The President then passed on to refer to a I hirty-- Highlin matter which he said he supposed was just now deeply agitating the minds of the people all over the country. He alluded to an occusrence which was reported to have taken place at Fort Pillow -the massacre of several hundred colored soldiers by the Confederates. Many supposed the government did not intend to do its duty in regard to the protection of these colored soldiers. He desired to say that all such were mistaken When the question of employing colored men as soldiers was left to the government, it rested very much with himself whether he should make soldiers of them or not. He pondered the matter Indians Ordered to be printed. carefully, and when he become convinced that it was a duty to so employ them, he did not hesitate.
