aſſiſt weak Faith, and ſo ſubdue ſtrong fears, as that you may be enabled to ſtand the ſhock when it comes: (For, as I noted formerly, our ſtrength lies not in any thing inherent in us, but we are ſtrong or weak, according to the divine preſence and aſſiſtances that we enjoy) but yet if you labour not to mortifie this Evil, and ſtir not up your ſelves in the uſe of all appointed means, to rouze your Zeal and Courage for God, I know no Warrant you have to expect ſuch aſſiſtances.

Laſtly, how many poor Chriſtians among us are to this day dark and cloudy in their Evidences for Heaven? Had they walked cloſely with God, been laborious in the diſquiſition and ſearch of their own hearts, they had long ſince obtained a clearneſs and ſatisfaction about the ſtate of their own hearts: But as the caſe ſtands with them, how unfit are they for Bonds or Death. Oh! 'tis a ſad caſe, when inward and outward Troubles meet together, as you may ſee, Gen. 42. 21, 22. when there ſhall be fightings without, and fears within: When ſuch a pang as that, Lam. 3. 17, 18. ſhall come over thy heart, what wilt thou do?

By all that hath been ſaid, it appears, that the moſt of Profeſſors are in a very unready poſture for ſufferings; So that as Troubles come to an height, we are like to ſee many ſad Spectacles: Many offences will come; Religion is like to be wounded in the houſe of its friends. Oh! what a day of Mercy have we enjoyed? What helps and choice advantages, above any precedent Age, and yet unready? How ſad and inexcuſable is this?

CHAP. XV.

Containing another uſe of the Point, by way of Exhortation, perſwading all the People of God, Whilſt the Lord reſpites, and graciouſly delays their trials, to anſwer the end of God therein, and prepare themſelves for greater trials; where ſeveral Motives are propounded, to excite to the Duty.

UP then from your beds of ſloth, awake from your ſecurity, O ye Saints; get upon your Watch-Towers, tremble in your ſelves, that ye may reſt in the Day of Evil, Hab. 2. 1, 3, 16. Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand in the evil day, and when you have done all to ſtand Eph. 6. O let it never be ſaid of your Dwellings as it is of the Tabernacles of the wicked, Job 21. 9. Their Houſes are ſafe from fear.

Auguſtus hearing of one that was deeply in debt who yet ſlept heartily, ſent for his Pillow, ſuppoſing there was ſome ſtrange vertue in that Pillow. I wonder what Pillow you have gotten, O ye drowſie Saints, that you can ſleep ſo quietly upon it now that all things about you are conſpiring trouble and threatning danger. Can you ſleep like Jonah when Seas of wrath are tumbling and roaring round about you, and threaten to entomb you and all your enjoyments? Behold, The Stork in the Heaven knows her appointed time, Jer. 7. 8. and hath not God made you wiſer than the Fowls of the Air, Job 35. 11. It may be the ſound of ſome preſent Judgment may a little ſtartle you, like a ſudden clap of Thunder in the Air; but how ſoon doth Sloth and Security prevail and overcome you again. That ſay Poiſon by being habituated, may be made innocent: We are ſo uſed to, or rather hardned under calamities, that nothing moves or effectually awakes us. Lord what will the end of these things be? Wilt thou surprize thy people at unawares? Shall thy Judgments find them secure, and leave them desperate? O that God would perswade you to gather your selves together, yea to gather together, (not in an unlawful and seditious way) but in the way of duty, before the decree bring forth, and the day pass as the chaff, Zeph. 2. 1, 2. O prepare to meet your God, Amos 4. 12. Prepare your faith, love, courage, &c. before God call you to the exercise of them.

And to excite you to this duty, besides all the fore-mentioned benefits of a prepared Spirit, consider these following particulars by way of motive.

1 Mot. The many Calls which God hath given you to this work. The Lord hath uttered his voice, and called from Heaven unto you; will you be deaf to his Calls? He hath called upon you (1) By the Word: God would have it cry to you first, because he would give the first honour to his Word. He hath given all his Prophets one mouth, Luke 1. 70. and they have warned you faithfully. (2) By the Rod: This also hath a loud voice, Micah 6. 9. Psal. 2. 5. Men of understanding will hear this voice; and those that will not hear it, shall be lashed by it even till they are sick with smiting, verse 13. (3) By prodigious and portentous signs in the Heavens and Earth, such as no Age can parallel, these have a loud voice to all that regard the works of the Lord, or the operations of his hands. Eusebius calls them Gods Sermons to the World. Oh that we were wise to consider what Gods ends are in these things! One observes, That as they are the plainest and most obvious to sense, so they are commonly, the last Sermons which God intends to preach to Nations, before he inflicts his punishment on them, if they repent not. O let not God, speaking in ordinary and extraordinary ways to you, still speak in vain.

τὰ θεῖ κηρύγματα. Euseb. Hist. l. 3. cap. 8.

Your preparation for sufferings, is the most probable means of preventing your fall and ruine by those sufferings. 2. Mot. Sufferings prove fatal and destructive to some; but it is to secure and careless ones: Such as are diligent and faithful in the use of Gods means, are secured from the danger. Christ lays our constancy and perseverance very much upon our fore-casting the worst that may fall out, Luke 14. 28. Put on the whole Armour of God, that he may be able to stand, Ephes. 6. He that hath first severed Christ in his thoughts from all worldly advantages, and put the case thus to his own Soul, O my Soul, canst thou embrace or love a naked Christ? Canst thou be content to be impoverished, imprison'd, and suffer the loss of all for him? He is most likely to cleave faithfully to him, when the case is really presented to him indeed. And can it seem a light thing in your eyes, to be enabled to stand in such an evil day? If you fall away from Christ, then all that you have wrought is lost, Ezek. 33. 13. Gideons one Abiezrite destroyed all his seventy Sons. This act blasters all former actions and professions vain. If you fall, you shall thereby be brought into a more perfect bondage to the Devil than ever, Matth. 12. 23. Alas, ordinarily Apostates are judicially given up to their Persecutors, Hos. 5. 12. 1 Tim. 1. 20. and are seldom or never recovered again by Grace, Heb. 6. 4,6. They that lick up their vomit, seldom cast it up any more. It is a fall, within a little as low as the unpardonable sin, whence never any rise again. In some cases the Judge will not allow the Offender his book. And is it not then a choice and desirable mercy to escape and prevent such a fall as this: O good Souls, ply your preparation-work close then; prepare, or you perish.

3. This will best answer the Grace of God, in affording you such choice helps and advantages as you have enjoyed. How long have you enjoyed the free liberty of the Gospel, shining in its lustre among you? This Sun which to some other nations hath not risen, and to divers on whom it hath shined, yet it is but as a Winters Sun, remote, and its Beams but feeble: But you have lived as it were under the Line, it hath been over your Heads, and shed its richest influences upon you. Yea, Gods Ministers, who are not only appointed to be Watchmen, Ezek. 3. 16. but Trumpeters to discover danger, Numb. 10. 8. These have faithfully warned you of a day of trouble, and given you their best assistance to make you ready for it. And is not their joy, yea life bound up in your stability in such a day of Trial? Doth not every one of them call upon you in the words of the Apostle, Phil. 4. 1. Therefore my Brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and Crown, so stand fast in the Lord my dearly Beloved. Will it not cut them to the very heart, if after all their spending labours among you, they still leave you unready? Enemies still to the Cross of Christ, impossible to be reconciled and perswaded to suffering-work for Christ.

I remember I have read of the Athenian Codrus, who being informed by the Oracle, that the People whose King should be slain in Battle should be Conquerors: He thereupon disrobed himself, and in a disguise went into the Enemies Quarters, that he might steal a death to make his People victorious.

Oh! how glad would your Ministers be, if you might conquer, and overcome in the day of temptation, whatever become of their lives and liberties! Yea, and if they be offered up upon the sacrifice and service of your Faith, they can rejoyce, and joy with you all. Such is their zeal and longing after your security and welfare. But if still you remain an unready People, and do become a prey to temptation, Oh how inexcusable will you be!

4. Remember how ready the Lord Jesus was to suffer the hardest and vilest things for you. He had a bitter Cup put into his hands to drink for you, into which the wrath both of God and man was squeezed out. Never had man such sufferings to undergo as Christ, whether you consider (1) the dignity of his Person, who was in the form of God, and might have stood upon his Peerage and Equality with him, he is the Sparkling Diamond of Heaven, Acts 7. 56. The Darling of the Fathers Soul, Isa. 42. 1. Glorious as the Only begotten of the Father, John 1. 14. yea, glory it self, James 2. 1. yea, the very brightness of glory, Heb. 1. 3. He is the deliciæ Christiani orbis, fairer than the Sons of men: And for him to be so debased, below so many thousands of his own Creatures, become a Worm, and no man; this was a wonderful humiliation. It was Jeremiah's lamentation, that such as were brought up in Scarlet, imbraced Dung-hills; that Princes were hanged up by the Hands, and the faces of Elders were not reverenced. But what was that to the Humiliation of the Lord of Glory? Or (2) that he suffered in the prime and flower of his years; when full of life and sense, and more capable of exquisite sense of pain than others: For he was optime complexionatus, of a singular Constitution; and all the while he hanged on the Tree, his sense of pain not at all blunted or decayed, Mark 15. 37, 39. Or (3) the Dolor Christi fuit major omnibus doloribus Aquin.

Aquinas.

(3) the manner of his death. It was the death of the Croſs, which was a Rack to Chriſt: for in reference to the diſtention of his members upon the Croſs is that ſpoken, Pſal. 22. 17. I may tell all my Bones. Or (4) That all this while God hid his face from him. When Stephen ſuffered, he ſaw the Heavens opened. The Martyrs were many of them raviſhed and tranſported with extaſies of joy in their ſufferings; but Chriſt in the dark. He ſuffered in his Soul as well as in his Body; and the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his ſufferings. It was the Fathers wrath that lay ſo heavy on him, as to put him into ſuch an Agony that an inſtance was never given of the like nature: For he ſweat θρόμβοι, great drops, or clodders of Blood, which fell from his Body to the ground, Luke 22. 24. It amazed him, and made him very heavy. See Mark 14. 33. yea, ſorrowful even to death, Matth. 26. 38.

And yet as bitter as the Cup was, he freely and willingly drank it up, John 18. 11. Prepared himſelf to be offered up a ſacrifice, Pſal. 40. 6, 7. Gave his back to the ſmiters, Iſa. 50. 6. yea longed exceedingly for the time till it came, Luke 12. 50.

Now, if Chriſt ſo chearfully prepared and addreſt himſelf to ſuch ſufferings as theſe for you, ſhould you not prepare your ſelves to encounter any difficulty or hardſhip for him? O my Brethren, Doth not this ſeem a juſt and fair inference to you, from the ſufferings of Chriſt for you? 1 Pet. 4. 1. Foraſmuch then as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh, arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame mind.

Oh trifle no longer, feed not your ſelves with fancies and groundleſs preſumptions of immunity and peace, but foreſee difficulties, and fit your ſelves to bear them.

CHAP. XVI.

Containing the laſt uſe of the point, by way of ſupport and comfort to poor trembling Souls, who do take pains to make themſelves ready for Sufferings; but yet finding ſuch ſtrength in Satan's Temptations, and their own Corruptions, fear that all their labour is in vain, and that they ſhall faint, and utterly Apoſtatize, when their Troubles and Tryals come to an height.

IN the laſt place, if it be ſuch a bleſſed thing to be ready for Bonds, or Death for Chriſt, this may miniſter much Comfort to ſuch Souls, who though they cannot ſay as Paul here did, that they are ready; yet are at work daily upon their own hearts to make them ready, and ſtrive in the uſe of all means to conquer thoſe Corruptions that hinder it, and improve thoſe Graces in which it mainly conſiſteth. O poor Soul, what ever preſent unreadineſs or indiſpoſition thou findeſt, and complaineſt of in thine heart, yet thy condition is ſafe.

Obj. Oh! but I cannot be ſatisfied in that: I fear I ſhall be over-born by Temptations, when they come to an height. I have ſuch experience of the Deceits and Treacherouſneſs of my own heart, that it ſeems impoſſible to me to do as theſe bleſſed Souls did, when I come to the like Tryals.

Sol. It's well thou ſuſpecteſt thine own heart, and trembleſt in thy ſelf; this fear will keep thee waking, when others are ſecurely ſleeping. It was a good ſaying of reverend Miniſter, now with God, Mr. A. H. He that fears to flinch, ſhall never flinch for fear. It's true, ſeeming Grace may be totally loſt, Luke 8. 18. Heb. 6. 4, 5. 2 Pet. 2. 20. It's granted alſo, that the ſins of Believers deſerve that God ſhould forſake them, and that he may ſuffer Grace in them to be ſadly re-bated, and they may fall before a Temptation, as Peter, and all the Diſciples did: But that thou ſhalt never be ſeparated from Chriſt, or fall Totus a toto, in totum, utterly away from God, thou mayeſt be abundantly ſatisfied upon theſe five or ſix grounds.

1. From God's Eternal Electing Love, wherewithal gracious Souls are beloved and imbraced, be their Graces never ſo weak, or their Corruptions never ſo ſtrong. This is immutable Heb. 6. 18. and hence it's ſaid, Mark 13. 22. They ſhall deceive (if it were poſſible) the very Elect. Now this immutable purpoſe of God, is not founded upon any mutable ground or reaſon in thee, Rom. 9. 11. Yea, when he, Rom. 8. 29. Elected thee, he ſaw what thou wouldſt be, and yet that hindred him not.

2. From the Covenant of Grace, in the Boſom of which thou art wrapped up: This is all thy ſalvation, and all thy hope; it will afford thee abundant ſatisfaction, if thou do but weigh particularly theſe three things about it. 1. That the Author of this Covenant is not a fickle Creature, but a faithful God; with whom there is not yea and nay; With whom there is no variableneſs, nor ſhadow of turning, whoſe Gifts and Callings are without Repentance; ſo that once within the claſp of this bleſſed Covenant, and in it for ever. 2. That God hath eſtabliſhed this Covenant with you in the Blood of Chriſt; therefore the Sacramental Cup, is called the Cup of the New Teſtament in his Blood, Luke 22. 20. The everlaſting Merit and efficacy whereof, gives the Soul of a Believer the higheſt ſatisfaction imaginable. Laſtly, add to this, that in this Covenant God hath undertaken for us, as well as for himſelf: So that what is a Condition in one Scripture, is the matter of a Promiſe in another Scripture, Jer. 32. 40.

3. From that ſtrict and intimate union that is betwixt Chriſt and thee. And hence it's impoſſible thou ſhouldſt be loſt: For 1. Thy union with his Perſon, draws intereſt in his Properties with it. Whatever he is, or hath, it is for thee; his Eye, Knowledge, Arm of Power, Bowels of Pity, it's all for thee.

2. This union with his Perſon, ſecures thy feeble Graces from periſhing, John 4. 14. Thy Graces have an everlaſting Spring. Whilſt there is Sap in the Root, it will aſcend into the Branches.

3. It implies the Perſeverance, becauſe by this union thou becomeſt an integral part of Chriſt's Body, which would be mutilate and defective, ſhouldſt thou be cut off and loſt.

4. From the prevalent interceſſion of Jeſus Chriſt in the Heavens, for all his Saints, in all their Tryals here on Earth. From hence the Apoſtle infers the certainty of our Perſeverance, Rom. 8. 34. and a pregnant inſtance of it you have in Peter's caſe, Luke 22. 32. So Heb. 7. 25. ſpeaks fully to the caſe. To ſtrengthen this, Conſider 1. Who it is that intercedes: It's Chriſt whoſe Perſon is moſt dear and ingratiated with the Father, John 11. 42. 2. What he intercedes for: Surely for nothing but what is ſuitable to his Father's Will. The Will of Chriſt and his Fathers, do not claſh, John 16. 26, 27. yea, what he prays for, he prays not for gratis, asks upon any diſhonourable terms to the juſtice of his Father; but they are all mercies purchaſed and paid for; and therefore fear the failing of your Graces.

5. From the Spirit of Chriſt which dwelleth and abideth in thee, and hath begun his ſaving work on thee. I say saving, for else it would afford no argument: His common works on Hypocrites come to nothing, but in thee they cannot fail. For 1. His Honour is pawned and engaged to perfect it. That reproach of the foolish Builder shall never lie upon him, that he began to build, but could not finish. Besides, this would irritate, and void all that the Father and the Son have done for thee; both their works are compleat and perfect in their kinds, and the Spirit is the last efficient in order of working. 2. Besides the Grace he hath already wrought in thee, may give thee yet further and fuller assurance of its preservation, inasmuch as it hath the nature of a Seal, Pledge, and Earnest of the whole, Rom. 8. 23. 2 Cor. 1. 22. So that it cannot fail.

6. From those multitudes of Assertory, Promissory, and Comparative Scriptures, the Rich veins whereof run through the Book of God, as so many streams to refresh thy Soul. Of Assertory Scriptures, see John 6. 39. John 10. 28. 1 John 2. 19. Of Promissory Scriptures, see Isa. 54. 10. Jer. 34. 40. 1 Cor. 1. 8. &c. Of Comparative Scriptures, see Psal. 1. 3. Psal. 125. 1. John 4. 14. &c. The principal scope of all which, is to shew the indefectible Nature of true Grace in the Saints.

And now, how should this refresh thy drooping Soul, make thee gird up the loyns of thy mind! since thou dost not run as one uncertain, neither beatest as one that beats the Air, 1 Cor. 9. 26. But art so secured from total Apostacy, as thou seest thou art by all these things. O bless ye the Lord.

Obj. 2. But the Lord seems to be departed from my Soul; God is afar off from me, and troubles are near. I seem to be in such a case a Saul was when the Philistines made war upon him, and God was departed from him; and therefore I shall fall.

Sol. Not so; for there are two sorts of Divine desertions; The one is absolute, when the Lord utterly forsakes his Creatures, so that they shall never behold his Face more: The other is limited and respective, and so he forsook his own Son, and often does his own Elect: and of this kind, some are only *Caution*al, to prevent sin; some are meerly Probational, to try Grace; and others Castigatory, to chastise our negligence and carelesness. Now though I have not a word of comfort to speak in the case of total and absolute Desertions; yet of the latter (which doubtless is thy case) much may be said by way of support, be it of which of the three sorts it will, or in what degree it will. For 1. This hath been the case of many precious Souls, Psal. 22. 1, 2. Psal. 42. 2. Psal. 88. 9. Job 13. 24, 25, 26. This was even Mr. Glovers case, as you will find in his Story, that it continued till he came within sight of the stake; therefore no new or strange thing hath happened to you.

The Lord by this will advantage thee for perseverance, not only as they are cautional against sin, as they make thee hold Christ the faster, and prize his * Presence at an higher rate, when he shall please graciously to manifest himself to thee again.

* 3. 4.

3. This shall not abide for ever; it's but a little Cloud, and will blow over. It is but for a moment, and that moments darkness ushers in everlasting light, Isa. 54. 7.

Yea, lastly, the light of God's countenance shall not only be restored Certainly, but it shall be restored Seasonably; when the Darkness is greatest, thy troubles at the highest, and thy hopes lowest. He is a God of Judgment, and knows how to time his own Mercies, Psal 138. 3.

Obj. 3. But I am a weak Woman, or a young Person, how shall I be able to confess Christ before Rulers, and look great ones in the Face?

Sol. Christ delights to make his Power known in such, 2 Cor. 12. 9. For he affects not Social Glory.

2. Thou shalt be holden up, for God is able to make thee stand, Rom. 14. 4. Thou that art sensible of thine own infirmity, mayest run to that Promise.

3. Such poor weak Creatures shall endure when stronger (if Self-confident) fall, Isa. 40. 30, 31. Even the youths shall faint, and be weary, and the young men utterly fall; but they that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as Eagles, run and not be weary, walk and not faint.

Youths and Young men are bold, daring, and confident persons, that trust to their own strength! to whom such as wait upon the Lord stand here opposed; they shall faint, but these shall renew their strength.

Art thou one that waitest and dependest upon an All-sufficient God, in the sense of thine own weakness? This Promise then is for thee.

4. You may furnish your selves at pleasure, with Examples of the mighty Power of God resting upon such as you are, out of our own Martyrology.

Thomas Drowry the poor Blind Boy, Fox Vol. 3. p. 703. What a presence of Spirit was with him, when examined by the Chancellor!

Eulalia a Virgin, of about 12 years of Age, see how she was acted above those years, yea, above the power of Nature. Fox. Vol. 1. p. 120. Tender Women, yea Children, act above themselves, when assisted by a strong God.

And thus you have some help offered you by a weak hand, in your present and most important work.

The Lord carry home all with power upon your hearts, (that if God call you to suffer for him) you may say as Paul did, I am now ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the Faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteousness, which God the Righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to them also which love his appearing, 2 Tim. 4. 6. And as you expect so to finish your course with joy; be diligent in the use of all means, to prepare and make your selves ready to follow the Call of God, whether it be to Bonds, or to Death, for the Name of the Lord Jesus.

THE

Balm of the Covenant

Applied to the

BLEEDING WOUNDS

OF

Afflicted Saints.

To which is added, a Sermon Preached for the Funeral of that Excellent and Religious Gentleman John Upton, of Lupton, Esq;

To the Vertuous and much Honoured Madam Ursula Upton of Lupton in DEVON.

Madam,

IF I find it an hard Task to write on such a doleful Subject, it cannot be imagined but your part must be abundantly harder, who feel over and over what is here written. Could I tell how to administer Counsels and Comforts to you, without exasperating your Sorrows, I would certainly take that way; but seeing the one (in this case) cannot be done without the other, 'tis our duty to submit to the Method Providence hath prescribed to us.

The design of the ensuing Discourse, is to evince the Truth of what seems a very great Paradox to most Men, namely, that the Afflictions of the Saints can do them no hurt, and that the Wisdom of Men and Angels cannot lay one Circumstance of their Condition (how uneasie soever it seems to be) better, or more to their advantage than God hath laid it. I attempt not by a flourish of Rhetorick to perswade you against the Demonstrations you can fetch from sense and feeling to the contrary, but to overthrow the false Reasoning of Flesh and Sense, by the allowed Rules of Scripture, and sure Principles of Religion.

And methinks you, and every Christian, should gladly entertain that comfortable conclusion, when you shall find the Foundation of it as strong, as the influences thereof are sweet and comfortable.

Certainly, Madam, the intent of the Redeemer's undertaking was not to purchase for his People Rich Ease, and Pleasures on Earth; but to mortifie their Lusts, heal their Natures, and spiritualize their Affections, and thereby to fit them for the Eternal Fruition of God. Upon this supposition the truth of this Conclusion (how strange soever it seems) is firmly built.

It was not without Divine direction, that the Subject of the ensuing Discourse was as pertinently, seasonably, recommended to me by your dear Husband, in the day of your Sorrows for your only Son. He took, I hope, his portion of Comfort out of it before he died, and it is now left as a Spring of Comfort to you, who then mourned with him, and now for him.

Heavy Pressures call for strong support, and fainting seasons for rich Cordials. Your Burthen is indeed heavy, yet I must say it is much our own Fault they are so heavy as we feel them to be: For according to the measure of our delight in, and expectation from the Creature, is our sorrow and disappointment when we part from it. The highest Tides are always followed with the lowest Ebbs. We find Temperance and Patience knit together in the same Precept, and Intemperance and Impatience as inseparably connected in our own Experience. It may be we did not suspect our selves of any sinful excess in the time of their Enjoyment, but it now appears the Creature was gotten deeper into our Hearts than is imagined, by the pain we feel at parting: Did we not lean too hard upon it, there would not be such breakings as we feel when it is slip from us.

But Madam, 'tis high time to recall your Thoughts, and bound your Sorrows, which the following Considerations would greatly assist you in.

1. What is the very ground and reason of our excessive Sorrows for the loss of Earthly Comforts? Is not this, that they are perishing and tranſitory? That is, that you find them to be as God made them. And can you expect that God should alter the Laws of Nature to please and humour us? It is as natural for our Relations to die, as it is for Flowers to wither, or the Moon to wane.

2. That there is no such necessary Connexion betwixt these things and our Comfort, that whenever God removes the one, he must needs remove the other with it. Christ and Comfort are indeed so united, but no thing beside him is or can be so. I hope you will shortly experience the truth of this conclusion, by the comforts God will give you in the absence of those comforts you have lost. Can you not now have as free access to God as before? Yea, do not these very Afflictions send you oftener into his Presence? And if so, will not he meet you in those duties (as in days of distress he uses to meet his People) then it will be evident to you that your joy and comfort lives, though your Husband and Children be laid in their Graves.

3. That the removing of your Earthly Comforts, hinders not but that you may still pursue the great ends and business of your life, and carry on all your designs for Heaven as successfully as ever. Indeed, Ma had we been ſent into this World to raiſe Eſtates, contract Relations, and then ſit down in the midſt of them as our Portion, then our deſign had been utterly daſhed and diſappointed; but you know this is not your main end, or great buſineſs upon Earth, but to honour God by an holy fruitful life here, and make ready for the full enjoyment of him hereafter. And what hinders, but you may as proſperouſly manage and carry on this your Deſign as ever? You do not think the Traveller is diſabled for his Journey, becauſe he hath fewer clogs and hindrances than before. I think few Chriſtians find much furtherance Heavenward by their multiplicity of Engagements or Enjoyments in this World. Your Cares and Fears about theſe things, will now lie in a narrower compaſs than they did before, and thereby you may have your Thoughts more about you, to attend the great concerns of God's Glory, and your own Salvation.

4. But above all, you will certainly find your relief and conſolation to lie in the everlaſting Covenant of God. Thence it was, that David fetched his ſupport under a much heavier Burthen and ſmarter Rod than yours: For your Relations were ſuch as gave you comfort in their lives, and left you many grounds of hope in their Deaths; but his were taken away in their ſins. But though the grounds of his ſorrow (bleſſed be God) are not yours, yet I hope the grounds of his Comfort in the Text are fully yours.

I confeſs I have prepared theſe things in too much haſte and diſtraction of thoughts, which in this juncture was unavoidable; nor have I beſtowed much of Art or Language upon them: And if I had, they would have been never the more effectual to your relief for that. But ſuch as they are, I humbly preſent them to you, with my hearty Prayers, that God would make them a Soveraign Balm, by the Bleſſing of his Spirit on them to your wounded ſpirit, and to all other Godly Families groaning under the like ſtrokes of God with you, and remain,

MADAM,

Your moſt faithful, ſympathizing Friend and Servant,

Jo. Flavell.

TEXT. 2 SAM. XXIII. v. 5.

Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant; ordered in all things, and ſure: For this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, although he make it not grow.

THeſe are part of David's laſt Words. The laſt words of dying Saints, but eſpecially of dying Prophets, are ponderous, memorable, and extraordinarily remarkable; and ſuch are theſe acknowledged to be, by all Expoſitors: 'Tis a golden Sentence, a divine Oracle, fit to be the laſt words of every dying Saint, as well as of David.

They are called his laſt words, not ſimply, and abſolutely, as though he breathed them forth with his laſt Breath; (for he ſpake many things afterwards) but either they are the laſt he ſpake as a Prophet, by divine inſpiration, or becauſe he had them often in his Mouth, to his laſt and dying day. They were his Epicedium, his ſweet Swan-like Song, in which his Soul found ſingular Refreſhment, and ſtrong Support, amidſt the manifold Afflictions of his Life, and againſt the Fears of his approaching Death.

The whole Chapter is deſigned for a Coronis or honourable cloſe of the Life of David, and gives us an account both of the worthy Expreſſions that dropt from him, and of the renowned Worthies that were employed by him: But all the Heroick Atchievements recorded to the honour of their Memories, in the following part of the Chapter, are trivial and inglorious things, compared with this divine Sentence recorded in my Text; in which we have two things to conſider, viz.

1. The Preface, which is exceeding ſolemn.
2. The Speech it ſelf, which is exceeding weighty.

1. In the Preface, we have both the inſtrumental and principal efficient Cauſe of this divine Sentence, diſtinctly ſet down, ver. 1. and the Efficient, or Author of it. ver. 2.

The Inſtrument or Organ of its Conveyance to us, was David; deſcribing by his deſcent or lineage, the Son of Jeſſe; by his eminent Station, the Man that was raiſed up on high, even to the top and culminating point of Civil and Spiritual Dignity and Honour, both as King, and as a Prophet; by this Divine Unction. The anointed of the God of Jacob; and laſtly, by the flowing ſweetneſs of his Spirit, and ſtile, in the Divine Pſalms that were penned by him, whence he here gets the Title of The ſweet Pſalmiſt of Iſrael, the pleaſant one, in the Pſalms of Iſrael, as ſome read it.

The principal efficient cauſe of this excellent paſſage, is here likewiſe noted, and all to commend it the more to our ſpecial obſervation and acceptance: The Spirit of God ſpake by me, and his Word was in my Tongue. This ſtamps my Text expreſly with divine Authority. The Spirit of God ſpake by David, he was not the Author, but only the Scribe of it. Thus the enſuing Diſcourſe is prefaced. Let us next ſee.

2. The matter or Speech it ſelf, wherein we ſhall find the Maxims, and general Rules of Government preſcribed, and the Felicity of ſuch a Government elegantly deſcribed. He that ruleth over Men muſt be juſt, ruling in the Fear of God. Princes being in God's Place, muſt exalt the Righteouſneſs of God, in the government of Men; and when they do ſo, they ſhall be as the Light of the Morning when the Sun riſeth, even a Morning without Clouds, &c. What Halcyon days ſhall that happy People ſee, whoſe Lot is caſt into ſuch times and places! All this is typically ſpoken of David, and thoſe pious Princes who ſucceeded him; but myſtically and eminently points at Chriſt, who was to riſe out of David's Seed, Rom. 1. 3. And to ſit upon his Throne, Acts 2. 30. So that in this he was raiſed on high, to an Eminency of Glory and Dignity indeed; He was ſo in his ordinary natural Seed; a Royal Race, deriving it ſelf from him, and ſitting upon his Throne in a Lineal Succeſſion, till the Babyloniſh Captivity, which was about fourhundred and thirty Years. And after that, the Jews had Governours of his Line, at leaſt rightful Heirs to that Crown, till the promiſed Meſſiah came. But that which was the top of David's Honour, the moſt ſparkling Jewel in his Crown, was this, that the Lord Jeſus was to deſcend from him, according to the Fleſh, in whom all the glorious Characters before given, ſhould not only be exactly anſwered, but abundantly exceeded. And thus you find the natural Line of the Meſſiah is drawn down by Matthew, from David to the Virgin Mary, Mat. 1. And his Legal Line by Luke, from David to Joſeph, his ſuppoſed Father, Luke 2. 23.

Now though the Illuſtrious Marks and Characters of ſuch a righteous, ſerene, and happy Government, did not fully agree to his day, nor would do ſo in the Reigns of his ordinary natural Succeſſors, his day was not without many Clouds both of Sin and Trouble; yet ſuch a bleſſed day he foreſaw and rejoiced in, when Chriſt, the extraordinary Seed of David, ſhould ariſe, and ſet up his Kingdom in the World, and with the expectation hereof, he greatly chears and encourages himſelf: Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant, &c. In which words four things are eminently remarkable.

1. Here is a ſad Conceſſion of Domeſtick Evils.
2. A ſingular Relief, from God's Covenant with him.
3. The glorious Properties of this Covenant diſplayed.
4. The high eſteem and dear regard his Houſe had unto it.

1. Here is David's ſad and mournful Conceſſion of the Evils of his Houſe, both moral and penal. Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, i. e. Neither ſo holy, nor ſo happy, as this deſcription of a righteous and flouriſhing Government imports; alas, it anſwers not to it: For though he was eminent for Godlineſs himſelf, and had ſolemnly dedicated his Houſe to God, as ſoon as it was built, yea, though he piouſly reſolved to walk in the midſt of it with a perfect Heart, and not to ſuffer an immoral Perſon within his Walls; yet great miſcarriages were found even in David's Houſe, and Perſon, which God chaſtiſed him for, by a thick ſucceſſion of ſharp and ſore Afflictions. Tamar was defiled by her Brother Amnon, 2 Sam. 13. 13. Amnon was barbarouſly murthered thereupon, by the advice of Abſalom, 2 Sam. 13. 28. Abſalom unnaturally rebels againſt his Father David, and drives him out of the Royal City, and periſhes in that Rebellion, 2 Sam. 15. 1. Then Adonijah, another darling-Son, graſps at the Crown ſettled by David upon Solomon, and periſhes for that his Uſurpation, 1 Kings 2. 25. O what a heap of Miſchiefs and Calamities did this good Man live to ſee within his own walls! Beſides the many foreign Troubles that came from other hands. How many flouriſhing Branches did God lop off from him, and that in their Sin too? So that his day was a day of Clouds, even from from the Morning unto the Evening of it; Pſal. 132. 1. Lord, remember David, and all his Afflictions. Well might he ſay, His Houſe was not ſo with God. But what then, doth he faint and deſpond under theſe manifold Calamities? Doth he refuſe to be comforted, becauſe his Children are gone, and all things involved in trouble? No, but you find,

Pſal. 30.

Pſal. 101. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

2. He relieves himſelf by the Covenant God had made with him: Yet hath he made with me a Covenant. He looks to Chriſt, there is more in the Covenant than this my Houſe before God, as the Chaldee turns it. This little word yet, wraps up a great and Sovereign Cordial in it. Though Ammon, Abſalom and Adonijah be gone, and gone with many ſmarting aggravations too; yet hath he made with me a Covenant, yet I have this Sheet-Anchor left to ſecure me. God's Covenant with me, in relation to Chriſt, this under-props and ſhores up my Heart.

Plus eſt quam hæc domus mea ante Deum. Jon.

This Covenant was, without Controverſie, a Goſpel-Covenant. It was David's Goſpel: For all his Salvation and all his deſire were in it; which could never be, except Chriſt had been in it, who is the Salvation of all the Ends of the Earth, and the deſire of all Nations.

'Tis true, it was a more obſcure and imperfect Edition of the Covenant of Faith, yet clearer than thoſe that were made before it, it came not up to the fullneſs and clearneſs of the diſcoveries made by Jeremy and Ezekiel: But yet in this Covenant with David, God revealed more of Chriſt, than had been ever revealed before; for the Light of Chriſt, like that of the Morning, encreaſed ſtill more and more, till it came to a perfect day. It is worthy our Obſervation, how God made a gradual diſcovery of Chriſt from Adam, down along to New-Teſtament times. It was revealed to Adam, that he ſhould be the Seed of the Woman, but not of what Nation, till Abraham's time; nor of what Tribe, till Jacob; nor of what Sex and Family, till David; nor that he ſhould be born of a Virgin, till Iſaiah; nor in what Town, till Micah. The firſt Revelation of this Covenant with David, was by Nathan the Prophet; afterwards enlarged and confirmed. Pſal. 89. By it he knew much of Chriſt, and wrote much of him. He ſpake of his Perſon, Pſal. 45. 6. 11. Pſal. 8. 4, 5, 6. of his Offices, both Prophetical, Pſal. 40. 8, 9, 10. Prieſtly, Pſal. 110. 4. and Kingly, Pſal. 2. 6. of his Incarnation, Pſal. 8. 5. of his Death on the Croſs, Pſal. 22. 16, 17. of his Burial, Pſal. 16. 8, 9, 10. Reſurrection, Pſal. 2. 7. and triumphant Aſcenſion, Pſal. 68. 18. there was the ſum of the Goſpel diſcovered, though in dark and typical terms and forms of Expreſſion; but if out of this Covenant, as obſcure as its Revelation was, David fetcht ſuch ſtrong ſupport and Conſolation, amidſt ſuch an heap of Troubles, then the Argument is good, a fortiori: What Support and Comfort may not we draw thence, who live under the moſt full and perfect diſplay of it, in all its Riches and Glory; Enough hath been ſaid to prove it a Goſpel-Covenant; but if any doubt ſhould remain of that, it will be fully removed, by conſidering,

2 Sam. 7. 12, 31, 14.

3. The eximious Properties and Characters of the Covenant, as we find them placed in the Text; and they are three, viz.

(1.) Everlaſting.
(2.) Ordered in all things, and
(3.) Sure.

ברית עולם Διαθηκην αἰωνιον.

(1.) It is an Everlaſting Covenant, or a perpetual Covenant, a Covenant of Eternity; not in the moſt ſtrict, proper, and abſolute ſence: For that is the incommunicable property of God himſelf, who neither hath beginning, nor end; but the meaning is, that the Benefits and Mercies of the Covenant are durable and endleſs to the People of God: For Chriſt being the principal Matter and Subſtance of the Covenant, there muſt be in it an everlaſting Righteouſneſs, as it is called, Dan. 9. 24. everlaſting Kindneſs, Iſaiah 54. 8. everlaſting Forgiveneſs, Jer. 31. 34. and in conſequence to all theſe, everlaſting Conſolation, Iſaiah 51. 11. In all which the riches and bounty of Free Grace ſhine forth in their greateſt glory and ſplendor.

(2) I

(2.) It is a Covenant order'd in all things, or orderly prepared, diſpoſed, and ſet, as the word imports. Every thing being here diſpoſed and placed in the moſt comely order, both perſons and things here keep their proper place: God the Father keeps the place of the moſt wiſe Contriver and bountiful Donor of the invaluable Mercies of the Covenant; and Chriſt keeps the proper place both of the Purchaſer and Surety of the Covenant, and all the Mercies in it; and Believers keep their place, as the unworthy Receivers of all the gratuitous Mercies and rich Benefits thereof, and the moſt obliged Creatures in all the World to Free Grace, ſaying, Although my houſe, yea, although my heart and my life be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant. And as Perſons, ſo Things, all things in this Covenant ſtand in the moſt exquiſite order, and exact correſpondence to each other. O 'tis a raviſhing ſight to behold the habitude and reſpect of the Mercies in the Covenant, to the ſins and wants of all that are in it! Here are found full and ſuitable ſupplies to the wants of all Gods People. Here you may ſee Pardon in the Covenant, for guilt in the Soul; Joy in the Covenant, for ſorrow in the Heart; Strength in the Covenant, for all defects and weakneſſes in the Creature; Stability in the Covenant, for the mutability in the Creature. Never did the Wiſdom of God ſhine forth more in any contrivance in the World, (except that of Chriſt, the Surety and principal Matter of the Covenant) than it doth in the orderly diſpoſe of all things in their beautiful order, and comely proportions in this Covenant of Grace.

ערך ordinavit, diſpoſuit. aptavit.

(3.) It is a ſure Covenant, or a Covenant ſafely laid up and kept, as the word imports; and upon this account the Mercies of it are called, The ſure mercies of David, Iſaiah 55. 3. And ſo Pſal. 89. 28. ſpeaking of this very Covenant, God ſaith, My Covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him, there ſhall be no vacillancy, no ſhaking in this Covenant: and verſe 34. My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Every thing is as its foundation is. Now, Gods Covenant being founded in his unchangeable counſel and purpoſe, wherein there can be no ſubricity, and Chriſt being the Surety of it, it muſt needs be, as the Text calls it, a ſure Covenant, wherein the faithfulneſs of God is as illuſtriouſly diſplay'd, as his Bounty and Wiſdom are in the two former properties of it. And ſuch a Covenant as this ſo everlaſting, aptly diſpoſed, and ſure, muſt needs deſerve that precious Reſpect and high Eſteem from every believing Soul, which David here doth by it, in שמר cuſtodivit ſervavit.

4. The ſingular and high valuation he had of it, when he ſaith, This is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, or as ſome tranſlate, all my delight, or pleaſure; (i. e.) here I find all repaired with an infinite overplus, that have loſt in the Creature: Here is life in death, fulneſs in wants, ſecurity in dangers, peace in troubles. Is all my ſalvation, for it leaves nothing in hazard that is eſſential to my happineſs; and all my deſire, it repairs whatever I have loſt, or can loſe: It is ſo full and compleat a Covenant, that it leaves nothing to be deſired out of it. O it is a full Foundation! Here I repoſe my weary Soul with full ſatisfaction, and feed my hungry deſires with ſweeteſt delights; ſo that my very Soul is at reſt and eaſe, in the boſom of this bleſſed Covenant. Thus you have the parts and ſence of the Text. The Notes from it are three.

Obſerv. I. That Gods Covenant People may be exerciſed with many ſharp Afflictions in their Perſons and Families. Eccl. 9. 9.

Even David's Houſe was the Houſe of Mourning Although my houſe be not ſo with God, though he make it not to grow. All ſorts of outward Afflictions are incident to all ſorts of men. All things (ſaith Solomon) come alike to all: There is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the clean, and unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not. The Providences ſeem one and the ſame, though the ſubject on whom they fall be vaſtly different. Eſtates and Children, Health and Liberty, will ſtill be like themſelves, vaniſhing Comforts, whoever be the Owners of them. No mans ſpiritual Eſtate can be known by the view of his temporal Eſtate. A godly Family cannot be a miſerable, but it may be a mournful Family. Religion ſecures us from the Wrath, but it does not ſecure us from the Rod of God. The Lord hath choſen another way of expreſſing his love to his People, than by temporal and external things: Therefore all things come alike to all. The Covenant excludes the Curſe, but includes the Croſs. If his children forſake my Law, &c. then will I viſit their iniquity with the rod, and their ſin with ſtripes: nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs will I not utterly take away.

Nor indeed would it be the priviledge of Gods Covenanted People, to be exempt from the Rod; a mark of Barſtardy can be no mans felicity: Heb. 12. 8. to go without the chaſtiſing diſcipline of the Rod were to go without the needful inſtructions and bleſſed fruits that accompany and reſult from the Rod, Pſal. 94. 12.

Let us not therefore ſay, as thoſe irreligious perſons did in Mal. 3. 14. It is in vain to ſerve God, and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinances, and walked mournfully before him? Surely none ſerve him in vain, but thoſe that ſerve him vainly. Godlineſs cannot ſecure you from Affliction, but it can and will ſecure you from Hell, and ſanctifie your Afflictions to help you to Heaven. But I ſtay not here.

Obſerv. II. A declining Family is a ſore ſtroke from the hand of God, and ſo to be acknowledged, wherever it falls.

It was a growing ſorrow to David, that his Houſe did not grow; and he eyed the hand of God in it, He made it not to grow, as he ſpeaks in the Text. He felt as many Deaths as he had dead Children. It is God that builds and deſtroys Families; he enlargeth and ſtraitneth them again. A Family may decline two ways, viz. either

1. By the Death: or,
2. By the Degeneracy of its Off-ſpring.

1. By their Death, when God lops off the hopeful ſpringing Branches thereof; eſpecially the laſt and only Prop of it, in whom not only all the care and love, but all the hope and expectation of the Parents is contracted and bound up. For,

Omnis in Aſcanio ſtat chari cura parentis. Virgil.

The Hearts of tender Parents are uſually bound up in the life of an only Son. As a Man's Wife is but himſelf divided, ſo his Children are but himſelf multiplied; and when all love and delight, hope and expectation, is reduced to one, the affection is ſtrong, and that makes the affliction ſo to. If it were not an unparalell'd Grief among all Earthly Griefs and Sorrows, the Spirit of God would never have choſen and ſingled it out from among all other Sorrows, to illuſtrate Sorrow for Sin by it, yea, Sorrows for that ſpecial Sin of piercing Chriſt, as he doth. They ſhall look upon him whom they have pierced, and ſhall mourn for him, as one that mourneth for an only Son. How naked are thoſe Walls, and how unfurniſhed is that Houſe, where the Children (its beſt Ornaments) are taken down and removed by Death! It is natural to all Men, to deſire the continuance of their Names and Families in the Earth; and therefore when God cuts off their Expectations in that kind, they look upon themſelves as dry Trees, or as the withering Stalks in the Fields, when the Flowers are fallen off, and blown away from them.

to

Zach. 12. 10.

2. Or which is yet much worſe, a Family may decline by the degeneracy of its off-ſpring. When the Piety, Probity, and vertues of Anceſtors deſcend not with their Lands to their Poſterity, here the true Line of Honour is cut off, and the glory of a Family dies, though its Children live: the Family is ruined, though there be a numerous Off-ſpring. Surely it were better mourn for ten dead Children, than for one ſuch living Child.

How many ſuch wretched Families can England ſhew this day! How hath Atheiſm and Debauchery ruined and ſubverted many great and once famous Families! O it were better the Arms of thoſe Families had been reverſed, and their Lands alienated, yea, better had it been a ſucceſſion had failed, and that their Names had been blotted out, than that Satan ſhould rule by Prophaneneſs in the Places where God was once ſo ſeriouſly and ſweetly worſhipped.

Whenſoever therefore God ſhall either of theſe ways ſubvert a Family, it becomes them that are concerned in the Stroke, not only to own and acknowledge the Hand of God in it, but to ſearch their Hearts and Houſes, to find out the Sins which have ſo provoked him; yet not ſo as to fall into an unbecoming deſpondency of Spirit, but withal to relieve themſelves, as David here doth from the Covenant of God; Yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant. Which brings us to the third and principal point I inſiſt on.

Obſer. III. That the Everlaſting, well-ordered, and ſure Covenant of Grace, affords everlaſting, well-ordered, and ſure Relief to all that are within the bond of it, how many or how great ſoever their perſonal or domeſtick Tryals and Afflictions are.

This point will be cleared to your Underſtandings, and prepared for your uſe, by clearing and opening three Propoſitions, which orderly take up the ſum and ſubſtance of it, viz.

Prop. I. That the Minds of Men, yea, the beſt Men, are weak and feeble things under the heavy preſſures of Affliction, and will reel and ſink under them, except they be ſtrongly relieved and underpropp'd.

A bowing Wall doth not more need a ſtrong Shore or Buttreſs, than the Mind of Man needs a ſtrong ſupport and ſtay from Heaven, when the weight of Affliction makes it incline and lean all one way. Unleſs thy Law had been my delights: I ſhould then have periſhed in my Affliction. q. d. What ſhift other Men make to ſtand the ſhock of their Afflictions, I know not; but this I know, that if God had not ſeaſonably ſent me the relief of a Promiſe, I had certainly gone away in a faint fit of deſpondency. O how ſeaſonably did God adminiſter the Cordials of his Word to my drooping ſinking Soul!

Pſal. 119. 92.

This weakneſs in the Mind, to ſupport the burthens of Affliction, proceeds from a double cauſe, viz.

1. From the ſinking weight of the Affliction.
2. From the irregular and inordinate workings of the Thoughts of it.

1. From the ſinking weight that is in Affliction, eſpecially in ſome ſorts of Afflictions: They are heavy preſſures, ponderous Burthens in themſelves. So Job ſpeaks, O that my Grief were throughly weighed, and my Calamity laid in the ballances together: For now it would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea, therefore my words are ſwallowed up. q. d. If all the Sand that lies upon all the Shores in the World, were ſhovelled up into one heap, and caſt into one Scale, and my Sorrows into the other, my Grief would weigh it all up. How heavy are the Hearts of the Afflicted! What inſupportable Sorrows do they feel, and groan under, eſpecially when God ſmites them in the dearеſt and neareſt concerns they have in the World.

Job 6. 2, 3, 4.

2. But eſpecially the reeling and ſtaggerings of the Mind, are occaſioned by the inordinate and irregular workings of its own Thoughts. Were it but poſſible to keep the Mind in a ſerene, ſedate, and ordinate frame, our Burthens would be comparatively light to what we now feel them to be; but the falling of the Thoughts into Confuſions, and great Diſtractions, ſpoils all. Upon this account it is, that Afflictions are compared to a ſtupifying Doſe, which caſts the Soul into amazement. Thou haſt ſhewed thy People hard things, thou haſt made us to drink the Wine of Aſtoniſhment. Afflictions are called the Wine of Aſtoniſhment, from their effects upon the Mind: For under a great and ſudden ſtroke of God, it is like a Watch wound up above its due height, ſo that for a time it ſtands ſtill, neither Grace nor Reaſon move at all: And when it begins to move again, O how confuſed and irregular are its Motions! It is full of Murmurs, Diſputes, and Quarrels: Theſe aggravate both our Sin and Miſery. 'Tis our own Thoughts which take the Arrow God ſhot at us (which did but ſtick before in our Cloaths, and was never intended to hurt us, but only to warn us) and thruſt it into our very Hearts.

Pſal. 60. 3.

For Thoughts, as well as Poniards, can pierce and wound the Hearts of Men. Luke 2. 35. Sword ſhall pierce through thine own Soul; (i. e. Thy Thoughts ſhall pierce thee. They can ſhake the whole Fabrick of the Body, and looſe the beſt compacted and ſtrongly jointed parts of the Body. Dan. 5. 6. His Thoughts troubled him, and the joints of his Loins were looſed. And thus a Man's own Mind becomes a Rack of Torment to him; a miſery which no Creatures, except Men and Devils, are ſubjected to. O how many Bodies have been deſtroyed by the Paſſions of the Soul! They cut through it, as a keen Knife through a narrow Sheath. Worldly Sorrow works Death, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Prop. II. The Merciful God, in condeſcenſion to the weakneſs of his People, hath provided the beſt Supports and reliefs for their feeble and afflicted Spirits.

In the multitude of the thoughts I had within thy comforts delight my Soul. Carnal Men ſeek their relief under trouble, from carnal things; when one Creature forſakes them, they retreat to another which is left them, till they are beaten out of all, and their Hearts fail, having no acquaintance with God or ſpecial Intereſt in him: For the Creatures quickly ſpend all that allowance of Comfort they have to ſpend upon us. Some try what relief Rules of Philoſophy can yield them, ſuppoſing a Sentence of Seneca may be as good a remedy

Pſal. 94.

Text of David or Paul; but alas, it will not do: Submiſſion from fatal neceſſity, will never eaſe the afflicted Mind, as Chriſtian Reſignation will do. It is not the eradicating, but regulating of the Affections, that compoſes a burthened and diſtracted Soul. One Word of God will ſignifie more to our Peace, than all the famed and admired Precepts of Men.

To neglect God, and ſeek relief from the Creature, is to forſake the Fountain of living Waters, and go to the broken Ciſterns which can hold no Water. The beſt Creature is but a Ciſtern, not a Fountain; and our dependance on it makes it a broken Ciſtern, ſtrikes a hole through the bottom of it, ſo that it can hold no Water. I, even I (ſaith God) am he that comforted thee. The ſame Hand that wounds you, muſt heal you, or you can never be healed. Our compaſſionate Saviour, to aſſwage our Sorrows, hath promiſed he will not leave us comfortleſs. Our God will not contend for ever, leſt the Spirit fail before him, Iſai. 57. 16. He knew how ineffectual all other Comforts and Comforters would be, even Phyſicians of no value, and therefore hath graciouſly prepared comforts for his diſtreſſed ones, that will reach their end.

Jer. 2. 13.

Iſa. 57. 12.

Joh. 14. 18.

Prop. III. God hath gathered all the materials and principals of our relief into the Covenant of Grace, and expects that we betake our ſelves unto it, in times of diſtreſs, as to our ſure, ſufficient, and only Remedy.

As all the Rivers run into the Sea, and there is the Congregation of all the Waters; ſo all the Promiſes and Comforts of the Goſpel, are gathered into the Covenant of Grace, and there is the Congregation of all the ſweet ſtreams of Refreſhment that are diſperſed throughout the Scriptures. The Covenant is the Store-houſe of Promiſes, the Shop of Cordials and rare Elixirs, to revive us in all our faintings; though, alas, moſt Men know no more what are their Virtues, or where to find them, than an illiterate Ruſtick put into an Apothecary's ſhop.

What was the Cordial God prepared to revive the Hearts of his poor Captives groaning under hard and grievous Bondage both in Egypt and in Babylon? Was it not his Covenant with Abraham? And why did he give it the ſolemn confirmation by an Oath, but that it might yield to him, and all his believing Seed, ſtrong conſolation, the very Spirit of Joy amidſt all their Sorrows.

Heb. 6. 17, 18.

And what was the Relief God gave to the believing Eunuchs that kept his Sabbaths, took hold of his Covenant, and choſe the things in which he delighted. To them (ſaith he) will I give in my Houſe, and within my Walls, a place, and a name better than that of Sons or of Daughters. Though they were deprived of thoſe comforts other Men have in their Poſterity, yet he would not have them look upon themſelves as dry Trees; a Covenant-Intereſt would anſwer all, and recompence abundantly the want of Children, or any other Earthly Comfort.

Iſai. 56. 4.

Certainly therefore, David was at the right door of relief and comfort, when he repairs to the Covenant, as here in the Text, Yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant. There or no where, the Relief of God's Afflicted is to be found.

Now, to make any thing become a compleat and perfect relief to an afflicted Spirit, theſe three Properties muſt concur and meet in it, elſe it can never effectually relieve any Man.

I. It muſt be able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of Troubles.

II. It muſt be able to do ſo at all times.

III. It muſt be capable of a good perſonal ſecurity to us.

For if it only divert our Troubles, (as Creature-Comforts uſe to do) and do not remove the ground and cauſe of our Trouble, 'tis but an Anodyne, not a Cure or Remedy. And if it can remove the very ground and cauſe of our Trouble, for a time, but not for ever, then 'tis but a temporary relief; our Troubles may return again, and we left in as bad caſe as we were before. And if it be in it ſelf, able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of our Trouble, and that at all times, but not capable of a perſonal Security to us, or our well-eſtabliſhed Intereſt in it, all ſignifies nothing to our relief.

But open your Eyes and behold, O ye afflicted Saints, all theſe Properties of a compleat relief meeting together in the Covenant, as it is diſplayed in the Text. Here is a Covenant able to remove all the grounds and cauſes of your Trouble; for it is O R D E R E D in all things, or aptly diſpoſed by the wiſdom and contrivance of God, to anſwer every cauſe and ground of trouble and ſorrow in our Hearts. It is able to do this at all times; as well in our day, as in David's or Abraham's day: For it is an Everlaſting Covenant; its Vertue and Efficacy is not decayed by time. And laſtly, it is capable of a good perſonal Security or Aſſurance to all God's Afflicted People; for it is a ſure covenant. The concurrence of theſe three Properties in the Covenant makes it a compleat relief, perfect Remedy, to which nothing is wanting in the kind and nature of a Remedy. Theſe three glorious Properties of the Covenant are my proper Province to open and confirm, for your ſupport and comfort in this day of Trouble.

I. That the Covenant of Grace is able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of a Believer's Trouble, be they never ſo great or many. This I doubt not will be convincingly evidenced and demonſtrated by the following Arguments, or undeniable Reaſons.

Arg. I. Whatſoever diſarms Afflictions of the only ſting whereby they wound us, muſt needs be a compleat Relief and Remedy to the Afflicted Soul.

But ſo doth the Covenant of Grace, it diſarms Afflictions of the only Sting by which they wound us.

Therefore the Covenant of Grace muſt needs be a compleat Relief and Remedy to the afflicted Soul.

The ſting of all Afflictions is the guilt of Sin; when God ſmites, Conſcience uſually ſmites too: and this is it that cauſes all that pain and anguiſh in the Afflicted. 'Tis plainly ſo in the Example of the Widow of Zarephath, when her Son, her only Son, and probably her only Child died, how did that Stroke of God revive guilt in her Conſcience, and made the Affliction piercing and intollerable! as appears by her paſſionate Expoſtulation with Elijah, who then ſojourned in her Houſe: What have I to do with thee, O Man of God? art thou come unto me to call my ſin to Remembrance, and to ſlay my Son? q. d. What Injury have I done thee? Didſt thou come hither to obſerve my Sins, and pray down this Judgment upon my Child for them? The Death of her Son revived her guilt, and ſo it generally doth, even in the moſt Holy Men.

1 King. 17. 18.

When Job looked upon his waſted Body under Afflictions, every Wrinkle he ſaw upon it, ſeemed to him like a Witneſs riſing up to teſtifie againſt him. Thou haſt

Job 16. 8.

filled

filled me with Wrinkles, which is a Witneſs againſt me, and my leanneſs riſing up in me, beareth Witneſs to my Face.

Affliction is like a Huc and Cry after Sin in the Ears of Conſcience, and this is the invenomed poyſonous ſting of Affliction: Pluck out this, and the afflicted Man is preſently eaſed, though the matter of the Affliction ſtill abide with him, and lie upon him. He is afflicted ſtill, but not caſt down by Affliction; the anguiſh and burthen is gone, though the matter of Trouble remain.

This is plain both in Scripture, and in Experience. Suitable hereunto is that ſtrange, but ſweet Expreſſion, The Inhabitants ſhall not ſay I am ſick, the People that dwell therein ſhall be forgiven their Iniquities. It's not to be imagined theſe People had found ſuch a fortunate Iſland, or happy Climate, where no Diſeaſe could touch or invade their Bodies; no, ſickneſs will find out the Bodies of the beſt Men, wherever they live; wherever Sin hath been, Sickneſs and Death will follow it. Heaven is the only priviledged Place from theſe Miſeries: But the meaning is, though they be Sick, they ſhall not feel the Pains and Burthens of Sickneſs, they ſhall not ſay they are ſick: And why ſo? becauſe their Iniquities are forgiven. Plainly confirming what was before aſſerted, that the anguiſh of an Affliction is gone, as ſoon as ever the ſting of Guilt is plucked out. And hence, pardoning of the Soul, and healing of the Body, are put together as conjugate Mercies: Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, and healeth all thy Diſeaſes. When the Soul is at eaſe, the pains of the Body are next to nothing: Sickneſs can cloud all natural Joys, but not the joy of a Pardon.

Iſai. 33. 24.

Pſal. 103. 1. 3.

Nay, which is yet more; pluck out but the ſting of Sin, and there is no horrour in Death, the King of Terrours, and worlt of all outward Evils. See how the pardoned Believer triumphs over it: O Death where is thy ſting? O Grave where is thy victory? The ſting of Death is Sin. They are words of defiance, as Men uſed to deride and ſcorn a boaſting inſulting Enemy, when they ſee him caſt upon his Back, and his Sword broken over his Head.

1 Cor. 15. 55.

Ovid Heus! ubi nunc faſtus, altaq; verba jacent?

Where are your Boaſts and Menaces now? O Death thou haſt loſt thy ſting and terrour together, Thus the pardoned Believer, with an Holy gallantry of Spirit, derides and contemns his diſarm'd Enemy Death: So then it is manifeſt, that whatever plucks out the poyſonous ſting of Affliction, muſt needs be an effectual Remedy and Cure to the afflicted Perſon.

But this the Covenant of Grace doth, it reveals and applies Goſpel-remiſſion to them that are within the bleſſed Bond of it. This ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael; I will forgive their Iniquity, and I will remember their Sin no more. Behold here a gracious, full, and irrevocable Pardon! I will forgive, or be propitiouſly Merciful, as that word imports; pointing plainly to Chriſt our Propitiation, our Sins are forgiven us for his Names ſake. And a Pardon as full as it is free; iniquity and ſin, ſmaller and greater, are here forgiven: For God, in the remiſſion of his Peoples Sins, having reſpect to the propitiating Blood of Chriſt, he pardons all, as well as ſome, that Blood deſerving and purchaſing the moſt full and compleat Pardons for his People, 1 Joh. 1. 7. The Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin.

Jer. 31, 33, 34. כלה ἱλεως ἐσομαι. It reſpects the propitiatory expiation of ſin by Chriſt, who is therefore called ἱλασμὸς, & ἱλαστήριον. 1 Joh. 2. 2. and Rom. 3. 25.

And this Covenant-pardon is as firm, as it is free and full. So run the expreſſions in the Grant, I will remember their Sin no more: Or in the Apoſtles words, Heb. 8. 13. οὐ μὴ μνεσθῶ ἐτι, I will not remember them again. That is, not ſo remember, as to impute them, or condemn my pardoned ones for them: For the pardoned Perſons come no more into Condemnation, Job 5. 24. Their Sins are caſt into the depths of the Sea, Mica. 7. 19. Sooner ſhall the Eaſt and the Weſt, the two oppoſite points of Heaven, meet, than the pardoned Soul and its ſins meet again in Condemnation, Pſal. 103. 12.

Now, the caſe ſtanding thus with all God's Covenant-People, all their Sins being graciouſly, fully, and irrevocably forgiven them, how convincingly and ſweetly doth this concluſion follow, that the Covenant is a compleat Remedy to all afflicted Believers? As nothing can befall us before Chriſt and Pardon be ours, which is ſufficient to raiſe us, ſo nothing can befall us afterwards, which ſhould deject and ſink us. This is the firſt benefit afflicted Believers receive from Covenant, and this alone is enough to heal all our Sorrows, Arg. II. As the Covenant of Grace diſarms all the Afflictions of Believers of the only ſting by which they wound them! ſo it alters the very nature and property of their Afflictions, and turns them from a Curſe into a Bleſſing to them: And in ſo doing it becomes more than a Remedy, even a choice Benefit and Advantage to them:

All Afflictions in their own nature, are a part of the Curſe; they are the Conſequence and Puniſhments of Sin; they work naturally againſt our Good: But when once they are taken into the Covenant, their nature and property is altered. As Waters in their ſubterranean Paſſages meeting ſome vertuous Mineral in their courſe, are thereby impregnated and endowed with a rare healing property to the Body; ſo Afflictions paſſing through the Covenant, receive from it an healing Vertue to our Souls. They are in themſelves ſour and harſh, as wild Hedge-Fruits; but being ingrafted into this ſtock, they yield the pleaſant Fruits of Righteouſneſs. If his Children break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments, then will I viſit their Iniquity with the Rod, and their Sins with ſtripes: Nevertheleſs my Loving Kindneſs will I not utterly take away, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. Here you may ſee all the Rods of Affliction put into the Covenant, as Aaron's Rod was into the Ark. And hence two things neceſſarily follow.

Pſal. 89. 30. 31.

(1.) That ſuch Afflictions can do the Children of God no hurt. They may affright, but cannot hurt them: We may meet them with Fear, but ſhall part from them with Joy: An unſanctified Rod never did any Man good, and a ſanctified Rod never did any Man hurt: He may afflict our Bodies with Sickneſs, deny, or cut off our Comfort in Children, impoveriſh our Eſtates, let looſe Perſecutors upon us; but in all this he really doth us no hurt, as he ſpeaks in Jer. 25. 6. No more hurt than a skilful Chirurgeon doth in ſaving his Patient's Life, by cutting off a mortified gangren'd Member: No more hurt than Froſts and Snow do the Earth in killing the rank Weeds that exhauſted the ſap and ſtrength of it, and preparing and mellowing it to produce a fruitful crop of Corn. By theſe he recalls our Minds from Vanity, weans our fond and enſnaring affections from the World, discovers and mortifies those Lusts, which gentler Methods and Essays could not do: And is this for our hurt?

I confess God's Thoughts and ours often differ upon this case. We measure the good and evil of Providences by their respect to the ease and pleasure of our Flesh, but God sees this is the way to cast our Spirits into a dead formality, and in removing them, he doth but deprive us of the occasions and instruments of Spiritual Mischiefs and Miseries, in which certainly he doth us no hurt.

(2.) But that is not all. Afflictions once put into the Covenant, must promote the good of the Saints; they are beneficial, as well as harmless things. We know (saith the Apostle) that all things work together for good to them that love God. This Promise is the Compass which sets the course, and directs the motion of all the Afflictions of the People of God; and no Ship at Sea obeys the Rudder so exactly, as the troubles of the Righteous do the direction of this Promise. Possibly he cannot discern this at present, but rather prejudge the Works of God, and say all these things are against us; but hereafter we shall see, and with Joy acknowledge them to be the happy Instruments of our Salvation.

How often hath Affliction sent the People of God to their Knees, with such Language as this! 'O my 'God, how vain and sensual hath this Heart of mine 'been under prosperity! How did the love of the 'Creature, like a sluice cut in the Bank of a River, 'draw away the Stream of my Affections from thee! 'I had gotten a soft Pillow of Creature-comforts 'under my Head, and I easily fell asleep, and dream-'ed of nothing but rest and pleasure, in a state of 'absence from thee; but now thy Rod hath awa-'kened me, and reduced me to a right Sense of my 'Condition. I was negligent or dead-hearted in the 'course of my Duty, but now I can pray more fer-'vently, feelingly, and frequently than before. O it 'was good for me, that I have been afflicted. O, 'saith God, how well was this Rod bestowed, which 'hath done my poor Child so much good! Now I 'have more of his Heart, and more of his time and 'Company than ever. Now I hear the voice, and 'see the gracious workings of the Spirit of my Child 'after me again, as in the days of his first love. The Sum of all this you may see in the ingenious melt-ings of Ephraim under a sanctified Rod, Jer. 31. 19, 20. and the sounding of the Bowels of Mercy over him. 'Ephraim mourns at God's Feet, and God 'falls upon Ephraim's Neck. I have been as a Beast 'saith Ephraim: Thou art a dear Son, a pleasant Child, saith God. My Bowels are troubled and pained for Sin, saith Ephraim: And my Bow-els are troubled for thee, and my Compassions rol-led together, saith God. O blessed Fruits of San-ctified Rods! Such precious Effects as these richly repay you for all the pain and anguish you feel. And thus, as the wound of a Scorpion is healed by apply-ing its own Oil, so the Evil of Affliction is cured by the Sanctified Fruits that it produceth, when it is once put into the Covenant.

Arg. III. The Covenant doth not only alter the nature and property of the Saints Afflictions, but it also orderly disposes, and aptly places them in the frame of Providence, among the other means and instruments of our Salvation; so that the Council of Angels could never place them, or the least circum-stance belonging to them, more aptly and advanta-geously than it hath done. The knowledge of this must needs quiet and fully relieve the afflicted Soul: and who can doubt it, that believes it to be a Co-venant ordered in all things, as the Text speaks? Here all things, yea, the most minute Circumstances that befal you, are reduced to their proper Class, and place of Service; so exactly ordered, that all the Wisdom of Men and Angels knows not how to mend or alter any thing to your advantage.

If a small Pin be taken out of the Frame of a Watch, and placed any where else, the motion is ei-ther presently stopped, or made irregular. And as Galen observes of the curious Fabrick of an humane Body, that if the greatest Naturalists should study an hundred years to find out a more commodious Scituation, or configuration of any part thereof, it could never be done. 'Tis so here: No Man can come after God, and say, this or that had been bet-ter placed or timed, than it is, if this Affliction had been spared, and such an Enjoyment stood in the room of it, it had been better. All God's Provi-dences are the Result and Issues of his Infinite Wis-dom: For he works all things according to the Coun-sel of his own will, Eph. 1. 11. The Wheels, i. e. The motions and revolutions of Providence are full of Eyes, Ezek. 1. 18. They are well advised, and ju-dicious motions, Non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ; they run not at random. The most regular and ex-cellent working, must needs follow the most deep and perfect Counsel. Isa. 28. 29. He is deep in Coun-sel, and excellent in working.

Now every Affliction that befals God's Covenant-ed People, being placed by the most wise and infi-nite Counsel of God, in that very order, time, and manner in which they befal them, this very Afflicti-on, and not that, at this very time, and not at ano-ther (it being always a time of need, 1 Pet. 1. 6.) and ushered in by such forerunning occasions and cir-cumstances; it must follow, that they all take the proper places, and nick exactly the fittest Seasons; and if one of them were wanting, something would be defective in the frame of your Happiness. As they now stand, they work together for your good, which displaced, they would not do.

It's said, Jer. 18. 11. Behold I frame Evil, and I devise a Device. It's spoken of the contrivance and frame of Afflictions, as the proper works of God. The Project of it is laid for his Glory, and the eter-nal good of his People. It turns to their salvation, 1 Phil. 19. But O how fain would we have this or that Affliction screwed out of the frame of Providence, conceiving it would be far better out than in. O if God had spared my Child, or my Health, it had been better for me than now it is. But this is no other than a presumptuous correcting, and con-trolling of the Wisdom of God, and so he interprets it, Job 40. 2. He that reproveth God, let him answer it. God hath put every Affliction upon your Per-sons, Estates, Relations, just where you find and feel it; and that whole Frame he hath put into the Covenant, in the Vertue whereof it works for your Salvation: And therefore let all disputings and rea-sonings, all murmurs and discontents cease, nothing can be better for you, than as God hath laid it; and this one would think should heal and quiet all. You your selves would marr all, by presuming to mend any thing. Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellour, hath taught him? With whom took he counsel, and who instructed him, and taught him in the Path of Judgment? and taught him knowledge, and shewed to him the way of understanding? Isa. 40. 13, 14. Well then, be satisfied tis best as it is; and nothing can be so advantageous to you, as God's project and contrivance, which you are so uneasie un-der, and dissatisfied about.

Arg. IV. As the Covenant ſorts and ranks all your troubles into their proper Claſſes and places of ſervice, ſo it ſecures the ſpecial gracious preſence of God with you, in the deepeſt plunges of diſtreſs that can befal you; which preſence is a full relief to all your troubles, or elſe nothing in the World is, or can be ſo.

The very Heathens thought themſelves well ſecured againſt all eviis and dangers, if they had their petty houſhold Gods with them in their Journeys: but the great God of Heaven and Earth hath engaged to be with his People, in all their afflictions and diſtreſſes. As a tender Father ſits up himſelf with his ſick Child, and will not leave him to the care of a Servant only; ſo God thinks it not enough to leave his Children to the tutelage and charge of Angels, but will be with them himſelf, and that in a ſpecial and peculiar way: ſo run the expreſs words of the Covenant, Jer. 32 40. I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear into their hearts; and they ſhall not depart from me. Here he undertakes for both parts, himſelf and them. I will not, and they ſhall not.

Here is the Saints ſecurity for the gracious preſence of God with them, a preſence which diſpels all the Clouds of affliction and ſorrow, as the Sun ſcatters the morning Miſts. The God of all conſolation is with you, O poor dejected Believers, and will not ſuch a preſence turn the darkneſs into light round about you? There is a threefold preſence of God with his Creatures.

1. Eſſential, which is common and neceſſary to all.
2. Gracious, which is peculiar to ſome on Earth.
3. Glorious, which is the felicity of Heaven.

The firſt is not the priviledge here ſecured; for it is neceſſary to all, good and bad: In him we all live, and move, and have our being. The vileſt Men on Earth, yea the Beaſts of the Field, and the very Devils in Hell are always in this preſence of God, but it is their torment, rather than their priviledge. The laſt is proper to the glorified Saints and Angels. Such a preſence imbodied Saints cannot now bear; but it is his ſpecial gracious preſence which is made over and ſecured to them in the Covenant of Grace: and this preſence of God is manifeſted to them two ways.

1. Internally, by the Spirit.
2. Externally, by Providence.

1. Internally, by the Spirit of Grace dwelling and acting in them, this is a choice priviledge to them in the day of affliction: for hereby they are inſtructed and taught the meaning of the Rod, Pſal. 94. 12. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, and teacheſt him out of thy law, O 'tis a bleſſed thing to be taught ſo many Leſſons by the Rod, as the Spirit teacheth them! Surely they reckon it an abundant recompence of all that they ſuffer. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy ſtatutes. Pſal. 119. 71. Yea, he refreſhes as well as teaches, and no Cordials revive like his. In the multitude of the thoughts I had within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul. Pſal. 94. 19.

Yea, by the preſence and bleſſing of his Spirit, our Afflictions are ſanctified to ſubdue and purge out our corruptions. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away ſin. Iſa. 27. 9. Now if a man be inſtructed in the ends and deſigns of the Rod, refreſhed and comforted under every ſtripe of the Rod, and have his ſins mortified and purged by the ſanctification of the Spirit upon his Afflictions; then both the burthenſomneſs and bitterneſs of his Afflictions are removed and healed by the internal preſence of the Spirit of God with his afflicted ones. But,

2. Beſides this, God is providentially preſent with his People, in all their troubles, in a more external way; ordering all the circumſtances of their troubles to their advantage. He orders the degree and extent of our Afflictions, ſtill leaving us ſome mercies and comforts to ſupport and refreſh us, when others are cut off. In meaſure doth he debate with his Covenant People, ſtaying the rough wind in the day of the Eaſt wind. Iſa. 27. 8. He might juſtly ſmite all our outward Comforts at once, ſo that affliction ſhould not riſe up the ſecond time: for what comfort ſoever hath been abuſed by ſin, is thereby forfeited into the hand of Judgment. But the Lord knows our inability to ſuſtain ſuch ſtrokes, and therefore proportions them to our ſtrength. We have ſome living Relations to miniſter comfort to us when mourning over our dead: He makes not a full end of all at once. Yea, and his Providence ſupports our frail Bodies, enabling them to endure the ſhocks and ſtorms of ſo many Afflictions, without ruine. Surely there is as much of the care of Providence manifeſted in this, as there is in preſerving poor crazy leaking Barks, and weather-beaten Veſſels at Sea, when the Waves not only cover them but break into them, and they are ready to ſounder in the midſt of them.

O what a ſingular mercy is the gracious preſence of God with men! even the ſpecial preſence of that God, who is above all, and through all, and in you all, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph. 4. 6. Above all, in Majeſty and Dominion; through all, in his moſt efficacious Providence; and in you all, by his Grace and Spirit. As he is above all, ſo he is able to command any Mercy you want, with a word of his Mouth; as he is through all, ſo he muſt be intimately acquainted with all your wants, ſtraights, and fears; and as he is in you all, ſo he is engaged for your ſupport and ſupply, as you are the dear Members of Chriſt's myſtical Body.

Object. But methinks I here Gideon's Objection rolled into the way of this ſovereign Conſolation. If God be with us, why is all this Evil befallen us?

Sol. All what? If it had been all this rebellion and rage againſt God, all this apoſtacy and revolting more and more, all this contumacy and hardneſs of heart under the Rod; then it had been a weighty and ſtumbling Objection indeed: but to ſay, If God be with us, why are all theſe chaſtening corrections and temporal croſſes befallen us? why doth he ſmite our Bodies, Children, or Eſtates? is an Objection no way fit to be urged by any that are acquainted with the Scriptures, or the nature and tenour of the Covenant of Grace. Is afflicting and forſaking, all one with you? muſt God needs hate, becauſe he ſcourgeth you? I queſtion whether Satan himſelf hath Impudence enough to ſet ſuch a Note or Comment upon Heb. 12. 6. For whom the Lord loveth, he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.

No, no, Chriſtian, 'tis not a chaſtening Rod, but the denying of ſuch a favour, and ſuffering men to ſin with Impunity, and go on proſperouſly in the ways of their own hearts, that ſpeaks a rejected man, as the next words, verſe 7. informs you. As he never loved you the better for your proſperity, ſo you may be confident he loves you never the leſs for your adverſity: and will not this cloſe and heal the wounds made by affliction? What, not ſuch a Promiſe as this, I will be with him in trouble, Pſ

91. 15. Will not ſuch a preſence revive thee? What then can do it? Moſes reckoned that a Wilderneſs with God, was better than a Canaan without him. If thy preſence go not with me (ſaith he) then carry us not hence, Exod. 33. 15. And if there be the Spirit of a Chriſtian in thee, and God ſhould give thee thine own choice, thou wouldſt rather chuſe to be in the midſt of all theſe Afflictions with thy God, than back again in all thy proſperity, and among thy Children and former Comforts, without him.

Arg. V. As this Covenant aſſures you of Gods gracious and ſpecial preſence, ſo it fully ſecures all the Eſſentials and Subſtantials of your Happineſs, againſt all hazards and contingencies; in which ſecurity lies your full Relief and compleat Remedy againſt all your troubles for the loſs of other things.

There be two ſorts of things belonging to all God's People, viz.

1. Eſſentials.
2. Accidentals.

1. They have ſome things which are eſſential to their Happineſs; ſuch are the loving kindneſs of God, the pardon of ſin, union with Chriſt, and eternal ſalvation. And they have other things which are Accidentals, that come and go, live and die, without affecting or altering their Happineſs; ſuch are Health, Eſtates, Children, and all ſorts of Relations and Earthly Comforts. Theſe are to our Happineſs, as Leaves are to the Tree, which fade and fall away without endangering the Tree; but the other as the vital Sap, without which it withers and dies at the very root. Now if it can be made out that the Covenant fully ſecures the former; then it will ſtrongly follow, that it therein abundantly relieves us under all our ſorrows for the latter: and that it doth ſo, will evidently appear, by reviewing the Covenant, wherein you ſhall find all theſe ſubſtantial and eſſential Mercies of Believers, fully ſecured againſt all hazards and contingencies whatſoever.

There the loving kindneſs of God is ſecured to their Souls, whatever Afflictions he lays upon their Bodies. Nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs will I not take away. Pſal. 89. 33. And their pardon is as ſafe as the favour of God is; 'tis ſafely lock'd up in that Promiſe, I will remember their ſins no more, Jer. 31. 34. Yea, Heaven, together with our perſeverance in the way to it, are both put out of hazard by that invaluable Promiſe, They ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand, Joh. 10. 28.

Thus are all the Eſſentials of a Believers Happineſs ſecured in the Covenant; and theſe being ſafe, the loſs of other enjoyments ſhould not much affect or wound them, becauſe if he enjoy them, they add nothing to his Happineſs; and if he loſe them, he is ſtill happy in God without them. And this unriddles that Ænigmatical Expreſſion of the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 6. 10. As having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things; (i. e.) the ſubſtraction of all external things cannot make us miſerable, who have Chriſt for our portion, and all our Happineſs intire in him.

If a man travelling on the Road, fall into the hands of Thieves, who rob him of a few Shillings, why this doth not much affect him: for though he have loſt his ſpending Money, yet his ſtock is ſafe at home, and his Eſtate ſecure, which will yield him more. Or if a man have been at Court, and there obtain'd a Pardon for his Life, or a Grant of a Thouſand pound per annum, and returning home ſhould chance to loſe his Gloves or his Handkerchief, ſure if the man be in his wits, he will not take on or mourn for the loſs of theſe Trifles, whilſt the Pardon or Grant is ſafe. Surely theſe things are not worth the mentioning.

'Tis true, the loſs of outward earthly things, are to a Believer real Tryals, yet they are but ſeeming Loſſes: and therefore they are expreſſed in the Apoſtles phraſe, with a Tanquam, ſicut: As chaſtened, and not killed; as ſorrowful, yet always rejoycing, 2 Cor. 6. 9. And if your loſſes be but as it were loſſes, your ſorrows ſhould be but as it were ſorrows; Much like a Phyſick-ſickneſs, which we do not call a proper ſickneſs, but as it were a ſickneſs, becauſe it conduceth to the health, and not to the hurt of the Perſon; as all God's medicinal Afflictions on his People alſo do.

Indeed, if the ſtroke of God were at our Souls, to cut them off from Chriſt and Heaven, to raze our Names out of the Covenant, or revoke the pardon of ſin; then we had cauſe enough to juſtifie the extremity of ſorrow; cauſe enough to weep out our Eyes, and break our Hearts for ſuch a diſmal blow as that would be. But bleſſed be God you ſtand out of the way of ſuch ſtrokes as theſe; let God ſtrike round about you, or lay his hand upon any other comforts you poſſeſs, he will never ſmite you in theſe eſſential things, which is certainly enough to allay and relieve all your other ſorrows.

My Name is blotted out of the Earth, but ſtill it is written in Heaven. God hath taken my only Son from me, but he hath given his only Son for me, and to me. He hath broken off my hopes and expectations as to this World, but my hopes of Heaven are fixed, ſure, and immovable for ever. My houſe and heart are both in confuſion and great diſorder, but I have ſtill an everlaſting Covenant ordered in all things, and ſure. I cannot ſay my ſon liveth, but I can ſtill ſay, I know that my Redeemer liveth. The graſs withereth, and the flower fadeth; but the word of the Lord abideth for ever, Iſa. 40. 8.

Argu. 6. As God ſtrikes none of the ſubſtantial Mercies of his Covenant-People, ſo when he doth ſmite their external and accidental Comforts, the Covenant of Grace aſſures them, that even thoſe ſtrokes are the ſtrokes of Love, and not Wrath; the Wounds of a Friend and not of an Enemy: which is another ſingular relief to the afflicted Soul.

The moſt frightful thing in any Affliction, is the mark or character of God's Wrath which it ſeems to bear: take away that, and the Affliction is nothing. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure, Pſal. 6. 1. He doth not deprecate the rebukes, but the anger of God; not his chaſtening, but his hot diſpleaſure. God's Anger is much more terrible than his rebuking, and his hot diſpleaſure than his chaſtening. Therefore he intreats, that whatever God did to him in the way of affliction, he would do nothing in the way of wrath; and then he could bear any thing from him. A mark of divine anger ingraven upon any Affliction, makes that Affliction dreadful to a gracious Soul.

But if a man be well ſatisfied that whatever anguiſh there be, yet there is no anger, but that the Rod is in the Hand of Love: O how it eaſes the ſoul, and lightens the burthen! Now this deſirable point is abundantly cleared in the Covenant; where we find a clear Conſiſtence, yea, a neceſſary Connexion betwixt the Love and the Rod of God, Pſal. 89. 31. and Heb. 12. 6. nay ſo far are the Afflictions of the Saints from being marks of his Wrath, that they are the Fruits and Evidences of his Fatherly Love.

Two men walking through the Streets, ſee a company of Boys fighting, one of them ſteps forth and ſingles out one of thoſe Boys, and carries him home to correct him; which of the two think you is that Childs Father? The caſe ſtanding thus with all God's People, ſurely there is no reaſon for their deſpondencies whatever their Afflictions be.

Arg. 7. Laſtly, the Covenant doth not only diſcover the conſiſtence and connection betwixt the Love and the Rod of God, but it alſo gives full ſatisfaction to the Saints, that whatſoever temporary Mercy they are deprived of, which was within the Bond of the Covenant when they enjoyed it, is not loſt, but ſhall certainly be reſtored to them again with a rich improvement, and that they ſhall enjoy it again to all eternity.

What a rare Model or Platform of Conſolatory Arguments hath the Apoſtle laid down to antidote our immoderate ſorrows, for the death of our dear Relatives which died intereſted in Chriſt and the Covenant! 1 Theſſ. 4. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are aſleep, They are not dead, but aſleep. Sleep is but a Parentheſis to the Labours and Travels of this Life; and it is but a partial privation, not of the habit, but acts of Reaſon, to which upon awaking the Soul returns again. Juſt ſuch a thing is that which in Believers is commonly called Death. And we do not uſe to bewail our Friends, becauſe they are fallen aſleep: And therefore it no way becomes us to ſorrow as thoſe that have no hope, nor to look upon them as loſt; for (as he ſtrongly argueth and concludeth, v. 14.) their reſtoration to their Bodies, yea, and to our enjoyment again, is fully ſecured both to them and us by the Reſurrection of Jeſus from the dead. The influence of his Reſurrection is by the Prophet Iſaiah compared to the Morning-dew, Iſa. 26. 19. to ſhew that what vertue there is in the Morning-dew, to cauſe the languiſhing Plants of the Earth to revive and flouriſh, that, and much more there is in the Reſurrection of Chriſt, to revive and quicken the dead bodies of theſe Saints, their Bodies ſhall be reſtored by virtue of the warm animating dew or influence of his Reſurrection.

Obj. But the marvellous change which the Reſurrection makes upon glorified Bodies, and the long ſeparation of many Ages betwixt us and them, ſeems to make it impoſſible for us to know them, as thoſe that were once related to us upon Earth; and if ſo, then that comfort which reſulted from them, as in relation to us, is periſhed with them at death

Sol. Whatever change the Reſurrection ſhall make on their Bodies, and the length of time betwixt our parting with them on Earth, and meeting them again in Heaven ſhall be; neither the one or other ſeem ſufficient to inform the grounds of our hope, that we ſhall know them to be the very perſons that were once ſo dear to us upon Earth. There may remain ſome lineament or property of individuation whereby the acute glorified eye may poſſibly diſcover who they were; or if not, yet none can doubt but it may be diſcovered to us by Revelation from God: and that one way or other it will be diſcovered, is highly probable, becauſe nothing will be denied to that perfect State which may contribute to, or compleat the joy and happineſs thereof, as we cannot but think this knowledge will do. If Adam knew Eve to be fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone, in the ſtate of Innocence; and if the Apoſtles knew Moſes and Elias upon the Mount; yea, if Dives in Hell knew Abraham and Lazarus in Heaven: ſure we may well allow that knowledge to the glorified Saints in Heaven, which we find in the ſtate of Innocence, or in the ſinful ſtate on Earth, or in the ſtate of the Damned in Hell.

And if ſo, then the Covenanted Parents ſhall be able to ſay in that day, This was our Child for whom we prayed and travelled again, till Chriſt was formed in him; this is he whom we educated for God, and trained up in the Nurture and Admonition of the Lord; and now we ſee the fruit of our Prayers, Counſels, Catechiſings; a Child of ſo many Prayers periſhed not. And the Covenanted Child ſhall ſay, This was my pious Father, who took ſuch care for my Soul; and this my tender Mother, who, like another Monica, was zealouſly concerned for my Eternal Happineſs. Theſe are they that ſowed ſo many Prayers, which God gave them not time to reap the Fruits of on Earth, but now they ſhall reap the fruit and comfort of them for ever. O joyful meeting in the Kingdom of God! The joy of ſuch a meeting abundantly recompences for all the Tears and Groans of a dolorous parting.

Now, put all this together, and value the Arguments produced to make good the firſt thing propounded, namely, the ſufficiency of the Covenant to relieve and remedy all the ſorrows and loſſes of Believers, be they never ſo many, or ſo great; this cannot be doubted, ſince it hath been proved, that it Diſarms all their Afflictions of the only ſting by which they wound; Alters the very nature and property of their Afflictions, turning them from Curſes into Bleſſings; Ranks and diſpoſes them into their proper Claſs and place of ſervice, ſo as the counſel of Men and Angels could never lay them better to our advantage; Engages the gracious and ſpecial Preſence of God with you in all your Troubles; ſecures all your eſſential and ſubſtantial Mercies from all hazards and contingencies; Diſcovers a conſiſtency, yea, a connection betwixt the Rod and the Love of God; and Aſſures you, that whatever Temporal Mercy you ever enjoyed, in and by vertue of the Covenant, ſhall be reſtored to you again with an admirable improvement, and ſingular advantage. It is by all this, I ſay, abundantly proved, that the Covenant is a ſoveraign and effectual Remedy to all the ſorrows of God's People; and that it was no Hyperbole in David's Encomium, when he called it his Salvation, and all his Deſire. But then as I hinted before,

II. It muſt be able to do theſe things at all times, and in all Ages, or elſe it will be but a temporary relief to ſome only, and not to all. Now that the Covenant hath this ability in all Ages, and is as able to relieve us now, as it was to relieve David in his day, fully appears by the Epithet given it in the Text, it is an EVERLASTING COVENANT. Yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant.

Time is the meaſure of other things; but Everlaſtingneſs is the meaſure of the Covenant. When the Lord eſpouſeth a People to himſelf in Covenant, he betroths them to himſelf for ever, Hoſ. 2. 19. And from that day forward they may ſay on good grounds, This God is our God for ever and ever, He will be our guide even unto Death, as it is in Pſal. 48. 14. Nothing in Nature is ſo firmly eſtabliſhed as the Covenant is. Hills and Mountains ſhall ſooner ſtart from their Baſis and Centre, and fly like wandring Atomes up and down in the Air, than this Covenant ſhall ſtart from its ſure and ſtedfaſt Foundation, Iſa. 54. 10.

The Cauſes and Reaſons of the immutability of the new Covenant, are

1. Th

1. The unchangeable purpoſe of God, which is a ſure and ſtedfaſt Foundation. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs, the Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth who are his. The firſt act of God's Love to the Creature, is that by which he chuſeth ſuch a one to be his, and is therefore called the Foundation of God, as being that on which he lays the ſuperſtructure of all other Mercies. And this ſtands ſure, there can be no vacillancy or ſlipperineſs in ſuch a Foundation: For he knows who are his; he knows them as his Creatures, and as his new Creatures in Covenant with him; as his by Election, and his by Covenant, Tranſaction and Compact. The purpoſe of his Grace before time, gave being to the Covenant of Grace in time, and is the Foundation of it.

2. The Free Grace of God in Chriſt, is that which gives Immutability to this Covenant. It is not built upon Works, but Grace: Therefore it is of Faith, that it might be by Grace; to the end the Promiſe might be ſure to all the Seed. Rom. 4. 16. This Covenant is not founded as the firſt was, upon the variable and inconſtant obedience of Man, but upon Grace which is a ſteddy and firm Foundation.

3. The ſuretiſhip of Chriſt gives everlaſting ſtability to this Covenant. Heb. 7. 22. He was made the ſurety of a better Teſtament, or Covenant: For διαθήκη, ſignifies both, he ſtruck Hands, or engaged himſelf for the whole Covenant, and every Condition in it, and that both on God's Part and ours; to undergo all our Puniſhments, to pay all our Debts, and to work in us all that God required of us in the Covenant of Grace: And all this under the penalty that lay upon us to have undergone. And this not as other Sureties, who enter into one and the ſame Bond with the Principal, ſo that the Creditor may come upon which he will; but he lays all upon Chriſt, and relies wholly upon him for ſatisfaction, knowing he was able to perform it; and ſo under the Type of God's Covenant with David, Chriſt is brought in, Pſal. 89. 19. Thou ſpakeſt in viſion to thy holy one, and ſaidſt, I have laid help on one who is mighty. q. d. I know thy ability, my Son, thou art able to pay me, and therefore I lay all upon thee.

Ἐγγυᾶ ab ἐγγύαω promittere quaſi ἐν γυίοις in manibus.

It follows ſtrongly from what hath been ſaid, that the vertue of the Covenant decays not by time, as other things do, but it is at this day, and will be to the end of the World, as potent and efficacious a Relief to all God's People, as ever it was to David, or any of the Believers of the firſt Ages.

And if ſo, certainly nothing can be more ſtrongly ſupporting, or ſweetly relieving in ſuch a changeable World, than this, he hath made with me an everlaſting Covenant. What David ſpeaks of the natural Heavens, will be found true, of things overſpread and covered by them, Pſal. 102. 26, 27. They ſhall periſh, but thou ſhalt endure, and all of them ſhall wax old like a Garment: And as a Veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be changed. But thou art the ſame, and thy Years ſhall have no end. The Creature was, and is not; but my Covenant God is the ſame; his Name is I am, and his Covenant is the ſame that ever it was; which is the ſecond Property or Ingredient of this compleat Remedy to the Saints Afflictions. The Covenant hath not only all Power, Vertue, and Efficacy in it ſelf to relieve a diſtreſſed Chriſtian, but it hath it in all Ages, as well for one as for another. The third and laſt follows, namely,

III. That it is a ſure Covenant. So David ſtiles it in my Text. The certainty of the Covenant is the glory of the Covenant, and the comfort of all that are in it, The certainty of it in it ſelf is paſt all doubt by what hath been ſaid before. It is certain God did make ſuch an Everlaſting Covenant with his People in Chriſt, and it muſt remain an Eternal Truth, that ſuch a Covenant there is betwixt God and them. It is as impoſſible that this everlaſting Covenant ſhould not be made with them, as it is impoſſible for God to lye, Heb. 6. 18. If he might make himſelf not to have covenanted Everlaſtingly with them, when once he had ſo Covenanted, ſuch a ſuppoſition would turn up the foundation of all Faith and Certainty, and overthrow the Apoſtles conſequence on which the Faith and Comfort of Believers is built. Nor is it any infringement of the Almighty Power, to ſay, God himſelf cannot do that which implies a plain Contradiction, as factum infectum reddere, to make that which was done, not to be done.

But of this there is no doubt; it is a ſure Covenant in it ſelf: That which makes to my purpoſe here, is to prove it capable of Perſonal Security and certainty to us. David had, and all the Federates, as well as he, may have a ſubjective or perſonal certainty alſo. He ſpeaks Categorically and poſitively in the Text, Yet hath he made [with me] an Everlaſting Covenant.

Object. If it be ſaid, he might have a perſonal certainty of it, becauſe it was revealed to him in an extraordinary way by the Prophet Nathan, 2 Sam. 7. 12, 13, 14. And extraordinaria non currunt in exemplum. This was a peculiar favour, which we may not expect.

Sol. I reply, And why may not we know it with as full a certainty to whom God is pleaſed to make it known in his ordinary way? Think you his Word and Spirit cannot ratifie it as fully and firmly to our Souls, as Nathan's diſcovery of it did to David's Soul? God give me but ſuch a Seal of it in his ordinary method and way of Confirmation, and I will deſire no more of him in this World for my relief and comfort, whatever Afflictions it ſhall pleaſe him to lay upon me.

And thus you ſee all the properties of a compleat Remedy in the Covenant, and of it every Believer may ſay, This is all my Salvation, and all my Deſire, though he make not my Houſe to grow. And now what hinders, but that all God's Afflicted ſhould ſay from henceforth, Return unto thy Reſt, O my Soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee, Pſal. 116. 7. I have all the deſires of my Heart in the Covenant of God, though he take away the deſire of mine Eyes upon Earth with his ſtroke. In this Covenant my Soul is at reſt, and my very Heart is centred. No Affliction can be great enough to make the Conſolations of the Almighty ſeem ſmall in mine Eyes. Worldly ſorrows may ſwallow up worldly Comforts, but no Sorrows upon Earth can ſwallow up the Conſolations of the Covenant.

I know many Chriſtians droop and are dejected under the Rod, notwithſtanding ſuch Sovereign Cordials are prepared for them in the Covenant; but this is not for want of Efficacy in the Covenant, but for want of Faith to clear their Intereſt, and draw forth the Virtue of it to their relief. Some are ignorant of their Priviledges, and others diffident about their Intereſt. It is with many of God's Children, as it is with our Children in their Infancy, they know not their Father, nor the Inheritance they are born unto.

That which remains, is the improvement of this Truth to our actual comfort and relief in the day of Trouble. And this I ſhall aſſiſt you in, as God ſhall aſſiſt me, by way of,

4. Conſolation.

USE I. For information, in three Corollaries.

Corollary 1. By what hath been diſcourſed from this Text, it appears, That God governs the ſpiritual part of the World by Faith, and not by Senſe. He will have them live upon his Covenant and Promiſes, and fetch their relief and comfort thence, under all their Sorrows and diſtreſſes in this Life.

God never intended temporal things for his Peoples Portion, therefore from them they muſt not expect their relief in times of trouble. He will have us read his love to us by things within us, not by things without us. He hath other ways of expreſſing his love to his People, than by the ſmiles of his Providence upon them. How would Earthly things be over-valued and idolized, if beſides their conveniency to our Bodies, they ſhould be the marks and evidences of God's Love to our Souls! A Chriſtian is to value himſelf as the Merchant, or the Husbandman doth. The Merchant values himſelf by his Bills and Goods abroad, not by the ready Caſh that lies by him. And the Husbandman by his Deeds and Leaſes, and ſo many Acres of Corn he hath in the Ground, and knows he hath a good Eſtate, though ſometimes he be not able to command twenty Shillings. Chriſtian, thy Eſtate alſo lies in good Promiſes, and New Covenant-Securities, whether thou haſt more or leſs of Earthly comforts in thy hands.

Every Creature feeds according to its nature; the ſame Plant affords Food to ſeveral ſorts of Creatures: The Bee feeds upon the Flower, the Sheep upon the Branch, the Bird upon the Seed, and the Swine upon the Root. One cannot live upon what the other doth. So it is here: A Chriſtian can feed upon the Promiſes, and make a ſweet meal upon the Covenant, which the carnal Mind cannot reliſh. The Life that I now live, I live by the Faith of the Son of God, ſaith the Apoſtle, Gal. 2. 21.

This is that myſterious and excellent life of Faith, and the Teſt of true Chriſtianity, to relieve our ſelves by our hopes of things to come, againſt preſent Evils; to ballance the Sorrows and Loſſes of this Life, with the promiſes and expectations of the next. Thus did the renowned Believers of the firſt Age; whenever they felt a faint pang or qualm upon their Hearts under their Tryals or Sorrows from the World, they would preſently run to their Cordial, the Promiſes, and a ſip of Faith from that Bottle would refreſh and invigorate their Souls with new Life and Powers. We faint not whilſt we look not at the things which are ſeen, for they are temporal; but at the things which are not ſeen, for they are Eternal, 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17, 18. And truly ſo muſt we be alſo, when our Hearts are faint within us in days of Affliction, or our Spirits will fail, and we ſhall go away in a faint Fit of Deſpondency.

Corol. 2. Learn hence the ſovereign efficacy of the Word, and what a choice priviledge it is to have theſe lively Oracles of God in our hands, in a day of diſtreſs and trouble.

'Tis no ordinary Mercy to be born in a Land of of Bibles and Miniſters; to have theſe choice ſupports and reliefs at hand, in all our fainting Hours. This is my comfort in my Affliction, for thy Word hath quickned me, Pſal. 119. 50. It was no ſmall Mercy gained by the Reformation, that it put the Oracles of God into our Hands. It opened a Shop of Cordials for the ſupport of our Souls. For this, among other great and excellent uſes, the Scriptures were written, That we, through Patience, and Comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope, Rom. 15. 4. In other parts of the World it is a Sealed Book; bleſs God it is not ſo to you. All Creature-Comforts have a double defect, they are neither ſuitable nor durable; but the Word is ſo. Compare the Arguments that have been urged from the Covenant, with ſuch as theſe. It's in vain to trouble our ſelves about what we cannot help: We are not alone in Trouble, others have their Loſſes and Afflictions as well as we. Alas, what dry and ineffectual Comforts are theſe! They penetrate not the Heart, as pardon of Sin, peace with God, and ſanctification of Troubles to our Salvation do.

And no leſs is the Mercy of an able New-Teſtament Miniſtry, to open, apply, and inculcate the conſolations of the Scripture, to be eſteemed. It is no common favour to the afflicted Soul, to have with or near him an INTERPRETER, one among a thouſand, to ſhew unto him his uprightneſs, Job. 33. 23. O England, prize and improve theſe Mercies, and provoke not thy God to bereave thee of them.

I can find no ſuch ſettlement made of the Goſpel and Miniſtry upon any Place or People, but that God may remove both, upon their abuſe of them; and if he do, ſad will the caſe of ſuch a People be, eſpecially when a day of diſtreſs and trouble ſhall be upon them. 'Tis ſad to be in a Storm at Sea, without a Compaſs or Pilot to direct and adviſe the diſtreſſed Paſſengers. Much ſo is the caſe of the Afflicted, when deprived of the Word and Miniſtry.

Let it therefore be your Care to hide the Word in your Hearts, and get the Teaching of the Spirit; that whatever changes of Providence be upon the World, you may have the Light and Comfort of the Scriptures to direct and chear your Souls. Sanctification is the writing of God's Law in your Hearts; and what is written there, is ſecure and ſafe. The Word within you is more ſecure, ſweet and effectual, than the Word with you. Jerom ſaith of Nepotianus, that by long and aſſiduous meditation of the Scriptures, his Breaſt was at laſt become the Library of Chriſt. O that the Breaſt of every Chriſtian were ſo too.

Corol. 3. How ſad and deplorably miſerable is their condition, who have no title to, nor comfort from the Covenant of God, when a day of affliction and great diſtreſs is upon them!

Unrelieved Miſeries are the moſt intolerable Miſeries. To be over-weighed with troubles on Earth, and want ſupport and comfort from Heaven, is a diſmal ſtate indeed; yet this is the caſe of Multitudes in the World. If a Believer be in trouble, his God bears his burthen for him, yea, he bears up him and his burthen too; but he that hath no Covenant-intereſt in God, muſt ſay as it is, Jer. 10. 19. This is my Affliction, and I alone muſt bear it.

There are but two ways they can take for Relief, either to divert their troubles by that which will inflame then, or reſt their burthened Spirits upon that which will fail them. To run to the Tavern or Alehouſe, inſtead of the Cloſet, is to quench the Fire by pouring on Oil; and to run from one Creature which is ſmitten and withered, to another which ſtill continues with us, is to lean upon a broken Reed, which not only deceives us, but wounds and pierceth us. What a miſerable plight was Saul in and how doleful was his cry and complaint to Samuel, 1 Sam. 28. 15. I am ſore diſtreſſed, for the Philiſtines make War againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more. Heaven and Earth forſook him at once.

Reader, If this be thy caſe, I adviſe thee to reno longer in ſo miſerable a condition. Thy very diſtreſs ſeems by an happy neceſſity to put thee upon God, and drive thee to him for Refuge: and it ſeems to be the very aim and deſign of God in blaſting all thy Earthly Comforts, to neceſſitare thee to come to him, which thou wouldeſt never be perſwaded to do, whilſt thou hadſt any Creature-prop to ſtay and reſt upon. And think not that thou ſhalt be rejected, becauſe thou art brought by a plain neceſſity to him; come ſincerely, and thou ſhalt not be upbraided, becauſe a neceſſity threw thee upon him.

USE II. Seeing then that the Covenant of God is the great relief and ſupport of all the afflicted People, let the afflicted Soul go to this Bleſſed Covenant; ſtudy and apply it in all diſtreſſes. It is in it ſelf a Sovereign Cordial, able to revive a gracious Spirit at the loweſt Ebb; but then it muſt be ſtudied and applied, or it will never give forth its Conſolations to our refreſhment. Extream Sorrows are apt to deafen our Ears to all voices of Comfort. The loud cries of Affliction too often drown the ſweet ſtill voice of Spiritual Conſolation; but either here or no where our Redreſs is to be found. Why ſeek we the living among the dead? Comfort from things that cannot yield it? The Covenant can diſcover two things which are able to pacifie the moſt diſcompoſed heart, viz.

1. The good } of Affliction.
2. The end }

1. It will diſcover to us the good of Affliction, and ſo rectifie our miſtaken judgments about it. God is not undoing, but conſulting our intereſt and happineſs in all theſe diſpenſations. It will ſatisfie us, that in all theſe things he doth no more that what we our ſelves allow and approve in other caſes. It is not meerly from his pleaſure, but for our profit, that theſe breaches are made upon our Families, and Comforts, Heb. 12. 10. Who blames the Mariner for caſting the Goods over-board to ſave Ship and life in a ſtorm? or the Chirurgeon for lancing, yea, or cutting off a Leg or Arm to preſerve the life of his Patient? or Souldiers for burning or beating down the Suburbs, to ſave the City in a Siege? And why muſt God only be cenſured, for cutting off thoſe things from us which he knows will hazard us in the day of Temptation? He ſees the leſs we have of entanglement, the more promptneſs and fitneſs we ſhall have to go through the tryals that are coming upon us; and that all the Comforts he cuts off from our Bodies, goes to the profit and advantage of our Souls.

2. Here you gain a ſight not only of the good of Affliction, but alſo of the comfortable end and iſſue of Affliction. This cloudy and ſtormy Morning will wind up in a ſerene and pleaſant Evening. There's a vaſt difference betwixt our meeting with Afflictions, and our parting from them. You have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord. O get but Job's Spirit under Affliction, and you may ſee as happy an end of them as he did.

Had Naomi ſeen the end of the Lord in taking away her Husband, and ſtarving her out of Moab, ſhe would not have changed her name, or ſaid the Lord had dealt bitterly with her, in grafting her Daughter by that Providence into the Noble Line, out of which the Saviour of the World was to riſe; and could you but ſee that good in order to which all this train of Troubles is laid, you would not murmur or deſpond as you do.

Object. 1. O but this is a grievous Stroke; God hath ſmitten me in the apple of mine Eye, and written bitter things againſt me. No ſorrow is like my ſorrow; 'tis a mourning for an only Son; I have loſt all in one.

Sol. 1. You can never loſe all in one, except that one be Chriſt; and he being yours in Covenant, can never be loſt. But your meaning is, you have loſt all of that kind in one, no more Sons to build up your Houſe, and continue your Name.

2. But yet Religion will not allow you to ſay that your dead Children are a loſt Generation. Præmittuntur, non amittuntur: They are ſent before, but not loſt. For they are a Covenant-ſeed, by you dedicated to the Lord: They were Children of many Prayers; a great ſtock of Prayers was laid up for them; in them alſo you, and all that knew them, diſcerned a teachable Spirit, pious inclinations, and Conſcience of ſecret duties, ſome good things towards the Lord God of Iſrael, as was ſaid of young Abijah, 1 Kings 14. 13. So that you parted from them upon far eaſier terms than good David parted from his Amnon, Abſolom, or Adonijah, who died in their ſins and open rebellions. There was a ſting in his troubles which you feel not; and if he comforted himſelf notwithſtanding in the Covenant of his God, in this reſpect may you much more.

Object. 2. O but my Son was cut off in the very Bud, juſt when the Fruits of Education were ready to diſcloſe and open.

Sol. Let not that conſideration ſo incenſe you ſorrows: God knows the fitteſt time both to give and to take our comforts; and ſeeing you have good grounds to hope your Child died intereſted in the Covenant of God, you have the leſs reaſon to inſiſt upon that afflicting circumſtance of an immature death. He that dies in Chriſt, hath lived long enough both for himſelf and us. That Mariner hath ſailed long enough, that hath gained his Port; and that Souldier fought long enough, that hath won the Victory: And that Child lived long enough, that hath won Heaven, how early ſoever he died.

Beſide, the ſooner he died, the leſs ſin he hath committed, and the leſs miſery he ſaw and felt in this wretched World, which we are left to behold and feel. And it is but a vanity to imagine that the parting pull with him would have been eaſier, if the enjoyment of him had been longer: For the long enjoyment of deſirable Comforts, doth not uſe to weaken, but abundantly to ſtrengthen and faſten the tyes of affection.

Submit your Reaſon therefore, as is meet, to the Wiſdom of God, who certainly choſe the fitteſt ſeaſon for this Affliction.

O but, —— No more Buts and Objections, I beſeech you. Enough hath been offer'd from the Covenant of your God, to ſilence all your Objections, and to give you the eaſe and pleaſure of a reſigned Will. And what are all our Buts and Objections, but a ſpurning at Divine Soveraignity, and the thruſting in the Affliction deeper into your own hearts, which are wounded but too deep already?

I perſwade you not to put off, but to regulate natural Affections: To be without them, would deſervedly rank us among the worſt of Heathens; but rightly to bound and manage them, would ſet you among the beſt of Chriſtians.

I cannot imagine what eaſe or advantage holy Baſil gained by ſuch a particular and heart-piercing account, as he gave of a like Affliction with this; nor Filius mihi erat Adoleſcens, ſolus vitæ ſucceſſor, ſolatium ſelatium ſenectæ, gloria generis flos æqualium, fulcrum domus, ætatem gratioſiſſimam agebat, &c.

to

to what purpoſe it can be to you, to recall and recount thoſe things which only incenſe and aggravate your troubles: Doubtleſs your better way were to turn your thoughts from ſuch ſubjects as theſe, to your God in Covenant, as David in the Text did, and to recount the many great and ineſtimable mercies that are ſecured to you therein; which death ſhall never ſmite, or cut off from you, as it doth your other enjoyments.

Queſt. But yet unleſs we can in ſome meaſure clear our Covenant-intereſt, all theſe excellent Cordials prepared, will ſignifie no more to our relief, than water ſpilt upon the ground: help us therefore to do that, or elſe all that hath been ſaid is in vain? How may a perſon diſcern his Covenant-right and intereſt?

Anſ. This indeed is worthy of all conſideration, and deſerves a ſerious anſwer, foraſmuch as it is fundamental to your comfort, and all actual refreſhment in times of trouble; and will bring us to the next Uſe, which is for tryal of our Covenant-intereſt.

Uſe III. The great Queſtion to be decided, is, Whether God be our Covenant-God, and we his People? A Queſtion of the moſt ſolemn nature, and ſuch as requires awful attention.

We cannot expect ſatisfaction in this matter by ſuch an extraordinary way as David had it, but we may know it by,

Firſt, Our Covenant-Engagements.

Secondly, Our Covenant Impreſſions.

Thirdly, Our Covenant-Converſations.

Firſt, By our Covenant-Engagements, or Dedications of our ſelves to God; ſometimes called our joyning our ſelves to the Lord, Zech. 2. 11. our yielding our ſelves to him, Rom. 6. 19. our giving our ſelves to him, 2 Cor. 8. 5. The Soul that freely and deliberately conſents to take or chuſe the Lord to be his God, may warrantably conclude the Lord hath taken or choſen him: for our choice of God is but the reſult of his choice of us. John 15. 16. You have not choſen me, but I have choſen you; (i. e.) you could never have choſen me, but in conſequence to, and by virtue of my firſt choice of you.

Well then, let it be ſeriouſly conſidered, whether you have duly conſented to take the Lord for your God, and Chriſt for your Redeemer. This includes two things in it.

1. Your relinquiſhing of all things inconſiſtent with him.
2. Your acceptation of all that promotes the glory and enjoyment of him.

1. Your relinquiſhing of all things that are inconſiſtent with an Intereſt in him. Except we let theſe go, God cannot be our God, nor Chriſt our Redeemer. The things to be relinquiſhed for Chriſt are in ſhort, both our ſinful, and our righteous ſelf. Sinful-ſelf muſt be diſclaimed and renounced: For we cannot be the Servants of Sin, and the Servants of Chriſt too, Rom. 6. 14. 18. And righteous ſelf muſt be renounced alſo, or we can have no part or intereſt in his Righteouſneſs, Rom. 10. 3. Theſe are two difficult points of ſelf denial to part with every beloved Luſt, and to give up our own righteouſneſs. Thouſands chuſe rather to be damned for ever, than to do either of theſe.

2. Your acceptance and embracing of all things that promote his Glory, and further the enjoyment of him. As all the painful ways of Duty, hearing, praying, meditating, and all this with the intention of the Inner Man, and offering up of the Soul to God in theſe duties; and the more painful ways of ſuffering for God, and enduring all loſſes, reproaches, torments, and death for him, if his glory require it, and you may be thereunto called. All this is included in your chuſing God to be your God. And upon our underſtanding, and free conſent, and ſealing to theſe Articles, we have right to call him our God. Mat. 16. 24. If any Man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his Croſs and follow me. Now have you conſidered the terms of the Covenant, weighed and ballanced all the conveniences and inconveniences of Godlineſs, and then determined for Chriſt and Holineſs, let the coſt be what it will; then you have choſen him aright for your God. Many think they have choſen God for their God, that never underſtood or deliberated theſe terms. But Non conſentit, qui non ſentit: He that neither knows nor ponders them, is not capable of giving a due conſent.

Secondly, We may diſcern our Covenant-Intereſt, in the Covenant-Impreſſions that are made upon our Souls. All God's Covenant People have a double mark or impreſſion made upon them, viz.

1. Upon their Minds.
2. Upon their Hearts.

1. Upon their Minds in a more ſpiritual and efficacious knowledge of God. Jer. 31. 33. They ſhall all know me, from the greateſt of them, even to the leaſt of them. This knowledge is ſaid to be given, not acquired by meer ſtrength of natural abilities and human aids; and given us in the Face of Chriſt, not by the footſteps of the Creatures only, as he ſpeaks, 2 Cor. 4. 6. 'Tis the choice teaching of the anointing, 1 Joh. 2. 27. A knowledge ſpringing from inward Experience, and ſpiritual Senſe; as we know the ſweetneſs of Honey by taſting, better than by all the deſcriptions and reports that can be made of it.

2. Upon their Hearts, in that gracious tenderneſs and meltings of it for Sin, or the diſcoveries of Free Grace in the pardon of it. So you read in Ezek. 36. 26. A new Heart alſo will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the ſtony Heart out of your Fleſh, and I will give you an Heart of Fleſh.

It is as eaſie to melt the obdurate Rocks into ſweet Syrup, as it is to melt the natural Heart in a penitential and tender melting for Sin; but now there is a principle or habit of tenderneſs implanted in the Soul, whereby it is diſpoſed and inclined to relent and thaw ingeniouſly upon any juſt occaſion.

Thirdly, Our Covenant-Intereſt may be evidenced in and by our Covenant-Converſations. All the Knowledge which is communicated to our Minds, and all the tenderneſs given to our Hearts, do reſpect and tend to this: Ezek. 36. 27. I will put my ſpirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. Habits and Principles are for action and practice: Grace in the heart is for Obedience and Holineſs of Life.

It is true, that as our Graces are imperfect, ſo is our obedience alſo. Perfect working is not to be expected from imperfect Creatures. God's own Covenanted People do often grieve him, and provoke him to bring them under the Rod of affliction: but thoſe their Infirmities break not the Bond of the Covenant, Pſal. 89. 30, 31, 32. Care and Watchfulneſs ordinarily goes before them, conflicts and reſiſtance acompanies them, and ſhame, grief, and renewed care uſually follows them, 2 Cor. 7. 11. By theſe things (which deſerve a more copious diſcourſe than my preſent deſign can allow) we may be helped to clear our Intereſt in the Covenant of

Grace

Grace: And that being done, it ſhould be out of the Power of all the Afflictions in the World to ſink your Spirits. Let me therefore in the laſt place add, Uſe IV. A word of conſolation to your dejected and drooping hearts upon this ſad and mournful occaſion. Why are you troubled? And why do thoughts ariſe in your Hearts? Methinks there hath been ſo much of ſupport and comfort already diſcovered to you in this Bleſſed Covenant, that could your Faith but once fix upon it, and realize and apply it, I might lay down my Pen at this Period, and ſay the Work is done, there needs no more; but knowing how obſtinate deep Sorrows are, and how difficult a Task the comforting of an afflicted Mind is, I will for a cloſe, ſuperadd a few conſiderations more, to all that hath been urged and argued before.

Conſid. I. Conſider how ſmall and trivial the Comforts, whoſe loſs you bewail, are in compariſon with Jeſus Chriſt, who is ſtill your own under the Bond of a ſure Covenant. A Son, an only and a promiſing Son, is a great thing, when he ſtands in compariſon with other Creature-comforts; but ſurely he will ſeem a ſmall thing, and next to nothing, when ſet by, or compared with Jeſus Chriſt. Behold the Father, Son, and Spirit! Pardon and eternal Salvation are this day preſented in the Covenant of Grace before your Souls, as your own. God, even our own God ſhall bleſs us, Pſal. 67. 6. When you feel your Hearts wounded with ſuch a thought as this, I cannot embrace my Children in my Arms, they are now out of my reach; then bleſs and admire God, that the arms of your Faith can embrace ſo great, ſo glorious a Saviour, and that you can ſay, My beloved is mine, and I am his.

Conſid. II. Conſider what evil days are coming on, and what a Mercy it is to your Dead, that God hath taken them away from the evil to come, Iſa. 57. 1,2. There are two ſorts of Evils to come, viz. Evils of Sin, and Evils of ſufferings; and 'tis no ſmall favour to be ſet out of the way of both. The Grave is the hiding-place where God ſecures ſome from the dangers of both.

We are apt to promiſe our ſelves times of Tranquility, and then it cuts us to think that our dear ones ſhall not partake with us in that Felicity: But if we wiſely conſider the ſins or the ſigns of the times, we have more cauſe to rejoice that God hath ſet them out of harms way.

All things ſeem to conſpire and work towards a day of great Temptation and Tribulation. Now as Chriſt told his Diſciples, who were ſo dejected, becauſe he was to leave them, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I ſaid, I go to the Father: So truly you would much better expreſs and manifeſt your love to your Children, in your ſatisfaction in the Will and Appointment of God, in taking them into reſt and ſafety, than in your dejections and ſorrows for their removal. Surely they are better where they are than where they were, whom God hath houſed in Heaven out of the ſtorm and tempeſt. And could your dead Friends that are with Chriſt, have any more intercourſe with this World, and ſee your Tears, and hear your Sighs for them, they would ſay to you, as Chriſt did to thoſe that followed him wailing and mourning, Weep not for us but for your ſelves, and ſuch as remain in the World with you, to ſee and feel the Calamities that are coming on it.

Conſid. III. Conſider how near you are to that bleſſed ſtate your ſelves, where God ſhall be all in all, and you ſhall feel no want of any Creature-comfort, 1 Cor. 15. 28.

Creature-comforts are only accommodated comforts to this animal life we now live, but ſhortly there will be no need of them; for God will be all in all: That is, all the Saints ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied in and with God alone. As there is water enough in one Sea to fill all the Rivers, Lakes, and Springs in the World: And light enough in one Sun to enlighten all the Inhabitants of the World: So there is enough in one God eternally to fill and ſatisfie all the Bleſſed Souls in Heaven, without the addition of any Creature-Comfort. God is compleat ſatisfaction to all the Saints in the abſence (I cannot ſay want) of Wives and Children, Meats and Drinks, Eſtates and ſenſitive Pleaſures: There will be no more need of theſe things, than of Candles at Noon-day. You ſhall be as the Angels of God, who have no concernment for Relations.

Your fulneſs of Years, Infirmities of Body, and, I hope, I may add your improvements in Grace, ſpeak you not far ſhort of this bleſſed ſtate: And though you may ſeem to need theſe Comforts in the way, your God ſhall ſupply all your wants.

Conſid. IV. To conclude, whatſoever your troubles, wants, fears, or dangers are, or may be in your paſſage to this bleſſed State, the Covenant of Grace is your Security, and by vertue thereof your Troubles ſhall open and divide, as Jordan did, to give you a ſafe paſſage into your eternal Reſt.

Look as when the Iſraelites came near the Land of Promiſe, there was a ſwelling Jordan betwixt it and them, which ſeemed to forbid their farther paſſage and progreſs; but 'tis ſaid, Joſh. 3. 17. The Prieſts that bore the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, ſtood firm on the Ground in the midſt of Jordan; and all the Iſrealites paſſed over on dry ground, until all the People were paſſed clean over Jordan. Juſt ſo it is here: The Covenant of Grace ſtands on firm ground in the midſt of all the deep waters of tribulation you are to paſs through, to ſecure unto you a ſafe paſſage through them all. Rejoice therefore, and triumph in the fulneſs and firmneſs of this bleſſed Covenant, and whatſoever affliction your God ſhall pleaſe to lay upon you, or whatſoever Comfort he ſhall pleaſe to remove from you, ſtill comfort and encourage your ſelves, as David here doth, Yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant, ordered in all things, and ſure: For this is all my Salvation, and all my deſire; although he make it not to grow.

Preached for the FUNERAL

OF THAT

Excellent and Religious Gentleman,

JOHN UPTON of LUPTON, Esq;

TEXT. 2 CHRON XXXV. XXIV, XXV.

His ſervants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the ſecond chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jeruſalem and he died, and was buried in one of the ſepulchres of his fathers: and all Judah and Jeruſalem mourned for Joſiah. Ver. 25. And Jeremiah lamented for Joſiah, and all the ſinging-men, and the ſinging-women ſpake of Joſiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Iſrael: and behold they are written in the Lamentations.

IN this Context we have the Hiſtory of the Pious Life, and Tragical Death of good King Joſiah. The Hiſtory of his Life gives us an account of both what he was, and what he did. As to his Perſonal Endowments and Qualifications, they were ſingular and eximious, as appears by the fourfold Character by which he is deſcribed in the Context: for, Firſt, He eſpouſed the intereſt of Religion betimes, even in his Youth; cap. 34. ver. 3. For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to ſeek after the God of David his father: And that under the great diſadvantage of an ill Education, ſuch a Morning promiſed a glorious day.

Secondly, He hated all corruptive mixtures in the Worſhip of God, and was anſwerably zealous for Reformation; ibid. And in the twelfth year he began to purge Juda and Jeruſalem from the high places, and the groves, &c. as knowing well he and his People might expect no more of God's bleſſing on the Ordinances, than there was of his preſence in them; and no more of his preſence can rationally be expected, than there is of his own Order and Inſtitution.

Thirdly, He was of a very tender and impreſſive heart, mourning for publick ſins and dangers; ver. 26, 27. Becauſe thy heart was tender, and thou didſt humble thy ſelf before God, when thou heardeſt his words againſt this place, and againſt the inhabitants thereof; and humbledſt thy ſelf before me, and didſt rend thy cloaths, and weep before me, &c. He was not ſo intent upon his own pleaſures (tho' in the ſprightly vigour of Youth) nor on the weighty concerns of the Kingdom, as to forget the intereſt of God, and the greater concerns of his Glory.

Fourthly, He was exceeding careful to propagate the intereſt of Religion, and ſpread it far and wide among his People. Though he could not infuſe the inward Principle, (that was the work of God) yet he did enjoin the external practice of it upon all his Subjects, which was his part and duty: ver. 33. He made all that were preſent in Iſrael to ſerve, even to ſerve the Lord their God. And all his days they departed not from following the God of their Fathers.

But yet good Joſiah had his miſtakes and failings. The beſt of men are but men at beſt: He was too raſh and haſty in reſolving, and too ſtiff and obſtinate when reſolved; and this was the occaſion of his ruin. The caſe was thus:

Pharaoh Necho King of Egypt, was at that time making War upon Charchemiſh, a place that belonged to him, but was taken from him by the King of Aſſyria, ſo the War of Necho was a juſt War; and Judah lying between him and Charchemiſh, and being at peace with Judah, he requeſts leave of Joſiah to March his Army peaceably through his Country to the ſeat of the War: Joſiah takes an Alarm from this Meſſage, and Arms againſt him. Hereupon Necho ſent Embaſſadors to Joſiah, chap. 35. ver. 21. ſaying, What have I to do with thee, thou King of Judah? I come not againſt thee this day, but againſt the houſe wherewith I have war: For God commanded me to make haſte; forbear thee from medling with God, who is with me, that he deſtroy thee not.

Expoſitors conceive Necho had this diſcovery of the mind of God, from the Prophet Jeremiah, Per oraculum non ſcriptum, ſed viva voce editum: even by word of mouth. If ſo, no doubt Jeremiah alſo diſſwaded Joſiah from going out againſt him: However, this is clear, Joſiah did not conſult the mind of God about that expedition, as he ought, and was too haſty and reſolute therein; ver. 22. Nevertheleſs Joſiah would not turn his face from him, &c. By this means this excellent man came to a tragical end, and that in the very flower of his days. He dies in that unhappy Expedition, from which he would not be diverted, is brought home to Jeruſalem in the ſecond Chariot, dies, and is buried in the Sepulchre of his Fathers, to the univerſal ſorrow of all good men in Iſrael, as you read in the Text; wherein we have theſe two parts to conſider:

Jerom. à lapide. de Juſt. Mart.

I. The Nature and Quality of the Lamentation.

II. The Cauſe and Ground of it.

I. For the Lamentation here made, it was extraordinary; never ſuch cries heard before in Iſrael at any Funeral, whether we conſider it either.

1. Extenſively,
2. Intenſively, or
3. Protenſively.

1. Extenſively, all Judah and Jeruſalem, that is City and Country mourned that day; not every Individual, but all that had any ſenſe of the worth of the man, the good that he did, or the evils that followed upon his removal. No doubt the Prieſts of Baal, their Abettors, and Aſſociates, ſecretly rejoyced at his fall; but all good men mourned. But a mon mong all the Mourners, one only is ſpecified by name, and that is Jeremiah the Prophet, in whom all the faithful Miniſters of God were included. To them he was a true and faithful Friend; and in him they loſt a Father, and a famous Inſtrument of Reformation.

2. Conſider it Intenſively, as to the degree of the ſorrow, it was a bitter Lamentation: ſo pungent, intenſe, and deep, that the Mourning of the Jews for Chriſt, at the time of their converſion to him, is compared to this Mourning for Joſiah. Zach. 12. ver. 11. In that day there ſhall be a great mourning in Jeruſalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. This Hadadrimmon was a little Town in the Valley of Megiddon near the place of this fatal Battle, whoſe Inhabitants receiving the firſt tydings of the fall of Joſiah, made the Town ring with doleful Out-cries and Lamentations.

3. Laſtly, Conſider it Protenſively, in its continuance and duration, it was made an Ordinance in Iſrael; and accordingly the ſinging-men and ſinging-women ſpake of Joſiah in their lamentations to this day: i. e. Whenever any ſolemn Funeral or publick Calamity was ſolemnized in Iſrael, thoſe perſons that were skilful in Lamentations, brought in the ſtory of Joſiah's death, as the burthen of that doleful Song or Funeral-Elegy.

II. Let us conſider the Cauſe and Ground of this Lamentation, which certainly was great and weighty enough to juſtifie that ſorrow, as great and bitter as it was: for in him they loſt a faithful, publick, uſeful, zealous, and tender-hearted Inſtrument, whoſe Life had been eminently uſeful to the Church of God, and whoſe Death opened the gap to all the following Calamities upon Judah.

Now conſidering Joſiah, here eſpecially in his Religious capacity, as ſo faithful, induſtrious, and uſeful an Inſtrument for the Church of God, rather than in his political capacity as a King, the Note from it will be this.

Doct. That faithful, active, and publick ſpirited men in the Church of God, ſhould not be laid in their Graves without great Lamentations.

When Jacob was buried, a man famous for Religion, a great and ſore lamentation was made for him, Gen. 50. ver. 10. And when Aaron died, all the Houſe of Iſrael mourned for him thirty Days, Numb. 20. ver. 29. When Stephen the Proto-Martyr died, devout men carried him to his Grave, with great lamentations, Act. 8. 2. and indeed for any good man to be laid in his Grave without lamentation, is lamentable. The living Saints have ever paid this reſpect and honour to dead Saints, as men ſenſible of their worth, and how great a loſs the World ſuſtains by their removal.

I know the departed Souls of Saints have no concernment in theſe things, yet reſpect is due to their dry Bodies, as the Temples wherein God hath been ſerved and honoured, as they are related to Chriſt, who will one day put great glory and honour upon them.

In the Explication and Confirmation of this point, I will ſhew you,

1. Negatively, on what account the death of good men is not to be lamented.
2. Poſitively, on what account Tears and Lamentations are due to them, with the grounds and reaſons thereof.

1. Negatively, there is not a Tear or Sigh due to the death of any good man, upon the account of any real loſs or detriment that he ſuſtains thereby. No, for in this caſe all Tears are reſtrained, all Sorrows prohibited, by the Principles and Rules of Chriſtianity, 1 Theſſ. 4. 13, 14. Religion differences the ſorrows, as well as the joys, of its Profeſſors, from the common joys and ſorrows of the World. Dead Saints are better where they are, than where they were; to be with Chriſt is far better: Death to them is gain and infinite advantage, Phil. 1. 21, 23. This World is the worſt place that ever God deſigned his People to live in: for if a ſtate of perfect Holineſs and Purity, be better than a ſtate of Temptation and Corruption; if a ſtate of Reſt and Peace, be better than a ſtate of Labour and Sorrow; if it be better to be triumphing above, than ſighing and groaning beneath: then it's better for departed Chriſtians to be where they are, than where they were. And could they now communicate their minds to us by words, as they lately did, they would ſay to us as Chriſt ſaid. Luke 23. 28. Daughters of Jeruſalem, weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves, and for your children. Or as he ſpake to his Diſciples under their ſad reſentments of his departure, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoyce, becauſe I go to the Father. So then no tears or ſorrows are due to them, or becoming us, upon the account of any real loſs or detriment they receive by death.

2. Poſitively, But the true grounds and cauſes of our Lamentations, are upon divers other weighty accounts: as,

Firſt, Becauſe ſo much of the Spirit of God as dwelt in them when amongſt us, is now re-called and gathered up from this lower World. Thoſe precious Graces which they exerciſed among us, in Prayer, Conference, and other beneficial Duties, are now gone with them to Heaven. 1 Reaſon.

The Church had the benefit of them during their abode with men, but now no more, except only what the remembrance of their holy Words and inſtructive Examples (whereby they ſtill ſpeak to us, though dead) may afford unto us.

There are choice effuſions of the Spirit at the time of our Sanctification, of which the Church reapeth the benefit whilſt we live; but all theſe are recalled at our diſſolution, and thenceforth we can be no farther uſeful in this lower World: for as the Soul is the ſubject in which theſe precious Graces inhere, ſo they accompany and go along with the Soul into glory.

Now as it is a real loſs to a Company, when any Merchant withdraws a great Stock, he had running in Trade, out of the Bank; ſo cerrainly it is a great loſs to the Church of God, when the precious gifts and graces of the Spirit, dwelling in the Saints, are drawn out by Death; ſo as the Church can have no farther benefit by them, their Prayers for us, and with us, are now ended; Abraham knoweth us not, and Iſrael is ignorant of us.

Secondly, The death of the Saints deſerves a bitter lamentation, becauſe thereby a breach is made, a gap opened, to let in the Judgments of God upon the Remnant that is left. 2 Reaſon. It is ſaid of Moſes, Pſal. 106. 23. Therefore he ſaid, that he would deſtroy them, had not Moſes his choſen ſtood before him in the breach, leſt he ſhould deſtroy them. A Metaphor from a beſieged City, when a breach is made in the Walls, and an Enemy ready to Enter; but ſome Champion ſtands in the breach to defend the City. Such a Champion was Moſes, who by his conſtant and fervent Prayers, put a ſtop to the inundation of God's Jugdments againſt Iſrael. And ſuch another was Lot, Gen. 19. 22. whoſe Prayers for that wicked place he lived in, bound up the hand of Judgment insomuch as the Lord told him, I can do nothing till thou art gone. But when the Lord by death removes such men, he thereby makes a way to his anger, as the Expression is, Psal. 78. 50. Hence the eminent death of Saints, especially when many are taken away at or near the same time, hath been ever look'd upon as a direful Omen, and dreadful Presage of ensuing Judgments, and that not without good Scripture-authority, Isa. 57. 1. The righteous perish, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.

Thus Methusalah, whose very Name signified a Flood cometh, died the year before the Flood. Austin, a little before the sacking of Hyppo. Paræus, a little before the taking of Hydelberg. And Luther, before the Wars brake out in Germany. Death as a Pioneer, clears the way to a Troop of Miseries following after. This therefore is a just and weighty ground of our lamentations for the death of useful and godly men.

Thirdly, The beauty and ornaments of the places they lived in, is defaced and removed by their death; they look not like themselves, when the godly are removed out of them: for as wicked men are the spots and blemishes, so good men are the beauty and ornaments of their Country. A good man was wont to say of Mr. Barrington of Barrington-Hall in Essex, Methinks the Town is not at home, when Mr. Barrington is out of Town. How desolate and dismal doth a Family look (whatever other Ornaments be about it) when the Religious Governour of it is gone! Take away good men from their Families, and Country, and what are they but like a Vineyard when the Vintage is past? as the Prophet speaks, Micha. 7. 1. 3 Reason.

Fourthly, The death of good men deserves a bitter Lamentation, because thereby the passage of the Gospel, and propagation of Religion, is obstructed in the places from whence they are removed. Of how great use in a Country may one zealous publick-spirited man be? Hundreds may have cause to bless God for such a man. It was the Apostles desire to the Thessalonians, To pray that the word of the Lord may have its free course, that it might run and be glorified, 2 Thess. 3. 1. The removal of such a person as naturally took care for the Souls of those that were about him, to provide food for them, is no small loss, nor lightly to be passed over. 4 Reason.

Fifthly, The consideration of the time in which good men die, aggravates the loss, and justly incenses the sorrow of them that remain, and that upon a three-fold account. (1.) That it falls out in the declining state of Religion, when the Spirit and power of Godliness is so much weakned and impoverished. This is like the loss of good Blood in a consumptive Body, which must bring it very low. (2.) That it falls out also in a time when the numbers of the Godly are so much thinn'd and lessen'd, not when the Churches Children say in her Ears, The place is too straight, give place that we may dwell; but when they are every where lamenting the paucity and scarcity of good men, as the Psalmist did, Psal. 12. 1. Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, for the righteous fail from among the children of men. At a time when they are bewailing themselves in the language of the Prophet, Micha 7. 1. Wo is me, for I am as when they have gathered the summer-fruits, as the grape-gleanings of the vintage: there is no cluster to eat; my soul desired the first ripe fruit. Alluding to a hungry man that goes into a Vineyard to refresh his Spirits with the fruit thereof; but alas, there is not one pleasant bunch to be found, none but sour Grapes, to increase his Hunger, and set his Teeth on edge. (3.) And that which much more aggravates the loss, is this: when it falls in a time wherein the spring and succession of good men is obstructed. In this case Death, like a storm of Wind, overturns the fairest, pleasanteſt, and most fruitful Trees in the Orchard, when there is no Nursery, from whence others may be taken to plant in their rooms. 5 Reason.

Lastly, There is just cause to lament the removal of publick and pious men, when we consider what influence our sins and provocations have had upon those Judgments and Calamities; our unworthiness of them, unthankfulness for them, and non-improvements of such mercies, have bereaved us of them. I look upon every good man, as a good Book, lent by its Owner to another to read and transcribe the excellent Notions and golden Passages that are in it, for his own benefit, that they may remain with him, when the Owner shall call for the Book again: but in case this excellent Book be thrown into a corner, and no use made of it, it justly provokes the Owner to take it away in displeasure. 6 Reason.

Thus you see upon what account our sorrows for the death of good men are restrained, and upon what accounts and reasons they are a due debt to the death of eminent and useful Instruments for God. What remains, is the Application of this point. And,

First, The Point before us justly reproves three sorts of men. 1 Use.

1. The worst of men, such as secretly rejoyce, and are inwardly glad at the removal of such men; they took no delight in them while they lived, and are glad they are rid of them when they are dead. Those that persecuted and hated them when alive, may be presumed to be pleased and gratified with their death. But alas, poor Creatures, they know not what they do! The Innocent preserve the Iland. Except the Lord of hosts (saith the Prophet) had left us a small remnant, we had been as Sodom, we had been like unto Gomorrah, Isa. 1. 9. It's a Proverb among the very Jews, Sinè supplicationibus non staret Mundus: The World stands by the Prayers of the godly. Let the World think what they will of them, I tell you these men are a Screen, a Partition-wall, betwixt them and destruction.

2. It reproves the insensibleness of good men, who are apt too slightly to pass over such tremendous strokes of God: for this it was that God reproved his own People, Isa. 57. 1. No Man layeth it to heart. Where the want of affection is charged upon the want of consideration, none considering their worth, their use, or the consequences of their fall. Such rebukes of God do certainly call for a deeper sense and sorrow, than is found in most men.

3. It reproves the very best of men, who though they do bewail and lament the loss of such men, yet they do not lament it in the due manner. They lament it one to another, saying, Alas, alas, such a Worthy is fallen, such an eminent Instrument in the Church or State is dead; but they do not lament it in Prayer to the Lord, they mourn not over the matter to him, as David did, Psal. 12. 1. Crying, Help Lord, for the godly man ceaseth. Help Lord, the remnant that is left; help Lord to repair the breach made by their death; let the God of the Spirits of all flesh raise up a Man to fill the room and supply the want. Alas, how insignificant are the Lamentations of moſt men upon this account!

Secondly, This point invites us all this day to bewail the ſtroke of God that is upon us. I could wiſh that he that looks upon this Text, and then upon the countenance of this Aſſembly, might be able to diſcern the agreeableneſs of the one to the other, in ſuch a ſad and ſolemn occaſion. 2 Uſe.

O let all that love Sion, lament this day the fall of one of her true Friends and Lovers. I know Funeral Panegyricks are apt to be ſuſpected of flattery; but as I want a Rhetorical Tongue for ſuch a work, ſo if I had it, it ſhould never be ſaleable for ſo baſe a uſe and purpoſe. I am ſure by ſending the generality that die to Heaven, many are confirmed in the way to Hell. Nor can I but think of that ſerious Line in Chryſoſtom. What a poor comfort is it, to be praiſed where a man is not, and to be tormented where he is. But yet the righteous ſhall be had in everlaſting remembrance, Pſal. 112. 6. Expect nothing from me on this occaſion, but what may be ſpoken with greateſt aſſurance of truth, and that intended for the benefit and imitation of all that hear it. Some may think it a ſtrain too high, to compare a private Perſon with ſuch a glorious King as Joſiah was; but if Chriſt compared and preferred the very Graſs of the Field, to Solomon in all his glory, I know no reaſon why we may not compare and parallel the precious Graces of a private perſon with a royal Saint, eſpecially ſince the compariſon is only made in the religious, not in the civil capacity.

I am ſure the Graces, and gracious Performances of David, Hezekiah, and Joſiah, with all the other dignified Saints, were intended and propounded as Patterns for our imitation; and no doubt but private Chriſtians may meaſure by their Pattern. Beſide, it is abundantly more ſafe to relate the Vertues of the Saints when they are dead, than whilſt they were alive, for now there is no danger of provoking pride and vain-glory in them that are praiſed, but much hope of provoking an holy emulation and imitation in them that hear them.

Well then, Abſit invidia verbis: Suffer me this day to erect a Pillar to perpetuate the Memory of this deceaſed Worthy, to pay the tribute of my Tears due to that mournful Hearſe, and to engage you to imitate thoſe Excellencies of his, which I ſhall with equal truth and modeſty diſplay this day, that we alſo may be duly affected with the Rebuke of God upon us, and mourn over it before him.

If when an eminent Commander in any Army falls, the whole Army is affected and concerned with his death;

The mourning Drum, the Lance and Enſigns trail'd;
The Robes of Honour all in Sable vail'd.

Let it not be thought much, Chriſtians ſhould expreſs their ſenſe and ſorrow in ſighs and tears, for ſo uſeful and worthy a man as God hath this day removed from among us, whoſe Character I ſhall give you in the following immitable particulars.

1. That worthy man whoſe fall we lament this day, was ſeaſoned with Religion in his Youth, by God's bleſſing upon his pious Education; in this he had the advantage of Joſiah. His Progenitors were men of Piety, and himſelf a Child of many Prayers: and, as Monica ſaid of her Son Auſtin, it was not likely that a Child of ſo many Prayers ſhould periſh. How importunately did they requeſt the fervent Prayers of their pious Friends for him, in the time of his Education? nor was it in vain, for they were manifeſtly anſwered in him. He ſoon diſcovered that Probity and Piety in his Youth, which juſtly raiſed great expectations from him in his riper years.

2. Nor did he fruſtrate thoſe hopes; for as ſoon as ever God had fixed him in a proper Sphere of Activity, (I mean, a Family of his own) thoſe Graces that were in him ſhone forth, to the comfort and benefit of all that were about him. Joſhua's pious reſolution was his; As for me, I and my houſe will ſerve the Lord.

He kept up the Worſhip of God in his Cloſet, as well as in his Family. And truly, if Religion languiſh in the Cloſet, it will quickly die in the Family. His Houſe was a Temple conſecrated to God; there the Morning and Evening-Sacrifices of Prayers and Praiſes were offered up. He called his Children and Servants to thoſe Duties, not reckoning that time loſt to him, which was ſpent for God. The Lord had endowed him with an excellent Spirit of Prayer himſelf: I have ſometimes accidentally heard him praying in his Family, with ſuch ſolidity of Judgment, pertinency of Expreſſion, and holy warmth of Affection, that hath at once edified, refreſhed, and reproved me in hearing him.

He conſtantly read the Scriptures in courſe before Prayer, and oft-times with a Commentary upon them, for his own and his Families Edification.

The Lords day he ſanctified not only in more publick attendance on the Ordinances, but in the Duties of Reading, Repeating, Singing, and Catechiſing all his Children and Servants about him. And all this before he allowed himſelf or them any bodily Refreſhments, leſt the edge of their Affections ſhould be blunted in Duty, by the clogging of Nature with Creature-repaſts. And thus did he, as Job, continually: to this courſe he was ſevere and conſtant, no incident occaſions, how great or many ſoever, could divert him from it.

3. Neither was his holy Zeal and Chriſtian care limited and circumſcribed within his own Family, but was extended to the Souls of all in his Neighbourhood, who deſired helps and means in the way of ſalvation.

His Houſe was ſeldom without a godly Miniſter in it, and loath he was to eat his pleaſant Morſels alone. It was the joy of his heart to ſee his houſe fill'd on this account: How many Witneſſes to the truth of this are here this day! Like another Joſeph, he provided food for your Souls; he loved, honoured, received, and encouraged the Miniſters of the Goſpel in their deepeſt ſufferings; gave them opportunities of ſervice, when ſome durſt not own them, and others violently perſecuted them.

4. When God called him to publick Employments in the Common-wealth, he neither purchaſed nor abuſed that Truſt; but with a true Engliſh, rather a Chriſtian zeal and courage, he dedicated himſelf to the ſervice of God and his Country. Chearfully quitting all Domeſtick concerns, ſpent his Eſtate, Time, and Pains, to heal the breaches of England. I know not a man whoſe zeal for the common good, would have carried him nearer to the Example of that noble Roman, who when a Chaſm was made by an Earthquake, and the Oracle had declared, that it could never be cloſed, except ſomething of value was thrown into it, caſt in himſelf to cloſe it.

I could truly have ſaid, had there been conveniency and opportunity for it, when he was laid in his Grave. Here lies a man that never betray- ed nor deſerted the Publick, for any private intereſt of his own.

5. He was a man that came as near Joſiah in tenderneſs of Heart, as ever I had the happineſs to be acquainted with. The Churches troubles were his troubles, they all met in him as lines in a centre; he even liv'd and died with the intereſt of Religion: and of him I will ſay, as the Apoſtle ſaid of Timothy, 2 Phil. 20. 21. I have no man like minded who will naturally care for your ſtate, for all ſeek their own, not the things which are Jeſus Chriſt's. Naturally, in this place, is not oppoſed to Spiritually, but to Artificially. Many can artificially act the part of a Zealot, when their own intereſt lies in it; but he naturally, and therefore freely, chearfully, and conſtantly.

6. But though theſe Excellencies were in him, he had his Nævi, blemiſhes, and imperfections. Elias was a man of like paſſions and weakneſſes of Spirit. All theſe I doubt not but God hath covered, and he is now perfectly freed from them all.

There is now no paſſion left within him to be ſtirred by temptation, no deſpondencies and ſinkings of Spirit under diſmal aſpects of Providence. His Graces are perfected, and his Corruptions finally eradicated.

7. To conclude, he was a man of great Afflictions, as well as tender Affections. And as the Lord greatly honoured him in the courſe of active obedience, ſo he greatly proved and tryed him in a courſe of paſſive obedience. He not only gave the Croſs in his Coat, but bare it upon his Shoulders: For beſides thoſe troubles which were properly ſympathetical, he had his Idiopathetical ſufferings alſo, and that both from the hands of men, and from the hand of God. His Piety made and marked him for an Object of Perſecution; the Archers ſhot at him, and ſorely grieved him; he and his Family were hunted with a Net; The Lord lay it not to their charge: Et hinc illæ lachrymæ. The ſad effects thereof, I choſe rather at this time to paſs over with a ſigh, than in this place to commemorate.

And as the hand of man was upon him, ſo the hand of his God alſo. Firſt, lopping off all the pleaſant Branches that ſprang from him, and that one after another; when come to the endearing age, opening and diſcloſing the Bud: And as the Complement and Iſſue of all, breaking his conſtitutional ſtrength with a long languiſhing Diſeaſe, which at laſt extinguiſhed this bright Lamp, and hath left his Family and Neighbourhood in darkneſs and ſorrow. His poor Heart was the Anvil on which many Hammers of Affliction had been a long time beating; and no wonder it appeared relaxed and tumified, when it was inſpected, having endured ſo many ſucceſſive ſtrokes of ſorrow.

And now what the Lord ſpake of Iſrael in Jer. 11. 16. is fulfilled upon this worthy perſon, The Lord called thy name a green Olive-tree, fair and of goodly fruit, with the noiſe of a great tumult he hath kindled a fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

3 Uſe. Thirdly, I ſhall wind up the whole in ſeveral ſeaſonable and neceſſary Counſels: Some more general, others more particular, and ſome more particularly and eſpecially.

Firſt, Counſel to all in general, to awaken themſelves, and recover a due ſenſe of ſuch ſore Rebukes of God as this is. When Saul fell, David lamented it, ſaying, The beauty of Iſrael was ſlain on thy high places.

God hath this day ſtript off an Ornament from this Country. Such diſpenſations of Providence ſpeak indignation coming on. It requires almoſt an Age to breed and furniſh a Man with due qualifications for the Service of the Church and Common Wealth. England doth not ſo abound with pious, zealous, and faithful Gentlemen at this time, but that it may ſenſibly feel the loſs of ſuch a Man.

Secondly, More particularly, let the Miniſters of Chriſt lament his fall, as Jeremiah did the fall of Joſiah in the Text. He was a true friend to Chriſt's faithful Miniſters, and had them in honour for their work ſake. 'Tis true, he hath no more need of us, he is now wiſer than his Teachers; but we greatly need him, and men of his Spirit, in ſuch a dull degenerate Age as we live in.

Thirdly, And moſt particularly, I ſhall apply and cloſe all with a few words of Counſel to the dear and now deſolate Relict of this Worthy Perſon, whoſe ſad lot it is this day, to over-live the mercies and comforts ſhe once enjoyed in him.

Madam, God hath this day covered you with Sables, written bitter things againſt you, broken you with breach upon breach. Your ſorrows need not be excited, but regulated. 'Tis my trouble, that I cannot diſcharge my duty to the memory of your dear Husband, without exaſperating your Griefs, which alas were too acute before; but Rods have their voices: Bleſſed is the man whom God correcteth and teacheth him out of his Law. Hear you the Rod, and who hath appointed it; and oh that your Soul may this day take in theſe neceſſary Counſels and Cautions, without which your Afflictions cannot be ſanctified to the advantage of your Soul. And,

1. Learn from hence the vanity of the Creature, the emptineſs and nothingneſs of the beſt things here below. How hath God made your beſt comforts on Earth to ſhrink up and vaniſh into nothing? How do our fancies varniſh and gild over theſe empty Bubbles? What great expectations are we apt to raiſe from them? How apt to fall aſleep in the boſoms or laps of earthly Enjoyments? and ſay with Job, I ſhall die in my neſt, and multiply my days as the ſand. When lo, in a moment the projects and expectations of many years are over-turned. Oh what a difference will you find betwixt hope founded in Chriſt, Comforts drawn out of the Promiſes, and the flattering Comforts and vain hopes founded in the Creature whoſe breath is in its Noſtrils?

'Tis time for you and for us all to wean off from this vain World; mortifie our Fancies and Affections to it, and place them where they ſhall not be capable of diſappointment.

2. Guard carefully, I beſeech you, againſt thoſe Temptations which probably may accompany this Affliction. It may be Satan will ſuggeſt to your heart, what he once put into their lips, Mal. 3. 14. What profit is it that we have kept his ordinances, and walked mournfully before him? Where is the fruit of Prayer? What good have I ſeen of faſting? What hath Religion availed? Do not prayerleſs and ungodly Families thrive and proſper? Beware of this, Madam, I doubt not but you will acknowledge there have been ſins and provocations within your walls, yea within your heart, for which God may as juſtly and ſeverely judge your houſe as he did Ely's. Remember the rewards of Religion are not in this World; and ſhould we ſpeak thus, we ſhall offend againſt the generation of his Children. All we muſt expect from Religion, is to ſave our Souls by it

3. Call not the Love of God into queſtion to yourſelf, or yours, becauſe of theſe ſevere ſtrokes of God upon you and them: You know Joſiah was dear to God

God, yet he died in the prime of his days, by a violent hand, remote from his own home, and was brought home in the second Chariot to Jerusalem, a Spectacle of far greater sorrow, than your dear Husband was; and yet notwithstanding all these sad circumstances of his death, the Promise of his God was punctually performed to him, that he should die in peace, and not behold the Evil that was to come. There is a vanity, saith Solomon, which is done upon the earth, that there be just men unto whom it happeneth according to the work of the wicked: again, there be wicked men to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous, Eccles. 8. 14. But then remember, that it is but in the Earth; here, or no where, God must chastise his Children.

4. See that you maintain that holy course of Religious Exercises in your Family, and in your Closet, wherein he walked so exemplarily before you. Let Religion live, tho' he be dead; and convince the World, I pray you, that it was God's influence, and not your Husband's only, which was the Spring and Principle of this holy Course.

5. Strive not with your Maker, nor fret against the Lord, under this irksome and painful Dispensation. Remember there is a Woe hanging over this Sin: Isa. 45. 9. 10. Woe to him that striveth with his Maker. There is a twofold striving of Men with God, one lawful and commendable, when we strive with him upon the knee of Importunity in Prayer, thus Jacob wrestled with God, and prevailed, Hos. 12. 4. The other is highly sinful and and dangerous, when we presume to censure or accuse any of his Works as defective in Wisdom or Goodness. He that reproveth God, let him answer it, (i. e.) At his peril be it. This sinful striving with God is two-fold, either Vocal or Mental.

1. Vocal, When Men in bold blasphemous Language, arraign the Wisdom, Power, Goodness or Faithfulness of the Lord at the bar of their own Reason, and there condemn them, setting their Mouths against the Heavens, Psal. 73. 8, 9. This is the sin of the Wicked, yea of the first-born Sons of Wickedness.

2. Mental, In inward frets, murmurs, repinings against God; Prov. 19. 3. The foolishness of Man perverts his way, and his Heart fretteth against the Lord. The Heart may cry out impatiently against God, when the Tongue is silent: And if the frets and murmurs of the Heart be (as indeed they are) interpretatively no better than a striving with our Maker, then this Sin will be found more common among good Men in the Paroxysms of Affliction, than we imagine. It will be necessary therefore for your sake, and for the sakes of many more in a like state of affliction with you to stay a while upon this Head, and consider these following Queries.

Query 1. How far we may enquire, expostulate, and complain in times of Affliction, without Sin?

Query 2. Wherein lies the sinfulness and danger of exceeding these bounds?

Query 3. What Considerations are most proper and powerful to restrain the afflicted Soul from this sinful excess?

Query 1. How far we may enquire of God, expostulate with him, and complain to him in times of Affliction, without Sin?

1. We may humbly enquire into the causes and reasons of God's displeasure against us, not to seek matter for our Justification, but Direction in the work of our Humiliation. So David enquired about the three Years Famine, and the Lord informed him for whose sake and for what Sin it was 2 Sam. 21. 1. And thus Job addressed to him in the day of his Affliction, Job. 10. 2. Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me; (i. e.) convince me what special sin it is for which I am thus afflicted. This is so far from being our sin, that it is both our duty, and the excellency of our Spirits; 'tis a Child-like temper, willing to know, that we may be particularly humbled for that Sin, and for ever the more careful to shun it. That which I see not teach thou me; if I have done Iniquity, I will do so no more, Job 34. 32. Thus far we are safe.

2. We may plead by Prayer, and put him in mind of his Mercies, Relations, and Promises, in order to the change of his Providential Dispensations towards us: We may say to him under the smartest Rod, as the Church did, Doubtless thou art our Father, Psal. 74. 20. Have respect to the Covenant, or as Jacob; Gen. 32. 9, 12. Thou saidst, I will surely do thee good.

We may complain to God under our Sufferings, and spread them before him in all their Circumstances and Aggravations, as Job, Heman, Asaph, Hezekiah, and David did. He allows his Children to complain to him, but not of him. I poured out my Complaint before him, I shewed before him my Trouble, Psal. 142. 2. To whom should a Child make his complaint, but to his Father? So far we are safe.

4. We may submissively pray for the removal of his Hand from us, and entreat that his Anger may cease; and that he will turn again and heal us and our Families, and not draw forth his Anger for ever. So did David, Psal. 39. 10. Remove thy stroke away from me, I am consumed by the blow of thine Hand. q. d. Ah Lord, I am not able to endure another stroke. All this while we are safe, within the bounds of our duty. But then,

Query 2. Wherein lies our Sin and Danger, in exceeding these bounds? I answer,

Sol. When forgetting God's Sovereignty, and the desert of our Iniquities, we arrogantly censure his effecting, or permitting Providences, as if they had no conducency to his own Glory, or our good. This is both sinful and dangerous: For,

1. This is a proud exalting of our own Reason and Understanding, above the Infinite Wisdom of God. God hath made our Reason a Judge and Arbiter in matters within its own Sphere and Province; but when it comes to summon God to it's Bar, and Article against Heaven, it is an insufferable arrogancy, and we do it at our own peril. God will have all Men know that he is an unaccountable Being, Job 33. 13. Yea, he will have us to know that the foolishness of God is wiser than Man, 1 Cor. 1. 25. That is, that those very Works of God, which Man's proud Reason adventures to censure, as not so wise a Method as their own would be, hath more Wisdom in it than all the deep-laid designs of the greatest Politicians in the World. And 'tis strange that Men should dare to attempt such a wickedness as this, after God hath so severely punished it in the fallen Angels.

2. It is no less than a spurning at the Sovereignty of God, from whose Pleasure we derive our Beings, and all our Mercies, Rev. 4. 11. In these quarrellings of Providence, and frets at divine appointments, we invade his Throne, and controul his Sovereign Pleasure. How monstrous were it to hear a Child quarrelling with his Father, that he was not so and so figured, or the Clay to chide the Potter for moulding it as it is?

3. 'Tis destructive to our inward Peace and Tranquility of Mind, which is part of the punishment of this Sin, and a smart stripe, a sore rebuke it is from the Hand of God upon us.

Contention

Contention is uncomfortable, though but with a Neighbour, worſe with a near Relation; but a quarrel with God is deſtructive to all comfort in the World. Afflictions may diſturb a good Man's Peace, but a mutinous Spirit againſt God, deſtroys and ſtabs it at the very Heart. What is the Sin and Torment of the Devils, but their rage againſt the Lord, and ſwelling againſt the methods of his Grace? He ſeeketh reſt, but findeth none, Mat. 12. 43. The Peace of our Spirits is a choice Mercy, and might be maintained amidſt all our Afflictions, were but our Intereſt in his Promiſes, and the true level of his Providences cleared to us.

4. 'Tis irrational, and highly unjuſt, to give the cauſe, and quarrel at the effects. God hath righteouſly and inſeparably linked penal with moral Evils; Sin and Sorrow by the Laws of Heaven are tackt and united together; he that doth Evil, ſhall feel Evil, Gen. 4. 7. We adventure upon Sin, and then fret at Affliction: Prov. 19. 3. The fooliſhneſs of a Man perverts his way, and his Heart fretteth againſt the Lord. Is this becoming a reaſonable Creature? Doth not every Man reap as he ſoweth? Can the Seed of Sin bring forth a Crop of Peace and Comfort? Why doth the living Man complain, a Man for the puniſhment of his Sins, Lam. 3. 39. Search your Hearts, and ſearch your Houſes, and you will quickly find that all your Afflictions in this World, were they ten thouſand times more and heavier than they are, do not come near to the deſert of one ſin. All Sorrows, Loſſes, Afflictions on this ſide Hell are quite below the value of Sin, the meritorious and provoking cauſe of them all.

5. 'Tis fooliſh and vain, to ſtrive againſt God, and conteſt perverſely with him. Can our diſcontents relieve us? Or our murmurs eaſe us? Will they turn God out of his way? No, no, He is in one Mind, and who can turn him aſide? Job 23. 13. The Wheels of Providence go ſtraight forward and turn not when they go, Ezek. 1. 17. We may bring them over us to cruſh us, by ſtanding thus in their way, but cannot turn them out of their way.

Impatiens ægrotus, crudelem facit medicum.

If ye ſtill walk contrary to me, then will I walk contrary to you, and puniſh you yet ſeven times for your Sins, Lev. 26. 13, 14. Or I will walk in the raſhneſs of mine Anger, ſmiting you without moderation, as Men do in the height of their rage and Fury. This is all we ſhall get by fretting againſt God. Never expect relief under, or releaſe from the yoke God hath laid on your Necks, till you be brought to accept the puniſhment of your Iniquities. Lev. 26. 41.

6. 'Tis a ſin full of odious Ingratitude towards your God: Which appears (1.) in murmuring becauſe it is ſo bad, when we ſhould be admiring that it is no worſe. Are there not Millions in Hell that never ſinned at higher rates than you have done? Is this Affliction as bad as Hell? Hath God pardoned you and ſaved you, and yet doth he deſerve to be thus requited by you! (2.) In murmuring that our condition is ſo bad, when we may every day ſee others in a far worſe caſe, who are equal with us by nature, and were equal with them in guilt and provocation. If we ſpeak ~~of outward Afflictions~~ certainly others would be glad to exchange conditions with us, and account themſelves happy in our Circumſtances. Conſider the deſcription given of thoſe Perſons, Job 30. 3, 4, 5. And how little they differ in the manner of Life from bruit Beaſts: And if we ſpeak of inward Troubles, compare your own with thoſe of Heman, and Aſaph, in Pſal. 77. and Pſal. 88. and if of both together, and that in an intenſe degree, conſider Job 6. 4. and you will ſoon find your condition full of ſparing Mercy: Thoſe excellent Perſons that were ſo much above you in Grace, were yet plunged ſo much deeper than you into Affliction. And is it not then vile ingratitude in you, thus to mutiny and charge your God fooliſhly? (3.) But eſpecially here lies our Ingratitude, in quarrelling and cenſuring thoſe Providences, whoſe very end and errand is our eternal good; Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his Holineſs.

7. 'Tis a Sin that deprives us of the fruits and benefits of our Afflictions: A tumultuous raging Spirit reaps no good by the Rod. The fruits of Affliction are called the peaceable Fruits, Heb. 12. 11. becauſe they are always gathered and reaped down by the afflicted Soul in a quiet and peaceful temper. Anima ſedenda, & quieſcendo fit ſapiens. Bloſſoms and Flowers open not in the boiſterous ſtorms of Winter, but in the mild and gentle Spring.

Well then, be convinced of the Sin and danger of a diſcontented Spirit under the Hand of God, and inſtead of mourning over loſt Relations, now mourn for the loſs of Patience, the want of ſubmiſſion, and for the Pride and Arrogancy of your own Reaſon, that preſumes to correct the works of the Almighty, and ſay to God, as Joſeph did to his Father, when he wittingly croſſed his hands in bleſſing Ephraim and Manaſſeh, Not ſo, my Father? This is not fit.

Query. 3. But how may theſe Evils be prevented or cured, and the tempeſtuous Soul calmed under the Rod? How ſhall all ſtrifes betwixt God and his People be ended, and the Soul made quiet at his Feet?

Reply, This bleſſed frame of Spirit may in a great degree and meaſure be attained in the uſe of the following Directions. I ſay, in their uſe and application, not by the preſcription or ſimple knowledge of them. And,

Rule 1. The firſt Rule or Direction, is this: Study well the glorious Soveraignty of God over you, and awe your Hearts with the conſideration of it. From his meer Pleaſure you and all that is yours proceeded, on his Pleaſure you depend, and into that good Pleaſure of his Will your wills therefore ought to be reſolved: Whatever the Lord pleaſed, that he did, in Heaven and in Earth, in the Sea and in all deep places, Pſal. 135. 6. Man and Man ſtand on equal ground, and if our Reaſon be not ſatisfied about the equity of Mens dealings with us, we may ask who did it, and demand the reaſons why he did it; but when we have to do with God, we muſt not diſpute his Pleaſure. Let the Potſherd ſtrive with the Potſherds of the Earth, but let not the Clay diſpute with the Potter. Now the Soveraignty of God is gloriouſly diſplayed in his Decrees, Laws, and Providences. (1.) In his Decrees, appointing the Creatures to their ends, whether to be Veſſels of Mercy, or of Wrath, Rom. 9. 18, 19, 20. In this caſe there muſt be no diſputing with God. (2.) In his Laws, appointing the work and duty of the Creature, as alſo the Rewards and Puniſhments; Jam. 4. 12. There is one Law-giver that is able to ſave and to deſtroy. In this caſe his Soveraignty immediately and indiſpenſably binds the Conſcience of Man, and no humane Authority can diſſolve that Obligation: Nor muſt we ſhuffle the ſevereſt Command. (3.) The glorious Soveraignty

ty of God is diſplayed in his providential adminiſtrations, appointing every Man to that ſtation and condition he is in in this World; whether it be high or low, proſperous or afflicted. Pſal. 75. 6. I ſaid to the fools, deal not fooliſhly, &c. for promotion cometh not from the Eaſt, or the Weſt; but God is Judge: He putteth down one, and ſetteth up another. Let not them that are at the top of the World be lifted up; nor thoſe that are at the bottom be dejected: For God caſts every Man's Lot and changeth their condition at his Pleaſure; a word of his Mouth plucks down the lofty, and exalts the lowly; he woundeth, and his Hands make whole. Hence it becomes the afflicted to be ſtill, and know that he is God, Pſal. 46. 10. To put his Mouth in the Duſt, and quietly to wait for his Salvation. All our fretting and ſtruggling cannot ſhake off the Yoke which he hath put upon us, but a meek and quiet ſubmiſſion to his Will, and compliance with his deſigns, is the beſt expedient to procure our Freedom. There is not one circumſtance of trouble befalls you, without his Order; nor can you expect deliverance, but by order from him.

Rule 2. Study the tranſcendent evil of ſin, and what the demerit of the leaſt ſin that ever you committed is. This will becalm your tempeſtuous Spirits, and at once work them into Contentation with your preſent ſtate, and Admiration that it is no worſe, Lam. 3. 22. 39, 40.

Conſider, thou querulous and diſcontented Soul, that the wages of Sin is Death, Rom. 6. ult. That tribulation, anguiſh, and wrath, are due by Law, to every Soul of Man that doth Evil; that ſo often as we have ſinned, ſo often have we deſerved Hell: and ſhall we then charge God with Severity, for ſcourging us with the Rods of gentle fatherly Chaſtiſements? Is this Hell? Dare you ſay the ſevereſt affliction that ever was upon you, is above the demerit of your Sin?

'Tis true indeed, the Lord tells Jeruſalem, that he had received of his Hands double for all her ſins. Iſai. 40. 2. But that is not the Language of ſtrict Juſtice, but of Compaſſions rolled together. There is not a gracious Soul in all the World, but will readily ſubſcribe Ezra's Confeſſion, that God hath afflicted it leſs than its Iniquities deſerve, Ezra 9. 13. Oh if once we meaſure our afflictions by our Sins, we ſhall admire they are ſo few, ſo mild and gentle as they are.

Rule 3. Conſider what a difference there is betwixt the Saints meeting with Afflictions, and their parting with them. You meet them with trembling and aſtoniſhment, but you ſhall part with them with praiſe and thankſgiving, bleſſing God for the manifold Bleſſings they have inſtrumentally conveyed to your Souls. It is good for me, ſaith David, that I have been afflicted. By theſe things ſin is prevented, diſcovered, and mortified, the inſnaring World imbittered, and the Reſt to come ſweetned

Many other excellent Rules may be added; try theſe, and the bleſſing of the Spirit accompany them.

To conclude, be not ſwallowed up of Sorrows for what you have loſt, but ballance all the troubles of this Life with the hopes of the next. Your dear Children are gone, your ſweet Husband is gone; but conſider who took them, and whither. It is ſaid of Enoch, Gen. 5. 24. He walked with God, and was not; for God took him. Mr. Upton is not, and yet he is: He is not with Men, he is with God: He ceaſes not to be, though he ceaſes to breath: He is taken away, but God took him: He is better where he is, than where he was: Though he be not in your Boſom, he is in Chriſt's.

Imitate his Zeal, Plain-heartedneſs, diligence in duties, and you ſhall ſhortly meet him again, and never part any more. 1 Theſſ. 4. 15, 16, 17, 18. For this we ſay by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain to the coming of the Lord, ſhall not prevent them which are aſleep. For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from Heaven with a ſhout, and with the Voice of the Archangel, and the Trump of God: And the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. Then we which are alive, and remain, ſhall be caught up together with them in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the Air: And ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with theſe words. Did you but know the deep Emphaſis of theſe words, ever with the Lord, I doubt not but you would find comfort enough in them for your ſelf, and a great overplus for the comforting of others.

AN

OF THE

Assemblies Catechism,

With Practical Inferences from each Question:

As it was carried on in the Lord's Days Exercises in Dartmouth.

In the First Year of Liberty, 1688.

PREFACE.

THAT Catechizing is an Ordinance of God, few will doubt, when they consider the Apostle did first lay the Fundamentals of Religion; Heb. 6. 1. And fed Babes with Milk, teaching the the first Principles of the Oracles of God, Heb. 5. 12. and questionless taught them in that manner, which was most suitable to the Capacity of the Learners, which may well be supposed to be by plain and short Questions, and suitable Answers thereunto; and therefore this has been a constant Practice in the Church of God: and the Primitive Church had a Particular Person appropriated thereunto whom they called Catechist.

And so all well-governed and wisely managed Churches, have still maintained and used it, as knowing the necessity and usefulness thereof; for the younger Sort to inform them in the Principles of that Religion whereinto they were Baptized; and for the establishment of the Adult and more aged therein.

Hence have issued those little Composures of all the fundamental Doctrines of Faith and Practice so handled (which we call Catechisms) in the Churches; and particularly in ours, whereof there are many and divers, whose Authors have well deserved for their Endeavours to inform and edify the People thereby.

But among them all, none excel this little Catechism of the Assembly, for Orthodoxy, Fulness, and Method.

And because the Answers therein are some of them pretty large, and Treat of the most profound Mysteries of our Religion; therefore several Persons have bestowed their good and laudable Pains, some descanting more largely, and proving by Scriptural Reasons the Particulars: and one has shewn the harmony thereof with the Articles and Homilies of the Church of England (designed, I suppose, to remove the prejudice which some have taken against it.) Others have parted the Questions and Answers into several little ones, under each, to make more intelligible to younger ones, and more easy to be remembred.

Among whom, Worthy, Orthodox, and Excellent Mr. John Flavell may be ranked, who among other of his many and most profitable Labours, applied himself to the chewing of this Bread of Life, or crumbling it into smaller pieces, for the conveniency of Children and (indeed) of all; wherein (as in all his other Works) he hath shewn himself a Workman that needs not to be ashamed.

There needs no other recommendations to this Posthumous Piece, but the worthy Author's Name; who was removed before he had compleatly finished it; he had prepared his Questions and Answers upon the second Petition of the Lord's Prayer; but lived not to propose them in the Publick Congregation. God then translated him into his Kingdom of Glory above, while he was so industriously endeavouring to promote the Kingdom of Grace below.

The other five remaining Questions and Answers (to compleat the Work) were done by a ruder hand as may be easily discerned by any observant Reader, who will find himself transfer'd from a plain, clear and delightful Stile, method and manner, into more rough, disorderly, and unpleasant ones; for who, indeed, could equal this Divine Labourer? Not the Compleater: who would account himself to have made very great Attainments in Divinity and Usefulness, if he were left but a few furlongs behind him.

Let the Reader use and peruse this Piece, and he will see cause to bless God for the Author.

VALE

READER.

THE Divine Providence having unexpectedly caſt my Lot for a few Days in Dartmouth, where that bleſſed man of God Mr. John Flavell did for many years honour Chriſt, and was honoured by him; I have been favoured with a ſight of that moſt judicious Explication of the Aſſemblies Catechiſm, which is emitted herewith.

Being deſired to teſtify my Reſpect to the worthy Author, by Prefacing this Excellent Labour of his with a few Lines; I can truly ſay (as ſometimes Beza of Calvin) Now Mr. Flavell is dead, Life will be leſs ſweet, and Death leſs bitter to me.

My heart bleeds to look on this deſolate Place, and not to ſee him, that whilſt living, was the glory of it. But neither the Author, nor his Writings ſtand in need of the commendation of others, much leſs of mine. His Works already publiſhed have made his Name precious in both Englands, and it will be ſo as long as the Earth ſhall endure.

There are ſome conſiderations which may cauſe the Reader to expect (and he will not find himſelf diſappointed therein) that which is extraordinary in this little Manual: for the Author's Heart was very engaged in doing this Service for Chriſt, in thus feeding his Lambs. And he did himſelf deſign the Publication of what is here committed to the Preſs; and was very deſirous (with an holy Submiſſion to the Will of God) to have perfected this Work before his Deceaſe; but had ſtrange intimations that he ſhould finiſh his Courſe, before that could be done.

When he did viva voce deliver his Meditations, there were many Enlargements, and lively Paſſages which are not here inſerted: nevertheleſs here is as much as he thought needful for publick view, not being willing that his Book ſhould be Voluminous.

In his laſt Catechetical Exerciſe concerning Hallowing the Name of God, he was excedingly enlarged; but he muſt himſelf go into the Kingdom of Glory, when he intended to have diſcourſed on that Petition, Thy Kingdom come.

He alſo began ſome Meditations on the Joys of Heaven: But before he had an opportunity to expreſs what had been in his Heart, the Lord Jeſus ſaid unto him, Enter thou into the Joy of thy Lord. And thus doth it happen many times to the eminent and holy Servants of God.

Another Conſideration, recommending what comes herewith, is, that it was amongſt Mr. Flavell's laſt Works. The (ἔξοδια ῥήματα) Laſt Sayings of wiſe and great Men have been eſteemed Oraculous; and the Scripture puts an Emphaſis on the laſt words of David, the ſweet ſinger of Iſrael, 2 Sam. 23. 1. Not that thoſe were the laſt words that ever David ſpake, only they were written not long before his Death, when he was come near Heaven.

So was what is now put into the Reader's Hand, written by Mr. Flavell not long before his Tranſlation to the World of Souls, where the Spirits of Juſt men are made perfect.

There was a more than ordinary preſence of God with him to his laſt; and in his laſt Days, not the laſt Sermon that he preached (which was June 21. 1691.) He did more than once ſurprize his Hearers with an Intimation, that that might be the laſt time he ſhould ſpeak to them in the Name of the Lord. And was not then the Secret of the Lord with him?

Dartmouth will know, and Devonſhire will know, that there has been a Prophet among them.

And now my Soul bleeds to look on the dear Flock of God, which are as Sheep without a Shepherd. The Lord Jeſus, the great Shepherd of the Sheep, have compaſſion on them, and give them a Shepherd like to his bleſſed Servant Flavell, who did for many years feed them with Knowledge, and Underſtanding.

Dartmouth, March the 21ſt, 169⅘. Increaſe Mather.

AN

OF THE

Aſſemblies Shorter Catechiſm.

1 Queſtion.

Of Man's Chief End.

WHat is the Chief End of Man?

A. Man's Chief End is to glorify God, and to enjoy him for ever.

Q. 1. Seeing a Chief ſuppoſeth an inferior End; What is that inferior End for which Man was made?

A. It was prudently, ſoberly, and mercifully, to govern, uſe, and diſpoſe of other Creatures in the Earth, Sea and Air, over which God gave Man the Dominion; Gen. 1. 26. And God ſaid, Let us make Man in our Image, after our likeneſs: and let them have dominion over the Fiſh of the Sea, and over the Fowl of the Air, and over the Cattel, and over all the Earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth. So Pſal. 8. 6. Thou madeſt him to have dominion over the works of thy hands, thou haſt put all things under his feet.

Q. 2. What then is to be thought of those Men, who being wholly intent upon inferior things, forget and neglect their principal End?

A. They are dead whilst they live, 1 Tim. 5. 6. But she that liveth in pleasure, is dead whilst she liveth. They have their Portion in this Life, Psal. 17. 14. From men of the world which have their Portion in this Life, and their end is destruction; Phil. 3. 19. Whose end is destruction.

Q. 3. How can man glorifie God, seeing he is perfectly glorious in himself?

A. Man cannot glorifie God by adding any new degree of glory to him. Job 35. 7. If thou be righteous, what givest thou him? but by manifesting his glory with the Lips; Psal. 50. 23. Whoso offereth praise, glorifieth me; or with the Life, Mat. 5. 16. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorifie your Father which is in Heaven.

Q. 4. Wherein consists the enjoyment of God?

A. It consists, first, In the facial vision of him in Heaven. Secondly, In full conformity to him, 1 Joh. 3. 2. But we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Thirdly, In that full satisfaction which results from both the former, Psal. 17. 15. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness.

Q. 5. Can none enjoy him in Heaven, who do not glorifie him on Earth?

A. No adult Person can Scripturally expect happiness in Heaven without holiness on Earth. Heb. 12. 14. And holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. Rom. 8. 30. Whom he justified, them he also glorified.

Q. 6. How comes the glory and enjoyment of God our Chief End?

A. He is our Master, and rightful Owner, and Benefactor; we receive our Being and Preservation from him; Of him, and through him, and therefore to him be all Things; Rom. 11. 36.

Q. 7. Do all men make God their chief End?

A. No, they do not; some make their sensual Pleasure their chief End, Phil. 3. 19. Whose God is their Belly; and some the World, Col. 3. 5. Mortifie therefore your members which are upon the Earth, and Covetousness, which is Idolatry.

Q. 8. What are the Signs of a man's making himself his chief End?

A. Those make themselves their chief End, who ascribe the glory of what they have, or do, to themselves, and not to God, Dan. 4. 30. The King spake and said, Is not this great Babylon which I have built? Isa. 10. 18. For he saith, By the strength of my hand have I done it; and by my Wisdom, For I am prudent; therefore they sacrifice to their own net, and burn Incense unto their Drag. Hab. 1. 16.

Q. 9. Why are the glorifying and enjoying of God put together, as making up our chief End?

A. Because no man can glorifie God, that takes him not for his God; and none takes him for his God, that takes him not for his Supream Good; and both these being essentially included in this Notion of the chief End, are therefore justly put together.

Q. 10. What is the first Truth inferr'd hence?

A. That God hath dignified Man above all other Creatures on Earth, in giving him a Capacity of glorifying God here, and of enjoying him hereafter.

Q. 11. What is the second Truth inferr'd hence?

A. That the Soul of man is not annihilated by Death, but advanced by it, Phil. 1. 21. To die is gain. v. 23. Having a desire to depart, to be with Christ, which is far better.

Q. 12. What is the third truth inferr'd hence?

A. That it is the duty and wisdom of every Christian to renounce, deny, and forsake all inferior Interests and Enjoyments, when they come in competition with the glory of God, and our enjoyment of him. Luke 14. 33. So likewise whosoever he be of you, that forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be my Disciple.

Q. 13. What is the fourth Inferrence hence?

A. That we are to abhor and renounce all those Doctrines and Practices that debase the glory of God, and exalt and magnifie the Creature.

Of the Scriptures as our Rule.

Quest. 2. What Rule hath God given to direct us, how we may glorifie and enjoy him?

A. The Word of God, which is contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, is the only rule to direct us, how we may glorify and enjoy him.

Q. 1. How can the Scriptures be called the Word of God, seeing the things contained therein, were spoken and written by men?

A. They are truly and properly called the Word of God, because they came not by the Will of Man, but holy Men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, 2 Pet. 1. 21.

Q. 2. What are the principal Arguments to perswade us that the Scriptures are of Divine Authority and Inspiration?

A. Three things especially convince us. First, The Holiness of the Doctrine therein contained. Secondly, The awful efficacy thereof on the Soul. Thirdly, The uncontroulable Miracles by which they are sealed, put it beyond all rational doubt, that they are the very Word of God.

Q. 3. What is the Holiness of the Scriptures? and how doth that prove them to be God's Word?

A. The Holiness of the Scriptures doth appear in two things. First, In commanding and encouraging whatsoever is pure, and holy; Phil. 4. 8. Whatsoever things are pure: Secondly, In forbidding all unholiness, under pain of Damnation, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Know ye not, that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God, &c. This shews that they came not from Satan, being cross to his design; nor from man, it being against his corrupt Nature; and therefore from God only.

Q. 4. What is their Authority and Efficacy on the Soul? and how doth that prove them Divine?

A. Their Authority and Efficacy on the Soul, consists in three Things: First, In the power they have to search and discover the secrets of Men, Heb. 4. 12. The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of Soul and Spirit, of the Joynts and Marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Secondly, In their converting Efficacy, changing and renewing the Soul, Psal. 19. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the Soul. Thirdly, In their chearing and restoring Efficacy, when the Soul is cast down under any inward or outward trouble, Psal. 19. 8. The Statutes of the Lord are right, rejoycing the Heart. No human Power can do such things as these. John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth.

Q. 5. How do Miracles confirm it?

A. Because all proper Miracles are wrought only by the hand of God, John 3. 2. And no man can do these Miracles that thou doest, except God be with him; and so are his seal to whatsoever he affixes them, and it it conſiſts not with his truth and holineſs to ſet it to a forgery.

Q. 6. What was the end of writing the word?

A. That the Church to the end of the world might have a ſure, known ſtanding Rule to try and judge all things by, and not to be left to the uncertainty of Traditions. John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have Eternal Life, and they are they which teſtify of me.

Q. 7. Doth not the Authority of the Scriptures depend on the Church, Fathers and Councils?

A. No, the Scriptures are not built on the Authority of the Church, but the Church on them. Epheſ. 2. 19. 20. And are built on the Foundations of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the chief Corner Stone. And for Councils and Fathers, the Scriptures are not to be tried by them; but they by the Scriptures. Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony; if they ſpeak not according to this word, 'tis becauſe there is no light in them.

Q. 8. What may be fairly inferr'd from this Propoſition, That the Scriptures are the word of God?

A. Three things may be hence inferr'd. Firſt, The perfection of the Scriptures, which being the only rule given by God, muſt therefore be perfect. Secondly, That it is the right of common People to read them. John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures. Acts 17. 11. Theſe were more noble than thoſe of Theſſalonica, in that they received the word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearch the Scriptures daily, whether thoſe things were ſo. Thirdly, That we owe no Obedience to the Injunctions of Men, farther than they are ſufficiently warranted by the written Word. Mat. 15. 9. But in vain do they worſhip me, teaching for Doctrines the Commandments of Men.

Of Faith and Obedience.

Queſt. 3. What do the Scriptures principally teach?

A. The Scriptures principally teach what Man is to believe concerning God, and what duty God requires of Man.

Q. 1. Why is Faith conjoyned with Obedience, and put before it?

A. Becauſe Faith is the principle from whence all Obedience flows, and no man can perform any duty aright in the eſtate of unbelief. Heb. 11. 6. But without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him; for he that cometh to God, muſt believe that he is.

Q. 2. Can there be no ſaving Faith where the Scriptures are not known and preached?

A. No; for the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 10. 14. How then ſhall they call on him, in whom they have not believed? and how ſhall they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear without a Preacher? and how ſhall they preach except they be ſent? And v. 17. So then, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.

Q. 3. Are not we bound to believe what Learned men teach us, as Points of Faith, though the things they teach be not contained in the Word of God?

A. No; if the things they teach be not contained expreſly, or by neceſſary conſequence in the Word of God, we are not obliged to believe them as points of Faith. Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony, if they ſpeak not according to this Word, it is becauſe there is no light in them. Gal. 1. 8. Though we, or an Angel from Heaven preach any other Goſpel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accurſed. And Chriſt hath charged us, Mat. 23. 10. To call no man Maſter, for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt.

Q. 4. Are there ſome things in Scripture more excellent than others; Becauſe it's ſaid, the Scriptures principally teach matters of Faith and Duty?

A. Every part of Scripture is alike pure; Prov. 30. 5. Every word of God is pure, and of equal authority, but not of equal weight; as ſeveral pieces of Gold are alike pure, and of the ſame ſtamp, but not of equal value.

Q. 5. What may be inferred hence for Uſe?

A. Firſt, Hence 'tis our duty to examine what we hear, by the Word; and not receive any Doctrine, becauſe men confidently affirm it, but becauſe the Scriptures require it. Acts 17. 11. Theſe were more noble than thoſe of Theſſalonica, in that they received the Word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearched the Scriptures daily, whether theſe things were ſo. Secondly, That Chriſtian Religion is not notional, but practical; and that impractical Faith ſaves no man, Jam. 2. 20. Faith without Works is dead.

God is a Spirit.

Queſt. 4. What is God?

A. God is a Spirit, Infinite, Eternal and Unchangeable in his Being, Wiſdom, Power, Juſtice, Goodneſs and Truth.

Q. 1. Can the Nature of God be defined, ſo as men may expreſs properly and ſtrictly what God is.

A. No: Job 11. 7. Canſt thou by ſearching find out God? canſt thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

We do then conceive moſt rightly of God, when we acknowledge him to be unconceivable; and therefore one being ask'd the queſtion, what God is? anſwered rightly; If I fully knew that, I ſhould be a God my ſelf; for God only knows his own Eſſence.

Q. 2. How many ways are there by which men may know and deſcribe the Nature of God, tho' ſtill with imperfect Knowledge?

A. There are two ways of knowing God in this Life. Firſt, By way of affirmation; affirming that of God by way of eminence, which is excellent in the Creature; as when we affirm him to be Wiſe, Good, Merciful, &c. Secondly, By way of Negation, when we remove from God in our Conceptions all that is imperfect in the Creature: ſo we ſay God is Immenſe, Infinite, Immutable; and in this ſenſe we alſo call him a Spirit, (i. e.) he is not a groſs corporeal Subſtance.

Q. 3. How many ſorts of Spirits are there? And of which ſort is God?

A. There be two ſorts of Spirits, created, and finite; as Angels, and the Souls of Men are. Secondly, Uncreated, and Infinite; and ſuch a Spirit God only is, infinitely above all other Spirits.

Q. 4. If God be a Spirit, in what ſenſe are we to underſtand all thoſe Scriptures, which ſpeak of the Eyes of the Lord, the Ears and Hand of God?

A. We are to underſtand them as Expreſſions of God, in condeſcention to the weakneſs of our underſtandings; even as the Glory of Heaven is expreſt to us in Scripture by a City, and the Royal Feaſt. Theſe ſhadows are uſeful to us whilſt we are in the Body; but we ſhall know him in Heaven after a more perfect manner.

Q. 5. What may be inferr'd from the Spiritual Nature of God?

A. Hence learn, that it is both ſinful and dangerous to frame an Image or Picture of God. Who can make an Image of his Soul? which yet is not ſo perfect a Spirit as God is? And as it is ſinful to attempt it, ſo it is impoſſible to do it; Deut. 4. 15. 16. Take ye ye therefore good heed unto your ſelves; for ye ſaw no manner of Similitude, on the day that the Lord ſpoke to you in Horeb out of the midſt of the Fire; leſt ye corrupt your ſelves, and make you a graven Image, the ſimilitude of any figure, &c.

Q. 6. What elſe may be inferr'd from thence?

A. That our Souls are the moſt noble and excellent part of us, which moſt reſembles God; and therefore our chief regard and care ſhould be for them, whatever becomes of the vile Body, Mat. 16. 26. For what is a man profited if he gain the whole world, and loſe his own Soul? Or what ſhall a man give in Exchange for his Soul?

Q. 7. What further Truth may be inferr'd hence?

A. That men ſhould beware of ſpiritual Sins, as well as of groſs and outward Sins; for there is a filthineſs of the Spirit, as well as of the Fleſh, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit; and as God ſees them, ſo he greatly abhors them, as Sins that defile the nobleſt part of man, on which he ſtamp'd his own Image.

Q. 8. What alſo may be inferr'd from hence?

A. Hence we learn, that ſpiritual Worſhip is moſt agreeable to his Nature and Will; and the more ſpiritual it is, the more acceptable it will be to him. John 4. 24. God is a Spirit, and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in Spirit and in Truth, Externals in worſhip are of little regard with God; as places, habits, geſtures, &c.

Apply this.

Firſt, To Superſtitious men, Iſa. 66. 1, 2, 3.

Secondly, To Children that ſay a Prayer, but mind not to whom, nor what they ſay.

Of God's Infinity.

Queſt. 1. WHat is the ſenſe and meaning of this Word [Infinity?]

A. It ſignifies that which hath no bounds or limits, within which it is contained, as all created things are.

Q. 2. In how many reſpects is God infinite?

A. God is infinite or boundleſs in three reſpects.

Firſt, In reſpect of the perfection of his Nature; his Wiſdom, Power, and Holineſs, exceed all meaſures and limits; as 1 Sam. 2. 2. There is none holy as the Lord, &c. Secondly, In reſpect of time and place; no time can meaſure him, Iſa. 57 15. Thus ſaith the high, and loſty one, that inhabiteth Eternity, 1 Kings 8. 27. Behold the Heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, how much leſs this Houſe which I have built? The Heaven of heavens contains all created Beings; but not the Creator. Thirdly, In reſpect of his Incomprehenſibleneſs, by the underſtanding of all Creatures. Job 11. 7. Canſt thou by ſearching find out God? canſt thou find out the Almighty to perfection?

Q. 3. If God be thus infinite, and no underſtanding can comprehend him, How then is it ſaid in 1 John 3. 2. We ſhall ſee him as he is?

A. The meaning is not, that glorified Saints ſhall comprehend God in their underſtandings; but that they ſhave have a true apprehenſive Knowledge of God: and that we ſhall ſee him immediately, and not as we do now thorow a glaſs darkly.

Q. 4. What is the Firſt Leſſon to be learnt from God's Infinity?

A. That therefore men ſhould tremble to ſin even in ſecret. Pſal. 139. 11. If I ſay, ſurely the darkneſs ſhall cover me, even the Night ſhall be light about me.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. The ſecond Inſtruction is, That there is an infinite evil in ſin, objectively conſider'd, as it is committed againſt an Infinite God; and therefore it deſerves Eternal Puniſhment; and no ſatisfaction can poſſibly be made for it, but by the Blood of Chriſt, 1 Pet. 1. 18. Foraſmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as Silver and Gold —— but with the precious Blood of Chriſt.

Q. 6. What is the third Inſtruction from God's Infinity?

A. The third Inſtruction is, That thoſe who are reconciled to God in Chriſt, need not fear his ability to perform any mercy for them; for he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, Epheſ. 3. 20. And thoſe that are not reconciled, are in a very miſerable condition, having infinite Power ſet on work to puniſh them. 2 Theſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.

Q. 7. What is the fourth Inſtruction from God's Infinity?

A. That no place can bar the acceſs of gracious Souls to God. They are as near him in a Dungeon, as when at Liberty; and that he knows their thoughts, when their tongues cannot utter them.

[Eternal.]

Queſt. 1. WHat is it to be Eternal, as God is?

A. The Eternity of God is, to be without beginning, and without end. Pſal. 90. 2. From everlaſting to everlaſting thou art God.

Q. 2. How doth God's Eternity differ from the Eternity of Angels, and Humane Souls?

A. It differs in two reſpects; Firſt, In this, That tho' Angels, and the Souls of men ſhall have no end; yet they had a beginning, which God had not. Secondly, Our Eternity is by gift from God, or by his appointment; but his Eternity is neceſſary, and from his own Nature.

Q. 3. In what ſenſe is the Covenant called an everlaſting Covenant?

A. The Covenant is called an Everlaſting Covenant, 2 Sam. 23. 5. becauſe the mercies of it, conveyed to believers, as Pardon, Peace, and Salvation, are mercies that ſhall have no end.

Q. 4. In what ſenſe is the Goſpel Everlaſting?

A. The Goſpel is called the Everlaſting Goſpel, Rev. 14. 6. becauſe the effects thereof upon the Souls it ſanctifies, will abide in them for ever.

Q. 5. In what ſenſe is the Redemption of Chriſt called the Eternal Redemption?

A. The Redemption of Chriſt is called Eternal Redemption in Heb. 9. 12. becauſe thoſe whom he redeems by his Blood, ſhall never more come into Condemnation. John 5. 24. He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life.

Q. 6. Why is the laſt Judgment of the world by Chriſt, called Eternal Judgment?

A. The laſt Judgment is called Eternal Judgment, not becauſe God judged men from Eternity, or becauſe the Day of Judgment ſhall laſt to Eternity; but becauſe the conſequences of it will be Everlaſting Joy or Miſery to the Souls of Men; therefore it's called Eternal Judgment, Heb. 6. 2.

Q. 7. What may wicked men learn from the Eternity of God?

A. Hence wicked men may ſee their own miſery in the Perfection of it; that they will have an eternal Enemy to avenge himſelf upon them for ever, in in the World to come, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord.

Q. 8. What may good men learn from it?

A. That their joy and happineſs will be perfect and endleſs, who have the Eternal God for their Portion. Pſam 16. 11. In thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore.

Q. 9. What may all men good and bad learn from it?

A. All men may learn three things from the Eternity of God. Firſt, That their life is a thing of nought, compared with God. Pſal. 39. 5. Mine age is nothing before thee. Secondly, That ſins, or duties, long ſince committed, or performed, are all preſent before God. Thirdly, That God can never want opportunity to do his work, and carry on his deſigns in the world. All time is in the hand of the Eternal God. Rev. 12. 12. The devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, becauſe he knoweth that he hath but a ſhort time.

Of God's Unchangeableneſs.

Queſt. 1. WHat Scriptures plainly aſſert this Attribute?

A. Exod. 3. 14. And God ſaid unto Moſes, I AM that I AM. Dan. 6. 26. For he is the living God, and ſtedfaſt for ever, Jam. 1. 17. With whom is no variableneſs, neither ſhadow of turning.

Q. 2. Whence doth God's Immutability flow?

A. The Immutability of God flows from the Perfection of his Nature, to which nothing can be added, and from which nothing can be taken away. If any thing could be added to make him better than he is; or if any thing could be taken away, to make him leſs good than he is, then he were not the chiefeſt Good, and conſequently not God.

Q. 3. By what other Argument prove you his Immutability?

A. I prove it from the Eternity of God. If God be Eternal, he muſt be Immutable; for if he change by addition of ſomething to him he had not before, then there is ſomething in God which he had not from Eternity. And if he change by diminution, then there was ſomething in God from Eternity, which now is not; but from Everlaſting to Everlaſting, he is the ſame God, and therefore changeth not.

Q. 4. But it is ſaid, God repents, and Repentance is a change; How then is he unchangeable, and yet repents?

A. In thoſe Phraſes God ſpeaks to us, as we muſt ſpeak of, and to him; not properly, but after the manner of Men; and it only notes a change in his outward Providence, not in his Nature.

Q. 5. But how could God become man, and yet no change made on him?

A. There is a twofold change, one active, made by God, that we allow. He made a change upon our Nature by uniting it to Chriſt; but a paſſive change made upon God, we deny. The Nature of man was made more excellent, but the Divine Nature was ſtill the ſame.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inſtruction from God's Immutability?

A. That thoſe that are moſt unchangeable in holineſs, are moſt like God. Let him that is holy, be holy ſtill.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the happineſs of God's people is firm, and ſure, being ſtill upon the word of an unchangeable God. Mal. 3. 6. For I am the Lord. I change not; therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. Heb. 6. 18.

Q. 8. What is the third Inſtruction from this Attribute?

A. That the hopes of all Wicked men are vain, being built upon a preſumption, that God will not deal with them as he hath threatned he will do.

Q. 9. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Immutability?

A. That Chriſtians may take as much encouragement now from the nature, word, and providence of God, as the Saints in any former Generation did, or might do; for he is the ſame now, he was then.

Of God's Wiſdom.

Queſt. 1. HOw manifold is the wiſdom of God?

A. There is a perſonal and eſſential wiſdom of God; the perſonal wiſdom is the Son of God. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the power of God, and the wiſdom of God. Col. 2. 3. In whom are laid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. The eſſential wiſdom of God, is the eſſence of God; of which this Queſtion ſpeaks.

Q. 2. What is the Eſſential wiſdom of God?

A. The Eſſential wiſdom of God, is his moſt exact and perfect knowledge of Himſelf, and all his Creatures, and his ordering and diſpoſing them in the moſt convenient manner, to the Glory of his own Name. Epheſ. 1. 11. According to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the council of his own will.

Q. 3. What is the firſt property of God's wiſdom?

A. The firſt property is, he is only wiſe, Rom. 16. 27. To God only wiſe be glory. And whatſoever wiſdom is in Angels, or Men, is all derived, and borrowed from God; but his from none. Iſaiah 40. 14. With whom took he council? and who inſtructed him, and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and ſhewed to him the way of underſtanding?

Q. 4. What is the ſecond property of God's wiſdom?

A. The ſecond property is, That he is incomprehenſible in his wiſdom. Rom. 11. 33. 34. Oh the depth of the riches, both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God, &c.

Q. 5. What is the third property of the wiſdom of God?

A. The third property is, That God is perfectly wiſe, which no Creatures, no not the very Angels in Heaven are. Job 4. 18. And his Angels he chargeth with folly.

Q. 6. What is the moſt glorious and eminent diſcovery of the wiſdom of God?

A. The moſt glorious diſplay of the wiſdom of God was in the work of our Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt. Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the wiſdom of God.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. The firſt Inſtruction is, That God is a fit object of our truſt, dependance, and reſignation. Iſa. 30. 18. And therefore will the Lord wait, that he may be gracious unto you; and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you; for the Lord is a God of judgment; bleſſed are all they that wait for him.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. The ſecond Inſtruction is, That it is a dangerous arrogancy in the Creature, either to preſcribe unto unto God, and direct his Maker. Job 21. 22. Shall any teach God knowledge, ſeeing he judgeth thoſe that are high? Or to quarrel with his providences, as not ſo fit and convenient as they ſhould be. Job 40. 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty inſtruct him? He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction from it?

A. That the people of God have much reaſon to quiet, and encourage themſelves, when crafty and ſubtil Enemies ſurround them. For the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than man, 1 Cor. 1. 25.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. The fourth Inſtruction is, That the true way to Wiſdom, is to be ſenſible of your own folly. 1 Cor. 3. 18. If any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe. And to apply our ſelves by Prayer to God the fountain of it. Jam. 1. 5. If any man lack wiſdom, let him ask it of God.

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. That the ſtudy of Chriſt, and of the Scriptures, is to be preferred to all other ſtudies in the world. Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom, and knowledge. And the Scriptures contain all that Wiſdom which is for our Salvation. 1 Cor. 2. 7. But we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, even the hidden wiſdom which God ordained before the world, unto our glory.

Of God's Power.

Queſt. 1. WHat is the Power of God?

A. An Eſſential property of his Nature, whereby he can do all things that he pleaſes to have done. Jer. 32. 17. Ah Lord God, behold thou haſt made the Heavens, and the Earth by thy great power, and ſtretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee.

Q. 2. What evidences have we before our eyes of the Almighty Power of God?

A. It appears in the Creation of the World. Rom. 1. 20. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead. And its Suſtentation. Heb. 1. 3. Who upholdeth all things by the word of his Power.

Q. 3. Did God's power ever act its utmoſt?

A. No, he can do more than ever he did, or ever will do. Mat. 3. 9. God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham. Mat. 26. 53.

Q. 4. Are there not ſome things which God cannot do?

A. Yes, there are, but they are ſuch things as are inconſiſtent with his truth and holineſs. Tit. 1. 2. —— which God that cannot lye. 2 Tim. 2. 13. He cannot deny himſelf.

Q. 5. What is the firſt thing inferred from God's power?

A. That all the Creatures neceſſarily depend on him for what ability they have, and without the permiſſion of the ſupreme Power they can do us no hurt. John 19. 11. Thou couldeſt have no power againſt me except it were given thee from above.

Q. 6. What is the ſecond Inference from hence?

A. That the difficulties which lie in the way of the Promiſes, need be no ſtumbling-blocks to our Faith. Rom. 4. 20, 21. He ſtaggered not at the promiſes through unbelief, being fully perſwaded, that what he had promiſed he was able alſo to perform?

Q. 7. What is the third Inference from this Attribute?

A. The Saints need not be ſcared at the greatneſs of their ſufferings: their God can carry them through. Dan. 3. 17. Our God whom we ſerve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Inference?

A. That the Salvation of God's People is certain, whatever their dangers be; Being kept by this mighty Power. 1 Pet. 1. 5. Who are kept by the Power of God through faith to Salvation.

Q. 9. What is the laſt Inference hence?

A. That the ſtate of the damned is unconceiveably miſerable. Their Puniſhment proceeding from the glory of the Almighty. 2 Theſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord, and the glory of his power.

Of God's Holineſs.

Queſt. 1. HOw manifold is the Holineſs of God?

A. The Holineſs of God is twofold; Communicable, or Incommunicable; of his communicable holineſs the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holineſs. Of his incommunicable holineſs that Scripture ſpeaks, 1 Sam. 2. 2. There is none holy as the Lord.

Q. 2. What is the eſſential and incommunicable Holineſs of God?

A. It is the Infinite purity of his Nature, whereby he delights in his own holineſs, and the reſemblance of it in his Creatures, and hates all impurity. Hab. 1. 13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canſt not look on iniquity.

Q. 3. What is the firſt property of God's Holineſs?

A. He is eſſentially holy. Holineſs is not a ſeparable quality in God, as it is in Angels and Men: but his Being and his Holineſs are one thing.

Q. 4. What is the ſecond property of God's Holineſs?

A. God is eſſentially Holy, the author and fountain of all communicated Holineſs. Lev. 20. 8. I am the Lord which ſanctifieth you.

Q. 5. What is the third property?

A. That the Holineſs of God is the perfect rule and pattern of holineſs to all Creatures. 1 Pet. 1. 16. Be ye holy, for I am holy.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inſtruction?

A. That the holieſt of men have cauſe to be aſhamed and humbled when they come before God. Iſa. 6. 3, 5. And one cried unto another, ſaying, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hoſts, the whole earth is full of his glory. Then ſaid I, Woe is me, for I am undone, becauſe I am a man of unclean lips, &c.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from God's Holineſs.

A. That there is no coming near to God without a Mediator; for our God is a conſuming fire.

Q. 8. What is the third Inſtruction from God's Holineſs?

A. That Holineſs is indiſpenſibly neceſſary, to all thoſe which ſhall dwell with him in Heaven. Heb. 12. 14. And holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord.

Q. 9. What is the fourth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the Goſpel is of ineſtimable value, as it is the inſtrument of conveying the Holineſs of God to us. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open face beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, even as by the ſpirit of the Lord. John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Holineſs?

A. That

A. That all the despisers and scoffers of Holiness, are despisers of God, for Holiness is the very Nature of God; and in the Creature it is his represented Image.

Of God's Justice.

Quest. 1. WHat is the Justice of God?

A. The Justice of God is the perfect rectitude and equity of his Nature, whereby he is just in himself, and in all his ways towards the Creatures. Deut. 32. 4. He is the rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment; a God of Truth, and without iniquity, just and right is he.

Q. 2. What is the first Property of God's Justice?

A. That it infinitely excels all humane Justice in the Perfection of it. No Creature can compare in Justice with God. Job 9. 2. How shall Man be just with God.

Q. 3. What is the second property of God's Justice?

A. That he is Universally Righteous in all his administrations in the world. Psal. 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works.

Q. 4. What was the greatest demonstration of the Justice of God, that ever was given to the world?

A. The greatest evidence that ever was given of the Justice of God, was in his exacting full satisfaction for our sins upon Christ. Rom. 3. 25, 26. Whom God hath set forth, to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I say, at this time, his righteousness, that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus. Rom. 8. 32. He spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all.

Q. 5. What is the second Discovery of God's Justice?

A. The Second Discovery of the Justice of God, is in the Eternal Punishment of Sin in Hell, upon all that do not repent, and come to Christ by Faith in this World; Rom. 2. 5. But after thy hardness, and impenitent heart, treasurest up unto thy self wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God.

Q. 6. What is the Third Evidence of God's Justice?

A. The Third Evidence of the Justice of God is, in making good all the mercies he hath promised to believers, exactly to a tittle. 1 John 1. 9. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me at that day.

Q. 7. What is the first Inference from God's Justice?

A. That sinners have no cause to complain of God's judgments, though they be never so terrible, or durable; Rom. 2. 5. But after thy hardness, and impenitent heart, treasurest up unto thy self wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God.

Q. 8. What is the second Inference from God's Justice?

A. That without doubt there is a Judgment to come in the next Life, otherwise God would not have the glory of his Justice, Eccles. 3. 16, 17. I saw under the Sun the place of Judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of Righteousness, that Iniquity was there: I said in mine heart, God shall judge the righteous, and the wicked.

Q. 9. What is the Third Inference from God's Justice?

A. That Penitent and Believing Sinners need not doubt of the forgiveness of their sins, 1 John 1. 9. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Q. 10. What is the last inference from it?

A. The Last Inference is, that Meekness and Patience under afflictions, is our unquestionable Duty; and murmuring against God, is a great sin and evil. Lam. 3. 39. Wherefore doth a living man complain, a man for the punishment of his sins?

Of God's Goodness.

Quest. 1. WHat is the Goodness of God?

A. It is an Essential Property of his Nature, whereby he is absolutely and perfectly good in himself, and the Fountain of all communicated Goodness to the Creature, Psal. 119. 68. Thou art good, and dost good, teach me thy Statutes.

Q. 2. How doth the Goodness of God differ from the Mercy of God?

A. It differs in its Objects; for Misery is the Object of Mercy; but Goodness extends to the Creatures that are happy, as well as miserable; as the Angels, Psal. 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, and his tender Mercies are over all his Works.

Q. 3. What is the first Property of God's Goodness?

A. That all his other Attributes flow out of it as their Fountain: The other Acts of God are but the Effluxes of his Goodness. Exod. 33. 19. And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the Lord before thee, and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy unto whom I will shew mercy. Exod. 34. 6. And the Lord passed by before him, and proclaimed the Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth.

Q. 4. What is the second Property of the Divine Goodness?

A. That it is supream, and perfect in it self, so as the goodness of no Creature is, or can be. Luke 18. 19. None is good save one, and that is God: And consequently above all additions from the Creature. Psal. 16. 2. O my Soul, thou hast said unto the Lord: My goodness extendeth not unto thee.

Q. 5. What is the third Property of God's Goodness?

A. That it is communicative with Pleasure and delight to the Creature: No Mother draws out her Breast to an hungry Child with more Pleasure than God doth his Goodness to the Saints. Psal. 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works.

Q. 6. In what Acts hath God first manifested his Goodness?

A. He hath manifested it in the Creation and Government of the World. Psalm 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works? in wisdom hast thou made them all.

Q. 7. What was the principal Work in which God hath manifested his Goodness to Men.

A. The principal Manifestation of God's Goodness, was in the Work of Redemption by Christ. Rom. 5. 8. God commended his Love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. 1 John 4. 9. In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because that God hath sent his only begotten Son into the World, that we might live through him.

Q. 8. But are not the Judgments of God on the Wicked, and his Afflictions on the Saints, impeachments of his Goodness.

A. No, It is the property of Goodness to hate and punish Evil in the impenitent. Exod. 34. 7. Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, and transgression, and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty, &c. And the Afflictions of the Saints flow from his Goodness, and end in their true and eternal good. Heb. 12. 6. For whom the Lord loveth, he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth. Pſalm 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy Statutes.

Q. 9. What may we infer from the Goodneſs of God?

A. The firſt thing is, that Sin hath made our Natures baſe, and diſingenuous, in that we take no notice of his Goodneſs. Iſaiah 1. 3. The Oxe knoweth his owner, and the Aſs his maſters crib; but Iſrael doth not know, my people doth not conſider; And anſwer not the deſign of it. Rom. 2. 4. Not knowing that the goodneſs of God leadeth thee to repentance.

Q. 10. What is the Second Inference from the Goodneſs of God?

A. That therefore God is the fitteſt Object of our delight, and love, and of our truſt and confidence. (1.) Of our Delight and Love. Pſal. 116. 1. I love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard my voice, and my ſupplications. (2.) Of our Truſt and Confidence. Pſalm 34. 8. O taſte and ſee that the Lord is good; bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him.

Q. 11. What is the Third Inference from God's Goodneſs?

A. That Chriſtians ſhould imitate God in his Goodneſs, in charity to our Enemies. Mat. 5. 44, 45. But I ſay unto you, Love your enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you, that ye may be the Children of your father which is in heaven.

Q. 12. What is the Laſt Inference from God's Goodneſs.

A. That Chriſtians have great encouragement to go to God for pardon in caſe of ſin. Pſalm 130. 4. But there is forgiveneſs with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared; and for refuge of dangers. Nahum 1. 7. The Lord is good, a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble; he knoweth them that truſt in him.

Of God's Truth.

Queſt. 1. WHat is the Truth of God?

A. It is an Eſſential Property of his Nature, whereby he is perfectly faithful in himſelf, and in all that he hath ſpoken. Deut. 32. 4. He is the Rock, his work is perfect, for all his ways are judgment; a God of truth, and without iniquity, juſt and right is he. Pſalm 119. 142. Thy righteouſneſs is an everlaſting righteouſneſs, and thy Law is the truth.

Q. 2. What is the Firſt Property of Divine Truth?

A. The firſt Property of it is, That it is eſſential and neceſſary to God; He cannot lye, Tit. 1. 2.

Q. 3. What is the Second Property of it?

A. The Second Property is, That it is everlaſting, and abiding to all Generations. Pſalm 100. 5. For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlaſting, and his truth endureth to all generations. Iſaiah 25. 1. O Lord, thou art my God, I will exalt thee —— thy counſels of old are faithfulneſs and truth.

Q. 4. What is the Third Property of Divine Truth?

A. The Third Property is, that he is univerſally true in all his Words and Works. (1.) In all his Words. John 17. 17. Thy word is truth. (2.) In all his Works. Pſalm 25. 10. All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto ſuch as keep his covenant.

Q. 5. What is the Firſt Leſſon from God's Truth to be learnt?

A. That truth and ſincerity of heart is that which is moſt ſuitable, and pleaſing to God. Pſalm 51. 6. Behold, thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts.

Q. 6. What is the Second Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That whatever God hath foretold, ſhall aſſuredly come to paſs, and be fulfilled in his time Joſh. 23. 14. Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord our God ſpoke concerning you; all are come to paſs unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

Q. 7. What is the Third Leſſon from the Truth of God?

A. That a Promiſe from God is full ſecurity to the Faith of his People, and they may look upon it as good as a mercy in hand. Heb. 10. 23. For he is faithful that promiſed.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That whatever God hath threatned in his Word againſt ſinners, ſhall ſurely come upon them, except they repent, Zech. 1. 6. But my word, and my ſtatutes, which I commanded my ſervants the prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? and they returned and ſaid, Like as the Lord of hoſts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, ſo hath he dealt with us. Ezek. 12. 27, 28. The word which I have ſpoken, ſhall be done, ſaith the Lord God.

Q. 9. What is the Fifth Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That falſhood in Words and Actions is contrary to God's Nature, and abhorred by him. John 8. 44. Ye are of your father the Devil, and the luſts of your father ye will do; he was a murtherer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him; when he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it.

Q. 10. What is the Laſt Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. The day of judgment will rightly and juſtly ſtate every man's condition. Rom. 2. 2. But we are ſure that the judgment of God is according to truth, againſt them which commit ſuch things.

Of One God.

Queſt. 5. ARE there more Gods than one?

A. There is but one only, the living and true God.

Q. 1. How doth it appear that there is but one God?

A. It is evident from Scripture there is but one God. Deut. 6. 4. Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord. Jer. 10. 10. But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlaſting King; and as Scripture reveals no more, ſo Reaſon will allow no more.

Q. 2. Why will Reaſon allow no more but one God?

A. Becauſe God is the Firſt Being, Revel. 1. 11. Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt; and there can be but one Firſt Being, and God is the moſt perfect, and excellent Being. Pſalm 71. 19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high, who hath done great things: O God, who is like unto thee? And there can be but one moſt Perfect and Excellent Being.

Q. 3. But doth not the Scripture ſay in 1 Cor. 8. 5 That there are Gods many, and Lords many?

A. Yes, there are many in Title, and many in Opinion; but one only in Truth. Jer. 10. 10. But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlaſting King.

Q. 4. Why is he called the true God?

A. To diſtinguiſh him from the Idols and falſe Gods of the Heathens. 1 Theſ. 1. 9. How ye turned to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God. Acts 14. 15. We preach unto you, that ye ſhould turn from theſe vanities unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the ſea, and all things that are therein.

Q. 5. Why

Q. 5. Why is he called the living God?

A. Becauſe all Life, Natural, Spiritual, and Eternal, is in him, and from him only. Firſt, Natural Life. Acts 17. 28. For in him we live, and move, and have our being. Secondly, Spiritual Life. Eph. 2. 1. You hath he quickned, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Thirdly, Eternal life in glory. Col. 3. 4. When Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. If but one God, then all his Children ſhould be of one heart, having one and the ſame Father. Eph. 4. 5, 6. One Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference from hence?

A. That it is Idolatry to perform worſhip to any other but God only. Pſalm 86. 9, 10. All nations whom thou haſt made, ſhall come and worſhip before thee, O Lord, and ſhall glorify thy name, for thou art great, and doeſt wondrous things, thou art God alone.

Q. 8. What is the Third Inference from it?

A. That our ſupream love is due to God only, and 'tis very ſinful to place it on any other. Deut. 6. 4, 6. Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul and with all thy might.

Q. 9. What is the Fourth Inference from God's Unity?

A. That God only muſt have the reliance and dependance of our Souls. Jer. 17. 5, 7. Thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the man that truſteth in man, that maketh fleſh his arm, and whoſe heart departeth from the Lord. Bleſſed is the man that truſteth in the Lord, and whoſe hope the Lord is.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inference from it?

A. That we have great cauſe to be thankful for the Goſpel, which diſcovers the only true God to us, and that we are not as the Heathens, worſhiping many and falſe Gods. 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. For though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth, as there be Gods many, and Lords many; but to us there is but one God, the Father of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him.

Of three Perſons in the Godhead.

Queſt. 6. How many Perſons are there in the Godhead?

A. There are three Perſons in the Godhead, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one God, the ſame in ſubſtance, equal in Power and Glory.

Q. 1. What mean you by the word Godhead?

A. It is the Nature, Eſſence, or Being of God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; Acts 17. 29. Foraſmuch then as we are the offſpring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or ſilver, or ſtone, graven by art, and mans device.

Q. 2. What is a Perſon in the Godhead?

A. It is the Godhead diſtinguiſhed by perſonal properties; each Perſon having his diſtinct Perſonal properties. Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightneſs of his glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon, upholding all things by the word of his power.

Q. 3. How doth it appear there are three perſons, and no more?

A. Firſt, From Chriſt's Baptiſm. Mat. 3. 16, 17. And Jeſus when he was baptized, went up ſtraitway out of the water, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he ſaw the Spirit of God deſcending like a dove, and lighting upon him, and lo a voice from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed.

Q. 4. How elſe, in the ſecond place, doth it appear?

A. From the Inſtitution of our Baptiſm. Mat. 28. 19. Go ye therefore, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the father, of the ſon, and of the holy ghoſt.

Q. 5. What is the third Proof from Scripture?

A. From the Apoſtolical Benediction. 2 Cor. 13. 14. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghoſt, be with you all, Amen. Where three diſtinct bleſſings are wiſht, from the three divine Perſons in the Godhead; Grace from Chriſt, Love from the Father, and Communion with the Spirit.

Q. 6. What farther evidence is there of it in the Scripture?

A. From plain, poſitive aſſertions of the Scripture, aſſerting, Firſt, A Trinity of Perſons. Secondly, A Unity of Eſſence. 1 John 5. 7. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the father, the word, and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That the Doctrine of the Goſpel concerning Chriſt, is fully confirmed and ratified by three witneſſes from Heaven, who are above all exceptions. 1 John 5. 7. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the father, the word, and the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. Hence we learn the true order and manner of worſhipping God in the Son. John 16. 23. Whatſoever ye ſhall ask the father in my name, he will give it you. And by the Spirit. Eph. 6. 18. Praying always, with all prayer and ſupplication in the ſpirit.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That the Covenant of Grace conveys a rich portion to Believers, in making over all three Perſons to them. Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That as it is the duty of all the Saints to give diſtinct glory to the three Perſons in the Godhead; ſo it will be a ſpecial part of their bleſſedneſs in Heaven, to contemplate the diſtinct benefits received from them all. Rev. 1. 5. And from Jeſus Chriſt, who is the faithful witneſs, and the firſt begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the Earth; unto him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own Blood.

Of God's Decrees.

Queſt. 7. What are the Decrees of God?

A. The Decrees of God are his eternal purpoſe, according to the counſel of his will, whereby for his own glory he hath foreordained whatſoever comes to paſs.

Q. 1. What things are Decreed of God?

A. All things whatſoever come to paſs, even the ſmalleſt. Eph. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will.

Q. 2. What is the End of God's Decrees?

A. The Glory of his own Name, Eph. 1. 11, 12. Who worketh all things according to the counsel of his own will, that we should be to the praise of his glory who first trusted in Christ.

Q. 3. But there are some evil things done in the World, do they fall under God's Decree?

A. Though God doth neither approve them, nor necessitate men to commit them, yet he doth permit and suffer them to be done, and will turn them to his own Glory. Acts 4. 27, 28. For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel are gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand, and thy counsel determined before to be done.

Q. 4. Who are the Objects of God's Special Decrees?

A. Angels and Men are the Objects of God's Special Decrees. 1 Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things, &c. Rom. 8. 33. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect?

Q. 5. What is the first Property of God's Decrees?

A. That they are most wise Acts of God, laid in the depth of Wisdom and Council. Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

Q. 6. What is the Second Property of God's Decrees?

A. The Decrees of God are most free, all flowing from the meer pleasure of his Will. Rom. 9. 18. Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.

Q. 7. What is the Third Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are most firm and stable. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, Zech. 6. 1.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are Eternal, and before all time, Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works, from the beginning of the world.

Q. 9. What is the Fifth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are most pure, and altogether unspotted of sin, 1 John 1. 5. This is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, That God is Light, and in him is no darkness at all.

Q. 10. What is the First Instruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to ascribe nothing to Chance, but to the appointment or providence of God, Prov. 16. 33. The lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord.

Q. 11. What is the Second Instruction from God's Decrees?

A. That God's hand is to be acknowledged in the greatest Afflictions that befall us. 2 Sam. 16. 11. And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, my son which came forth of my bowels seeketh my life, how much more now may this Benjamite do it? let him alone, and let him curse, for the Lord hath bidden him.

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to be thankful to God for all the good, and patient under all the evils that befall us. Job 2. 10. Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?

Of the Creation.

Quest. 9. What are the Works of Creation?

A. The Work of Creation is, God's making all things of nothing, by the Word of his Power, in the space of Six Days, and all very good.

Q. 1. What is it to create?

A. To create, is to give a Being to that which had no Being; or to bring something out of nothing. Heb. 11. 3. Through Faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things that do appear.

Q. 2. How did God create the world?

A. By his infinite Power, executed in his Word of Command. Psalm 33. 6. 9. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth; for he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast.

Q. 3. What Attributes of God shine forth in the Creation?

A. The Wisdom of God shines forth gloriously, not only in their formation, but dependance one upon another. Psalm 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.

Q. 4. What may we learn from the Creation?

A. That God perfectly knows all that is in the Creature, be it never so secret. Psalm 94. 8, 9. Understand, O ye brutish among the people; and ye fools, when will ye be wise? He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see?

Q. 5. What's the Second Instruction from the Creation?

A. That God is the rightful owner of us all, and may do what he will with us. Rom. 9. 20. Nay, but O man, who art thou that repliest against God! Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel to honour, and another to dishonour?

Q. 6. What is the Third Instruction from the Creation?

A. That God only is the proper Object of worship. Jer. 10. 11. Thus shall ye say unto them, The Gods that have not made the heavens, and the earth, even they shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens.

Q. 7. What is the Fourth Instruction from hence?

A. That Christians should not fear the power of Creatures, since they derive their Being and Power from God. Isaiah 54. 16, 17. Behold I have created the Smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy, no weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper.

Q. 8. What is the Fifth Instruction hence?

A. That Atheism is a sin against Natural Light and Reason. Rom. 1. 20. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and godhead; so that they are without excuse.

Q. 9. What is the Sixth Instruction hence?

A. That God's Glory is the end of all Being. Col. 1. 16. For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him.

Q. 10. Wh.

Q. 10. What is the Seventh Instruction hence?

A. That there is an unnatural rebellion in sin, smiting at him that made and preserves our Being. Isa. 1. 2. I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.

Q. 11. What is the Eighth Instruction from hence?

A. That God can in a moment revive and save the Church, when at the lowest ebb. Isa. 65. 18. Behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoycing, and her people a joy.

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction from hence?

A. That it is easy with God to revive a dejected Soul. Isa. 57. 19. I create the fruit of the lips; Peace, peace, to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord, and I will heal him.

Of Man's Creation.

Quest. 10. HOW did God create Man?

A. God created Man Male and female, after his own Image, in Knowledge, Righteousness, and Holiness, with dominion over the Creatures.

Q. 1. How did God create Man?

A. God created man in his own Image. Gen. 1. 27. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them.

Q. 2. What is meant by the Image of God?

A. Not a resemblance of God in any bodily Shape or Figure, but in holiness. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.

Q. 3. In what Graces did Man resemble God?

A. In such a knowledge of God himself, and the Creatures, which made him happy. Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him.

Q. 4. In what other Graces did this Image consist?

A. In Righteousness as well as Holiness. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.

Q. 5. What is the First Inference from hence?

A. The deplorable misery of the Fall. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.

Q. 6. What is the Second Instruction hence?

A. The beauty of Holiness, which is the Image of God, and the Excellency of Man. Psalm 16. 3. But to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight.

Q. 7. What is the Third Instruction from hence?

A. We have infinite cause to bless God for Christ, who repairs this lost Image in his people. Eph. 4. 23. And be renewed in the spirit of your mind.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Instruction from hence?

A. That the despisers of Holiness are the despisers of God; for Holiness is God's Image.

Q. 9. What's the Fifth Instruction from hence?

A. The excellency of Sanctification, which defaces the Image of Satan, and draws the Image of God upon the Soul of Man.

Of Divine Providence.

Quest. 1. WHat are God's Works of Providence?

A. God's Works of Providence, are his just, holy, wise, and powerful preserving and governing all his Creatures, and all their Actings.

Q. 1. How doth it appear there is a Divine Providence?

A. It appears by plain Scripture Testimonies. Heb. 1. 3. Upholding all things by the word of his power. Col. 1. 17. By him all things consist. Luke 12. 6. 7. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God; but even the very hairs of your head are all numbred.

Q. 2. How else is Providence evidenced?

A. By Scripture Emblems, as Jacob's Ladder. Gen. 28. 12, 13. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; behold the Angels of God ascended and descended on it: And Ezekiel's wheels, Ezek. 1. 20. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go, and the wheels were lifted up over against them, for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

Q. 3. What farther Scripture evidence is there?

A. The sure accomplishment of Scripture Predictions, as Israel's Captivity, and Deliverance from Egypt and Babylon, Christ's Incarnation, the Rise and Ruin of the Four Monarchies. Dan. 2. 31. Thou, O King sawest, and behold a great Image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible. Dan. 7. 3. And four great beasts came up from the Sea, diverse one from the other.

Q. 4. What is it's first Act about the Creatures?

A. It sustains, preserves, provides for them. Psalm 145. 15, 16. The eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their meat in due season; thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing, and defendest them from danger. Psalm 36. 6. Thy righteousness is like the great mountains, thy judgments are a great deep, O Lord, thou preservest man and beast.

Q. 5. What is the Second Act of Providence about the Creatures?

A. It rules and governs the Creatures and their Actions. Psalm 66. 7. He ruleth by his power for ever, his eyes behold the nations; let not the rebellious exalt themselves.

Q. 6. How manifold is Divine Providence?

A. It is common and general over all, or special and peculiar to some men. 1 Tim. 4. 10. Who is the saviour of all men, especially of those that believe.

Q. 7. How is Providence exercised about sinful Actions?

A. In permitting them. Acts 4. 16. In restraining them. Psalm 76. 10. Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain. And over-ruling them to good. Gen. 50. 20. But as for you, ye thought evil against me, but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

Powerful. Dan. 4. 35. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, and he doth according to his will, in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, what dost thou?

Q. 9. What is the First Instruction from it?

A. That God's People are safe amidst all their enemies and dangers. 2 Chron. 16. 9. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose hearts are perfect towards him.

Q. 10.

Q. 2. What is the End of God's Decrees?

A. The Glory of his own Name, Eph. 1. 11, 12. Who worketh all things according to the counſel of his own will, that we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory who firſt truſted in Chriſt.

Q. 3. But there are ſome evil things done in the World, do they fall under God's Decree?

A. Though God doth neither approve them, nor neceſſitate men to commit them, yet he doth permit and ſuffer them to be done, and will turn them to his own Glory. Acts 4. 27, 28. For of a truth, againſt thy holy child Jeſus, whom thou haſt anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael are gathered together, for to do whatſoever thy hand, and thy counſel determined before to be done.

Q. 4. Who are the Objects of God's Special Decrees?

A. Angels and Men are the Objects of God's Special Decrees. 1 Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the elect angels, that thou obſerve theſe things, &c. Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect?

Q. 5. What is the Firſt Property of God's Decrees?

A. That they are moſt wiſe Acts of God, laid in the depth of Wiſdom and Council. Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his ways paſt finding out!

Q. 6. What is the Second Property of God's Decrees?

A. The Decrees of God are moſt free, all flowing from the meer pleaſure of his Will. Rom. 9. 18. Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.

Q. 7. What is the Third Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are moſt firm and ſtable. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Neverthleſs, the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, Zech. 6. 1.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are Eternal, and before all time, Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works, from the beginning of the world.

Q. 9. What is the Fifth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are moſt pure, and altogether unſpotted of ſin, 1 John 1. 5. This is the meſſage which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, That God is Light, and in him is no darkneſs at all.

Q. 10. What is the Firſt Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to aſcribe nothing to Chance, but to the appointment or providence of God, Prov. 16. 33. The lot is caſt into the lap, but the whole diſpoſing thereof is of the Lord.

Q. 11. What is the Second Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That God's hand is to be acknowledged in the greateſt Afflictions that befall us. 2 Sam. 16. 11. And David ſaid to Abiſhai, and to all his ſervants, Behold, my ſon which came forth of my bowels ſeeketh my life, how much more now may this Benjamite do it? let him alone, and let him curſe, for the Lord hath bidden him.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to be thankful to God for all the good, and patient under all the evils that befall us. Job 2. 10. Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil?

Of the Creation.

Queſt. 9. What are the Works of Creation?

A. The Work of Creation is, God's making all things of nothing, by the Word of his Power, in the ſpace of Six Days, and all very good.

Q. 1. What is it to create?

A. To create, is to give a Being to that which had no Being; or to bring ſomething out of nothing. Heb. 11. 3. Through Faith we underſtand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen were not made of things that do appear.

Q. 2. How did God create the world?

A. By his infinite Power, executed in his Word of Command. Pſalm 33. 6. 9. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hoſt of them by the breath of his mouth; for he ſpake, and it was done; he commanded, and it ſtood faſt.

Q. 3. What Attributes of God ſhine forth in the Creation?

A. The Wiſdom of God ſhines forth gloriouſly, not only in their formation, but dependance one upon another. Pſalm 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.

Q. 4. What may we learn from the Creation?

A. That God perfectly knows all that is in the Creature, be it never ſo ſecret. Pſalm 94. 8, 9. Underſtand, O ye brutiſh among the people; and ye fools, when will ye be wiſe? He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear? he that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee?

Q. 5. What's the Second Inſtruction from the Creation?

A. That God is the rightful owner of us all, and may do what he will with us. Rom. 9. 20. Nay, but O man, who art thou that replieſt againſt God! Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, why haſt thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the ſame lump to make one veſſel to honour, and another to diſhonour?

Q. 6. What is the Third Inſtruction from the Creation?

A. That God only is the proper Object of worſhip. Jer. 10. 11. Thus ſhall ye ſay unto them, The Gods that have not made the heavens, and the earth, even they ſhall periſh from the earth, and from under theſe heavens.

Q. 7. What is the Fourth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That Chriſtians ſhould not fear the power of Creatures, ſince they derive their Being and Power from God. Iſaiah 54. 16, 17. Behold I have created the Smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, that bringeth forth an inſtrument for his work; and I have created the waſter to deſtroy, no weapon that is formed againſt thee ſhall proſper.

Q. 8. What is the Fifth Inſtruction hence?

A. That Atheiſm is a ſin againſt Natural Light and Reaſon. Rom. 1. 20. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and godhead; ſo that they are without excuſe.

Q. 9. What is the Sixth Inſtruction hence?

A. That God's Glory is the end of all Being. Col. 1. 16. For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him.

Q. 10. Wha

Q. 10. What is the Seventh Instruction hence?
A. That there is an unnatural rebellion in sin, smiting at him that made and preserves our Being. Isa. 1. 2. I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.
Q. 11. What is the Eighth Instruction from hence?
A. That God can in a moment revive and save the Church, when at the lowest ebb. Isa. 65. 18. Behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoycing, and her people a joy.
Q. 12. What is the last Instruction from hence?
A. That it is easy with God to revive a dejected Soul. Isa. 57. 19. I create the fruit of the lips; Peace, peace, to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord, and I will heal him.

Of Man's Creation.

Quest. 10. HOW did God create Man?
A. God created Man Male and female, after his own Image, in Knowledge, Righteousness, and Holiness, with dominion over the Creatures.
Q. 1. How did God create Man?
A. God created man in his own Image. Gen. 1. 27. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them.
Q. 2. What is meant by the Image of God?
A. Not a resemblance of God in any bodily Shape or Figure, but in holiness. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.
Q. 3. In what Graces did Man resemble God?
A. In such a knowledge of God himself, and the Creatures, which made him happy. Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him.
Q. 4. In what other Graces did this Image consist?
A. In Righteousness as well as Holiness. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.
Q. 5. What is the First Inference from hence?
A. The deplorable misery of the Fall. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.
Q. 6. What is the Second Instruction hence?
A. The beauty of Holiness, which is the Image of God, and the Excellency of Man. Psalm 16. 3. But to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight.
Q. 7. What is the Third Instruction from hence?
A. We have infinite cause to bless God for Christ, who repairs this lost Image in his people. Eph. 4. 23. And be renewed in the spirit of your mind.
Q. 8. What is the Fourth Instruction from hence?
A. That the despisers of Holiness are the despisers of God; for Holiness is God's Image.
Q. 9. What's the Fifth Instruction from hence?
A. The excellency of Sanctification, which defaces the Image of Satan, and draws the Image of God upon the Soul of Man.

Of Divine Providence.

Quest. 1. WHat are God's Works of Providence?
A. God's Works of Providence, are his just, holy, wise, and powerful preserving and governing all his Creatures, and all their Actings.
Q. 1. How doth it appear there is a Divine Providence?
A. It appears by plain Scripture Testimonies. Heb. 1. 3. Upholding all things by the word of his power. Col. 1. 17. By him all things consist. Luke 12. 6. 7. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God; but even the very hairs of your head are all numbred.
Q. 2. How else is Providence evidenced?
A. By Scripture Emblems, as Jacob's Ladder. Gen. 28. 12, 13. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; behold the Angels of God ascended and descended on it: And Ezekiel's wheels, Ezek. 1. 20. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go, and the wheels were lifted up over against them, for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.
Q. 3. What farther Scripture evidence is there?
A. The sure accomplishment of Scripture Predictions, as Israel's Captivity, and Deliverance from Egypt and Babylon, Christ's Incarnation, the Rise and Ruin of the Four Monarchies. Dan. 2. 31. Thou, O King sawest, and behold a great Image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible. Dan. 7. 3. And four great beasts came up from the Sea, diverse one from the other.
Q. 4. What is it's first Act about the Creatures?
A. It sustains, preserves, provides for them. Psalm 145. 15, 16. The eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their meat in due season; thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing, and defendest them from danger. Psalm 36. 6. Thy righteousness is like the great mountains, thy judgments are a great deep, O Lord, thou preservest man and beast.
Q. 5. What is the Second Act of Providence about the Creatures?
A. It rules and governs the Creatures and their Actions. Psalm 66. 7. He ruleth by his power for ever, his eyes behold the nations; let not the rebellious exalt themselves.
Q. 6. How manifold is Divine Providence?
A. It is common and general over all, or special and peculiar to some men. 1 Tim. 4. 10. Who is the saviour of all men, especially of those that believe.
Q. 7. How is Providence exercised about sinful Actions?
A. In permitting them. Acts 4. 16. In restraining them. Psalm 76. 10. Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain. And over-ruling them to good. Gen. 50. 20. But as for you, ye thought evil against me, but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.
Q. 8. What are the Properties of Providence?
A. It is (1) Holy. Psalm 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works. (2.) Wise. Psalm 104. 24. O Lord how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all. (3.) Powerful. Dan. 4. 35. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, and he doth according to his will, in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, what dost thou?
Q. 9. What is the First Instruction from it?
A. That God's People are safe amidst all their enemies and dangers. 2 Chron. 16. 9. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose hearts are perfect towards him.

Q. 10. What is the Second Instruction?

A. That Prayer is the best expedient to Prosperity, and success of our lawful affairs. Psalm 145. 18. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.

Q. 11. What is the Third Instruction from it?

A. That God's People should rest quietly in the care of his Providence for them in all their straits. Mat. 6. 26. Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly father feedeth them; are ye not much better than they?

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction from it?

A. That it is no small Priviledge to be adopted Children of God, and the Members of Christ, for all is ordered for their eternal Good. Eph. 1. 22. 23. And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church, which is his Body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all.

Of the Covenant of Works.

Quest. 12. What special Act of Providence did God exercise towards Man, in the estate wherein he was created?

A. When God had created Man, he entred into a Covenant of Life with him, upon condition of perfect obedience, forbidding him to eat of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil upon pain of Death.

Q. 1. What was God's Covenant with Adam before the Fall?

A. It was to give Life and Happiness upon condition of perfect Personal Obedience. Gal. 3. 12. The law is not of Faith; but the man that doth them, shall live in them.

Q. 2. Was this Covenant made only with Adam, or with him and his Posterity?

A. It was made with him, and all his natural Posterity, descending in the ordinary way of Generation from him. Rom. 4. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. v. 14. and 18. Nevertheless, death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adams transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come: Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.

Q. 3. Was Adam able to perform the obedience required of him in that Covenant?

A. Yes; for he was made upright. Eccles. 7. 29. God made man upright, but they have sought out themselves many inventions.

Q. 4. Had this Covenant any Mediator?

A. No, he neither had, nor needed any Mediator for satisfaction; because no sin was in him; nor intercession, for he wanted nothing.

Q. 5. Did this Covenant admit of no repentance, nor accept any short Endeavours?

A. No, it did not; but sentenceth and curseth the Transgressors of it, for the least breach. Gal. 3. 10. Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

Q. 6. How was the threatning fulfilled, of dying in the day he eat, seeing he lived 930 years?

A. He died spiritually, that day; and though the sentence on his body was respited in order to Posterity, yet then his body received the deaths wound, of which afterward he died.

Q. 7. What is the first Inference from Adam's Covenant?

A. Miserable are all they that grow on the natural root of the first Adam. Gal. 4. 21. 22. Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law. Do ye not hear the law? for it is written, That Abraham had two sons, the one by a Bond-maid, the other by a Free-woman.

Q. 8. What is the second Inference?

A. That God is just in all the Punishments and Miseries that came upon Man, yea, Infants, that never sinned after his similitude. Rom. 5. 14. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression.

Q. 9. What is the third Inference?

A. The glorious Priviledge of Believers, who are under a better Covenant, establisht upon better Promises. Heb. 8. 6. But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the Mediator of a better Covenant, which is establisht upon better promises.

Q. 10. What is the last Inference?

A. That we should pity the unregenerate, especially our own among them; and labour to plant them in the second Adam.

Of the Fall of Man.

Quest. 13. Did our first Parents continue in the estate wherein they were created?

A. Our first Parents being left to the freedom of their own will, fell from the estate wherein they were created, by sinning against God.

Q. 1. How doth it appear that man is fallen?

A. By the Scripture History, an account of it is in Gen. 3. 6, 7. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves Aprons, and they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden, in the cool of the day, and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God, amongst the trees of the garden. And the sad experience we all have of it in our selves. Rom. 5. 12. Therefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.

Q. 2. How could man fall, since he was made upright?

A. Though he was upright, yet his will was mutable; and by abusing that liberty, he fell. Eccles. 7. 29. Lo this only have I found, that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions.

Q. 3. How did God leave him to abuse the freedom of will?

A. Not by inclining him to abuse it; but by withholding that further grace which he was no way obliged to continue to him.

Q. 4. Did the will of man lose its liberty to good by the Fall?

A. Yes, it did, and is so wounded, that it cannot without preventing and regenerating grace put forth one spiritual and saving act. Eph. 2. 8, 9, 10. For by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast; for we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, &c.

Q. 5. What was the aggravation of Adam's Sin?

A. It was aggravated in his being a Publick [illegible] nocent nocent Person, so newly placed in a State of Happiness and Liberty.

Q. 6. What is the first inference from the Fall?

A. That the best Creature left to himself, cannot be long safe; as the Angels, and Adam. *Psal.*49.12. Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not, he is like the beasts that perish.

Q. 7. What is the second Inference?

A. That since man could not be his own keeper, he can be much less his own Saviour. 2 Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are sufficient of our selves to think any thing as of our selves; but our sufficiency is of God.

Q. 8. What is the third Inference?

A. That it is impossible for the Covenant of works to justifie any one. Rom. 3. 20. Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight. Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh; God sending his own Son, in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh.

Q. 9. What is the last Inference?

A. What cause have we to bless God for Christ, who recovered us when the Fall left us helpless? Rom. 5. 6. For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly.

Of Sin.

Quest. 14. What is Sin?

A. Sin is any want of conformity unto, or transgression of the law of God.

Quest. 1. What is meant by the Law?

A. The Commands and Rules flowing from God's Soveraignty, whereby his will is manifested, and the Creature bound to obedience.

Q. 2. Where is this Law written?

A. It is written either in the Heart, Rom. 2. 15. Which shews the work of the law written in their hearts, which we call the law of nature. Or in the Bible, which we call the written Moral Law.

Q. 3. What conformity is due to this Law of God?

A. A twofold conformity is due to it. First, Internal, in our hearts. Secondly, External, in our lives; and the want of either is sin, 1 John 3. 4. Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law.

Q. 4. How doth it appear that the want of internal conformity is sin?

A. Because the Law requires it. Mark 12. 30. And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength; for this is the first commandment. And condemns the want of it, Rom. 7. 7. What shall we say then? is the law sin? God forbid; nay, I had not known sin but by the law; for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.

Q. 5. Is nothing a sin but what is against God's Law?

A. No, nothing can be a sin but what God hath either expresly, or by consequence forbidden in his word.

Q. 6. Wherein lies the evil of transgressing God's laws?

A. The evil of sin principally lies in offence and wrong done to God, whose soveraignty it labours to take off, and despises his will. Psal. 51. 4. Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight.

Q. 7. What further evil is in sin?

A. It highly wrongs the Sinner's Soul, by defacing, defiling, and damning it. Prov. 8. 36. But he that sinneth against me, wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me, love death.

Q. 8. Wherein is the evil of sin manifested?

A. It's manifested in the Death of Christ, the Terrors of Conscience, and Torments of Hell.

Q. 9. What course must the Sinner take to recover himself out of his misery?

A. Repentance towards God, faith towards Christ; and both evidenced by new obedience. Acts 20. 21. Testifying both to the Jew, and also to the Greeks, repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ.

Q. 10. What may we infer from hence?

A. That we have infinite cause to bless God for Christ's satisfaction of the Law for our Sins.

Of the Tree of Knowledge.

Quest. 15. What is the sin whereby our first Parents fell from the Estate wherein they were created?

A. The sin whereby our first Parents fell from the Estate wherein they were created; was their eating the forbidden fruit.

Q. 1. Why was this Tree called the Tree of Knowledge?

A. Not from any natural efficacy it had to give knowledge; but the Knowledge he should have by eating, or not eating, was experimental Knowledge, (i. e.) Knowledge to his Sorrow.

Q. 2. Why did God forbid him this Tree?

A. First, For the discovery of his dominion over man. Secondly, For the trial of his subjection and obedience. Thirdly, For the aggravation of his sin, if he should eat.

Q. 3. What evil was there in eating of it?

A. There was a twofold Evil, the evil of Sin, and the evil of Punishment, both very great.

Q. 4. What was the Evil of Sin?

A. A threefold Evil of Sin. First, Against God, called disobedience. Rom. 5. 19. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners. Secondly, Against himself, Soul, Body, and Estate. Thirdly, Against his Posterity. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.

Q. 5. What was the Evil of Punishment?

A. First, Loss of God's Image. Secondly, Horror of Conscience. Thirdly, Sorrow on the Female Sex. Fourthly, Curse on the Creature. Fifthly, Expulsion from Paradise. Sixthly, Death both of Body and Soul.

Q. 6. What is the first Instruction from it?

A. To take heed of small beginnings of Temptations, and to resist it in the first motions. Jam. 3. 5. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth.

Q. 7. What is the second Inference?

A. Not to hold a Parly with the tempter. See 2 Cor. 11. 3. But I fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve, through his subtilty; so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

Q. 8. What is the third Inference?

A. That Satan's Policy lies much in the choice of his tempting Instruments; as Eve and Peter, &c.

Q. 9. What is the fourth Inference?

A. A necessity of keeping strong guards on our Senses. Isa. 33. 15. That stoppeth his ears from hearing of Blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil, he shall dwell on high, his place of defence shall be the munition of rocks.

Q. 10. What

Q. 10. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That Covenant-breaking is a heinous sin, which God will punish. Hos. 8. 1. He shall come as an Eagle against the house of the Lord, because they have transgressed my Covenant, and trespassed against my Laws.

Q. 11. What is the last Inference?

A. That the corruption of our nature is much seen in desiring forbidden things. Rom. 7. 7. What shall we say then? Is the Law sin? God forbid: Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law; for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.

Of the Fall of Adam, and ours in him.

Quest. 16. DID all Mankind fall in Adam's first transgression?

A. The Covenant being made with Adam, not only for himself, but for his Posterity; all mankind descending from him by ordinary Generation, sinned in him, and fell with him in his first transgression?

Q. 1. Did no man ever escape the Sin of Adam?

A. Yes, The man Christ Jesus did, and he only, Heb. 7. 26. For such an high Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners.

Q. 2. Why was not Christ tainted with it?

A. Because he came into the world in an extraordinary way. Mat. 1. 18. Now the Birth of Christ was on this wise, when as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with Child of the Holy Ghost.

Q. 3. How doth it appear all others are tainted with it?

A. It appears by Scripture-Testimony. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. And experience of the best men. Rom. 7. 21. I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is present with me.

Q. 4. How came all men to fall with Adam?

A. Because all were included in Adam's Covenant, as a Man's Covenant includes his Children before they be born; or the treason of the Father affects his Posterity.

Q. 5. What infer you from hence?

A. The stupendious wisdom of God in sending Christ in our nature, and yet without the sin and taint of it. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Christ the wisdom of God?

Q. 6. What is the second Inference?

A. Hence we learn the admirable love of Christ in taking our nature, with all the sinless Infirmities thereof. Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh.

Q. 7. What is the third Inference.

A. The necessity of our Union with Christ, in order to our participation of his Righteousness and Redemption. 1 Cor. 15. 22. For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive.

Q. 8. What is the fourth Inference?

A. Hence we may learn the malignant and mortal nature of sin, in as much as one sin defiled and destroyed a whole world.

Q. 9. What is the fifth Inference.

A. That though all be not equally sensible of their need, yet one sinner needs Christ as much as another.

Q. 10. What is the last Inference?

A. That no man hath any cause or reason to boast of the goodness of his nature, since the best were worst by nature under the same sin and misery as the Eph. 2. 3. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past, in the lust of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind, and were by nature the children of wrath even as others.

Of Orginal Sin.

Quest. 17. INto what Estate did the Fall bring Mankind?

A. The Fall brought Mankind into an Estate of Sin and Misery.

Q. 18. Wherein consists the sinfulness of that Estate whereinto Man fell.

A. The sinfulness of that Estate whereinto Man fell consists in the guilt of Adam's first Sin, the want of Original Righteousness, and Corruption of his whole Nature, which is commonly called Original Sin, together with all actual Transgressions which proceed from sin.

Q. 1. How many sorts of Sin are all men under?

A. All men are guilty before God of two sorts of Sin; of Original, and Actual. Psal. 51. 5. Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me. Eccles. 7. 20. For there is not a just man upon earth, that doth good and sinneth not.

Q. 2. How can we be guilty of Adam's first Sin?

A. We are guilty of it, because Adam sinned not only as a single, but also as a publick Person, and representative of all Mankind. Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17. But not as the offence; so also is the free gift; for if through the offence of one, many be dead: much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many, and not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift; for the judgment was by one to condemnation.

Q. 3. How else came we under his guilt?

A. We are guilty of his Sin by Generation, for we were in his loyns; as Treason stains the Blood of the Posterity, or the Parents Leprosie the Children. Psalm 51. 5. Behold I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me.

Q. 4. Wherein doth it consist?

A. It consists in two things. First, In our aversation and enmity to that which is good. Rom. 7. 18. In me, that is, in my flesh, there dwelleth no good thing. Secondly, In proneness to that which is evil. Rom. 7. 14. But I am carnal, sold under sin.

Q. 5. Is this corruption of Nature in all Men?

A. Yes, In all meer Men, and Women, none exempted. Rom. 3. 10. and 23. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

Q. 6. In what part of our Nature doth this Sin abide?

A. It abides in the whole man, in every part of man, both Soul and Body. Gen. 6. 5. God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. 1 Thes. 5. 23. Now the God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Q. 7. How is the Body infected by it?

A. In the readiness of the Bodily Members to further Sin, and its Temptations in the Soul. Rom. 13, 14, 15. Their throat is an open sepulcher, with their tongues they have used deceit, the poyson of Asps is under their lips, whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness, their feet are swift to shed blood.

Q. 8. W

Q. 8. What learn we from Original Sin?

A. To bear patiently the Miseries we see on our Children, and their death also without murmuring. Rom. 5. 14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's Transgression.

Q. 9. What is the second Instruction?

A. It teaches us Humility, and should be matter of Confession and Humiliation, when we sin actually, Psalm 51. 5. Behold I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me.

Q. 10. What is the third Instruction?

A. It should provoke Parents to use their utmost diligence for the Conversion of their Children, who draw sin from them.

Q. 11. What is the last Instruction?

A. It teaches us the necessity of Regeneration, and should provoke us greatly to desire it.

Of Man's Misery.

Quest. 19. What is the Misery of that Estate whereinto Man fell?

A. All Mankind by their Fall lost communion with God, are under his Wrath and curse; and so made liable to all miseries in this life, to death it self, and to the pains of Hell for ever.

Q. 1. What communion had God with Man before the Fall?

A. Man then enjoyed the gracious presence and favour of God with him, which was better than life.

Q. 2. How doth it appear this was lost by the Fall?

A. It appears by Scripture-Testimony, That Adam lost it as to himself, Gen. 3. 8. And Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God, among the trees of the garden. And we in him. Eph. 2. 12. At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the Covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world.

Q. 3. Was this the only misery that came by the Fall?

A. No; Man did not only lose communion with God, but fell under his wrath and curse, Eph. 2. 3. And were by nature children of wrath, even as others.

Q. 4. Doth the wrath and curse of God then lie on all Men?

A. It lies on all the unregenerate in the world, Gal. 3. 10. Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which is written in the book of the law, to do them. But believers are delivered from it by Christ, 1 Thes. 1. 10. Even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

Q. 5. How are the miseries of Man by the Fall divided?

A. They are divided into the Miseries of this world, and of the world to come.

Q. 6. What are the miseries that come on them in this World?

A. The Miseries of Life; as Sickness, Pain, Poverty on the Body; Fear, Trouble, Sorrow on the Mind, and at last Death it self, Rom. 6. ult. The wages of sin is death.

Q. 7. What are the Miseries after this Life?

A. The Pains and Torments of Hell for ever, Psal. 9. 17. The wicked shall be turned into hell.

Q. 8. What are the Torments of Hell?

A. Pain of Loss, and Pain of Sense, Mat. 25. 41. Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire.

Q. 9. What learn you from hence?

A. The woful State of the unconverted. Miserable here, and miserable to Eternity.

Q. 10. What else learn we hence?

A. The great Salvation Believers have by Christ from all this misery, Heb. 2. 3. How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him.

Of the Salvation of God's Elect, and of the Covenant of Grace.

Quest. 20. Did God leave all Mankind to perish in the State of Sin and Misery?

A. God having out of his meer good pleasure from all eternity, elected some to everlasting life, did enter into a Covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the estate of Sin and Misery; and to bring them into an Estate of Salvation by a Redeemer?

Q. 1. Are some Persons chosen to Salvation, and others left?

A. Yes: God hath chosen some to Salvation, and passed by others; as the Scriptures speak. See Rom. 8. 30. Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called. And Jude v. 4. For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, &c.

Q. 2. Did God chuse some because he foresaw they would be better than others?

A. No: God's choice was not on foreseen works, but meerly of his grace, and good pleasure of his will, Eph. 1. 5, 6. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ unto himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace.

Q. 3. Is this Election of God made in time, and that according as men use their free will, or from Eternity?

A. Election is an Eternal act of God before the world was, and depends not on Man's using his free-will; as appears from Eph. 1. 4. According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love.

Q. 4. Shall all that be Elected, be called, and saved,

A. Yes, the Scripture is full and plain for it, Acts 13. 48. And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed, Rom. 8. 30. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called, &c.

Q. 5. By whom are the Elect saved?

A. By Christ the only Redeemer, Tit. 3. 4, 5, 6. But after that the kindness, and love of God our Saviour towards man, appeared not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy, he saved us, by washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

Q. 6. Is there no other way of Salvation but by Christ?

A. No, no other way is revealed in Scripture, Acts 4. 12. Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

Q. 7. What learn you from God's Election?

A. What cause we have to admire Free-grace in our choice, who were no better than others, Eph. 2. 3. And were by nature children of wrath, even as others.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us humility, we made not our ſelves to differ; but the free grace of God made the difference, 1 Cor. 4. 7. For who maketh thee to differ from another?

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us diligence to make our Election ſure to our ſelves, by our calling, 2 Pet. 1. 10. Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election ſure.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. It is matter of Comfort to God's Elect, amidſt all dangers in the world, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his.

Of the Covenant of Grace.

Queſt. 1. What is the Covenant of Grace?

A. It is a new compact or agreement made with Sinners, out of meer grace, wherein God promiſeth to be our God, and that we ſhall be his People, and to give everlaſting life to all that believe in Chriſt, Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

Q. 2. How doth this Covenant differ from the Covenant of Works?

A. They differ many ways; but principally in three things. Firſt, The Covenant of Works had no Mediator; the Covenant of Grace hath a Mediator, Heb. 12. 24. And to Jeſus the Mediator of the new Covenant. Secondly, In the former, no place was found for repentance. In the Second, God admits it. Heb. 8. 10. For this is the covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my laws in their minds, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a people, Ver. 12. For I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, and their ſins will I remember no more. Thirdly, In their Condition, the former requires exact Obedience, the latter Faith, and ſincere Obedience, Mark 16. 16. He that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved.

Q. 3. May a Sinner that hath no worthineſs at all of his own, be taken into the Covenant of Grace?

A. Yes, he may, Iſa. 43. 25. I, even I am he, that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy ſins. This Covenant is not of Works, but of Grace. Rom. 11. 5, 6. And if by grace, then it is no more of works, otherwiſe grace is no more grace; but if it be of works then it is no more grace, otherwiſe work is no more work.

Q. 4. Is this Covenant changeable, or an unchangeable Covenant?

A. No, it is not changeable, but everlaſting and unchangeable for ever, Iſa. 54. 10. For the mountains ſhall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee.

Q. 5. What are the principal things beſtowed in this Covenant?

A. God himſelf, and in and with him Pardon and Salvation, Jer. 31. 33. I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

Q. 6. Can no Sin be forgiven out of this Covenant?

A. No, God pardons none out of this Covenant, Joh. 3. 18. But he that believeth not, is condemned already.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. Humbled and believing Sinners have ſingular ſupport from this New Covenant, 1 John 2. 12. I write unto you little children, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you for his names ſake.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That 'tis the great concern of all men to examine whether they be in this Covenant, or no. 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves, whether ye be in the faith, prove your own ſelves; know ye not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be Reprobates.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. See here the miſerable State of the wicked, which have no intereſt in it. Pſalm 50. 16. But unto the wicked God ſaith, What haſt thou to do to declare my Statutes, or that thou ſhouldſt take my Covenant in thy mouth?

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. That Chriſtians are obliged to walk as people in Covenant with God, 1 Pet. 2. 9. But ye are a choſen generation, a royal prieſthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye ſhould ſhew forth the praiſes of him who hath called you out of darkneſs into his marvellous light.

Of the only Redeemer.

Queſt. 21. WHO is the Redeemer of God's Elect?

A. The only Redeemer of God's Elect, is the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who being the Eternal Son of God, became man, and ſo was, and continueth to be God and Man, in two diſtinct natures, and one perſon for ever.

Q. 1. What doth the name Redeemer ſignify?

A. It ſignifies one that frees another out of Captivity and Bondage, as Chriſt did, Mat. 20. 28. And to give his life a ranſome for many.

Q. 2. What was the miſery from which Chriſt delivered us?

A. A twofold miſery, viz. Sin and Hell. Firſt, Sin, Mat. 1. 21. Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. Secondly, Hell, 1 Theſ. 1. 10. Even Jeſus, who delivered us from the wrath to come.

Q. 3. How did Chriſt deliver us from this Miſery?

A. Firſt, By Price. Secondly, By Power. By Price, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Ye are not redeemed with ſilver and gold from your vain converſation, received by tradition from your fathers: but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a lamb without blemiſh, and without ſpot. By Power, Col. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear ſon.

Q. 4. When was the Redemption wrought by Chriſt?

A. It was decreed from Eternity; it was actually wrought on the Croſs, Col. 1. 20. And having made peace through the blood of his Croſs, by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf, by him, I ſay, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

Q. 5. How then could they be redeemed that died before?

A. Though Chriſt's Blood was actually ſhed after the Old Teſtament believers died; yet the virtue of Chriſt's Death extends to them, as well as us, Heb. 11. 39, 40. And theſe all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promiſe, God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made perfect.

Q. 6. Why would not God deliver us without ſuch a Redeemer?

A. Becau

A. Becauſe it was not ſo much for the honour of his Juſtice, Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſs, that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. That all that are out of Chriſt are in a miſerable Bondage, and Captivity, John 8. 36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. Hence ſee the heinous nature of Sin, which required ſuch a price to ſatisfy for it, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. We were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a lamb without blemiſh, and without ſpot.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction hence?

A. The wonderful love of Chriſt in redeeming us at ſuch a rate, Rev. 1. 5. Who loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. This ſtrongly obligeth us to an univerſal holineſs, 1 Cor. 6. 20. For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your ſpirit, which are Gods.

Of Chriſt's Incarnation.

Queſt. 22. HOW did Chriſt being the Son of God become man?

A. Chriſt the Son of God became man, by taking to himſelf a true Body, and a reaſonable Soul, being conceived by the power of the Holy Ghoſt, in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, yet without Sin.

Q. 1. Who is the only Redeemer of God's Elect?

A. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt is their only Redeemer, and there is no other Redeemer beſides him, Acts 4. 12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we muſt be ſaved.

Q. 2. How is he the Son of God, or can be, as no other is ſo?

A. He is the Son of God by Nature, from all Eternity, and ſo no Angel or Saint is, Heb. 1. 5. For unto which of the Angels ſaid he, at any time, Thou art my ſon, this day have I begotten thee?

Q. 3. Why was it neceſſary he ſhould become man?

A. That he might be capable to ſuffer Death in our room, Heb. 2 15, 16, 17. For verily he took not on him the nature of Angels, but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham; wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people.

Q. 4. Why muſt the Redeemer be God as well as Man?

A. Becauſe the blood of a meer Man could not ſatisfy and redeem us. Acts 20. 28. Feed the church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own Blood.

Q. 5. Do theſe two Natures make two Perſons?

A. No, The Humane Nature is united to the ſecond Perſon, and ſubſiſts in union with it. John 1. 14. And the Word was made fleſh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth.

Q. 6. Was the Union only for a time?

A. No, It continues and abides for ever. Heb. 7. 24. But this man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath unchangeable Prieſthood.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. Hence we learn the tranſcendent love of God to poor Sinners. John 3. 16. God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth on him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn the matchleſs love of Chriſt, that he ſhould ſtoop to ſuch a condition for us. 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. That the greateſt Sins are capable of remiſſion to Believers. John 1. 29. Behold, the Lamb of God which taketh away the ſins of the world.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. That thoſe that be in Chriſt need not fear the denial or want of any other mercy. Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things?

Q. 11. What is the fifth Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn how impious it is to aſcribe any part of the glory of Redemption to any other beſides Chriſt.

Q. 12. What is the ſixth Inſtruction?

A. This teaches us the miſerable condition of all that are out of Chriſt, and the neceſſity of their damnation, he being the only Redeemer.

Of the Manner of Chriſt's Incarnation.

Queſt. 1. WAS Chriſt's Incarnation a voluntary act in him?

A. Yes, it was; for though he had a command to die for us, John 10. 18. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf, I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again; Yet he came willingly. Pſal. 40. 6, 7. Sacrifices and offerings thou didſt not deſire, mine ears haſt thou opened; burnt offerings, and ſin offerings haſt thou not required; lo, I come, in the volume of thy book it is written of me, v. 8. I delight to do thy will, O my God, yea, thy law is within my heart.

Q. 2. Was the Body of Chriſt a real and true Humane Body?

A. Yes, it was a true and real Body, not the appearance and ſhape of a Body only, Luke 24. 38. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your Hearts? Ver. 29. Behold my hands, and my feet, that it is I my ſelf; handle me, and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones as ye ſee me have.

Q. 3. Had he a true Humane Soul as well as a Body?

A. Yes, he had a real Humane Soul alſo, and all the natural faculties and powers thereof. Mat. 26. 38. Then ſaith he unto them, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death.

Q. 4. Was he then in all reſpects like to other men?

A. No, his conception was not like others. Iſa. 7. 14. Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a Son, and ſhall call his name Emanuel. And he had no ſin in him as others have. Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners.

Q. 5. Did Chriſt put off the Humane Nature at his Aſcenſion?

A. No, he did not, but carried it up to glory, and now is in our nature in Heaven. 1 Tim. 3.6. Received up into glory.

Q. 6. Why did he assume our Nature?

A. That he might die in it for our Salvation. Heb. 2.15. And delivered them who through fear of death were all their life time subject to bondage.

Q. 7. Why did he rise in it after Death?

A. He raised it from the dead, for our Justification. Rom. 4. 25. Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our Justification.

Q. 8. Why did he ascend in our Nature into Heaven?

A. To be a Mediator of Intercession in our Nature. Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

Q. 9. What is the first Instruction from hence?

A. That the Body of Christ is not every where, but is contained in Heaven. Acts 3.21. Whom the Heaven must receive till the times of restitution of all things.

Q. 10. What is the second Instruction?

A. That Christ is full of tender compassions to his Peoples Infirmities. Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

Q. 11. What is the third Instruction?

A. That great and admirable is the glory designed for the Bodies of Believers. Phil. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile Bodys, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction?

A. That the bodily Eyes of Believers after the Resurrection, shall see Christ in glory. Job 19. 26. 27. And though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, Whom I shall see for my self, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another.

Of Christ's Offices.

Quest. 23. What offices doth Christ execute as our Redeemer?

A. Christ as our Redeemer doth execute the Office of a Prophet, of a Priest, and of a King, both in his Estate of Humiliation and Exaltation.

Q. 1. What are the States and Conditions of our Redeemer?

A. Christ's States are twofold, namely, his State of Humiliation, and his State of Exaltation. Phil. 2. 8, 9. And being found in fashion as a Man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name.

Q. 2. How many Offices belongs to Christ in these States?

A. Christ hath a threefold Office; namely, of a Prophet, of a Priest, and of a King.

Q. 3. Why doth Christ take all these three Offices?

A. Because they are all necessary for our Salvation, and we have the benefit of them all. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption.

Q. 4. Can no man take Christ in one Office, and not in another?

A. No; whoever will have the benefit of any one, must receive him in all. Acts 5. 31. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a prince, and a saviour, for to give repentance unto Israel, and forgiveness of Sins.

Q. 5. What respect have the Offices of Christ to the Promises?

A. The Promises flow out of them as out of their Fountain. 2 Cor. 1. 20. For all the promises of God in him, are Yea, and in him, Amen.

Q. 6. What Promises flow out of the Prophetical Office?

A. All the Promises of Illumination, Guidance and Direction flow out of Christ's Prophetical Office?

Q. 7. What Promises flow out of the Priestly Office?

A. All the Promises of Pardon and Peace flow out of it.

Q. 8. What Promises flow out of the Kingly Office?

A. All the Promises of Defence, Protection and Deliverances.

Q. 9. What is the first Instruction?

A. Hence we learn the compleatness of Christ for all the wants of his People. Col. 2. 10. And ye are compleat in him.

Q. 10. What is the second Instruction?

A. Hence we learn the folly and misery of all Hypocrites that close partially with Christ.

Q. 11. What is the third Instruction?

A. Hence we learn the singular dignity of the Lord Jesus. None ever have all those Offices but Christ.

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction?

A. That Faith is a considerate act; and requires much deliberation.

Of Christ's Prophetical Office.

Quest. 24. How doth Christ execute the Office of a Prophet?

A. Christ executeth the Office of a Prophet, in revealing to us by his word and spirit, the will of God for our salvation.

Q. 1. What doth Christ's Prophetical Office imply?

A. It implies man's natural blindness and ignorance. 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

Q. 2. What else doth it imply?

A. That Christ is the original and fountain of all that light, which guides us to salvation. 2 Cor. 4. 6, 7. For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

Q. 3. How doth Christ teach men the will of God?

A. He doth it by external Revelation of it. Acts 3. 22. For Moses truly said unto the Fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you. And by internal illumination. Luke 24. 45. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scripture.

Q. 4. What need then of Man's Ministry?

A. Very much; for Christ hath instituted Ministers as instruments, by whom he will teach us. Eph. 4. 11, 12. And he gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. Acts 26. 18. To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins.

Q. 5. Can

Q. 5. Can no man ſavingly know the will of God without the teachings of Chriſt.

A. No; though common knowledge may be obtained in a natural way, yet not ſaving. Mat. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth; becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes.

Q. 6. How appears it that Chriſt is appointed to this Office?

A. We have the written word for it. Acts 3. 22. A prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him ſhall ye hear in all things, whatſoever he ſhall ſay unto you.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. None need be diſcouraged at their natural weakneſs, if Chriſt be their Teacher. Mat. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt reveal'd them unto babes. Pſal. 19. 7. The teſtimonies of the Lord are ſure, making wiſe the ſimple.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That it's a dreadful judgment to be ſpiritually blinded under the Goſpel. 2 Cor 4. 3, 4. But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt, in whom the God of this World hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, leſt the light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. That Prayer is the beſt Expedient to obtain ſaving Knowledge. Jam 1. 5. If any of you lack wiſdom let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Learn hence the tranſcendent excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt above all other Knowledge. Phil. 3. 8, 9. Yea doubtleſs, I count all things but loſs, for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord.

Of Chriſt's Prieſthood.

Queſt. 25. HOW doth Chriſt execute the Office of a Prieſt?

A. Chriſt executeth the Office of a Prieſt, in his once offering up of himſelf a ſacrifice to ſatisfy Divine Juſtice, and reconciling us to God, and in making continual intercceſſion for us.

Q. 1. What is the Prieſthood of Chriſt in general?

A. It is his expiation of our Sins by the ſacrifice of himſelf, and obtaining God's favour for us. Col. 1. 20. And having made peace through the blood of his croſs, by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf; by him I ſay, whether they be things in heaven, or things in earth.

Q. 2. What are the parts of Chriſt's Prieſtly Office?

A. It hath two parts. Firſt, Oblation, or offering of himſelf. Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal ſpirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſciences from dead works, to ſerve the living God. Secondly, Interceſſion for us. Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt, that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.

Q. 3. What is the end of Chriſt's Oblation?

A. The end of it as to God, it was to ſatisfy his Incenſed Juſtice. Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. And as to men, to put away their ſins. Heb. 9. 26. For then muſt he often have ſuffered ſince the Foundation of the World, but now once in the end of the World, he hath appeared to put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

Q. 4. What is the firſt difference between Chriſt and other Prieſts?

A. Other Prieſts offered the Blood of Beaſts; Chriſt his own Blood. Heb. 9. 12. Neither by the blood of Goats and Calves, but by his own Blood, he entred in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond difference?

A. They offered many Sacrifices; Chriſt perfected all by one offering. Heb. 10. 14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.

Q. 6. What was the ſacrifice Chriſt offered to God?

A. His Body. Heb. 10. 10. By the which will we are ſanctified through the offering of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all. And his Soul. Iſa. 53. 10. When thou ſhalt make his Soul an offering for ſin.

Q. 7. Whence is the efficacy of this Sacrifice?

A. From the Divine Perſon to whom that Soul and Body was united. Acts 20. 28. Feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own blood.

Q. 8. What is the firſt Inference from it?

A. That Believers are diſcharged by Chriſt from all their ſins and debts. Acts 13. 36. And by him all that believe are juſtified from all things.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an abſolute God. Luke 23. 31. For if they do theſe things in a green Tree, what ſhall be done in the dry?

Q. 10. What is the third Inference?

A. That it's impoſſible for man to ſatisfy God for his own Sins. Pſal. 130. 3. If thou, Lord, ſhouldeſt mark iniquities, O Lord, who ſhall ſtand?

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That the Chriſtian Religion only ſets the conſcience in peace. Heb. 9. 14. How much ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal ſpirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſciences from dead works to ſerve the living God?

Of Chriſt's Kingly Office.

Queſt. 26. HOW doth Chriſt execute the Office of a King?

A. Chriſt executeth the Office of a King in ſubduing us to himſelf, in ruling and defending us, and reſtraining and conquering all his and our Enemies.

Q. 1. How manifold is Chriſt's Kingdom?

A. Twofold. Firſt, Internal in men's Soul. Luke 17. 20. Behold the Kingdom of God is within you. Secondly, External over the world. Eph. 1. 22. And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church.

Q. 2. What is the End of Chriſt's providential Kingdom?

A. The good and ſalvation of the Church. John 17. 2. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſt given him.

Q. 3. Wherein doth he exerciſe his Kingly Power?

A. In reſtraining His, and His People's Enemies. Pſal. 76. 10. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain.

Q. 4. How elſe is it Exerciſed?

A. In

A. In protecting his Church amidſt all Enemies. Exod. 3. 3. And Moſes ſaid, I will now turn aſide, and ſee this great ſight, why the Buſh is not burnt.

Q. 5. What Inſtruments doth Chriſt uſe?

A. Angels are miniſtring Spirits to him. Heb. 1. 14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation? And men, yea the worſt of men. Rev. 12. 16. And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth and ſwallowed up the Blood which the dragon caſt out of his mouth.

Q. 6. In what manner doth Chriſt rule the world?

A. By Supream power, Rev. 9. 16. He hath on his veſture and on his thigh a name written, King of kings, Lord of lords. And perfect Wiſdom, Eph. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him, who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will.

Q. 7. What learn we from hence?

A. That the Church is ſaved amidſt all dangers, Jer. 30. 11. For I am with thee, ſaith the Lord, to ſave thee; though I make a full end of all nations, whither I have ſcattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That the godly may ſafely truſt to Chriſt's care, 2 Chron. 16. 9. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of them whoſe heart is perfect towards him.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. That all plots againſt the Church ſhall ſurely be defeated, Iſa. 54. 17. No weapon that is formed againſt thee ſhall proſper.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. It gives the Saints full ſatisfaction in all conditions, Rom. 8. 28. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpoſe.

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inference?

A. We ſhould not ſtand in a ſlaviſh fear of men, Iſa. 51. 12. I, even I am he that comforteth you; who art thou that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of a man that ſhall die, and of the ſon of man which ſhall be made as graſs?

Of Chriſt's Humiliation.

Queſt. 27. Wherein did Chriſt's Humiliation conſiſt?

A. Chriſt's Humiliation conſiſts in his being born, and that in a low condition, made under the Law, undergoing the miſeries of this life, the wrath of God, and the curſed death of the croſs; in being buried, and continuing under the power of death for a time.

Q. 1. What doth Chriſt's humbling of himſelf import?

A. His voluntarineſs in the deepeſt point of Self-denial, Pſalm 40. 7. Then ſaid I, lo I come, in the volume of the book it is written of me.

Q. 2. What was the firſt act of Chriſt's Humiliation?

A. His taking man's Nature on him, with all its ſinleſs Infirmities, Rom. 8. 3. God ſending his own ſon, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

Q. 3. What is the ſecond part of his Humiliation?

A. That mean life he lived in this world, which obſcured his Divine Glory, Mark 6. 3. Is not this the carpenter, the ſon of Mary.

Q. 4. What was the firſt thing in Chriſt's Life that humbled him?

A. The poverty of it, Mat. 8. 20. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts; but the ſon of man hath not where to lay his head.

Q. 5. What was the ſecond thing in his life that humbled him?

A. The Temptations of Satan, to which he was ſubject, Mat. 4. 1. Then was Jeſus led up of the ſpirit into the wilderneſs, to be tempted of the devil, and that for our ſakes, Heb. 2. 17. Wherefore in all things it behoveth him to be made like unto his brethren. v. 18. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted.

Q. 6. What is the third thing in Chriſt that humbled him?

A. His ſubjection to the Law, Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulneſs of the time was come, God ſent forth his ſon, made of a woman, made under the law.

Q. 7. What was the fourth thing in Chriſt's life that humbled him?

A. The Revilings and Contradictions of Sinners, Heb. 12. 3. For conſider him that endured ſuch contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf.

Q. 8. Wherein was Chriſt humbled in his death?

A. His death was painful and ignominious, Gal. 3. 13. Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for us. For it is written, Curſed is every one that hangeth on a tree. Made a curſe for us, and deſerted in it, Mat. 27. 46. And about the ninth hour, Jeſus cried with a loud voice, ſaying; Eli, Eli, Lamaſabachthani, that is to ſay, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

Q. 9. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That lowlineſs and humility becomes Chriſt's Followers, Mat. 11. 29. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek, and lowly in heart.

Q. 10. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That Chriſt's love to Sinners is aſtoniſhingly great, 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

Q. 11. What is the third Inference?

A. Chriſtians ſhould be ready to ſuffer for Chriſt, 1 Pet. 4. 1. Foraſmuch as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh; arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame; for he that hath ſuffered in the fleſh, hath ceaſed from ſin.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That Humiliation is the true way to Exaltation, Mat. 23. 12. And whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and he that ſhall humble himſelf, ſhall be exalted.

Of Chriſt's Exaltation

Queſt. 27. Wherein conſiſts Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. Chriſt's Exaltation conſiſts in his riſing from the dead on the third day; in aſcending up into heaven, in ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the World at the laſt day.

Q. 1. What is the firſt ſtep of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. His Reſurrection from the dead.

Q. 2. How doth his Reſurrection appear?

A. By the Scripture Propheſies accompliſht in him, 1 Cor. 15. 4. And that he was buried, and that he roſe again the third day, according to the ſcriptures.

Q. 3. Why did Chriſt riſe again?

A. To eſtabliſh our Faith, and aboliſh our Sins 1 Cor.

1 Cor. 15. 17. And if Chriſt be not riſen, your faith is vain, you are yet in your ſins.

Q. 4. What other end was there of Chriſt's Reſurrection?

A. To declare his Divine Power, Rom. 1. 4. And declared to be the ſon of God with power, according to the ſpirit of holineſs, by the reſurrection from the dead. And to evidence the fulneſs of his ſatisfaction, John 16. 10. Of righteouſneſs, becauſe I go to my father, and ye ſee me no more.

Q. 5. Did Chriſt riſe in the ſame Body he laid down?

A. It was ſubſtantially the ſame, John 20. 27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide, and be not faithleſs, but believing.

Q. 6. What doth Chriſt's Reſurrection teach us?

A. The certainty of Reſurrection after death, 1 Cor. 15. 20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt fruits of them that ſlept.

Q. 7. What was the ſecond ſtep of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. His Aſcenſion after forty days into Heaven, Acts 1. 2, 3. Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghoſt had given commandments unto the Apoſtles, whom he had choſen, to whom alſo he ſhewed himſelf alive after his paſſion, by many infallible proofs, being ſeen of them forty days, and ſpeaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

Q. 8. Why did Chriſt ſtay ſo long on Earth?

A. To aſſure the truth of his Reſurrection, and to ſettle the due Government of his Church, Acts 1. 2, 3.

Q. 9. For what end did he aſcend?

A. To take poſſeſſion of his glory, John 17. 5. And now, O father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. And that as our fore-runner, Heb. 6. 20. Whether the fore-runner is for us entred, even Jeſus, &c.

Q. 10. In what manner did Chriſt aſcend?

A. Triumphantly, and magnificently, Pſalm 47. 5. God is gone up with a ſhout, the Lord with a ſound of trumpet.

Q. 11. What doth his aſcenſion teach us?

A. Heavenly-mindedneſs, Col. 3. 1, 2. If ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chirſt ſitteth at the right hand of God; ſet your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. And an encouragement in our Chriſtian race. Heb. 12. 1, 2. Wherefore ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us lay aſide every weight, and the ſin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with patience the race that is ſet before us, looking unto Jeſus the author and finiſher of our faith. Who for the joy that was ſet before him, endured the croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is ſate down at the right hand of the Throne of God.

The Second Part of the 28th Queſtion of Chriſt's Exaltation.

Queſt. 1. What was the Third degree of Chriſt's Exaltation.

A. His ſitting at God's right hand in Heaven, Heb. 1. 3. When he had by himſelf purged our ſins, ſat down on the right hand of the majeſty on high.

Q. 2. What doth God's right hand ſignify?

A. A State of Honour, Heb. 1. 13. But to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footſtool? And power, Mat. 26. 64. Hereafter ſhall ye ſee the ſon of man ſitting on the right hand of Power.

Q. 3. What is implied in Chriſt's ſitting there?

A. That his work on earth is finiſhed, Heb. 10. 11, 12. But this man after he had offered one ſacrifice for ſin, for ever ſate down on the right hand of God.

Q. 4. What elſe doth it ſignify?

A. Chriſt's power over all enemies, Pſalm 110. 2. The Lord ſhall ſend the rod of thy ſtrength out of Sion; rule thou in the midſt of thine enemies.

Q. 5. What learn we from Chriſt's ſitting there?

A. The high honour Believers are advanced to by Chriſt, Eph. 2. 6. And hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 6. What is the laſt ſtep of Chriſts Exaltation?

A. His coming to Judgment, Acts 10. 42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to teſtify that it is he which was ordained of God to be judge of quick and dead.

Q. 7. Is it certain there ſhall be a Judgment day?

A. Yes, the Scripture aſſures it, 2 Cor. 5. 10. For we muſt all appear before the judgment ſeat of Chriſt. And every man's conſcience witneſſes to it, Rom. 2. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpel.

Q. 8. What is the firſt property of Chriſt's Judgment?

A. It will be awful and ſolemn, 1 Theſ. 4. 16. For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, with the voice of the Arch-angel, and with the Trump of God, and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Property of it?

A. It will be exact and critical, Rom. 2. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpel, Mat. 12. 36. But I ſay unto you, That every idle word that men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give account thereof in the day of Judgment.

Q. 10. What is the third Property of it?

A. It will be an univerſal Judgment, Rev. 20. 12. And I ſaw the dead, ſmall and great, ſtand before God, and the books were opened.

Q. 11. How is this a part of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. He now acts in the fulneſs of his Kingly Power, Mat. 25. 34. Then ſhall the King ſay unto them on his right hand, Come ye bleſſed of my father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. And this will rowl away the reproach of his enemies, Rev. 1. 7. Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him, and they alſo which pierced him.

Q. 12. What learn we from Chriſt's being Judge?

A. That Believers ſhall not be caſt in Judgment, Rom. 8. 1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 13. What learn we hence?

A. The deplorable State of Chriſtleſs Perſons, Luke 19. 27. But thoſe mine enemies that would not that I ſhould reign over them, bring hither, and ſlay them before me.

Q. 14. What elſe learn we from Chriſt's Judgment?

A. To give all diligence to be found of him in peace, 2 Pet. 3. 14. Wherefore beloved, ſeeing that ye look for ſuch things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace.

Of the Application of Chriſt.

Queſt. 29. How are we made partakers of the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. We

A. We are made partakers of the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt, by the effectual Application of it to us by his Holy Spirit.

Q. 1. What did our Redemption coſt Chriſt?

A. It coſt him his own Blood to obtain it. Heb. 9. 12. Neither by the Blood of Goats and Calves, but by his own Blood, he entred once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

Q. 2. Can none have the benefit of it, except it be applied to them?

A. No, if Chriſt be not applied, we cannot be ſaved. John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.

Q. 3. Whoſe work or office is it to apply Chriſt to us?

A. It's the office and work of God's Spirit. Tit. 3. 45. But after that the kindneſs and love of God our Saviour towards man appeared, not by works of righteouſneſs which we have done; but according to his mercy he ſaved us, by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 4. What Means doth the Spirit uſe in applying Chriſt?

A. The external means he makes uſe of, is the Miniſtry of the Goſpel. 1 Cor. 3. 5. Who then is Paul, and who is Apollo, but Miniſters by whom ye believed?

Q. 5. Is this ſufficient of it ſelf?

A. No; the Bleſſing and Power of the Spirit muſt accompany it, or Chriſt cannot be applied. 1 Theſ. 1. 5, 6. For our Goſpel came not unto you in word only, but alſo in power, and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in much aſſurance, as ye know what manner of Men we were among you for your Sake. And ye became Followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the Word in much Affliction, with Joy of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 6. To whom doth the Spirit apply Chriſt?

A. To thoſe that were given him of the Father before the World was. Acts 13. 48. And as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. John 14. 17. Even the Spirit of Truth, whom the World cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye knom him, for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you.

Q. 7. Is the Application of Chriſt to a Soul finiſht at once?

A. Tho' the firſt act of Faith unites the Soul to Chriſt; yet it is a continued act. 1 Pet. 2. 4. To whom coming as unto a living Stone.

Q. 8. What learn you from hence?

A. What a deſtitute thing the Soul is that's out of Chriſt. Rev. 3. 17, 18. Becauſe thou ſayeſt I am rich, and increaſed with Goods, and have need of nothing, and knoweſt not that thou art wretched, and miſerable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

Q. 9. What elſe doth it teach us?

A. The riches and dignity of Believers. Chriſt; and all his Purchaſes are theirs. 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the World, or Life, or Death, or things preſent, or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Q. 10. What elſe doth it teaeh us?

A. The Righteouſneſs of God in the deſtruction of all Unbelievers. John 5. 40. Mark 16. 16. He that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved; but he that believeth not, ſhall be damned.

Of our Union with Chriſt

Queſt. 30. HOW doth the Spirit apply to us the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. By working faith in us, thereby uniting us to Chriſt in our effectual Calling.

Q. 1. Can none have ſaving benefit by Chriſt, but ſuch as are united to him?

A. No; for as Adam's Sin could not hurt us, except we had been in him; ſo Chriſt's Redemption cannot profit us, except we are in him. 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption.

Q. 2. What are the Bonds of this Union?

A. The Spirit on God's part. 1 John 3. 24. And he that keepeth his Commandments dwelleth in him and he in him; and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us. And Faith on our part. Eph. 3. 17. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by Faith.

Q. 3. What is the firſt Property of this Union?

A. It is an intimate Union. Eph. 5. 30. For we are Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones.

Q. 4. What is the ſecond Property?

A. It is an Union never to be diſſolved. Rom. 8. 35, 38. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt? Shall Tribulation, Diſtreſs, or Perſecution, or Famine, or Nakedneſs, or Peril, or Sword? for I am perſwaded, that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other Creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.

Q. 5. What is the third Property of this Union?

A. It makes Chriſt, and all that he hath purchaſed, become ours. 1 Cor. 3. 23. All are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Q. 6. What is the fourth Property of this Union?

A. It is the Foundation and Root of all our ſpiritual and acceptable Obedience. John 15. 4. Abide in me, and I in you, as the branch cannot bear fruit of it ſelf, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That ſaving Grace in the Saints is immortal being ſecured to them in and by Chriſt. Col. 3. Your Life is hid with Chriſt in God.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That the Relation between Chriſt and Believers is very dear and intimate. Eph. 5. 30. For we are Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones.

Q. 9. What is the Third Inference?

A. That Believers need not be afraid to go down to the Grave. Rom. 8. 38. For I am perſwaded, that neither Death nor Life,—— nor any other Creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the Love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. And this Union holds after Death. Mat. 22. 31, 32. But touching the Reſurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was ſpoken unto you by God, ſaying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not a God of the dead, but of the living.

Q. 10. What is the Fourth Inference?

A. That in wronging and perſecuting the Saints men wrong and perſecute Chriſt himſelf. Acts 9

And he fell to the Earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, Why persecutest thou me?

Q. 11. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That in relieving and refreshing the Saints, we relieve and refresh Christ himself. Mat. 25. 35, 36. For I was an hungry, and ye gave me meat, and I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a Stranger, and ye took me in, naked, and ye cloathed me. I was sick, and ye visited me, I was in Prison, and ye came unto me. Verse 40. In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

Q. 12. What is the last Inference?

A. That there is a Sympathy in Christ under all the Pressures and Grievances of his People. Heb. 4. 15. We have not an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities, but was in all Points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

Of Effectual Calling.

Quest. 31. What is effectual Calling?

A. Effectual Calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby convincing us of our sin and misery, enlightening our Minds in the knowledge of Christ, and renewing our Wills, he doth perswade and enable us to embrace Jesus Christ, freely offered to us in the Gospel.

Q. 1. What makes the difference between effectual and ineffectual Calling?

A. Ineffectual calling is when Men have nothing but the external Sound of the Gospel. Mat. 20. 16. For many be called, but few chosen. Effectual is, when the Spirit works in conjunction with the Word. John 6. 45. It is written in the Prophets, and they shall be all taught of God; every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

Q. 2. What is the first act of the Spirit in Effectual Calling?

A. Conviction of Sin. John 16. 8. And when he is come he will reprove the World of Sin.

Q. 3. Do the called of God hear any Voice from Heaven?

A. Ordinarily it is called without sound, yet as efficacious as an audible Voice from Heaven

Q. 4. What is the Second Act of the Spirit in our effectual Calling?

A. The Illumination of the Mind in the Knowledge of Christ. Acts 26. 18. To open their Eyes, and to turn them from Darkness to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God.

Q. 5. In what things doth it enlighten them?

A. In this, That Christ is their only Remedy. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there Salvation in any other; for there is none other Name under Heaven given among Men, whereby we must be saved. And their all-sufficient Remedy. Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him.

Q. 6. What is the Third Act?

A. His renewing of the Sinner's Will, and making it flexible. Psalm 110. 3. Thy People shall be willing in the Day of thy Power. Ezek. 36. 26. A new Heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the stony Heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an Heart of Flesh.

Q. 7. Can no Man come to Christ till thus enabled?

A. No, it's not in the Power of Man's Nature or Will, till thus renewed and enabled. Eph. 1, 19, 20. And what is the exceeding greatness of his Power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty Power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him on his own right Hand in the Heavenly Places. John 6. 44. No Man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him.

Q. 8. What Sort of Men are most ordinarily called?

A. The poor and mean ones in the World. 1 Cor. 1. 26. For ye see your calling Brethren, how that not many wise Men after the Flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the World to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the World to confound the things which are mighty.

Q. 9. What is the first Instruction from it?

A. Souls effectually called are never lost. Rom. 11. 29. For the Gifts and Calling of God are without Repentance.

Q. 10. What is the second Instruction?

A. All things co-operate to their good. Rom. 8. 28. For we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose.

Q. 11. What is the third Instruction?

A. It is dangerous to refuse God's Call. Prov. 1. 24. Because I have called, and ye refused, I have stretched out my Hand and no Man regarded.

Q. 12. What is the last Instruction?

A. That Christians are obliged to walk suitably to their Heavenly Calling. 1 Thes. 2. 12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his Kingdom and Glory.

Of the Concomitants of Vocation.

Quest. 32. What Benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this Life?

A. They that are effectually called do in this Life partake of Justification, Adoption, Sanctification, and the several Benefits which in this Life do either accompany, or flow from them.

Q. 1. Are all that be effectually called, justified?

A. Yes, God justifies all, and every Soul that obeys and answers his call, Rom. 8. 30. Whom he called, them he also justified.

Q. 2. What other benefits have the called in this Life?

A. They are all the adopted Children of God, Eph. 1. 5. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jesus Christ unto himself, according to the good pleasure of his will.

Q. 3. Are those all the benefits the Called receive?

A. No, they are not only justified and adopted, but also sanctified, 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption.

Q. 4. Do these three blessings come singly to the called?

A. No; they are all accompanied with multitudes of other blessings flowing from them, Eph. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings, in heavenly places in Christ.

Q. 5. What are the mercies flowing from Justification?

A. They are great and manifold, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom alſo we have acceſs by faith into this grace wherein we ſtand, and rejoyce in hope of the Glory of God.

Q. 6. What are the benefits flowing from Adoption?

A. Free acceſs to God, Eph. 3. 12. In whom we have boldneſs and acceſs with confidence by the faith of him. And a Title to Heaven, Rom. 8. 17. If children, then heirs.

Q. 7. What Bleſſings accompany Sanctification?

A. Union with Chriſt, Heb. 2. 11. For both he that ſanctifieth, and they who are ſanctified, are all one. And Right to the Inheritance, Acts 20. 32. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are ſanctified.

Q. 8. What is the firſt Leſſon from hence?

A. That they are Enemies to their own Souls, who obey not the Goſpel Call, 2 Theſ. 1. 8. In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Leſſon from hence?

A. That the Eſtate of Believers abounds with ſpiritual Priviledges, 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things preſent, or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Q. 10. What is the third Leſſon from hence?

A. That all the Believer's Priviledges are not in hope, but ſome in hand, 1 John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the ſons of God.

Q. 11. What is the fourth Leſſon?

A. The greateſt ſufferers for Chriſt have no reaſon to repent their call, Rom. 8. 18. For I reckon, that the ſufferings of this preſent time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that ſhall be revealed in us.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Leſſon from hence?

A. That we have infinite reaſon to bleſs God for the Goſpel, by which we are called, 2 Theſ. 2. 14. Whereunto he called you by our Goſpel

Of Juſtification.

Queſt. 33. What is Juſtification?

A. Juſtification is an Act of God's Free-grace, wherein he pardoneth all our Sins, and accepteth us as righteous in his ſight, only for the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us, and received by faith alone.

Q. 1. What are the parts of Juſtification?

A. It conſiſts of two Parts. Firſt, The pardon of Sin, Acts 13. 39. And by him all that believe are juſtified from all things from which ye could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes. Secondly, The acceptation of our perſons as righteous, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom alſo we have acceſs by faith into this grace wherein we ſtand, and rejoyce in hope of the glory of God.

Q. 2. Whoſe act is it to juſtify Sinners?

A. It is the act of God alone, Rom. 8. 33. It is God that juſtifieth. Man's juſtifying of himſelf is nothing, Luke 16. 15. And he ſaid unto them, Ye are they which juſtify your ſelves before men, but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly eſteemed amongſt men, is abomination in the ſight of God. Nor other mens juſtifying of us, Rev. 3. 1. I know thy works, that thou haſt a name to live, and art dead.

Q. 3. Is there any thing in man to merit his Juſtification?

A. No, it is an act of Free-grace in God, Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 4. If it be not for any inherent righteouſneſs, how then?

A. It is for the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us, Rom. 4. 6. Even as David alſo deſcribeth the bleſſedneſs of the man unto whom God imputeth righteouſneſs without works.

Q. 5. How is Chriſt's righteouſneſs made ours?

A. By Application of it to us by Faith; Gal. 2. 16. Knowing that a man is not juſtified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified.

Q. 6. Is it not partly by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, and partly our own?

A. No: by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, without any mixture of ours, Rom. 3. 28. Therefore we conclude, that a man is juſtified by faith without the deeds of the law.

Q. 7. But doth not James ſay otherwiſe; Jam. 2. 14. What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man ſay he hath faith, and have not works, Can faith ſave him?

A. The two Apoſtles contradict not one another, Paul ſpeaks of Juſtification before God; and James of juſtifying our Faith before men.

Q. 8. Is no regard then to be had to good works?

A. Yes, very great; they that believe, muſt be careful to maintain good works, Tit. 3. 8. That they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good works. Theſe things are good and profitable unto men.

Q. 9. Why can none be juſtified by works?

A. Becauſe all are guilty before God, Rom. 3. 29. Is he the God of the Jews only? Is he not alſo of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles alſo. And the Law curſes all that are under guilt, Gal. 3. 10 Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

Q. 10. What is the firſt Inference hence?

A. The happy State of Believers who are now at Peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And whom he juſtifieth he glorifieth, Rom. 8. 30. Whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.

Q. 11. What is the ſecond Inference hence?

A. The excellency and neceſſity of Faith, Rom. 3. 30. The circumciſion is juſtified by faith, and the uncircumciſion through faith.

Q. 12. What is the third Inference?

A. That the greatneſs of ſin is no bar to faith ſince it is the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt that juſtifieth 2 Cor. 5. 21. For he hath made him to be ſin for us who knew no ſin, that we may be made the righteouſneſs of God in him.

Q. 13. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That Believers ought to be exceeding humble and far from boaſting. The Law of Faith excludes boaſting, Rom. 3. 27. Where is boaſting then? It is ex- excluded; by what law? Of works? nay, but by the law of faith.

Of Adoption.

Quest. 34. WHat is Adoption?
A. Adoption is an act of God's Free-grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a right to all the Priviledges of the Sons of God.

Q. 1. How many sorts of Sons be there?

A. There is one by Generation, and another by Adoption, John 1. 12, 13. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe in his name; which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

Q. 2. What moves God to adopt any man?

A. Nothing but his Free-love, John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed on us, that we should be called the Sons of God.

Q. 3. Is this priviledge common to all men?

A. No; it's peculiar to them that receive him, John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God.

Q. 4. What is the first property of Adoption?

A. It is a costly Relation, Gal. 4. 45. When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

Q. 5. What is the second property of Adoption?

A. It is an high and honourable Relation, 1 John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God.

Q. 6. What is the third property of Adoption?

A. It is a free relation on God's part, Eph. 1. 45. According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will. And it makes us free, John 8. 35. If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

Q. 7. What is the fourth property of Adoption?

A. It is a permanent relation, John 8. 35. The Son abideth in the house for ever.

Q. 8. What is the first priviledge of the adopted?

A. They have an intereſt in God as Children in a Father, 2 Cor. 6. 18. And will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

Q. 9. What is the second Priviledge?

A. Being God's Sons, they are Heirs of God, and joynt Heirs with Christ, Rom. 8. 17. And if children, then heirs, Heirs of God, and joynt heirs with Christ.

Q. 10. What is the third Priviledge?

A. Seasonable and sanctified Afflictions, Heb. 12. 6. He scourgeth every Son whom he receiveth.

Q. 11. What is their fourth Priviledge?

A. The Attendance and Ministry of Angels, Heb. 1. 14. Are they not all ministring spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

Q. 12. What is their fifth Priviledge?

A. The assistance of the Spirit in Prayer, Rom. 8. 15. For we have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba father. And God's audience of their Prayers. 1 John 5. 14. And this is the confidence that we have in him, That if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

Q. 13. What use should we make of this?

A. It teacheth us to carry our selves as Children to our heavenly Father. First, In our Imitation of him, Eph. 5. 1. Be ye therefore followers of God as dear children. Secondly, In our submission to him, Heb. 12. 9. Furthermore, we have had fathers of our flesh, which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection to the father of spirits, and live? Thirdly, In our dependance on him, Mat. 6. 32. For your heavenly father knoweth that you have need of all these things.

Of Sanctification.

Quest. 35. WHAT is Sanctification?
A. Sanctification is the work of God's Free-grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man, after the Image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin, and live unto righteousness.

Q. 1. What are the parts of Sanctification?

A. Dying unto Sin, and living unto God, Rom. 6. 11. Likewise reckon ye also your selves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Q. 2. Who is the Author of Sanctification?

A. God only, Jude ver. 1. To them that are sanctified by God the Father.

Q. 3. What is the instrument of it?

A. The word of God, John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth.

Q. 4. What part of man is sanctified?

A. Every part, both of the Soul and Body, 1 Thes. 5. 23. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit, soul and body, be preserved blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Q. 5. Is Sanctification perfected at once?

A. No; but by degrees, 2 Pet. 3. 18. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Q. 6. When will it be made perfect?

A. When we come to Heaven, and not before, 1 Cor. 13. 10, 11. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

Q. 7. What are the signs of true Sanctification?

A. When it runs into all parts of our Conversation, 1 Pet. 1. 15. But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation. Secondly, And continues to the end, Rev. 22. 11. Let him that is holy, be holy still.

Q. 8. What is the inseparable companion of Sanctification?

A. Righteousness towards men, Luke 1. 74, 75. That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness, and righteousness before him all the days of our life.

Q. 9. What is opposite to Sanctification?

A. All filthiness of Flesh and Spirit, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse our selves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit.

Q. 10. What is the privilcdge of the ſanctified?

A. They are all elected, and ſhall be glorified, 1 Pet. 1. 2, 4. Elect according to the fore-knowledge of God the father, through ſanctification of the ſpirit——to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in heaven for you.

Q. 11. What is the caſe of them who live and die unſanctified.

A. They ſhall never ſee God, Heb. 12. 14. Follow peace with all men, and holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord.

Q. 12. What differenceth true, from pretended Sanctification?

A. True Sanctification purgeth the heart from the love of ſin, Rom. 7. 15. For that which I do, I allow not. And the life from the dominion of ſin, Rom. 6. 19. As ye have yielded your members ſervants to uncleanneſs, and to iniquity, unto iniquity; even ſo now yield your members ſervants to righteouſneſs, unto holineſs.

Q. 13. May great ſinners be ſanctified?

A. Yes, the Spirit of God can ſanctify the vileſt heart, 1 Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified?

Of Aſſurance, the fruit of Juſtification.

Queſt. 36. WHAT are the benefits which in this life do either accompany, or flow from Juſtification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. The benefits which in this life do either accompany, or flow from Juſtification, Adoption, and Sanctification, are aſſurance of God's love, peace of Conſcience, joy in the Holy Ghoſt, increaſe of Grace, and perſeverance therein to the end.

Q. 1. Is Aſſurance poſſible to be attained in this Life?

A. Yes; for ſome have had it, Cant. 6. 3. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine. And all Chriſtians are commanded to ſtrive for it, 2 Pet. 1. 10. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence, to make your calling and election ſure.

Q. 2. How many ſorts of aſſurance are there?

A. There is an objective Aſſurance, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And a ſubjective or perſonal Aſſurance, Gal. 2. 20. Who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

Q. 3. Is perſonal Aſſurance perfect in this Life?

A. No, it admits of doubts and fears, which interrupts it, and it is not always at one height, 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.

Q. 4. On what Teſtimony is perſonal Aſſurance built?

A. Upon the Teſtimony of God's Spirit, witneſſing with ours, Rom. 8. 16. The ſpirit it ſelf beareth witneſs with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.

Q. 5. Doth the Spirit make uſe of ſigns in us to aſſure us?

A. Yes, Ordinarily he doth, 1 John 3. 14. We know that we are paſſed from death to life, becauſe we love the brethren. And ver. 24. Hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the ſpirit which he hath given us.

Q. 6. How is true aſſurance diſcerned from preſumption?

A. True aſſurance humbles the Soul, Gal. 2. 20. I am crucified with Chriſt; nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. And makes the Soul afraid of Sin, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God.

Q. 7. What is the uſual ſeaſon of Aſſurance?

A. The time of greateſt ſufferings for Chriſt, 1 Pet. 4. 14. If ye be reproached for the name of Chriſt, happy are ye; for the ſpirit of glory and of God reſteth upon you.

Q. 8. Is perſonal Aſſurance abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation?

A. No; a man may be ſaved, and in Chriſt, without it, Iſa. 50. 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light? Let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay upon his God.

Q. 9. What is the fruit of Aſſurance?

A. Joy unſpeakable amidſt outward Troubles, Rom. 5. 11. And not only ſo, but we alſo joy in God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we have now received the atonement.

Q. 10. What ſins uſually eclipſe our Aſſurance?

A. Negligence in duty ſtarves it, 2 Pet. 1. 10. Give diligence to make your calling and election ſure. For if ye do theſe things, ye ſhall never fall. And ſinning againſt light ſtabs it, Pſalm 51. 8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs, that the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce.

Q. 11. What is the firſt Inference from this Doctrine?

A. That no unregenerate Perſon can have any Aſſurance; for it is the fruit of Juſtification, Adoption and Sanctification.

Q. 12. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That all the Joys of Heaven are not to come; but ſome communicated in this life, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not ſeen ye love; in whom though now ye ſee him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unſpeakeable and full of glory.

Q. 13. What is the third Inference?

A. That aſſured Believers need to be circumſpect perſons, that they grieve not the Spirit, Eph. 4. 30. And grieve not the ſpirit of God, whereby ye are ſealed unto the day of redemption.

Of Peace of Conſcience.

Queſt. 1. WHat doth the word Peace ſignify in Scripture?

A. In the Language of the Old Teſtament it ſignifies all temporal good, 1 Sam. 25. 9. Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine houſe, and peace be unto all that thou haſt. And in the New Teſtament all ſpecial good; as 2 Theſ. 3. 16. Now the Lord of peace give you peace always.

Q. 2. What are the kinds of ſpecial Peace?

A. There is a twofold ſpecial peace; One without us, by reconciliation, Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God. And

And peace within us by way of conſolation, Col. 3. 15. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts.

Q. 3. What did our peace coſt Chriſt?

A. It coſt him bloody Stripes and Sufferings, Iſa. 53. 5. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and by his ſtripes we are healed.

Q. 4. Can none have true peace but ſuch as are in him?

A. No; others may have falſe Peace, Luke 11. 21. When a ſtrong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace. But Believers only have true peace, Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 5. Have all Believers peace in their conſcience at all times?

A. No, they are always in a ſtate of peace, but have not always the ſenſe of peace, Iſa. 50. 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light? let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay upon his God.

Q. 6. What is that which hinders the ſenſe of peace in Believers?

A. Their Sins againſt the Lord, and grieving of his Spirit, Iſa. 59. 2. But your iniquities have ſeparated between you and your God; and your ſins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.

Q. 7. What maintains the ſtate of peace when the ſenſe of peace is loſt?

A. Chriſt's continual and potent Interceſſion with the Father for us, 1 John 2. 12. My little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not? and if any man ſin, we have an advocate with the father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous.

Q. 8. What is the beſt way to maintain our peace with God?

A. Strict walking by Goſpel Rules, Gal. 6. 16. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them.

Q. 9. Doth this Peace come and go with outward Peace?

A. No, we may enjoy this when no peace is to be had in the World, John 16. 33. Theſe things I have ſpoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace; in the world ye ſhall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

Q. 10. What is the firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the wicked are in a ſad caſe at all times, but eſpecially in evil times, Iſa. 57. 20, 21. But the wicked are like the troubled Sea when it cannot reſt, whoſe waters caſt up mire and dirt. There is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked.

Q. 11. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the chief Care of a Chriſtian ſhould be to keep his peace with God, Jer. 17. 17. Be not a terror to me, thou art my hope in the day of evil.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Let the Saints long to be in Heaven; the State of full and perfect Peace, Iſa. 57. 2. He ſhall enter into peace; they ſhall reſt in their beds, each one walking in his uprightneſs.

Of Joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

Queſt. 1. HOW many ſorts of Joy are there among men?

A. There is a Senſitive Joy, Acts 14. 17. Nevertheleſs he left not himſelf without witneſs, in that he did good, and gave us rain from Heaven, and fruitful Seaſons, filling our hearts with food and gladneſs. A ſinful Joy, Prov. 15. 21. Folly is joy to him that is deſtitute of wiſdom. And a ſpiritual Joy, Rom. 5. 11. And not only ſo, but we alſo joy in God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 2. Why is ſpiritual Joy called joy in the Holy Ghoſt?

A. Becauſe the Holy Ghoſt is the Author of it, Gal. 5. 22. But the fruit of the ſpirit is love, joy, peace, &c.

Q. 3. What is the Firſt thing begets joy in the Saints?

A. The Firſt thing they joy in is, their Juſtification before God, Iſa. 61. 10. I will greatly rejoyce in the Lord, my ſoul ſhall be joyful in my God; for he hath cloathed me with the garments of ſalvation, he hath covered me with the robes of righteouſneſs.

Q. 4. What is the Second thing that breeds this Joy?

A. Hopes of Glory breeds Joy in the Saints, Rom. 5. 2. And rejoyce in hopes of the glory of God.

Q. 5. What is the inſtrument by which the ſpirit conveys this Joy?

A. Faith is the inſtrument of it, Phil. 1. 25. And having this confidence, I know that I ſhall abide and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Property of this Joy?

A. 'Tis Joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Believing, ye rejoyce with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Property of it?

A. That it is not in the power of men to deprive the Saints of it, John 16. 22. And your joy no man taketh from you.

Q. 8. What is the third Property of it?

A. It makes the Soul free and chearful in the ways of Obedience, Pſalm 119. 32. I will run the ways of thy commandments, when thou ſhalt enlarge my heart.

Q. 9. What is moſt deſtructive to a Chriſtian's Joy?

A. Sin, eſpecially ſin againſt light, Pſalm 51. 8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs, that the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce.

Q. 10. What ſhould be the main Care of a Chriſtian in this World?

A. To maintain his joy in God to the laſt, Acts 20. 24. But none of theſe things move me, neither count I my life dear unto my ſelf, ſo that I might finiſh my courſe with joy.

Q. 11. Have not Hypocrites their joys as well as real Chriſtians?

A. Yes, but the Joy of the Hypocrite is not grounded upon Scripture-warrant, and will vaniſh away, and will come to nothing at laſt, John 5. 35. He was a burning and a ſhining light, and ye were willing for a ſeaſon to rejoyce in his light.

Q. 12. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. Let all that expect joy in the Holy Ghoſt, ſee that they preſerve purity of Conſcience and Converſation, 2 Cor. 1. 12. Grace be to you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 13. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That Religion is no melancholy thing, but the the fountain of all Joy and Pleaſure, Prov. 3. 17. Her ways are ways of pleaſantneſs, and all her paths are peace.

Of the Increaſe of Grace.

Queſt. 1. DOTH all true Grace increaſe and grow?

A. Yes, it doth, like the Morning light, Prov. 4. 18. The path of the juſt is as the ſhining light, that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day. And for that end God hath appointed Miniſters and Ordinances, Eph. 4. 11, 12. And he gave ſome Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and Teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Miniſtry, for the edifying of the body of Chriſt.

Q. 2. Cannot falſe or ſeeming Grace grow?

A. It may Spring up and ſeem to flouriſh for a time; but comes not to perfection, Luke 8. 14. And that which fell among thorns are they which when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleaſures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection.

Q. 3. What is the firſt reſpect in which Grace grows?

A. It grows by deeper rooting it ſelf in the Soul, Eph. 3. 17. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by faith, that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able, &c.

Q. 4. What is the manner of its growth?

A. It grows in reſpect of its greater fitneſs and readineſs for acts of Obedience, Col. 1. 11. Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience, and longſuffering, with joyfulneſs.

Q. 5. What is the third reſpect or manner of its growth?

A. It grows in reſpect of its abilities to fix the mind more ſteadily on ſpiritual things. Hence grown Chriſtians are called ſpiritual men. Gal. 6. 1. Ye which are ſpiritual reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſs.

Q. 6. Why muſt all true Grace grow?

A. Becauſe there is a Stature to which Chriſtians are appointed, Eph. 4. 12, 13. Till we all come in the Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the Meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

Q. 7. What are the cauſes of a Chriſtians growth?

A. Union with Chriſt, John 15. 4. As the Branch cannot bear Fruit of it ſelf, except it abide in the Vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. And his Bleſſings on the Ordinances, Iſa. 55. 10, 11. For as the Rain cometh down, and the Snow from Heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the Earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give Seed to the Sower, and Bread to the Eater: So ſhall my Word be that goeth forth out of my Mouth: it ſhall not return unto me void, but it ſhall accompliſh that which I pleaſe, and it ſhall proſper in the thing whereto I ſent it. And Providence, Phil. 1. 19. For I know that this ſhall turn to my Salvation through your Prayers, and the ſupply of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 8. May not true Grace ſometimes decay?

A. Yes, it may. Rev. 2. 4. Nevertheleſs I have ſomewhat againſt thee, Becauſe thou hadſt left thy love. But not utterly. 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed remaineth in him.

Q. 9. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. To bleſs God for Goſpel Ordinances, Pſal. 92, 13, 14. Thoſe that be planted in the Houſe of the Lord, ſhall floriſh in the courts of our God, they ſhall ſtill bring forth fruit in old age; they ſhall be fat and flouriſhing.

Q. 10. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. Hence we ſee the miſerable ſtate of them that grow worſe and worſe, Jude, Verſe 12. Theſe are ſpots in your feaſts of charity, when they feaſt with you, feeding themſelves without fear, Clouds they are without water, carried about of winds. Trees whoſe fruit withereth; without fruit, twice dead, pluckt up by the root.

Q. 11. What is the third Inference?

A. Chriſtians ſhould not be diſcouraged at their weakneſs in Grace, for they have a merciful Chriſt, Iſa. 42. 3. A bruiſed reed ſhall he not break, and the ſmoaking flax ſhall he not quench, he ſhall bring forth judgment unto truth. And a ſure Promiſe, Job 17. 9. The righteous alſo ſhall hold on his way; and he that hath clean hands ſhall be ſtronger and ſtronger.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That all true Chriſtians draw daily nearer and nearer to the heavenly and perfect State, 2 Cor. 4. 16. For which cauſe we faint not; but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed day by day, Rom. 13. 11. Now is our ſalvation nearer than when we believed.

Of Perſeverance.

Queſt. 1. WHAT is Perſeverance to the End?

A. It is the ſteady and conſtant continuance of Chriſtians in the ways of Duty and Obedience, amidſt all Temptations and Diſcouragements to the contrary, Col. 1. 23. If ye continue in faith, grounded and ſetled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Goſpel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a miniſter.

Q. 2. Do all that profeſs Chriſt, continue in him?

A. No; many that at firſt zealouſly profeſs him, afterwards fall away, John 6. 66. From that time many of his Diſciples went back, and walked no more with him.

Q. 3. Why do not all Perſevere?

A. Becauſe all Profeſſors have not a good root and foundation, Matt. 13. 20, 21. But he that received the ſeed in ſtony places, the ſame is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it, yet hath he not root in himſelf, but endureth for a while; for when tribulation, or perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the word, by and by he is offended.

Q. 4. What is the Firſt ground of the Saints Perſeverance?

A. God's electing love, in which they are given to Chriſt, John 10. 29. My father which gave them me, is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my father's hand.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond ground of Perſeverance?

A. The immortal nature of Sanctifying grace, John 4. 14. But whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water, ſpringing up into everlaſting life, 1 John 3. 9. For his ſeed remaineth in him.

Q. 6. What is the third ground of it?

A. T

A. The Covenant of Grace, Jer. 32. 40. I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, That I will not turn away from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me.

Q. 7. What is the fourth ground of it?

A. Chriſt's effectual Interceſſion, Luke 22. 32. But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not.

Q. 8. Are there no declinings of grace in the ſaints?

A. Yes, there are, Rev. 2. 4. Nevertheleſs I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy firſt love. Yet Grace cannot be totally or finally loſt. For the ſeed of God remaineth in the ſanctified, 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed remaineth in him; and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God.

Q. 9. Is there no hope of Salvation for final Apoſtates.

A. No; the Goſpel gives none, Heb. 10. 38. But if any man draw back, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him.

Q. 10. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. It warns all men to lay a good foundation, leſt the buildings of hope be overturned when the ſtorm comes, Mat. 7. 24, 25. Therefore whoſoever heareth theſe ſayings of mine, and doth them, I will liken him to a wiſe man which built his houſe upon a rock, and the rain deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe, and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock.

Q. 11. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That all men ſhould look to themſelves leſt they loſe the things which they have wrought, 2 Epiſt. of John, Ver. 8. Look to your ſelves, that we loſe not thoſe things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Let no true Chriſtians be diſcouraged, how weak ſoever, for God is able to make him ſtand, Rom. 14. 4. Who art thou that judgeſt another man's ſervant? to his own Maſter he ſtandeth or falleth, yea, he ſhall be holden up; for God is able to make him ſtand.

Of perfection at Death

Queſt. 37. What benefits do Believers receive from Chriſt at their Death?

A. The Souls of Believers are at their death made perfect in holineſs, and do immediately paſs into glory; their bodies being ſtill united to Chriſt, do reſt in their Graves till the Reſurrection.

Q. 1. What is the ſtate of perfect holineſs?

A. It conſiſts in a perfect freedom from ſin, or any of the leaſt inclination to ſin, Eph. 5. 27. That he may preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy and without blemiſh.

Q. 2. Wherein elſe doth perfection conſiſt?

A. It conſiſts in the attainment of the higheſt meaſures and degrees of holineſs the creature is capable of, Eph. 4. 12, 13. For the perfecting of the Saints, —— till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

Q. 3. Cannot this be attained whilſt in the body?

A. No; for here all our graces are imperfect, 1 Cor. 13. 12. For now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face. And we live at a diſtance from God, 2 Cor. 5, 6. Whilſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord.

Q. 4. How is this attained at Death?

A. At Death the roots of Sin are pulled up out of the Believer's Nature, Heb. 12. 23. And to the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect.

Q. 5. Why muſt the Soul be made perfect at death?

A. Becauſe the purity of the heavenly State admits no ſin or imperfection, Rev. 21. 27. And there ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lye; but they which are written in the lambs book of life.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That Death ſhould be lovely and deſirable in the eyes of Believers, Phil. 1. 23. Having a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That God hath provided ſingular relief for his people that now groan under their Sins, and many imperfections, 1 Cor. 13. 12, 13. And now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face. Now I know in part, but then ſhall I know, even as alſo I am known.

Q. 8. What is the third Inference?

A. That the heavenly State is infinitely above and beyond whatever we enjoy here, 1 Cor. 2. 9. But as it is written, Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

Q. 9. What is the fourth Inference?

A. That Believers are but at a ſmall diſtance from the Satisfaction of all their deſires, Rom. 13. 11. Now is our ſalvation nearer than when we believed.

Q. 10. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That the Saints ſhould earneſtly purſue that perfection, even in this imperfect ſtate, Phil. 3. 13, 14. Brethren, I count not my ſelf to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting thoſe things which are behind, and reaching forth to thoſe things which are before, I preſs towards the mark, for the price of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 11. What is the ſixth Inference?

A. That death to the Saints is better than life, Phil. 1. 21. For to me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That Faith is abſolutely neceſſary to entitle us to this perfect ſtate.

Of immediate Glorification.

Queſt. 1. DO all that die in Chriſt immediately paſs into glory?

A. Yes, they do, Luke 23. 43. To day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe, Phil. 1. 23. Having a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt.

Q. 2. What is the First reaſon for their immediate Glorification?

A. Becauſe Heaven is prepared and ready for them, Mat. 25. 34. Come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

Q. 3. What

Q. 3. What is the Second reason for it?

A. Because at Death they are as ready for Heaven as ever they shall be, John 9. 4. I must work the work of him that sent me while it is day, the night cometh, when no man can work.

Q. 4. What is the Third reason for it?

A. Because Death else could not be gain, as it is, Phil. 1. 21. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

Q. 5. What is the Fourth reason for it?

A. Because there is the same reason for all, as for any one: but some are immediately glorified, Luke 23. 43. To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Q. 6. What is the Fifth reason for it?

A. Because Christ longs for their coming to him, and they for his Enjoyment; and these longings are in vain, if not satisfied, Rev. 22. 17, 20. And the spirit and the bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come; and let him that is a thirst say, Come? and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely; he which testifieth these things, saith, I come Surely, I come quickly, Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus.

Q. 7. What is the First Instruction from hence?

A. That the Apparitions of departed Saints ordinarily are but Fables. They wander not, Rev. 3. 12. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the Temple of my God, and he shall go no more out.

Q. 8. What is the Second Inference?

A. That Purgatory is a groundless Fable, and invention of men; and the Scriptures alledged to countenance it, grosly abused, 1 Pet. 3. 19. By the which also he went and preacht unto the spirits in prison.

Q. 9. What is the Third Inference from it?

A. That Heaven must needs be a marvellous surprize to Believers, how long soever they have conversed with it here.

Q. 10. What is the Fourth Inference?

A. The consideration of this should provoke Saints to work hard to finish all they have to do on Earth, Eccles. 9. 10. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whether thou goest.

Q. 11. What is the Fifth Inference?

A. That there is no reason to grieve excessively for departed Saints, 1 Thes. 4. 13. Even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Q. 12. What is the last Inference?

A. That Christless ones are immediately in Hell, Luke 16. 22, 23. The rich man also died, and was buried, and in Hell he lift up his eyes, being in torment.

Of rest in the Grave.

Quest. 1. WHY must Believers come to the Grave?

A. Because where Sin has been, Death by the Law must follow, Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.

Q. 2. What is the First priviledge of their Bodies there?

A. 'Tis the Priviledge of their Bodies to be there in union with Christ, 1 Thes. 4. 14. Them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Q. 3. What is their Second priviledge?

A. Their Graves are places of Rest; not Prisons, but Beds of Rest, Isa. 57. 2. He shall enter into peace, they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.

Q. 4. What is the First evil they rest from?

A. All the toils, and troubles, and afflictions of this life, Rev. 14. 13. They may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them.

Q. 5. What is the Second evil they rest from?

A. They rest from all persecutions from men, Job 13. 17. There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary be at rest.

Q. 6. What is the Third evil they rest from?
